

The Cottage Gardener

The Successful Gardener Plants the Seeds in a Flat Tray, to Be Set in a Window on the Living Room Floor or in the Basement Where It is Warm and Sunny.

SHOULD FERTILIZE TO GET GOOD CROP

Stable Manure, Soil Building Crops, or Commercial Fertilizer Necessary.

Most farmers can spare enough manure from their other crops to fertilize properly a one-fourth acre garden plot, but in some sections, especially where manure is no longer to be had in quantity and other means must be found for fertilizing garden soils. In brief, states the United States Department of Agriculture, at least three methods of adding fertility to the soil. First, by the application of manure; second, by the use of soil building crops, and third, by commercial fertilizers. No one method is as good as any two or the three combined and if we are to get the best results from the use of commercial fertilizer a reasonable amount of manure or organic matter must be in the soil.

The amount of manure required will depend entirely upon the soil itself, but very few cases are found where the use of manure on gardens is being overdone. The same might be said about the turning under of manure crops or soil building crops. Even the weeds that grow upon the surface during the late summer, aside from their seeds, are often valuable for working into the soil. The method of applying the manure will also depend upon local conditions, but as a rule manure that has been piled and thoroughly composted will give better results than that which is in the raw state.

Too much cannot be said in favor of the compost pile by means of which equal parts of manure and soil or sods, which are even better, are piled to rot. This compost heap should be turned once or twice during the winter months and the material applied to the garden as a top dressing during the spring. Ten tons of this kind of material will not be too much for the ordinary one-fourth acre garden. Commercial fertilizers are used for adding plant food to the garden and give best results when used in conjunction with stable manure or compost. Commercial gardeners often use as much as 4,000 pounds to the acre for special crops like celery, but gen-

RAIN AND WELL WATER

Rain or soft water is the best for plants. When growing in the flats, if soft water is available it will be better than hard or well water. If there is no soft water and water can be caught from the house roof when it rains, the plants will respond with greater satisfaction if given a drink of the rain water. Soft water is better for the crops when growing in the open. However, during a drought, any kind of water is better than none, especially when applied directly to the roots.

GARDEN NEAR THE HOUSE

Locating the garden in relation to the house is an important factor too often overlooked. Often the garden is placed in the most remote corner of the yard or grounds. Modern gardeners who, as a rule, cultivate their erally speaking 400 or 500 pounds of fertilizer containing 3 or 4 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent phosphoric acid and 2 to 4 per cent potash, will be all that is needed on a one-fourth-acre garden. Fertilizers should be used most heavily on corn, potatoes, cabbage and the root crops and more lightly on beans, peas and tomatoes.

START THE PLANTS IN WINDOW BOXES

All Vegetable and Flower Seeds Respond to Warmth and the Bright Sunshine.

A window box for sowing early vegetable plants will give the home gardener from ten days to three weeks advantage in readiness over his neighbor who does not have some means of starting early plants. Tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, cabbage, cauliflower and lettuce are the crops that lend themselves best to starting early in the house. It does not matter what kind of a box is used, but for convenience it should be about 3 or 4 inches deep and of a size that will readily fit into the window space. The box can be set on a small table or on special legs or supports.

One method of providing a window box is described by the United States Department of Agriculture. Take a soap box or some similar packing box and saw it horizontally to lengthwise into two sections. If the box is too deep for sawing through the center, two cuts can be made, using the top of the box with cover nailed on to form the bottom tray and the bottom part of the box for a second tray. The middle section which is cut out may have a bottom nailed onto it, forming still another tray. Only one tray will be needed in the window at first for the sowing of the seeds. Later additional trays or flats, as they are called, are required for transplanting. One point of great importance in starting early plants in the window is to see that they are not over wafered. Another point is to turn the box from time to time so that the plants will not grow crooked and drawn toward the window. A supply of good soil should be stored in the cellar or in some dry place in the autumn in order to have it available along in February or March when it is wanted for filling the window boxes.

gardeners in their spare time, now place their gardens as close to the house as possible without marring the appearance of the property. Even this handicap is obviated by planting ornamental hedges or shrubbery around the borders of the vegetable garden when it is too conspicuous and by planting a border of showy annuals with an occasional bed of perennials among the vegetables to add ornament as well as utility to the planting.

