Bad Wreck Is Averted

Passenger train No. 104 going south leaving here at 10:55 P. M., was wrecked two miles north of Lake Shore Jet, last Sunday night, when the engine, with a broken driving rod and minus a tire on one of the rear drive wheels, jumped the track. Engineer Thomas Mason and the fireman, who remained in the engine cab, were just missed by the powerful driving rod which tore through the cab and wrecked it. None of the passengers were injured.

On the trip north in the morning one of the drive wheels of the engine lost a tire but it was replaced in the shops at Fond du Lac. On the return trip, after leaving Oshkosh, the engineer opened wide the throttle and tried to regain lost time. The train rattled and swayed over the rails and clipped off the miles rapidly until the driving rod broke two miles north of Lake Shore Junction at 12:30 o'clock. The tire on a rear drive wheel came off and the engine leaped off the track, breaking the driving rod on the other side. On the locomotive bumped and snorted, nearly 200 feet, nearly plunging down the fifteen-foot embankment, while engineer Mason worked frantically to set the air brakes. He was performing this service when the heavy bent driving rod was driven into the cab, grazing his body.

A wrecking crew was sent to the scene from Milwaukee and in two hours the damage had been repaired.

A Peculiar Accident

Mrs. John Groeschel met with a peculiar accident last Monday at her home, when a varnish can filled with water exploded. The can was left there by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schmidt of Auburn, who heated the water in the can to keep their feet warm in the cutter. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt took the train to West Bend here and left their things at the Groeschel home. They were expected back on the noon train, so Mrs. Groeschel set the can on the stove to get the water hot. The can exploded with such force that it knocked everything off from the stove and scalded Mrs. Groeschel quite badly on her face and arms, which caused her much pain. She was confined to her bed for several days, but is able to be around the house again. What caused the can to explode is a mystery.

LITTLE ANNE OLIVER.

BY LUCY A. LEEDS.

The old dame hobbled into the little parlor in quest of the parcel, and Sir Roger followed her with a sinking heart. He had an instinctive foreboding that he should not see Anne.

Yes, the Brown-Holland concert party was gone. The queer, stuffy little room looked deserted. The window was shut, the flowers were dead, torn paper and some bits of string littered the tiny hearth; on the round table the remains of an early breakfast still lingered—half a cottage loaf, a jar of treacle, some butter a jug of milk, and three cups and plates gaped the board.

"Are you sure they left no address? Surely you know where they went this morning?" he exclaimed impatiently. "Their luggage must have been addressed."

Gerrit shook her head with an indulgent smile. "Bless ye, sir, pore folk don't have no luggage," she said. "They'd a bit of a tin box, poor things, amongst the three of 'em, an' the instruments what the little chap set such store by—carried them hisself he did, bless him, and my Jim he shouldered the box for 'em up to the station, but I didn't see no labels."

Roger turned away in despair. The bundle left in Grannie Burns' charge and directed in Anne's firm, bold handwriting to "The Housekeeper, White Barns, near Hassocks, Sussex," contained, as he expected, only the shawl borrowed for Gerry and the clothes that had been lent her. There was nothing else—no note, no message—nothing by which the Oliversons could be traced.

Apparently Anne had wished him to consider their acquaintance at an end.

Would it be wiser to let her have her way was his unspoken thought, as he turned his back on Fushia cottage, leaving old Grannie richer by a sovereign for his visit.

Unfortunately the consequences of poor little Geraldine Oliver's accident at White Barns proved far more serious than anyone imagined.

Possibly, had Anne been willing to follow good advice, and allow the child to remain where she was until she had thoroughly recovered from chill and the shock of her fall into the water, no bad effects might have followed the accident; but, as it was, a week after their return to London, complaints of pains in all her limbs accompanied by high temperature drove Anne to call in the parish doctor, and for thirteen weeks the little girl lay in bed, racked and helpless with rheumatic fever. A martyr to self-reproach, poor little Anne wore herself to a mere wraith nursing her sister.

Had not Lady Chilcote's unjust accusations raised such a storm of passion in her breast she and the children would have remained quietly at White Barns for twenty-four hours, at any rate, instead of stealing away as they had done, like thieves in the night.

Sometimes in those endless days of watching, Anne would snatch up a pen and write a few lines to Sir Roger, bewailing her own apparent ingratitude for all his past kindness, and telling him the sore straits to which Gerry's long illness had reduced them, but pride always stepped in and tempted her to destroy the letter instead of going down the street and posting it.

Meantime the precious extra funds that the Oliversons had collected during their happy August holiday, as the result of appreciation on the part of their patrons, were rapidly disappearing under the heavy strain of Gerry's prolonged illness.

Typewriting was all little Anne had to depend upon as a means of livelihood, for her engagement at the Chilcotes had been a dead-letter from the moment Lady Chilcote had recognized her governess at White Barns, and no further communication had taken place between them.

"It's so cold, Nan, and I want my tea," cried Gerry in a plaintive voice. The fire in the little grate had died down to a mere handful of cinders. The December night looked dark and gray through the uncurtained window of the shabby sitting room.

Little Anne knelt before the dying embers and carefully scattered a few grains of brown sugar on them to coax a little blaze; her own hands were so benumbed that she could hardly feel them, for the tiny room which she and the typewriting machine shared between them had no fireplace, and a hot-water bottle for her feet, which she was too busy to refill when it cooled, was the only means of keeping up the heat of the room which she possessed.

"I am so sorry, darling; I know I've been a long time away, but I had to finish that article in time for tonight's post. Then I can call at the office tomorrow morning, and get paid," she said cheerfully, as she piled the reviving fire with bits of stick and carefully insinuated some little lumps of coke and coal into the meager heap. "Now I'll light the lamp and pin up the shawl to the window, and by that time we shall be able to boil the kettle."

"Isn't there anything nice for tea? I'm tired of toast, Nan; it's never buttered enough; can't I have 'glass windows'?" asked the child, feebly raising herself on her pillows and turning her eyes, their size out of all proportion to her pinched, white face, towards the meager preparations for the evening meal. Her sister looked away in haste from that wan, wistful face, and swallowed something in her throat resolutely before she answered—

"Why, yes, darling, you can, if you fancy it more. I've got a few lumps of white sugar that I keep for your comfort. That will do nicely, only you must wait while I pound it up."

She hunted the cupboard once more, produced the sugar, and, arming herself with a rolling-pin, began hammering vigorously on it in a wooden bowl.

When a small quantity of the material was thus reduced to powder little Anne proceeded to cut two thin slices of bread, to spread them with butter—a mere scraping—then to sprinkle brown and white sugar alternately on the buttered surface, to press them together, and finally, with extreme care, to cut the sandwich across and across diagonal fashion, in fancied resemblance to the lattice-paned windows, after which the Oliver children had from babyhood christened this cheap but tasty dainty.

"There, now! I'll warm your milk, dearest, and give you the warmest little dash of tea in it—you know Dr. Banks said you must not have more—and then we'll begin. I won't make Phil's toast till he comes in," continued Anne, drawing the tea table close to Gerry's sofa and commencing contentedly to munch a bit of half-scorched and butterless bread that she had prepared for herself while the tea was drawing.

"I wonder if he will get that engagement he was going to try for. I mean the engagement which he heard of to play at the penny-reading in the parish schoolroom next week? I do hope so, as he has set his mind on it, poor darling."

"So do I. 'Cause if he does, and Mr. Graves, the curate, pays him five shillings like he said, Phil's going to buy us Christmas boxes, you and me," replied Gerry confidently. "Phil promised me that, Nan, when my leg ached so and wouldn't go away last week. He told me about the five shillings then, and I was cross, and said I didn't care whether he got it or not if it was to be spent on bread and butter or chops or eggs. I wanted a Christmas present, and then he said—only of course it's a secret—that if Mr. Graves gave him any shillings he would buy us both something pretty, not to eat or to wear, but just a real present for Christmas. Won't it be nice, Nanny dear?"

"Yes, dear, very nice," replied little Anne faintly. The prospect that the extra five shillings was not to be spent on anything to help their poor housekeeper was not quite so inspiring to her as to her sister, but she would have died rather than say so. There was a little pause during which Gerry was industriously struggling to fish up a long tea-leaf floating in her mug of weak tea.

"See, Nan! There's a stranger! I want to catch him! At least I don't know whether it's a him or a her. I bit it, and see—yes!"—having subjected the leaf to this ordeal with her sharp little teeth—"it must be a man, for it's so hard. Now, when is he coming?"

She stuck the supposed visitor on the back of her thin little hand.

"Today's Thursday, isn't it?" she said. "Oh, Nan, he's coming Thursday!"—the tea leaf vanished suddenly from her sight. "Don't you wonder who he is? Suppose, only suppose, it was Sir Roger!"

