DEATHS OF THE WEEK

Mrs. Sebastian Schneider, an Early Pioneer of This Village Passes Away Suddenly at Wausau—Kilian Schmidt of St. Kilian Dies.

MRS. ELIZABETH SCHNEIDER

Mrs. Elizabeth Schneider, widow of Sebastian Schneider, died last week Friday morning at the home of her son Simon at Wausau, Wis., at the age of 89 years.

Mrs. Schneider had been staying here in Kewaskum up to a few weeks ago, when she left for Wausau to live with her son. Shortly after her arrival at Wausau, she became seriously ill, followed by her death Friday morning.

Mrs. Schneider was born in Germany on Nov. 14, 1820 and came to this country in 1840, living in New York for a short time and then came to Wisconsin, when she was married to Sebastian Schneider. Her husband preceded her in death 12 years ago.

Deceased is survived by six children, namely: Charles of Elkhart Lake, Sebastian of Marshalltown, Minn., Joseph of New Mexico, Mrs. Susan Janssen of West Bend, Mrs. Louisa Altenhofen of Milwaukee and Sam of Wausau. She also leaves two brothers, P. Plumm of Kewaskum and S. Plumm of Wausau.

The children were all here to attend the funeral, excepting Mrs. Altenhofen, who was unable to attend on account of illness and Jos. Schneider, whose address is not definitely known and could not be notified.

The remains were brought here from Wausau on the Monday morning train and were laid to rest in the Holy Trinity cemetery at 10 A. M. Rev. Ph. J. Vogt officiating. The bereaved relatives have our sympathy.

KILIAN SCHMIDT

Kilian Schmidt, a popular young man of St. Kilian, died at his home last Monday, May 9th at 10:30 A. M., after a lingering illness, aged 41 years.

Deceased was born in town of Wayne on July 8, 1868. He studied telegraphy at Kewaskum and worked as operator, for the C. & N. W. Ry. Co. for 13 years. For a number of years he held a high position in the train dispatcher's office of the North Western Co. at Chicago, but was obliged to resign the position on account of failing health. He then returned home and spent most of his time running a farm and cheese factory. Kilian was well and favorably known, and everybody who had the pleasure of meeting him became his friend. He was a social, kindhearted and intelligent young man, one whose company was always sought by the young people. He leaves to mourn his aged father, four brothers and two sisters, namely: Mike of Allenton, J. P. of Milwaukee, Anton of Marshfield, Jos. and Lizzie at home and Mary, Mrs. John Emmer of Allenton. The funeral was held at St. Kilian, Thursday, at 10 A. M. with Rev. Burelbach officiating. The funeral was largely attended. The pall bearers were: And. Bonlander, Jacob Batzler, Anton J. Miller, Peter Hurth, Geo. German, John Ruplinger, William Emmer and William Batzler. The bereaved relatives have our heartfelt sympathy.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

Three young men from Richfield were arrested by Deputy Game Warden, Geo. Hall, last week Tuesday for fishing with a net and were fined $25 and costs each.

George Portz of Port Washington passed away at the home of his brother-in-law, Dr. H. Schuhman, in the city of Hartford, on Monday, May 2, 1910. Deceased was 44 years, 5 months and 13 days old.

Rev. A. T. Reninger, who has been pastor of the Catholic congregation at St. Lawrence for the past five years, has been appointed pastor of the St. Boniface congregation in Milwaukee and left for that city last Saturday to take charge of his new pastorate. No successor has as yet been appointed to succeed Rev. Reninger at St. Lawrence.—Hartford Times.

LOCALS LOSE OPENER

Costly Errors are Responsible for Defeat in the Opening Game—Schleisingerville Defeats Richfield.

The local ball club opened the season at Fond du Lac Sunday and were defeated by the Aherns of that city by a score of 7 to 5. Last Sunday was the opening day of the Central-Wisconsin League, while Kewaskum and Fond du Lac opposed each other, Richfield and Schleisingerville were fighting for supremacy at Schleisingerville.

The attendance at the Fond du Lac game was very small, but enthusiastic. What the reason is for having a small attendance is hard for the Fond du Lac management to understand.

Ransom and Zickert were the batteries for the Aherns, while Manske and Jordan were on the slab for Kewaskum. The latter pitched the best game of the two and should have had an easy victory, only for a few costly errors.

The locals outbatted the Aherns. It looked like a walkaway for Kewaskum, for in the first inning two runs were scored on two hits and a bunt, but it did not take long when the Aherns were on their heels, scoring two runs in their half of the second on errors by Koch and Backus. In the 3rd the locals scored one more run on hits by Koch, Rosenheimer and Taylor. In the fifth is when things took a turn. After two men were out Backus fumbled an easy grounder, letting a man reach first, after which the Aherns found Manske for three hits scoring three runs totaling them 5. In the 7th once more with two down and an error by Backus, followed by a 2-base hit, allowed the Fondy boys to score two more runs. In the ninth the locals made a very hard effort to win. Taylor drew a pass, Urban, who batted for Manske, sacrificed, Jordan doubled scoring Taylor, Schaefer sacrificed, Schmidt got a single scoring Jordan, Schmidt stole second, but was unable to score as Backus was an easy out.

The features of the game were the fielding of Taylor for Kewaskum and Waller, third baseman, for Fond du Lac and the pitching of Manske for Kewaskum.

NOTES:

Manske is certainly some pitcher.

Taylor proved to be the star of the day.

Jordan got a pretty two bagger in the ninth.

Most all members of the Theresa ball team witnessed the game.

The baseball season will open on the home grounds Sunday, May 22. Schleisingerville will be here to oppose the locals.

Theresa plays Fond du Lac at Fond du Lac to-morrow. This will be Theresa's first game. Schleisingerville will have an open day.

To-morrow the locals go to Richfield for the second game of the season. Manske and Jordan will be the batteries for the locals, while Laubenheimer and Laubenheimer will perform for Richfield.

SCHLEISINGERVILLE WINS

The game between Schleisingerville and Richfield was won by the former by a score of 7 to 4. Batters.—Theisen and Theisen, Laubenheimer and Laubenheimer.

Married.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Mathias church last Tuesday, May 10th, when Mr. Gerhard Peters of the town of West Bend was married to Miss Emma Fellenz of the town of Scott, Rev. Father Joseph Thuille tied the nuptial knot. The bride attired in a very pretty and effective white silk gown was attended by her sister, Alma, as maid of honor, and Miss Kathrine Barth, a friend of the bride acted as bridesmaid. All carried bouquets of carnations and ferns. The groom was attended by his brother, Michael, and Wm. Fellenz, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony the newly married couple repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held with only near relatives present.

Those present were: Rev. Jos. Thuille, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Engelbert Peters and son of Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. John Peters and sons, John and Andrew, and daughter, Mary, Mr. Landvatter, son Alvin and daughter Selma of West Bend; Joe Peters of Michigan, Miss Elsie Feiereisen of Barton, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Fellenz and son, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Staeger and son, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fellenz and family, Miss Margaret Schladweiler and Joe, Schaeffer of Scott; Mr. and Mrs. John Berres, Hillard Heriges and son, Edward, of St. Michaels; Mary and Joe, Dworschak of New Fane and Miss Frances Schiltz of Beechwood.

The day was spent very pleasantly in playing music and games. The young couple, who are very popular and well known throughout this vicinity will reside on a farm near West Bend. Their many friends wish them a long and prosperous future.

CONGRESS IN SESSION.

In the Senate.

Among the bills passed on the 4th by the Senate was one appropriating $155,000,000 for pensions. Other measures passed modified the law relating to money orders and registered letters and authorized the naturalization of aliens who serve in the navy.

Senator Simmons delivered a speech condemning the method of the department of justice in its prosecution of the cotton pools.

Senator Dixon on the 5th gave voice to a complaint against what he asserted was the practice of characterizing as "insurgent" every Senator who did not agree with what the so-called regulars demanded. He declared that the "regulars" themselves were as much inclined as others to ally themselves with the Democrats whenever an advantage was gained by so doing.

Senator Bourne of Oregon, landing the election laws of his state, provoked a general discussion of representative government, in the course of which Senator Bacon entered a vigorous protest against the present method of selecting officeholders in the south.

As a remedy for these complaints, Senator Carter suggested the elimination from politics of 50,000 postmasters of the United States.

The postoffice appropriation bill, carrying about $240,000,000, was passed by the Senate on the 6th without amendment. As the result of this action a conference will be held on this bill.

A large number of bills were passed, including one to provide for the division of the lands in the Crow Indian reservation and one granting pensions of $12 a month to nurses who served in the Civil war.

The Senate was not in session on the 7th.

Previous to adjournment at 3 o'clock on account of the death of King Edward VII, the Senate devoted two hours to the consideration of the railroad bill.

Senator Overman of North Carolina on the 9th spoke in favor of the long and short haul clause of the bill, while Senator Piles of Washington opposed that provision of the measure.

Earlier in the day Senator Stone of Missouri introduced a resolution instructing the committee on postoffices and post roads to make inquiry into the propriety of the use of franking in circulating pamphlets in support of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. The resolution was referred to the postoffice committee under a promise of a speedy report, there being some indication that the inquiry might take on a broader scope and that the misuse of the franking privilege generally might be entered upon.

Continuing the consideration of the railroad bill, the Senate on the 10th heard arguments by Senator Bristow in support of the Dixon amendment prohibiting a greater charge for short than for long hauls on the railroads, and by Senators Lodge and Piles against it.

There were many interruptions and much sharp colloquy. Toward the close of the session a resolution authorizing an investigation into alleged abuses of the franking privilege was adopted.

In the House.
The entire session of the House on the 4th was devoted to the consideration of bills relating to Indian lands.

