"JUST POLLYOP—POLLY HOPKINS!"

"What's your name?" he inquired.
"Just Pollyop," was the answer. "Polly Hopkins. My daddy is Jeremiah Hopkins, the mayor of this settlement."
"Can I do something for you, Polly Hopkins?" queried Robert, as she finished telling about life in the squatters' city.
She flung out both hands in a comprehensive gesture as much as to say he could see for himself how much she needed.
"Sure, sure you can," she said with fierce emphasis. "You can make Old Marc leave us squatters be. You're bigger'n he is! The squatters need you awful bad."
Her voice broke. Robert took a long breath. Of course he could help this girl and her people. He would, too! As far as money goes, he could equal and surpass Marcus MacKenzie.
"I did try to talk sense into Mr. MacKenzie's head," he returned presently, "but now I will make him leave you alone."
In spite of the curled lips about which a smile lurked, there was apprehension in her voice when she asked:
"Can you lick 'im to a finish, mister?"
"Yes, I think I could," laughed Robert; "but it won't be necessary."
"Then I see us Silent City folks bein' happy again," sighed Polly. "We got a awful lot of things an' folks to take care of here."

There you have them—Storm Country Polly and Robert Percival, heroine and hero of another of those fascinating stories by Grace Miller White. "Tess of the Storm Country" was her first story. It was printed as a serial in a magazine for women—and practically established the magazine. It was put on the movie screen—and made the fortune of a woman film star of world-wide fame. Of course Grace Miller White (Mrs. Friend H. Miller) kept right on writing of the "Storm Country." Half a dozen other stories have been successful. More than a million copies of her books have been sold. The "Storm Country," by the way, is Cayuga Lake and vicinity in New York, one of the garden spots of the world.

Given a beautiful and persecuted squatter girl and a nice young man with brains, sympathy and money—what more do you want for romance!

CHAPTER I

Four miles from Ithaca, N. Y., Oscar Bennett's farm spread its acres along the face of West Hill between the Lehigh Valley tracks and the highway leading to Trumansburg. Oscar Bennett was what the country people and even the Ithaca folks called a fine farmer. His farmhouse faced a meadow that led to the west shore of Lake Cayuga, and from the front porch he could see, much to his dislike, the forested squatter shacks that brought to an end northward the Silent City. Like all other substantial citizens, Oscar detested the squatters. In his estimation they were a set of thieving loafers and sneaks, and many times he had wished that he owned the ground they squatted on instead of Marcus MacKenzie.

Of course it was no secret that MacKenzie never let an opportunity slip to pop a fisherman into jail, but in Bennett's opinion that treatment was not severe enough, and besides, it did not accomplish anything. MacKenzie's idea was to jail the men whenever the chance came and for a period as long as the law would allow. But what good did that do? Fierce hatred flamed in the haggard faces of the women, and they held to their squatter rights with the tenacity of leeches until their husbands were given back to them. Bennett would have done away with the wives and mothers if the job of breaking up the Silent City had been his. No man would hang to a hut long without a woman in it.

One morning in the early spring Oscar was finishing his breakfast when the door opened slowly. A girl with a small tin pail in her hand stepped into the room. She smiled at him almost humbly.
"Shut the door," he shouted at her. "Where's your manners, Polly Hopkins? Can't you see the rain's coming in after you?"
The smile faded from the girl's face. Mechanically she turned, closed the door and, unheeding, seated herself in a chair and placed the pail at her side.
"So you've come begging, Pollyop," went on the farmer, wiping his lips on the sleeve of his gingham shirt. "Well, you might as well turn tail and run home again, for you're not going to get anything more from me. I don't want a peacher's brat around here."
The girl's bare wet feet drew tensely backward under the chair; but she remained discreetly silent. Oscar always abused her and called her names, but that was because she was a squatter. After a while, he'd change his mind, and then she would take home what she came for. She noted with a quick breath that Oscar's eyes softened during the time he was silent. That looked well for her errand; but Oscar's mind was not on milk or any of those suffering for the want of it.
He had just discovered that Polly Hopkins was beautiful even if she were barefooted and ragged. Her straight young shoulders were covered with wet curls that seemed to have given to the wide eyes their shade of ripe chestnuts.
Polly expected every moment that Oscar would reach out for the pail, and, though with bad grace, he'd give her the milk just the same. She fidgeted in her chair and drew a fidgety sigh—he was staring at her in such a peculiar manner from under his heavy brows.
Why had he not noticed before that Polly Hopkins was so pretty. Oscar wondered, and a slow smile parted his lips. Polly's eyes lowered, and the long dark lashes only added to Bennett's sudden admiration. A quick-drawn breath slipped audibly past the man's teeth. Pollyop sensed in his attitude toward her a new quality that she recognized intuitively as dangerous. To bring his attention back to the purpose of her visit, she ventured to say:

"I thought it wouldn't hurt you none, Oscar, to gimme a little milk for Granny Hope an' Jerry. I'm always runnin' errands for you an' your woman."