START THESE INDOORS

Plants which should be sown indoors or in the hotbed for early vegetable garden are lettuce, onions, leeks, tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, parsley, celery, cucumbers and melons. If for any reason particularly early crops are desired, carrots and beets may be started and transplanted, but this is rarely deemed desirable. If a gardener has ample cold frame room, he can have an extra early crop of the frame by planting the seed there to mature. Beets, carrots, young onions, radishes, spinach and early turnips may be started in this way.

YEAR'S WORK ON FIGHTING PESTS

Task of Eradication of Insects Which Yearly Do Millions of Dollars' Damage.

BATTLE ON PLANT DISEASES

Report of Federal Horticultural Board Tells of Quarantines Aimed at Controlling Many of Different Plagues.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
The work of combating insect pests that yearly do millions of dollars' damage to American crops was carried on vigorously during the fiscal year 1922, according to the annual report of the Federal Horticultural Board, United States Department of Agriculture, which is charged with enforcing the plant quarantine act. In all, the board now has in force some 22 foreign and 15 domestic quarantines aimed at controlling pests already present in the country and guarding against the entry of others from abroad.

Most Injurious Pests.

Among the major insect pests that the board is fighting in co-operation with the bureaus concerned are the pink bollworm of cotton, European corn borer, gipsy and brown-tail moths and Japanese beetles. The more important plant diseases are the potato wart, white-pine blister rust and citrus canker. The report summarizes briefly the progress made against these various pests and diseases.

The work of eradicating the pink bollworm is in better status now than ever before, says the report. Substantial reductions in the infested areas have been effected and suitable legislation and co-operation on the part of the seed and planter concerns have been obtained. The real danger, says the report, will come just at this period when the insect seems to be practically eliminated, and planters and others may come to a false conclusion that it is not necessary to continue the work. The inspection and field work, it points out, is more necessary now and should be prosecuted with more intensity at this stage than at any other if ultimate success is to be gained.

No new outbreak of the European corn borer was reported last year. The pest is still limited, so far as is known, substantially to the areas of the year before. The New England area, eastern and western New York areas, and the Florida peninsula, which it apparently spread to the southern and western shores of Lake Erie. During the year there was a local but limited spread of the insect in each area.

Japanese Beetle to Spread.

The belief is expressed in the report that the Japanese beetle is one of the most dangerous insect introductions made in many years, and threatens large future losses, particularly to fruit and forage crops. There is no question, says the report, but that this pest will in time spread throughout the United States. The prevention of spread, however, is of immediate value and gives time to study the insect and devise methods of controlling it.

The area quarantined in New England on account of the gipsy moth has been extended, but the brown-tail moth area has been reduced very materially. The eradication work with respect to the infestations determined in 1920-21 by the gipsy moth, chiefly in New Jersey but with minor colonies in New York and Pennsylvania, has been actively prosecuted now for two seasons and the outlook is good for the eradication of this pest in these states. The original infestation in New Jersey resulted from large importations of blue spruce from Europe just prior to the passage of the plant quarantine act giving authority to control and safeguard such importations.

In the fall of 1921 the white-pine blister rust was discovered in southwestern British Columbia and in the Puget Sound region of Washington. In co-operation with the state and Canada the department has taken prompt action to fight the disease and prevent its spread. A federal quarantine was put into effect.

During the year the solicitor of the department reported the conviction of 19 shippers for violations of the plant quarantine act, 14 in regard to the white-pine blister rust quarantine, 2 in regard to the avocado or alligator pear quarantine, 1 in regard to the sweet potato and yam quarantine, 1 in regard to the gipsy moth and brown-tail moth quarantine and 1 in regard to the sugar-cane quarantine.

RISK IN UKEMPT ORCHARD

Invitation Is Extended to San Jose Scale, Plum Curculio and Other Insect Pests.

By tolerating an unkempt orchard and undernourished trees we invite San Jose scale, plum curculio, apple worm, shot-hole borer and other pests to stay with us in our orchards over winter and enjoy our hospitality. Allowing the refuse of garden crops to remain in the garden undisturbed is to provide comfortable winter homes for insect enemies of the garden.

Cull Cows and Sows.

While we are in the notion of culling why not go down the line and clean out the cows and sows which cannot show a good margin above the profit line.

More Orchards Needed.

