WETS WIN IN FOND DU LAC

Oakfield City Dry—Wets Win in the Town of Oakfield.

The license question was voted on in Fond du Lac and various towns and villages in that county last Tuesday. The "wets" won in the city of Fond du Lac by a majority of 1,725.

The village and town of Oakfield also voted on the question. The "drys" scored a victory at Oakfield village where the saloons were ousted by a vote of 81 to 66 after eight years' of undisturbed possession. There are at present two saloons in that village, each of which pays a license fee of $500. The fiscal year at Oakfield ends on July 1 and at that time the saloons must close their doors.

The town of Oakfield voted for license. This means that the saloons now doing business in the village can move a hairsbreadth outside the village boundary on July 1 and do business in the town of Oakfield unmolested. The village will lose $1,000 a year license fees, the saloons will continue to transact Oakfield business and they will be immune from village control.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN

A Fierce Fire Sunday Afternoon Destroys Barn and Threatens Other Buildings.

Last Sunday afternoon at about 4 o'clock the alarm of fire was sounded by the tooting of the malt house whistle and within a few moments the fire apparatus was on its way to the malt house as fast as the firemen and other citizens could haul it.

When they arrived there they found that Simon Hoerig's barn on the corner of Fond du Lac avenue and malt house streets was in flames. The fire had gained such headway that no effort was made to save the barn building, but a strong stream of water which was supplied from the malt house was kept on the Hoerig saloon building, located only about ten feet away from the barn which also caught fire several times and was in great danger for awhile, everybody believing that it would also be destroyed.

Most of the furniture had already been carried out of the building onto the street by the crowd. The splendid fire protection available at the malt house and the good work with the nozzle soon got the fire under control and within an hour it was completely extinguished. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Mr. Hoerig had the buildings insured in the Milwaukee and West Bend Mutual Cos. Henry Oppenorth, representing the companies, adjusted the loss last Monday, allowing Mr. Hoerig $300 on the barn and $55.92 on the saloon building.

Paint Mail Boxes.

The following information, compiled by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General P. V. DeGraw, is given for the benefit of the rural route patrons:

"It is the desire of the department that you earnestly request patrons of rural delivery out of your office to paint their boxes and the posts to which they are attached a pure white color. This course, if pursued, will not only result in benefit to the patron in serving to protect his box and post from damage by the weather, but will give all boxes a uniform color and serve to fix their identity in all parts of the country as United States mail boxes, and will give them a much neater and sightlier appearance than they now possess. It is also desired that patrons be induced to imprint their names and box numbers on boxes in black block letters about two inches high. It is also desired that you endeavor to induce road officials to paint up on the posts of boxes which are located at crossroads (but not at such signs thereto) the names of the towns or villages to which the crossroads lead, with an indicator showing the direction. Posts to which boxes should be attached should be set in an easily accessible position at the side of the road and boxes securely fastened to a projecting arm of wood, as shown in cut; or to a bracket of band iron about three-sixteenths of an inch thick, or, if preferred, an automatic extension arm may be used."

Joseph Hoerig.

A FOOLISH FROLIC.

By the Author of "The Wild Geese," "A Democratic Duchess," Etc.

They had now reached the entrance to the gorge, and in a few minutes it became clear to them that they had to mount by a series of steps, slippery with spray, which formed a frail-looking gallery fastened by iron clamps to the bare rock and protected by the flimsiest of railings.

The Duke drew back after looking up the narrow gorge, walled in on either side by high precipitous rocks, the sides of which looked like polished marble from the washing of water during long centuries.

"I suppose you will think me a fool," he said, "but I did not know it was this kind of thing. I could no more venture to walk upon the face of that cliff on that ridiculous bit of wood than I could fly. My head wouldn't stand it."

Agnes also shook her head. She shared her brother's weakness.

"It is quite safe," said the guide, and evidently did not understand that it was not from cowardice that the English "milor" shirked the ascent.

"But the rest of you will go," said the Duke. "Agnes and I and Heironymous will stay and wait for you."

Montresor and Denzilia both declared together that they would certainly not miss the sight of the world.

"I am of Lady Agnes' opinion," said Langrishe. "I can see all I care to see of the gorge from here."

"Oh, then," exclaimed Denzilia and Montresor in a breath and with embarrassed haste, "I don't think I will go either!"

Langrishe looked at them both with a dawning surprise, but before either could speak Montresor seemed to pull himself up, and added—

"At least if Miss Lavenham likes I will go. I only thought—"

He stopped in some embarrassment.

"Yes, I would like it after all, I think," she said, also hastily.

"All right then, off with you!" said the Duke, who was blissfully unconscious of any rivalry on the part of either of the other men.

"Is the guide not coming?" asked Denzilia with a certain hesitation, which again attracted Agnes' attention.

The guide explained that he would have to be paid for.

"A frane," laughed Montresor. "I think that Miss Lavenham and I could have the expense between us without ruin."

But there was still a nervous accent in his voice.

"What is the good of that?" asked the duke. "You don't mean him."

"Perhaps Miss Lavenham requires him for a chaperon," observed Langrishe playfully, but there was a touch of malice in the playfulness that was perceptible to both Denzilia and Montresor.

"A free-born American girl calling out for a chaperon!" exclaimed Denzilia lightly. "Come, Mr. Montresor, I must show that I scorn the base imputation!"

Montresor made without further parley for the little gate beside the chalet where the frames for admittance to the gorge were paid. The guide, perceiving that he was not required to accompany them, threw himself down on the grass at a little distance and prepared to enjoy a siesta.

For some moments Montresor and Denzilia climbed the slippery steps in silence. The gallery was too narrow to admit of their walking abreast, and there was a certain sense of insecurity that made them feel that it behoved them to mind their feet, they picked their steps. Below them, at the base of the upright greenish marble-like walls, the water swirled and stormed. Here and there as the ground rose sharply the water fell in a tremendous cascade down its narrow channel, scattering a drenching spray in their faces. When at last they reached the end of the gallery they paused and stood side by side, looking up the narrow gully where the rock was less bare, and feathery birch and fern added a charm to the scene on the one hand, while it took away something of its awful, lonely grandeur on the other.

But they were neither of them thinking of the scenery.

"Why did you make such a fool of yourself and me?" asked Denzilia, suddenly flashing round upon her companion.

"Indeed," he replied composedly. "I think that you shared in the making of the folly."

She bit her lip and colored, but said no less pettishly—

"I thought it was agreed that we were to be ordinary acquaintances. Instead of which you treat me as if you were afraid of being alone with me for a minute."

"I am sorry my manner should have conveyed that idea to you. It was rather that I thought that you might dislike being alone with me."

"And why?" she asked disdainfully.

"Though we are only acquaintances I know you to be a gentleman. Did you think perhaps that I might think you capable of and inclined to throw me over the railing?"

"You are pleased to jest," he answered coldly. "I never was—"

He checked himself hastily and substituted, "I am not good at jesting."

Her arms were crossed on the railing, and she was looking down into the swirling water many feet beneath them.

"No, you are not good at jesting," she said slowly. "I—"

Then there suddenly came a sound of cracking wood.

"Great heavens!" cried Montresor.

With one swift movement he caught her in his arms and stood back holding her closely to him as the broken bit of railing fell into the depths so far below that the sound of its fall could not be heard above the roar of water.

CHAPTER XVII.

For a moment the pair stood silent and motionless, he holding her clasped in his arms as he leant back against the wall of rock behind them as if to get away as far as possible from the gap in the railing.