Bennett's heavy farm boots made a scraping sound under the table.
"What good does that do me?" he returned. "Upon my soul, I might as well be without a wife as to have one who won't live with me or let anyone know I'm her husband. I'm gettin' sick, good and plenty sick, I can tell you, Miss Polly Hopkins."
This speech did not disturb Polly over much, for he'd made it a dozen times before. It was only the expression in his face, she did not quite like. Her mind went to Evelyn Robertson, the girl that Oscar had married. As if it were but yesterday, she remembered how two years ago she had gone with them under protest to a minister far back in the hills. Evelyn had explained that for some time to come no one but the three must know of the marriage.

Pollyop had learned a great many things in two years! What girl does not after she's passed her fifteenth birthday? One of the things she had found out was that Oscar was a dreadful person, more dreadful than most of the squatter men. Of course the men folks of her people did beat their women, now and then, but that was their right without any question. The blood colored even her ears as she remembered how Oscar lectured his wife for the money it was so hard for Evelyn to get. Another thing she had come to understand was that, if Oscar had not been afraid of the powerful Robertson family, he would have forced Evelyn into his home long before this. It had been a hard two years' task to keep him quiet.
"Mebbe you are gettin' sick, Oscar," she interposed. "I don't know—mebbe; but you know what that old Miss Robertson would do to you an' her girl if you told. You'd get Eve, mebbe, but you sure wouldn't get any more money."
The man's face darkened.
"That's just the rub," he conceded,

but at that Eve ain't playing square with me. The Robertsons have money to burn, and she deals it out to me in small little dollars. I tell you I'm sick of the whole thing."
Polly noted the glitter in Bennett's angry eyes and felt again the quiver of fear.
"She gives you all she gets her fingers on," she came back at him in defense of the absent Evelyn. "Lots of times she's got along on about nothin' to send you cash, an' didn't I come runnin' up here with it as soon as she give it to me? Now her ma's gettin' on that Eve ain't spendin' her money on herself, an' she watches 'er like a hawk does a chicken. She told me that yesterday."
The squatter girl rose to her feet, anxious to be gone.
"Oscar, you might be lettin' me have just a wee bit of milk. You ain't losin' nothin' through me."
She picked up the pail, and with a growl the man snatched it out of her hand.
"Women're a d—d nuisance," he grumbled. "Well, wait here."
He went out of the room, and Polly Hopkins drew a long breath. It was getting harder every day to get the milk she needed.
When Bennett returned, she was standing with her hand on the door knob, ready to go. In silence she took the pail he offered her.
"Looka here, Pollyop," he began abruptly, as Polly opened the door. "What's to hinder your payin' for your milk, coms'?"
He said it with extreme deliberation, making emphatic the last word.
Polly threw up her head and eyed him sharply. "I run my legs most off for you us 'tis, Oscar," she retorted, "between here and the Robertsons; but I don't never have no money. You know that, an' Daddy Hopkins don't get much, either. If I had a dollar, I bet I'd spend every penny of it fillin' up Jerry an' Daddy an' Granny Hope with milk an' eggs." To make him understand how anxious she was to please him, she went forward a pace.
"An' I'd buy 'em all of you, Oscar. That's as true as Granny Hope's God is settin' up in the sky."
"I don't ask you for money," answered Bennett, staring at her. Suddenly he came close to her; and Polly backed to the door. His face was red and agitated; the cords in his neck were swollen while his fingers twisted eagerly. That was another thing about which Polly's eyes had been opened in two years of growing womanhood. When a man looked at Oscar did now, a girl got away as fast as she could.
"You might pay me in kisses," he muttered hoarsely, towering over her. "Ten kisses for each bucket. You're a heap prettier than Eve."
For a long moment Polly did not speak. Her breast heaved as she swayed backward.
"I get all the kisses I want to home," she said. "Here, take your hand off'n me, Oscar, or I'll tell Eve."