Fruit growing is not as difficult as some farmers believe. Any farmer can soon learn to care for fruit trees, at least enough for home use. More home orchards is one of our needs.

Winter Laying Flocks.

Winter laying flocks should be put on a good laying ration to bring them into production as soon as possible. This feeding plan should be carefully thought out.

CULLING INCREASES PRODUCTION OF EGGS

Government Exhibit at Chicago Was Quite Instructive.

Poultryman Given Points to Determine Poor Layer From a Good One—Means of Increasing Profits From Chickens.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
A sure means of increasing egg production by proper culling was given in an exhibit entitled "Make Your Poultry Pay" shown by the United States Department of Agriculture at the International Live Stock exposition, Chicago.

Two pens of chickens were shown. One lot of 12 hens was not culled, and ate in one year 900 pounds of feed, costing $20.70. The 12 hens laid 100 dozen eggs during the year. Contrast this with the lot of eight hens which had been culled, and which laid the same number of eggs but ate only

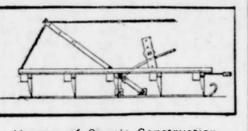

A Splendid Flock of White Leghorn Pullets.

900 pounds of feed, at a cost of $13.50. The lot of 8 hens that was not culled ate 50 per cent more feed than the lot that was culled and produced no more eggs. The extra cost of feed, however, is but one of the larger costs. Others are the extra labor, extra housing, and extra capital invested. To enable the poultryman to cull his hens properly the exhibit gave the points to be looked for when determining a poor layer or a good layer. These points are quickly learned and are means of increasing profits from poultry.

HARROW IS HANDY FARM TOOL

Invention of Kansas City (Mo.) Man Is Easy to Operate and Inexpensive to Make.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a harrow, the invention of F. G. Hagerstaff, 2227 Tracy avenue, Kansas City, Mo., says:

Harrow of Simple Construction.

operable or inoperable at will and while in motion, which may be raised above the ground, by means of a cam-lever, whereby to be cleared of accumulated debris, and which is of simple and durable construction, reliable in operation and easy and inexpensive to manufacture. The harrow may be drawn by tractor or other suitable means.

DAIRY COWS REQUIRE GRAIN

During Seasons When There Is No Pasture Animals Must Have Some Hard Feed.

"Spring pastures will soon be here and many farmers and dairymen will stop feeding grain and dry feed," says A. C. Baer, professor of dairying at Oklahoma A. and M. college.

"When cows have no pasture, they should get one pound of grain for three pounds of milk. While on pasture one pound of grain for six pounds of milk is usually enough. In addition, good dairy cows ought to have access to some good hay, preferably alfalfa.

BIG INCREASE IN POTATOES

Estimated 675,000,000 More Bushels Produced in 1922 Than in Year Previous.

Production of potatoes in 1922 in 16 countries is estimated to be 675,000,000 bushels more than last year and 40,000,000 more than the average production for the five years 1909-1913, according to figures compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. The total acreage of potatoes in 1922 for the 24 countries for which estimates are available was 20,201,000 acres.

Keep Ducks' Feet Warm.

It is important that laying ducks be where they can keep their feet warm in winter and early spring. A glass window or a covering of canvas can be made to admit light to the winter quarters.

Good Cow Insurance.

Several weeks of liberal feeding with good roughage and from six to ten pounds of grain a day while cows are dry is good insurance for efficient production in the next lactation period.

DYED HER BABY'S COAT, A SKIRT AND CURTAINS WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint her old, worn, faded things new. Buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never stain, spot, fade or run.—Advertisement.

Another Infant Prodigy.

"And whose boy are you?" the visitor asked of little Robert.
"Mamma's boy and papa's boy," was the prompt answer.
"Well, well! That's fine!" the visitor commented. "But just how can you be both mamma's boy and papa's boy?"
But Robert had evidently thought along those lines himself. He came back promptly with:
"Why, that's easy; can't a wagon have two horses?"

To Have a Clear, Sweet Skin.

Endangers Fur Animals.

According to Dr. William T. Hornaday it takes 80 skins to make the average mink wrap, 200 for a squirrel coat and 280 for a black mole coat. 90 skins may go to the making of a striped skunk jacket, and 200 to a Siberian ermine wrap. Before many years, if the present rate of slaughter continues, many of our most interesting animals will be practically extinct; even now the trapper is forced rather arduous, and skins once unmarketable are being used to supply the deficiency. —Scientific American.