At last his hold of her relaxed, and she instantly slid away from him.

"I beg your pardon," he said, and his voice fell into the depths so far below that the sound of its fall could not be heard above the roar of water.

They retraced their steps in silence. Once or twice she glanced at him, and a choly. "I have acquaintances, but there is, I verily believe, not a person in the world who would keep a bit of rubbish for my sake because it was my gift."

"Try me, Miss Lavenham!" cried the Duke, who had entered as she spoke and caught her last words. Wherever Denzilia went he was bound to follow her.

She turned with a considerable increase of color and looked really annoyed, but she only said—

"What shall I try you with? This would be a convenient keepsake and one easy to carry about."

She pointed to a very large beautifully carved Swiss chalet, which was in fact the case of a musical box.

"If you will give it to me," he cried, "I will soon show you whether I will prize it or not."

Denzilia only laughed, and declined to put him to the test.

They remained in the shop for nearly half an hour, turning over photographs and knick-knacks, and ended by presenting each other with carved keepers, and taking a mock oath never to part with them. In the midst of the gay fooling Montresor left. The Duke was too engrossed in his companion to notice his departure, but Denzilia saw the precise moment that he left the shop.

Montresor passed through the village, and, taking the path by the rivulet, he soon found himself in a secluded spot where he could ruminate at his ease.

His reflections were not agreeable. Rightly or wrongly he had begun to be sure that he had behaved like a cad, a prig, and a fool to Denzilia Lavenham three years ago, as he had then been sure that there had been no other possible course to pursue. In truth he was more madly in love with her than ever. He had no doubt at all but that she intended to marry the Duke. Why indeed should she not? Kenneth was worthy of her. Kenneth would not have acted with insolent arrogance towards her as he had done.

Montresor did not know how long he had been indulging in these futile reflections when he was disturbed in his meditations by the appearance of the Duke himself.

Montresor sprang up rather shamefacedly when his friend appeared. He felt as if the thoughts he had been indulging in were written on his face.

But the Duke looked a little embarrassed too.

"Oh," he exclaimed, "I did not think I should find any one here! I wanted to think a little!"

"Think away," said Montresor, laughing. "I won't disturb you; I have just finished my thinking."

"Oh, you have been thinking too!" remarked the Duke, looking at him curiously. "I wonder what you have been thinking about?"

"To me rather," returned Montresor bantering, "what you intend to think about."

"Upon my word," said the Duke, "I am not sure that I won't! You might be able to advise me. I was going to think about—that is to say, I never do anything but think about—Miss Lavenham."

Montresor laughed, and Kenneth did not observe anything forced in his laughter.

"That," he said, "is pretty obvious to the meanest intelligence."

"I don't the least mind its being obvious," returned Kenneth stoutly. "But I wish it was equally obvious whether she ever thinks of me."

"She must find it difficult to avoid doing so occasionally."

"Do you think I am too importunate in my attentions? But I have to be, I want to marry her."

"You have my blessing," said Montresor with an effort of cheerfulness. Then he added more seriously, "It is high time you were married."

"It isn't my fault that I am not married," retorted the Duke. "Whenever I have seemed to like a girl you have always carried me out of the place by the next train."

"This time," said Montresor slowly, "you would not allow yourself to be carried off by the next train."

"No, I wouldn't," responded Kenneth with a decision that carried conviction with it. "But I am jolly glad that you carried me off all those other times."

There was a moment's silence. Then the Duke went on in a melancholy tone—

"The thing is that I don't know whether she will consent to marry me."

"As to whether she will marry you or not," observed Montresor, "you must find out for yourself. I should advise you to do your very best to win Miss Lavenham. She will make an admirable duchess—and I think she will make an admirable wife."

ADIRABLE WIFE.

European Airship Fleets.

From statistics just published in the German press, giving for European countries the number of dirigible balloons and aeroplanes already finished at the end of 1907, the following are the results:

Germany possesses fourteen dirigibles of six different models—namely, Gross, Zappellin, Parveval, Schutte, Siemens-Schubert and the Rhine-Westphalian airship—and five aeroplanes. France has seven dirigibles and twenty-nine aeroplanes; Italy, three dirigibles and seven aeroplanes; Russia, three dirigibles and six aeroplanes; Austria, two dirigibles and four aeroplanes; England, two dirigibles and two aeroplanes, and Spain one dirigible and three aeroplanes. Altogether, European nations have thirty-two dirigibles and fifty-six aeroplanes that are presumed to be available for service.

Consular Report.

Loved Like Ruskin.

The death of Charles Spencer Wade at Elkhart, Ind., has brought to light a story of love rivaling that of John Ruskin. Wade died of a broken heart. Two women were devoted to him. One of them, her first wife, allowed him to divorce her in order that he might marry her friend. This sacrifice and her continued devotion regained for her his affection. Unable to remedy the wrong he gradually pined away. Realizing that the end was near he sought the home of his first wife and died in her arms.

Glued to Her Bed.

Mrs. Hannah Spencer of Beaver Falls, Pa., awakened by rheumatism, called to her daughter in an adjoining room to rub her. The patient rubbed the suffering mother well with what she supposed was camphor oil. Mrs. Spencer, much relieved, dropped to sleep, but when she awoke she found herself inseparably attached to the bed by glue. The "camphor oil" proved to be glue. A prolonged soaking in hot water released the patient.

Former President States He Could Not Accept Any Stipulation Limiting His Freedom of Conduct.

CREATES SENSATION IN ROME.

ROME, April 4.—Now that Mr. Roosevelt has made public the documents which the Vatican had considered confidential, Cardinal Merry del Val, papal secretary of state, wishes the entire history of the negotiations for the audience which the former President sought of Pope Pius X. to be known.

Cardinal Merry del Val is credited with the responsibility for the Vatican's part in the matter, and the following may be accepted as his version:

Following the exchange between Mr. Kennedy and American Ambassador Leishman and Mr. Roosevelt's decision not to be received under the terms insisted, John Callen O'Loughlin, who was assistant secretary of state in 1900 and a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt, called upon Cardinal Merry del Val bearing an introduction from Mr. Falconio, apostolic delegate in the United States. Immediately after being introduced to the presence of Cardinal Merry Mr. O'Loughlin said:

"I do not come in the name of Mr. Roosevelt, but on my own account as an American Catholic."

Cardinal Merry del Val said: "Then what are we here for? It is useless to discuss the matter. If you do not represent Mr. Roosevelt, you cannot make any arrangement or speak for him."

Mr. O'Loughlin replied: "What I consider important is to tell your eminence that if the two dispatches sent by Mr. Kennedy are retracted, I can assure you that Mr. Roosevelt will accept an audience."

Cardinal Merry del Val said: "I will not discuss Mr. Roosevelt's rights, but give me confidential assurance that, should Mr. Roosevelt, will not go to the Methodists and the audience will occur."

Mr. O'Loughlin refused to give this assurance.

The cardinal then said: "Mr. Roosevelt is free to go to the Methodists and do whatever he chooses, but the pontiff is certainly free not to receive a man who would claim the right to insult him on the day after having been received by him, perhaps, on the same day, as, according to your statement, he may leave Rome on the same day of the papal audience, thus having only between noon and evening Tuesday in which to see the pope."

"It is of little consequence whether he is a Catholic, Protestant, Israelite or Buddhist. All religions persons merit the same esteem. The important thing is to be honest and sincere. So far as the form of belief is concerned, I believe that all honest people will be always on good terms with God."