His face was red and agitated; the cords in his neck were swollen while his fingers twisted eagerly. That was another thing about which Polly's eyes had been opened in two years of growing womanhood. When a man looked at Oscar did now, a girl got away as fast as she could.
"You might pay me in kisses," he muttered hoarsely, towering over her. "Ten kisses for each bucket. You're a heap prettier than Eve."
For a long moment Polly did not speak. Her breast heaved as she swayed backward.
"I get all the kisses I want to home," she said. "Here, take your hand off'n me, Oscar, or I'll tell Eve."

but at that Eve ain't playing square with me. The Robertsons have money to burn, and she deals it out to me in small little dollars. I tell you I'm sick of the whole thing."
Polly noted the glitter in Bennett's angry eyes and felt again the quiver of fear.
"She gives you all she gets her fingers on," she came back at him in defense of the absent Evelyn. "Lots of times she's got along on about nothin' to send you cash, an' didn't I come runnin' up here with it as soon as she give it to me? Now her ma's gettin' on that Eve ain't spendin' her money on herself, an' she watches 'er like a hawk does a chicken. She told me that yesterday."
The squatter girl rose to her feet, anxious to be gone.
"Oscar, you might be lettin' me have just a wee bit of milk. You ain't losin' nothin' through me."
She picked up the pail, and with a growl the man snatched it out of her hand.
"Women're a d—d nuisance," he grumbled. "Well, wait here."
He went out of the room, and Polly Hopkins drew a long breath. It was getting harder every day to get the milk she needed.
When Bennett returned, she was standing with her hand on the door knob, ready to go. In silence she took the pail he offered her.
"Looka here, Pollyop," he began abruptly, as Polly opened the door. "What's to hinder your payin' for your milk, coms'?"
He said it with extreme deliberation, making emphatic the last word.
Polly threw up her head and eyed him sharply. "I run my legs most off for you us 'tis, Oscar," she retorted, "between here and the Robertsons; but I don't never have no money. You know that, an' Daddy Hopkins don't get much, either. If I had a dollar, I bet I'd spend every penny of it fillin' up Jerry an' Daddy an' Granny Hope with milk an' eggs." To make him understand how anxious she was to please him, she went forward a pace.
"An' I'd buy 'em all of you, Oscar. That's as true as Granny Hope's God is settin' up in the sky."
"I don't ask you for money," answered Bennett, staring at her. Suddenly he came close to her; and Polly backed to the door. His face was red and agitated; the cords in his neck were swollen while his fingers twisted eagerly. That was another thing about which Polly's eyes had been opened in two years of growing womanhood. THE COTTAGE GARDENER

AN EARLY START IN PAPER BOXES

Convenience Available in Various Sizes; Can Be Unfolded Away From Roots.

THE PLANT NOT DISTURBED

Arrangement of Container Saves Injury to Growth; Can Be Placed in Ground Under the Most Favorable Conditions.

No greater gardening convenience has been devised in many years than the paper flower pots now available in various sizes which can be unfolded away from the roots of the plant when it comes time to transplant. By the use of these paper pots which are fairly durable, plenty lasting enough to raise seedlings to sufficient size, great advantages can be secured in growing such vegetables as peppers, egg plants and cucumbers and melons for an early start. One or two seeds to a pot of the two-inch size may be planted and the stronger of the two seedlings retained to grow along.

For plants which cannot be transplanted readily if the roots are disturbed in the operation these paper pots are ideal. If cucumbers can be given two or three weeks start by this method, they are in much better shape to withstand the ravages of the early bugs which annually take heavy toll of the seedling plants in the open ground and make it necessary to plant more seeds to the hill than could be grown should they all survive.

In the larger-sized paper pots, gladiolus bulbs as well as tuberoses may be sprouted and placed in the ground with an advantage of a month's growth over the earliest date it would be possible to plant them in the open. The pots are so cheap in price that they can be thrown away after using with no real loss.
One precaution is necessary in using these pots. They should not be allowed to stand in water or the bottoms will rot out while the sides remain intact. It is necessary to provide drainage in all but the smallest sizes with pieces of broken earthen flower pots, crockery or a few pebbles.
Castor beans may be given a fine start with these paper pots which will bring them to majestic proportions much earlier than if planted in the open. Planting the seeds in these little pots saves the work of transplanting which will become imperative if the seed is planted in the usual way in a seed box indoors or in rows in a hotbed or cold frame.—National Garden Bureau.

HOW TO GROW PEPPERS

Seeds of peppers should be sown in a hotbed or in a box in the house about 8 weeks before the time for setting the plants in the garden. The plants are tender and should not be transplanted until the ground is warm and all danger of frost is past. Set the plants 15 to 18 inches apart in rows 2 1/2 to 3 feet apart. The cultivation and treatment of peppers should be the same as for tomatoes and eggplants. There are a large number of varieties of peppers, including the sweet kinds and the hot peppers.