"I shouldn't suppose anything of the kind. You mustn't be so silly, Gerry; Sir Roger Gresham is nothing to us," replied Anne rather sharply.

"Indeed he is, then. He's my very own dearest friend, and I'm going to marry him when I'm a grown-up lady. I told him I would," replied the youngest Miss Oliver in a defiant tone, "and you needn't get so red nor speak on snappy about him either, Nan," continued the child. "I think, and so does Phil, only he won't tell you, that you were very unkind to run away from Sir Roger that day at White Barns just because that horrid Lady Chilcote was rude and unkind to you. Phil said it was just like slapping the dog because the cat had been naughty, and—"

"Oh, don't, don't, Gerry darling, I've heard it all so often, and I can't bear to think about it; but I acted as I thought for the best!" exclaimed poor Anne wearily. "She was overworked and underfed—the burden of life her own, and that of the two frail creatures dependent on her solitary exertion seemed all at once too great to be endured much longer."

She laid her tired head on her arms, folded on the table, and sobbed as though her heart would break.

Gerry, repentant at the sight of the grief her thoughtless remark had evoked, stretched out her sticky claws of fingers and tried to stroke her sister's hair.

"Don't cry, Nan; I'm sorry," she said softly. "I didn't mean to say you were unkind to poor Sir Roger; and do you know—here Gerry's voice grew low and mysterious—"when I'm lying in bed and can't sleep, and the nights seem so long, I tell myself stories about you and him. I do really—only I call you a prince and a princess, you know, just to make it like a fairy tale. You're the princess—only very poor, with just a little teeny kingdom not bigger than this room, and you have to darn your own stockings, Nan, and only have a pudding on Sundays like us, and Sir Roger is the prince with a great big kingdom close by full of gardens and horses and bowling greens, and all things—and in my story the rich prince loves the poor princess, and wants to give her some of his kingdom and all his treasures, but she is cross and runs away, so he loses her. At last the day comes when he knocks at the door—"

Here a real thump, executed by real knuckles, interrupted this interesting account of the rejected prince's courtship, and the smutty face of the little maid-of-all-work attached to the chemist's household peered into the room.

"Please, miss, a pusson have called about the typewriting." Could you see 'em, 'e says, 'cos 'e can't wait now?" Gerry almost jerked herself off her sofa with excitement.

"It's the stranger! It's the stranger, Nan! I told you so!" she exclaimed. "What is he like? Don't stand staring! Oh, do tell quick, Mary Ann!"

"Hush—hush!" Anne moved towards the door. "Where is the person? Did he say where he came from? What office?" she asked rather doubtfully.

"He did not, miss. 'E jest first to you, an' said 'e must see you dreckly minit. 'E was for followin' me up 'ere, but I thought I might show 'im in Mrs. Bain's parlor, the fambly teasing out this evening," responded Mary Ann with dignity.

"Very well—I'm coming. I sha'n't be gone more than a few minutes, Gerry." Anne hurried away downstairs, not even waiting to take off the blue ribbon apron she always wore when typing to protect her shabby frock from ink splashes. It would never do to let a fresh order by any delay on her part.

The little entry, like a bright light, was quite dark, but a bright light streaming across it suggested that Mary Ann had turned up the gas in the Bains' back parlor and left the door open when she showed Miss Oliver's visitor in.

He stood on the hearth, facing her as she entered—a familiar presence he seemed to be somehow, though shrouded in a great fur-lined overcoat. There was a breathless pause. Then the man who had called about the typewriting said—

"Annel! And took the typist's two cold trembling little hands in his. 'It's just like my story, only I hadn't time to finish it!' cried Gerry, as her sister, with a transfixed face and shining eyes, was putting her to bed a couple of hours later.

"The prince hunted for the princess everywhere 'cause she'd been silly and run away from him, and then at last he knocked at the door of her kingdom and there she was! So then he got her half of everything he had in the world, and they lived together happily ever after! That's what you and Roger are going to do, aren't you, Nan?" "I don't know, darling. Yes, I suppose so. Perhaps!" said little Anne—Lucy A. Leeds.

THE END.

CHURCH AS AID TO ART.

How Religion Promoted the Culture of the Renaissance.

The church conspicuously aided art in that period in the life of Europe when the nations were responding to the enormous stimulus of the rediscovered wealth of pagan learning and were attempting to assimilate the culture and the rich and complicated civilization of the Greeks and Romans. This was the subject of a notable lecture at Chicago, Sunday afternoon by Rev. Thomas Joseph Shanahan of Washington, rector of the Catholic University of America. The lecture was under the auspices of the combined council of Knights of Columbus of Cook county. Dr. Shanahan said:

"The attitude of the church toward the renaissance was very favorable," he said, "since it was in several ways an uplift to the human mind and widening of its resources and possibilities. Popes like Nicholas and Leo X. were its protectors and prophets, and to no small extent created the forum in which the renaissance displayed its fairest products. Latin and Greek scholars, painters, sculpture and artists of every kind and degree found a welcome in the great papal capital. It had so long been a widowed figure by the Tiber that a new joy and delight seemed to fill it when early in the fifteenth century the long Avignon exile came to an end.

"It is worth noting that the protection of western Christendom against the depredations of the Turks was chiefly due to the popes of this period, who found admirably instruments in such cardinals as Giulio Cesarini and Juan Carvajal. Without these men and without such inspired popular preachers as St. Capistrano the crusades probably never appeared. Two centuries earlier before the walls of Vienna. In its early days the art of painting found its chief support among ecclesiastics, who were the chief purchasers of Bibles, the piety, sermons, books, and other works such as the early printers chiefly lived by."

Ruskin's Profits from His Books.

The profits made by Ruskin from his books were in the end very large and fully justified his belief in being practically his own publisher. In "Fors Clavigera" he wrote: "I could even sell my books for not inconsiderable sums of money if I chose to bribe the reviewers, stick bills on the lamp-posts and say nothing about them." George Allen, who published for Ruskin in the middle of a country field in Kent, told E. T. Cope that Ruskin's profits in 1887 were over £4000, and in 1888 he had in addition a valuable stock. From one issue of "Modern Painters" he cleared £6000. Ruskin spent practically the whole of his large private fortune in the purchase of benevolent enterprises, and during the latter years his income was wholly derived from the sale of his books.—London Chronicle.

Too Much Spicy Reminiscence.

The recent stand taken by London circulating libraries against the sale of incalculating libraries based on incidentally on commercial grounds. The memoirs of Lady Cardigan are mainly responsible for the action of the libraries. The price of the usual run of novels more than that of blood and ink. The book itself is very short, and being a short book, is read too quickly, but the libraries were forced to buy it. The English reading public is becoming by a further increase in the number of books, and the libraries hope their action will stem the torrent. It will be interesting to see if Lady Cardigan's threatened memoirs are toned down to suit the taste of the libraries or marked down cheap, so that all who run may read.

Mangled by a Baboon.

Fred Wilson, an animal trainer employed by the Don Carlos animal show, at Portland, Ore., fought a battle with his own baboon, which attacked him in the cage. The savage monkey clutched Wilson's throat, but so long as the keeper could keep on his feet he had no trouble. At length, however, exhausted from loss of blood and strain, and the animal gnawed his legs in a frightful manner. A score of monkeys in the cage kept up a shrill screaming during the process of the fight and this attracted the attention of other employees who rescued Wilson. The trainer is in a serious condition.

Seventeen Hours of Agony.

Driving from Shamokin, Pa., toward his home, at Fisher's Ferry, Wellington Ross, a farmer, accidentally drove over the side of a road and dropped 50 feet down a precipice, along with two horses and a wagon. The vehicle was smashed, the horses were killed and Ross was perhaps fatally injured. As Ross did not return home, his family grew alarmed, and organized a searching party, which found him still at the scene of the accident, having been there seventeen hours, unable to walk and most of the time senseless.

Beatifications Requested.

The episcopate of the United States has again pressed its demands at Rome for hastening the process of beatification of the suggested list of other martyrs, among them being the Rev. Fr. John of New York; Father Simon Gabriel, Brute, bishop of New York; Sister Tekagavita, New York, and the missionaries Rene, Pompili and Isidore Jones. The Pope is believed to be favorable to the five beatifications which are expected to take place in 1911, contemporaneously with that of Christopher Columbus.

An Indiscreet Memory.

The Hostess—Don't you think Col. Broadside is quite a wonderful old man? Look at him. He is as straight and slender as an arrow, and he has the most wonderful memory. The Lady of Dubious Age—I think he's an atrocious old bore. He remembers when everybody was born.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SPRING SESSION OF LEGISLATURE SEEMS CERTAIN

LITTLE DOUBT NOW BUT THAT STATE'S EXECUTIVE WILL ISSUE LOOKED-FOR CALL.

