MOVE TO ADMIT ALIEN TOILERS

Farmers and Manufacturers Desire Lid Raised on European Immigration.

SHORTAGE OF COMMON LABOR

House Committee at Washington to Give Hearing to Representatives of the National Manufacturers' Association.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The big industries of the country and farm organizations have joined in a determined drive to secure such relaxation of the immigration restriction law as will relieve the present shortage of common labor.

With the backing of the senators and representatives of the leading industrial and agricultural states a concerted effort will be made to obtain legislation at this session of congress which will operate to admit probably not less than 150,000 aliens in excess of the number of immigrants coming in under the 3 per cent quota law.

The house committee on immigration will give a hearing to a committee of the National Manufacturers' association, which will propose three major modifications of the present restriction law. The plan was worked out in consultation with agricultural leaders and its essential features were approved at the recent meeting of the American Farm Bureau federation in Chicago.

The recommendations of the manufacturers' committee follow:

"1. That in fixing the quota of each nationality of otherwise admissible aliens under the present law, due regard should be given to the ascertained annual emigration from the United States of persons of such nationality.

"2. That the secretary of labor shall be authorized, upon the presentation to him of satisfactory evidence of a continuing shortage of labor of a particular class or type, to admit otherwise admissible aliens in excess of the quota until in his judgment such condition is improved.

"3. That provision shall be made for physical examination of aliens at points of immigration or where their passport are issued except that such requirement shall be waived upon assurance of another government that satisfactory examination has been made."

President Declares That the State Department Is Working on the Problem.

Washington, Dec. 30.—President Harding made a direct entrance into the light against Senator Borah's amendment to the naval appropriation bill providing for an international economic and disarmament conference.

In a letter to Chairman Lodge of the senate foreign relations committee, President Harding declared approval of the amendment to be inadvisable in view of what the American government already is doing to help settle European problems.

The president intimated clearly that success of the Borah plan would hinder present efforts by the state department. Senator Lodge visited the White House Thursday morning, before the senate session opened and conferred with the president. After the senator left, the president held a conference with Secretary of State Hughes.

The president's letter did not disclose the nature of the action already taken by the state department to help smooth Europe's path.

HARDING URGES UNBIASED BOARD

President Wants World Commission of Financiers to Settle Reparations.

EUROPEAN POLICY DEFINED

Senator Borah Withdraws Amendment to the Navy Appropriation Bill Requesting Call of World Economic Conference.

Washington, Dec. 30.—President Harding favors the settlement of the German reparations dispute through a commission of disinterested financiers, economists and other experts representing the allied and associated powers. In the event that the conference of premiers in Paris next week fails to solve the problem.

If the United States were invited by the European powers to appoint American members of such a commission to determine the amount of reparations Germany can pay and to recommend a plan of payment the President would accept the invitation and name the delegates as representatives of the United States.

The administration is firmly convinced that the occupation of the Ruhr district of Germany by France or any other resort to force in preference to adoption of the plan favored by the administration would be a tragic mistake.

These disclosures were made at the White House officially following the action of Senator Borah (Rep., Ind.) in withdrawing his proposed amendment to the navy appropriation bill requesting the President to call a world economic conference. The senator abandoned his fight following assurances by Senator Lodge (Rep., Mass.), Watson (Rep., Ind.), and McCormick (Rep., Ill.) that the administration is endeavoring to accomplish the same purpose aimed at in the Borah resolution.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician, but also a prolific student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great weakness of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, while many other so-called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for its phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Pierce's high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the ill peculiar to women.

"It was just fun, in the first place." "But no really nice woman—" he shook his head.

"Dwight! Lulu is nice. The idea!" He regarded her. "Would you have done that?" he would know.

Under his fond look, she softened, took his homage, accepted everything, was silent.

"Certainly not," he said. "Lulu's tastes are not fine like yours. I should never think of you as sisters."

"She's awfully good," Ina said, feelingly. "Fifteen years of married life behind her—but this was sweet and she could not resist."

"She has excellent qualities," he admitted it. "But look at the position she's in—married to a man who tells her he has another wife in order to get free. Now, no really nice woman—"

"No really nice man—" Ina did say that much.

"Ah," said Dwight, "but you could never be in such a position. No, no. Lulu is sadly lacking somewhere."

Ina sighed, threw back her head, caught her lower lip with her upper, as might be in a hen. "What if it was D?" she supposed.

"D?" Dwight's look rebuked his wife. "D?" he said, "was born with ladylike feelings."