The railroad bill was before the House during the entire session on the 5th and many amendments were offered and voted upon. An amendment by Mr. Knowland of California, providing that when a railroad reduces its rates, because of water competition it shall not raise them unless the interstate commerce commission finds that the proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition, was adopted.

The House practically concluded on the 6th with the consideration of the administration railroad bill for the adoption of amendments before adjournment and agreed that a final vote would be taken next Tuesday. The session authorizing mergers between railroads was struck out by a vote of 131 to 128. Efforts of Democrats to strike out the sections relating to capitalization of railroads were ineffectual.

A sharp exchange between Speaker Cannon and Representative Shackelford of Missouri over an alleged breach of order by the latter in a speech of St. Louis yesterday continued under the former regime featured the session of the House on the 7th. Mr. Shackelford complained of "coercion" by the speaker and asked if he were to be "traded" and "bullied" by the speaker. He then repeatedly called the Missouriian to order, but overruled an objection by members of the committee which investigated the situation in the St. Louis suburb, and Mr. Shackelford spoke an hour. A personal tribute to Speaker Cannon in commemoration of his seventy-fourth birthday was expressed for the House by Democratic Leader Clark and replied to by the speaker. Several minor bills on the private calendar were passed. The House adopted a resolution of sympathy for the family of the late King Edward and the British people, and as a "further mark of respect" adjourned.

In the House legislation relating to the District of Columbia occupied the entire session on the 9th.

By a vote of 200 to 126 the House on the 10th passed the administration railroad bill, with many of the original provisions stricken out. A proposition to revise section 12 relating to the acquisition of competing lines was voted down before the bill was finally passed on its passage. Some of the New England Republicans joined with the Democrats in voting down that provision. The bill now goes to the Senate, where a bill similarly introduced as an administration measure has been pending for nearly three months. The House passed several resolutions calling for identity of the real purchasers of the Philippine friar lands and adopted the conference report on the bill to create the bureau of mines and mining, which now goes to the President for approval.

Clay Mixed with Cement.

To increase the water tightness of concrete, especially to (lean) mixtures, clay has been added. The clay must be free from all vegetable matter, and when added must be in a finely powdered state. The amount to be added must vary with the mixture; for ordinary farm work add about 2 to 5 per cent. of the weight of sand used in the mixture. Mix dry with the cement.

GEO. BRUMDER DIES SUDDENLY OF APOPLEXY

PIONEER PUBLISHER IS STRICKEN IN HIS GRAND AVENUE HOME AND PASSES AWAY.

DEATH WHOLLY UNEXPECTED.

Sons Are Called from Their Offices When Dr. A. Bernhard Foresees the End.

WAS KNOWN THROUGHOUT STATE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 9, 1910.—George Brumder, pioneer Milwaukee publisher and probably the best known German-American resident of Wisconsin, died suddenly in his home, 1728 Grand avenue, at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Death was wholly unexpected. Mr. Brumder had been in apparent good health. A few days ago he contracted a cold that proved more or less stubborn. However, he seemed on the road to recovery early this morning. At 9 o'clock he was suddenly stricken.

Dr. A. Bernhard, 1300 Grand avenue, was hastily summoned by telephone. His efforts were useless, however. Mr. Brumder died shortly after the physician's arrival.

Members of the Brumder family were hastily summoned. They include Col. William C. George F. Herman and Herbert Brumder and Mrs. George P. Mayer, Mrs. William Maercker and Miss Emma Brumder.

Mr. Brumder was 71 years old. His Milwaukee career was one of early struggle, stern adversity and thereafter rapid rise to business, financial and social success. For years he has been a leading figure in German-Americanism in Wisconsin.

Tributes Are Offered.

"The news of Mr. Brumder's death is both a surprise and a grief to me," said Judge John C. Ludwig, shortly before noon. "I had known Mr. Brumder for a long time. My chief impression of him was that he was wonderfully kind-hearted and possessed a vast fund of common sense and business sagacity. His treatment of those who served, or had served him in any capacity, was worthy of emulation. He was very charitable and the community loses a good man."

"George Brumder was a conspicuous type of the self made man," said Chief Justice Joseph G. Donnelly of the circuit court. "His life is an object lesson to our youth. From the emigrant lad, practically friendless and penniless, he raised himself by energy and enterprise to wealth and influence. He worked and held through long years the confidence not only of his own people, but of the whole community."

"Milwaukee, which has so greatly benefited by his life, sincerely mourns his death."

Without Fortune or Friends.

George Brumder was born in Germany in 1839. He came to America, and directly to Milwaukee, in 1857.

Upon his arrival he was without fortune and without influence. He worked, in his earlier days, with his hands. He labored as a carpenter, at the first; gradually he built up a trade, then, in what was then a small village, he engaged in the publishing and book-binding business. He succeeded instantly. In 1873 influential German-Americans formed the German Protestant printing association and began the publication of Die Germania. In time Mr. Brumder became owner and proprietor of the paper.

He began to develop it at once. He devoted his best energies to its building up. He suspended the publication of the daily and devoted himself almost entirely to the weekly. His success was immediate. The Germania became a recognized organ of the Lutheran church, gained hosts of friends throughout Wisconsin and, in time, became the most influential German publication, probably, in the United States—certainly in the west.

In 1891 the daily edition was revived. The paper was again printed each night. It gained constantly in circulation and in influence. Thus George Brumder's successful venture that had been practically abandoned as worthless by its first promoters.

In 1897 Mr. Brumder purchased Die Abend-Post, then published by a company headed by Paul Bechtner. He combined the two dailies, calling the double publication Die Germania und Abend-Post.

Erects Germania Building.
Then Mr. Brumder set about providing a suitable home for the large publishing establishment he had built up. So, early in 1897 the Germania building, West Water, Second and Wells streets, was completed. In it Mr. Brumder carried on his business, not only the publication of his newspapers, but also the maintaining of the Brumder book store which was, at one time, one of the largest in Milwaukee.

Later Mr. Brumder secured the Coleman interests and Der Milwaukee Herald and Seebote, was added to the Brumder publications. Thus today the Germania publishing company rules the Milwaukee Herald, a morning paper; the Germania, an evening paper, and the Sonntag's Post, which is virtually a combination of the Herald, Germania and Abend-Post.

At various times Mr. Brumder has published Das Deutsche Volksblatt, Hausfreund and The Home Library.

One of the early Brumder residences was on Tenth street. About fifteen years ago Mr. Brumder built the present home at 1728 Grand avenue.

Demopolis Institution Suspends—Capital of $95,000 and Deposits Amounting to $250,000.

MOBILE, Ala., May 9.—News was received here this afternoon that the City Bank and Trust company of Demopolis, Ala., had suspended this morning and closed its doors. The bank had a capital and surplus of $95,000 and deposits to the amount of $250,000.

The Championship Fight.

Mayor Gaynor, discussing at a dinner in New York certain trade inaccuracies that had recently been called to his notice, smiled and said:

"Jeffries and Johnson will soon settle the heavy weight champion question, and meanwhile, here in New York, a number of men are earnestly struggling to see who shall be the champion lightweight grocer."

Ploughing by Searchlight.

Several score immense power breaking outfits are at work in western South Dakota, and at points in the Missouri valley east of the river breaking the prairie at an astonishing rate, which means that many thousands of acres of heretofore raw prairie land in those sections will this year for the first time be devoted to crops.

Some of the power outfits have been provided with day and night crews and with immense searchlights, which enable them to be operated in the night as well as in the day, they being kept in operation continuously throughout the twenty-four hours.—Sioux Falls Cor. St. Paul Dispatch.

Duke of Connaught May Rule Canada.

LONDON, May 10.—The Daily Express authority for the statement that Earl Grey will be succeeded as governor general of Canada by the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward. It is added that it was the particular wish of Edward that the duke take the position and the government agreed to appoint him.

KING EDWARD'S FUNERAL WILL BE IMPOSING

CORTEGE NEXT TUESDAY TO WESTMINSTER HALL TO BE MILITARY SPECTACLE.

CABINET HOLDS A MEETING.

Question of Future Policy of the Government Touched Upon, but No Announcement Is Made.

CHURCHES TO HOLD SERVICES.

LONDON, May 10.—The city is again assuming a comparatively normal aspect. Except for the appearance of mourning emblems along the streets, the fluttering of flags at half mast, and the drawn blinds at the leading clubhouses and in the government offices, a stranger visiting London today would find little outward evidence of the momentous occurrences which have attracted the attention of the world within the past three days.

Meantime, however, preparations are going forward for the imposing state funeral which will be given to the late monarch. Thus far, little of the detail has been made public.

Cabinet Holds Meeting.

Chief attention today was centered in the first meeting of the cabinet since the return of Premier Asquith following the death of King Edward. It does not appear, however, that the ministers gave any special consideration to the grave political questions now pending. They discussed the appointment of a committee to revise the civil list as is necessitated by the change of sovereignty.

The question of the future policy of the government in regard to the constitutional issue was touched upon, but if any conclusion was reached no announcement to that effect was made.

Contrary to the original intention that the body of King Edward should be quietly and privately removed from the Buckingham palace to Westminster hall, on next Tuesday, it has now been decided that the removal shall be accompanied with considerable ceremonial and the cortege will be an imposing military spectacle. The House of Commons will assemble in the morning and repair in a body to Westminster hall to receive the body.

Service at Abbey.

Following the three days during which the body will lie in state, it is possible that instead of the funeral procession proceeding direct to Paddington station, the casket will be borne to Westminster abbey for the reading there of the first part of the burial service. According to this plan the service would be completed later in the day at Windsor castle.

All the churches throughout the United Kingdom are arranging to hold memorial services upon the day of the state funeral.

ARBITRATOR IS NAMED.

