

Urges Helium to Float Airships

Manning Says Rare Gas Is Non-Explosive, and Therefore Safer Than Hydrogen.

MOST ABUNDANT IN U. S. A.

It is Now Recovered From Natural Gas—New Experimental Work in the Production of Helium Urged by Van R. Manning.

Washington.—Further experimental work in the production of helium as a substitute for hydrogen gas for dirigibles is urged by Van R. Manning, former director of the United States bureau of mines and now director of research for the American Petroleum Institute. The terrible loss of life in the Zik's disaster at Hull, England, Mr. Manning declared, accentuates the need for an intensive development of helium here.

"The military and commercial use of helium for dirigibles," said Mr. Manning, "is generally recognized, although to date no practical utilization of this gas has been made except by the government. In the spring of 1917, as the director of the bureau of mines I approved a preliminary investigation as to the possibilities of the production of helium as a war measure, and as a result a cooperative effort was instituted by the Interior, Army and Navy departments looking toward the solving of a problem which was important to our own and our allies' interests. Prompt and quick results were desired.

Results Satisfactory.

"It can be said to the credit of those branches of our government that satisfactory results were obtained, although not in time to put into actual service dirigibles filled with helium. Ample funds were allotted by the Army and Navy departments to the bureau of mines, Interior department, and experiments were immediately begun with three processes. One process was proved to be successful, another not wholly successful and the third point has been operating experimentally up to a few weeks ago. The fact is that the government is now operating a large helium production plant, with a capacity of 20,000 cubic feet of helium per day.

Mr. P. E. Van Nostrand of the United States army, who was to have been one of the officers on the ill-fated Zik, was one of the collaborators in the development of this work and fully appreciates the importance of helium for dirigibles and balloons. He credited by the press with the statement that "had the ship been filled with helium it is probable if such an accident could have happened."

Expense Justified.

"As one who had to bear the responsibility for the experimental work until a year ago, I cannot emphasize too strongly the statement that the government expenditures, large as they were, in separating helium from natural gas for use in dirigibles, whether for military or commercial purposes, have been thoroughly justified, and it will be obvious to any one who has even a superficial idea of the uses for helium that ample funds should be forthcoming from the government and private sources to carry on further experimental work. The government is now the chief user of helium, and I should like to direct the attention of our country to the importance of continuing active and immediate development of the dirigible and helium programs previously undertaken by congress to the end that the officers and men who forfeited their lives may not have died in vain."

The story of helium was described by Mr. Manning as "one of the romances of science." "It may be of interest at this time," he said, "to know something of helium and the development in the production to date. Scientists admit that its discovery was one of pure science. It was first discovered in 1868, in India, while scientists were making observations of an eclipse of the sun. Scientists agree that the occurrence of helium is in the air, in sea and river water, in rocks and mineral springs, in geyser and in volcanic gases, but the only quantities on a large scale can be recovered from the natural gas of the United States."

Before the Bank of England was founded in 1694, there were no banks in all that country.

New Aviation Terms Fixed

Three Types of Aircraft Definitely Named in New Order to Army and Navy.

OUTS OUT SLANG PHRASES

National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics Compiles Standard Terms—"Aircraft" Is Any Form of Craft That Navigates the Air.

Washington.—Standard aeronautical terms, devised and compiled by the national advisory committee for aeronautics, have been officially prescribed for use in the army and navy. Hereafter, the new order states, the officers of the two air services will use the regulation nomenclature.

For some time, aerial experts pointing out, laymen have been calling anything that traverses the air an "aeroplane," whereas the word "aircraft" should be employed. They say that all balloons, rigid and nonrigid airships, or lighter-than-air craft, are constantly being termed "dirigibles," a slang word, now obsolete, but originally used to designate a nonrigid airship fuselage slung beneath the gas bag.

"Seaplane," Not "Hydroplane." The word "hydroplane" has often been misused in referring to a sea-

Is Last Surviving Grandchild of Signer

Newport, R. I.—Henrietta Channing Ellery of this city has the distinction of being the last surviving grandchild of a signer of the Declaration of Independence. She is the granddaughter of William Ellery.

Miss Ellery was born April 8, 1838, and has lived for entire life in Newport. Neither she nor her sister Mary, long since deceased, ever married. For a great many years they made their home in the Ellery household, on Thimble street, the home of their grandfather, but this house is no longer standing.

The Newport chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution is named after this signer of the Declaration of Independence.

BIG WAGES CAUSE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Washington Conference Told Men Refuse Reduction in Pay.

UNSKILLED ARE HARDEST HIT

About 75,000 Ex-Service Men in New York Are Out of Work—Many Veterans Are Unskilled and Illiterate.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Aversion of labor to accepting work at reduced wages was assigned as a cause of some unemployment by Roswell F. Phelps, director of labor statistics of the Massachusetts labor department, at the first witness heard by the national employment conference's committee on unemployment statistics.

The committee set to work to determine the extent and volume of the nation's unemployment.

"Unemployment is due in some measure," Mr. Phelps said, "to the fact that labor will not accept reduced wages."

Harry D. Jacobs, president of the ex-service men's employment bureau of New York, the next witness, estimated that there were 75,000 unemployed former soldiers in New York, and said the establishment of vocational training schools in army camps as proposed by the government would solve the unemployment problem as far as the unskilled World war veteran was concerned.

"Won't Take Low Wages."

Mr. Phelps declared that the trouble in Massachusetts at present was not that there was no employment, but that people could not find jobs at the wages they wanted, and were unwilling to accept the reduced pay.

He added that some improvement had been noted in Massachusetts, where now the figures show only 13 applicants for each position offered, as compared with 36 applicants for each position in May.

If people were willing to accept reduction in wages, which he asserted must take place, the state's employment service would be able to fill more places.

Mr. Jacobs said the difficulty of the former service man was the inability of the unskilled to find employment.

Analysis of 100 unemployed former soldiers, he stated, showed that 75 per cent were unskilled and of these 80 per cent were illiterate. There was no trouble, he contended, in placing skilled former service men in New York.