 —Rev. F. W. Elsinger, assistant priest of St. Kilian's church at Hartford, has been granted patent papers on an adjustable link chain belt. The purpose of this link is to make replacing, adding or removing a link in a chain that operates over sprocket wheels an easy matter. The new invention makes it possible to remove part of the tongue that laps about the next link in succession in the chain to be removed and the links held in place with a coiled spring wire that prevents the chain from coming apart, and yet permits one to separate the link with an easy motion of the hand.
 FORDSON PRICE CUT PUBLICITY
 The first announcement of the big cut in the price of the Fordson tractor was made through Mr. Henry Ford's radio message Thursday evening, Jan. 26th, from his Peabody Radio Station to Ford dealers attending a Fordson Tractor Industrial Show in Cleveland, Ohio. The content of his talk, which was very plainly heard in Cleveland and surrounding districts, is quoted below:
 "It is certainly wonderful to sit here in my office and say a few words of greeting to you Ford dealers of the Cleveland territory. The radio is an outstanding tribute to man's inventive genius. They say there is nothing new under the sun but we are constantly inventing new things, every day bringing some big improvement over the previous day's best.
 "Manufacturing operations have undergone some wonderful revolutionary changes during the past few years. We are all familiar with the big improvements in transportation methods, but the oldest industry has been the most backward in the acceptance or adoption of the new up-to-date methods of doing things, and that is the farming industry. Being a farmer, I am vitally interested in all farm improvements, and with this in mind I have spent years of time and millions in money in the development of the Fordson tractor, which I really think is one of the biggest possible helps to profitable farming.
 "As a general thing, the farmer has bettered their financial condition during the past eighteen months, but the production costs of farm products are still too high, and this is due to the fact that the tractor price should again be reduced, and in considering a reduction, naturally my thought has been to make possible for the largest number of farmers to share in the benefits to be derived through the use of our tractor, and consequently effective tomorrow, January 27th, 1922, the new price of the Fordson tractor will be $395.00 f. o. b. Detroit. This is a cut of $230.00 off the present price, and while in making this big reduction we have taken upon ourselves a gigantic task in the reduction of manufacturing costs, still that task, in my opinion, is not larger than the farmer's problem of today, and I am glad to do my part in bringing about a period of increased prosperity for the farmer. Your part is to carry this message to the farmer, thereby enabling him to produce more with less cost and shorter hours.
 "I am glad to have had this opportunity of talking with you, and you have my best wishes."

The Silver Lining.

Joseph Letter was talking to a Washington reporter about the wicked theft of $500,000 worth of fine wines and liquors from his country house. "Oh, well," said the young millionaire pluckily, "this theft will relieve me of a lot of bores, anyhow. "Prohibition hadn't been in force a week when the worst bore in America buttonholed me one morning and said: "Joe, I hear you've got a magnificent stock stored away in your cellar. Is it true?" "Oh, I said, 'I've got a little put by in case of illness.' " "Good, very good," said the bore. "I'll call every Saturday evening till further notice to be ill."

33 PERISH WHEN BLIMP EXPLODES

Giant U. S. Dirigible Roma Is Destroyed in Flight.

ONLY 11 SURVIVE DISASTER

Accident Occurs When Huge Aerial Vessel Is Flying Over Hampton Roads and Lambert Point Army Base at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 22.—Thirty-three persons were killed when the War department's giant dirigible Roma burst into flames on a trial trip from Langley (Va.) field.

The Roma, which was purchased from the Italian government last year, carried 23 prominent guests in addition to her crew, the total on board being 14.

At five o'clock in the afternoon only eleven had been accounted for and all hope for any of the others had been abandoned. It is believed they were burned to death almost instantly.

The accident occurred when the vertical controls were carried away, causing the ship to fall into a nose dive, in which it struck a high-tension electric wire, causing the gas bag to explode.

Captain Boyle of the Hampton Roads naval air station said in a telephone message to Rear Admiral Moffatt of the navy aviation service.

The great dirigible had been in the air only a half hour and was sailing over the Lambert Point army base at Norfolk at 2:10 p. m. when, with a detonation, she burst into flames. Immediately she crashed downward to the ground.

Largest in the World. The Roma was the largest semi-rigid airship in the world. She was 410 feet long, 82 feet wide, 88½ feet high. The capacity of her gas bag was 1,000,000 cubic feet and she was propelled by six 12-cylinder engines, a total of 2,700 horsepower. Speed, 80 miles an hour; cruising radius at full speed, 2,300 miles; radius at cruising speed, 8,000 miles; carrying capacity, 100 passengers.

The Roma was built by the Italian government for war purposes and sold to the United States government for approximately $3,000,000. Her value was estimated at $1,250,000.

The explosion came without warning and was heard at Newport News, ten miles away. Several of the passengers jumped as the craft crashed downward, striking one of the army base barracks. The heat from the fire was so intense that firefighters could not get close enough to battle it. Those in the balloon were burned to a crisp and their bodies may be unrecoverable.