Creates Sensation in Rome.

The determination of Mr. Roosevelt to forego an audience with Pope Pius X. rather than subscribe to the conditions insisted by the Vatican has created a sensation.

This unfortunate and unexpected incident overshadowed every other feature of the distinguished American's visit to the Eternal City.

Mr. Roosevelt sought an audience with the pontiff through American Ambassador Leishman and received a reply that the holy father would be delighted to receive him, but the answer was coupled with an expression of the hope that the audience would not be prevented by such a regrettable incident as made an audience for former Vice President Fairbanks impossible.

Mr. Roosevelt in turn stated that he could not accept any stipulation limiting his freedom of conduct. To the latter message the Vatican made answer that the audience could not take place except on the understanding first made known. On March 29, Mr. Roosevelt sent to Ambassador Leishman the following telegram:

"Proposed presentation is, of course, now impossible."

Mr. Roosevelt insists that the incident be treated as purely personal and earnestly hopes that it will not give rise to any bitterness. He appreciates the attitude of the Vatican, but feels that as a free American citizen he cannot consistently take any action that might be construed as limiting his freedom of freedom of his personal conduct. He had made no engagement to address the Methodists or other religious bodies of Rome, but at the same time thinks that he should not make promises as to what he will or will not do. It would appear today that, so far as the Vatican and Mr. Roosevelt are concerned, the incident is closed.

News Makes Deep Impression.

The news that the former President had abandoned his proposed visit to the Vatican reached the morning papers very late, but made a deep impression. The Messagero, an anti-clerical organ, alone comments editorially upon the matter.

"When the news was spread it was received with incredulity, many regarding it as a malicious fabrication of the enemies of the Catholic church, but when confirmed it produced comment elsewhere to the Vatican. Men of every religion daily visit the Pope without first giving the itinerary of the churches which they intend to visit. Why should the Vatican require Mr. Roosevelt to ignore the churches of his own religion during his short stay in Rome? The incident will not add to the diplomatic taint of the Pope's advisers."

"Mr. Roosevelt as the head of the great American republic, followed the principle enunciated by Premier Luzzatti, 'A free church under a sovereign state.'

The Messagero places the responsibility for what it terms a "blunder" on the Pope's entourage, continuing:

"For it was a blunder to ask a certificate of acceptability from a man illustrious everywhere for his intelligence and the nobleness of his life. The liberty which Mr. Roosevelt was defending for all he could not renounce for himself."

After pointing out that a non-possimus could have been given without the exchange of notes, the paper declares that the whole incident furnishes new proof of the "imperious intransigence of Cardinal Merry del Val," and adds:

"Could Mr. Roosevelt, a free citizen of his own country, renounce his liberty in Rome for the sake of an audience with the Pope? It is time that the advisers of the Pope should understand that a certain intransigence cannot be exacted."

"The history of the negotiations is about as follows:

While at Cairo Mr. Roosevelt received the following telegram from Ambassador Leishman dated March 23:

Mr. Kennedy, rector of the American Catholic College, in reply to an inquiry which I caused to be made, requests that the following communication be transmitted to you: 'The holy father will be delighted to grant an audience to Mr. Roosevelt on 5, and hopes that nothing will be done to prevent it, such as the much regretted incident which made the reception of Mr. Fairbanks impossible.'

Roosevelt Makes Reply.

Replying by cable to Ambassador Leishman on March 25, Mr. Roosevelt said:

Please present the following to Mr. Kennedy: 'I would be a real pleasure to me to be presented to the holy father, for whom I entertain high respect, both personally and as the head of a great church. I recognize his entire right to refuse or not receive whomever he chooses, for any reason that seems good to him, and it does not concern me to submit to any moment question the propriety of his action. On the other hand, I in turn must decline to make any stipulations or submit to any conditions which in any way would limit my freedom of conduct. I trust that on April 5 he will find it convenient to receive me.'

Audience Is Declined.

On March 28 Mr. Roosevelt at Cairo received a cablegram from Ambassador Leishman, giving a message from Mr. Kennedy, which concluded by saying: 'The audience cannot take place except on the understanding expressed in the former message.'

The following day Mr. Roosevelt sent a message to the American ambassador, saying: 'The proposed presentation is, of course, now impossible.'

Received by King.

King Victor Emmanuel received Mr. Roosevelt at the Quirinal today. The occasion afforded opportunity for another exhibition of the admiration of the public for the former President and the popular interest in his every movement.

The hour of his reception being known a considerable number of persons gathered to greet him on his way from the hotel to the royal palace.

As he was alighting from his carriage at the Quirinal, the cuirassiers forming the bodyguard of the King gave him a military salute. A footman in blue velvet snickerbock and red coat, carrying with gold lace preceded Mr. Roosevelt to the antechamber of his majesty, where he was received by Rear Admiral Carelli, aid on duty, Count Tozzani and Duke of the Abruzzi, masters of ceremonies.

Immediately afterwards the distinguished guest was escorted to the door of the King's apartment, which, when thrown open, revealed his majesty standing with arms outstretched and with smile upon his lips. His majesty wore the uniform of a general of the Italian army. His words of welcome, spoken in fluent English, were cordial.

Victor and Mr. Roosevelt shook hands heartily, the monarch inviting the former President to sit at his side. The door of the apartment was then closed and the two remained in private conversation for about three-quarters of an hour.

Mr. Roosevelt, it is said, expressed the pleasure that he felt in again meeting his majesty following the short interval which they had a year ago at Messina on board the battleship Re Umberto. The King, it is learned, said he had been waiting with interest the return of the president, as he had desired to hear from his own lips the report of his African adventures which his majesty had followed as closely as possible. Mr. Roosevelt gave a brief account of his experiences, and later expressions of friendship on behalf of their respective countries were exchanged, the Italian sovereign reiterating his admiration for American republicanism.

Following the audience, Mr. Roosevelt said that the King had been so gracious and flattering both to him personally and to his country that he felt that he should not make public anything concerning their conversation.

The formalities of the reception concluded, King Victor personally conducted Mr. Roosevelt to the hall of the palace where the American inspecting and hunting trophies of the King's father and grandfather.

When the time came to say good-bye, his majesty invited Mr. Roosevelt to dine with him tomorrow morning. The sovereign explained that though they would dine together at the court tonight he desired to see and talk with his guest further, alone.

Sees Tomb of Raphael.

From the Quirinal, Mr. Roosevelt drove to the Pantheon. Beyond the tomb of his ancient memories, this spot is sacred as it contains the tombs of Raphael, King Victor Emmanuel II, the "father of his country," and King Humbert. At the entrance to the temple, Mr. Roosevelt was saluted by the veterans of the wars of Italian independence, who for thirty-two years have guarded night and day the tomb of their chief.

The guest shook hands with each of the veterans, congratulating them on the honorable duty in which they were engaged and saying that he had wished not to leave Rome without paying a tribute of respect to the memory of the founder of United Italy. He brought two wreaths, which were placed upon the tombs of Victor Emmanuel II, and Humbert.

Mr. Roosevelt was received formally by Dr. C. Ricci, director general of the ministry of instruction. Others present were Mr. Reccaria, royal chaplain of the Pantheon; Commander Andrew T. Long, American naval attaché; Prof. Josse Carter, director of the American School of Classical Studies at Rome, and several other Americans.