POLITICIANS ARE NOT ANXIOUS

Work in Capitol Is Not Particularly Desirable at This Season of the Year.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 3.—[Special.]—There now is every prospect that a special legislative session will be called by Gov. Davidson. A peculiar error on the part of some several score assemblymen and senators, lobbyists and lawyers, has been detected. It has to do with the governor's constitutional right, which of course, takes precedence over any act of the Legislature. This constitutional right of the state's chief executive permits him to call a special session at his will. It does not require him to give sixty days' notice or even one hour's notice. Here is the provision:

Article IV, Section II—(As amended November 8, 1881)—The Legislature shall meet at the seat of government at such time as shall be provided by law, once in two years and no oftener, unless convened by the governor in special session, and when so convened a session shall be transacted except as shall be necessary to accomplish the special purpose for which it was convened.

This does away with all the talk and newspaper perisage to the effect that the governor must put the date of the special session sixty days ahead of his call. It has worried politicians not a little to think of a call issuing on the water front in March or April. That would bring it too close to the period of political disturbance and unrest, it is said.

How Mistake Was Made.

The mistaken impression that the governor would be forced to give sixty days' notice of a special session came about through the passage last June of the Assembly resolution creating special committees to draft bills for passage at a special session. It said that the committees "shall be authorized to print their reports and send them to every member of the Legislature at least sixty days before the convening of a special session." This resolution has no power to break down the constitutional provision, it is stated.

In the light of this newly discovered situation, the work of the special committees is of interest. There is every prospect of a majority report on the water front in March or April. The Senate side of a bitter fight for the conservation of the state's original rights. This committee soon will hold a final meeting. The income tax committee practically has agreed on a bill similar to the Ingram bill applying the income tax policy in connection with the familiar property tax.

Committee Meets Tuesday.

The banking committee will meet in Madison on Tuesday. It is said to be close to an agreement that will be interesting reading. The committee on education will meet January 21 and it also is expected to send about ready to present its report. The good roads committee will be unanimous with the exception that Senator Donald will announce his determination to submit amendments if he is not satisfied with the report. The industrial insurance committee has set no date for its next meeting, but probably will announce it within the week.

TRY TO REACH SOUTH POLE IN BALLOONS.

Officers in Russian Army Purchase Dirigibles and Will Attempt Trip in Antarctica.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Messrs. Mathieson and Voitschok, officers of the Russian army, purchased today two dirigible balloons, capacities 1400 and 2000 cubic meters. With the balloons, one officer will undertake a trip to the south pole. The explorers plan to convey the balloons with Hangar equipments by ship as far south as the ice will permit, and thence proceed in the balloons southward. By means of a wireless outfit, the two men will keep in touch with the airship, their base of supplies.

PAULHAN IN NEW YORK.

French Aviator Arrives in Gotham on His Way to Los Angeles for Air Meeting.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Full of compliments for his brothers in aviation, but confident of his own ability to smash records, Louis Paulhan arrived today on the steamer La Bretagne, en route to Los Angeles to participate in the events of aviation week there.

The French aviator recently attained a height of nearly 2000 feet, according to unofficial figures, and some of his flights in the coast aeroplane tests are expected to exhibit the high soaring qualities of the machine he uses. Paulhan said he considered the Wright brothers "wonders," and had a word of praise for Glenn H. Curtiss, another aviator who is to perform at Los Angeles. "I am extremely optimistic as to the future of flying machines," said Paulhan, "and I look for them to play an important part in future warfare."

Paulhan began his career as an aviator while in the French army. He was accompanied here by his wife. As he stepped ashore from the steamer, he was served with papers in a suit alleging infringement of the Wright brothers' patents in an aeroplane. Paulhan said he would make no statement regarding the suit until he had consulted an attorney.

AN ODD PETITION.

A Woman Wants a Scottish Court to Appear Here.

One of the most remarkable petitions that has ever been addressed to the New Jersey courts from a chancery has just been filed by Mrs. Caroline J. Von Old of Plainfield, N. J. She asks that the state's writ of subpoena be directed to the court of claims and chancery, Edinburgh, Scotland, commanding it on a certain day and under a certain penalty personally to appear before the chancellor and answer the petition. Mrs. Von Old's petition is predicated on a desire to gain from the New Jersey courts an acknowledgment of her claim on a large amount of money, estimated at more than a million. The estate is alleged to be in the hands of the court of claims and chancery of Scotland, awaiting distribution to the heirs of Benjamin Laing, who died in Plainfield township.

COST OF LIVING HITS EDUCATORS

ASSISTANT PROFESSORS IN HIGHER INSTITUTIONS ARE UNDERPAID, SAYS CALIFORNIAN.

SCHOLARSHIP SYSTEM ABUSED.

Members of Association of American Universities Hear Severe Criticism of "Intellectual Valet" System.

MANY UNIVERSITIES REPRESENTED

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 4.—[Special.]—That 80 per cent. of the assistant professors in American universities must supplement their salaries by outside work, in order to "make both ends meet," that they receive, on an average, just enough to suffice for an unmarried man, and that 74 per cent. of them are married and have families to support, were facts presented with other striking statistics by Prof. Guido Marx of the engineering college of Stanford university in a paper on "The Problem of the Assistant Professor," before the Association of American Universities, which opened its annual convention at the university this morning.

Replies to questions sent to 250 assistant professors in the twenty-two institutions represented in the association showed that the average assistant professor receives his appointment at the age of 31.25 years, after spending, as a rule, some seven years in graduate study in preparation.

Scores Scholarship System.

"Sixty-three and a half per cent. of the assistant professors have received some assistance financially in pursuing their studies, preparatory to university teaching," said Prof. Marx. "The scholarships are rarely enough to support the incumbent, and he must go into debt, or undertake some outside employment, to eke out his funds, taking time and strength which otherwise would be spent upon his university work."

"One deplorable effect of the present scholarship system is the fact that the debt thus incurred takes, on an average, six, eight, or ten years in the repaying. The manipulation of the fellowships for the building up of a strong or large graduate department lies dangerously near the immoral; and this is doubly true when the fellowship carries with it burdensome teaching duties which make it but a disguised, underpaid instructorship. Nor can the practice of some professors of looking upon their fellows as a sort of intellectual valet, be too strongly condemned."

Rise in Cost of Living.

"The rapid increase in the cost of living in the past twenty years has made the situation of the assistant professor acute, for there has been no general increase of salaries commensurate with this. As a consequence these men find themselves driven to a lower and lower standard of living. This is a grave menace to the efficiency of the institutions, both present and future, it must be remembered, it is from the ranks of these that the higher positions must be filled—the full professorships and the heads of colleges and institutions."

This afternoon Dean Louis F. Reber of the University of Wisconsin extension division presented a paper on university extension work, and at six o'clock there was an entertainment at dinner by the faculty of the University of Wisconsin, at the University club.

Weather Forecasts for January According to Rev. Irl R. Hicks Predictions

The weather forecast for January according to Rev. Irl R. Hicks predictions, January will come in most likely in the midst of Mercury sleet and snowstorms, with change to warmer on and touching the 3rd. With this rise of temperature, look for falling barometer, probable winter lightning and thunder southward, with rain, turning to heavy sleet and snow generally on and touching the 3rd, 4th and 5th. A very marked and wide cold wave will follow from the north-west, progressively, behind these storms, spreading eastward and southward over most parts of the country from the 3rd to the 6th. Understand and heed this forecast. "Do not get left."

A reactionary storm period is central on the 7th, 8th and 9th. Saturn's quadrature with Sun and Earth is on the 7th, and Neptune's opposition with Earth and Sun is on the 8th. This period will bring return of rising temperature, falling barometer and more rain and snow. The moon will be at extreme south on the 10th, inducing northerly winds, but new moon is on the 11th, preventing great cold and keeping barometric pressures down between this and the succeeding storm period.

A regular storm period is central on the 14th, covering the 12th to the 17th. Moderate, threatening conditions will continue from the New Moon on the 11th, through the greater part of this period, but from about the 15th to the 17th decided storms of rain, wind and possibly thunder need surprise no student of these forecasts. These storms will be rapid in their development and passage from west to east, with a cold wave pushing the heels of storms closely from the northwest. The Moon being on the celestial equator on the 16th and nearest the Earth on the 17th, with first quarter on the 18th, the disturbance of this period will naturally be prolonged out of its normal limitations.

A reactionary storm period falls centrally on the 20th and 21st. On and next to these dates may be expected the regular rise of temperature, fall of the barometer, cloudiness, change of wind currents to easterly and southerly, all ending in renewed rain and snow and followed by rising barometer and clearing, colder weather.

