JOHN C. RUSSELL CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY JUDGE.

The spring election is approaching, at which it will be the duty of the voters to elect a county judge and it is not too early to begin considering seriously the selection of a man to fill this important office. Attorney J. C. Russell, who is one of the candidates for the office, has been urged to take this step by his many friends, and his announcement, made a few weeks ago, has been heartily endorsed by the people in all parts of the county. Mr. Russell has spent the greater part of his life in the county, where he was born and raised. He began to read law in the office of Judge Sawyer, entered the law department of the state university in 1893, and was graduated therefrom in 1895. He has since then practiced in the city of Hartford, where he enjoys a large practice. Mr. Russell's methods in dealing with his clients, marked by a sincerity, honesty and frankness, have won for him the respect, not only of all who have sought his assistance and advice, but by his fellow practitioners and others. His ability as a lawyer is admired not only in this county, but in other where his work has called him. Mr. Russell has had the experience of two terms as district attorney, declining to become a candidate a third time. We take pleasure in adding a likeness of Mr. Russell to this item, and we can conscientiously recommend him to the voters of the county as being worthy of their support.

Law Makers in War Paint. Democrats Can't Have Any "Pie." (By William Henry Forber.) Yesterday I saw the state senate nominated for the fourth term of office, U. S. Senator Perkins. It was a tame affair although the occurrence brought out hundreds of people from all parts of the state, as well as many visitors from other states. In the assembly chamber standing room could not be obtained, so I crowded into the chamber of the upper house. On the previous day I saw the presidential electors cast the votes which elected Taft and Sherman. Mr. Dinkelspiel, a second cousin to the comic writer of the letters addressed to "Mine Lieber Louie," will carry the vote to Washington. This is in accordance with the provisions of law which provides that the third copy shall be carried by one of the electors for president.

An Angry Elephant. A sentinel in the menagerie at Paris has had a curious experience with one of the largest elephants. The sentinel was very conscientious and always requested the spectators not to give the animals anything to eat, which seemed to displease the elephant in question to such an extent that he several times sprinkled the sentry's head with water from his trunk. One day a bystander offered this spectator a large cake. The sentinel interfered, as usual, and the elephant promptly discharged in his face a violent stream of water. A general laugh ensued, but the sentinel, having calmly wiped his face, stood on one side and continued as watchful as before. Soon afterward he found it necessary to repeat his admonition, but no sooner was this uttered than the elephant laid hold of his musket, twirled it round his trunk, took it under his feet and did not restore it until he had twisted it into nearly the form of a corkscrew. Then he gave a snort at the discomfited sentinel, as if to say, "Now I hope you'll mind your own business!"

A Neighing Cock. Camden says the Thames was once called the Cockney, and therefore a cockney means simply one who lives on the banks of the Thames. Wedgwood says a cockney, or cockerney, is one pampered by city indulgence, in contradistinction to rustics hardened by outdoor work. There is, however, a legend, almost too good to be true—namely, that a Londoner who had never before slept out of sound of Bow bells had occasion to go into the city and was detained all night. He was much disturbed by the lowing of the cattle, the grunting of the pigs and other sounds of country life, which he could not understand, and in particular he was frightened by the crowing of the cock. In the morning, in response to the farmer's inquiries, he said the sound of the wild beasts had kept him awake. Just at that moment the cock crowed again, and the Londoner said: "That's the one! He's been neighing like that for hours!" Since then Londoners have been called cockneighs or cockneys.

The Python. Contrary to general belief, the python or boa constrictor rarely attacks people and is looked upon very differently by the people from the hamadryad and cobra. The python will often attack a woman and constrict the necks of the hearers. These he disturbs very much, as he has a great fondness for chickens; also for a stray dog or small goat. I know of one case, however, in a floating house where a python attacked a woman and constricted her to the preconcerted idea, did not crash her in his folds, but attempted to swallow her, commencing with one of her feet. When she was rescued her feet and ankles were badly lacerated by the snake's teeth. The Chinese kill the python to make medicine from the liver, which has a high repute among them. They also use the dried skin for medicine. Any Chinese drug shop in Siam will have a number of python skins for sale.—Medical Journal.

Two-fifths of the Republican members and the railways elected about three-fifths. The Democrats have about the same voting strength here as in Wisconsin and as the Sacramento River never freezes, they won't cut any ice. The Socialists have no representation nor have the Prohibitionists. DRY COMMUNITIES. There are a number of counties out here where liquor is not sold openly. There are also a large number of cities which are dry. Now for example: Sutter county does not license saloons, but Yuba county across the river has a double quantity. Again Palo Alto where Stanford University is located and Berkeley where the University of California is located have no open saloons; yet both of these towns can get a supply within easy walking distance. THE RACE TRACK. Those of you who read the sporting columns of the daily newspapers are doubtless aware that there are pony races every day during the winter at both Los Angeles and at Emeryville track near Oakland and Berkeley. There are a lot of pikers from all over the country who come here to "follow the horses" and "play the ponies." Those who play the ponies and take bets and lose their cash, are called "Mutts." The cheap broken down fellows who have no longer any money with which to buy chances on "a sure thing" are called "pikers."

Twenty Dollars For Two. You would not trade twenty dollars' worth of butter for two dollars worth of veal. Yet we can name bright farmers, right in this neighborhood, who feed young stock better fat worth 25 to 35 cents a pound, when meal would be just as good for them. If you feed whole milk, or milk set and skimmed by hand, you pay at least ten times too much to produce two dollars worth of pork or veal. GENTLEMEN, THAT DOESN'T PAY. A SHARPLESS TUBULAR WILL SAVE THAT CREAM—stop that loss—and put you that much ahead. Come and see the Tubular. Let us explain how and why it's the cleanest, most skimming, lightest running, most durable and easiest handled cream separator made. The Tubular is very simple. We'll be pleased to take it all apart and show you.

SKIN ERUPTION CURED.

Was so sore, irritating and painful that little sufferer could not sleep—Scratched constantly—Cuticura's Efficacy Proven.

When about two and a half years old my daughter broke out on her hips and the upper parts of her legs with a very irritating and painful eruption.

It began in October; the first I noticed was a little red surface and a constant desire on her part to scratch her limbs. She could not sleep and the eruptions got sore, and yellow water came out of them.

I had two doctors treat her, but she grew worse under their treatment. Then I bought the Cuticura Remedies and only used two weeks when she was entirely well.

What a coincidence! My Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. My great-grandfather was made an agent by the Indian who picture you see on this cent.

A Youth and a Maid.

By the Author of "The Heart's Awakening," "A Modern Anthony," "A Fascinating Radical," "The Man of Her Choice," Etc.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued. "That is easy telling. Because you are going to be rich; because he is fond of money. That is the whole matter."

Her face paled, then crimsoned. She looked hard at him for a moment, then she said slowly, and in a broken way—

"Now I see what your opinion of me is. You don't think any one could love me for myself, but only for some paltry money that I am to have? Oh, yes, I quite understand, Billy!"

"Don't cry; for heaven's sake, don't cry!" she said, and then she said, "I am telling the truth."

He proceeded to emphasize the point; she looked less angry than before. Presently she said, "I don't know any more."

"Then you don't really think me horrid, Billy, or disagreeable, or ugly?" "You know I don't," he answered, and his voice was rather husky.