Ledoux May Be Heard.

Urban Ledoux, who attracted attention by his "action of unemploying" in Boston, may be given a hearing before the committee seeking to determine the volume and extent of unemployment, officials of the unemployment conference said.

At the same time Ledoux announced that he had issued orders for movement of representatives of the unemployed on Washington.

"The human documents" in the case of the unemployed, as he called them, will come to Washington by motor truck and will consist of between 50 and 100 men from Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Ledoux laid before President Harding at the White House a proposal that the names of all who doubled their wealth by war profiteering be made public.

Says President Was Interested.

As an alternative he proposed that the President appeal to all who profited by the war to donate 50 per cent of their wealth to an unemployment relief fund. He said the President received his suggestion with marked interest, but gave no indication that they would be resorted to for the present.

With the national conference on unemployment standing adjourned until October 5, the ten subcommittees appointed at the organizing session of the conference got down to work on a study of the various phases of the problem assigned to each with a view to recommending practical relief measures to the conference when it reconvenes.

Hearings on unemployment statistics, to develop reliable data as to the extent and distribution of unemployment as a prerequisite to enlightened treatment of the problem, began before the subcommittee on statistics.

The idea that we should use velvet and silk for the living and dining rooms has quite been superseded by the popularity for figured linens and cretonnes. SALES TAX FIGHT ON BATTLE LAUNCHED IN SENATE FOR ITS ADOPTION.

Senator Simmons, Minority Committee Member, Promises Democratic Support of the Plan.

Washington, Sept. 28.—A fight for adoption of the sales tax was launched in the senate during consideration of the tax revision bill.

Democratic support of the plan was promised by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking minority member of the finance committee, if Republican advocates will support Democratic amendments to the tax measure reducing income taxes on small salaries and retaining the existing high surtaxes.

"It would be better to strike out boldly on new lines, instead of tinkering with old things to repair a machine that was created to meet other circumstances and conditions," Senator Simmons said in the course of an attack upon the tax bill.

"Would the senator and his colleagues be willing to vote for a sales tax or turn-over tax on goods, wares and merchandise?" asked Senator Watson, Republican of Indiana. Senator Watson is an advocate of the sales tax. Senator Simmons replied: "That is a matter that is to be discussed in the senate."

"If the authors and sponsors for the manufacturers' sales tax on the other side of the chamber shall see fit to accept certain sweeping and radical amendments which will be offered to the tax bill from this side, serious consideration will be given to that sales tax proposition as part of that scheme. But independently of that scheme, I answer 'No.' As a part of that scheme, however, if such a tax shall be necessary in order to obtain the revenues, the proposition will be seriously considered."

NEW ARBUCKLE CASE WITNESS

St. Francis Hotel Maid Gives Damaging Testimony Against the Fat Film Star.

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—The prosecution scored a heavy and unexpected blow in the preliminary hearing of Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle on a murder charge when Josephine Keza, St. Francis hotel maid, was called to the stand.

Miss Keza, an hitherto unknown witness, testified that on the afternoon of Labor day she had listened in the hotel corridor at the keyhole of the door leading into Arbuckle's bedroom. She said she had heard sounds of a struggle and a feminine voice exclaiming in a tone of protest:

"No! No! Oh, my God!"

To which a masculine voice responded:

"Shut up!"

The time was fixed as a few minutes before Mrs. Delmont rapped on the inner door and was answered by Arbuckle.

Prague, Sept. 28.—Dr. Edward Benes, Czech-Slovak foreign minister, has returned here from Brunn, where he conferred with M. It involves the retirement of Hungarian forces from west Hungary, and a treaty by which Austria would return to Hungary the town of Odenburg, perhaps in exchange for economic concessions.

WATER FROM ARTESIAN WELL

Why Method of Bringing it to Surface is Only Successful in Certain Localities.

Artesian wells are possible only in certain localities. When there are pervious strata lying between impervious beds the water percolating through will be imprisoned; lying upon the lowest, and rising to some point in the highest, when a previous stratum brings it to the surface and it escapes in the form of spring. If, however, a shaft can be sunk to the lowest point, the water of the whole basin will pass upward for escape and will rise to a level corresponding to the greatest height to which the imprisoned strata reaches. The wells were named from one at Artois, France, which was the first sunk with full knowledge of the principle involved. The Chinese from time immemorial have used these wells, and they have also been used for centuries in the neighborhood of Vienna. The artesian well at Greenoble, near Paris, throws water to a height of 32 feet above the surface at the rate of more than 500 gallons a minute.—Boston Globe.

HONORS RESTED WITH CHOATE

Possibly Because He Had the Last Word in Witty Duel With Chauncey M. Depew.

New Yorkers agree that either Joseph Choate or Chauncey M. Depew was the finest after-dinner speaker on earth. Some one says: "At an annual dinner of the St. Nicholas society Choate was down for the roast 'The Navy,' while Depew was to respond to 'The Army.' Depew began by saying: 'It's well to have a specialist; that's why Choate is here to speak about the navy. We met at the wharf once and I never saw him again until we reached Liverpool. When I asked how he felt he said he thought he would have enjoyed the trip over if he had had any ocean air. Yes, you will to hear Choate on the navy!'"

Choate responded: "I've heard Depew hailed as the greatest after-dinner speaker. If after-dinner speaking, as I have heard it described and as I believe it to be, is the art of saying nothing at all, then Doctor Depew is the most marvelous speaker in the universe."—Washington Star.

Do you know what constitutes a strong constitution?

To have sound, healthy nerves, completely under control, digestive organs that are capable of absorbing a hearty meal, means you have a strong constitution! Your general attitude is one of optimism and energy.

Probably you are not eating the proper food. Probably the nutritious elements are not being supplied to your system in the proper way.

TO MOVE VILLAGE A MILE

United States Steel Corporation Orders Hibbing (Minn.) Placed on New Site.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The United States Steel corporation is going to undertake the task of moving a whole town—Hibbing, the world's richest village—located in the center of the great iron belt of the Mesabi range of northern Minnesota. Within six months' time this village, known the world over wherever steel is a commodity, will be a mile away from the site of its birth, and the great corporation's steam shovels will be digging ore where old Hibbing stood.