Judge William Lea Chambers of Washington to Act in Controversy With Railroads.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—Judge William Lea Chambers of this city today was appointed as third arbitrator of the controversy between forty-nine railroads, operating in the territory west of Chicago, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

Judge Chambers was selected by Chairman Knapp of the interstate commerce commission and Dr. Charles P. Neill, commissioner of labor, the mediators under the Erdman act. He will leave Washington for Chicago tomorrow morning and it is expected that the arbitration proceedings will begin in that city on Friday.

The questions to be arbitrated will be those of wages and conditions and hours of labor.

KAISER'S GUEST AT MANEUVERS

American Is First Civilian Who Has Ever Seen German Troops in Action.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11.—Theodore Roosevelt today accepted by cable the appointment by President Taft to be special ambassador to represent the United States at the funeral of King Edward in London, May 20. The cablegrams exchanged between the President and Col. Roosevelt were not made public.

Russian Express in London.

LONDON, May 11.—The kin of the British royal family are arriving here to attend the funeral of King Edward.

Empress Dowager Marie of Russia, a sister of Queen Mother Alexandra, reached here today, accompanied by Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovich, younger brother of Emperor Nicholas, who will be the official representative of the Russian government at the obsequies.

The empress dowager and the grand duke were met at the railway station by King George and Queen Mary, who drove with them to Buckingham palace.

Parliament met this afternoon to pay a national tribute to the memory of King Edward and to welcome his successor, King George, the messenger from the new monarch, in which he announced the death of his father and his own succession, was read in both houses, which subsequently adopted addresses of condolence and congratulations to the King.

Roosevelt at Berlin.

BERLIN, May 11.—Col. Roosevelt in the company of Emperor William today witnessed a mimic battle in which 12,000 men of the German military engaged in the vicinity of Doberitz.

It had been feared that the former President would be obliged to forego this part of the entertainment planned for him because of the condition of the throat which is still somewhat sensitive, but this morning Prof. Fraenkel, the throat specialist, made another examination and announced that Mr. Roosevelt would suffer no inconvenience through being for a few hours in the open air immediately after breakfast. Mr. Roosevelt, attended by Lieut.-Col. Von Koerner, motored to Doberitz, where at 9 o'clock he was joined by the Emperor.

Placed in the riding costume and provided with a superb thoroughbred from the imperial stables, His Majesty also took a mount, and together they rode over the maneuvering field of some twenty square miles and observed the working out of the army problem.

The scene of the evolutions was admirably adapted to bring out the resources of officers and men. The topography was varied, open tracts being skirted with thick forests and broken by streams, rough elevations and swamps.

The maneuvers were witnessed also by a party which included Emperor Augustus, Crown Prince Frederick William, Crown Princess Cecilie, Princess Victoria Louise, Prince Adolph, Kermit Roosevelt, and Henry White, former American ambassador to France.

Tribute from Emperor.

The operations completed, the officers above the rank of major who had taken part in the maneuvers assembled on Muehlenberg hill to hear the criticisms of the Emperor and the umpires. When these comments had been made, the Emperor in a loud voice called out:

"My friend Roosevelt: 'I have been greatly pleased to show you some of our German troops. You are the first civilian who has reviewed our soldiers.'"

Turning to the officers his majesty added:

"We are honored today in having here the distinguished colonel of the Rough Riders."

Parting salutations were then exchanged and the imperial party left in automobiles for Potsdam, while Mr. Roosevelt, Kermit and Mr. White returned to this city.

EXPLOSION ON BIG WARSHIP REPORTED.

London Hears Rumor That There Has Been Serious Accident on Flagship of British Fleet.

LONDON, May 11.—Reports are current at Dover of a serious explosion on the flagship London of the British Atlantic battleship fleet in Norwegian waters. The reports cannot be confirmed here. The London is a twin screw battleship of 15,000 tons. Her captain is Alfred E. M. Chatfield. The flagship was built at Portsmouth, being launched in 1890 and completed in 1902. Her armament consists of four 12-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, sixteen 12-pounder, eight 3-pounder and machine guns. Her complement is 757 officers and men.

BULLDOGS TEAR WOMAN

Sight of Milk Bottles Is Believed to Have Maddened the Beasts to Man-Eating Frenzy.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 11.—With her face, throat, arms and body lacerated by the bites of two bulldogs, Mrs. Mary Ryan, 72 years old, is reported dying at Grace hospital today.

Mrs. Ryan, carrying a bottle of milk and returning to her home Tuesday night, had reached a point in front of the home of Albert Bixby, owner of the two dogs. The animals, which have been dieted recently on fresh milk, rushed out and attacked her. The contents of the bottle carried by Mrs. Ryan is supposed to account for the attack.

When neighbors reached the scene one dog was cowering at the aged woman's feet while the fangs of the other were buried in her arm.

Jason's Mild Protest.

Walter J. Knight, who has a fund of good darky stories, surrendered this one yesterday:

"Jason, black as the ace of spades, was tried for murder in Mississippi, and found guilty. He was led before the judge on a sultry day late in July for sentence."

"Jason," said the court, "you have been found guilty of murder by a jury of your peers. Have you anything to say before sentence is imposed upon you?"

"Jason had nothing to say. There was a pause, and the judge proceeded.

"It therefore becomes my painful duty to sentence you to be hanged by the neck until you are dead, on the 13th day of August."

"There was another pause, and Jason, shifting from one foot to the other, looked up.

"'Sho'ly yo' all don't mean this comin' Augus', does yo' judge?' he asked."—Newark Star.

FIRE UPON REGULARS

CUMMINS AND DOLLIVER RALLY IOWA INSURGENTS.

One Charges That Taft Defended Tariff Law With Figures Juggled By Its Authors.

DES MOINES, Ia., May 11.—In two notable speeches delivered here Tuesday night in the Coliseum, the occasion being a rallying of the insurgent forces of the state for the struggle with the stand-patters in the gubernatorial campaign, President Taft, Senator Aldrich, Speaker Cannon and the type of politicians which they represent were made the objects of vigorous attacks by Senator Cummins and Dolliver.

Senator Dolliver confined his remarks to a blasting analysis of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. He took the measure up schedule by schedule and denounced it as a bill deliberately framed to exploit the people of the United States in the interest of the trusts. He went further and declared that President Taft in his Wisconsin speech had used as his principal argument in favor of the new tariff law a table of figures which was not only false and deceptive, but was prepared with the deliberate intent of deceiving the country.

The intimation ran all through Senator Dolliver's speech that he regarded President Taft as a party to a fraud and Senator Aldrich and Congressman Payne as the authors, not only of the "iniquitous" tariff law, but of the "juggled" table of figures by which it was sought to defend it.

Senator Cummins' remarks were confined more to the local situation. He denounced his political enemies in Iowa as being typified by the "midnight prowler with his dark lantern and his jimmy," and he invited the Republicans who had supported him for the senatorship to rally under the insurgent banner in the state and support the insurgent candidates in order that by electing them they might give aid and comfort to the insurgent representatives they had sent to Washington.

GLACIERS THEIR TEXT

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN PARTY TO STUDY ALASKAN STREAMS.

Prof. Martin and Party Will Seek Data for Benefit of the Commercial Engineers.

MADISON, Wis., May 11.—[Special.]—Prof. L. Martin of the University of Wisconsin, and party will visit Alaska during the summer to study the movements of glaciers in the vicinity of Mt. Logan and Mt. Elias and the Copper River district to obtain data that will enable engineers and others engaged in developing the new country to work with a better understanding of the glacial phenomena that have proved a hindrance to them from the start.

The party, which is being organized under the auspices of the National Geographic society, will include E. F. Bean and F. E. Williams, formerly assistants to Prof. Martin and W. B. Lewis, a topographer in the employ of the United States Geological survey, who has obtained a furlough in order to accompany the party. An engineer, a photographer, and a cook will complete the party.

Leaving early in June, the expedition will spend four months in Alaska, returning just before the opening of the university in the fall. They will proceed first to Seattle, Wash., and thence directly to Yakutat bay, just south of Mt. Elias. The greater part of the summer will be spent in the vicinity of the Wrangell mountains and the lower copper river, the center of the great copper mining district of southern Alaska.

The engineers who are at present constructing a railway into this country, with a view to making the great copper and other mineral deposits accessible, have encountered serious difficulties with glaciers. At one point, the meeting place of three of these rivers of ice, it has been necessary to lay the track over the ice itself for a considerable distance. Ignorance of glacial eccentricities makes this alternative an unstable and precarious one at the best.

Further complications arose in the shape of an earthquake which occurred in the region in 1890 and made itself felt over a large surrounding area. The effect of the earthquake was to shake down large quantities of snow into the glacier beds, adding the impetus of its weight to the slow moving masses and unsettling glacial movements from their normal state which the law has not yet regained. Following the earthquake one glacier moved two miles before settling back to its former velocity.

Buyers Notable Paintings.
"The Chinese Merchants," by Shilde Hassam, which recently attracted considerable attention during the exhibition of the Society of Ten American Painters at the Montross galleries, has just been acquired by Charles L. Freer of Detroit, a collector for the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C., where it will be placed in the Freer collection of paintings. The artist is a National Academician and is usually represented at the National Academy and other important art exhibitions of this country. He is also a member of the Society of Ten American Painters, a coterie of New York and Boston artists, whose names are associated with a high quality of art.—New York World.

Laurel Leaf Embroideries.

Every season the Paris embroiderers adopt one particular leaf for their designs, and according to the way the foliage is reproduced the leaf is enlarged or reduced far beyond its natural dimensions. There was once a vogue for poppy foliage and flowers, followed later on by another for tulips. The art nouveau craze brought irises and orchids into fashion. There was a period also when ivy and woodbine were mixed. This year, when so many of the gowns are First Empire, our artists have drawn chiefly laurel leaves intermingled at times with various Greek designs and the traditional key pattern. A lovely scarf, specially made for an American blond, was in pale green net incrustated with long satin laurel leaves of a much darker shade delicately outlined with black.—The Gentlewoman.