It was not yet ten o'clock. Bobby Larkin was permitted to stay until

"How the dickens did you think of plans for a line?" Dwight asked him once. "Now, my father—a dentist, so I came by it natural—never entered my head to be anything else. But pianos—"

The music man—his name was Nell Cornish—threw up his chin in a boyish fashion, and said he'd be figured if he knew. All up and down the Warbleton main street, the chances are that the answer would sound the same. "I'm studying law when I get the chance," said Cornish, as one who makes a bid to be thought of more highly.

"I see," said Dwight, respectfully dwelling on the verb.

Later on, Cornish confided more to Dwight: He was to come by a little inheritance some day—not much, but something. Yes, it made a man feel a certain confidence. . . .

"Don't it?" said Dwight, heartily, as if he knew.

Every one liked Cornish. He told funny stories, and he never compared Warbleton save to its advantage. So at last Dwight said tentatively at lunch:

"What if I brought that Nell Cornish up for supper one of these nights?"

"Oh, Dwight, do," said Ina. "If there's a man in town, let's know it."

"What if I brought him up tonight?" Up went Ina's eyebrows. Tonight?

"Scalloped potatoes and meat loaf and sauce and bread and butter," Lulu contributed.

Cornish came to supper. He was what is known in Warbleton as dapper. This Ina saw as she emerged on the veranda in response to Dwight's informal halloo on his way upstairs. She herself was in white muslin, now much too snug, and a blue ribbon. To her greeting the guest replied in that engaging shyness which is not awkwardness. He moved in some pleasant web of gentleness and friendliness.

They asked him the usual questions, and he replied, rocking all the time with a faint undulating motion of head and shoulders: Warbleton was one of the prettiest little towns that he had ever seen. He liked the people they seemed different. He was sure to like the place, already liked it. Lulu came to the door in Ninian's thin black-and-white gown. She shook hands with the stranger, not looking at him, and said, "Come to supper, all." Monona was already in her place, singing under-breath. Mrs. Bett, after hovering in the kitchen door, entered; but they forgot to introduce her.

"Where's D?" asked Ina. "I declare that daughter of mine is never anywhere."

A brief silence ensued as they were seated. There being a guest, glasses were to come, and Dwight said, "Intelligently and like lightning, a generic appeal to bless this food, forgive all our sins and finally save us. And there was something tremendous in this ancient form whereby all stages of man bow in some now unrecognizable recognition of the germinal of talking food to nourish life—and more."

At "Amen" D! dashed in, her offices at the mirror fresh upon her—perfect hair, silk dress turned up at the hem. She met Cornish, crimsoned, fluttered by her seat, joggled the cable and, "Oh, dear," she said audibly to her mother, "I forgot my flask."

The talk was saved alive by a frank effort. Dwight served, making jest about everybody coming back for more. They went on with Warbleton happenings, improvements and openings; and the runaway, Cornish tried hard to make himself agreeable, not ingratiatingly, but good-naturedly. He wished profoundly that, before coming he had looked up some more stories in the back of the Musical Gazette. Lulu surreptitiously punched off an ant that was running at large upon the cloth and thereafter kept her eyes steadfastly on the sugar bowl to see if it could be from that. Dwight pretended that those whom he was helping a second time were getting more than their share and facetiously landed on D! about eating so much that she would grow up and be married, first thing she knew. At the word "married" D! turned scarlet, laughed heartily and lifted her glass of water.

"And what instruments do you play?" Ina asked Cornish, in an unrelated effort to lift the talk to musical levels.

"Well, do you know," said the music man, "I can't play a thing. Don't know a black note from a white one."

"You don't? Why D! plays very pretty," said D's mother. "But, then, how can you tell what songs to order?" Ina cried.

Later On, Cornish Confided More to Dwight: He Was to Come by a Little Inheritance Some Day.

From the veranda came the indistinguishable murmur of those young voices.

"Bobby," D! was saying within that murmur, "Bobby, you don't kiss me as if you really wanted to kiss me, tonight."

September.

The office of Dwight Herbert Deacon, Dentist, Gold Work a Specialty (sic) in black lettering, and Justice of the Peace in gold, was above a store which had been occupied by one unshakably tenant after another, and had suffered long periods of vacancy when ladies' aid societies served lunches there, under great white signs, badly lettered. Some months of disuse were now broken by the news that the store had been let to a music man. A music man, what on earth was that? Warbleton inquired.

The music man arrived, installed three pianos, and filled his window with sheet music, as sung by many ladies who swung in hammocks or kissed their hands on the music covers. While he was still moving in, Dwight Herbert Deacon wandered downstairs and stood informally in the door of the new store. The music man, a pleasant-faced chap of thirty-odd, was rubbing at the face of a piano.

"Hello, there," he said. "Can I sell you an upright?"