An engineer of the steel corporation said recently that he was seated in his office in New York some time ago when a phone call summoned him to the office of Judge "ary, chairman of the board. He was in Mr. Gary's office only two minutes, but in those two minutes he was asked a half dozen questions bearing on the topography of Hibbing, the town founded by the late Henry W. Oliver of Pittsburgh, and then was instructed to "put that town on the move and keep it on the move until you have it a mile away," and there were no further instructions.

And now Hibbing is to be "put on the move." When settled down on its new site, it is to be known as "New Hibbing."

He has acquired dexterity by continuous practice work—by doing over and over again the difficult parts until no more difficulties remain.

Nothing worth while in life can be obtained except by continuously applied effort, which, in the basic sense is work—hard work, oft repeated.

POLITICAL POSITIONS.

THERE are many civic positions which will certainly be open to women in a short time, not only here and there, but everywhere. In many of our smaller cities and towns the women's clubs have done a great civic work already, proving that women are well fitted to do such work. There is no reason at all why a woman should not be commissioner of street cleaning, and there seem to be many reasons pointing to the fact that she would be an excellent one. As factory inspectors, as recorders, and in positions having to do with the household side of the community, women can do excellent work.

Women who go into politics should go with a sense of service to the body politic. If they do that and can point to results that prove their square, honest and devoted, many women are going to find themselves elected to city jobs.

If you have a bent toward civic work, study the problems in your own community. The past generation saw the marvellous development of women

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE MAN YOUR BOY WILL BE.

YOU sometimes worry, wonder what your boy will be a man, You like to look ahead a lot, The future try to scan, You hope he'll be a man in fact, As well as man in size, And so his every boyish act, You watch with anxious eyes.

But do not worry—you can tell The man your boy will be, If he the truth will follow well, You try to make him see, You need not watch his night and days, In search of guilt or guile— You only need to turn your gaze Upon yourself awhile.

There is the place for men to look, For fathers to inquire, Sons do not learn life from a book, They learn it from their sire, The rule you make your boy obey, Must be the rule for you— The boy will heed the thing you say, But more the thing will do.

It is not difficult to know The future of the lad, For he will very likely grow Exactly like his dad, The life he leads as time unfolds, When boyhood days are fled, Will be the life he now beholds— The life his father led.

SCHOOL DAYS

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name, its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significance, your lucky day and lucky jewel.

HORTENSE.

HORTENSE is essentially a French name, though she has been adopted by all countries and she has the almost unique distinction among feminine names of having no contractions, diminutives or offspring of any form. Hortense she begins and Hortense she remains throughout history, with the single exception of Italy where she is sometimes dropped and she is called Ortesia.

Like Sylvia, she is something of an ancient sylvan name, having come originally from the Latin "hortus," meaning a garden. The slave who tended those elaborate Roman gardens was called hortensis, and, finally through some strange quirk of fancy, it came to name an honorable old plebeian name.

For many centuries it continued in Italy and gradually the masculine form Ortesio came into use as a proper name, quickly followed by the feminine Ortesina. The most famous Ortesina of those days was Ortesina Manfredi, the niece of Mazarin. This notable lady carried her name into France, where the French stratagems placed the stamp of their language upon it by calling it Hortense. Since that time many famous women have borne it, particularly those of royal circles.

Hortense's jewel is the diamond, which is said to give its wearer fearlessness, invulnerability and to bring victory in any endeavor, provided, however, that it is received as a gift and not purchased. To exercise its best power it should be set in gold and worn on the left hand. Its potency for Hortense is concerned not only with lovers, but is extended to enhance the love of a husband for his wife. Saturday is her lucky day and six her lucky number.

The daily, signifying innocence, is Hortense's flower.

To keep plated silver clean and bright without constant cleaning, which is so injurious to plated articles, dissolve a small handful of borax in a basin with a little hot water and a little soap, put the silver in and let it stand for three or four hours; then pour off the suds, rinse with clean, cold water, and wipe with a soft cloth.

KEWASKUM S. AN. KEWASKUM, WIS.

DIGNITY IS THE KEYNOTE OF WINTER'S COSTUME SUITS

THE wandering and wayward airs of fashion, blowing this way and that at the beginning of the season, have set themselves in definite directions and now we are able to determine which way the wind blows. In suits it is toward long coats and somewhat lengthened skirts; coats that are made interesting by a little variety in styles and much variety in trimmings, and skirts that, with few exceptions, remain plain.

The box coat, with many variations in collars, sleeves, length and trimming, appeals to great numbers of women; as it is developed this season severity is unknown to it. It has more than one rival, the most important of them being coats that decide upon a little definition of the waistline or a ripple in the skirt portion at the sides and back and those in the long redingote style. In a season of dignified suits the last stands at the head of its class.

In the handsome suit pictured the figure is vaguely outlined and the coat ripples at the back below the waistline. It is uneven in length and split up at each side. Fur bands form the cuffs and emphasize the flare and ripple in the back, and fur provides a collar over the long revers. Embroidery in a striking pattern assumes the responsibility of finishing the trim front.

Since fashion has decreed longer skirts, without saying just how much longer they shall be, the length of this model is worth noting. It is long enough, longer than the average by an inch or so, but in keeping with the style, which is intended for matrons.

HERALDING HALLOWEEN WITH WEIRD DECORATIONS

THE jolly festival of Halloween is in sight and imaginative people may turn loose their fancies and let them frolic among spooks and fairies. Young people and children enjoy this frankish festival more than any other, except Christmas. In the shops that carry crepe paper and colored papers of other kinds, there are all sorts of funny and gruesome suggestions in the matter of dressing up the house and the table for a Halloween party. They present what their agents have found in the realm where witches, black cats, sprites, ghosts and strange creatures frolic under the autumn moon in the fields where the big yellow pumpkins stand. Having set down their fancies in black and yellow and white on paper, they leave it to merry-makers to beguile where they leave off and fashion such things as are shown above.