Plans were being made to send the Roma on a demonstration flight all over the United States starting this spring. It was in preparation for this trip, which was expected to be an epoch-making affair, that the trial flight was being held.

The Roma was filled with hydrogen, which also brought disaster to the ZR-2 in England, when 45 persons were killed. It had been planned to fill the vessel with helium, the non-inflammable gas, on the transcontinental trip.

Hundreds See Crash. The Roma was said to have been about 2,000 feet in the air when disaster overtook her. More than two hours after the crash the fire was still raging so fiercely that she could not be approached.

The scene of the catastrophe is on the south side of Hampton Roads, midway between Norfolk and the Hampton Roads naval operating base, which occupies the former site of the James-town exposition.

The giant dirigible had been flown so few times that she still was a novelty, even in this district where a large proportion of the army and navy aviation activities are concentrated.

It is safe to say that thousands of persons had their eyes directly on the craft when the first tongue of flame darted along her side, followed by the deafening explosion which sent her plunging down to the fate of her predecessor, the ZR-2.

Among those watching her were officers and men at the army and navy bases. Alarms were sounded in both stations before the doomed craft had hit the ground, and within a few seconds fire-fighting apparatus, rescue workers of both services and first-aid contingents from the navy hospital were en route to the point where the burning mass landed.

Hundreds of persons in the city of Norfolk saw the explosion and within a few seconds the broad speedway leading from the city to the two bases was literally lined with automobiles en route to the scene.

The tragedy also was in full view of the scores of craft at anchor in Hampton Roads. Shrieks of their whistles rent the air as an accompaniment to the death plunge.

It took less than a minute for the burning airship to reach the ground after the explosion.

Roma's Crew.

Here is a partial list of the crew of the Roma in the light, only a few of whom survived:

Maj. John G. Thorneil, Capt. Dale Mabry, Capt. Walter J. Bond (who piloted the machine and was one of the few survivors), Lieut. Byron E. Barr, Sergt. Roger B. McNally, Sergt. L. M. Harris, Sergt. Louis Hilliard, Engineer J. M. Bledenbach, Engineer

Animals Hoard Winter Stocks

Many Different Ways in Which They Provide Against Long Cold Season.

MAN USES HABITS OF BEES

Earthworms Drag Leaves Into Their Burrows to Provide Food and Comfort for Winter—Why Honey Is Stored.

New York.—There are many different ways in which animals meet the winter. Many go into winter quarters and, reducing their expenditure to a minimum, lie low until the spring calls them again to action. Others, like the wolves, continue to live dangerously, simply sharpening their wits and increasing the keenness of their hunting. Some, like the ermine and the ptarmigan, don a white dress, which is both safe and comfortable.

Others solve the problem by a change in habitat—notably the migratory birds. There are several other solutions of the problem, and one of these is to lay up stores, to hoard, to save. Many animals do this inside their bodies.

Habit Is Acquisitive.

A beginning of storing may be looked for perhaps in activities like those of earthworms, which collect leaves and drag them down into their burrows, at once making them more comfortable and providing a supply of food for a rainy day. It is surely the acquisitive habit that they have, these earthworms, for more than four-score leaflets were taken from one burrow.

With insects we find an inclined plane of storing that leads up to the climax illustrated by hive bees and by some of the ants. Among the solitary bees the mother makes a store for the brood which she never survives to see; among humble bees the store is begun by the mother, but continued by her worker children, and in some kinds at least a part of the society survives the winter; in some tropical bees there are permanent societies and imperfect combs; in the hive bees there are permanent societies and perfect combs.

The elaborate storing of hive bees, carried to such perfection under men's care, is, to begin with, connected with surviving the winter—i. e., with permanence, and with the survival of the mothers are their offspring grow up, i. e., with the possibility of social tradition.

It is impossible to think of storing without a vision of Solomon's ant, which, having no guide, overseer, or ruler provideth her meat in the summer and gathereth her food in the harvest. And, as among bees, we find all grades among ants from those that do not store at all to those that make a fine art of it.

According to recent studies of the common Mediterranean harvesting ant, the seeds which are collected are kept for a time dry and are eventually put out in the rain to germinate. This has the advantage of bursting the hard seed coats and in some cases of starting processes of fermentation.

At a certain stage, however, the ants kill the embryo plant by hitting at it, and the seeds are dried again in the sun. The dried seeds of some cloverlike plants, for instance, are then taken back into the nest and chewed into dough. This is dried once again in the sun in the form of little biscuits, which are eventually put into the cupboard.