NO CANARIES IN CANARIES

Marines Who Had Expected to Stock Up There Met With Some Disappointment.

Canaries are scarcer than hens' teeth in the Canary Islands, according to the United States marines of the cruiser Pittsburgh, who arrived at Gibraltar recently after a visit to Las Palmas, the principal seaport of those islands.

The marines expected to find canaries hopping all over the islands, waiting for salt to be sprinkled on their tails. Disillusionment came with their first visit ashore.

The islands got their name from canis, the Latin name for dog, and the marines say there are fewer canaries in the Canaries than there are snakes in Ireland.

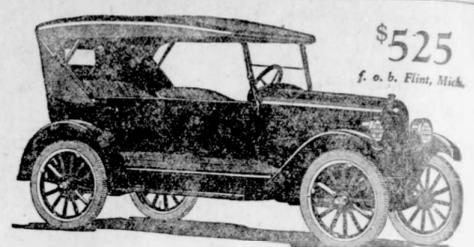

Boiled Loon Recipe.

Uncle Augustus, the sage of the village, was engaged in conversation with one of the young hunters when he was enjoying the good ducking.

"The young hunter wanted to know something about a loon."
"Ye never see a loon?" asked Uncle Augustus in amazement.
"No," replied the young man. "I never did. Are they good to eat?"
"Yes, they're good to eat, if you know how to cook 'em. You see, you put the loon in a kettle of boiling water and set it on the stove. Then you drop a fatter on it, and when the fattron is done th' loon is ready ter eat."—Judge.

It is the same thing in fact, but in poetry it is sunset and in prose it is sundown.

NOT THAT KIND OF A BAT

Geneva, three and one-half years old, has a baby brother seven months old and is, therefore, "wise" as to the articles required to provide for all the needs and comforts of an infant.

She was in a store the other day when a woman, a stranger to both Geneva and her aunt, entered. The newcomer was nicely dressed and carried a commodious leather handbag, closed at the top by a drawstring.

Walking up to the woman, Geneva asked: "Have you a baby?"
"No," said the surprised woman.
"Then," asked the little girl, "why have you this?" laying her hand on the bag that the woman carried.

What, indeed!
Mother (to small daughter just home from a visit)—I am sorry to say your aunt gave a very poor account of you: "Naughty, untidy, unpopular, untruthful, inclined to lisp."
Daughter—Does auntie really write all that?
Mother—Yes.
Daughter (judicially)—What a thing to say to a child's own mother.—London Punch.

PARIS STATESMAN SLAIN BY WOMAN

Young Female Anarchist Kills Marius Plateau, Leader of Monarchists.

RAID RADICAL NEWSPAPERS

Murderess Is Said to Have Sent a Bomb to United States Ambassador Herrick About a Year Ago.

Paris, Jan. 25.—French monarchists raided the radical newspapers Ouvre and Les Nouvelles, destroying their offices and large quantities of printed materials in reprisal for the assassination of Marius Plateau, leader of the Royalists.

The Royalist group held a demonstration in the center of Paris to express indignation at the killing of Plateau by Mme. Germaine Berton, a young anarchist.

The Berton woman, who has asserted she intended to kill Leon Daudet, monarchist chief in the chamber of deputies, went to the office of M. Plateau, who was editor of the paper Action Francaise, where she fired three shots, two of which took effect.

She then attempted suicide, but inflicted only a slight wound, and will recover. She said that Daudet was responsible for the new war in the Ruhr and that she had planned to shoot him. Failing, she attacked Plateau instead.

Information to police indicates that the Berton woman was responsible for the attempt to assassinate Myron T. Herrick, United States ambassador to France, about a year ago.

A bomb was sent to Herrick in a package. It was received at his home and exploded, but the diplomat was not injured. A servant was slightly wounded.

The police found a letter Germaine Berton was alleged to have written to a friend, saying: "The police suspect me of sending the grenade to Ambassador Herrick, but they have no direct proof, so I believe that I am safe."

Although the woman was sometimes called Madam Berton, it is believed she is not married. She is only about twenty years of age.

HERRIN MINERS FREED

Five Found Not Guilty in Illinois Massacre Case.