"If I can take it out in pulling your teeth, you can," Dwight replied. "Or," said he, "I might marry you free, either one."

On this their friendship began. Thenceforth, when business was dull, the idle hours of both men were beguiled with idle gossip.

"I would," said Lulu. "I will." Dwight was sobered. This unimagined Lulu looked capable of it. But then he sneered.

"And get turned out of this house, as you would be?"

"Dwight!" cried his Ina. "Oh, you wouldn't!"

"I would," said Dwight. "I will, Lulu knows it."

"I shall tell what I know and then leave your house anyway," said Lulu. "How you get Ninian's word. And I want you should write him now."

"Love your mother? And Ina?" he asked.

"Love everything," said Lulu.

"Oh, father," said Ina, "we can't get along without Lulu." She did not say to what particulars, but Dwight knew.

Dwight looked at Lulu, an upward, downward look, with a manner of peering as if he saw she meant it. And he saw.

He rolled his lips crookedly, tilted his head to signify in the unexpressed, "but that like a woman" he was dumfounded. He rose. "Rather than let you be a show of temper," he said grandly, "I'd do anything."

He wrote the letter, addressed it, about the envelope, pocketed it, and went to walk down with you.

Dwight hesitated, glanced his Ina watched him with concerning brows.

"I was going," said Dwight, "to prove a little straw before bedtime." He roared about the room. "Where's my beautiful straw hat? There's nothing a brick walk to induce sound, brutal sleep," he told them. He kissed a hair.

"You'll be all right, mother?" Lulu asked.

"But did not look up. "These cushions here got a little mite too dry," she said.

In their room, Ina and Dwight discussed the incredible actions of Lulu. "I saw," said Dwight, "I saw she wasn't honest. I'd do anything to know how she got a woman—you know how she got a woman? You know that, don't you?"

"I really think you ought to have written to Ninian about it," she said to Lulu. "It's not a nice position for Lulu."

"Ninian? Well, but whom has she got to blame for it?"

"Why, Ninian," said Ina.

Dwight threw out his hands. "Perhaps he said, 'To tell you the truth, I was perfectly amazed at the way she snuggled him up there in that restaurant.'"

"But, Dwight—"

"Dwight," he said, "Oh, it was the younger girls at the after Christmas sales, providing conservative colors and designs are chosen. A coat like that pictured in dark gray velvets, with collar of squirrel fur, will be good style for several seasons, at least until it is outgrown. It has deep armholes and wide sleeves, smartly trimmed with rows of dark silk braid and finished with turn-back cuffs. It is bloused over a plain belt at a low waistline and fastens with large buttons in groups of two at the neck and belt line.

Judging from recent French importations, Paris is inclined to feature the sleeves in coats for the younger girls. One model has a wing sleeve—a cape-like portion cut in one with the coat sleeve. Another, of light beige velours has deep armholes and sleeves split along the top, where platted crepe is set in. One side of the split is decorated with a row of round buttons and the other with simulated buttonholes. A model for a little girl from Lanvin is covered with laticework embroidery and Patent sponsors a short jacket, open down the front and bloused over a hip band.

Presage Styles for Spring; Styles for the Little Ones

FOR the younger girls, the last coats for winter are very simple in line and becoming to their slim, youthful figures, and those for spring show no radical departure in styles. In colors, beige, sand, pheasant, and golden brown shades are favored, and these soft tones make a lovely background for embroideries in colored wool, on coats for little girls. Besides these colors, certain green shades are shown, with the usual order of colors used, reversed; for these are often decorated with beige-colored braid or narrow borders of gazelle fur, or both.

To Finger-Print Everyone in U.S.

National System of Identification Is Being Urged for This Country by Experts.

TO TAKE ALL OVER FIVE YEARS

Pointed Out It Would Result in Returning to Their Families the Thousands of Unidentified Buried Yearly in Pottery Fields.

What do you think of this scheme to take the finger prints of every man, woman and child in the United States?

Washington, D. C.—A national system of identification is being urged by finger print experts. According to the proposed plan three sets of the prints of each person in this country over five years of age would be taken. One set would be filed at a national bureau of identification at Washington. The second set would go to a bureau at the capital of the state in which the individual lived. And the third copy would be filed with local officials of his city or county.

With this system, it is claimed, puzzles of identity would be reduced to a minimum. Finger prints can not be so completely classified and filed that when a pattern is presented for identification, the experts can quickly ascertain whether or not the same print is in their collection.

Thus, suppose a man suffering from aphasia were found wandering about the streets of a southern city. People are singularly careless about carrying marks of identification and it might easily happen that a Chicago shop label in a hat would be the only clue to his identity.