RATE OF WAGES IN NEW YORK.

Unions Give Out a List of What They Think Men Should Get.

The New York Building Trades Council has prepared a scale of the prevailing rate of wages from a union standpoint which is to be submitted to New York city officials. The scale is based on the union rate of wages which the comptroller in the case of the steamfitters, who are on strike for $5.50 a day, says has not been proved to be the prevailing rate. Some of the rates in the schedule, which is as follows, are the same as the mechanics have been receiving for some time, the rates being for a working day of eight hours.

Asbestos workers, $4.50; helpers, $2.90; bluestone cutters, flaggers, bridge and curb setters, $4.50; boiler makers and iron ship builders, $5; carpenters and framers, $5; cabinetmakers, $4; cement and concrete masons, $5; derickmen and riggers, $3.75; decorators and gliders, $4.50; decorative art glass workers, $5; elevator constructors, $5; electrical workers, $4.50; electrical fixture workers, $4.50; stationary engineers, $4.50; portable hoisting engineers, $3.50; house shapers, movers and sheath pliers, $3.50; housemiths and bridgemen, $4.80; and after July 1, 1910, $5; metallic lathers, $4.80; and after January 1, 1911, $5; marble cutters and setters, $5; marble carvers, $5.50; marble polishers, $4.50; marble sawyers, $4.75; marble bed rubbers, $5; mosaic workers, $4.50; machine stone workers, $4; machinists, $4.50; plate and sheet glass glaziers, $5.50; plasterers, $5.50; plumbers and gas fitters, $5.50; painters, $4; riggers, $4; roofers, $4; sheet metal workers, copper-smiths, tinsmiths and metal roofers, $5; steamfitters, $5.50; tile layers, $5; upholsterers, $4.08; wood lathers, $4.50.

In private work the schedules for all the building trades call for double wages for overtime and Sunday and holiday work.

D. A. R. Suit in Court.

The right of the executive head of the Daughters of the American Revolution to dismiss an employe has been taken into the District of Columbia courts by Miss Agnes Gerald, a clerk in Continental hall, the national headquarters. Her services were terminated by Mrs. Matthew T. Scott at the end of February, but as she did not recognize the right of the president general to dismiss her, she continued at her post until she was deposed by a resolution passed by the board of management April 16. She alleges she has not been paid since her dismissal by the president general and sues for $170.

A BITTER REVENGE.

BY GWENDOLINE MILLER.

"Well," said Hermon slowly, "I did have just that same feeling when I first met him again. That cold, chilly hand of his, so like an Oriental's, had a detestable feeling, but really the chap has such a sort of fascination about him you can't help yielding to it. And yet at times there is a sudden look or a gesture that repels one."

"Oh, perhaps it is only my fancy! I hate saying anything nasty about a person; I like to feel I could trust all the people about me. I feel rather depressed tonight. Father says you will all be off at the end of this week. He is expecting instructions every minute. I dislike him going off alone. I go to the hills, to my aunt, Lady Fortesque, and then next year dad's command will be over and we go home for good."

The next day the orders did come, and all was excitement and bustle inside the white walls of cantonments and the huts of the native lines.

After a brief leave-taking the gallant little band started for the frontier.

Laurence had bidden Norah a hurried "Good-bye," but managed to whisper—

"Remember, I want to ask you a question when I come back, don't forget me."

Norah, with the tears in her eyes, answered brokenly—

"Heaven keep you, I will remember! Good-bye!"

Some evenings later the three school-fellows were sitting eating a nondescript meal in a wretched Dak bungalow. Monkton had a Hindu servant, who had been in his family's service for years, and was devoted to his young master. He had exerted his energies, and had concocted a fairly savory repast. That evening, as they sat smoking after dinner, Laurence, who always felt there was something malignant in his eyes when they met his, remarked slowly—

"I should not like to make that man of yours an enemy, Vivian."

Monkton started, and after a few words of amused incredulity changed the subject.

The next morning all were up and ready to start.

"Where the dickens is Laurence Harcourt?" said Capt. Hermon. "Have you seen him, Monkton?"

"No, I haven't seen him since he went off with you last night. I slept in the other end of the bungalow. But we shall miss the train unless we do a quick march."

"Yes, I know, I know, and the general will be furious. I must go and see what has happened to him—and he clanked away down the gloomy passages of the now deserted bungalow."

He looked into the room where they had dined the night before. Empty! He shouted "Harcourt!" at the top of his voice.

"Can he have gone out for a walk early, the young fool!" he colloquized. "I will just look in his room, but he can't be there. My voice would have awakened the dead!"

He burst open the door of Laurence's room and started back with a cry of horror on his lips.

There was Laurence Harcourt lying helpless and inert on his tumbled bed.

"Good heavens, Laurence, what is the matter?"

He bent over him and felt his pulse and lifted his eyelids and peered at the senseless pupils.

"Great heavens! Drunk—dead drunk!"

There was no doubt about it. Hermon moved away from the bed, and as he did so his foot touched something that rolled away. He bent down quickly and picked up an empty brandy bottle.

"The young fool! What could have made him do it?"

At that moment, as he stood debating what to do, he heard his name called angrily in the courtyard outside. He went quickly to the window and flung it open.

"All right! Laurence Harcourt is ill, touch of the sunstroke, I think. I can't get him to move," he shouted down, and turned back into the room.

He took up the empty bottle and flung it into a doorway as he passed.

"Ill, you say? Can't he ride?" queried the general. "Here, I must go and see what is wrong with the lad."

A thought of his daughter, who he knew liked the boy, flashed across him. Hermon led the way up the dusky passage.

"General, I say, I fear the poor fellow is awful bad, and it is not the sun. Oh, can't we keep it to ourselves?"

"Keep what?" asked the bewildered general.

"Well, I hardly like to say, but Laurence is drunk."

"Drunk!" gasped the general, as he stumbled into the close, stuffy room, still reeking with the fumes of brandy.

"Yes, there, lay Laurence Harcourt, drunk. The general stood and gazed down at him, a hundred thoughts rushing through his brain at once.

Found drunk on active service! Incapable of leading his men, incapable of even standing! What did it mean? Why, it meant disgrace, degradation, and being cashiered—a young life spoilt, a father's head bowed with the dishonor. Gen. Cameron turned away with a heavy sigh.

"We must go. Whom can we leave with him?" he said.

"I will ask Monkton if he will spare his Hindu. I think he will; they are old friends."

George Hermon explained hurriedly to Monkton what had happened and he readily agreed to leave his servant behind in charge. His eyes glittered strangely as he dismounted and called the Hindu to him.

A quiet "Yes, Sahib, you can trust me," reached George Hermon, and then they a mounted and dattered away from the lonely old Dak bungalow, standing gloomy and mysterious in its tangled mass of compound. Palm trees, plantains, huge tamarind and orange trees were growing together in wild confusion. What tales, what tragedies that Dak house could tell if walls could speak!

When Laurence Harcourt came to his senses it was to find himself under close arrest, and with orders to be taken back to Delhi. The general had wired instructions to the nearest cantonment, and Laurence found he was to be taken there en route to Delhi to have his case inquired into. He felt dazed and very shaky, and thought for a time it was a touch of the sun, but soon the heavy feeling passed off. He was surprised to see Hassan, Monkton's Hindu servant, talking to some soldiers, who evidently seemed guarding his door. What could it mean? He called Hassan feebly.

"What is the matter? Have I been ill?" he asked.

"Yes, Sahib. Too much brandy, Sahib Cameron said, and they have gone. I was drunk after you till it had passed."

And Hassan, as he turned away, had a malignant light in his dark eyes.

"Too much brandy! What do you mean?" gasped Laurence, the blood rushing to his face. "How dare you? I had no brandy last night. It must be the sun. I feel like it. What are those men doing there?" he asked, turning his head towards the soldiers who were listening to every word. "Did you think I should be violent?"

"They are here by Sahib Cameron's orders." And the Hindu shrugged his shoulders with true native humility.

"You go when well with them to the cantonment at Maloor, and then to Delhi. You under arrest, Sahib."

An uncomfortable thrill went through Laurence. What did it all mean?

"I tell you, fellow, I had no brandy. I had nothing but lemon-and-soda, and a yes, oh, some coffee last night! If it is not the sun, I have been drugged. By heaven, I have!"

Hassan shook his head, smiling grimly.

"What this bottle, then, Sahib?" holding up the empty brandy bottle.

Laurence felt too ill to argue, and, feeling he was in the man's power, made no answer, so wearily rose and dressed, and soon after they started on their way back, back on the road he had traveled only yesterday so full of hope and life. Now he was going back under arrest!

"Drunk on active service!" Good heaven, what did it mean? He had read the written instructions and saw that what Hassan had said was correct. They had left that worthy bowing ironically at the door of the Dak bungalow. The sun glared down on the wide trunk road lined with magnificent forest trees, huge peepul and the teak with its enormous leaves. The hills lay all blue behind them.

Nothing stirred but a family of sleek monkeys which lumbered lazily from tree to tree. Laurence found himself watching them as he had nothing else to think of. When some great blow has fallen it is the trifles of life that seem to eat into our soul. All was over, he knew it! The career he had looked forward to from his boyhood.

Drunk! How the word kept thundering through his brain! What would Norah say?

What would his father think, his dear old dad, far away in England, so proud of his soldier son? The general and Hermon had seen him, so Hassan had told him, and said they both thought him drunk.

