A Cheese Box Factory

H. E. Cooley, formerly of Fredonia, where he conducted an extensive business in the cheese box line, has decided to open a like business in this city and will be ready to serve customers in a few weeks. Mr. Cooley and his family moved to this city about a month ago from the village of Fredonia or Waubecka as it is perhaps better known.

Mr. Cooley has arranged for temporary quarters and is now moving the building formerly occupied by the Barton Button Works to this city. He contemplates purchasing a piece of land owned by the Brewing Company and which adjoins the Enger-Kress Pocket Book Factory on the south. As soon as the weather permits he will erect on this property a model factory building having a floor space of 10,000 square feet. His plant will be equipped with machinery of the most modern design for the manufacture of round and square boxes of all sizes.

Mr. Cooley has been in this line of business for many years and made a success of it in every way, but found a change necessary in order to have better railroad facilities.—West Bend News.

Tries to Kill Self

Jac. Schuh, a bachelor about 50 years old, employed as hostler at Wollner's saloon, Newburg, attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a pocket knife last Friday. The wound was not deep enough to be very dangerous and after having it sewed up he was taken in tow by Sheriff Schoenbeck and Undersheriff Guth. Upon examination he was found to be insane and was taken to the State Hospital on Saturday. Schuh was an inmate of the State Hospital sixteen years ago.—West Bend News.

West Bank Wins Suit

A decision has been handed down by Judge Kirwin in circuit court in the case of the State Bank of West Bend vs. Cartwright-Mattson Glove company of Manitowish bankrupt, involving a mortgage and insurance on the old Wisconsin Chair company plant which burned five years ago. The court holds for the State bank, but awards the Glove company damages for rentals taxes and other claims, but not on insurance. The case will be appealed.

A Very Pleasing Entertainment Given at the Home of Miss Marx in the Presence of a Number of Invited Guests

Thursday evening many people ventured through the storm to the Marx home, where they enjoyed a most delightful recital given by Miss Priscilla Marx assisted by Miss Adela Gottsleben. It was very entertaining from beginning to end each number being most enjoyable.

CELEBRATES SILVER JULEE

Rev. Greve Highly Honored on His Twenty-fifth Anniversary as Pastor of the Ev. Luth. St. Lucas Church Here

Tuesday, January 11th, was a day which will never be forgotten by the Rev. F. Greve and his congregation. On this day, twenty-five years had passed since the Rev. Greve had been ordained as minister of the Gospel, and installed as pastor of the local Ev. Luth. St. Lucas congregation.

The congregation, in which the pastor is highly esteemed, and the Winnebago Conference of the Wisconsin Synode, jointly decided not to let this important day pass by unobserved. Without the knowledge of the pastor, preparations were made for a fitting observance of his twenty-fifth anniversary.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning the congregation, the Winnebago Conference, of which the Rev. Greve has for a long time been an energetic member, and other visiting pastors assembled in the church which had been tastefully decorated for the occasion. After all had been seated, the officers of the congregation escorted the pastor from the parsonage to the church, where he was given the place of honor before the altar. After an organ-prelude by the Rev. Ad. Hoyer, Princeton, the congregation sang a song of praise, "Bless the Lord, O My Soul."

The Rev. A. Schlei, a long time friend of Pastor Greve delivered the jubilee sermon. He chose as his text Job 2, 23. In his sermon he showed the congregation that they should rejoice in the Lord, because for the last twenty-five years, they have had a teacher of righteousness, and showed the Pastor that he should rejoice in the Lord, because for twenty-five years he had been privileged by God to be this teacher of righteousness. The speaker implored the congregation to show the sincerity of their joy by diligently hearing and learning more and more that lesson of righteousness which their Pastor, as a teacher, given them by God teaches them. He reminded the Pastor that he should show his joy by continuing to preach with unrelenting fervor his righteousness wrought by Christ.

REV. F. GREVE.

The second speaker was the Rev. Christian Dowdat, Oshkosh, president of the Conference. In well chosen words he expressed the congratulations and best wishes of the Conference, and in their name presented the esteemed brother with "Meusel's Biblical Encyclopedia" a valuable work in seven volumes.

In the name of the congregation Mr. Henry Stark presented the Pastor with a large number of silver dollars, which were heaped up on a beautiful silver tray bearing the initials of the members of the choir, the donors of the tray, and the name of their director, the Rev. Greve.

The Rev. Greve was very much moved by the warm addresses and by the many tokens of respect and appreciation and expressed to all participating his heartfelt thanks. After the choir under the leadership of the Rev. C. Gutekunst of New Fane, had rendered a beautiful selection the services were closed with a hymn by the congregation and with the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Schlei.

The entire congregation and visitors were invited to the school hall where an informal reception in honor of the pastor and wife was held. The ladies of the congregation had prepared a sumptuous dinner at which hundreds were served. During the festivities of the

DEATH OF REV. PETRI

After a Week's Illness Kohlsville Pastor Passes Away

Rev. Johannes Petri, Pastor of the Ev. Luth. Zion church of Kohlsville died last Monday morning, Jan. 10, 1910, after a week's illness with pneumonia aged 60 years.

Deceased was born in Oberhuesgen, Germany, in the year 1850. He immigrated to this country in 1869 and settled first in the town of Forest, Fond du Lac county, going to the town of Wayne in 1901, then he has had charge of two churches, one, the Zion Lutheran located two miles west of Kohlsville, and the other, the St. Peter's located in the northeastern part of Addison.

Rev. Petri was married to Miss Mary Lauersdorf in 1871. Nine children were born to this union of whom seven survive. They are: Gerhardt of Leeden, Walter of Watertown, Lydia (Mrs. Frank Bartelt) of Kohlsville, Dora of Milwaukee, Frieda, (Mrs. Wolf) of Wayne and Lena and Esther at home.

The funeral took place from the parsonage two miles west of Kohlsville, Thursday at 1 P. M. From there the body was taken to Watertown for burial on Friday.

afternoon the following pastors called upon by the Rev. Schlei, master of ceremonies, delivered addresses: J. G. Oehlert, Ad. Hoyer, Ed. Hoyer, H. Knuth, J. Zuberbier, Ad. Spiering. Dispatches of congratulations sent in by the Pastors, E. Benj. Schlucter, Ad. V. Rohr and T. Sauer were read. Songs by the conference quartet enlivened the festivities.

In regard to the life of the celebrating Pastor, following may be said: The Rev. F. Greve was born in Hansahlen bei Schnevedingen, Hannover, Germany, on the 24th of December, 1860. His early education was received in the "Volkshule" of Hansahlen. In the year 1877 he came to America and entered the Northwestern University at Watertown, Wis. Five years were spent at that institution. In 1882 he entered the Theological Seminary of the Ev. Luth. Synode of Wisconsin and other states which at that time was located in Milwaukee. After having finished his theological course he was on Jan. 11, 1885 ordained and installed as minister of the local St. Lucas congregation by the Rev. A. Graebner, D. D. In the same year he was married to Miss Ida Baedke of Milwaukee.

Rev. Greve is the first resident minister the Lutheran congregation here has had. Before his installation the congregation was served by the Rev. Hilpert, who at that time resided at Wayne. The 25 years have naturally brought many changes in the congregation, has grown for a membership of nearly one hundred families. During his time a parochial school has been maintained, taught by the minister. The school in addition to the pastoral duties, keeps the pastor occupied all of the time, but Rev. Greve is a man, who does not shirk his duties and who always has the welfare of his flock at heart. That he is also held in high esteem by all fellow citizens of Kewaskum was evidenced by the many messages of congratulations and tokens of regard brought him during the day.

The pastors who represented the Conference were the following: C. Dowdat, Oshkosh, president of the Conference; G. E. Bergemann, Fond du Lac, president of the Wisconsin Synode; A. Traehle, Neenah; W. Heidtke, Red Granite; Ad. Hoyer, Princeton; O. Hoyer, Winnebago; F. Motzkus, Campbellport; G. J. Oehlert, Weyauwega; G. Taxmann, Eldorado; C. Sauer, Oakfield; A. Schlei, Montello; J. Schulz, Van Dyne; J. Zuberbier, East Bloomfield; P. Th. Oehlert, North Fond du Lac, secretary of the Conference. Other pastors in attendance were E. Hoyer and wife of West Bend; H. Knuth, Milwaukee; Ad. Spiering, New London; C. Gutekunst, New Fane and F. E. Kessauke, Weyauwega.

The Winnebago Conference held their semi-annual meeting in connection with the jubilee and were guests of the members of the congregation. At their communion services Tuesday evening the Rev. Christian Dowdat delivered the confessional sermon, while the Rev. Greve officiated at the altar. Sessions were held Wednesday morning and afternoon.