The man's finger prints would be taken and compared with prints of the same type in the local city file. If he were not found there, the Chicago bureau of identification would be asked to compare his prints with similar prints in their file. If he were not among the residents of Chicago, the national bureau would search its records. Once the man was identified his case of kin, as named on his finger print card, would be notified.

Identify the Dead. By a similar process, the majority of unidentified dead could be returned to their families, we are told. Detectives say that every year 40,000 unidentified dead are buried in the pottery fields in this country. More than 100,000 women are reported missing each year while kidnapped and lost children and missing men constitute a serious problem for great confusion.

An identification bureau, of course, will not make it much easier to locate a person who has disappeared out of his normal environment, leaving no trace. But every such person who turns up unidentified at a police headquarters or hospital or morgue can be almost surely traced through a national finger print system.

Even in cases of drowning and death caused by burns, where a body is most difficult to identify, finger prints can prove of great assistance. Persons who are overtake by violent death are not to stretch the hands, and the skin of the finger tips is thus protected.

According to H. W. Bennett, print expert of this city, every citizen should realize that a complete national finger printing system would be a valuable protection to him.

Unfortunately only a few classes of people—detectives, bankers, insurance men and police officials, principally—appreciate the importance of conclusive identification. It is not easy to stir up enthusiasm among the public. Mr. Bennett says, because the average citizen is not personally interested until he has a specific need for identification.

Mr. Bennett explains that the idea of a national system of finger printing is not new. France, like the United States, has been considering the plan, and Argentina already has a working system, though not quite so complete as that proposed for this country.

To start the system, finger prints would have to be taken just as the census is. After that, each year children attaining six years could be finger-printed on a fixed date.

Patterns Never Change. Mr. Bennett says that this age limit is not set because of any change in prints due to growth. An individual's finger print patterns do not change from birth to death, except to become larger. A baby four weeks old can be finger-printed, Mr. Bennett explains, though it is difficult to keep the fingers unscruffed sufficiently to make a clear print, and the ridges are so fine that they are not easy to analyze. For a permanent record, therefore, it is considered advisable to wait until the sixth year.

Each print record placed on file in national, state and local bureaus, would show the name and address and next of kin of the individual. If he changed his address or the local bureau would expect to be notified of changes to be made on the three records. The efficiency of the system would thus depend to some extent on the cooperation of the public in keeping the record correct.—Frederic J. Maska in the Chicago Daily News.

Machine Ends Problem for Doubtful Lovers

No longer need the doubtful lover remain doubtful. An apparatus being perfected by Dr. Albert Abrams, physician, of San Francisco, Cal., will mechanically answer the question of whether love exists in an individual, and if so, how much. The machine measures love by recording the vibration felt by the "patient" when he concentrates his thoughts on the girls of his acquaintance.

IMPORTANT CARE OF LAYING HENS

High Egg Production Secured Only by Duplicating Spring and Summer Conditions.

SUCCULENT FOOD IS USEFUL

Stock Beets, Cabbages and Sprouted Oats Are Especially Valuable—Epsom Salts Is Most Satisfactory Substitute.

Only through careful feeding can high egg production be secured in winter, and the caring poultryman has noticed that the number of eggs carried out each day is closely related to what and how much in the way of feed is carried in.

One important factor in the care of birds in winter is to duplicate, in so far as possible, the natural conditions of the regular production season in spring and summer. Thus some form of green, succulent food is very useful to keep the birds in a healthy condition and their systems in tone. Stock beets, cabbages and sprouted oats are especially valuable for this purpose. If no succulent feed is available Epsom salts fed at the rate of one pound per 100 birds in the drinking water about twice a month makes a satisfactory substitute.

Balanced Rations.

Balanced rations consist of a scratch mixture and a mash. The scratch mixture, usually composed of three or more grains, keeps up the body weight of the bird and supplies heat. The mash consisting of ground grains or their by-products, being high in digestibility and rich in protein, is more directly available for egg production.

Heavy mash consumption goes with high production and the quantities of scratch grains fed are designed to be sufficiently low to encourage heavy mash consumption.

The scratch mixture used with best results at the New Jersey experiment station and egg-laying stations is split parts by weight of cracked corn, wheat and oats. This is fed in deep litter at the rate of from 10 to 12 pounds per 100 birds.

Make-Up of Dry Mash.

The dry mash used is composed of equal parts by weight of wheat bran, wheat middlings, ground oats, corn meal and meat-scrap. It is fed in hoppers and kept constantly before the birds. Careful feeders watch their birds and regulate the quantity of scratch so as to keep the birds in such a condition that they will be eating mash eagerly with no accumulation of scratch grains in the litter.