Only two light shades or candle shades are pictured, both of them a combination of yellow and black paper with a few touches of black and white water-color paint. One of the shades is a cat's face of orange paper with black ears. The paper is pasted against a cardboard foundation, two faces joined by strips at the sides and supported by ordinary candle-shade holders or with wire. In the other shade, Jack-o-Lantern sports a long beard of black crepe paper and has black horns.

A yellow windmill of cardboard surrounded by a tence of heavy black paper stands on a circular cardboard foundation. This is covered with paper grass and hay and two almost leafless trees (of wire wound with brown tissue paper) appear to be blown by a stiff wind. These trees might be managed with small twigs. Queer creatures inhabit the mill and yard and several pumpkins grin through the fence. These things are cut from paper made for the purpose and printed with Halloween figures. The witch may be cut from paper or made of black and white paper and wire. Her broom is brown tissue paper. A hellish green black cat and an astonished harvest moon are mounted on small sticks for favors. There are many kinds of these, including ghosts made, like the witch, of white paper. Place cards and little holders for almonds or candy are as varied as any hostess could wish—all to be cut from printed paper and pasted to foundations of cardboard.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain: the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement.

She Didn't Mind It. Algernon Tassin, whose views concerning women in his play, "The Craft of the Tortoise," are very irritating to many women, tells of one at a lecture of his, who turned to another woman, seated near her, and said fiercely: "I'd hate to be married to that man!" "Oh, it isn't so bad," replied Mrs. Tassin. "I don't mind it."—New York Evening Post.

Not So Bad for a Novice. "You look like a smart young chap," said the head of a detective agency, "and I'm willing to give you a trial. Now, suppose a multimillionaire were to tell you he wanted you to trail his wife. How would you act?" "I'd take matters under advisement." "Well?" "Then I'd see if his wife wouldn't make me a better offer to trail him." "You'd do."

Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Tonic and acts through the blood upon the mucous surfaces of the body, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions. All ailments of the throat, nose and eyes. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Most of Them Behave. "Who is that gentleman?" "One of our obscure millionaires." "Do you mean to tell me a man worth millions in this country can be obscure?" "Certainly. They don't all get into the divorce courts."—Birmingham Age Herald.

Stop the Pain. The hurt of a cut stops when Cole's Carbolic is applied. It heals quickly without scarring and is used by all druggists or send 25c to The J. W. Cole Co., Rockford, Ill.—Advertisement.

Ice Barrier Cause Falls. Niagara Falls came into existence because ice in past ages closed the ancient outlet of Lake Erie. The lake overflowed under a new course, which caused it to tumble over a cliff.

BAYER
Genuine Aspirin
Never say "Aspirin" without saying "Bayer"

Warning! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago and for Pain. All druggists sell Bayer Tablets of Aspirin in handy tin boxes of 12, and in bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer. Manufacture of Monoaceticacid-ester of Salicylicacid.

REMEMBER YOUR ABSENT ONE, OR WE WILL DO IT FOR YOU

The "Home Paper" is the fondest visitor to every city dweller thrown by circumstances among tall buildings and smoky stacks; thrown among new and untried friends. It is the warmest visitor a man can have who has gone out in the world.

As Thanksgiving approaches, you cannot give a more welcome gift to that boy or girl who is far away; that father and mother who have retired to distant parts; that friendly old neighbor who has gone to the city or to any other state, than a year's subscription to the "old home" paper. It will mean an hour's joy, an hour's return of fond recollections to him or her every week of the year—and every-week remembrance of you!

If you think your boy or girl or friend would rather subscribe himself, mark this piece and mail the paper to him. - Or send us the name on the following coupon and we will do it for you:

The Power of the Hour

MECANICAL power is stepping swiftly into the breach that has been formed by restless, dissatisfied labor. This is true in the city and it is true on the farm.

Today Titan 10-20 Tractors are the labor-saving power of the hour on the farms of America. Everywhere, reaching to the farthest boundaries of agriculture, you will hear the steady chug-chug of these tireless toilers. They are displacing men and horses and getting more work per day from available farm labor. Soon summer following will be under way in many sections of the country, and there you will find Titan 10-20 Kerosene Tractors working faithfully from sun-up to sun-down, undisturbed by heat or flies, turning the hard-baked ground in the interests of bumper crops.

SAYS MISS RAPPE DIED OF INJURY

Hotel Physician Declares Rupture Was His First Diagnosis of Case.

BLACKMAIL PLOT IS CHARGED

Doctor Beardslee Describes Girl's Agency After the Arbuclle Party—'Fatty' Acts as Own Attorney in Superior Court.

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—Dr. Arthur Beardslee, testifying in the police court examination of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuclle, said he found Miss Virginia Rappe, whose death Arbuclle is charged with having caused, in great pain when he called into the case.

In the absence of his attorneys, Arbuclle acted for himself in the Superior court in agreeing with the district attorney that the manslaughter charge pending against him should be continued until October 3.

Miss Rappe's condition in intense pain, according to Beardslee, testified, and it was necessary to quiet her by the use of a drug.

This was the evening of September 5, a few hours after the Hotel St. Francis party, out of which the charge against Arbuclle arose, according to the physician, and early the next morning he discovered evidence to support an earlier conclusion that Miss Rappe had suffered an internal injury.

From the beginning he realized it was a surgical case, and advised removal to a hospital.

"There was no other conclusion to draw from the evidence than that the bladder was ruptured," the witness said.

In answer to a hypothetical question regarding the cause of a hernia, Beardslee testified that he would consider external force, such as a fall or blow to the organ.

Violent and continued vomiting might cause such a rupture, the witness replied to a question from Arbuclle's counsel.

A black and blue spot on one arm was the only external sign of injury, according to Doctor Beardslee.

"Don't call me your friend," snapped the witness at Frank Dominguez, Arbuclle's chief counsel, after a long session of his testimony during questioning by the defense attorney.

Although the defense attempted to draw from Doctor Beardslee an admission that other internal causes might have been responsible for his patient's pain, the physician said his composite knowledge of the case pointed to a bladder rupture.