FAMILY IS NEARLY ASPHIXIATED

Coal Gas From Furnace Nearly Wipes Out Entire Family

A week ago last Thursday the family of William Kinkel were nearly asphyxiated from coal gas coming from the furnace. Mr. Kinkel, retired at about eleven o'clock that evening and as was his custom filled the furnace with coal with the drafts closed. The family soon slumbered unaware of the existing gas. Early the following morning Mrs. Kinkel thought she smelled gas and arising to go to the closet in the room she was overcome by the poisonous fumes, fell unconscious to the floor. Mr. Kinkel who also was in a semi-dazed condition heard his wife fall over and hurriedly arising soon discovered the cause. Immediately he awoke the family and throwing the windows and doors open. Medical aid was administered to the family and all the following day the family were treated and were unable to be up and around. It was indeed very fortunate for the lady to awaken at the time she did, for only a short while would have meant death to Mr. Kinkel and his family. Mr. Kinkel is unable to understand why it is that so much gas should accumulate, for he had oftentimes before done the same thing of throwing on coal with all drafts closed.—Lomira Review.

Basket Ball Notes

Basketball seems to be the craze of the town.

Basketball to-night, Saturday, Dance after the game. Admission for game 25 and 15 cents. Dancing 25 cents extra.

There are now five basketball teams in the village. The High school boys, the high school Girls, City team and two city teams composed of Girls.

The city team, composed mostly of picked up players journeyed to West Bend last week Friday evening to play the city team of that place and were trounced to the tune of 12 to 52. The poor showing made by the locals is because of the lack of practice and not a regular team as yet being picked.

Last Sunday evening a team composed of Barton and West Bend basketball players, going by the name of Barton, came up on the 6:36 train to play a game with some of the local boys. Not aware that the visitors were coming as no game was arranged, it did not take long before a line up was secured, and a game played, the local team winning by a score of 18 to 22. The game although somewhat slow was very exciting and interesting.

CONGRESS IN SESSION.

Senate.

In the Senate on the 5th resolutions were introduced by Senators Elkins and Crawford, both looking toward an investigation of the high prices of living.

The Senate was deeply stirred on the 6th by the reading of a letter from Foster Pinchot to Senator Dooliver warmly defending L. R. Glavis and Mr. Price and Mr. Shaw, the minor officials connected with the Alaska coal lands cases, and upholding the criticisms of Secretary Hingston. Mr. Pinchot went so far as to intimate that President Taft himself had acted under a misapprehension. The President's message transmitting Attorney General Wickes' report regarding Mr. Ballinger was received and the report was referred to the committee on public lands. Senator Jones' resolution for investigation into this case was referred to the committee. The Senate adjourned until Monday.

The Senate was not in session on the 7th.

The Senate was not in session on the 8th.

The Senate on the 10th adopted unanimously the joint resolution providing for the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation, amended so as to let the House elect, instead of the speaker appoint, the members of the House committee, thus preventing a veto by the speaker. The bill relieving Assistant Treasurer Boldenweck of responsibility for the $175,000 Chicago stock-treasury theft was passed. President Taft's railroad and anti-trust message was read as a special complement.

That the committees of the Senate have not taken up the work of the session in earnest was made evident on the 11th when, after a sitting of fifty-five minutes, the calendar was exhausted, and it became necessary for the Senate to adjourn for the day.

House.

The House devoted the entire day on the 5th to the discussion of Representative Mann's bill providing for a reorganization of the government of the Panama canal zone, and finally passed it. The bill places the entire administration in the hands of the President and abolishes the present canal commission.

In the House on the 6th a resolution was adopted asking the revenue cutter service to show how much money had been spent in the recent search for John Jacob Astor's yacht Nourmahal. A resolution was introduced providing for a laboratory to study criminology. After declining to enter on a discussion of $25,212,718 for the maintenance of the army in 1911, and stated that the estimates had been pared to the bone. Mr. Bartholdi indicated he would offer an amendment providing for the restoration of the army canteen. Mr. Kustermann of Wisconsin spoke in opposition to ship subsidy legislation. Mr. Smith of California spoke in opposition to the government exercising control over water power sites in the west. Mr. Goulden of New York spoke in favor of deeper water ways. Mr. Henry of Texas took the Republicans severely to task for violating the party's pledges in failing to give the country "revision downward."

The House on the 7th received the President's message and referred it to the proper committee. The insurgents and Democrats voted down the Republicans in adopting a resolution to investigate the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, taking away the power of the speaker in appointing the members of the House, who will do the investigating.

In the general debate on the 8th on the army appropriation bill Representative Hull of Iowa, chairman of the committee on military affairs, explained that the bill carried appropriations of $85,212,718 for the maintenance of the army in 1911, and stated that the estimates had been pared to the bone. Mr. Bartholdi indicated he would offer an amendment providing for the restoration of the army canteen. Mr. Kustermann of Wisconsin spoke in opposition to ship subsidy legislation. Mr. Smith of California spoke in opposition to the government exercising control over water power sites in the west. Mr. Goulden of New York spoke in favor of deeper water ways. Mr. Henry of Texas took the Republicans severely to task for violating the party's pledges in failing to give the country "revision downward."

The House on the 10th almost concluded consideration of the army appropriation bill. Mr. Mann's amendment to cut the $1,300,000 appropriation for military guard encampments to $1,000,000 was defeated after a lively debate. Mr. Townsend introduced the administration bill amending the interstate commerce law. Mr. Starnes introduced a resolution recognizing Gen. Estrada as President of the "legitimate government" of Nicaragua.

After passing the army appropriation bill, carrying the sum of $85,200,000 for the maintenance of the army during the fiscal year of 1911, the House on the 11th proceeded to consideration of one of the so-called "white slave" bills. Opposition developed to that portion of the measure reported by the immigration committee which makes it a felony for any person to assist another to go from one state to another for the purpose of engaging in prostitution. It was contended by Representatives Bartlett of Georgia, Goebel of Ohio and Richardson of Alabama that such action would be an encroachment upon state's rights, as under the constitution each state had the sole power to regulate its own morals. The bill still was under consideration when the House at 4:30 p. m. adjourned.

Opposition developed to that portion of the measure reported by the immigration committee which makes it a felony for any person to assist another to go from one state to another for the purpose of engaging in prostitution. WHITE SLAVE

BILL PASSED IN THE HOUSE

LOWER BODY ADOPTS BENNET-SABBATH MEASURE BY VIVA VOCE.

LATEST MARKET REPORTS.

URGED BY PRESIDENT TAFT.

Representatives Refuse to Concur in Senate Amendments to Pinchot-Ballinger Resolution.

FIGHT WILL GO TO CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—

By a viva voce vote the House today passed the Bennett-Sabbath "white slave" bill. The bill was recommended by President Taft.

The House refused to concur in the Senate amendments to the so-called Pinchot-Ballinger resolution and decided to ask for a conference. The speaker named the following conferees: Representatives Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Smith of Iowa, and Fitzgerald of New York.

The Senate joint resolution is a compromise measure, the basis of which was the Jones-Humphrey resolution. A portion of the resolution reported from the House committee on rules was incorporated in the measure, and this included all of that part which provided for the compulsory attendance of witnesses and the punishment of those who refused to obey the orders of the investigation committee.

The resolution provides for the election of the House members by the House itself in accordance with the wish of that body expressed by a close vote. The speaker said that the measure is a mere formality, and indicates that the contest over the form of the resolution is near at hand.

To Issue Caucus Call.

Republicans will soon issue calls for a caucus to arrange programme of legislation for session. At this caucus it will be put up fair and square to insurgents in the shape of a binding resolution to support the House organization and Taft's administration. All who refuse to be bound will be called independents and they will not thereafter be recognized as Republicans. It is said the plan has the approval of President Taft.

TO MAKE COMPROMISE.

Amicable Settlement of Differences Between Eastern Railroads and Employes Will Be Reached.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—

Amicable settlement of the differences over the wage question between the eastern railroads and their employes is presaged in today's announcement that the railroad officials have agreed to meet the representatives of the trainmen the latter part of next week for a discussion of the demands.

The conference, it is stated, will not be a general one, but will be divided into groups. Each road will confer only with its own employes. It is considered probable that a compromise satisfactory to the trainmen will be reached. In any event a serious clash over the wage question between the eastern roads and their men is considered in well informed circles to be a remote contingency.

PLANS STUDENT COURT.

Conference Committee of Wisconsin University Proposes Establishment of Self-Governing Tribunal.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 12.—

The student conference committee of the University of Wisconsin has agreed to the establishment of a "student court" to have original jurisdiction in all matters of discipline except dishonesty in classrooms.

The court is to be composed of nine members, six seniors and three juniors, to be elected each May, the former for one year and the latter for two years.

The verdicts of this court are to be in the form of recommendations to the faculty discipline committee, which will also hear appeals from the court.

The University of California has such a court and President Van Hise is anxious to see the plan tried here.

BIG RIVER IS RISING.

Rain in Missouri Causes Mississippi to Assume Threatening Aspect at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 12.—

Rain in Missouri and northern points caused the Mississippi river to assume a threatening aspect. The weather bureau issued a warning to the river men to be prepared to protect their property. The Mississippi river is gorged with ice from Chester, Ill., sixty miles below St. Louis, to this city and the additional precipitation and melting snow will cause the river to rise. The Missouri river is gorged at Hermann, Mo., and many smaller gorges are reported north of St. Louis. If the big dam will result in breaks first no great damage will result from the gorges north coming down. The river gauge this morning stood at 21.9 feet, a rise of .7 feet in twenty-four hours.