Cashiered! That is what it meant. He could never hold his head up again among his kind. Always that dreadful sentence, "The man who was cashiered, you know!" It rang unceasingly in his ears, and try as he would he could not prove it otherwise and establish his innocence of the charge.

No, he could not even at the court martial at Delhi, where he sat all day in the sickening heat, where the insects buzzed away with their irritating zig-zig in the drowsy silence of the waiting court.

"His majesty has no further need of your services!" The words fell on his dazed senses, and at last all was over and he left the court a dishonored man, his only comfort a sheet of paper without even a signature.

"I believe in you and your story. The truth will be known some day. Be comforted and hope."

It was like the true brave-hearted girl to send a word of sympathy to the broken, jaded man. He knew it was Norah's handwriting, and with a muttered "Heaven bless her!" he put the slip of paper with his mother's portrait and went into those far-off tracts of unexplored jungle, the wide, sun-scorched plains of central India.

Six years had passed since Laurence Harcourt had disappeared into the unknown. Very soon the scandal was an old story in the busy life of India, and constant coming and going. A life-story, however tragic it may be, is soon forgotten. At first there came every now and then vague rumors of a man called Laurence Court, who was doing great work in the forest department in far-off central India.

No one quite knew how or why Laurence Court had the vacant post offered him, he hardly knew himself, but over hundreds and hundreds of miles of jungle and forest he held his own undisputed sway. His quarters were in a large solitary bungalow, standing in an extensive compound a little way off the great highway to civilization.

One evening the fierce May sun was setting and it was getting cooler in the luxuriant garden full of lovely flowering shrubs, which sloped down through shady trees to a holy lake which surrounded a curious old temple hidden away among a tangle of tamarind and majestic palm trees in its center. The temple was deserted, no chief-priest officiated there now, so that accounted for a Sahib's bungalow being so near its sacred precincts. A lady, in a cool white dress, strolled out of the dimness of the veranda festooned with crimson creepers, and stood looking out with expectant eyes down the long trunk road.

She moved quickly to meet a tall, sun-burnt man, riding a superb Arab, his white uniform and helmet gleaming in the rays of the setting sun.

"Hallo, Norah darling!" and the man sprang down and, with his horse's bridle on his arm, he put his other round the girl he called Norah, while he whistled for his syce.

Two years after Laurence Court had arrived at Pappur, a letter reached him, telling him among other items of gossip that Gen. Cameron had died suddenly, and that his affairs were in a terrible state.

A bank had failed and various other investments had proved mere speculations, so there was nothing saved of the whole wreck of his daughter, and she had nothing but her pension, which she insisted on using to pay some of the general's debts. She therefore was determined to seek some employment. Her few relations were so distant, she refused to accept any help from them, and her aunt, Lady Fortesque, had died before her father.

Laurence, with all the love in his heart roused to fever heat by this letter, started off the next day on a long journey, and left instructions that very likely a mem sahib would return with him.

Norah Cameron uttered an exclamation of pleasure as Laurence Harcourt came into the room after the servant had announced the name of "Mr. Court."

"You!" she cried. "I could not think who Mr. Court was."

Laurence's face saddened.

"I changed my name some time ago. Norah, my darling, I have come to offer you that tarnished name of mine and with it all my heart. I should never have asked you—and his voice trembled—but I hear the dear old general is dead, and you are alone in the world."

He still held her hands in his and gazed tenderly upon her slight form in its clinging black gown. "North, will you love me enough to forget all the past?"

Norah, with a sob and tightening her hold on his hands, whispered gently—

"Yes, Laurence, I have never remembered that," and laid her head on his shoulder with another little sob of pleasure. "Tarnished name and a home in the wilds, I will take them both and love them well. I always loved you, Laurence, and never believed the story, dear. I wrote and told you so."

"I know, darling," said Laurence, kissing her softly. "It has been my talisman always next my heart."

So that is how a white-robed lady greeted Laurence Court on his return that May evening. They were very happy, no breath of the outside world penetrated to them, though a few miles off once a day a train rushed through the wilderness, but no one ever descended at the dusty hot little station, except a few peering collectors who glanced with something like envy at the stately solitary bungalow in its garden of flowers and listened to the feats performed by "one Sahib Court," as recounted by the native railway servants.

But one day, to the surprise of the station-master, a tall white Sahib alighted and ordered the ane garri to drive him immediately to the Sahib Court's bungalow.

Norah and Laurence were seated in the veranda when the sound of wheels in the compound aroused the new-comer, he found his hand gripped by George Hermon.

"Why, Hermon, you here? Welcome, old man!" gasped Laurence.

"Ay, thrice welcome I expect when you hear my errand," said Major Hermon. "Mrs. Laurence," he said, advancing with his hand within Laurence's arm, in his old boyish fashion. "I have brought good news. One Laurence Harcourt, late Captain in the —Field Battery, was drugged! Yes, drugged with cannabis. Ay—and his voice rose—by Hassan, Monkton's Hindu servant. It was Monkton's revenge."

"Revenge? What do you mean?" repeated Laurence.

"Mean? Don't you remember the days years ago when Monkton was expelled?"

Laurence gasped. Could he not? Once again he could hear Monkton's voice ringing in all his boyish passion and pride—

"I will be revenged on you for this before I die!" And he had taken a cruel, bitter revenge, blighted a man's whole life, for what he had passed through would leave its mark for ever, tarnished an honored name, bowed an old man's gray head in sorrow to the grave.

"Heaven have mercy on his soul!" said Laurence solemnly.

When they were calmer, Maj. Hermon, refreshed with a bath and dinner, told them how Vivian Monkton had been killed in a skirmish with the hill tribes, and how his lawyers had found a sealed packet with "To be opened after my death" written on it.

There they found the whole vile plot, how Hassan, skilled in all the secrets of his race, had administered cannabis, a decoction of the seeds of hemp, to Harcourt in some coffee that fatal night at the Dak bungalow. He expressed no regret or sorrow for such dastardly act, it was simply headed, "My revenge on Laurence Harcourt." The lawyers laid the whole matter before the powers that be, and they, acting more promptly than usual, had sifted the whole story, found Hassan, made him confess, and entrusted Maj. Hermon to convey the good news to his old friend of his exoneration of the crime of drunkenness, and a request for him to return to England at once.

Laurence obtained six months' leave on the plea of urgent private affairs, and at a public dinner his honor was declared vindicated and his sword returned to him. But he refused all other tokens of fame, and at the end of his leave returned to the lonely bungalow in far-off Pappur, where later on a second Laurence Harcourt appeared on the scene.

As Maj. Hermon drank to the sturdy baby's health, he added earnestly—

"I believe he is even a better man than his father."

Norah laid her hands on her husband's arm and whispered softly—

"There never can be a better man than my husband, and I forgive Vivian Monkton his bitter revenge!"

"Amen!" said Laurence reverently.—Gwendoline Miller.

THE END.

AIR-FILLED TIRES.

Importance of Ample Inflation to Be Taught to Motormen.

Gas in place of air for the inflation of tires serves the purpose admirably if the user will but watch his equipment and replace the gas which escapes.

Tests made by the Diamond Rubber company showed that tires inflated to riding pressure of 100 pounds with air lost in the course of a week's time 8 pounds of pressure. An exact similar set of tires inflated with gas lost during the same period from 40 to 55 pounds of pressure. Either gas or air will keep out of the tire, in one way or another, by slow degrees.

The importance of ample inflation is emphasized by the fact that The Diamond Rubber company will make a large part of its advertising campaign this year right along educational lines, showing the superior service when plenty of air is used. Most tires are overloaded, and the best available answer to this condition is a size of tire next larger than that usually applied. The only other answer of any kind is that of air and still more air, and nowhere do the results show faster than in the service given by the tire overloaded as a regular thing.

FOREST FIRES LESS SERIOUS.

NO RAINS AND STRONG WIND MAKE GREAT NORTH WOODS DRY AS KINDER.

GRAND MARAIS FINALLY SAVED.

After All Night Fight the Inhabitants Drive Back the Encroaching Flames.

SETTLERS LOSE MUCH PROPERTY.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 11.—Owing to the unusual drought in Minnesota the forests in the north and eastern part of the state, in northern Wisconsin and northern Michigan have been burning for several days and great damage has been done. So far, however, no fatalities have been reported.

A rain has fallen in Minnesota this spring in any amount and since the last snowstorm of April 24 and 26 not enough moisture has fallen to thoroughly wet the ground. Ordinarily soaking rains prevail during April and May.

Everything is dry as tinder, especially in the woods and fires started by settlers in clearing their lands and by sparks from locomotives spread rapidly into growing fires.

Strong Wind Blows.

For the last two days a strong wind has been blowing over some of the northern counties and this helped the spread of the flames, blowing the smoke over a wide area. The air during Tuesday night in St. Paul was pungent with the odor of burning brush and grass.

Reports received from Calumet, Mich., state that the fires about Alston, Painesdale, South Range, and Baltic are less serious today.

From Cass Lake, Minn., the reports are more assuring today. After several hours hard fighting by forest rangers and volunteers a line has been established around the fire and the wind has abated. Indications are that the fire there has been checked unless the wind comes up to cause the fire to jump across the barrier.

Homesteaders Are Sufferers.

The damage to seedling trees and homesteaders is said to be great although no estimate is possible. This same section of Minnesota was swept by fire two years ago. At that time Chisholm, a town of 2500 was wiped out and the residents of Grand Marais were taken from the town in boats. The state militia was sent in the naval reserve vessel Gopher to assist the fire fighters for several days.

GRAND MARAIS IS SAFE.

Villagers Fight Flames All Night—Wireless Operator Causes Outsiders Much Alarm.