The morning after the party the case was turned over to Dr. M. E. Runwell, according to Doctor Beardslee, who said he did not tell his conclusions about the patient's condition to Doctor Beardslee, because the latter did not ask him.

Doctor Beardslee said he was merely following professional custom and that he would have passed on his information had it been requested.

"Did it appear Miss Rappe had been in a debauch?" questioned Dominguez.

Doctor Beardslee replied that it did not appear so, and in any event the intense pain overshadowed evidence of inebriation.

"This was a classical picture of a ruptured bladder," Doctor Beardslee said, when the defense counsel reverted to questions about other possible internal injuries.

The witness denied that he had told the sheriff when he was notified on his hunting trip that his testimony was wanted, "that too much high life" was the trouble with Miss Rappe.

Al Semmacher, state witness, was recalled to the stand in the "Fatty" Arbuclle murder hearing, at which time Defense Attorney Frank Dominguez precipitated a sensation.

Dominguez, explaining to Judge Sylvain Lazarus the purpose of his line of cross-examination, declared:

"My intention is to prove that Semmacher's action in taking the clothes of Miss Virginia Rappe out of the St. Francis hotel and to his home in Hollywood was part of a conspiracy on the part of Semmacher, Earl Ryan and Mrs. B. M. Belmont, the object of which was to extort money from Mr. Roscoe Arbuclle.

"It is my duty to prove the existence and to establish the facts of this conspiracy, and I am prepared to do it."

Dominguez succeeded in eliciting nothing from Semmacher as to the alleged extortion scheme, since a general denial. His original testimony remained unchanged by the examination.

GREAT HONOR TO YANK

Special Ceremonies for Unidentified U. S. Soldier.

President Harding to Make Address at Arlington National Cemetery.—Body to Be Sent From France.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Never has greater tribute been paid the memory of a general of the army than will mark the burial of an unidentified enlisted man in Arlington National cemetery.

November 11, the anniversary of the armistice, will be that prescribed for a general, Secretary Weeks announced, and in addition there will be special ceremonies not provided for in army regulations.

The pallbearers will consist of eight general officers to be selected by Secretary Weeks and four admirals to be chosen by Secretary Denby. The body-bearers will be five warrant or non-commissioned officers of the regular army and three of the navy.

Special invitations to be extended as "official mourners" will be invited to all medal or honor men, one representative for every 1,000 men who served in the World war, one officer and one enlisted man from each arm and service of the army and navy, one member of the American Legion from each state and one member of each of the other permanent veteran organizations.

The body will lie in state at the capitol previous to the ceremonies.

President Harding, at the head of a delegation he will name later, will lead the remains at the amphitheater in Arlington cemetery, and will deliver an oration. The interment services will be presided over by Rev. Charles Henry Brent, former chaplain with the American expeditionary forces. Minute guns will be fired at Fort Myer from the time the funeral cortege leaves the capitol until it reaches Arlington.

The body, which will be selected so as to preclude the possibility of future identification, will be brought to the United States on the battleship Olympia, Admiral Dewey's flagship in the battle of Manila bay. It is scheduled to arrive at the Washington navy yard after dark on the night of November 9.

JOB FOR ALL, HARDING'S PLEA

President Addresses Members of Unemployment Conference at Washington.

WILL HAVE WORLD EFFECT

Executive Gives Warning United States Treasury Will Not Be Called Upon to Solve Problem—Says Reorganization Is Needed.

Washington, Sept. 28.—The national unemployment conference, which the administration hopes will evolve means of putting the nation's involuntary idle back to work, was formally opened here on Monday by President Harding.

Addressing the half hundred industrial, economic and labor leaders composing the conference, the President described the present industrial depression as "a war inheritance throughout the world" for which, as applied to the United States, he added, he "would have little enthusiasm for any proposed relief which seeks either palliation or toll on the public treasury."

Belief was expressed by the President that the results of the conference would be felt beyond the borders of the United States and that the delegates in their deliberations would be performing "a service to the world."

"Fundamentally sound, financially strong, industrially unimpaired, commercially consistent and politically unafraid," the President asserted, "there ought to be work for everybody in the United States who chooses to work, and our condition at home and our place in the world depends on everybody's going to work and pursuing it with that patriotism and devotion which make for a fortunate and happy people."

The President declared that "the open, sure and onward way" to rid the nation of the war's aftermath of depression involved "liquidation, reorganization, readjustment, reestablishment, taking account of things done and sober contemplation of things to be done." Any other way, he added, was only hugging a delusion.

The delegates were told by Mr. Harding that they had not been invited into the conference "to solve the long convoluted problems of our social system," and that Secretary Hoover of the Commerce department, whom he had designated as chairman of the conference, would lay before them the program for discussions.

"Philip Severn," he repeated slowly...

"Why yes," in surprise, "I have known him for some years."

"I thought so; I don't forget a face often, but never heard your name before."

"It is so lovely up here," said the Mountain Fairies...

"That is always the way it is up here," said Lady Gray Cloud...

"But, of course, you know all that," said Lady Gray Cloud after a moment.

"Yes, we know that," said the Mountain Fairies...

"When we were down in the woods, we saw some lovely plants with the purple flowers, one like a bell and one which was shown to the world."

"Then, too, we saw some ferns which said their relatives lived in an apartment, for some little girl had told them she had seen some of their relatives, but she told them that these fern relatives were very well treated."

"The little girl also said that she was so happy now that she didn't have to pay any attention to her teacher's watch."

"She said her teacher's watch was always absolutely right, and when she thought she was only a few minutes late, her teacher's watch showed that she was later, for no one could make that watch change from doing right and keeping right on time!"

"So she said it was now vacation time so that she didn't have to think of that watch which she really thought was very unkind."

"Oh, we had a very good time visiting our Mountain Cousins, but now we are back on our Mountain Home and it is always nice to get home."

"And we must begin our dance soon, for otherwise we'll use up all the time in talking!"