Eleven Farmers and One Miner on the Jury—Deliberate Twenty-Six Hours.

Marion, Ill., Jan. 20.—All five defendants in the Herrin massacre case were acquitted by the jury here, after twenty-six hours' deliberation. The defendants were charged with the murder of Howard Hoffman during the riot.

When the news was given out that Judge Hartwell had been summoned to receive a verdict, the courtroom filled quickly. Before calling the jury into the courtroom, Judge Hartwell cautioned the spectators against any demonstration.

The jury then entered. Foreman James Weaver handed the verdict to the judge. In a slow, level tone the judge read the contents of the paper. First he read the acquittal verdict for Lova Mann, and then he read similar verdicts for the four others: Joe Garraugh, Peter Huter, Bert Price and Otis Clark.

Minutal of the court's warning, the spectators remained silent. There was no shouting or congratulating the acquitted defendants, nor did any of the five men rush to shake the hands of the jurors.

Instead the crowd filed out of the courtroom, while the jury left through another exit into the jury room.

It is believed that the jury decided in favor of four of the defendants on the first ballot, and that the remaining time was consumed in debating the verdict on the other defendant.

WANT STATE MILITIA ABOLISHED

A move to erase all traces of militarism in Wisconsin has been made in both the senate and assembly by Socialist members. Under bills presented the Wisconsin National guard, the Wisconsin naval militia and all other military activities of the state would be abolished. Military training at the University of Wisconsin also would be stopped.

Highway Laws Make 1,000 Pages

The senate judiciary committee will tackle a mammoth job when it considers the revision of the bill codifying all of the highway laws of the state. This is a compilation of all laws now on the statute books relating to highways and covers nearly 1,000 pages of typewritten matter. It will require a week of study before it can be passed on to the senate. It is the largest bill introduced in the legislature in recent years.

Utilities Figures Called For

The state senate has concurred in an assembly resolution ordering the Wisconsin railroad commission to turn over to the assembly taxation committee information concerning the bonded indebtedness of public utilities in the state. The resolution declares that the people of the state are annually paying large sums to meet interest on this indebtedness which the utilities companies are making no effort to retire.

In the fight the foreman's jaw was fractured and several teeth were knocked out.

PAID EDITORIALS AND NEWS ITEMS IN NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS INTENDED TO INFLUENCE THE PUBLIC WILL HAVE TO CARRY THE WORDS "PAID ADVERTISEMENT" AND A STATEMENT ABOVE THE STORY GIVING THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF THE PERSON AUTHORIZING THE PAYMENT AND OF THE AUTHOR, IF A BILL INTRODUCED BY ASSEMBLYMAN TIMMERMAN, MILWAUKEE, IS PASSED.

John S. Farrell has been appointed postmaster at Green Bay by President Harding.

With the Wisconsin Legislature

Madison, Wis.—Gov. Blaine's tax raising bill proposes income rate increases ranging from 30 to 200 per cent, and would raise approximately $16,000,000. A ratio of $1 of income taxes to $5 of general property tax is a feature of the measure.

Other outstanding features of the bill are:

First—Repeal of the personal property offset.

Second—State reserve 50 per cent of income taxes instead of 10 per cent as at present.

Third—Doubling gross amount to be collected from individuals.

Fourth—Flat rate of 6 per cent on corporations.

Fifth—Individual rate on taxable incomes progresses from 1 per cent on $1,000 to 10 per cent on $10,000.

Sixth—Flat rate of 15 per cent on incomes above $75,000.

Seventh—Repeal of all general property taxes for support of the university, normal schools, common schools and general government, with this tax shifted to large incomes.

The method of distribution proposed is 50 per cent to the state, 10 per cent to counties and 40 per cent to municipalities, instead of 10 per cent to the state, 20 per cent to counties and 70 per cent to municipalities.

Over 75,000	15 per cent

Governor's Salary Up Again.

Assemblyman Koch, Milwaukee, has a bill that calls for a vote on the proposal to amend the constitution giving the legislature power to increase the salary of the governor, at the April election this year. A resolution providing for this amendment, has passed two sessions of the legislature, but due to a technical error was invalidated. At the present time the governor receives a salary of $5,000 which has not been changed during the last fifty years.