KNOX PEACE PLAN

MEETING FAVOR

DIPLOMATS RECOGNIZE IMPORTANCE OF PROPOSITION FOR INTERNATIONAL COURT.

HAGUE TRIBUNAL CRITICISED.

Controversies Arising Either in Peace or War Would Be Settled Under America's Suggestions.

DECISIONS WOULD NOT BE FINAL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—

State department officials have received with much satisfaction during the past few days tidings leading them to believe that several of the principal powers of Europe are considering favorably Secretary Knox's proposal to the nations looking to the establishment of a permanent international court of arbitration, or court of peace.

In discussing the scope and jurisdiction of the proposed court, a state department official familiar with the plan explained that it was not the intention to supplant directly the international prize court established by the second Hague conference, nevertheless he made it clear that had that court been thoroughly satisfactory in operation, a new court would not have been suggested.

Present Court Criticised.

The present prize court is of limited jurisdiction and its very existence presupposes the existence of war; for it is only in time of war that neutral property can be captured and confiscated. The proposed court, it is urged, would endow the world with its first truly permanent international tribunal, sitting permanently and adequate to decide the controversies arising in the circumstances either of peace or war. Secretary Knox's proposal is to enlarge the scope and character of the prize court. He considers composition of the court satisfactory if not ideal and he proposes to invest the court with the jurisdiction and functions of a court of arbitral justice, thus securing the adoption of the court as a chamber of the prize court by a single negotiation.

Decisions Not Final.

Although the court would have no power to enforce decisions, experience is cited as showing that international arbitration awards have always been accepted by the parties and it is argued that a permanent court of arbitration would surely have the support of the public opinion of the world.

WILL RECLAIM MARSH.

Farmers Prepare to Drain Honey Creek Valley Low Places—Prof. Jones Outlines Plans.

TROY, Wis., Jan. 12.—

Steps were taken at a meeting of farmers in this village for the reclamation of 5000 acres of marsh land along Honey Creek.

The property owners heard Prof. Jones of the Wisconsin State University as to plans and probable cost of the undertaking. Prof. Jones assures them that the entire body of marsh land can be successfully drained at an expense not to exceed $7 per acre. The district to be drained is five miles in length from west to east and from one to two miles wide, from north to south.

The plan of Prof. Jones is to dig a ditch 20 feet wide and 3 feet deep down the center of the tract and to supplement it by lateral ditches from the highland on each side at proper intervals. It is estimated that the excavation can be done by means of steam dredges at a cost not to exceed 7 cents per acre.

Prof. Jones made a careful inspection of the proposed drainage district last summer and tested the character and depth of the soil. The marsh is one great field of peat from 5 to 20 feet in depth. He assures the property owners that after the land has been drained it can be plowed and a good crop of buckwheat can be raised on it the first year.

After that he would have it liberally treated with manure and seeded to timothy and rye. He says there is no reason why two or three tons of timothy hay cannot be raised to the acre and that in the course of a few years it will be possible to raise almost any kind of crop.

The farming lands adjacent to the big marsh are worth $100 or more per acre and the farmers figure that if they can reclaim the marsh land it will in time be equally valuable.

Up a few years ago there was a grist mill maintained just below the creek and the damming of the creek set the water back upon the marsh so that it was wet at all times and in some seasons could not even cut the hay upon it for that reason.

A few years ago the mill was burned down and was not rebuilt. The water power was abandoned and with the cutting of the dam the water has receded so that there is no impediment to the drainage project.

Honey creek is the outlet of Landerdale lake in the town of La Grange and flows almost directly east across the town of Troy and East Troy, discharging its waters into the White river and thence into the Fox river. The pioneer settlers established mills at various points along the stream where there was fall enough.

BLOWS WOLF FROM LAIR.

University Student Uses Dynamite to Procure Felt of His Quarry.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 12.—

Roy Rapp of Mazomanie, after a chase of four days over fields and hills, well earned his $20 bounty on the "Northwestern wolf" which he brought today for identification by the county clerk. Rapp started on January 3 with two companions, who gave up the chase after a day and a half. Rapp finally wounded the animal, but was compelled to use dynamite to get it out of a rocky crevice in which it had secreted itself.

A Dance Abandoned.

A COUNTRY WHOSE

SOIL SPELLS WHEAT

And Out of Whose Farms Thousands Are Growing Rich

What President Taft and Others Think About Canada

Another Fat Year for the Canadian West

Country; they know how to govern; they know how to work.

Another farmer, from Minnesota, who settled in Central Saskatchewan some years ago, has the following to say about the country:

"My wife and I have done well enough since we came from the States; we can live, anyway. We came in the spring of 1901, with the first carload of settlers' effects unloaded in these parts, and built the first shanty between Saskatoon and Lumsden. We brought with our car of settlers' effects the sum of $1,800 in cash, today we are worth $40,000. We 'prowled up' one of the finest farms in Western Canada, and bought 320 acres at $3 per acre. We took good crops off the land for four years, at the end of which we had $8,000 worth of improvements in the way of buildings, etc., and had planted three acres of trees. Two years ago we got such a good offer that we sold our land at $45 per acre. From the above you will see that we have not done badly since our arrival."

Prof. Thomas Shaw, of St. Paul, Minnesota, with a number of other well known editors of American farm journals, toured Western Canada recently, and in an interview at Winnipeg said, in part:

"With regard to the settlement of the West I should say that it is only well begun. I have estimated that in Manitoba one-tenth of the land had been broken, in Saskatchewan one-third, and in Alberta, one-hundred and seventy-fifth. I am satisfied that in all three provinces grain can be grown successfully up to the sixtieth parallel, and in the years to come your vacant lands will be taken at a rate of which you have at present no conception. We have enough people in the United States alone, who want homes, to take up this land.

What you must do in Western Canada is to raise more live stock. When you are doing what you ought to do in this regard the land which is now selling for $20 an acre will be worth from $50 to $100 per acre. It is as good land as that which is selling for more than $100 per acre in the corn belt.

I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. You can get your food cheaper and the climate is better for the purpose. We have a better market, but your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Winter wheat can be grown in one-half of the country through which I have passed, and alfalfa and one of the varieties of clover in three-fourths of it. The farmers do not believe this, but it is true."

Keeping pace with wheat production, the growth of railways has been quite as wonderful, and the whole country, from Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains, will soon be a network of trunk and branch lines. Three great transcontinental lines are pushing construction in every direction, and at each siding the grain elevator is to be found. Manitoba being the first settled province, has now an elevator capacity of upwards of 25,000,000 bushels; Saskatchewan, 20,000,000, and Alberta about 7,000,000, while the capacity of elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur on the Great Lakes, is upwards of 20,000,000 more.

Within the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta there are four and oatmeal mills with a combined capacity of 25,000 barrels per day, and situated along some famous water powers in New Ontario, there are larger mills than will be found anywhere in the prairie provinces.

Last year the wheat crop totalled over 100,000,000 bushels. This year the crop will yield 30,000,000 more. A recent summary shows that on the 1st of January, 1909, the surveyed lands of the three western provinces totalled 134,000,000 acres, of which about 32,000,000 have been given as subsidies to railways, 11,000,000 disposed of in other ways, and 35,000,000 given by the Canadian government as free homesteads, being 236,000 homesteads of 160 acres each. Of this enormous territory, there is probably under crop at the present time less than 11,000,000 acres; what the results will be when wide awake settlers have taken advantage of Canada's offer and are cultivating the fertile prairie lands one can scarcely imagine.

CHAPTER I.

It was a warm, dusky night in June. The crescent moon was lightly veiled in clouds, the Thames shimmered faintly under the starless sky, and the outlines of the great trees in the pleasure-gardens loomed black and vague in the semi-darkness. The quaint, fantastic music of the band rose above the hum of voices that proceeded from the numerous groups of indistinctly-seen people gathered round little marble-topped tables, drinking coffee or wandering by twos and threes at remoter distances.

The music and the darkness made idyllic a scene which in the daytime was hard and unpoetic enough. The Thames does not look particularly beautiful as it flows past Marlborough gardens, and the people who assemble there are, for the most part, absorbed in the most petty cares and despicable ambitions.

Two men sat almost side by side, but each alone and almost unaware of the other's presence. Each viewed his surroundings from an opposite standpoint. To Aubrey Montresor, a young and briefless barrister, it was the surface glamor that appealed. To him this night was a treat afforded him by the hospitality of a more fortunate friend, a young man who had barely attained his majority.

The other spectator was an older man, and one of a totally different caliber. He would have laughed albeit with a somewhat envious laugh, if any one had told him that there now existed a man of five-and-twenty who could look upon a visit to these gardens or any other gardens as a treat. He had wealth which placed all the pleasures of life at his disposal, and he pined for the one thing which his wealth could not procure him.

A man some twenty yards distant struck a match. Stooping forward a little to shelter the flames while he lighted his cigarette from it, the glare lit up the face of a woman who sat beside him, and for an instant the woman's face, turned in the direction of the two solitary men, stood out clear and striking against the surrounding blackness. In that instant Alick Langrishe recognized it as the face he desired most of all things on earth to see.