A regular storm period is central on the 25th, Full Moon falling on the same day. This period will change to warmer, southerly winds and falling barometer followed by rain and snow from the 25th to the 27th. Rising barometer and change to much colder will follow closely behind these storms from the west and north. Another seismic period is coincident with the storm period, 22nd to 27th, central on the 25th. Prepare for northwestern blizzards, followed by extreme cold at the end of this period.

A reactionary storm period extends from the 30th to February 1st. Rain and snow will be in transit as the month goes out.

Not So Very Cheap

A rather amusing story is told of a man who went into a hardware store in a neighboring town and wished to purchase an ax, says an Ohio paper. Being shown the article and informed that the price was $1.15, he said, "Why, I can get that same kind of an ax from a mail order house for 90 cents." "Very well," said the hardware man; "I will give it to you for the same price provided you will do the same with me as you will do with it." "All right," replied the customer as he handed over a dollar bill, the merchant giving him back 10 cents in change. "Now said the hardware man, "I want 25 cents more to pay express charges," which the purchaser gave him. "How much did your ax cost you?" "One dollar and fifteen cents the man answered." "Very good," Now give me 5 cents more for money order fees and postage," which the purchaser had to hand over. "Now how much did your ax cost you?" "One dollar and twenty cents," said the customer. "Not so cheap, after all," said the merchant, whereupon he picked up the ax, tossed it back on the shelf and told the customer to call for it in ten days, as that would be as soon as he could get it if he had ordered it from the mail order house.

FIREMAN'S JUMP WILL BE FATAL

LANTERNS ON RAILROAD TRACKS LOOK LIKE HEADLIGHTS OF ANOTHER LOCOMOTIVE.

THINKS COLLISION INEVITABLE.

Engineer Mistakes Meaning of Beacons and Tells Co-Worker to Leap for His Life.

COMPOUND FRACTURE OF SKULL.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—In an effort to save his life in what he thought was an inevitable collision, J. C. Farrel, aged 25, a fireman on the Soo road, living at North Found du Lac, jumped from the cab of his engine near Schlesinger Tuesday night and sustained injuries which probably will prove fatal. When the train was near Schlesinger, Engineer Meyer saw two white lights ahead and thinking it was an approaching train called to his fireman to jump. Farrel obeyed, striking his head on a switch bar and tearing his scalp off. The lights proved to be railroad lanterns which had been left on the track. At the hospital it is reported that Farrel has a compound fracture of the skull and can hardly live.

MEADS FOUND GUILTY.

American Engineer Sentenced to One Week's Arrest in Russia for Neg- ligence in Submarine Boat.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 5.—Joseph K. Meads, an American, and two local engineers were condemned by the superior court today to one week's arrest for negligence in connection with the explosion of the submarine Dragon in the Neva river last August. This reverses the decision of the admiralty investigation committee which found that the accident was due to unavoidable causes. Meads, whose home is at Baltimore, was the engineer of the Dragon and in the employ of the builder, Simon Lake, of Bridgeport, Conn. He and sixteen others were injured in the explosion, which was said to be due probably to the ignition of benzene. The submarine, built for the Russian government, had not been formally accepted at the time.

STRIKE NOT SETTLED.

Mediators in Switchmen's Walkout Have Not Yet Determined What Course They Will Take.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—"What we can do has not been determined yet, and what we may do is wholly problematic." This statement was made today by Chairman Knapp of the interstate commerce commission, respecting the situation created by the strike of the switchmen of the northwestern railways. Dr. Neill, commissioner of labor, the associate mediator with Mr. Knapp, returned to Washington, having been absent for two or three days on official business. H. B. Perham, unofficially representing the striking switchmen, hopes to have a further conference with Chairman Knapp and Dr. Neill today or tomorrow. Meantime, Mr. Perham has no statement to make.

LABORERS PAID WELL.

Spokane (Wash.) Scale High as $3 a Day While Teamsters Are Given $6.50 a Day.

SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 5.—Officials of labor unions in Spokane believe that the action of the city council in increasing the wage scale of laborers from $2.75 to $3 a day and that of teamsters from $5.50 to $6.50 a day for eight hours' work, beginning April 1, will have a general effect upon wages in building and other lines. With the exception of Butte, the scale to be paid in Spokane for ordinary labor is higher than in any other city in the northwest. The increase was obtained by the work of the business agents of the two federal labor unions and two teamsters' organizations after a campaign of two months. There was no talk of striking or other trouble.

GOLDMAN IS DEFENDED.

Bishop Williams of Michigan Asks That Police Prohibition Against Anar- chist Be Withdrawn.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 5.—Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan, with Carl E. Schmidt and Conrad Pfeiffer, called on Police Commissioner Croul to see whether the police prohibition against Emma Goldman's proposed speech here next Sunday could not be withdrawn. Commissioner Croul asked for time to consider the matter.

Denounces the Sensational Press.

"Discussing 'The Responsibilities of Citizenship' Gov. Hughes of New York delivered the first of the course of Dodge lectures at Yale. The subdivision of his subject taken by the governor was 'The Attitude of the Individual.' He characterized the sensational press as the most dangerous foe of democratic government, and declared the peril of the nation was not in a foreign foe but in the people themselves. In his emphasis of this latter point, he said: "Increasing prosperity tends to breed indifference and to corrupt moral soundness. Free speech voices the appeals of hate and envy as well as those of justice and charity. A free press is made the instrument of cunning, greed and ambition, as well as the agency of enlightened and independent opinion. The peril of this nation is not in any foreign foe. We, the people, are its power, its peril and its hope."

SPLIT ON WATERPOWER

LIEUT.-GOV. STRANGE AND NEAL BROWN DEBATE QUESTION.

Wausau Democrat Declares Official's Views Are Socialistic and Tinctured with Political Ambition.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Ownership of water powers in Wisconsin was discussed Tuesday night before the Candlelight club, the speakers being Lieut. Gov. Strange of Neenah and Neal Brown of Wausau.

Mr. Strange argued that the state should appropriate all undeveloped water powers and should proceed to develop these and lease the power to consumers. He favored at least a mild control or regulations over the water powers which are already developed, but denied that he had favored the state taking possession of water powers already developed. He was opposed to private interests acquiring control of undeveloped water powers for private gain. He also favored the securing by the state of large acreages of land for reforestation.

There was little of tenderness in Mr. Strange's discussion of the water power on the Fox river between Menasha and Denero. He said the owners greatly abused their privileges and held back growth of manufacturing plants. He said water power was too great a power to place in the hands of any one man or corporation.

Mr. Brown said he was not a candidate for any office and he charged Mr. Strange with being altruistic because he was seeking office. He also said Mr. Strange had expressed socialistic views in the matter of water powers.

Mr. Brown declared that the private ownership of water powers was all right and that men who had put in much capital in developing them should be permitted to realize on that development.

"HOG FACE DUTCH" DEAD

Tom Daring, Trainmaster for Circusses, Known All Over Country, Killed Under Engine.

DANVILLE, Ill., Jan. 5.—Tom Daring, as trainmaster for one after another of the big circusses had bossed the loading and unloading night in and night out in all weathers, dodged shunted cars and swung on and off the pilots of switch engines, but today he met his death under a locomotive's wheels in the Big Four switching yard. Daring's home was here. As "hog face Dutch" he was known to the circus and railroad people the country over and he was familiar with about every siding and tent lot from coast to coast. Back from "the road" this fall, he took a job as a switchman, and he slipped off a pilot, and was gone.

MRS. BELMONT LEADS

FEARS THAT SHE MAY ABSORB ALL SUFFRAGE GLORY.

Acute Trouble in National Camp Grow- ing Out of Mrs. Belmont's Win- ning Activity.

At the outset of the campaign which it is believed by some of the foremost feminine leaders will win the vote for women in New York, the most important state in the Union, the rift in the suffrage lute has become so pronounced that a crisis is imminent. While the battle is widespread the immediate storm center is the National Suffrage headquarters at 505 Fifth avenue, and the country at large awaits the issue.

The causes leading up to the present situation are as diverse as the various bodies working for the enfranchisement of the sex in the metropolises. But the chief of them is the dominance of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont in a movement she espoused only a year ago, in which she has already forged so impetuously ahead that she threatens to absorb it, lock, stock and barrel.

When Mrs. Belmont took up the cry of votes for women it was conceived by her friends to be a bid of the moment which would shortly be fed to satiety. But her activities, instead of diminishing, have increased. Day by day she has labored untiringly, relinquishing social engagements and recreations that she might devote herself, heart and soul, to her one consuming passion. Her executive ability, her capacity for spurring on others to the achievements she would attain has placed her today in the position of a general marshaling her forces. It is largely due to her keen enjoyment of the game of politics, her restlessness and driving where a blow may be struck for the cause, her ability for surprising suffrage departure that the possibility of the ballot for women, erstwhile ridiculed, has become the daily question. Mrs. Belmont has asked no office in the state or national organization. Her only title is that of president of her own Political Equality association, which, being a secret society, has little for public record.