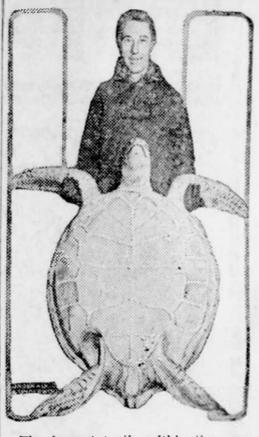

Culture for Molds.

It is likely that different kinds of seeds receive different treatment and in some cases it seems that the stored material is not eaten at all, but is used as a culture for molds of which the ants are very fond. It is an interesting fact that the use of molds—reminding us of man's mushroom beds—is practiced by a number of quite unrelated animals—namely, certain ants, termites, beetles and nitids. Among backboneed animals it is difficult to find convincing instances of storing until we come to birds and mammals. Apart from the numerous birds that store food in their crops, sometimes so exuberantly that they can not fly, there are some that may be said to lay up nutritive savings out side of themselves.

In the burrow of the hamster several store chambers are made and grain as well as hay is accumulated in considerable quantity. The little snow mouse that thrives all the year round at a high altitude on the Alps makes stores of chopped grass and gentian roots. There are many other examples of storing, but these examples show that the thrifty habit has taken firm hold in many different corners of the animal kingdom.

Round Up Gang of Shoplifters

"Dashing Dora" Leader of Notorious Band of Fashionable Berlin Robbers.

LOOT OVER MILLION DOLLARS

Every Step of Police Investigation of Gang Results in Fresh Sensational Disclosures—Eight Are in Custody.

Berlin.—White slave traffic, the morphia habit and the practice of blackmail were joined to theft, fraud and kleptomania in the "Dance Macabre" of the band of Berlin shoplifters led by "Dashing Dora."

Every step of the police investigation of the activities of this gang, eight of whom are in custody, results in fresh sensational disclosures. Several members of the band plead that they are addicted to the drug habit and are not responsible for their acts. Mrs. Forster, one of Dora's "dashing" daughters, is in the hospital, suffering from morphia poison. Her husband was arrested as he was in the act of concealing stolen property valued at several thousand pounds.

Louise Morvilius, her sister, has been released from custody in order that she may go to her sick child, but not before she had confessed to the police that for years she has been a white slave for her husband, Frank Morvilius, who is director of the German disposal board.

Further raids have been made by the police on the luxurious homes of "Dashing Dora" and her accomplices, and the enormous pile of stolen goods at Charlottenberg police station has received considerable addition.

Confiscate Bank Accounts.

The bank accounts of the gang, which amount to many thousands of pounds, have been confiscated.

Morvilius has pleaded that his mother-in-law is the victim of kleptomania.

It has been alleged against Morvilius that he heavily bribed the police in order to avoid arrest.

Members of the gang, who were caught with $200,000 worth of stolen goods in their possession, have terrorized the largest Berlin luxury stores for many years, and their depredations are estimated to exceed $1-000,000 in value. Most of the property was disposed of in Holland, though a considerable quantity is believed to have found its way to Britain, France and America.

Charlottenberg police station resembled a great warehouse. There were piles of china and leather goods, jewels and other valuable articles, which were taken chiefly from a luxurious six-room apartment occupied by "Dashing Dora." This woman now forty-four, who has been twice divorced, is married to a youth of twenty.

"Dashing Dora's" home was raided by policemen just as the seven criminals were discussing a New Year's present for "the firm," consisting of two limousines with a liveried chauffeur and footmen to assist them in their "profession." Dora and her woman accomplices, who lived like princesses, mixed in the highest society. She is considered the most brazen and cleverest of light-fingered crooks on record.

The list of booty carried off by her gang includes a priceless antique porcelain set of 178 pieces which was lifted piecemeal from an Unter den Linden shop in four visits. An easy job for them was a gold coffee set of thirty-two pieces valued at $5,000. This was carried off in one visit.

Special Belts Used.

Dora and her friends were equipped with specially constructed leather belts fitted with innumerable hooks to which they attached valuables as they passed through the shops.

The incident which led to the raid on Dora's home illustrates the gang's audacity. They fell under the suspicion of a salesgirl at one Berlin luxury shop, but they bluff the manager into an humble apology.

The next day the husbands of the two women visited the shops, indignation personified, and, flashing 1,000 mark notes in the face of the manager, they insisted on a written apology from the salesgirl and the manager himself. This was given, but the manager was afterward struck with the youth of the husbands as compared with their wives. He telephoned for the police, and the gang were arrested.

249 CHILEAN QUAKES IN 1920

Occur 35 Hours Apart on Average, Reports Seismological Service.

Santiago.—Two hundred and forty-nine earthquake shocks were recorded in Chile in 1920, according to a report just published by the national seismological service. The average interval between shocks was 35 hours, while in the year previous a shock was registered every 28 hours.