Upon Aubrey Montresor also the face flashed with startling effect. He had never seen it before, but as it stood out for a moment clear and fair against the soft, featureless darkness, it impressed itself on him as the most beautiful he had ever seen. He could not have described a single feature, he did not know what was the color of eyes or hair, but he was convinced that whenever or wherever he should see that beautiful face again he would know it. The thought flashed through his mind even as the face was swallowed up again in darkness, and almost simultaneously a faint gasp close at hand fell on his ear, and a man's voice murmured in indistinguishable accents of mingled bewilderment and relief—

"Denzilia!"

For a moment Aubrey sat still. His heart was, to his own surprise, beating quickly as if something of strange import had happened to him. And yet he did not delude himself with the idea that he had ever seen that lovely face before, or that he should ever see it again. Although he was five-and-twenty—an emotional period of life—he was not conscious of any cause for emotion. It must, he told himself, have been something in the voice of the man near him that had stirred him.

"Denzilia! What a strange name!"

Why should Montresor have taken it for granted that it had been brought to his neighbor's lips by the sight of that suddenly illuminated face? He did not himself know. The fact remained that he did take it for granted, and he was quite prepared for the speaker's next move, which was to rise suddenly as if to go and accost the lady. But even as he stood up he was suddenly addressed by two ladies who, with their attendant cavalier, were looking for a table at which to drink their coffee.

"Mr. Langrishe!" cried a girl's fresh voice. "Is this the way you keep your promise of meeting us here?"

"Is it the way you keep your promise of looking out for me?" returned Langrishe coolly. "I must leave you now, for I see an acquaintance over there with whom it is positively necessary that I should speak at once."

Montresor noted after him into the gloom in the endeavor to watch his movements when he reached the group out of which the wonderful face had for a moment flashed, but he had disappeared into the dusk, and could not be distinguished from any other figure. Montresor would have liked to rise also and compel the owner of the face to reveal herself, but he had no desire to come into contact with the other man, whom he already vaguely and unreasonably felt to be a rival and was beginning to dislike accordingly. Moreover, he faintly had himself no previous acquaintance with the lady to justify him in thrusting himself upon her. So he sat still.

"Denzilia!" It was a curious name! One he had never heard before. And yet it suddenly seemed to him that he had heard it before. When? Where? He racked his brains in vain for answer.

Presently his young friend joined him, and, flinging himself in a chair beside him, exclaimed in pleasant boyish tones: "Awfully sorry, old chap, to have left you alone so long, but I knew you wouldn't mind."

His companion made no pretence of listening to his talk. He kept his eyes fixed on the little group of three to which Denzilia belonged until, in ten minutes or so, they rose and went away.

The other man had apparently not joined them after all. Montresor fell to wondering what had become of him. He did not return to the friends who had seated themselves at his vacated table. Montresor could hear them indulging in some speculations as to the reason for his conduct and in some animadversions on its inconvincibility. When they had finished their coffee they also moved away.

Kenneth Mathieson, becoming tired at last of talking to unheeding ears, suggested that it was getting late, and that as there was hardly a soul in the gardens either of them knew they might as well be thinking of returning to town.

Montresor acquiesced, and as they made their way to the house kept a sharp look-out with eyes and ears for a sight of Denzilia; but there was no sign of her, which, as he had nothing to go by except the glimpse of a face momentarily seen by the flare of a match, was not very surprising.

"Denzilia!" The name, even more than the face, haunted Aubrey as he drove home with his friend.

"The band has taken away your wits," remarked Kenneth Mathieson as he bade him "Good-bye" at the door of his chambers. "If you have recovered tomorrow will you come and dine with the mater and Agnes?"

Montresor accepted the invitation.

"And you," he added—"you are off really to Norway tomorrow, in spite of the attractions of the season?"

"In spite of them all!" laughed the boy. "Good-bye!"

Montresor slowly mounted the stairs to his modest rooms on the topmost story. Here he was supposed to study the law while he waited for briefs. But, to say the truth, there were few subjects he studied less than the law. He had the misfortune to possess a private income just sufficient to keep him in food, lodging, clean linen, and tobacco. Yet he was a steady young man who would work well when the work was to his liking, but he was not fitted for the profession, an obstinate and short-sighted father had forced him into it.

"Denzilia!" There was the name starting at him in the evening paper as it had done from every sheet of newspaper for the last six months, and which, in common with the rest of the world, he had long since ceased to notice.

The mysterious disappearance of Miss Denzilia Lavenham, the great New York heiress, had been six months ago a nine days' wonder; but the utmost efforts of the English and American detectives failed to find her, and the interest of English society in Denzilia dwindled away to nothing, though the police continued to look for her, and no doubt in New York people continued to talk about her.

Aubrey Montresor read with renewed interest the advertisement which had appeared for months, but had not hitherto interested him—

FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS REWARD.

"The above reward will be given to any person who brings verifiable information as to the whereabouts of Denzilia Lavenham, who arrived in London on the 20th of November, 1890, and has never been seen or heard of since. Miss Lavenham is about 5 feet 7 inches in height, of slender build, with blue-gray eyes, golden brown hair dressed in curls on the forehead, straight nose, fair complexion, and well-shaped mouth. She was wearing the day she was last seen a Lincoln-green cloth dress and jacket of the same color and material trimmed with sable fur, a green felt hat with a sable tassel and a gold watch with the initials 'D. L.' worked in pearls and turquoises on the back, and one plain gold bangle. It is conjectured that she had, concealed on her person, diamonds and other jewels to the value of thirty thousand pounds."

Then followed a detailed description of the ornaments, and the advertisement wound up with, "All communications to be addressed to Messrs. Futree and Fletcher, Charing Cross, or Denzil Caterhouse, Esq., Graham street, S. W."

Aubrey laid the paper down and began to search his memory for the nearest forgotten details of the story. But by bit they returned to him.

Denzilia Lavenham was an American heiress of almost fabulous wealth and great beauty. Owing to some flaw in her father's will she was absolutely independent, even of trustees, from her twenty-first birthday. She had no relations in America, but it was understood that she had an uncle on her mother's side in England. Up to the time of her attaining her majority she had lived with a lady appointed by her two guardians, but she had no sooner reached her twenty-first birthday than she bade farewell to guardians and chaperon alike, with the intimation that she contemplated an immediate trip to Europe, and that she considered herself quite capable of taking care of herself as a young man would be in similar circumstances.

She condescended to take a maid with her on her travels, because she could not do her own hair, but the idea of chaperon or companion she never scouted. Just before leaving New York she made her will, leaving the whole of her fortune and property of every description to her English uncle, Denzil Caterhouse. She took all her jewels from the bank, but no one knew how she carried them, or whether indeed she had taken them across the sea with her at all. It was assumed that she had done so, as she had been heard to boast that she meant to show the English duchesses what diamonds were.

She had written to engage rooms at a private hotel in Albermarle street, but she never turned up there. Instead of her appearing her maid, distracted with the extraordinary intelligence that her mistress was lost.

Miss Lavenham and her maid, after arriving at the London terminus from Southampton, had sent the luggage on to the hotel in the railway omnibus ordered for the purpose, and had then taken a hansom, and the young lady had desired the driver to take her first to a hairdresser's. She had broken one of the tortoiseshell combs belonging to her traveling bag and wished to provide herself with another at once.

She had sprung out of the cab, entered the shop, and had never been seen by the maid, Marsham, again.

The shop assistants stated that a lady, answering to her description, had come in and had bought a tortoiseshell comb; but she had not been five minutes in choosing it, and had gone out again at once, carrying the comb in her hand.

This was the last that had ever been heard of Denzilia Lavenham, and with her had disappeared all trace of her jewels. Marsham said that it had always been her mistress' custom to take charge of these herself.

This was all that could be learnt from

Marsham. Therefore after due search and inquiry, during which nothing turned up to invalidate her story, she was liberated, and soon found a place with an American lady, who took her back to her native land.

The only persons who appeared to be more than theoretically interested in Denzilia Lavenham's disappearance were her quondam guardians. They, as soon as they heard of the catastrophe, took such steps as appeared to them advisable for her discovery.

They began by putting advertisements into the English and American newspapers for Denzil Caterhouse. This gentleman made a leisurely appearance in answer to the advertisement. He arrived from abroad, and explained that his health was such that he could not afford to agitate himself by much study of the newspapers, or even to live in those places on the Continent where his fellow countrymen congregated in such numbers as to bring about a regular supply of English daily papers.

He at once offered five thousand pounds reward for information concerning her, and bade the lawyers spare no expense in their investigations; but, beyond a desire to do his duty, he did not seem to take much interest in the matter one way or the other.

The New York papers supplied details in profusion concerning Miss Lavenham's past life, her habits, her character, and her appearance, but the whole matter remained a mystery. One theory, among the many advanced, was that Denzilia had been murdered by her uncle in collusion with the maid; another, that she had made a marriage she was ashamed of, and was purposely hiding herself.