Poultrymen often complain of lack of production, when they themselves are at fault through slipshod methods of feeding their birds. The careful feeder weighs or measures his feed accurately and thus knows the amounts and the proportions of scratch and mash consumed.

ALFALFA NEEDS SOME LIME

All Legumes Are Injured More or Less by Acid or Sour Soils—Cause of Failures.

The reason why so many farmers have failed in their attempts to grow alfalfa is that they have sown this crop on sour or acid land. All legumes are injured more or less by acid soils and alfalfa is one that refuses to grow in soils that are only slightly acid. An application of lime will correct this evil.

FEED DAIRY COW LIBERALLY

Animal Cannot Be Expected to Produce Large Milk Yield When Given Scarce Ration.

When the dairy cow is fed just enough to maintain her body weight she cannot be expected to give much milk. About one-half of the nutrients in the average ration go to sustain the body. Always feed a full ration.

Safeguard the Corn.

Seed corn that contains considerable moisture is easily frozen. To prevent loss of corn through freezing, close up the seed house at night, and keep it open during the day for drying.

Check Gully Erosion.

A woven wire dam across a gully will check gully erosion if it has not already proceeded too far. The dam is essentially a low fence with the posts set deep and close together.

HANDLING GRAIN IN SACKS VERY COSTLY

Detailed Results of Recent Test in Oregon Given.

Handling in Bulk is Becoming Universally Recognized as Most Economical System and is Gaining Rapidly in Favor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The unloading of sacked grain from cars requires 12 times the labor used in unloading the same quantity of bulk grain, recent tests conducted by E. N. Bates and A. L. Rush of the United States Department of Agriculture show. The tests also show that the cost of unloading sacked grain from a railroad car and piling the sacks in a warehouse is four times as much as the cost of unloading and placing in bins of an elevator an equal quantity of bulk grain. These tests were made at a modern terminal elevator and sack warehouse in Portland, Ore., and the detailed results are contained in Farmers' Bulletin 1290, entitled "The Bulk Handling of Grain," just published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The bulletin states that the handling of grain in bulk is becoming universally recognized as the most economical grain-handling system known. The bulk handling system has long been in use in the large grain-producing sections east of the Rocky mountains, but the Pacific coast states have until recent years handled grain almost entirely in bags. Bulk handling is now growing in favor in the Pacific coast states.

The chief advantages of bulk handling are said to be the saving in the cost of handling, the elimination of the cost of the bags, the prevention of waste from leaky bags, the ease and accuracy of inspecting the grain, and the convenience with which bulk grain can be conditioned and cleaned.

The time and labor saved on the farm by handling grain in bulk are even more striking than the saving at terminal points, the bulletin states, giving as a reason that the handling of grain in sacks is a slow and laborious process, and usually no mechanical equipment such as hand trucks and sack-piling machinery can be handled on the farm.

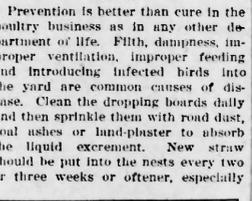

Large terminal elevators, equipped for receiving, handling, conditioning and delivering grain in bulk into vessels for export are now located at each of the Pacific coast seaboard markets, and many cargoes of grain loaded from these elevators are now being successfully exported in bulk.

The bulletin gives the results of investigations regarding the economical phases involved in the bulk and sack methods of handling grain and describes the equipment necessary for the successful handling of grain in bulk on the farm. Copies of the bulletin can be obtained free upon request to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

WHITEWASH IS POULTRY AID

Filth, Dampness, Improper Ventilation, Poor Feeding Are Causes of Disease.

Prevention is better than cure in the poultry business as in any other department of life. Filth, dampness, improper ventilation, improper feeding and introducing infected birds into the yard are common causes of disease. Clean the dropping boards daily and then sprinkle them with road dust, coal ashes or lime-plaster to absorb the liquid excrement. New straw should be put into the nests every two or three weeks or oftener, especially Whitewash Poultry House at Least Once Each Year.

If it becomes damp or dirty. Whitewash the quarters once a year at least, late in summer or early in the fall.

Free range and plenty of shade, especially during the hot days, are necessary if chickens are to grow rapidly and develop into vigorous fowls. Growing chickens that have free range find quantities of green feed, bugs, worms and other things, therefore require less grain, and they are less liable to sickness or disease.

NEW YORK IS CHIEF MARKET

Often Quoted as Paying Highest Prices for Early Arrivals of Fruit and Vegetables.

Of the leading markets New York is often quoted as paying the highest prices for very early arrivals of fruits and vegetables, but during the height of the season is often quoted below the others, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Common Sense in Feeding.