Rain was falling at the time, but outside the Pantheon a large crowd had gathered, and as Mr. Roosevelt left the place he was cheered. A pleasing incident at the Pantheon was a chance meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and the Queen Dowager Margherita, who detained the former President in conversation for some moments.

In London fresh fish during the Tudor period was a luxury for the rich, beyond the means of the poor.

FOND DU LAC NEWS.

SENTENCED FOR THEFT.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., April 2.—[Special.]—Jacob Miesel, alias John Hanley, was given a six months' sentence in the Green Bay reformatory by Judge Fowler this morning on the charge of grand larceny. He stole a watch from a North Fond du Lac hotel man. The mother of the prisoner offered to pay the fine of $300, providing he was given his freedom, but the court refused. A pathetic scene occurred at the jail when his mother and sweetheart bade him farewell.

FILLS THE VACANCIES.

Chief Doll has appointed N. Baltazar, G. B. McDermott and Edward Werner to fill some of the vacancies now existing in the fire department on account of the resignation of several of the former members. The new men will be stationed at the No. 5 house in order to be thoroughly drilled before being sent to the other fire stations. Chief Doll is anxious to secure applications from men between 21 and 33 years of age, who desire to become firemen.

ENGINEER LEAVES CITY.

A. H. Race, who has been an employe of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad for thirty-seven years, the past twelve of which he has been the engineer on the passenger train between here and Iron Ridge, left the city Friday for Tacoma, Wash., to accept a position as road foreman with the railroad at that place. The engine of the train on which Mr. Race departed was decorated with flags and bunting and he was given a hearty farewell by the railroad men. His wife and family will leave for Tacoma in about two weeks.

TO RENOVATE CHURCH.

At the annual meeting of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church it was decided to begin work immediately upon the renovating of the church. The exterior is to be painted and other improvements made. A. P. Baker, W. D. L. Uter and J. E. Casserly were elected as trustees of the congregation and M. M. Gillett and A. P. Baker as custodians of the building fund, which now amounts to about $1000.

GOES TO OSHKOSH.

Victor La Marr, who was found insane by a jury in Judge Richler's court, was taken to the northern hospital at Oshkosh Friday afternoon by Sheriff W. J. Seeve and a deputy. La Marr proved a model prisoner on the way to the Sawdust city. It is said that he will not be kept in confinement long and upon his release on parole will probably go to Brown county, where he has relatives living. The case pending against him here in justice court will probably be held open.

HAD TO CUT TREE.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., April 4.—As a result of the runaway of two sorrel ponies owned by J. W. Gerhard, it was necessary to cut down a large tree in order to release the animals. The horses were attached to a small wagon containing some dishes, which were broken in the runaway. In attempting to get into the barn at the Gerhard residence the horses got their harness so tangled about a tree that it was necessary to cut down the tree.

WILL INSPECT ROADS.

Postmaster F. M. Givens has been notified to make an inspection of the roads along the rural routes extending from this city. In districts where roads are in a bad condition notices to improve them will be given and if the notice fails to bring any result Mr. Givens will notify the postoffice department at Washington. The rural patrons have also been requested to paint their mail boxes white in order that they will all harmonize.

MAINTAINS OPEN SHOP.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—The strikers' union tailors ended this morning when the Kaufman & Koehn tailoring concern signed the new wage scale and all of the union employes returned to work. The J. E. Sullivan company remains in its intention to maintain an open shop hereafter, and as a result all of its former union employes are now working in other shops. The Sullivan company today employed several non-union men from St. Louis.

HAVE MODEL SCHOOL.

County Superintendent Ruby M. Acker says that the State Horticultural society has agreed to take a ten years' lease on one of the Fond du Lac county school grounds and to keep the grounds in condition for that length of time. The state organization hopes to set an example for other schools in the country and through making one school a model will interest the pupils throughout the county in the work. At the present time few of the county schools have attractive surroundings.

G. A. R. ISSUES WARNING.

The local post of the G. A. R. has warned the general public not to give funds to persons who claim to be soliciting money for the G. A. R. encampment here unless the persons have a subscription list headed by the signature of Commander Bates. The veterans are meeting with success in their campaign for funds and predict that before the 1st of May they will have obtained the $1800 asked for. Active arrangements for the encampment will begin within a week or two.

THIEF RIFLES LOCKERS.

During the time the indoor circus was being held on the upper floor of the Y. M. C. A. building Monday night, an unknown person stole about $30 from clothes in the lockers on the first floor.

Mother's Task.

When mother gets breakfast she must remember that father likes his breakfast food without cream; Johnny wants both cream and sugar; Susie doesn't like breakfast food at all and must have a substitute; Mary has to have grapefruit, and the rest of the family want oranges or apples. No two agree on anything, but she must remember what each one wants or the family doubt her devotion. What is it, do you suppose, that keeps the mother of a large family from going crazy?—Acheson Globe.

Taking the Step.
It happened while a marriage was being celebrated. The bridegroom did not have the usual happy, bashful look. Instead he seemed to be profoundly unhappy and fidgeted about, standing first on one foot and then on the other.

So patent was his state of mental unquiet that the "best man" deemed it expedient to elucidate the mystery. "Hae ye lost the ring?" he solicitously inquired.

"No," answered the unhappy one, with a woeful look; "the ring's safe enough, but, man, I've lost my enthusiasm."—London Scrap.

PRIMARY LAW IS UPHELD BY HIGH TRIBUNAL

STATE WINS ON EVERY POINT.

Five Allegations Made by State Senator Lehr as Counsel for Van Alstine Are Overturned.

FOLLOWS ITS OWN PRECEDENTS.

MADISON, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—Wisconsin supreme court today handed down a decision in the case of the state ex rel A. B. Van Alstine, appellant, versus James A. Frear, secretary of state, et al, respondents, upholding the validity of the Wisconsin primary law.

The opinion of the court, which was written by Justice Barnes, notes at the start that the rule of "stare decisis" is followed, meaning literally that the court is following its own precedents.

Decision Not Obsolete.

The court says that despite the assaults made upon the decision in an effort to secure reversal in the primary law case, "It is obvious that the decision in Smith vs. Janesville is not a neglected or despised law in the sea of judicial decisions, but is one that has never been doubted nor criticised by the court that promulgated it, and on that has frequently been cited as authority and referred to with approval."

"Not a voter to vote the ticket of some party to which he does not belong and which he does not intend to support at the general election, the opinion says: 'That this has been done, or will be done in the future to any greater extent under the primary election law than was practiced under the caucus system that existed before the adoption of the primary law, may well be doubted. That the present law is a departure from the political creed will deliberately desert their own party at the primary to desert an unworthy set of candidates on a rival party, presupposes a degree of moral turpitude that we cannot presume to exist. We agree with the supreme court of Washington that the objection is political rather than judicial and should be remedied by the Legislature instead of by the courts. The law certainly presents an anomalous situation in this regard, if the Legislature considered it important that party integrity should be preserved.'

Electors Have Rights.

"The contention that to require a candidate to declare that if nominated and elected to an office he will qualify adds a qualification not required by the constitution, we regard as untenable," says the court. "The electors have the right to know whether he will or not; otherwise, if he should decline, their votes would be thrown away. They ought to have the right to express a choice as between candidates who are willing to assume the duties of office if elected."