This last idea occurred to Montresor when he had gleaned all the intelligence from old newspapers that he could.

After some cogitation over ways and means he decided that the first step to take was to call on Denzil Caterhouse, who was still in London, ostensibly looking for his niece, though it did not appear that he took much active part in the search.

CHAPTER II.

Aubrey Montresor was not the only man in London who was looking for Denzilia Lavenham with a personal interest that was wholly independent of any thought of the five thousand pounds reward.

Upon the morning after the night at Marlborough a tall, thin man of somewhere between 30 and 40 years of age was standing before the fireplace of a well-furnished lodging house sitting room, looking, with an air of dissatisfaction, at the numerous cards of invitation stuck in the frame of the mirror. This gentleman was Alick Langrishe, American millionaire and unsuccessful suitor of the missing heiress, Denzilia Lavenham. He took down one of the invitations, a note in the first person, signed in a graceful feminine hand, "Adela Mathieson," requesting him to come and dine in a friendly way with the writer and her daughter that evening.

"Hang it all!" he muttered. "Why did I accept? I am not going to marry Miss Isabel, and Mrs. Mathieson, sweet woman as she is, would be, in my present mood—Denzilia! Was it Denzilia? Or did my eyes deceive me? What is she doing in the masquerade?"

He stood by the mirror in the frame of the mirror and took several impatient turns up and down the room. "Denzilia, Denzilia, you need not have run away from me!" He broke into a scornful laugh. "What a fool I am! As if Denzilia would take the trouble to run away from me!"

He sat down, and, with his elbow on the knee crossed over the other and his chin in his hand, he fell to thinking. For the last six months he had been privately seeking Denzilia Lavenham through the length and breadth of England, though he had never outwardly betrayed the least interest in her fate.

The result of his meditations was a resolution precisely similar to that taken by Aubrey Montresor. He determined to go that afternoon and call on Denzil Caterhouse. He had called there once before, and offered Mr. Caterhouse his services in the search for Miss Lavenham, but on that occasion Mr. Caterhouse had not been cordial. He seemingly scented an unwelcome suitor for his niece's hand, and though he expressed conventional thanks, he let it be clearly seen that he preferred to trust to the efforts of the professional detectives. However, since Langrishe had seen, or thought he had seen, Denzilia it would certainly be proper to go and tell her uncle so. Accordingly when he had lunched he left his club and directed his steps to the little street of small, shabby houses where Mr. Caterhouse dwelt.

THE HOLIDAY HAUL.

New York Mendicants Reap a Harvest During Holiday Week.

Eight thousand two hundred known beggars, most of them fairly able-bodied, were engaged last week in their favorite outdoor sport—"plinking the hooligan"—in New York city alone. The hooligan is the charitably inclined man or woman, who, filled with Christmas spirit and other forms of Tom and Jerry, will toss a quarter to every beggar on the streets. "Plinking" is the art of extracting the quarters. According to the report of James Forbes, secretary of the National Association for the Prevention of Mendicancy, the beggars' tribe probably gathered in $200,000 on the day before Christmas. "The 8000 odd beggars took in from $25 to $30 each on that day. That runs into some money—say $200,000 in Manhattan alone for one day's taking. And if Mr. Forbes' figures are right, that is just a drop in the bucket in the mendicant's year. A most conservative estimate, based on known averages for hard-working beggars, and allowing 300 working days to the year, gives the total cost of mendicancy, just in petty cash in New York city alone, at not less than $800,000 per day, or $11,000,000 per year. And the chances are that this understates the facts, for Mr. Forbes, in making this estimate, tried to stay within the most conservative limits.—New York American.

Uncle Sam a Logger.

Logging operations are to be conducted in upper Michigan by Uncle Sam this winter. While not extensive, they will accomplish an important mission. The lighthouse reserve, four miles east of Grand Marais, in Alger county, will be the scene of this activity on the part of the government. The tract consists of 800 acres and contains somewhat more than 3,000,000 feet of virgin white pine of the finest quality.

GERMAN POTASH LAW IS CALLED OBJECTIONABLE

UNITED STATES INFORMS KAISER'S FOREIGN OFFICE IT WOULD BE DISCRIMINATORY.

NOW BEFORE THE REICHSTAG.

American Interests Would Suffer In Interference from Text of Note from Washington.

NOTIFICATION MADE IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—The United States government today informed the German foreign office that it would regard the adoption by the Reichstag of the proposed potash law as a discrimination against American interests.

It is understood the American position is that the adoption of the measure would contribute such a discrimination against the United States as is described in section 2 of the Payne tariff bill.

Would Create Trust.

The potash bill recently laid before the federal council by the Prussian government is designed to create a trust of all the potash mines of the country under the auspices of the imperial government. In Berlin financial circles the proposed law is favored as a measure for protecting the national resources.

The Prussian government owns five potash mines and a network of canals. Herr Paxmann, is chairman of the German potash syndicate, which up to the present time has controlled the potash business of the world inasmuch as it has a monopoly of these mines. Last July the syndicate was temporarily dissolved and before it was reorganized individual members of the syndicate had contracted heavily with American fertilizer companies. The American market amounts to 60 per cent. of the export trade and is valued at $7,000,000 a year.

Retaliation Is Expected.

The bill presented to the federal council provides that the output of potash shall be sold through the joint selling concerns to which the potash miners belong at inland prices subject to the approval of the federal council. Existing contracts with Americans would be taken over by the syndicate provided they are not for longer periods than five years. According to section 2 of the Payne tariff act if it should be shown that Germany was discriminating against the United States, it would be obligatory upon the President to penalize all German imports by the imposition of 25 per cent. duty in addition to what would be collected ordinarily upon them.

"MAKING TARIFF BILL LIKE POLITE THEFT."

So Declares H. A. Jastro, Retiring President of National Live Stock Association.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 11.—The present system of making a tariff bill is a game of polite theft," declared H. A. Jastro, retiring president of the National Live Stock association, in his annual address before that body today.

"The representatives of one interest assure the representatives of other interests that if you will let us have what we want in the way of duties, we will treat you likewise. The only science of method involved is to get all they want."

The widespread dissatisfaction with the farcical revision of the tariff last summer and the well grounded and growing belief on the part of the consuming public that the favors of the protective system were unequally distributed and were in many instances fostering giant monopolies, has, I believe, instilled new life into the proposition to have our tariff laws and duties investigated by a non-partisan commission.

"The American people are looking to the tariff as one of the patent causes of the increased cost of living. They do not believe that a great many of the necessities of life need a protection of from 50 to 200 per cent. and before long they will insist upon a thorough re-adjustment upon a comprehensive and wise plan with a view to bettering the interests of the consumer as well as the manufacturer."

WALTZES WITH DEAD BODY IN HIS ARMS.

Ohio Negro, Crazed After Wife's Death, Dances Down Street with Woman's Corpse.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 11.—The gruesome sight of a negro singing and waltzing down the street with a corpse of a colored woman in his arms, startled Patrolmen McCorkill and Reynolds early today. The body later proved to be that of the negro's wife.

The negro was taken to the police station, where he registered as Thomas Harvey. He was held for safe keeping. It was learned that Harvey, grief-stricken over his wife's death, had left the house in the afternoon and did not return until midnight, when the undertakers were in the house preparing the body for burial.

According to the police, Harvey acted like a wild man. Grabbing a piece of wood from the kitchen he drove every one from the house. Then he placed a cigarette in the dead woman's mouth, and, taking the body in his arms, started out of the house. He put the corpse in the front doorway while he returned to the house and prepared a bottle of whisky. He tried to force some of the liquor down the dead woman's throat, and failing to do this, again picked up the body and started dancing down the street with it.

MAY BE DEPORTED.

Fletcher W. Sneed May Be Declared an Undesirable by Canada.

Canadian immigration officials are taking cognizance of Fletcher W. Sneed's presence in Canada and are making an investigation. One official stated there was a likelihood of Sneed being ordered out of the country in the near future as an undesirable immigrant. This official said: "Although Sneed has been a resident of this country for six months, it makes no difference in the matter of deportation. If a was questioned when he entered the country he gave an assumed name and did not tell the truth about his intentions, so he is subject to deportation." Sneed kept strict silence when asked numerous questions concerning his dead wife and the relatives who are charged with murdering her.

J. F. Fitzgerald Chosen Mayor of Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 12.—Boston, in the first partyless election held under the new charter, elected former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, a Democrat, to again fill the mayor's chair, this time for a four-year term, giving him 49,968 votes and a plurality of 1223 over his nearest opponent, James J. Storrow, banker, former president of the Chamber of Commerce and former chairman of the school board, who received 45,174. The most remarkable feature of the election to many was the small vote of 1783 given to the present mayor, George A. Hibbard, who received 38,000 votes two years ago, being elected on a "reform" ticket over Fitzgerald. The fourth mayoralty aspirant, Nathaniel H. Taylor, found only 629 supporters.

The campaign, noteworthy in many ways, was easily Boston's greatest and most costly. A record total vote of 95,125, more than 84 per cent. of the total registration, was cast.