The care used in feeding the hens and pullets this fall and winter and the rations fed will have a tremendous influence upon the fertility of the hatching eggs which are to be set when the hatching season arrives.

Market Crops Through Steers.

Make steers clean up the waste feeds on the farm. Steer, corn fodder and beet tops can best be marketed through steers if used in proper combinations with other feeds.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE FOXES

Daddy Fox was devoted to Mother Fox. He had brought her food and had seen that she had eaten it at the time when her mind was on the little baby foxes.

When the little baby foxes were very, very young, Mother Fox was along with them because she wanted to be quite alone with them at first so she could whisper to them some mother fox secrets.

Mother Fox had three dear small children and was very proud of them. They had been born in the good old homestead in a hollow tree.

They were quite blind when they were born and they were black in color. But their helplessness only made them more appealing and wonderful to Mother Fox.

"You will grow up to be such beautiful foxes," Mother Fox said to them as they dreamed and slept. She did not want them to become conceited, but she liked to talk to them and tell them how she loved them, and they could tell by the sound of her voice and by her sweet ways with them that she loved them.

Mother Fox believed in telling her little ones how much she cared for them because she thought it would make them want to be worthy of all those splendid things she thought of them.

And their daddy thought the same way, too. "Yes, and you will want to go hunting for mice and other small, delicious animals."

"You will enjoy insects, too." "And once in awhile you will have a poultry banquet which will make people very angry."

"But you needn't think of people, for people and their wishes are not so important as foxes and their wishes." "Your family name is that of Gray Fox. But you have many cousins."

"There is the Red Fox family. They are far more clever than we are, but in many ways they are like us. They, too, care devotedly for their little ones just as we do."

"The Daddy and Mother Red Foxes love each other all their lives and have so much happiness by being so devoted and fond of each other."

"The Red Fox family care more about having a superior home than we do. They often keep the same home for years and years and years. They have more than one entrance to their home, too, so that if they're surprised at one entrance they get away out of another."

"There are the Alaska Red Foxes, too. They dig nice homes with different entrances for safety, and they, too, make lovely mates and devoted and loving parents."

"In the winter time it is hard for them for they live far North where they have to hunt under difficulties for their food."

"Oh yes, they do not have it so easily. Then we have the Silver Fox cousins and the Desert Fox cousins and the Cross Fox cousins."

"And none of us are stupid. We are all very bright, though the Desert Fox family is not nearly so bright as the rest of us."

"Ah, my little foxes, grow up to be fine strong, beautiful foxes and you will hunt and be happy, and though you may be considered crafty and sly by people, you will be good to each other."

"For such are the ways of foxes. Ah, yes, such are the ways of foxes." And Mother Fox called Daddy Fox and asked him if he didn't think the children were very beautiful.

And I think you may be able to guess the answer that Daddy Fox gave!

THIS C. & O. CONDUCTOR GAINS 35 LBS.

"I enjoyed Christmas this time with more pleasure than I had in years," remarked W. L. Mahone, 410 Charlottesville, Va., the other day, in telling of the benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac. Mr. Mahone has been a railroad conductor for nineteen years. He runs on the Chesapeake & Ohio from Charlottesville to Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va.

"My stomach and digestion had been bad so long that I can hardly remember the time I could eat without suffering afterwards. I gradually grew weaker until I was often having to lay off from my run. In this run-down condition I contracted pneumonia in both lungs and came near losing my life."

"After this spell my stomach troubled me worse than ever and I remained almost as weak and helpless as a baby. While sitting around reading the papers I was attracted by the statements about Tanlac, which had such a sincere ring that I was led to believe the medicine might help me up the hill. My appetite never fails, stomach misery is all gone, and I have gained thirty-five pounds in weight. Tanlac keeps me feeling 'spick and span,' too, so I can make my runs and still feel fine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Over 25 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

CAME TO HIM NATURALLY

Absent-Minded Man's Ingenious Reason for Making Use of Profane Combination for Safe.

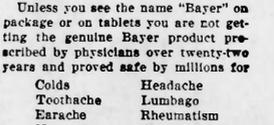

E. Fournier d'Albe is the inventor of the optophone, a machine which, by transforming print into light rays and thence into musical sounds, permits the blind to read.

Professor d'Albe said, modestly in an interview in New York: "Yes, my optophone is rather ingenious. It is almost as ingenious as your American business man who used for the combination of his safe the queer words, 'Oh, hell!'"

"A lady asked him why he used such a queer combination as that. He answered: "I have a very poor memory, and so, you see, madam, whenever I forget the combination it comes to me."

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble. Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions. Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Tidal Wave Not Feared at Hilo

Because of Location, Hawaiian City Is in Favorable Position to Observe Disturbances.