DULUTH, Minn., May 11.—[Special.]—After fighting back forest fires all night, the people of Grand Marais won the battle and although the village is badly scorched, the property loss is not great and no lives are lost.

When the flames began encroaching on the town, the wireless operator sent a message to this city stating that the fire seemed likely to wipe out the village and that unless the fire fighters succeeded in their efforts, no further message from him could be interpreted as meaning the destruction of Grand Marais.

As the Duluth operator was unable to "raise" Grand Marais this morning the worst was feared. However, at noon Grand Marais signalled that the village was safe, the operator having been too busy fighting the fire to work at his instrument.

Grand Marais has about 1000 population and is 110 miles northeast of Duluth. It is an old trading post and the only means of reaching it is by boat from Duluth and Two Harbors.

When navigation closes it is practically inaccessible except by stage from Two Harbors, eighty-five miles to the northeast.

Trout Fishers Blamed.

HOUGHTON, Mich., May 11.—[Special.]—Forest fires are menacing the timber districts of this region, a pall of smoke hangs over the copper country towns, evidence of "bush" fires on all sides, and although there is as yet no serious danger of any great damage to standing timber, a close watch is being kept.

The trout fishing season has opened and it is believed that fishermen's camp fires have been largely responsible for this spring and the underbrush and slashings are dry. Although there is a law against the leaving of camp fires in the woods it is not often obeyed, the result being that forest fires are easily started.

Wyllis Seaman, an instructor at the Michigan College of Mines, while on a fishing trip, was hemmed in a forest fire and in making his way through it, Seaman's shoes were burned off. Subsequently he stepped on a piece of glass, badly cutting one of his feet. His companion was compelled to carry him some distance to their camp, and later they were picked up by a passing launch and brought home. Seaman's feet are in a terrible condition.

Farmers Lose Property.

BAYFIELD, Wis., May 11.—[Special.]—Forest fires north and northwest from here enshrouded the country in smoke. The Bayfield fire department succeeded in saving several farmers' residences by backing.

Unless rain comes soon the entire country will be ablaze. The mail carrier between here and Cornucopia reports that Nels Westlund lost everything, and Martin Thorsby, Charles Bruno and Louis Palm each lost their farms, but succeeded in saving stock and their homes.

Marquette Not in Zone.

MARQUETTE, Mich., May 11.—[Special.]—While the woods are very dry there are no forest fires in this portion of Upper Michigan. A few fires are burning in the country to the west, but they appear of small extent and it is believed little damage has been done. Reports of great havoc evidently are greatly exaggerated.

Bearding the Bench.

It is recalled for Mr. Hughes' benefit that Waite had a farmer's chin beard. Lamar one of the southern or desperado-type. Blatchford wore galwas and gray bersuities. There's room for a feather duster.—Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard.

A Chestnut Farmer.

C. K. Sober, the paragon chestnut farmer of Irish Valley, Northumberland county, is spreading the chestnut growing cult beyond the borders of the Keystone state. He has shipped seven cars of trees from his Irish Valley farm this spring. They have been shipped chiefly to the New England and middle states. At present Mr. Sober has a corps of twenty men engaged in grafting seedling chestnut trees. Grafting accidents they will graft about 50,000 trees. The trees shipped vary in height from 2 1/2 to 10 feet. Two hundred and fifty of the larger trees, when properly packed, fill a car, and 2000 to 5000 of the smaller sizes are required to make a carload.—Painesdale Record.

FOND DU LAC NEWS.

HEAD IS GASHED.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., May 7.—William Lyons, residing on Waupun street, had a bad gash cut in his head Friday night while going under the railroad bridge in a motor boat. The accident occurred in a distance from where the two girls were drowned a week ago.

TRAIN HITS WAGON.

Melvin Cohy of North Fond du Lac had his left arm broken and sustained several severe cuts, and his brother Charles of Stockbridge had his head cut open Friday night when a Soo passenger train crashed into the wagon in which the men were riding at the Scott street crossing. Their condition is serious.

OPEN NEW YORK OFFICE.

The Fond du Lac Church Furnishing company has arranged to open an office in New York. N. W. Sallade returned yesterday from a trip through the east and announced that five men would be employed in the new office to handle the eastern business for the company. It is understood that the concern has contracts for supplying new furnishings for many eastern churches this year.

We Can Show Reasons

WHY the "merchant-tailor" cannot surpass the "tailor-merchant" in anything but price. Every Kirschbaum Garment is a good reason in itself.

The merchant tailor buys fabrics in small lots—Kirschbaum has the pick of the best mills in the world. The merchant tailor generally acts as his own cutter—Kirschbaum employs hundreds of the finest experts in the business.

The merchant tailor must try to give you a fit in a single suit—you have one chance out of one. Kirschbaum Clothes offer you a choice of a hundred suits, and dozens of different models.

Look for the Kirschbaum label—it insures all-wool fabrics and hand tailoring at $15 to $25—not $40 to $80.

We guarantee these goods.

Should you find imperfection in the cloth or tailoring of a "Kirschbaum hand-made" garment, return the same and money will be refunded.

EDWARD DEAD; GEORGE V. NOW RULES BRITAIN

MINISTERS KISS MONARCH'S HANDS AND SWEAR THEIR ALLE- GIANCE TO HIM.

QUEEN BEARS UP BRAVELY.

Alexandra Stands Shock of Her Hus- band's Sudden Death with Great Fortitude.

ALL BUSINESS IS SUSPENDED.

LONDON, May 7.—"The King is dead. Long live the King!" The transition from Edward VII. to George V. as King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India, is now complete.

King George V. was formally proclaimed as successor to the throne at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The ceremony was an impressive one, occurring in the throne room of St. James' palace, in the presence of the privy council, under the presidency of the Earl of Crewe.

The mourning features were for the time being set aside, and King George appeared in the uniform of an admiral, while the distinguished gathering of privy councillors and officers of the court were in levee dress and wore the regalia and decorations of their high orders.

The proclamation of kingship was a document conferring upon the new sovereign all the attributes of a ruler which his father had possessed. The response of King George was marked by deep emotion as he solemnly affirmed his purpose to fulfill to the best of his abilities the great trust reposed in him.

The oath was administered to the King by the lord chancellor. Following a custom the members of the cabinet who were present tendered their formal resignations to the new ruler, who at once returned the resignations unacted upon. Thereupon the members of the cabinet and the privy councillors kissed the King's hand according to the traditional custom to signify allegiance to the new monarch. She cannot be persuaded to death of Edward VII. The beloved monarch succumbed to pneumonia, which followed a bronchial attack, at Buckingham palace at fifteen minutes before last night, in the sixty-ninth year of his life and the tenth year of his reign.

Queen's Grief Pathetic.

The grief of the Dowager Queen at the death of her royal husband is pathetic. Since early morning she has been in and out of the death chamber directing everything, personally placing the details of flowers that have been received, and giving her directions with stately dignity, but at the same time throughout the morning there was a constant stream of callers, including the members of the diplomatic corps. Several wreaths from personal friends of Edward were sent up to the death chamber.

Special Service Held.

A special service in memory of King Edward was held at St. Paul's this afternoon and was almost national in character despite the hurried preparations. The lord mayor of the corporation of London attended in state, while all the departments of state, the army and the navy were fully represented. High officials in all ranks of society were in the congregation. The service was that used upon the occasion of Queen Victoria's death.

The Dowager Queen has received a telegram from Theodore Roosevelt expressing his sincere sympathy. The plans for the entertainment of Mr. Roosevelt here necessarily will be materially modified, but in just what particulars is not yet made known.

King George, Queen Mary, and their two sons, Prince Edward and Prince Albert, the former of whom is soon to become the Prince of Wales, spent an hour at Buckingham palace. They are the only members of the family who have seen Alexandra. All other callers of the royal family had been received by the Princess Victoria. It is announced that the court will move to Windsor castle next Tuesday. Both houses of Parliament assembled this afternoon in accordance with the ancient statute providing that they shall meet on the demise of the sovereign.

The session of the House of Commons was purely formal. Home Secretary Churchill, after briefly stating that the House had been summoned to the throne of the statute of Queen Anne, moved an adjournment which was taken. Only a score of members were present.

In the House of Lords, Lord Lorrbone, lord high chancellor, took the oath of allegiance to King George V. and the some fifty peers who were present followed suit.

Fire Farewell Salute.

A farewell salute for the late monarch of sixty-eight minute guns one for each year of his age, was fired this afternoon at St. James' park. The salute was so timely as to be concluded with the close of the formalities in connection with the proclamation of the succession of King George.

The meeting of the privy council was a brilliant function. The King wore the uniform of an admiral and was surrounded by a large gathering of councillors all in levee dress and wearing their high orders. The lord mayor of the corporation was in his robes of office.

The councillors having acquainted the King with the completion of the proclamation his majesty signed after which he confirmed in their offices those who had held appointments under his father.

King George delivered a brief but earnest address, announcing his intention to endeavor under the guidance of God, to maintain the high traditions of the British court and to fulfill to the best of his abilities the great trust reposed in him.

The lord chancellor, Lord Lorrbone, administered the oath to the King, and, following the custom, the cabinet ministers swore allegiance to the new sovereign, at the same time tendering their resignations to the King's hand.

The councillors, upon being reappointed, in turn took the oath of allegiance and kissed the King's hand. The proceedings concluded the business of the council, and his majesty retired. The King left St. James' palace on his return to Marlborough house at 5 o'clock.

No Military Escort.

A single carriage occupied by the sovereign and attended by two royal securities was driven to and from St. James' palace. There was no military escort, and the only decoration which the monarch wore was the Order of the Garter.

Death of the King.

The tolling of the great bell in St. Paul's cathedral at royal standard was half-masted, but except for this and the frequent coming and going of officials and attendants at the palace there was little outward evidence of the passing of the great King.