Fitzgerald won his victory in spite of the fact that not one of the daily newspapers of the city advocated his election. He based his campaign on a plea for vindication, his previous term in office having been conspicuous for the exposure by the finance commission of graft among number of his subordinates in the city hall.

Like Storrow he is a Democrat in national politics and has also been a Democrat heretofore in local politics. Under the provisions of the new charter the ballots bore no party designations, but only the candidates' names and street addresses.

MADRIZ FORCES LOSE TO REBELS

GOVERNMENT SOLDIERS ARE DEFEATED AT ACOYAPA.

NO DETAILS OF BATTLE OBTAINABLE AT THIS TIME.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, Jan. 12.—Rumors reached here today of a battle at Acoyapa in which the government forces were defeated by the insurgents. No details of the fighting are obtainable.

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, Jan. 12.—Gen. Chamorro telegraphs that a decisive battle will be fought at Acoyapa. His message now made public was sent on Monday last. At that time 3000 provisionals with twenty cannon and five rapid fire guns had been concentrated and were moving on the government forces entrenched at Acoyapa.

HEIRESS WILL AID WAITER IN COURT.

Roberta De Janon Still Insists That She Is to Blame for Elopement with Cohen.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 12.—The departure of Roberta De Janon, the Philadelphia heiress, and Frederick Cohen, the waiter, with whom she eloped, has been postponed until tomorrow, according to information given out by Detective Sergt. A. J. Emanuel and James Scanlan of Philadelphia. It had been the intention of the detectives to leave here today, but they said that telegrams from Philadelphia had caused delay.

Desire of Miss De Janon's relatives to avoid a sensational reception of the elopers at Philadelphia is believed to be the reason for the delay. Sergt. Emanuel said: "Mr. Buist, Miss De Janon's grandfather, is bitter toward Cohen. The grandfather feels that Cohen is responsible for the girl's running away. Mr. Buist has said he will spare no effort in prosecuting Cohen."

"Cohen will probably be prosecuted in a charge of abduction. He has waived extradition, and there is nothing to hinder us from taking him back."

The young heiress still insisted that she would defend Cohen if she should be called upon to testify. She also said that it was her intention to ask her grandfather to aid Cohen financially, which request she asserted would no doubt be granted.

"I do not want Frederick to suffer for this," she said, "as it was all my fault. I told him I would kill myself if he would not run away with me, so what was he to do. I think after I explain everything to grandpa that he will understand Frederick's position, and will give me enough money to help fight for his freedom."

FOND DU LAC NEWS.

RUN AWAY FROM FIRE.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Jan. 8.—[Special.]—The residence of W. A. Williams, 434 Juneau street, narrowly escaped destruction by fire late Friday afternoon when a woman telephoned the department that the fire was on Gillette street, causing all the apparatus to run to that section. In a short time after the companies had returned to their homes, it was discovered that the fire was at the Williams' home, ten blocks from the first place. The loss is $500. Chief Doll says that he intends to have alarms installed in all public school buildings.

EDUCATORS TO MEET.

The first fact sought is, the fundamental principles that should determine the character of the courses of study. The committee is working independent of the state university or state superintendent of schools.

At present there are many persons fishing through the ice at this end of the lake.

PRISONER HAS POISON.

Walter Duer, who is confined in jail on the charge of wife desertion, is suffering from a severe case of blood poisoning in one of his hands. It may be necessary to amputate the member.

THROW SNOW ON FIRE.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Jan. 10.—[Special.]—Because the nearest hydrant was several thousand feet away, the fire department had to use snow to extinguish a fire that destroyed the residence of Bruno Berghelder on Military street, late Saturday night. The fire was caused by an overloaded stovepipe and the loss will reach $1800, partly covered by insurance. Owing to the distance of the fire from the city, the blaze had gotten beyond control before the department arrived. Numerous firemen sustained frost-bitten noses and ears as they shoveled snow on the flames. Chief Doll said that the fire was the first large one he had handled thus far during his incumbency and was well pleased with the work of the department.

SHIRT COMPANY ELECTS.

At the annual meeting of the Fond du Lac Shirt company held Saturday afternoon officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. A. Meiklejohn; vice president, J. E. Schultz; secretary and treasurer, W. W. Collins. The officers will also comprise the board of directors. The past year has been one of the most successful in the history of the concern and the plant is at present taxed to its capacity by the constantly increasing orders.

SKATER BREAKS LEG.

Frank Kindess, residing on Home street, sustained a fracture of his right leg Sunday afternoon while skating near the Scott street bridge. His skates caught in a crack and he fell.

PIONEER IS NO MORE.

ARRESTS HER STEPSON.

Alleging that her stepson, Fred M. Ever, having slandered her, Mrs. Ever has had him arrested. The case will be heard January 25. Mrs. Ever claims that the accusations were made for the purpose of extorting money.

M. FITZSIMMONS INJURED.

M. Fitzsimmons, the pioneer shoe dealer of the city, sustained a dislocation of his left shoulder by falling on an icy sidewalk at Fourth and Main streets, while he was returning home from church. He is over 90 years of age and on that account his injury is a serious one.

HEN MAKES RECORD.

A white Wyandotte hen owned by C. G. Deland, Western avenue, enjoys the distinction of having hatched the first brood of chickens in 1910. The fowl is now the proud parent of eleven little chickens which are thriving in spite of the cold weather. Mr. De Land is thinking of naming the chickens according to the months in the year, beginning by calling the mother January.

BUTTERMAKERS TO MEET.

Plans have been arranged for the ninth annual convention of the Wisconsin Buttermakers' association to be held here on February 1, 2 and 3. The headquarters of the delegates will be at the Palmer house and the convention proper will be held in the armory. On the opening day Mayor E. V. Clark will deliver the address of welcome and the response will be made by F. W. Greil, Johnson Creek. Reports of officers will conclude the session. The election of officers will take place on the morning of the second day and in the afternoon addresses will be delivered. The closing day will be devoted to the reading of addresses and in the evening a banquet will be held.

Starting a Rubber Plant.

Rubber plants are usually started by a method known as mossing. A cut is made in a young branch and a wedge put in it to keep the surfaces apart. A bunch of sphagnum moss is then fastened around the stem over the cut, the moss being kept wet. As soon as the young roots appear on the outside of the moss the young branch is cut off and potted up. Young elastics, the rubber plant of our houses, must produce seed in its home, tropical Asia, but it does not attain a size sufficient under cultivation in greenhouses to do so often.—St. Nicholas.

In preparation for rapid adding and spelling contests to be held with some of the other schools in the township, the local school are having preliminary exercises every Friday afternoon after recess. These preliminary exercises are conducted as follows: Each week two leaders are chosen who alternately choose until the school is equally divided into two sides. Words selected from the reading spelling and other classes are then given in the usual way until someone has spelled down the school. The same sides are retained for the adding match. For this each pupil takes a sheet of paper and pencil. The teacher then puts an example on the black board and the pupils proceed to add as quickly as possible. The moment the example is finished by a pupil he places his paper on the teacher's desk. After all have finished the problem, they add in chorus and the teacher places the correct answer under each column as it is added. The first is marked 10, the second 9 etc to 0. The following are the results of last week's contest: Spelling, Edgar Romaine, 1st place; Adding, Edgar Romaine 23, Eva Romaine 10, Louis Reed 9, Alex Rinzel 13, Emma Kriewalt 3, total 68; Goldie Romaine 7, Tillie Jandre 12, Verna Romaine 16, Leo Uelmen 14, Oscar Stern 21, Corral Romaine 5, Percy Mc Gority 8, total 83. On account of the drifted roads the mail carrier from Campbellsport was unable to reach this burg all last week. It also was 14 below zero Friday morning, and on account of the extreme cold weather the shaft of the feed mill was frozen last Saturday and not freed until Monday when grinding was again resumed.

A short time ago there appeared a notice in the STATESMAN telling all patrons to keep a supply of stamps on hand. The notice has had some effect but far from the effect it should and must have. If the patrons who so unthoughtfully put into a smooth box a penny or pennies, as the case may be, would try on a cold morning, after driving 20 or more miles, to remove them with gloved or ungloved hands I am of the opinion the practice would cease. Why not place a cup into this box or better yet buy a dollars worth of stamps and lick your own stamps doing away with one of the hardships of your carrier? The notice gives a definite expression and your carrier will in the future practice what said order allows him. I hope that all patrons of the Rural Free Delivery will read this notice, take it to mind and make it a practice to please their carrier whoever he may be and buy a dollar's worth of stamps at a time giving them a supply on hand and not bother the poor carrier when he is almost frozen to death.

IT'S CATCHING.

Smile and the world smiles with you, "knock" and you go alone; for the cheerful grin will let you in where the kicker is never known. Growl, and the path looks dreary; laugh, and the path is bright; for a wholesome smile brings much sunshine, while a frown shuts out the light. Sing and the world is harmonious; grumble and things go wrong and all the time you are out of rhyme with the busy, hustling throng. Kick and there's trouble brewing; whistle and life is gay; and the world's in tune like a day in June, and the clouds all melt away.—Exchange.