But she has assumed to the eyes of the outside public the aspect of the all-powerful background of the state and the nation—a woman who can hurry these two great aggregations of women toward two great ends, with or without the consent of the unconsciously governed, by the sheer force of a personality that meets obstacles only to defeat them.

Letters of inquiry, of more or less veiled protest, have come to the headquarters from suffragists in all parts of the country. There was a fear that the glory of attaining the ballot might at the eleventh hour be snatched from the regular by a woman whose social position and wealth, together with a close knowledge of the political field and amazing talent for making propaganda, gave her an enormous advantage.

The consternation in the ranks is accounted for in several ways. The moving of the headquarters to New York city, while done, and apparently cordially, ratified at the last convention, has aroused the jealousy of the west, which regards the big city as too absorbing in itself to allow a clear point of view on the work necessary throughout the nation. As a result, Mrs. Belmont has been a most generous benefactor to the movement, she has taken her own way of expressing her liberality.

The National association has never been a rich one. In former years suffrage was too unpopular to find many willing to prove their convictions in dol-

Some people swell up on "emotion" brewed from absolute untruth. It's an old trick of the leaders of the Labor Trust to twist facts and make the "sympathetic ones" weep at the ice house. (That's part of the tale further on.)

Gompers et al. sneer at, spit upon and defy our courts, seeking sympathy by falsely telling the people the courts were trying to deprive them of free speech and free press.

Men can speak freely and print opinions freely in this country and no court will object, but they cannot be allowed to print matter as part of a criminal conspiracy to injure and ruin other citizens.

Gompers and his trust associates started out to ruin the Bucks Stove Co., drive its hundreds of workmen out of work and destroy the value of the plant without regard to the fact that hard earned money of men who worked, had been invested there.

The conspirators were told by the courts to stop these vicious "trust" methods, (efforts to break the firm that won't come under trust rule), but instead of stopping they "dare" the courts to punish them and demand new laws to protect them in such destructive and tyrannous acts as they may desire to do. * * * The reason Gompers and his band persisted in trying to ruin the Bucks Stove Works was because the stove company insisted on the right to keep some old employees at work when "de union" ordered them discharged and some of "de gang" put in.

Now let us reverse the conditions and have a look. Suppose the company had ordered the union to dismiss certain men from their union, and the demand being refused, should institute a boycott against that union, publish its name in an "unfair list," instruct other manufacturers all over the United States not to buy the labor of that union, have committees call at stores and threaten to boycott if the merchants sold anything made by that union. Picket the factories where members work and slug them on the way home, blow up their houses and wreck the works, and even murder a few members of the boycotted union to teach them they must obey the orders of "organized Capital!"

It would certainly be fair for the company to do these things if lawful for the Labor Trust to do them. In such a case, under our laws, the boycotted union could apply to our courts to stop these union men from trying to ruin those union men. Suppose thereupon the company should sneer at the court and in open defiance continue the unlawful acts in a persistent, carefully laid out plan, purposely intended to ruin the union and force its members into poverty. What a howl would go up from the union demanding that the courts protect them and punish their law-breaking oppressors. Then they would praise the courts and go on earning a living protected from ruin and happy in the knowledge that the people's courts could defend them.

How could any of us receive protection from law-breakers unless the courts have power to, and do punish such men? The court is placed in position where it must do one thing or other—punish men who persist in defying its peace orders or go out of service, let anarchy reign and the more powerful destroy the weaker.

Peaceable citizens sustain the courts as their defenders, whereas thieves, forgers, burglars, crooks of all kinds and violent members of labor unions, hate them and threaten violence if their members are punished for breaking the law. They want the courts to let them go free and at the same time demand punishment for other men "outside de union" when they break the law. * * * Notice the above reference is to "violent" members of labor unions. The great majority of the "unheard" union men are peaceable, upright citizens. The noisy, violent ones get into office and the leaders of the great Labor Trust know how to mass this kind of men, in labor conventions and thus carry out the leaders' schemes, frequently abhorrent to the rank and file; so it was at the late Toronto convention. The paid delegates would applaud and "resolute" as Gompers wanted, but now and then some of the real workmen insist on being heard, sometimes at the risk of their lives.

Delegate Egan is reported to have said of the Toronto convention: "If the officers of the federation would only adhere to the law we would think a lot more of them."

The Grand Council of the Provincial Workingmen's Ass'n of Canada has declared in favor of severing all connection with unions in the U. S., saying "any union having its seat of Gov't in America, and pretending to be international in its scope, must fight industrial battles according to American methods. Said methods have consequences which are abhorrent to the law-abiding people of Canada involving hunger, misery, riot, bloodshed and murder, all of which might be termed a result of the practical war now in progress in our fair province and directed by foreign emissaries of the United Miners of America."

That is an honest Canadian view of our infamous "Labor Trust."

A few days ago the daily papers printed the following: (By the Associated Press.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—Characterizing the attitude of Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor in the contempt proceedings in the courts of the District of Columbia in connection with the Bucks Stove and Range Company, as "willful, premeditated violation of the law," Simon Burns, general master workman of the general assembly, Knights of Labor, has voiced a severe condemnation of these three leaders. Mr. Burns expressed his confidence in courts in general and in those of the District of Columbia in particular.

APPROVED BY DELEGATES. This rebuke by Burns was in his annual report to the general assembly of his organization. He received the hearty approval of the delegates who heard it read at their annual meeting in this city.

"There is no trust or combination of capital in the world," said Mr. Burns, "that violates laws oftener than do the trust labor organizations, which resort to more dishonest, unfair and dishonorable methods toward their competitors than any trust or combinations in the country."

Mr. Burns said the action of "these so-called leaders" would be harmful for years to come whenever attempts were made to obtain labor legislation.

"The Labor Digest," a reputable workman's paper, says, as part of an article entitled "The Beginning of the End of Gompersism, many organizations becoming tired of the rule-or-ruin policies which have been enforced by the president of the A. F. of L."

"That he has maintained his leadership for so long a time in the face of his stubborn clinging to policies which the more thoughtful of the workingmen have seen for years must be abandoned, has been an account partly of the sentimental feeling on the part of the organizations that he ought not to be deposed, and the unwillingness of the men who were mentioned for the place to accept a nomination in opposition to him. In addition to this, there is no denying the shrewdness of the leader of the A. F. of L. and his political sagacity, which has enabled him to keep a firm grip on the machinery of the organization, and to have his faithful henchmen in the positions where they could do him the most good whenever their services might be needed."

"Further than this, he has never failed, at the last conventions, to have some sensation to spring on the convention at the psychological moment, which would place him in the light of a martyr to the cause of unionism, and excite a wave of sympathetic enthusiasm for him, which would carry the delegates off their feet, and result in his re-election."

lars. It is an open secret that Mrs. Belmont assumed a large share of the rental of the office at 505 Fifth avenue to make it possible for their removal from the small town of Warren, O. As her donation to the State society, she pays the rental of its headquarters on the same floor. Beyond this Mrs. Belmont has ordinarily chosen to give specific sums for specific purposes. If there is certain work which she conceives to be necessary for the advancement of suffrage, she takes the responsibility for the salary of the worker. If an emergency arises she hires a hall for a mass meeting. It was Mrs. Belmont who took the initiative in the meeting for the strikers at the Hippodrome last Sunday. Dr. Anna Shaw, the National president, spoke in her capacity as a private individual, as she took care to explain, but it made enormously for suffrage propaganda.

In this wise Mrs. Belmont's money, while prodigally given to the cause, does not go in the ordinary fashion through the coffers of the National association. Jealousy lest the whole suffrage question should confine itself to New York city is therefore a strong element in the present trouble.

Disagreement at the headquarters over the conduct of the national campaign has grown acute. Prof. Frances Squires Potter, the newly acquired corresponding secretary, being ranged on the one side and Dr. Anna Shaw on the other. Matters recently reached a point where these officers refused to confer with each other, and it is understood, Mrs. Belmont endeavored vainly to intervene. Prof. Potter came out of the west from the University of Minnesota to assume her present position, and her attachment to the cause has attracted much attention throughout the country.—New York World.

A BOSTON PRODIGY.

Girl Pianist Wins the First Prize in the French National Conservatory.

A 12-year-old Boston girl has surpassed the French musical world by walking away with the first prize for the piano in the world-famed National conservatory in competition with hundreds of grown-up persons. Alvine van Barenzen is the name of this prodigy. At 9 years of age, when she applied for admission to the conservatory, she already played like a master and immediately fixed the attention of the committee which passes on applications for admission. The following year she won a first prize, the next year still another and this year one more—the first for all branches of the piano—and in one year, instead of the five years' term allowed in which to win this prize so eagerly sought. She made her formal debut to a French audience at the Colonne concert in Paris, November 21. The child is accompanied by her mother, who is herself a brilliant pianist. She says that one hour before the girl was born she played Bach fugues on the piano. Her most intense desire was that her child should be a musician. The little girl is about to start on a concert tour extending all over the continent. She is anxious to return to the United States, and especially to New York, that she may prove what she is capable of accomplishing in music, but owing to the Gentry law will be unable to do so for many years.