The last contention, attacking the law on the ground that it provided for the nomination of candidates for United States senator by the people, is also rejected by the court in one-fourth of the verbiage in the entire opinion. It is apparent, declares the court, that the clause of the constitution which it is claimed the law transgresses has never been construed to mean that the right was framed "through fear of popular government in its broadest sense, and that the Legislature would be more competent to select a desirable class of senators than would the people." The court is made in this connection to the debate in the constitutional convention and to contemporary history as supporting this theory.

Guarantees Privileges.

Alluding to the fact that the constitution guarantees to citizens the right of petition, the court asks: "Wherein does the primary nomination of United States senators differ of the exercise of the right of petition? The legislature has the right to be informed of something that he has a right to know and of something that it is his duty to heed. He may not regard the verdict as obligatory, but should treat it as advisory. It is not apparent how our primary law can be held to be so coercive as to destroy judgment and discretion on the part of a member of our Legislature when he comes to perform the duty of electing a United States senator. When the majority for some candidate is large, great deference should, and no doubt will be accorded to its voice."

"Constructing the law imposing no legal obligation on the part of any member of the Legislature to vote for his party nominee at the primary, we must assume that the legislators will vote according to their consciences and convictions, giving due weight to the advisory vote of the people, and that therefore neither the letter nor the spirit of the constitution has been transgressed."

Originates in Dane County.

This test of the Wisconsin primary law was brought in the circuit court for Dane county in the form of a suit to restrain Secretary of State Frear from publishing notice of the coming primary election and to prevent State Treasurer Dahl from paying out the necessary expenses therefor. The five allegations upon which State Senator J. Elmer Lehr of Appleton—as counsel for Van Alstine—was run down and sunk by the court were: 1. That the law was unconstitutional and was never published after its final approval by the voters of the state. 2. That the act in question abridges the right of the people to peaceably assemble and consult for the common good. 3. That the act is unlawful and unreasonably limits the rights of candidates for office by setting up a primary election to participate in the selection of candidates for office. 4. That the act operates to coerce the judgment and discretion of the Legislature in choosing United States senators and unlawfully regulates the manner in which such senators and operates to secure their election by popular vote. 5. That the grounds were predicated upon the "unlawful expenditure of public moneys from the state treasury by the operation of the act in question."

Law Is Effective.

Regarding the second contention, that the law never became effective because it was not published after the electors had voted to adopt it, the opinion says: "There is no more reason for saying that this act should have been published after it was ratified by the popular vote than there would be for saying that any other law which does not become effective on the happening of a contingency must be published after the contingency arises in order to have vitality."

It is denied by the court that the law violates that portion of the constitution which guarantees to the people the right "Peaceably to assemble, to consult for the common good," etc. "The people or their delegates may now assemble, hold conventions and con-

Compensation.

"I felt so sorry when I heard your house was burned down, Mrs. Jones," said Mrs. Hawkins. "It was too bad," said Mrs. Jones, "but it had its bright side. John and I were both afraid to discharge our cook, but now that the house is gone, of course we don't have to."—Harper's Weekly.

A Minor Tragedy.

Small Boy (to chemist)—Please, sir, can you mix me some castor oil so that you don't taste it when you take it? Chemist—Certainly, my little man.

Are you fond of lemonade?

Small Boy—Rather! (Chemist retires behind the screen and reappears with a tumbler.) Chemist—There, my boy, you drink that. (Boy does so.) Isn't that good? Small Boy—Rather! That's prime! Now let me have the castor oil, please, sir. Chemist—Why, you've just aka it—in that lemonade! Small Boy—Oh! cricky; I wanted it for father!—Scraps.

BENN CONGER RESIGNS.

New York Senator Who Filed Charges Against Aldis Believes His Usefulness Has Ended.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 5.—Rising to a question of personal privilege in the Senate Monday night, Senator Benn Conger, after reading a statement in which he declared he fully realized that as a result of the Aldis bribery charge his usefulness as a legislator was at an end, handed his resignation to Lieut.-Gov. White, a duplicate of which he later filed with the secretary of state.

With face ashen and hands trembling, he read, while his fellow senators listened with intense interest, and when he had finished he sent his resignation to the desk and quickly left the chamber.

Mr. Conger read now at a private conference where the qualifications of ex-Senator Aldis for the position of Republican leader of the Senate was being considered he was asked to declare his position and whether he would not and could not vote for him.

Senator Cobb's resolution, providing for the appointment of a committee to prepare charges against Conger, is disposed of by the latter's resignation.

DEFENDS TARIFF LAW.

Representative Payne Declares Present Statute Is Confuting the Many Liars Who Attack It.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—"The present tariff law is every day confuting the many liars who attack it," declared Representative Sereno Payne of New York, one of the authors of the law, as he was leaving the white house today for a tariff conference with President Taft.

Mr. Payne appeared annoyed to the point of being almost angry. "From every standpoint it is the most successful bill this country has ever had," he declared. "It talks for itself every day in the upbuilding of American business at home and abroad. The maximum and minimum provisions of the bill alone, have opened the markets of the world to the goods of the United States."

ENGINEERS GET RAISE.

Erie Railroad Grants New Wage Scale Which Maintains the Differential Now Existing.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The Erie railroad has settled upon a new schedule of wages with its engineers. An increase has been granted which maintains the same differential in wages which has heretofore existed on the Erie in comparison with other competing lines. It was said that in reaching the agreement the men took into consideration the financial condition of the Erie and did not stand out for the highest range of wages which have been granted on other lines.

STRIKE IN COLUMBUS.

Motormen and Conductors Want 27 Cents an Hour and Recognition of the Union.

COLUMBUS, O., April 5.—Motormen and conductors of the Columbus Railway and Light company decided today to strike for 27 cents an hour and for recognition of a union which the employees have just formed. About 1000 men are involved.

SHIP SINKS; CREW GOES DOWN.

Apprentice, Only Survivor, Is Picked Up by Tug Towing Steamer.

FALMOUTH, England, April 5.—The four-masted British ship Kate Thomas, while in tow of the Lands End Monday, was run down and sunk by the steamer Dahl from paying out the necessary expenses therefor. The five allegations upon which State Senator J. Elmer Lehr of Appleton—as counsel for Van Alstine—was run down and sunk by the court were: 1. That the law was unconstitutional and was never published after its final approval by the voters of the state. 2. That the act in question abridges the right of the people to peaceably assemble and consult for the common good. 3. That the act is unlawful and unreasonably limits the rights of candidates for office by setting up a primary election to participate in the selection of candidates for office. 4. That the act operates to coerce the judgment and discretion of the Legislature in choosing United States senators and unlawfully regulates the manner in which such senators and operates to secure their election by popular vote. 5. That the grounds were predicated upon the "unlawful expenditure of public moneys from the state treasury by the operation of the act in question."

The Boy Critic.

Richard Croker, at an open air luncheon at Palm Beach, told a George Washington story. "A teacher," he began, "was conducting a lesson in history. 'Tommy Jones,' she said, 'what was there about George Washington which distinguished him from all other Americans?' 'He didn't lie,' was the prompt answer."

EXCELLENT TRADE IN WESTERN CANADA.

Splendid Crops, Big Prices, and Prosperous Outlook for the Future.