HARMON WANTS COST OF LIVING INVESTIGATED

OHIO GOVERNOR SUGGESTS THAT LAWS ENACTED BY CONGRESS ARE RESPONSIBLE.

OBSERVES EVIL CONSPIRACIES.

Believes Judgment of Legislative Probers Will Have Great Weight with Those at Washington.

THINKS COMPETITION IS STIFLED.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 12.—Gov. Harmon sent to the Legislature today a notable message concerning the high price of foodstuffs. He suggests that laws enacted by Congress may be responsible in a measure for the trouble, and asks an investigation.

The message follows: "There have been rapid and continuous advances in price of the various articles which make up the needs of every household, and further advances are expected. The result is pinching, and often privation everywhere, except among the relative few whose incomes greatly exceed their living expenses, and even these are made less able and willing to help the poor and needy.

Sees Evil Combines. "There is a widespread belief that among the causes of this, combinations and conspiracies to stifle competition and advance prices figure largely. This belief is apparently justified by the enormous differences between the prices paid to farmers, cattle raisers and other producers and those paid by consumers. The dealers from whom they directly receive their supplies. It is currently reported, too, on the statements of such dealers and other authorities, that the prices at which they sell are fixed by those from whom they buy, with threats of cutting off further dealings if the prices so fixed are not maintained.

May Remedy Trouble. "I feel that this subject is one which should be promptly and thoroughly inquired into. If it be found that there are laws which put the people in the power of men who take advantage of their necessities, or that the laws are not enforced, the means of relief are in your power.

"Or, if the fault lies partly in the laws of Congress, your judgment as to their effect on the people of Ohio will have great weight. I respectfully recommend that a joint committee be appointed with all necessary powers for a thorough investigation."

BABE'S HAUNTING WAIL WORSE THAN GALLOWS.

Judge Sentences Murderer of Tiny Infant to Imprisonment for Life Instead of Hanging.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Jan. 2.—Judge G. A. Crow of the circuit court today sentenced James Pullman, murderer of his one-month-old child, to live rather than die, so that he might for a longer time be haunted by the wails of the dying infant.

"I will not sentence Pullman to the gallows," said the judge, "but to the penitentiary for life. It will be punishment more terrible than death for him to hear daily the cries of his murdered child. His crime was the most atrocious I have ever read of. He stamped the life out of the child with his heel."

Pullman had pleaded guilty. He killed the child last July after he and the infant's mother had failed in finding a home for it.

CORPSE IS IDENTIFIED.

Body of Man Found Swinging from a Tree Is That of Prosperous Ranch Owner.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Jan. 12.—The man who was found hanging from a tree Monday near the North-Western cutoff has been identified as Edward Olson, unmarried and 33 years of age. His parents reside on a farm near Medina, Wis.

There is a disposition to regard the death as mysterious. No theory has been advanced as to why he should have taken his own life, except that he might have been despondent because of lack of work, but opposed to this theory is the fact that Olson, with his two brothers, owned a valuable ranch in Montana. On January 8 Olson wrote from Milwaukee informing his parents he was on his way home. From the fact that he wrote the letter in a cheerful vein, his friends believe he could not have been despondent.

REFORMS ARE ASKED.

National Livestock Association Favors Rail Recommendations Made by President Taft.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 12.—Many governmental reforms are demanded in resolutions presented to the National Livestock association for adoption today.

Railroad rate legislation formed the basis of much discussion. The granting of power to the interstate commerce commission to review classifications, to annual charges in regulations and to institute proceedings on the commission's own motion, as recommended by President Taft, are favored, but the resolutions oppose the appointment of an interstate commerce court.

The Pinchot administration of the forest service is endorsed and recommendations are made for a lease law governing the use of public lands for grazing. The resolutions also favor the continuation of the fight against free hides.

NOT ALL IDLERS.

Members of Royal Families Who Make Themselves Useful.

According to a Berlin dispatch, Duke Carl Theodor was not the only person of royal blood qualified to earn his living in the ordinary walks of life, although apparently the only one of his class to adopt a liberal profession. The Queen of Holland is an expert at dairy farming, and whenever in residence at Huis Ten Bosch spends all the time she can among the milk pails and the cream pans. King Peter of Serbia acts as agent for a French firm of motor car builders. He also runs a hairdresser's shop and a chemist's shop in Belgrade, but has never been seen attending to the clients. The Kaiser can turn his hand to anything. In the event of a revolution he might become a china manufacturer, for he draws a handsome income from a pottery which he owns, and in which he takes the keenest personal interest. The King of Wurtemberg follows the still more lucrative business of innkeeping, and is believed to make over £8000 a year from his hotels.

SUICIDES AND ACCUSES GIRL

INDIANA MAN, DESERTED BY EFFIE SELLSBERRY, BECOMES VINDICATIVE.

W. H. Helman Once Fleed to Germany with Jewelry and Changed His Name on His Return.

SECOND MARRIAGE QUESTIONED.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 12.—A contest for the estate of W. H. Helman, who died from the effects of poison alleged to have been administered to him by Effie Sellsberry and Henry Corcoran, now held at New Orleans, developed today.

Mrs. Sophie Niederhelman, who is Helman's divorced wife, lives with their two sons in Cincinnati. Three years ago, when Helman first presented Effie Sellsberry here, he said she was his stepdaughter and the daughter of Mrs. Niederhelman. This relationship is doubted by the police here.

Second Wife Dying. When Helman came here from Cincinnati several months ago he introduced as his wife a woman of the name of Niederhelman. This second wife is now at the point of death with paralysis at Connorsville, Ind. Her brother, John Boogie, entered a claim for Helman's estate, but he was unable to show the marriage certificate of his sister and Helman. Unless this second marriage is proved, Helman's estate will go to his two sons in Cincinnati.

From evidence gathered by the police it appears that Helman was not murdered, but closed with suicide an unusually reckless career. As Niederhelman fled from Cincinnati to Germany with a stock of jewelry, it is said, and then returned to this country, changed his name and again engaged in business.

A woman told the police that Helman had proposed to her that they go into the "white slave" traffic. He spent a great deal of money in Chicago, and it seems now that deserted by the Sellsberry woman and insanely jealous, he returned to this city and vindictively wrote the letters accusing her of his murder and swallowed poison.

Mrs. Niederhelman Talks. CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Sophie Niederhelman stated today that Effie Sellsberry was not her daughter. She said her husband left this city with her cousin several years ago. Mrs. Niederhelman learned through the Terre Haute police that the two were living together and she obtained a divorce. Mrs. Niederhelman declared she would go to Terre Haute and claim the body. She will also ask to be appointed administratrix of Helman's estate.

STUDENTS ARE VICTIMS

University Regents Will Be Asked to Install Check Room System to Guard Against Petty Thievery.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 12.—[Special.]—At the meeting of the board of university regents to be held next week a petition will be presented asking for the installation of check rooms in the various buildings of the university by students who have been made the victims of petty thievery during the past few months. Numerous complaints have been received by the university authorities from students who have had hats and caps, and even overcoats, taken from the cloak rooms during recitation hours. A similar petition four years ago by a Milwaukee student who had an overcoat and a hat stolen from the historical library while he was studying in the reading room resulted in the reimbursement for the loss by the board of regents and the establishment of a checking system that has been in vogue there ever since.

MEMOIRS ARE FORGED.

Empress Eugenie Has Not Written Reminiscences—Secretary Issues Emphatic Denial.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—In view of the persistent reports in circulation concerning the alleged memoirs of Empress Eugenie, for the publication of which it is said negotiations are going on in Europe and America, Signor Franceschini Pietri, secretary of the empress, was asked if there was any foundation for such rumor.

"None whatever," declared Signor Pietri, emphatically.

"The empress has not written any memoirs and has no intention of writing any. I am well aware of the report you mention. Once for all let me amputate the wings of this vigorous canard. I repeat that the empress has no written and never will write her memoirs. Any such work, if ever published, can therefore, be only a blatant forgery."

FASHION HINTS

Here are two of the season's popular types in small hats. The upper one is of black velvet, banded with ermine, and a fat little willow plume hanging from the left side. The lower one is more "suity" and is of silk beaver, trimmed with one of the crosses between a quill and a feather, held in place by a dull gold rose.

A Big Feeder. The biggest man in the Italian navy is in Washington and, according to an odd custom, as old as the time of Caesar's navy, he had the oddest dinner in Washington. This literally great Roman is Chief Gunner Stramaccone of the Italian cruiser Etruria, now in port. It is stated that he could have eaten the whole of the President's mince pie as a mere appetizer. The ancient law that was evoked in honor of Stramaccone, is that the biggest man in the navy shall have at the Christmas dinner at least twice the share of any other person aboard ship, including an admiral, if one were on board. Stramaccone had set before him a dinner, therefore, of two Virginia chickens, two hams, two bottles of champagne, in fact, two of everything on the menu.