Great crowds coming into the city on early trains proceeded toward Buckingham palace and by 9 o'clock a tremendous stream of people was slowly filing past the front of the building, with its drawn blinds, around to the west end of the palace to gaze upon the windows of the chamber where the body of the dead King was lying.

On the bulletin board was still pinned the sheet of foolscap with its tidings of the momentous event scrawled hurriedly in a dozen words and this was the center of interest for the throng, each of whom seemed determined to read with his own eyes the official announcement.

Over the palace the royal standard was half-masted, but except for this and the frequent coming and going of officials and attendants at the palace there was little outward evidence of the passing of the great King.

Queen Bears Up Bravelly.

Queen Alexandra is bearing up bravely. She had breakfast as usual in her own apartments today. Members of the royal household attended a special service in the private chapel of the palace at an early hour.

The death of his majesty has caused a general suspension of business and the abandonment of all race meetings and other sports, public gaieties and private entertainments.

The theaters have been closed. The stock exchange and other markets were closed today and the law courts took a recess as a token of respect. Every avenue throughout the country was placed at half-mast upon public buildings, warships and other shipping, while church bells sounded the doleful news.

Message from America.

The American feeling regarding the death of King Edward was, in accordance with cabinet instructions from Secretary Knox, expressed this morning to Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs, by American Ambassador Reid in the following letter:

Sir: My government instructs me to express to you, and through you to the British government and people, the sincere and profound sympathy of the President, the government and the people of the United States in the loss by their British kinsmen of a ruler so beloved and so justly distinguished among all the nations of the earth for his wisdom and kindness and for the influence of those high qualities in behalf of all that is best.

I have the honor to be with highest consideration, Sir,

Your most obedient and humble servant,
WHITEHALL ROAD,
LONDON, May 7, 1901.

The morning services at the churches were more largely dressed than usual today. All of the congregations were in deep mourning. A notable change in the service was the substitution of the words, "The Queen, the Queen Dowager and all the royal family," for the familiar phrase, "The Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales and all the royal family."

The bulk of the population of the country have donned mourning garb in some form. Men who are not wholly clothed in black or wearing black neck-ties or black bands about their coatsleeves. The women seen are almost without exception dressed in black. Strangers of crepe hang from the white in the hands of the cabmen. The shops fronts bear mourning slutters.

Kaiser Sends Telegram.

Since earliest morning a flood of messages had been pouring into the palace from the chiefs of foreign lands. One of the first received by the Queen Dowager was a sympathetic telegram from Emperor William. Ambassador Reid and Secretary Phillips of the American legation were early callers at Buckingham palace and Marlborough house, where, in the visitors' book, they inscribed their names and those of their wives. Later members of the diplomatic corps called. Mr. Reid also left cards for Sir Edward Grey while at the embassy paid a similar duty at the war office and at the admiralty. The flags at Dorchester house and the American embassy are at half mast.

DETECTIVE SLAIN IN FIGHT WITH STRIKERS.

Over 200 Shots Are Fired in Pitched Battle in Street at Steuben- ville, O.

STUEBENVILLE, O., May 7.—A pitched battle at 1 o'clock this morning between fifty men, alleged to be strikers, formerly employed at the La Belle Iron works in this city, and two private detectives, resulted in the death of one of the detectives, John Reardon of Pittsburg. He was killed by a volley of shots from the revolvers of the alleged strikers and sympathizers. The strikers, who were in a mob, were exchanged. As far as is known, none of the strikers were injured. Three boxes, which served as breast-works for the two private detectives, were literally riddled by bullets.

BOY BANDIT GETS LIFE.

Thomas Jefferson Noel, Who Killed Banker in New Albany, Ind., Guilty of Murder.

CORYDON, Ind., May 7.—Thomas Jefferson Noel, the Louisville boy bandit, was found guilty of murder here today and sentenced to life imprisonment. Noel, who is 17 years old, last November made a daring single-handed attack on the Merchants National bank of New Albany, Ind. He compelled a negro chauffeur to drive him to the bank at noon through the crowded streets of Louisville and New Albany. In the bank he became excited, shot and killed Cashier J. Haugary Jr. and wounded President J. K. Woodward and insane, Homer Finley is dead. The young man was a brother of James Finley, foreman of a steel construction gang near Medary, and had been to visit him. He was 22 years old and his home was in Chicago.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., May 7.—[Special.]—The body of a man, apparently about 50 years of age, was found floating in the Fond du Lac river near the Johnson street bridge by two boys this afternoon. The corpse had been taken in the river for ten days, but it was taken for that of a dead dog. It is believed by the police that the man was murdered.

ENGLAND'S NEW KING PUBLICLY IS PROCLAIMED.

ROYAL PROCESSION PROCEEDS TO LONDON WHILE THOUSANDS CONTINUE ANTHEM.

EDWARD'S FUNERAL MAY 20.

Rumor That Queen Mother Had Broken Blood Vessel in Paroxysm of Grief Unfounded.

MOURNING IS DROPPED FOR DAY.

LONDON, May 9.—With the time-honored ceremony of a brilliant and impressive character, George V. this morning publicly was proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India.

Sharply at the stroke of 9, four heralds arrayed in medieval uniforms of scarlet, heavily braided with gold, mounted the balcony of Friary court at St. James Palace, where Queen Victoria presented herself to the people upon the opening of her memorable reign, and blew a fanfare through their long silver trumpets.

The precincts of the palace by this time were a great mass of people, many of whom could secure but the briefest glimpse of the proceedings. The balconies and roofs of the ancient palace which had been draped with red cloth were reserved for the notables, all of whom were in the deepest mourning.

Members of the royal household, the ministers and their wives and high officers of state in brilliant uniforms, were gathered around the court. Gen. Sir John D. P. French, with the headquarters staff in full dress uniform, stood surrounded by a troop of horse guards in their red tunics and breastplates of polished steel. From the windows of Marlborough house, immediately opposite, the Duke of Cornwall, the young heir to the throne, the younger prince and Princess Mary watched the ceremony.

Proclamation Is Read.

The heralds having concluded their duties, the officers of arms, chief of whom is the Duke of Norfolk, the hereditary earl marshal and chief butler of the royal household, which were silent only by the reappearance of the heralds, none were mourning, this having been removed for the occasion. Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, former principal king of arms, read the proclamation while two officers bearing the staffs of office, stepped to the front of the balcony, and in a voice which could be heard across the court and in the streets adjoining, read the proclamation which was taken through the square, struck up "God Save the King."

The duke and Sir Alfred then called for three cheers for the King, and the people responded with fairly deafening hurrahs, which were silenced only by the reappearance of the heralds, who sounded another fanfare.

The last note hardly had died away when the band of the Coldstream guards, which had taken up a position in the square, struck up "God Save the King." The young princes from their point of vantage in the windows of Marlborough house and with their hands at salute and the officers and troops stood at attention.

Royal Salute Is Fired.

As the national anthem was concluded, the first gun of the battery in St. James' park fired a royal salute and the people in the square and balcony at the same moment took up the refrain "God Save the King." This was probably the most impressive part of the ceremony, the cheering which was taken growing in volume as more and more singers joined in, while at intervals the gun half drowned the chorus. Meanwhile the royal standard had been hoisted over the Marlborough house, indicating that the King was in the royal residence, and flags upon the public offices throughout the city were raised to the mast-head.

The royal standard on Buckingham palace alone remained at half-mast. These flags will remain at masthead until sunset this evening and again will be lowered tomorrow.

The Duke of Norfolk and Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, the officers of state and others of the distinguished company in Friary court continued in their positions until the people, having silenced the singing of the national anthem, turned towards Marlborough house and renewed their cheers for the King, a glimpse of whom was caught as he stood at the window with Queen Mary at his side. A moment later his majesty lowered the blind.

Besides the heraldic officers, the members of the cabinet who had hurriedly returned to the palace, including American Ambassador Reid and the embassy staff, and other notables, including J. P. Morgan watched the proceedings from the balcony. The household, Lords Rosebery, Crewe and Morley and a few others at the invitation of King George witnessed the ceremony from Marlborough house, a scaffolding having been erected behind the balcony which shuts out a view of the grounds from the street which separates St. James palace and the residence which the King occupied while he was the prince of Wales.

March On to London.

The popular demonstration at an end, the heralds and their attendants proceeded to the Ambassador's court, whence they drove to Charing Cross and thence to the city of London to read the proclamation to the people at the designated points. The route to the city proper was lined with 7000 troops, while at the places at which the procession stopped and repeated the ceremony troops and horseguards were stationed. The royal carriages of the Duke of Norfolk, Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty and the officers of arms followed by Gen. French with the headquarters staff and a troop of cavalry drove briefly from St. James palace to Charing Cross. Thousands upon thousands who had

GOAT RAISING IN NORTH.

Animals Are Used to Clear Land of Scrub and Brushwood.

Kitsap county is the big goat producing county of Washington. The goats are not raised for mutton alone, but also for the purpose of clearing up underbrush in the cut over timber lands of this particular county.

The lumbermen left the tracts of land over Kitsap county dotted with huge stumps, Ferns, hazel, dogwood, alder and other low growing trees have sprung up until the whole resembles a wilderness. By turning goats into the brush the land is cleared of the obnoxious and useless growths and left ready to be grubbed off and cultivated.

The goats in Kitsap number over 10,000 and are as fat as butter balls from the long diet of green food. Many hundreds are daily shipped to Everett, Seattle and Tacoma for the market, and the mutton is sold for the best sheep.

There is no particular kind of goat raised as yet, but many are planning to produce Angora goats to clear up their land.

PNEUMONIA ENDS LIFE OF EDWARD

GREAT BRITAIN'S RULER DIES BE- FORE SUBJECTS REALIZE HIS CONDITION.