"So the Mountain Fairies danced and danced, and after they had danced a long time they said:

"Now we are going to have our refreshments under yonder big tree, so if you like, Lady Gray Cloud, why don't you dine with the King of the Clouds now?"

"So Lady Gray Cloud dined with the King of the Clouds and his family and there was much merry-making and such laughter up on top of the Mountain among the Mountain Fairies that the Rainbow came out to see what was going on."

"Then another Rainbow came, too, and the double Rainbow was seen by the earth people as it stretched across a beautiful lake and each end bent down to the water and told the water what was going on up on the Mountain Top, and how Mr. Sun and the King of the Clouds and Lady Gray Cloud were all laughing together."

"Which?"

Schoolmistress—Tommy, how do you spell "ham"?

Tommy—Please, r-a-h-m, do you mean the 'am we eat or the am we are?"—Our Boys and Girls.

Bad Boy.

Mother—Don't you dare use such language! I'm ashamed of you.

Bright Boy—Why, ma, kipling uses it and he's—

Mother—He does? Then don't you ever play with him again.

Correct.

let her drop out of my life. I would have at least, whatever Adolph Krantz knew about her.

"Very good, sir. The third door down that corridor to the left. You will find it ajar, I think; walk right in."

"I proceeded as he directed, the glass partitions of the bank on one side, the other divided into small private offices, the equipment plainly handsome. The third door stood partly open, giving me a glimpse within before I ventured to enter. The place had before me the appearance of a private library than a downtown business office. A woman was bending over the further desk, busied at some work. With heart beating somewhat faster I ventured to open the door sufficiently wide to enter.

"There was no one else present, but her head instantly lifted, and she rose to her feet, with a quick smile, and outstretched hand, coming directly toward me.

"Mr. Philip Severn, at last," she exclaimed pleasantly. "My faith is rewarded."

"Your faith," I echoed, rallying from my surprise at this greeting. "Then you were expecting me?"

"I have never felt a very serious doubt. Does that sound odd? Let me tell you why."

"I am not quite sure, sergeant, but I think Gaspar Wine committed the murder. He glanced from a window and is being shot down below there. The other fellow is still alive and was going to share in the spoils. You know him, I guess, a Russian Jew by the name of Waldron."

"Ivan Waldron, the Red orator?"

"That's the man. I'll tell you the story briefly; all that needs to be told now. I had reason to suspect these two and hid in that closet, where I could overhear them discussing a division of the spoils. The two quarreled, during which Wine was forced out through the window. Then I got the best of Waldron, just as you fellows tried to break in."

The sergeant looked about, plainly puzzled.

"I guess your word ought to be good, Mr. Severn," he admitted. "Seeing as who you are. You live in Washington?"

"Yes—officially; my home is in Ohio."

"Where are you stopping here?"

"I told him, naming the hotel at which I was registered.

"All right, then. I'll look around a bit; Morris, run down and call the patrol; have 'em get that body down out of there first when they come. Kelly, you stay here, with Halsey at the door."

I followed him and the fourth officer into the inner office. It was a wreck, but the sergeant took the scene in at a glance and picked his way across to the shattered window. The policeman bent over the outstretched figure of Waldron.

"How is the cuss, Carr?"

"Alive, all right, but got a h—l of a crack on the coccu."

"Give him a glass of water in the face. Is this the grip you was telling me about, Mr. Severn?"

"Yes; it's locked, but supposed to be full of yellowbacks."

"He pulled it forth from beneath the grasp of Waldron's arm."

"All right; I'll see it safe out of here. I guess you'll have to go along with us, Mr. Severn; the captain will likely want to ask some questions."

CHAPTER XV.

The Private Secretary.

I told my story to the captain much more in detail, and Breckenridge being frank, stood sponsor for my identity, so that I was not detained. The next morning I testified before the coroner's jury over the crushed body of Wine, and later appeared in the room of the grand jury which indicted Waldron. On both these occasions I told enough to make matters reasonably clear, yet carefully avoided any direct mention of Miss Gessler. No doubt her name would be brought into the case later, but I was determined it should not be introduced through any indiscretion on my part. KRANTZ'S name was used, but only indirectly, and the impression was left upon me that influence was being brought to bear to shield the banker from any direct connection with the crime.

I knew that when the time came for trial I could scarcely hope to escape this easily. Under cross-examination by the defendant's attorney, the whole affair would be probed to the very bottom, and I should be compelled to disclose every bit of information I possessed. In the meanwhile I must discover the girl, and learn from her own lips, if possible, just how deeply she was involved. Then, and then only, could I decide upon my own future course. But how was I to locate her? I had nothing to guide me in the search. There were only two people to whom I could turn for even a suggestion—Krantz, the banker, and Sarah Waldron. I doubted if either would reveal the truth, but I could not see the threat of exposure against Krantz, and might thus terrify him into revealing the truth. I decided that if the girl did not call me by phone before noon the next day I would certainly exhaust every effort to find her. She would assuredly learn by that time what had occurred, but, whether she so desired or not, I was not willing to with these plotters and their schemes. While this was thoughtfully understood officially, in Washington, where he reported his suspicion, certain circles, engaged in underworld work, still believed he could be used for their purposes.

"Yet he accepted the trust?"

"In a way, yes; but with perfectly loyal intent. As soon as word secretly reached him that he was to be thus used, he laid the full facts before the officials of his bank. I was present as his secretary, and learned that for the first time what I have already told you. They advised that he make the plot known immediately to the authorities at Washington. He was directed to accept the order, and thus, through seeming co-operation, learn the details connected with it. There was delay, for some reason. I was not quite ready to go ahead, and refused to draw the money. Proof of conspiracy was lacking until this was consummated. Mr. Krantz, being afraid that he would be followed if he went again to Washington, delegated me to go, as I was entirely unknown. The Secret Service there outlined a plan designed to bury matters. I was to be sent direct to these men—Alva, in particular—with positive instructions from the higher powers in Washington to draw the money and get busy. As I speak Spanish easily, and took the name of a well-known female revolutionist now in this country, but unknown even to Alva, the task did not seem a specially dangerous one."