The greatest seismic activity in 1920 was the area embracing the Aconcagua and Maipo valleys, in which the principal cities are located. The most pronounced shock was recorded on July 25, the center of which was in the Aconcagua valley.

27,371 VETS GET CANADIAN LAND

Loans of $37,495,815 Given Soldiers Who Took Farms Under Relief Act.

Ottawa.—Exactly 27,371 Canadian war veterans have been settled on the land under the provisions of the soldier settlement act, says an official report of the dominion government. Of these, 21,246 have been granted government loans totaling $37,495,815, an average of more than $4,000 per

Moonshine Makes Rabbits Defy the Whole World

Pasco, Wash.—Officers investigating a story sent by a Pasco correspondent concerning the prevalence of rabies among rabbits in making that the police found a road just outside the city, dumped several barrels of corn mash out on the sagebrush covered prairie.

The embryo moonshine at once became the diet of hundreds of rabbits. Crazy bunnies ran pell-mell into standing automobiles, frantically gnawed at telephone posts and did some dancing.

Many people concluded that the rabbits had rabies.

Thirteen Ducks With One Shot.

Williamsport, Md.—Jacob Adams, while gunning along Potomac river for wild ducks, shot into a flock and killed thirteen black Mallards with one shell. His gun was loaded with No. 10 shot.

act, the report states, and 44,772 of the applicants have qualified. There are 520 men in training in agricultural schools and 3,110 have completed training and are awaiting allocation to farms.

Taffeta Triumphs Anew; Entrancing Millinery

THERE is something so unpretentious and appealing about taffeta silk that it comes easily rustling in each season to triumph anew among afternoon and evening frocks. It has a certain dignity that belongs to silk and a certain degree of youthfulness that belongs to itself, but can be accommodated to women of any age. In the frocks pictured here the styles bespeak in the wearer something of youthfulness. This is a quality that some women preserve for many years, and it is worth recalling that taffeta helps them to look young-for lovely millinery. Almost every one of the new hats is in itself the best possible excuse. Besides, there are no better hats than the first efforts of the designers and an early choice means that one need not be hurried and has a wide variety at hand to make a selection from. The newly arriving spring hats, deserve to be called entrancing, their lines are beautiful and immensely becoming, the colors and materials a continuous exhibit of splendid performance on the part of the manufacturers. There is much that is new Taffeta for Afternoon or Evening.

If any of them have forgotten it, the pretty dress at the left is shown in black taffeta, and has a draped bodice fastening at one side, with a large jet buckle over a long head fringe. The bodice is unusually graceful. The neck opening allows a dainty chemise of net and lace to show, and the kimono sleeves will recommend it to slender women. Ruffles of the taffeta finish the collar, sleeves and loose side panels and make a pretty adornment for the skirt.

Taffeta is sufficient unto itself in the gay party frock in which two colors are combined in a changeable weave. The wide skirt is scalloped at the bottom and bound with a fold of the silk. The new neck line is finished in the same way and emphasized by two full ruffles which serve in fabrics and trimmings and designers have found these things inspiring. Careful hand work characterizes the milliner's part in the creation of new headwear.

Four of the new models, as shown here, disclose spirited shapes and novel materials, but the values of the lovely colors are lost in a picture. A soft, silky and pliable braid makes the hat at the top of the group with bordered ribbon laid in fine plaits about the coronet. A cluster of little, many-bued pieces is much at home against this brilliant background. The drooping-brim model below it makes use of silver fillet lace over cornflower silk as a covering and has a facing of light crepe de chine, which may be chosen with reference to the wearer's complexion. The deep, strong also to call attention to the short sleeves. Taffeta flowers and taffeta-covered cord hanging in loops and ends, maintain that nothing more is needed to complete a dress furnished by the fact that it checks fashion's latest ideas in four particulars; they are the neck line, the waist line, the hip line and the hem line.

There is no doubt that women are inclined to rush the season when the first spring hats make their appearance. They buy them while the snow is lying, but there are several good excuses for this small weakness blue is becoming to every one. A very new trimming appears on the hat of braid and silk at the right. It is called "match" trimming from its resemblance to matches and is used in many clever ways. The hat has its soft, up-turned brim covered with folds of crepe de chine and is draped with wide and handsome ribbon.

Black a Trimming.

Black serves as a trimming for many of the bright-colored blouses, one smart model recently seen, made of scarlet cotton crepe, being finished at the neck with a jabot of scarlet-plaid black chiffon set a ruffle to one side. The blouse was simple, a tailored style with a collar designed to be worn high about the neck or open, according to preference. The sleeves fitted the arms closely to a point just below the elbow, where a full part of the black chiffon was set in, lined in at the wrist with a band cuff. Jet embroidery and Jet fringe trimmed a blouse of bright-blue cotton crepe, and a rust-colored georgette blouse was trimmed with gilt beads.