Watching His Work. There are many people like the old negro who was lying out in the field in the shade of a tree. The planter came along and saw a strange negro lying under the tree in his field in the afternoon. He looked at him and said: "You negro, what are you doing?" He says, "Boss, I see the man that was sent here for to hoe his field." "Well, what's the matter? Why ain't you hoeing; are you tired?" He says, "No, sir, I ain't 'zactly tired; I was just waiting for the sun to set so that I could quit work."—Buffalo Commercial.

VON BUELOW IN ROME.

The Former Chancellor of Germany Buys the Villa Malta.

Prince Von Buelow, lately the German chancellor, is determined never to re-enter political life, but to spend the remainder of his days in the peaceful surroundings of the Eternal City. There he has purchased a beautiful villa, which a finish to his labors has been his ambition ever since he left the scene of his diplomatic triumphs in Rome to engage upon a ministerial career twelve years ago.

Villa Malta rises on the north side of Monte Pinolo and is surrounded by half a dozen other princely dwellings all of exquisite architectural design. Buelow's villa has associations which should be pleasing to its new owner. In the gardens Goethe put forth some of his greatest work, while at one time Louis II. of Bavaria had his residence there. More recently Emperor William intended to fit up Villa Malta as a kind of private German academy, but at the last moment the project fell through.

The former chancellor means to turn his new home into a veritable palace of art. Already the villa possesses magnificent ceilings and fittings which Buelow stipulated should remain intact when he made the deal two years ago. The old furniture and paintings, some by Van Dyke and Veronese, also passed into his hands.

Princess Von Buelow is an Italian, a sister of the Prince di Camporeale, who married Florence Binney Kingsland of Boston in Burlington, Vt., twenty-one years ago.

A BRITISH WAIL.

Sorrow Because of the Art Purchases of Rich Americans.

It is a fact, says a London correspondent, in spite of all the efforts made to stem the steady flow of great masterpieces from British collections to the United States, pictures of world wide fame and great art historical importance continue to leave the country without the slightest hope of a possible return. To the long list, grown to alarming proportions in recent years, must now be added Col. Holford's famous Velasquez—a portrait of the Count-Duke Olivares, Philip IV's powerful, if incompetent, minister. This over life size, full length portrait has now been acquired by Mrs. Huntington, a well known American collector. The purchase price is in the neighborhood of $400,000. Even more deplorable is the practical certainty that the wonderful "Family Group," by Frans Hals, exhibited by Col. Warde at Burlington house in 1906, is about to leave the country. Certain it is that Col. Warde has been induced to part with it, and it is stated the price paid by the tempter was high. This family group was unquestionably the most important painting by Frans Hals in England, an unrivaled example of his sure, direct brushwork and exuberant sense of life, of his wonderful handling of blacks and grays, and his easy power of suggesting the textures of different materials.

Killed by a Sharp Stick. Mrs. Annie Harvey, member of a prominent family of Newark, N. J., died of tetanus as the result of a peculiar accident. While she was going to church, a small boy threw a small, sharp-pointed stick in the air. In descending the stick entered her open mouth, the sharp point penetrating the flesh. The wound was slight, but subsequently Mrs. Harvey, complained of pains in her face and a doctor was called, who diagnosed her ailment as lockjaw.

DOCTORS FAILED. RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs

Threatened Her Life.

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna."

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me. I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it."

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me."

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment."

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

Odds On.

A Durham farmer was traveling to London to consult a lawyer, when the fear struck him that he had left certain important papers behind. He made a hurried search of his bag.

"If I did leave those papers," he remarked, "I'm a fool!"

The search proceeded, and a moment later he said:

"I believe it'll turn out I'm a fool!"

Just as he was examining the last bundle of papers he exclaimed:

"Well, I'll bet I'm a fool!"

A man on the other side of the compartment lowered his newspaper for a moment and said, slowly and deliberately:

"Oblige me, sir, by laying a little money that same way for me."—Tit-Bits.

BACKACHE--A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

A WARNING THAT MUST NOT BE IGNORED

Pain in the back is the kidneys' signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, kidney disease silently fastens its deadly grip--for kidney sickness first shows itself in pains and disorders in other parts, and the real cause is too often hidden until fatal Bright's disease or diabetes has set in! Suspect the kidneys if you are rheumatic and nervous or have lame back, painful, too frequent or scanty urination, weak heart, dizzy spells, headaches, bloating or neuralgia. What you want is a special kidney medicine—not an experiment, but one that has stood the test for years! Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, congested kidneys—cure backache—regulate the urine.

A KIDNEY REMEDY OF 75 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS began curing lame backs and sick kidneys 75 years ago. The demand led a nearby druggist, James Doan, to prepare it for sale. From him the magic formula passed to the present proprietors. Now as in those early days, Doan's Kidney Pills are made from only the purest drugs and are absolutely non-poisonous. They are used and praised all over the civilized world.

Doan's Kidney Pills Make Lasting Cures

Mrs. Solomon Sawyer, 420 W. Jackson St., Brazil, Ind., says: "I do not think there is a better kidney remedy on the market than Doan's Kidney Pills. I suffered from kidney and bladder trouble for seven or eight years, and there was a constant, dull pain across the small of my back which was almost unbearable. Damp weather greatly aggravated the complaint, and there were other annoying kidney disorders that made me feel miserable. My health finally became affected and the doctors seemed unable to help me. Having my attention called to Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at F. W. Schultz's drug store and had taken them only a short time when I began to improve. Before long I was free from the trouble and my kidneys were restored to a healthy condition."

Charles Hansing, 524 Bouthillier St., Galeana, Ill., says: "I am only too pleased to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement, in the hope that other kidney sufferers will profit by my experience. For a month or more I suffered from a steady, dull ache across the small of my back, and if I sat down for awhile, it was all I could do to get up. Often it was compelled to place my hands on my knees as a support, so severe was the pain in my back. I did not rest with any comfort, and any sudden movement sent sharp twinges through my kidneys. After plasters, liniments and various remedies which I took had failed to help me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and the contents of two boxes effected a cure. I have never lost an opportunity of saying a good word for this medicine since."

THE SAFE COURSE.

Mrs. Wilson's husband was often obliged to travel on business, and frequently did not reach home till after midnight. His wife had been in the habit of sleeping peacefully at these times, but a number of burglaries in the neighborhood during one of Mr. Wilson's trips had disturbed her calm.

On one night of his return Mr. Wilson was stealing carefully up the front stairs, so that his wife would not be awakened, when he heard her voice, high and strained. "I don't know whether you are my husband or a burglar," came the excited tones, "but I am going to be on the safe side and shoot, so if you are Henry you'd better get out of the way!"—Spokane Review.

He Obeyed.

Murat Halstead, the great journalist of war times, went to General William T. Sherman's headquarters once for the "latest news from the front." Halstead was armed with many fine introductory letters, but decided to rely mainly on one given him by Thomas Ewing, Sherman's brother-in-law. He found the general and presented Ewing's letter. The general opened it somewhat impatiently, read a few lines, folded it and said:

"Ah, you come from Ewing, and you desire to have 'all the latest news,' the 'next probable move' of our army, eh? Well, there's a train leaving this town for Cincinnati at 2 o'clock. Here, take this ticket and step over there and get your dinner and then get on that train."

"Well, but, General Sherman!" began the newspaper man. But Sherman waved him off.

"Go over and get a good dinner. We have plenty and always strive to treat our friends well. But be sure you don't miss that 2 o'clock train!" And Halstead obeyed.

Japanese Delicacies.

Under the head of "Japanese Delicacies" the Berlin Prometheus gives a list of some of the queer things which are served to citizens of the Flowery Kingdom who "have a refined taste." In the provinces which are so distant from the sea that fresh fish cannot be obtained readily, and where meat is not abundant, snakes and lizards are considered good food and are prepared in many ways. Grasshoppers rank among the real delicacies. They are always kept in captivity without food for a day, then bathed and decapitated and made legless. Heads and legs must be torn off, never cut. They are served in various ways, but dry, with a salad dressing, is the most popular. An insect of the bee family which lives in the earth is also much sought. This is served with sugar or honey when eaten raw, but it is also made into a porridge. The chrysanthemum exists not only in the poetry and art of the Japanese, but has an important place on the table, where it is met as salad, candy and stew.

The Right Hand Seats.

The Philadelphia Record quoted an observant street car conductor to the effect that the right hand seats are always filled first. He could not account for this except on the theory that, as most persons are right handed and accustomed to turning to the right, it might be simply force of habit.

"There is another probable reason which he did not think of," says the Record. "It is generally believed that the right side of a car is safer. An old traveler once said to the writer: 'In traveling always sit in the middle of a car and on the right hand side. The middle is safer than the ends in a collision, and the right side is not likely to be "side swiped" by projecting objects on trains, cars or any vehicles passing on the adjacent track.'"

The Difference

Between beer and strong alcoholic drink is that the former is a light stimulant with a high food value while the latter is a heavy stimulant with a low food value.

LITHIA BEER

Contains between 3 and 4 per cent of alcohol; just what is naturally developed in the process of brewing. Altogether its food value amounts to about 12 per cent. The balance, 88 per cent, is pure water.

In Lithia beer you have the ideal food beverage. The next time you are thirsty, try a glass. If you like it, have us send you a case.