Throughout all of Canada, and especially in the western provinces of Canada, there is a buoyancy in every line of business that is fully warranted by every condition. The crops of the past year were what was expected, and the prices for grain of all kinds put the farmers in a class by themselves. Many of them are independent, and many others have got well started on the road. The latest reports are that seeding is well under way in almost every district, and the prospects are that a vastly larger area than that under crop last year will be seeded early this spring. In the Lethbridge district, in Southern Alberta, steam and gasoline outfits, hundreds of them, are breaking up the prairie at a tremendous pace, but they work night and day. As soon as it becomes dark gangs are changed, a head light attached, and on, through the night until the first streak of dawn, these giant monsters with their seven or eight gangs of breaking plows, keep up the work. Then the more modest farmer is putting in the longest hours possible with his teams of horses or oxen. And what will the country be like in August, when these fields have become yellowed with the literally golden grain. There will be one vast expanse of wheat field. And there will be a market for it, because it is the best grain grown, and the demand will be everywhere. As previously intimated, business throughout Western Canada is sound and good. The grain production of 1909 has been the great factor in establishing the reputation of Western Canada, and it is worth talking about. It surpassed all previous records, both in regard to quality and quantity, and such an achievement was not by means easy. The limit has not been reached, and a large average increase may be expected during the next ten years. There will be odd seasons when a falling off will occur, and it is the falling off that causes alarms and panics in the commercial world. The plains have done their duty so far in the output of grain and it would be reasonable to make occasional allowances for slowing up. The faster the rate of increase is now, the sharper will be the check when the production diminishes. But there are some unreasonable people who wonder why the growth of one year is not continued during the next, and at an even faster rate. These same unreasonable people are the ones who see flaws in the situation as soon as an indication is given that the startling advances have not been maintained.

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition and with a record of 40 years of use. It is a substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

Care of the Teeth. Do not be spasmodic in their care. Remember a little cleaning every day is better than scrubbing to the gum bleeding point when you happen to think of it.

Never experiment with tooth powders or whitening lotions. Your enamel may be ruined before you learn they are not what they are advertised. Get a reliable make, and stick to it.

Clean the teeth after each meal, if possible, before going to bed without fail. Learn the value of an alkali wash at bedtime. It counteracts acid and lengthens life of teeth. Milk of magnesia, limewater, or plain baking soda in water are all good.

Helped the Actors. When Mrs. August Belmont, who was Miss Eleanor Robson, abandoned the stage to wed the financier her company, which had played in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," was disbanded. Just before the Belmonts sailed on their honeymoon Mr. Belmont sent checks to all the actors who had thus been fired out of employment. The business manager received $2000, and the other checks were substantial. It is said that Mrs. Belmont on her return from abroad will be a Kentucky neighbor of Mrs. Peter Duryea, formerly Viola Allen, another Liebeler star who became the wife of a noted horseman.

"Well, you needn't cry at a thing like that," comforted the mother. "Why didn't you laugh?"

"I did," sobbed Tommy, disconsolate.—Housekeeper.

FASHION HINTS

This outing suit of rose colored linen has small tucks paneled in the sides of the blouse and skirt. Black linen is used for the belt, collar and deep cuffs. A jaunty tie is drawn through the slash in the blouse front, giving just the required dash to the whole.

When He Bursts His Chains. "McGoosler, the first baseman, is put tin' up a big boiler because baseball players are slaves." "Is he? What's his salary?" "Thirty-five hundred." "Well, if he quits being a slave he has his old profession to fall back on." "What's that?" "Washing pop bottles in a pop factory at seven a week."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ROSY COLOR

Produced by Postum.

"When a person rises from each meal with a ringing in the ears and a general sense of nervousness, it is a common habit to charge it to a deranged stomach."

"I found it was caused from drinking coffee, which I never suspected for a long time, but found by leaving off coffee that the disagreeable feelings went away."

"I was brought to think of the subject by getting some Postum and this brought me out of trouble."

"It is a most appetizing and invigorating beverage and has been of such great benefit to me that I naturally speak of it from time to time as opportunity offers."

"A lady friend complained to me that she had tried Postum, but it did not taste good. In reply to my question she said she guessed she boiled it about ten minutes. I advised her to follow directions and know that she boiled it fifteen or twenty minutes, and she would have something worth talking about. A short time ago I heard one of her children say that they were drinking Postum now-a-days, so I judge she succeeded in making it good, which is by no means a difficult task."

"The son of one of my friends was formerly a pale lad, but since he has been drinking Postum, has a fine color. There is plenty of evidence that Postum actually does 'make red blood,' as the famous trade-mark says."

NOTES OF INTEREST.

The largest baby ever born in White County, Indiana, and believed to be the largest ever born in the state, arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Moore of Ormas, a few days ago. The baby boy tipped the scales at just 19 pounds.

Report was made to the postmaster in New Hartford, Conn., that a hen had impeded the delivery of mail on one of the rural routes out of this town the other day. John Scanlon, the carrier, had just started on his route when a hen ran out from a farmhouse near by, settled herself among the mail bags in the wagon box, and laid an egg. Scanlon poked the egg and drove on, but half an hour later looked back and found the hen still following him. He was compelled to turn back and hand over the egg and the hen to the farmer's wife before he could go on with his work.

The late Mrs. J. Frevel of St. Martin, Stearns county, Minn., better known as "Grandmother Frevel," whose remains were consigned to their last resting place recently, surprised her relatives and friends not a little after her death in the matter of personal property. The aged woman left a will, in which she bequeathed $1500 in personal property, mostly money, to her nephew and believed to be the full extent of her worldly possessions. It was found, however, that she carried in a belt around her body a sum of almost $11,000, partly in gold pieces and partly in bills. The woman did not lead a life of penury, but lent a helping hand wherever she could.

Attacked from behind by a savage hyena which had escaped from its cage, Capt. Snider, an animal trainer with circus in winter quarters at Oxford, Pa., was rescued by a lion, whose affections he had won by kindness. The lion, caged close by, although supposedly untamable, having a record of killing two keepers, saw the attack by the hyena, and made strenuous efforts to get out. When he found this impossible he sprang violently against the side of his cage, upsetting it upon the crouching hyena and pinning it to the ground.

While stopping at the Burmeister hotel in Winona, Minn., fifteen years ago Mrs. Mori Morrison had a purse containing $5 and a set of gold earrings mysteriously taken from her room. A package was delivered through the regular mail channels to her the other day in which was the purse, a $5 gold piece, the earrings and the following note:

"Dear Madam—I am sorry I have waited so long to send this, but it done me a heap of good when I took them. I always thought of you and said I would send them back. If I knew that you needed the money I would send you more." The note was anonymous. The package was postmarked Watertown, S. D.

John Cahill, aged 21, by his plea for a double sentence to the Mansfield state reformatory, saved his brother Robert, aged 18, from doing time in the Ohio intermediate prison on conviction of the theft of a box of oranges from a freight car.

"I want to take a double sentence and save my brother's time," John pleaded before Common Pleas Judge Babcock. "I want him to go back to Toledo and support our mother. We have four brothers there, all too little to work. I am older than Robert and more to blame."

"I hear many pleas aimed to impress themselves on my sympathies," said Judge Babcock, "but yours seems sincere. You agree to take your brother's sentence if I would let him go. That being the case, I'll let you go, too. Go and get a job."

The youths, beaming with joy, left the court hand in hand.

One dog's devotion to another was shown in Henryville, Ind., recently when a shaggy shepherd belonging to Ed Gray, a wealthy farmer living south of here, saved the life of its mate, after the animal had been held a prisoner in a steel trap for ten days. The two dogs were on a rabbit chase a fortnight ago, when one of the animals stepped into a mink trap that had been placed in the snow near a creek by boys. None heard the howls of the dog, as it tried to extricate its paw from the steel teeth. The more fortunate animal tried time and again to attract the master to the spot. Finally, after an expiration of ten days, a farmer living nearby found the dog to the secluded spot where he found its mate weak from hunger and exposure. The dog that had saved its companion's life wagged its tail joyfully when the farmer bound up the wounds and carried the maimed animal to its master.