She passed for a moment, her mind gathering up the odds and ends of narrative.

"It is not necessary that I go further into detail. I met Captain Alva as planned, and was taken to the place where his gang gathered. Krantz was there with the money, and my message compelled the Chilean to accept, and receipt for it. Government agents were stationed in Jersey City to intercept him on his way back to New York. He never got far enough to fall into their hands; before he had driven four blocks he was surrounded and robbed. The rest of the story you already know."

"The money was actually in that valise, then?"

"Some money was, but not all. We were afraid it might be opened before an arrest could be made. Each package had real money on the outside; altogether the amount did not exceed fifteen hundred dollars, and these bills were all marked."

"But you suspected Wine? I know of your call at his office."

"I wondered if you did. Were you there then?"

"Yes, I followed you in."

"I wish I had known; I would have ventured more than I dared to alone. I suspected yes; but that was all I possessed no facts, but I frightened him so when I exhibited that hat-pin I felt absolutely convinced that he was guilty."

"You had no reason to believe he possessed such a weapon?"

"None whatever; I merely took a chance. I think now the pin used belonged to Sarah Waldron, but how it came there can only be determined through a confession by her husband."

Her eyes lifted again to mine, questioning, and a bit anxious.

"Was my course right or wrong, Philip Severn?"

"Undoubtedly right, although I imagine few girls would have had the courage."

"You believe in me still in the woman?"

My handclasp tightened, and her eyes dropped before the message she must have instantly read in mine.

"This has been a test of us both which we will never regret," I answered soberly, "for it has brought faith, hope, love; is this not true?"

She did not move, or glance up, but I caught the whispered response of her lips.

(THE END.)

WRITER MUST HAVE STYLE

Without it, Declares Arnold Bennett, He Will Be Unable to Get His Message Understood.

You cannot have good matter with bad style. Examine the point more closely. A man wishes to convey a fine idea to you. He employs a form of words. That form of words is his style. Having read, you say: "Yes, this idea is fine." The writer is therefore achieved his end. But in what imaginable circumstances can you say: "Yes, this idea is fine, but the style is not fine?" The sole medium of communication between you and the author has been the form of words. The fine idea has reached you. How? In the words, by the words. Hence the fitness must be in the words. You may say, superiorly: "He has expressed himself clumsily, but I can see what he means." By what right? By something in the words. In the style. That something is fine. Moreover, if the style is clumsy, are you sure that you can see what he means? You cannot be quite sure. And at any rate, you cannot see distinctly. The "matter" is what actually reaches you, and it must necessarily be affected by the style.—Arnold Bennett.

Alone in the Jungle.

Mrs. Clement, an English woman who has achieved a reputation as a traveler and explorer says: "To be alone even for a minute in the jungle is alarming, for such is the profound silence all around that one has a terrifying sense of being innocently watched by unseen things." Of the forest noises one of the most uncanny is the howling of baboons. "When they are close at hand, the whole air is alive with the din, so that you cannot tell from which direction it proceeds. Every nerve in your body tingles, and there is a curious fascination in the great volume of sound."

Boxes of Green Lumber Weak.

Packing boxes made of properly seasoned lumber are found to resist rough handling six to ten times as well as those made of green lumber. The reason as demonstrated by the forest products laboratory, is that the fibers of the moist wood shrink away from the nails as the stock dries, and so lose their grip.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS.

A most delightful dish may be served with aspic as a foundation. The following recipe is a reliable one.

Aspic Jelly.—Soak one package of gelatin in one cupful of water for two hours. At the end of that time take one quart of rich consommé or other soup stock, add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of salt, and two tablespoonfuls of tarragon vinegar. Bring to the boiling point, then add the soaked gelatin. Remove from the heat and stir for five minutes until well mixed and the gelatin is thoroughly dissolved. Strain through a jelly bag and set away to mold.

Creame of Celery Soup.—Wash three bunches of celery and cut into small pieces. Cover with boiling water and cook until soft. Strain through a colander. Put a quart of milk, one teaspoonful of chopped onion in a double boiler and cook until scalded. Rub one tablespoonful of butter with the same amount of flour and stir into the boiling soup, stirring constantly until it thickens. Add salt and pepper to season and the sifted celery. Serve with croutons. The addition of a hard egg or two improves the soup greatly.

Creame of Pea Soup.—Take a pint of mixed vegetables, such as coarsely chopped cabbage, celery, turnip and carrot, small onions cut in halves so that they will separate in cups. Cook the vegetables in boiling salted water, using as little as possible; add to the soup stock ten minutes before serving, seasoning well with salt and pepper.

Orange Ice Cream.—Grate the rind of two oranges, add the juice of four, with the juice of one lemon; sugar is added to taste and one quart of this cream. Freeze as usual. The amount of sugar will vary as to the sweetness of the oranges.

Juvenile Soup.—Take one quart of rich brown stock. Prepare a pint of mixed vegetables, such as coarsely chopped cabbage, celery, turnip and carrot, small onions cut in halves so that they will separate in cups. Cook the vegetables in boiling salted water, using as little as possible; add to the soup stock ten minutes before serving, seasoning well with salt and pepper.

Orange Ice Cream.—Grate the rind of two oranges, add the juice of four, with the juice of one lemon; sugar is added to taste and one quart of this cream. Freeze as usual. The amount of sugar will vary as to the sweetness of the oranges.

"Puddings, my friend, do a nation's health. They add to the dinner and also the bill. They cause men to wish, with what ardor they may, that the time when foretells them came three times a day."

SEASONABLE FOODS.

Those who enjoy the flavor of curry will doubtless like the following:

Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one-fourth of a cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of curry powder, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika, stir to a smooth paste. Stir in one-half cupful of milk and chicken stock, cook until smooth. Four over six hard-cooked eggs, drained.