PRETTIEST CITY OF ISLANDS

Two Tidal Waves, Following Recent Chilean Earthquakes, Sweep Harbor Without Causing Damage or Uneasiness.

Washington.—Hilo, second city of the Hawaiian islands, into the harbor of which tidal waves swept on two occasions following the recent Chilean earthquakes, is the subject of the following bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Situated on land which rises toward a wonderful background formed by the highest island mountains in the world," says the bulletin, "Hilo is in little danger from ten or twelve-foot tidal waves such as those which recently bathed its shores. But, because of its location on the sheltered island of the chain, facing eastward, it was in a most favorable position to observe the results of this mighty phenomenon which raised the level of the earth's greatest ocean seemingly as easily as a careless bather can splash water from his tub."

"Hiloans claim that their city is the most beautiful in the islands; and it would be difficult to find a more ideal setting. The shores of a broad bay sweep away on both sides of the town like the lines of a hyperbola. In the foreground, as one approaches from the sea, is an idyllic tropic islet that its discoverer might have been forgiven for naming 'Enchanted Isle,' but which, in matter-of-fact English, is called 'Coconut Island.' Back of the city and its bay, fringed with tropical verdure, rise the highlands of the interior to their apex in Mauna Kea, often snow-capped, the highest of island peaks. To the right, numerous streams rush to the sea."

"One reason why Hiloans refused to become alarmed because of an unusual phenomenon of the sea is that they live next door to two of the world's greatest land wonders—the active volcanoes Kilauea and Mauna Loa—and not only have not suffered from their nearness, but have profited greatly because their city is the gateway through which thousands of visitors pass to view these 'tame volcanoes.' An excellent automobile highway leads from Hilo through a majestic forest of tree-ferns to a hotel on the brink of Kilauea, about thirty miles away; and a supplemental road actually descends into the huge crater, so that motorists may be driven to the very brink of the bubbling lake of molten lava in the smaller, interior crater."

"Beneficiary of Hawaiian 'Magic.' The highway continues on to Mauna, from which have come the great lava flows of prehistoric and historic times that have built up Hawaii, youngest of the islands of the Hawaiian group, and make it still an island 'in process of manufacture.' The latest of these lava flows occurred in 1919, when a river of molten stone rushed down the mountain on the opposite side of the island from Hilo and changed hissing into the sea. For many days the water bubbled, while steam clouds rose. Fish, boiled to a turn, floated nearby and could be nicked up by those venturous enough to row into the hot waters near the fiery crater."

"In 1880, when Hilo was still largely a native town, its existence was threatened by one of the greatest flows Mauna Loa has ever sent forth. Slowly the white-hot steam advanced straight for the town, until it was less than two miles away. The people were panic-stricken and, as a last resort, appealed to the only surviving princess and priestess of their greatest royal line. She took her stand a mile from the town and declared the flow would stop there. It did. There are Hawaiians who maintain still that Hilo was saved from destruction only because Pele, goddess of the volcano, stopped her fires when her daughter interceded."

"Depth Bombs Used to Destroy Liqueur. Tacoma, Wash.—Federal prohibition agents exploded dynamite depth bombs in Puget sound, near here, to get an attempt to recover from the water a quantity of liquor that had been dumped overboard during the pursuit of a liquor smuggler's boat."

Mills of the Gods

The quotation is: "Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceedingly small; though with patience He stands waiting, with exactness grinds He all." They were written by Frederick von Logun, who lived from 1694 to 1765. He was born at Bracon in Silesia and was one of the most highly esteemed epigrammatists and satirists of his day. History speaks of him as "one of the few men who preserved his national integrity during the Thirty Years' war." He was most scathing in his criticism of the German court and court customs, their persistent arraignment of Germans for manners and customs. This notable epigram was translated from the German by William Cullen Bryant.

YOUR TOMORROW

Power is not given to ordinary mortals to go to one stride to the top. The summit of hope can be reached only by repeated steps. Sometimes hard and painful, waiting for patience and an extraordinary control of the heart, the hand and the tongue.

When you succeed in mastering yourself today, it is likely that tomorrow will be less imperious in its demands upon you, and yield a little in its inclination to get you in trouble.

Upon the other hand, if you are impatient, careless and indisciplined to take the best of opportunities today, tomorrow will hold these opportunities against you, and begin at the earliest table to make you unhappy.

It will follow you as you go to bed, smothering at your heels like a black dog. And when you confront tomorrow you will feel the sweat of anxiety cross-currents and inconsistent, only at the first drop of an

YOUR GRIEVANCES

WHEN you complain, analyze your complaint. The chances are you will find that it is really a complaint at all. For example, many men feel aggrieved because others, doing apparently the same work, are better paid. Watch them a while, and you are sure to find that they are either doing more work or better work than you are.