Popular Dinner Dress.

A very popular dinner dress is of crepe de chine with a long bloused bodice which is attached to a slim, straight skirt, over which hangs an apron tunic ending in a broad sash which ties in the back. The gown is sleeveless.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION.
To the Qualified Electors of the Village of Kewaskum, Washington County, Wisconsin:
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That a special election will be held in and for the village of Kewaskum in the County of Washington and State of Wisconsin, on the first day of March, A. D. 1922, for the purpose of submitting to the electors of said village, the question of the approval of the following resolution providing for the issuance of sewerage bonds for said village in the sum of $20,000.00, which resolution was adopted at the regular meeting of the Village Board of said Village of Kewaskum, Wisconsin held on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1922, and which resolution reads as follows:

RESOLUTION
No. 3
A resolution providing for the construction of a sewerage system and disposal plant for the village of Kewaskum (incorporated) in Washington County, Wisconsin, and providing for the issuance of village bonds to raise money for the payment thereof and directing the village Clerk of said village of Kewaskum to call a special election for the purpose of submitting to the electors thereof the question of the approval of said bonds.
WHEREAS, the welfare of the citizens of the village of Kewaskum, Wisconsin, and the protection of the public and private health and property of the residents of said village, require that a system of sewerage and sewage disposal be constructed in said village, Now, Therefore,
The Village Board of the village of Kewaskum DO RESOLVE, As follows:

SECTION I.
That a complete sewerage system for the entire village of Kewaskum, including the construction and operation of a sewage disposal plant and necessary man-holes and catch-basins be constructed and installed in said village substantially in accordance with the plans and specifications as prepared by Jerry Donohue, a civil engineer, which plans are now on file in the office of the village Clerk and which have been adopted by said Village Board, that the estimated cost of said sewerage system and disposal plant to be borne by said village, is the sum of $20,000.00.

SECTION II.
That the expense of the construction of said sewerage system and disposal plant to be borne by said village, shall be paid out of the proceeds of the sale and negotiation of the village bonds of 1922, in the sum of $20,000.00, issued as hereinafter provided and designated as "Sewerage Bonds of 1922". The balance of the cost of construction of said sewerage system, shall be paid by assessment against the lots, parts of lots, and parcels of land, fronting or abutting on the streets or part of streets on which said sewers shall be laid, which is to be assessed per linear foot, as provided by law.

SECTION III.
That the Village Board of the village of Kewaskum declares its purpose to raise money by issuing said village bonds for the purposes aforesaid, and there shall be, and there are hereby ordered and directed to be issued, the negotiable coupon bonds of said village to the aggregate amount of $20,000.00, in number, numbered one (1) to forty (40), both inclusive, each of the denomination of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00); shall bear date March 1, 1922, and shall be due and payable as follows, to-wit:-

Passed February 6th, 1922.
Approved Fred J. Martin.

The Board of Public Works filed its written report, showing that it met in regular session as required by law, and that no objections were made to the plans and specifications for sanitary sewerage system, and disposal plant, as prepared by Jerry Donohue, Civil Engineer, except as noted in regard to disposal plant and sewer from Elm street, and as now on file in the office of the Village Clerk. Said report reading as follows:

REPORT OF BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS
To The Village Board of the Village of Kewaskum, Wisconsin:
The undersigned, constituting the Board of Public Works of said Village, beg leave to report as follows: That pursuant to the notice duly published in the official paper of said Village, proof of which publication is hereto annexed, said Board did, on the 4th day of February, 1922, meet at the Village Hall of said Village at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon and remained in session until the hour of five o'clock in the afternoon of said day, to take up and consider any and all objections that might be made to the proposed plan for a sanitary sewerage system and disposal plant for said village, and hear any person or persons that might appear and desire to be heard in regard to said plans and specifications.

Your board reports that there are no objections made or filed against said plan by any person or persons except that L. D. Guth proposed that the disposal tank be located at a point approximately 700 feet south of the point shown on the plan, and that the sewer running easterly from Elm street be laid parallel to Park street and we respectfully herewith submit the proposed plans and specifications for a sanitary sewerage system and disposal plant as prepared by Jerry Donohue, a civil engineer, without any changes, as the same are now on file in the office of the Village Clerk except that the disposal plant be located at a point approximately 700 feet south of the point shown on the plan and that the sewer running easterly from Elm St. be laid out parallel to Park street to be acted upon by your Honorable Body and recommend that said plan so on file changed as above adopted by your Honorable Body.

Dated at Kewaskum, Wisconsin, this 4th day of February, A. D. 1922.