Salmon Mold.—Drain a one-pound can of salmon from the liquor, rinse well and flake. Mix thoroughly one-half teaspoonful each of sugar, salt and flour, one teaspoonful of mustard, a few grains of cayenne, then add two egg yolks, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of melted butter, three-fourths of a cupful of this cream and one-fourth of a cupful of milk shaker. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Add three-fourths of a tablespoonful of gelatin, previously soaked in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Strain and add to the flaked salmon. Fill individual molds and serve with:

Cucumber Sauce.—Beat one-half cupful of heavy cream until stiff, add a few grains of cayenne and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Then add a medium-sized cucumber, pared, chopped and drained with sufficient onion juice to flavor delicately.

Scalloped Cabbage.—Put one and one-half cupfuls of cooked cabbage, which has been coarsely chopped, into a baking dish with two cupfuls of white sauce, three-fourths of a cupful of cheese, finely minced, arranging the ingredients in layers. Over all sprinkle a cupful of buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown.

Cocoa.—Mix three tablespoonfuls of cocoa with four of sugar, add one cupful of boiling water and cook five minutes; add one quart of scalding hot milk, and serve with cream and more sugar, if desired.

Pumpkin seeds peeled and the meats kept as whole as possible make a most delicate nut to be used in frostings, salads and in various ways. The getting them ready takes time, but little hands like to do such work.

It is the ambition of every man who buys a second hand car to get it to run as smoothly as the second hand on his watch.

When it comes to a choice between a new set of tires for the car and a new living room rug the rug has about as much chance as the proverbial snowball in the well known superheated region.

People will today to a bully because they fear him, but they will welcome the opportunity to doublecross him. It takes consideration for others to win real friends.

There are a lot of handy expressions in this old language of oves. For instance, when a man has been caught in some questionable act he gets a lot of comfort telling his friends: "You must remember none of us is perfect."

If a person's ears burn when some one is talking about them we should think, with the present style of wearing it, some of the girls would be in danger of having their hair scorched. Take it from any shapely flapper, the girl who insists on wearing long skirts has something to conceal.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"YOU ARE VERY WELCOME."

"We're going to have a dance," said the Mountain Fairies to Lady Gray Cloud, "and so we would like to ask a favor of you."

"We would be glad if you didn't go to have dinner with the King of the Clouds and his family until a little later this afternoon."

"We're sure he wouldn't mind dining a little bit later this evening," said Lady Gray Cloud, "if you will let me watch your party. I will not speak to the King of the Clouds, so you needn't worry. There will be no rain until your party is over. I will see to that."

"Oh, thank you, thank you," said the Mountain Fairies. "You are very welcome," said Lady Gray Cloud.

"It is so lovely up here," said the Mountain Fairies. "Down below it is so much later in the season than it is up here. Flowers are beginning to look like autumn down there and up here it still looks so summery."

"That is always the way it is up here," said Lady Gray Cloud. "The Mountain King likes to have things later up here. The whole reason is that he is so fond of the Seasons that he can't bear to let them go and so he begs them to stay and stay, and so every season is a bit late."

"But, of course, you know all that," said Lady Gray Cloud after a moment.

"Yes, we know that," said the Mountain Fairies. "But we have been visiting our relatives, the Woodland Fairies, who live down at the foot of the mountain, and so we notice the change. Of course, there is a difference in the air, too."

"Of course, that accounts for it, too; but then, as you say, the Mountain King does urge the Seasons to stay as late as they possibly can and they simply cannot refuse him."

When we were down in the woods, we saw some lovely plants with the purple flowers, one like a bell and one which was shown to the world."

"Then, too, we saw some ferns which said their relatives lived in an apartment, for some little girl had told them she had seen some of their relatives, but she told them that these fern relatives were very well treated."

"The little girl also said that she was so happy now that she didn't have to pay any attention to her teacher's watch."

"She said her teacher's watch was always absolutely right, and when she thought she was only a few minutes late, her teacher's watch showed that she was later, for no one could make that watch change from doing right and keeping right on time!"

"So she said it was now vacation time so that she didn't have to think of that watch which she really thought was very unkind."

"Oh, we had a very good time visiting our Mountain Cousins, but now we are back on our Mountain Home and it is always nice to get home."

"And we must begin our dance soon, for otherwise we'll use up all the time in talking!"

"So the Mountain Fairies danced and danced, and after they had danced a long time they said:

"Now we are going to have our refreshments under yonder big tree, so if you like, Lady Gray Cloud, why don't you dine with the King of the Clouds now?"

"So Lady Gray Cloud dined with the King of the Clouds and his family and there was much merry-making and such laughter up on top of the Mountain among the Mountain Fairies that the Rainbow came out to see what was going on."

"Then another Rainbow came, too, and the double Rainbow was seen by the earth people as it stretched across a beautiful lake and each end bent down to the water and told the water what was going on up on the Mountain Top, and how Mr. Sun and the King of the Clouds and Lady Gray Cloud were all laughing together."

NEWS FROM THE OLD HOME TOWN

MOVIE OF A MAN AWAY FROM THE "OLD HOME TOWN"

As Thanksgiving approaches, with its return of fond recollections of father and mother, the old place and the old "Home Town," are we going to forget that the boy and the girl and the friend far away there in the city or the other state, are hungering for the people and the things of the happy old days?

"Home" is still the greatest word in the English language, or any language, and no matter how rich or how poor they are who have gone away from us, their hearts are still tuned to the fond recollections of yore.

Is your boy or girl off in the city, struggling among strangers, struggling to make good among the tall buildings and smoke stacks, among new friends, good, bad, or indifferent? What will bring a fuller hour of joy to their hearts regularly every week than the "Home Town" paper? And believe us, the boy or girl, man or woman who finds happiness in reading about the news of the old home and old friends is the man or woman who is proof against the snares of the tempter?

Is there an old neighbor or old friend who is plodding his or her path through life among strangers? Wouldn't the home paper with its budget of news from the old place, delivered regularly every week in the year, bring cheer and comfort to the? "Subscribe for your Home Town Paper" Week is an event that is scheduled for Nov. 7 to Nov. 12. Come in and subscribe for THE STATESMAN for that boy, for that girl, for that father or that former neighbor. Or, if you think they would rather subscribe themselves, send them a copy of this week's paper with this ad marked.