Big Salmon Hatchery.

The biggest salmon hatchery in the world has been opened here. The building is 55x230 feet and is equipped with 248 16-foot hatching troughs, having a capacity of 90,000,000 eggs. There are now 20,000,000 eggs on hand ready for hatching. Water is supplied from a nearby creek through a 12-inch pipe, the flow being 3,000 gallons a minute. Nursery and feeding ponds are supplied sufficient for feeding 3,000,000 young fish.

Don't Weep At The Ice House.

"That his long leadership, and this apparent impossibility to fill his place has gone to his head, and made him imagine that he is much greater a man than he really is, is undoubtedly the case, and accounts for the tactics he has adopted in dealing with questions before congress, where he has unnecessarily antagonized men to whom organized labor must look for recognition of their demands, and where labor measures are often opposed on account of this very antagonism, which would otherwise receive support."

"There is no doubt but what organized labor in this country would be much stronger with a leader who was more in touch with conditions as they actually exist, and who would bring to the front the new policies which organized labor must adopt if it expects to even maintain its present standing, to say nothing of making further progress."

We quote portions of another article, a reprint, from the same labor paper:

"Organized labor, through its leaders, must recognize the mistakes of the past if they expect to perpetuate their organizations or to develop the movement which they lead. No movement, no organization, no nation can develop beyond the intellects which guide these organizations, and if the leaders are dominated by a selfish motive the organization will become tinged with a spirit of selfishness, which has never appealed to mankind in any walk of life at any time since history began."

"It can be said in extenuation of certain leaders of organized labor that the precarious position which they occupy as leaders has had a tendency to cause them to lose sight of the object behind the organization. The natural instinct in man for power and position is in no small measure responsible for the mistakes of the leaders, not necessarily in labor unions alone, but in every branch of society. This desire for power and leadership and personal aggrandizement causes men who have been earnest and sincere in their efforts in the start to deteriorate into mere politicians whose every act and utterance is tinged with the desire to cater to the baser passions of the working majority in the societies or organizations and this is undoubtedly true when applied to the present leaders of the Federation. We mention the Federation of Labor particularly in this article because that organization is the only organization of labor which has yet found itself in direct opposition to the laws of the land. There are other organizations of labor whose leaders have made mistakes, but they have always kept themselves and their organizations within the bounds of the law and respected the rights of every other man in considering the rights of themselves and their constituency; whereas, the motto of the Federation is just the reverse, and unless the leaders conform themselves and their organization in accordance with the laws of the land, the leaders and the organization itself may be disintegrated and pass into history, for in America the common sense in mankind is developed to a greater extent than in any other nation on the earth, and the people, who are the court of last resort in this country, will never allow any system to develop in this country which does not meet with the approval of the majority of the citizens of the country."

"This must have forced itself upon the leaders of the Federation by this time. If it has not, the leaders must be eliminated. The organization which they head has done many meritorious things in times past and the people are always ready and willing to acknowledge the benefits which their efforts have brought to their constituency as a whole, but at the present time labor organizations in general, and the Federation of Labor in particular, stand before the bar of public opinion, having been convicted of selfishness and a disposition to rule all the people of the country in the interest of the few. The people are patient and awaiting to see if the object lesson which they have been forced to give to these leaders is going to be recognized and if they are going to conform themselves and their future work and actions in accordance thereto."

Let the people remember that comment, "The Federation of Labor in particular stands before the bar of public opinion having been convicted of selfishness and a disposition to rule all the people of the country in the interest of the few."

The great 90 per cent of Americans do not take kindly to the acts of tyranny by these trust leaders openly demanding that all people bow down to the rules of the Labor Trust and we are treated to the humiliating spectacle of our Congress and even the Chief Executive entertaining these convicted law-breakers and listening with consideration to their insolent demands that the very laws be changed to allow them to safely carry on their plan of galling control over the affairs of the people."

The sturdy workers of America have come to know the truth about these "martyrs sacrificing themselves in the noble cause of labor" but it's only the hysterical ones who swell up and cry over the aforesaid "heroes," reminding one of the two romantic elderly maids who, weeping copiously, were discovered by the old janitor at Mt. Vernon.

"What is it all you ladies?" Taking the handkerchief from one swollen red eye, between sobs she said:

"Why, we have so long revered the memory of George Washington that we feel it a privilege to come here and weep at his tomb."

"Yes'm, yes'm, yo' shore has a desire to express yo' sympathy, but yo' are overflowin' at de wrong spot, yo' is weepin' at de ice house."

Don't get maudlin about law-breakers who must be punished if the very existence of our people is to be maintained.

If you have any surplus sympathy it can be extended to the honest workers who continue to earn food when threatened and are frequently hurt and sometimes killed before the courts can intervene to protect them.

Now the Labor Trust leaders demand of Congress that the courts be stripped of power to issue injunctions to prevent them from assaulting or perhaps murdering men who dare earn a living when ordered by the Labor Trust to quit work.

Don't "weep at the Ice House" and don't permit any set of law-breakers to bully our courts, if your voice and vote can prevent. Be sure and write your Representatives and Senators in Congress asking them not to vote for any measure to prevent the courts from protecting homes, property and persons from attack by paid agents of this great Labor Trust.

Let every reader write, and write now. Don't sit silent and allow the organized and paid men of this great trust to force Congress to believe they represent the great masses of the American people. Say your say and let your representatives in Congress know that you do not want to be governed under new laws which would empower the Labor Trust leaders with legal right to tell you when to work. Where! For whom! At what price! What to buy! What not to buy! What to vote for! How much you shall pay per month in fees to the Labor Trust! etc., etc., etc.

This power is now being demanded by the passage of laws in Congress. Tell your Senators and Representatives plainly that you don't want them to vote for any measure that will allow any set of men, either representing Capital or Labor to govern and dictate to the common people, who prefer to be free to go and come, work or not, and vote for whom they please. Every man's liberty will disappear when the leaders of the great Labor Trust or any other trust can ride rough shod over people and mass their forces to prevent our courts from affording protection.

PLATINUM IN SAND.

A Discovery of Importance to Miners on "the Coast."

Davis T. Day, United States geological survey director of government petroleum work on the Pacific coast, will soon make a report to the government in Washington. Mr. Day also is in charge of the research work in connection with platinum mining on the coast. For several months he has conducted an investigation of the beach sands from Cape Flattery to Lompoc. Before leaving Los Angeles, he said he is of the opinion that the facts concerning the platinum mining industry as we have found them are known, a great stimulus will be given. Platinum can be taken from the sands of the coast in paying quantities by a simple mechanical process at little expense. While the industry is not likely to attract the attention of the big corporations, it will prove of immense interest to the miner in a small way.

DISCOVER WHITE PINE.

Timber Cruisers on the Western Slope of the Olympics.

Alonso Jergens and a party of timber cruisers have returned to Seattle with the news of the discovery of a vast body of white pine timber in the high altitudes of the western slope of the Olympic mountain range. The timber is reputed to be the best in the world, standing according to careful estimates, as much as 10,000,000 feet to the square mile. Of this the white pine will average 6,000,000 feet. The stand of white pine is found above the 4000 feet mark. Trees of white pine measuring 5 feet thick and 150 feet high were common, and thousands of trees containing 10,000 feet of lumber were cruised. The news of this discovery is extremely welcome to the match manufacturers on the Pacific coast, for the white pine forests are being rapidly depleted of the available supply. The newly found great stand of timber is 200 miles from a railroad, and in the mountain fastnesses.

According to the opinion of Mr. Thornton, who presided at a recent conference of the foreman tailors of London, men's dress will soon undergo a great change and the present styles will give way to "more classic" garments. Knee breeches and fancy waistcoats will be introduced.

The French League of Pioneers in Aerial Navigation is being formed in France, with the primary object of giving assistance to inventors and experimenters in aeronautics.

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power

"The greatest need of this country is to have a better system of agriculture and to have the production of wheat increased. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are over. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the fact that the extensive railway building program in the west has been completed, and is now building a line from Chicago to the Pacific coast.

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat were harvested in 1909. Areas of 100,000 acres in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be planted to wheat in 1910. Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emption tracts of 80 acres, are to be had in the choicest districts. Schools, convenient climate, excellent soil, the very best lumber, cheap fuel, easy access to water, and reasonable prices, make this a most desirable place for settlement. Write for a descriptive literature, low railway rates, descriptive literature on application, and other information, to J. J. Hill, or to the following Canadian Gov't Agent:

FAMOUS PAINTINGS.