John P. Kibler's neighbors in Luray, Va., are talking of a strange suicide of one of his cows after she had nursed the loss of a calf, which had been converted into veal. With other cows she was pastured in a field in which there was an old well containing several feet of water. Persons who heard the cow uttering plaintive sound saw her look into the well, then walk away about 100 yards. Then, as if her mind had been firmly made up, she walked deliberately to the opening and plunged into it, head first.

ROCKEFELLER'S PHILANTHROPY.

Its Scope Is Explained by a Legal Representative.

"The very purpose of the donor is that the scope of this Foundation shall be without definite limits; that it shall be so elastic that it may respond to the demands of humanity as the years go by, and may fit itself from time to time to needs as they may arise. The charities of the fourteenth century are not the charities of the twentieth century. The charities of the Twentieth century will not be the charities of the Twenty-first century; and it is eminently desirable, it seems to me, that the tendency of philanthropy in the future should be that the dead hand should be removed from charitable bequests and that the power to determine to what specific objects they should be applied should be left in the hands of living men, who can judge of the necessities and of the needs in the light of the knowledge which they have as contemporaries, and not that they shall find their hands tied by the will of the man who is long years dead. The wisdom of living men will always exceed the wisdom of any man, however wise, who has been long since dead."

In these words the aims and purposes of the Rockefeller Foundation were outlined at Washington before the Senate committee on the District of Columbia, by Starr J. Murphy of New York, its legal representative of the oil king in his charities, in arguing for the bill to incorporate the Rockefeller Foundation. At the conclusion of his explanation a favorable report was ordered. There was no dissenting voice. The report will be formulated by Mr. Gallinger, who offered the bill, and submitted it to the Senate.

Love of Picturesque in France.

When a man is sentenced to a term of confinement in this country they do not say he has been sent to prison; they describe it as being "put in the shadow" (mis a l'ombre). A policeman, the man if hits you over the head if you don't move on when he orders you, is in France

A WIFE-HUNTER.

Great-Grandson of Marie Antoinette Coming to New York.

A brilliant and eccentric fete has just been given in Paris, in honor of Prince Charles Louis de Bourbon, for the purpose of celebrating his proposed trip to America, whither he is to go in search of an heiress. Prince Charles claims to be the great-grandson of Marie Antoinette and Louis the Sixteenth. If this be so, then his eldest brother, Prince Jean, is heir to the throne of France, and not the Duke d'Orleans, who belongs to the younger branch of the Bourbons. Prince Charles does not conceal the object of his visit to America, and he is quite handsome his chances of winning a great heiress are very good. His younger brother, Prince Louis Edward, wanted to accompany him in quest of a wife, but his guardian, Count de Grandcourt, declined to put up the money for the trip. It may be added that Prince Charles Louis, although claiming to be the great-grandson of a King of France, is a salesman for an automobile firm.

SERVANT PROBLEM IN AFRICA.

Exclusively Men and Said to Be the Unhealthiest on Earth.

Servants are an absolute necessity in Africa, declares a woman writer in The Deliberator. But next to the climate and the insects, the native servants are the greatest pests. Even the best of them are the most unimaginable. They delight in greasy, ragged and dirty. They never do anything if they can avoid it.

Servants are all of the male gender. They are engaged by the month and paid in cash or merchandise, at their option. The price is usually a cow, a horse, a boy, small beer, jackwash and breadman. I was very fortunate in getting one. His wages were $5 a month, cash, and all he could steal. He dressed in an undershirt and the cast-off trousers of some white man. At the end of the month, when he received his wages, most of it went for rum and aniseette bought at the factory. When the money was gone he tapped a palm tree and drank of its fermented sap. No matter how intoxicated he became his menials were always on time and he was polite and deferential. He called me Missy.

Because we both spoke English and he was a British subject, he looked after me in a way. He instructed the bushmen how to act and dress before a white woman. He warned me when there was any mischief brewing, and when he got into trouble, which was very frequently, he looked to me for aid. But he never forgot his position.

He was small, slight, 33 years of age, could read and write, and sing Mooly and Sankar hymns. He came to me to employ the day I landed in the bush and left me only when I took the steamer at the coast to return to civilization. On the march, he was the first to start away with the cooking pot on his head; upon my arrival in camp he met me with hot coffee. No matter how discouraging the conditions, he was faithful. Had I raked all Africa I could not have found a more faithful servant. Only those who have met in the bush can appreciate such a one. If native cooks do not like their master, they have a habit of feeding him slow poison. Many a white man makes his cook first partake of the food.

ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Two pioneers who figured in historic events in California died recently. One was George Crook, who came to California with Fremont in 1846, and who helped Marshall construct the famous mill race at Colma, where the placer gold was first found that started the '49 gold rush. The other was Rufus J. Young, who belonged to the Donner party, many of whose members perished miserably from starvation in camp in the high Sierras on the borders of the lake that now bears the name of Donner. Both of these pioneers died in poverty.

Thirty independent wineries in the San Joaquin valley have reached an agreement with the California Wine association by which prices for wine grapes will be at least $2 a ton higher than last year. The price last year ranged from $5 to $6 a ton, which in many cases would not pay the cost of picking. The average price of $2 will make grapes profitable and will result in a large vintage.

There is much discussion now of the project to bore a tunnel through the Sierras, a farmer living nearby found the dog to the secluded spot where he found its mate weak from hunger and exposure. The dog that had saved its companion's life wagged its tail joyfully when the farmer bound up the wounds and carried the maimed animal to its master.

Heavy rains have removed all fear of a famine, assured California farmers of probably the largest crop on record. In the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, encouraged by the high price of export barley, many ranches have sown under acreage to barley, and the result will be the largest crop in the history of the state. All kinds of fruit have also been improved by the rains. In fact, not for years has the crop outlook been so good as at this season.

Representatives of practically all the counties in California met at Santa Barbara and endorsed San Francisco as the only logical place in which to hold the Panama-Pacific fair in 1915. The claims of San Diego induced a siding of this conference. It is estimated that 1915 San Francisco will have 1,000,000 inhabitants. As it stands today the city would be able to accommodate the crowds that would come to see a fair, as it has more than double the rooms, hotels, restaurants and lodging houses that it had before the big fire. A fund of $5,000,000 will soon be raised to show that there will be no question of money. The people are enthusiastic over the project, and a great world's fair to commemorate the completion of the Panama canal, and the success of the midwinter fair is an earnest of what San Francisco could do when much smaller than it is today.

The Hirsch Fund.

Withdrawal of part or all of the support of the Baron de Hirsch fund from the Educational Alliance classes for children of Yiddish speaking immigrants will be a serious detriment of this first step to Americanization. Louis Marshall, a trustee of the alliance, explains the situation as follows: "There is an inclination on the part of the world-wide movement to give up the day classes. If that is done the Hirsch fund officers think no doubt their contribution might go to other purposes. We would still continue the evening classes, however. Teaching English to these children will not be abandoned."