They are brothers or cousins of your own, and are better paid for that reason, charge that up to human nature. You are bound to run into cases like that. They are not grievances. They are the ordinary facts of life. You have got to meet.

If you are aggrieved because your work is not too much, find out if you are not doing a perfectly good job at all. If you are looking somewhere else for a better job, you are not doing a perfectly good job at all.

When you start a little investigation into your personal expenditure, you will discover that you are spending more money on things that are not really important than on things that are.

There is no denying that for most of us the light for existence is pretty dim. If you look toward you than if you look toward him.

It is all around you men are getting better positions, earning more money, accomplishing important things, and most of them started with exactly the same chance that you have. You can't complain of your luck; hard work is the only way to get ahead. If you are not doing a perfectly good job at all, you are not doing a perfectly good job at all.

EASY

By WILL M. MAUPIN

I BOUGHT my wife a meerschaum pipe. And kept it hid away. Until I could hand it to her. Upon last Christmas day.

For me she bought a collar— A sensiskin beauty, too. She hung it on the Christmas tree. And said: "Dear, it's for you."

That evening, when 'twas time to dine. We both sat down to sup. She with the pipe, I with the fur— And traded, even up.

Has a Galoot Like This Proposed to You?

Symptoms: He's awfully smiling and affable. He hasn't a share in any oil company. . . but . . . no one has it on him for oiliness. Slippery! If you think you have him in one hand, he will slip through the other. When he goes anywhere, he can make bitter enemies think that he agrees with both sides. . . It doesn't matter how many miles of railroad stretches between the two opinions. His clothes look slick enough if you don't call out the Public Service Commission to investigate the dizzy, crag-like edges of collars and cuffs. He always has a small job and is continually oiling his friend's ambitions for a possible new one.

Is Winter Time Your Backache Time? Does Your Back Foretell Every Change of the Weather? Do You Feel Old and Stiff and Suffer Sharp, Rheumatic Pains? Then Look to Your Kidneys!

ARE winter months your backache months? Does every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day? Then look to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. They overload the blood with poisons and impurities that the kidneys have to filter off. The kidneys weaken under this rush of new work; become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder, then, that every cold finds you suffering with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities. Don't wait! Delay may lead to serious or chronic kidney sickness. Realize that your kidneys have weakened in fighting the cold-created poisons and give them the help they need. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills today. Doan's have helped thousands at such times and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

OLE ANDERSON, Maple St., Glenwood City, Wis., says: "Some years ago I had typhoid fever and after that my back gave me considerable trouble. I caught a cold, which settled on my kidneys, and I was so lame I couldn't do my work. It hurt me to bend and when I straightened sharp pains caught me. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I started using them. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills removed the pain and lameness and I felt fine."

MRS. G. W. SWEET, 2 S. Second St., Hudson, Wis., says: "I think hard work and a cold brought on my kidney trouble. My back pained just over my kidneys. I could hardly get up when I sat down, as sharp, cutting twinges caught me through my kidneys. Mornings, I was so stiff and lame I could hardly get around. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I got some and after using the second box the headache left me entirely and my kidneys again acted all right."

Tidal Transportation. Some of the finest grindstones in the world come from the bottom of the Bay of Fundy. The stonecutters there have a simple method of moving them to the shore. Workmen quarry the stones from the solid rock when the tide is out and fasten them to a large flat-bottomed boat.

Not Milk Enough for the Hogs. Dr. Allen, of the Indiana state board of health, was holding a clinic at Seip, examining children of school age. One youngster, age six, was underweight. The doctor began to make inquiries as to his diet, and the following dialogue took place: "You don't drink milk?" "None."

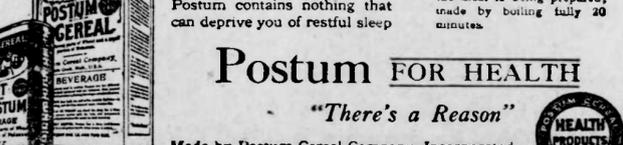

Had Plea in Extenuation. Moses Reilly Not Entirely to Blame for His Lapse From the Path of Virtue. Moses was before the court for stealing a turkey. The judge kindly asked him: "Moses, why did you steal a turkey?" "I don't know, yo' honell."

Cherished Associations. "Our defeated colleague will at least have the pleasure of being home again among old friends." "It'll be no pleasure," replied Senator Sorghum. "I can think of nothing I'd enjoy less than not coming to Washington to be among my old enemies."