Three Are Presented to a New York School by Dublin Women.

Visitors to Young's art galleries in Kimball hall, New York, have noticed three beautiful paintings, two by Alfred Gray and the other by Gregor Gray. They are to be sold and the proceeds will be given to the Epiphany School for the Deaf at 3100 North Fortieth avenue. Miss Duffy, daughter of a Dublin physician, who inherited the paintings, has offered them to the school as a Christmas gift. Miss Duffy formerly lived in Chicago.

Alfred and Gregor Gray are members of the Royal Hibernian academy of Dublin. Alfred is probably the most distinguished painter of the Dublin school and makes a specialty of landscapes and cattle. Gregor Gray excels in the delineation of character of the Irish people. Many will remember the painting by Alfred Gray shown in the World's fair, "An Irish Harvest Field—Peasants Loading Corn," loaned by a wealthy New York art collector. James J. Hill has in his collection Gray's painting of Scotch cattle, which he values at $50,000.

DEVELOPMENT OF CENTRAL CANADA.

The Story of Big Yields of Grain Comes from Every Section.

When the man in the States was told that he could get 160 acres of land in Central Canada—comprising the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—that under cultivation would produce from 20 to 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, or 15 seeded to oats the yield would be 40 to 60 bushels, he was skeptical. The same story was told the man who wished to get nearer to existing lines of railway, and was only asked to pay $10 to $12 an acre. But many tried it, some one plan and some another. The man who accepted the 160 acres as a free gift, as a homestead, and was willing to put in the required residence duties of three years, has now a farm worth from fifteen to twenty dollars an acre. The man who chose to purchase, and did so, took up his residence just the same. He has land, that, in many cases, is worth twice the money he paid for it. Both have found that the story of splendid yields was verified. They have had crops exceeding that promised; they have seen oats that yielded 100 bushels to the acre, and have grown wheat that averaged 40 and as high as 50 bushels to the acre. Their wheat was not a 68 pounds to the bushel article, but 62 and 63 pounds. They have seen within the past year or two trunk lines of railway constructed through their district, and throwing out branch lines to the gates of their farm. They have seen schools established in their neighborhood and the government contributing largely to their expense. Churches have been erected, villages have been established, towns have sprung into existence, and cities are rapidly springing up, as if the magic hand of some unseen conjurer was at work. But it was not; it was the legitimate offering of the wealth of the field which made all these things come about, naturally, and easy. The prairie that three years ago was merely prairie, a patch of brown, just waiting for the ploughman, is to-day dotted with tilled farms and splendid homes. The line of elevators with their glistening metal fireproof sides and roofs, indicate the location of the town and the railroad. There is the glow of newness about it all, but the elevator, the splendid store buildings and the comfortable hostleries denote wealth—not imported wealth—beyond that of the strength of the man who fashioned and built them, but the wealth of the soil, which means that the newness will be followed by a steady growth. The writer recently was a passenger over the Grand Trunk Pacific, the latest factor in this great, marvelous field of development. The rapidity with which towns were being built up, the farmsteads occupied, was something even his experienced eye had not looked for. Everywhere along the line of this new continental line the distinguishing mark of progress. There was not a mile of the length of the road from Winnipeg to Edmonton and west that did not bear token of its ability to pay tribute to the revenue of the road. Mention is made of this line, not because it is the last in the field, but because it is one of the best built roads on the continent and traverses one of the best districts of an excellent country. It is well operated, and already has gone into active service as another means of making it possible to secure more speedily transit from the grain fields to the shipping centers. It had been the intention in this article to have spoken of some of the yields of grain that have made the farmers of Central Canada contented this year, but space will not permit, so that delightful talk will be taken up in another issue. In the meantime it would be well for the reader, if he is interested, to put himself in touch with some official of the Canadian government and get information that might be useful in making a selection for a home in Central Canada, and become one of those who will be instrumental in building up a great country to the north. In doing so, you will be assisting the United States. In a few years' time the United States will be at 'what importer Canada will supply the wheat and you will be one of the producers.

WARNED IN A DREAM.

Something from Utica for Students of Psychic Phenomena.

Considerable interest is being evidenced by the American Society for Psychic Research in the remarkable coincidental dream of Mrs. Dominic Cianci, a sister of Ercole Infusino of Utica, N. Y., in which Mrs. Cianci, who resides in Italy, claims to have had a premonition of the ravine tragedy on the night of September 12, 1907, when Theodore Rizzo, who died in the electric chair last Monday at Auburn prison, lured Theresa Procopio and Fanny and Ferdinando Infusino to a lonely spot and murdered the Procopio child and Ferdinando Infusino. Dr. Hyslop of New York, secretary of the American Society for Psychic Research, communicated with professional friends in Utica, asking what means could be taken to protect the life of the child and the mother. Dr. Hyslop said that his dream of the story corroborated was in the interest of science.

The two children were murdered by Rizzo on the night of September 12. Fifteen days later the mother of the slain children, received a letter from her sister in Italy, Mrs. Dominic Cianci, who related a dream that she had on the night of September 12 at about the same hour that the shooting is supposed to have taken place. In her letter Mrs. Cianci says that her brother, Thomas Infusino, who was killed in a sewer accident in West Utica on May 7, 1897, appeared to her in the dream and told her he must go to America at once, as the two children of their brother Ercole were in great trouble and must be rescued at once. The spirit of the dead brother kept saying, Mrs. Cianci declares, that the two children were out in the dark and cold and some one was seeking to do them harm. At the time Mrs. Cianci wrote this letter, she had not heard of the murders, for the letter was mailed in Italy the following day, September 13. She said that the dream worried her a great deal and she wanted him to let her know as soon as possible if anything serious had happened.

After Mr. Infusino received the letter little Fanny, the sole survivor of the tragedy, told her parents that on the night of September 12, while she was heroically keeping guard over her wounded brother, a small dog appeared in the clump of golden rod where she was sitting and playfully licked her hand, and also the hand of Ferdinando as he lay dying. Mr. Infusino is positive that his sister in Italy had not heard of the tragedy when she wrote the letter in which she describes her dream. The crime was not discovered until the morning of September 13 at about the time Mrs. Cianci wrote the letter, and therefore he declares that even a cable message would not have reached her in time to enable her to fake such a story, even if she had been disposed to do so.

MONKEY'S POST SENTINEL.

Fight Under a Leader and Roll Stones Down to Their Enemies.

Aesop's ape, it will be remembered, wept on passing through a human graveyard, overcome with sorrow for its dead ancestors, and that all monkeys are willing enough to be more like man than they are they show by their mimicry. An old authority tells that the easiest way to capture apes is for the hunter to pretend to shave himself, then to wash his face, fill the basin with a sort of bird lime, and let it set for the apes to themselves. If the Chinese story is to be believed, the imitative craze is even more fatal in another way, for if you shoot one monkey of a band with a poisoned arrow, the neighbor, jealous of so unusual a decoration, will snatch the arrow from it and stab itself, only to have it torn away by a third, until in succession the whole troop have committed suicide.

It is a life habit, as well as the language and many other monkeys, undoubtedly submit to the authority of recognized leaders. There is co-operation between them to the extent that when fighting in company one will go to the help of another which is hard pressed. In rocky ground they roll down stones upon their enemies, and when making a raid, as on an orchard which they believe to be guarded, the attack is conducted on an organized plan, the apes being posted and scouts thrown out, which gradually feel their way forward to make sure that the coast is clear, while the main body remains in concealment behind until the road is open.

LOFTY VINEYARDS.

Those of Cinque Terre, on Coast of Italy, on High Precipices.

The publisher of The American Wine Press, after a visit in Italy, writes from Florence:

"The steepest vineyards in all Europe, if not in all the world, are situated on the northwest coast of Italy. I have seen grape vines growing in many countries and in many queer places, but I have never seen vineyards like these, like those on the seacoast between Levante and Spezia.

"The vines in some places along the Rhine grow on very steep hillsides, but not to the extent of those in the Cinque Terre. You can now and then get a good glimpse of these vineyards while riding in the train from Genoa to Pisa, which follows the coast almost all the way. The trouble is that tunnels succeed each other in rapid succession, thus continually breaking off the view of the sea and of the rocky coast.

"After leaving Livorno, a small town situated on a semi-circular bay, and going through a long tunnel, you soon come to what are called the villages of the Cinque Terre. Each village is separated from another by steep cliffs, which are almost perpendicular. As such places can be reached only by ladders or ropes, the difficulty of working the vineyard and of gathering the crop of grapes can easily be imagined.

"Almost as striking are those places where the vines are trained upon wire across the gorges made by the streams and troubles to plant vineyards on the face of sheer cliffs."