The Crusade Against Noises.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice's Society for the Prevention of Unnecessary Noise held a meeting recently in Mrs. Rice's apartments in the Hotel Ansonia, New York. The organization is opposed to firecrackers and fireworks, automobile horns, whistles, bells, church chimes, yelling, tin snails, revolvers, canons, muskets, tin horns, the exhaust from the exhaust pipe, shouting, cries of "line up," old clothes and "umbrellas to mend," brass bands and forty-seven other things, all of which are mentioned in the course of the address.

All Broken Down with Backache and Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Matilda Lindemann, 4423 Wentworth Ave., Chicago, Ill., says:

"Twelve years kidney disorders distressed me. My back ached, my appetite was poor, my eyesight failed me and nervousness and dizziness spells afflicted me. Finally my hands and arms got practically paralyzed, and I was so weak I could hardly drag myself across the floor. Doan's Kidney Pills have done wonders for me. I feel strong and sound since using them, my back hardly ever hurts and the other troubles are gone."

Baby Sleepless with Awful Itching.

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing. "Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 19, 1909."

An Albatross Off Soundings.

The capture of a large albatross, weighing five feet from tip to tip of wings, in Wayne County, Indiana, a few days ago, illustrates the wonderful power of flight of this interesting bird. The albatross is a sea bird, and in all probability this specimen was on its way from the Southern Atlantic to the North-Pacific when hunger caused it to come to earth in Indiana. Sailors have encountered the albatross in midocean, a thousand and more miles from land, but so far as is known this is the first time that one of these birds has been found so far inland.—Springfield Union.

DAIRYING.

The paying production of milk is what determines the value of the dairy cow and in order to obtain good paying results, proper care and attention must be given the cow which supplies the milk.

Cleanliness is perhaps the first important factor to be considered and should be considered from all standpoints.

The stables wherein the animals are housed should be well taken care of, in fact so well taken care of that the attendant who enters at the time of milking shall find no disagreeable odor, no damp floors, no dusty feed, as all feed having a tendency to give rise to dust should be carefully sprinkled before feeding the animal; allowing the animal plenty of fresh air and sunlight.

The cleanliness should not be limited to any one source but should be an important factor from all standpoints. The milker should use utmost care, seeing that the garments as well as the hands are in a nice, clean condition and exercising judgement in the care of the animal to be milked, seeing that all milking utensils are well taken care of and the milk placed where it will have access to proper cooling conditions and in this way add to the profit of the product.

The dairy cow is either a money maker or a money loser. If she is in a good, healthy condition and her milk supply profits counteract her actual expense of keeping she is worth the time and trouble of keeping, but, on the other hand should she consume more feed than her profits warrant, get rid of her as there are too many profit producers to be obtained to waste time experimenting, nevertheless it should be remembered that when an animal supplies products beyond necessary amount for sustaining life, it should be fed accordingly, thus preparing the animal to create vitality in order that it may give in return profits due the owner.—By Dr. David Roberts, Waukesha, Wis.

Lovely Time.

"Yes," remarked Mrs. Malaprop-Partington, "we had a lovely time in Venice. There are no cabs there, you know, because the streets are full of water. One hires a chandelier and he crows you about in a dongola."

Field of Honor Commission.

Perhaps wit is stimulated by a slight derangement of the nerves, and good things said on the field of battle are sometimes recorded. When "Bully" Egan fought Curran with pistols the bulky Egan complained that his opponent was as thin as a blade of grass.

"Let my size be chalked out upon your body," said Curran, "and any hits outside of the line shall not count."

It was not good form, however, to make a parade of magnanimity, and the coxcombical practice of firing in the air or "dumb shooting" or "children's play" was strictly prohibited by the rules, of which thirty-six were drawn up by representatives of the five most eminent counties—Galway, Tipperary, Mayo, Sligo and Roscommon—in 1777. They met at the summer assizes at Clonmel and seem to have done their work very gravely and honestly, including a special rule for "simple, unpremeditated encounters with the small sword." There is a large element of absurdity about it all no doubt, but even duelling has had its place as a rough, inefficient test of manhood.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Grand People in London in 1806.

"I came to town on Wednesday and intended to go to the Ancient Music; made a Bungle about my Ticket; it was too late to get it. The Drawing Room was the object yesterday. They made a mistake in my Dress. It was not deep enough for my Mourning, and the glass of my Sedan Chair was not mended. Looked at my Lodgings; found them Abominable. I walked all over the Town till I was, Lord, how tired! Looked in upon the Duchess of Gordon while she took off her Hoop to Dine with the Bedford's."

This was Jane, duchess of Gordon, who rode down the High street of Edinburgh on a pig's back in the days of her wild girlhood and raised recruits for the new highland regiment when other means had failed by allowing each man to take the shilling from between her lips. Hoops were de rigueur for court dress until the days of George IV., although in private life the ladies' skirts had been growing more and more scanty since the days of the French revolution.—From "John Hookham Frere and His Friends," by Gabrielle Festing.

Winning a Violin.

The way M. Ysaye, the great violinist, became the owner of a Guarnerius violin dated 1742 was thus quaintly told by himself:

"The Guarnerius was bought in Paris by a pupil of mine, a charming young woman. I envied her the violin, and fate gave it to me. I teach this pupil, and by and by I meet her sister, a most lovely young woman, with whom I fall in love straightway and marry. Soon I go to my sister-in-law, who was my pupil, and say to her:

"It is time you stop fooling with violin. You will never learn how to play it! I take the liberty of a big brother, but she do not like it for long time. At last she succumb to my experience and wisdom, and she stops playing. Then I say grandiloquently: "I will take the Guarnerius, 1742." I take it, and that is how the violin came into the possession of Ysaye."

They Meant Business.

A Chicago stage manager was telling of amusing incidents of blunders and errors caused by stage fright. In a romantic play recently revived one of the minor characters, a dairymaid, comes forward at the end of the recital of a love romance and comments as follows:

"Hope filled their youth and whetted their hope; they plighted their troth!"

But at one of the performances the girl who played the dairymaid was absent without notice. At the last moment the manager gave the lines to a shepherdess, who had never had lines to speak before and who was excessively nervous when her cue came. This is what the astonished audience heard:

"Hope filled their trough and blighted their love; they whetted their tooth!"

The Hourglass.

Instead of being obsolete and simply an interesting relic, the hourglass in various forms is a twentieth century necessity. A machinist authority points out that for such purposes as timing hardening and tempering heats in twist drill manufacture, where seconds or minutes must be gauged accurately, nothing serves like the hourglass with the right amount of sand. Accuracy to fractions of a second can be had much more easily than by watching the hands of a watch.

He Walked.

"Good afternoon, Miss Brown! Going for a walk? May I go with you?" asked an elderly but ardent admirer of the lady.

"Yes; my doctor says that we must always walk with an object, and I suppose you'll answer the purpose!"

The Exporter.

"Who is your Chicago friend?" "He is a prominent ex-porter."

"What does he export?" "I didn't say he exported anything. He used to be a porter at the hotel where I stopped."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

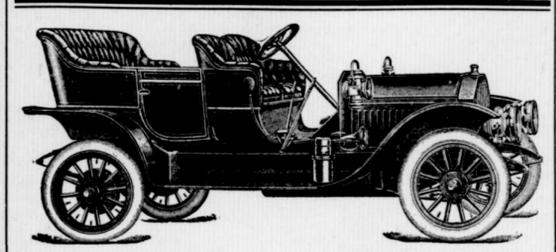

A Way They Have.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "has a way of keepin' der consciences quiet by takin' de minister's advice on Sunday an' de lawyer's advice all de res' o' de week."—Washington Star.