LOVED ALMOST UNIVERSALLY.

As Statesman, the Late King Was Al- ways Active and Particularly Successful.

LONDON, May 7.—King Edward VII. died from pneumonia at 11:45 Friday night at Buckingham palace. Death struck down the mightiest ruler of the world with a little compunction as if his victim had been the meannest of that King's subjects. The prayers of the whole nation, bound to their monarch by centuries of tradition and by a love born of a complete and intimate knowledge of their ruler's foibles almost as much as of his greatest virtues, availed to stay the hand of the reaper not a jot.

King Edward died almost before his subjects had begun to realize that he was seriously ill. He was taken sick a week ago. After three days serious complications began to develop. The fourth day his physicians issued a bulletin that stirred the whole nation to its depths. On the sixth day the King was dead.

Sketch of King's Life.

When Edward VII. breathed his last there came to a close the life of a unique personality. He was loved almost universally, first of all as a man whose natural attributes made him dear to his subjects, and next as a monarch whose ability to fulfill the role which he was called on to assume was demonstrated conspicuously. Edward VII. by the grace of God, of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, King, defender of the faith, Emperor of India, was his title.

Since the death of his father in his youth because of his manner of life, he lived through an unenviable reputation through long years of more careful conduct, and succeeded in winning the confidence of all the people as almost no other sovereign of Great Britain, except his mother, Queen Victoria, had done.

As a statesman, he was active and successful, particularly in the field of foreign affairs. The fact that he was the ideal of the people made him a useful instrument of the ministry and enabled him at the same time to wield more influence than had been conceded to the throne in the past. He was an able diplomat, and in all the more important questions of foreign policy which came up during his short reign he made himself felt.

In domestic politics he was less active, but he succeeded in strengthening the position of the monarch with the masses, effectually killing whatever anti-royalist sentiment existed at the time of his accession. His influence with his ministers in an advisory capacity was much more pronounced than was that of Queen Victoria, although his attitude on the political questions of the day was not defined.

Edward VII. assumed the throne on the death of Queen Victoria on January 22, 1901, so that he was King less than ten years.

Noted for Sportsmanship.

It was as a sportsman that the British people loved most to think of him. He was an enthusiastic patron of horse racing, and was fond of yacht racing, cricket, athletics and shooting.

His love of cards was almost a passion in his earlier days, and his gambling for high stakes got him in trouble several times. When in 1900 his horse Minerva won the derby at Epsom there was a scene of enthusiasm at the track which was unparalleled. Twice before he became King he won the derby with Minerva in 1896, and with Diamond Jubilee in 1900.

In personal appearance the King was the typical Englishman. He was rather below the average stature, of strong and heavy build. His ruddy face betokened good health and good spirits up to a short time ago. He wore his gray beard trimmed to a sharp point. His thin curls of gray hair diminished with age, but were quite bald. Even in his later days he continued to be one of the best dressed men in Europe, and was regarded as a model for quiet refinement of dress and bearing.

At the state functions in which he participated, Edward revived all the pomp and circumstance of medieval days. He drove to Westminster on the opening of Parliament in one of the sumptuous royal coaches, attended by heralds, equerries and outriders, and a vast retinue, forming a pageant of royal splendor. On these occasions the King wore the full robes of majesty.

Tactfulness, which he possessed to a marked degree, was a conspicuous characteristic of the late King, although he was frank, loyal and warm hearted always. Those who associated with him have said that he was emphatically the "good fellow," simple and courteous, but a stickler for the deference which his rank demanded.

Had Wide Education.

He was born in Buckingham palace on November 9, 1841, the son of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert of Saxecoburg and Gotha. Educated by private tutors or a plan drawn up by his father, he later studied at Edinburgh, Oxford and Cambridge. A long period of travel followed, during which he went over Europe and the east. In 1890 he made a triumphant tour through the United States and Canada.

The prince was married on March 10, 1863, to Princess Alexandra, oldest daughter of the Danish prince who became, some months later, King Christian IX. Six children were born, two of whom—the Duke of Clarence and Prince Alexander—died. The surviving children are George Frederick, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall and York, who now becomes King; Princess Louise, who was married to the Duke of Fife; Princess Victoria Alexandra and Princess Maud Charlotte, who was married to Prince Karl of Denmark, now King Haakon VII. of Norway.

The King was of the house of Hanover, which dates from the accession to the throne of King George I. in 1714. He made a triumphant tour through the United States and Canada.

After Men Higher Up

Chicago District Attorney Seeks Con- fessions of Two More Men in Lorimer Case.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 9.—In resuming his sessions today the grand jury is believed to be in search of "quarry higher up" than the legislators indicted last week on charges of bribery and perjury in connection with the election of William Lorimer to the United States Senate. State's Attorney Wayman has announced confessions of Democratic representatives White, Beckemeyer and Link, but he is believed to be after at least two more, as five is the number of votes by which Lorimer was chosen.

The Floor of the Summer Cottage.

It often happens that the floor of the summer cottage is rough and full of cracks, so that it is not satisfactory even when stained. When this problem meets the owner, it is a good plan to cover that part of the floor which will not be hidden by the rug with canvas, which should be tacked in place smoothly, and then given two or three coatings of good paint to be followed by an application of varnish stain. This will give an excellent border, which can be easily cleaned, and which will answer all the purposes of a hardwood floor.—Suburban Life.

The funeral arrangements are not yet announced, but the expectation of court circles is that the body of his majesty will be buried at Frogmore near the bodies of his father, mother and son. The burial probably will be delayed for ten days to allow time for the arrival of foreign deputations.

Towards noon the members of the royal family began to arrive at Buckingham palace. King George, who had been occupied throughout the morning with affairs of state, arrived at luncheon time in company with Queen Mary, ruler.

King George drove in simple fashion back to Marlborough house without the military escort and pomp which has characterized royal functions of late years.

The funeral of King Edward has not yet been set, but it is believed he will be buried at Frogmore in about ten days.

With today's ceremony and in his forty-fifth year the second son born to King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, becomes the ruler of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, of the British dominions beyond the seas, King, defender of the faith, and Emperor of India.

Popular interest in the new ruler is overshadowed by universal grief at the

The Growth of Oklahoma.

The Coming-of-Age and Housewarming Edition of the Daily Oklahoman is a special issue that would do credit to any newspaper in the land. It celebrates the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of Oklahoma Territory. It conveys to the world an intimation of the growth of Oklahoma City. The eleven sections of the handsome publication are filled with attractive illustrations and entertaining and instructive reading matter explaining how empire has been built up in the wilderness in the brief period since 1890.

In a country so new as Oklahoma people after a very brief residence the accounted old settlers, Gertrude Chaffee, an Iowa school teacher, went to Oklahoma City six and a half years ago. Her first investment in real estate was the modest sum of $12.50, which a few weeks later she increased to $37, selling out for $1200 at the end of the year. With the latter sum she was able to purchase a tract so large that she considered it worth while to abandon school teaching and devote her property interests her entire attention. Today she is worth $150,000 and has a profitable clientele. This is only one incident picked at hap-hazard out of many to typify the comet-like velocity of the chariot of progress in Oklahoma. As was Wisconsin in its early stages, Oklahoma is a rendezvous of young people. It has an area approximating that of Wisconsin and a population of something above two million. Wisconsin's area is two million and a quarter. The Oklahoman says that only half of the area of Oklahoma is under cultivation. If people will go from home to try their chances of growing up with a new country, Oklahoma offers a milder climate than Alaska.

Warning to Milk Patrons.

Attention is hereby called to all farmers, patrons of cheese factories and creameries to a small portion of the laws relating to the delivery of clean and sanitary milk and cream. The law reads as follows:

Sec. 4607b-4, Statutes of 1898, as amended by ch. 215, laws of 1909. For the purposes of this act, the term "milk" shall mean the fresh, clean, lactal secretion obtained by the complete milking of one or more healthy cows, properly fed and kept, excluding that obtained within eight days before and four days after calving, and contains not less than eight and one-half (8.5) per cent of solids not fat, and not less than three (3) per cent of milk fat; and the term "cream" shall mean that portion of milk, clean, lactal secretion obtained by the complete milking of one or more healthy cows, properly fed and kept, excluding that obtained within eight days before and four days after calving, and contains not less than eighteen (18) per cent of milk fat.

Milk which shall be drawn from cows that are kept in barns or stables which are not reasonably well lighted and ventilated, or that are kept in barns or stables that are filthy from an accumulation of animal feces and excreta or from any other cause; or milk which shall be drawn from cows which are themselves in a filthy condition; or milk kept or transported in dirty, rusty or open seamed cans or other utensils; or milk that is stale, putrescent or putrid; or milk to which has been added any unclean or unwholesome foreign substance; or milk which has been kept exposed to foul or noxious air or gases in barns occupied by animals, or kept exposed in dirty, foul or unclean places or conditions, is hereby declared to be unsanitary milk.

Any can of milk which has a dark colored or black sediment in the bottom is deemed unclean and unsanitary, and any person that sells or offers for sale such milk is violating the preceding law, and any buttermaker or cheesemaker that accepts such milk is held responsible, and subject to the same penalty as the person that sells or offers same for sale. To prevent this dirt from getting into the milk, you brush the cows udders thoroughly with a dry cloth, then wipe same with a damp cloth just before milking; then strain through a good strainer and put the cans into cold water at once and stir frequently until thoroughly cooled.

Now be aware, for the inspectors are alert, and the next time that they appear here they will likely enforce the law without fear on favor.

Penalty for violation. "Any person who by himself, his servant, or agent, or as the servant or agent of any other person, or as the officer, servant or agent of any firm or corporation, who violates any provision of this act shall upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense, or shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days."