Kills Brother by Accident.

Wilmer Iverson of Washington, Pa., aged 16, died as the result of wounds accidentally inflicted by a shotgun in the hands of an older brother, J. E. Iverson. The brother who was responsible for the boy's death immediately after the tragedy turned the gun on himself, but was prevented from doing himself injury by the prompt action of his companions. He has constantly been in bed and keeps continually calling for his dead brother.

A HAPPY SEQUEL.

Martin Maloney's Troubles Forgotten in the Joy of a New Grandson.

A son was born at Lakewood, N. J., recently, to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herbert Osborne, who were married for the second time on February 2 last, after Mrs. Osborne, who is a daughter of Martin Maloney, the Philadelphia Standard Oil magnate, had figured in two sensational elopements.

Miss Helen Maloney and Mr. Osborne were married first December 28, 1905, at Mamaroneck, N. Y., by a justice of the peace. Mrs. Osborne subsequently declared that she married young Osborne, at that time a student at Princeton, in order not to wed a man whom her family were trying to force on her.

Parents of both the bride and bridegroom knew nothing of the wedding until, in October, 1907, Miss Maloney eloped with Samuel Clarkson, a young Englishman, who had been staying for some weeks at the Maloney's country home at Spring Lake, N. J. It was not until several months later that Mr. Maloney found his daughter in Europe.

The question of the validity of the marriage of his daughter so perplexed Mr. Maloney that he went to Rome to ascertain what could be done about it by the Catholic church.

Later the question of her marriage to Osborne was brought before the supreme court of New York, where it was annulled by Justice Gerard, September 17, 1908.

At that time it was supposed that the young girl would marry Clarkson, but instead she decided on a remarriage to Osborne. Soon after the later ceremony took place Mr. Maloney placed young Osborne in charge of the Lakewood gas plant. The young couple went there last fall, taking a cottage near the Lakewood hotel.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

In spite of the blocked roads and bad weather about seventy-five young people enjoyed the dance at Braun's hall Wednesday evening. All report having had a fine time.

The meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church has been postponed to Jan. 13, on account of the bad roads. The meeting will be held at Mrs. Fred Miller's home.

The Ashford Mutual Fire Ins. company held their annual meeting at Braun's hall last Tuesday, when they elected officers for the ensuing year and transacted such other business as came before the meeting.

Annual Meeting of Campbellsport Mutual Fire Ins. Co.
The Campbellsport Mutual Fire Insurance company wrote over $2,870,000 insurance in 1909, this being the largest in the company's history, and gained over $400,000 insurance the past year, and is now carrying over $3,800,000 on its books. A good gain was also made in the surplus, and the company now has net assets of about $26,000. It is a purely mutual company writing only city and village property in Wisconsin, at about one half of old line rates. No assessment has ever been made by the company. The company was organized in 1895, and the following officers have served continuously, Ignatius Klotz, President; O. G. Hendricks, Vice-president; H. A. Wrucke, Secretary and John Paas, Treasurer.

Annual Meeting State Bank
The annual meeting of the stock holders of the First State Bank was held at the Directors' rooms, Wednesday, January 5, 1910 at 10 A. M. In spite of the severe and inclement weather the stock was well represented at the meeting, and the old board of directors and officers were unanimously re-elected, as follows: F. J. Barber, president; M. L. McCullough, vice-president; John Loeb, cashier; Wm. Knickel, A. J. Barber and the aforesaid officers, directors and B. H. Glass, assistant cashier. The last year's business has been a very satisfactory one to both the stock holders and directors since the re-organization from a National to a State Bank, and the increase of capital to $50,000 with a surplus and undivided profits of $14,000. The Bank has been able to pay the stock holders a semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent on January 1st, 1910. The deposits have increased about 50 per cent since the re-organization, and the loans in the same proportion. As soon as the weather will permit in the spring they will begin the erection of a Modern Bank Building, containing safety deposit vaults for the accommodation of their customers. Interest at the rate of 2-1/2 per cent is paid on time certificates of deposit, and 3-1/2 per cent on saving accounts without any limit to the amount. The institution, which is a credit to the village, is in a sound and flourishing condition, and merits the patronage it is receiving.

Paralysis of the Hind Part or Azoturia in Horses.
This is a disease which comes on suddenly and is due to an acid in the blood. It sometimes effects the front parts as well as the hind parts, and the animal may come out of the barn feeling fine, ambitious, willing to go, and often goes faster than usual, but before it has gone very far it begins to lose its speed, hags back, sweats profusely, breathes hard, and begins to knock over behind, gets lame in one or both hind limbs and in a short time is unable to go any further and often falls helpless on the road in a paralyzed condition.

The proper thing to do is to place him on a stone boat and haul him into the nearest barn, place him in a large, well bedded box stall or a barn floor where he can be turned over often until he is able to get up. Medicines should be given of a laxative nature and that will allay pain and counteract the acid condition of the blood. An injection of warm water should be given to unload the rectum of its faeces so that the animal can if possible urinate. If unable to do so the urine should be drawn. A stimulating liniment or a mustard plaster should be placed over the hips and the body should be kept quite warm. The animal should be given plenty of drinking water with the chill taken from it, a very little, if any, feed should be given before he gets up and he should be fed on bran mashes and a very little hay after he is up until a full recovery has been brought about.—By Dr. David Roberts, Waukesha, Wisconsin.

A Mail Order Creed
Twelve commandments make up the decalogue of the mail order house.

These commandments were not written on stone by Moses, but they are thoroughly understood, and frequently bumped into by anyone who deals with the catalogue mail order concerns.

Following are the twelve commandments which thoroughly indicate the business side of these concerns:

1. You shall sell your farm products for cash wherever you can, but not to us; we do not buy from you.
2. You shall believe our statements and buy all you need from us because we want to be good to you, although we are not acquainted with you.
3. You shall send the money in advance to give us a chance to get the goods from the factory with your money, and meanwhile you will have to wait patiently a few weeks because that is our business method.
4. You shall buy your church bells and interior church fixtures from us and forward the money in advance, for that is our business method.
5. You shall collect from the business men in your vicinity as much money as you can for the benefit of your churches. Although we get more money from you than they do, still it is against our rules to donate money for building country churches.
6. You shall buy your tools from us and be your own mechanic in order to drive the mechanic from your vicinity, for we wish it so.
7. You will induce your neighbor to buy everything from us, as we have room for more money.
8. You shall often look at the beautiful pictures in our catalogue so your wishes will increase and you will send in a big order, although you are not in immediate need of the goods, otherwise you might have some left to buy necessary goods of your local merchants.
9. You shall have the mechanics that repair the goods buy from us book the bill, so that you can send the money for his labor to us for new goods, otherwise he will not notice our influence.
10. You shall believe us in preference to your local merchants.
11. You shall in case of accident, sickness or need, apply to local dealers for aid and credit, as we do not know you.

Complied With the Law.
A certain well known Mobile lawyer, who was lame and had something of a reputation as a fighter, was at one time attorney in a suit that caused much ill feeling. He won the suit for his client, and the loser vowed vengeance. "In pursuance of that same," in the language of Truthful James, he one day went into the lawyer's office and subjected him to a tirade of abuse that would have caused a salt water captain to die from pure envy, such was his talent in vituperation.

The lawyer answered him nothing, to the surprise of two or three men who were present, but getting out of his chair, began to hobble backward. His enemy, thinking he was retreating, followed him up, with more abuse and threatening gestures. The lawyer's foot finally struck against the wall, when he suddenly straightened up and, saying "Gentlemen, I call on you to witness that on account of this wall I have retreated as far as possible" (the general law of homicide), drew out a Derringer and shot his opponent.

At the trial he was acquitted, his witnesses being the men present at the time of the killing, who testified to the lawyer's having retreated as far as possible.

With Interest.
"Yes, I know that certain passengers object to tipping on principle; but speaking for myself, I believe in it," remarked a ruddy faced old man in the corner of a third class smoker. "It is only right to reward courtesy, and I always make it a point of giving the guard of this train stipend when he comes to see if I'm all right, although I'm only a poor man."

The other passengers, not to be outdone, thereupon dived into their pockets, and when the guard popped his head inside the door a few minutes later he found himself overwhelmed with silver coins.

An hour passed, and the passengers got out one by one until the old man was left facing a spruce commercial traveler, who leaned toward him confidentially and asked him how he could afford to give the guard sixpence every time he took a journey.

"Oh, don't worry yourself about that," responded the old man. "I dare say I shall get it back with interest."

"How will you?"

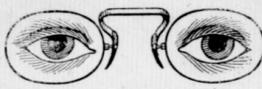

"The guard is a son of mine!"—LORD DON GLOBE.

Setting Him Right.