SENATE PASSES CAPPER FARM BILL.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The senate passed the Capper bill providing for co-operative credit associations and other measures for long-time loans to farmers. This completes half of the farm credits program.

Morrissey on Board of Control

Without a dissenting vote, the senate confirmed Gov. Blaine's appointment of John D. Morrissey of Superior to the state board of control. He succeeds George B. Harris of Waukesha for the term ending in 1929. The salary is $5,000 per year.

Two other appointments sent to the senate for confirmation were those of Mrs. Charles Kading of Watertown, to be a member of the state board of control, succeeding Mrs. Maud E. O'Neil, and the reappointment of Edward Nordman of Polk as commissioner of the department of markets.

No appointments were announced by Gov. Blaine to succeed Mr. Morrissey as superintendent of public property, nor for the position on the state civil service commission left vacant by the appointment of Mrs. Kading.

Rent Gougers Are Hit

Statewide regulation of rents was proposed in a bill introduced by Senator Burke of Green Bay. Landlords found guilty of unreasonably evicting tenants or refusing to rent to a family of children, or violating other orders of the rent commission would be subject to one year's imprisonment and a fine of $1,000. Burke's measure gives the railroad commission supervision over rental property in all cities of the state. A rent law was adopted at the special session of 1918 and applied to Milwaukee. This law was found unconstitutional. Upon determination that an unfair rent is being charged, the commission would have power to fix what is considered a reasonable and just rent.

Blow at Ku Klux Klan

A blow was struck at the Ku Klux Klan in the legislature when a resolution memorializing congress to enact legislation making it treasonable for the Klan or any similar organization to refuse to surrender a list of its members on demand was introduced in the assembly by Assemblyman F. J. Peterson, Milwaukee.

Mr. Peterson's resolution points out there has been widespread dissatisfaction over the methods and practices of certain secret organizations, but because of the lack of information concerning the membership and officers of such organizations "it has been impossible to fix responsibility."

Two Amendments Asked

Assemblyman Kiesner of Milwaukee would change the constitution so that a proposed amendment would have to pass by one session of the legislature, instead of two, before submission to the people. A constitutional convention would be called under a bill proposed by Mr. Kiesner. This bill, if passed, must be submitted to a referendum before such convention could be held.

A bill by Assemblyman Petersen of Milwaukee provides that the secretary of state shall automatically take care of constitutional amendments proposed in the legislature. This is to prevent a recurrence of the slipup this year, when the Supreme court held that failure to publish a resolution verbatim necessitated its being repassed by the legislature.

Opens Tax Secrecy Fight

Repeal of the secrecy clause in the Wisconsin income tax law is proposed in a bill introduced in the senate by Senator Severson, Iola, the original sponsor of this measure, which has been the story center of three legislative sessions.

With the introduction of this bill the administration has brought forward one of the principal issues of the session. Its enactment has been demanded by the governor, and it is to receive the support of the administration forces.

Should the proposal be incorporated into law, all income tax reports would be open to inspection by any interested parties. Present restrictions would be removed in order that the income returns of corporations and individuals might be available for publication.

MISS LULU BETT

There at Jenny's; whom she heard that Di had to be home early on account of Mr. Cornish, so that she and Bobby had not stayed at all. To which Lulu said an "of course," but first she stared at Jenny and so impressed the strength of her assent. Almost at once she rose to go.

"Nothing else?" said Mrs. Plow, catching that look of hers.

Lulu wanted to say: "My husband was married before, just as he said he was." But she said nothing more, and went home. There she put it to Di and, with her terrible bluntness, revealed to Di the testimony.

"You were not with Jenny after eight o'clock. Where were you?" Lulu spoke formally and her rehearsals were evident.

Di said: "When mamma comes home, I'll tell her."

With this Lulu had no idea how to deal, and merely looked at her helplessly. Mrs. Bett, who was facing her, showed, now said casually:

"No need to wait till then. Her and Bobby were out in the side yard sitting in the hammock till all hours."

Di had no answer save her furious flush, and Mrs. Bett went on:

"Didn't I tell you? I knew it before the company left, but I didn't say a word. Think I. She wiggles and chatters." So L left her stay where she was.

"But, mother?" Lulu cried. "You didn't even tell me after he'd gone."

"I forgot it," Mrs. Bett said, "finding Nina's letter and all." She talked of Nina's letter.

Di was bright and alert and firm of flesh and erect before Lulu's softness and laxness.

"I don't know what your mother'll say," said Lulu, "and I don't know what people'll think."

"They won't think Bobby and I are tired of each other, anyway," said Di, and left the room.

Through the day Lulu tried to think what she must do. About Di she was anxious and felt without power. She thought of the indignation of Dwight and Ina that Di had not been more scrupulously guarded. She thought of Di's girlish folly, her irritating independence—"and there," Lulu thought, "just the other day I was teaching her to sew." Her mind dwelt, too, on Dwight's furious anger at the opening of Nina's letter. But when all this had spent itself, what was she herself to do? She must leave his house before he ordered her to do so, when she told him that she had confided in Cornish, as she said she must. But what was she to do? The bakery cake-making would not give her a roof.

Stepping about the kitchen in her blue cotton gown, her hair tight and flat as seemed proper when one was not dressed, she thought about these things. And it was strange: Lulu bore no physical appearance of one in distress or any anxiety. Her head was erect, her movements were strong and swift, her eyes were interested. She was no drooping Lulu with dragging step. She was more intent, she was somewhat more operative than she had ever been.

Mrs. Bett was working contentedly beside her, and now, and then humming an air of that music of the night before. The sun streamed through the kitchen door and east window, a returned oriole swung and fluted on the elm above the gable. Wagons clattered by over the rattling wooden block pavement.

"Isn't it nice with nobody home?" Mrs. Bett remarked at intervals, like the burden of a comic song.

"Hush, mother," Lulu said, troubled, her ethical refinements conflicting with her honesty.

"Speak the truth and shame the devil," Mrs. Bett contended.

When dinner was ready at noon, Di did not appear. A little earlier Lulu had heard her moving about her room, and she served her in expectation that she would join them.

"Di must be having the 'tantrum' this time," she thought, and for a time said nothing. But at length she did say: "Why doesn't Di come? I'd better put her plate in the oven."

Rising to do so, she was arrested by her mother. Mrs. Bett was eating a baked potato, holding her fork close to the times, and presenting a profile of passionate absorption.

"Why, Di went off," she said.

"Went off?"

"Down the walk. Down the side-walk."

"She must have gone to Jenny's," said Lulu. "I wish she wouldn't do that without telling me."

Monna laughed out and shook her straight hair. "She'll catch it," she cried in sisterly enjoyment.

It was when Lulu had come back from the kitchen and was seated at the table that Mrs. Bett observed:

"I didn't think Inie'd want her to take her nice new satchel."

"Her satchel?"

"Yes, Inie wouldn't take it north herself, but Di had it."

"Mother," said Lulu, "when Di went away just now, she was carrying a satchel?"

"Didn't I just tell you?" Mrs. Bett demanded, aggrieved. "I said I didn't think Inie—"

"Mother, which way did she go?" Monna pointed with her spoon.

"She went that way," she said. "I see her."

Lulu looked at the clock. For Monna had pointed toward the railway station. The twelve-thirty train, which every one took to the city for shopping, would be just about leaving.

"Monna," said Lulu, "don't you go out of the yard while I'm gone. Mother, you keep her—"

Lulu ran from the house and up the street. She was in her blue cotton dress, her old shoes; she was hatless and without money. When she was still two or three blocks from the station, she heard the twelve-thirty "pulling out."

She ran badly, her ankles in their low, loose shoes continually turning. Her arms held tight at her sides. So she came down the platform, and to the ticket window. The contained ticket man, wanted to hot trains and perturbed faces, yet actually ceased shouting when he saw her:

"Lenny! Did Di Deacon take that train?"

"Sure she did," said Lenny. "And Bobby Larkin?" Lulu cared nothing for appearances now.

"The went in on the Local," said Lenny, and his eyes widened.

"Where?"

"Lenny thought it through, 'Milton,' he said. "Yes, sure. Milton. Both of 'em."

"How long till another train?"

"Well, sir," said the ticket man, "you're in luck, if you was going too. Seventeen was late this morning—she'll be along, jerk of a lamb's tail."

"Then," said Lulu, "you got to give me a ticket to Milton, without me paying 40¢ after—and you got to lend me two dollars."

"Sure thing," said Lenny, with a manner of laying the entire railway system at his feet.

"Seventeen" would rather not have stopped at Warblenton, but Lenny's signal was law on the time card, and the magnificent yellow express slowed down for Lulu. Hatless, and in her blue cotton gown, she climbed aboard.

Then her old ineffectuality seized upon her. What was she going to do? Milton! She had been there but once, years ago—how could she ever find Hill Stuffed Apples.

Core nice-flavored apples like the Jonathan. Fill the centers with mince meat. Place the apples in a baking dish, sprinkle with sugar and pour around one-half cupful of water for each six apples. Cover and bake until tender, then uncover and sprinkle with sugar to glaze. Serve hot.

Raisin Surprise.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of raisins, one beaten egg, one orange, four cupfuls of cooked corn meal mush, five table-spoonfuls of sugar, beaten with the egg. Add wash to the sugar and egg, then the grated rind and juice of the orange, with water enough to make a cupful. Stir in the raisins at the last. Pour in a mold and when firm serve with whipped cream.

Orange Marmalade.—When oranges are the most plentiful and cheapest is the time to prepare this delicious concoction. The following is a prize winner from the Times-Picayune: Select four smooth-skinned oranges, weigh and allow three-fourths their weight in sugar. Remove the peel in quarters and cook soft in enough boiling water to cover. Drain and remove all the white part from the peel, scraping it with a spoon. Cut the thin yellow rind into fine strips with a pair of shears. Divide the oranges into sections, remove the seeds and tough portions of the fiber, put into a kettle and heat to the boiling point; add the sugar gradually, cooking slowly, one hour; add the rind and cook another hour. Turn into glasses.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

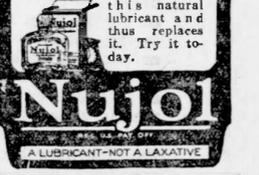

Gained Strength, Weight and Now Doing Own Work, by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and bent over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I had taken three bottles in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told me about his wife and what good it had done her and wanted him to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I sure am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female ailments, for I know by experience what it can do. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sensitive Wash, also the Liver Pills, too, and think them fine."—Mrs. Wm. Eldridge, 620 E. Grant Street, Marion, Indiana.

A record of nearly fifty years service should convince you of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

"If I ask for 'est one thing, mother, can I be sure to get it?" quietly spoke Elsie, the four-year-old member of the household. Mother, with an air of relief, said: "Yes, mother promises that you shall have one thing you want, but you must not ask for anything else."
"All 'right," lisped the darling. "I want 'est a toy store."

The Most Reliable Harvesting and Haying Machines

The Most Efficient Tractors and Power Machines

The Most Popular Plows and Tillage Implements

YOU know these trade names. Your father and grandfather knew three of them. They knew in their time, and you know today that these names stand for the highest quality farm machinery in the world. McCormick built the first practical reaper, Deering sold the first twine binder and was a good-twine pioneer, and William Parlin was one of the first steel plow pioneers. The lines of harvesting machines and plows started by these farm machine builders have been growing and developing ever since. Other machines have been invented and developed by the same manufacturers, and every new machine and implement has had built into it the years of manufacturing experience and farm knowledge accumulated by McCormick, Deering, Parlin and their successors. Now all of these machines and implements have been merged into one line—the International Harvester. The reputation of every machine and implement in this line is the same.

We Sell the International Line

What does this mean to you as a farmer? It means, first of all, that you can buy any farm machine or implement you may need, right here in this town, without taking chances on experiments or implements that might be "orphaned" one or two years after you buy them because of the manufacturer going out of business. You can always get repairs for any machine or implement in the International line because the Harvester Company will never go out of business. You are assured of reliable machines because every machine in the Harvester line is tried out and tested under actual farm conditions, before being offered for sale to the farmer. The Experimental Department of the Harvester Company is the most thorough and active institution of its kind.

It means, second, that you can get repairs and repair service on all of these machines through one concern—us. You don't have to go to the bother and inconvenience of trying to get repairs and service from half a dozen or more different companies. You won't be taking chances on expensive delays waiting for repairs during the busy seasons because we are going to carry a big stock of repairs on hand and any repairs that we might not have we can get for you in a hurry by a phone call to the International Harvester branch house.

Tack this advertisement up in your machine shed so that whenever you need repairs for any of your International machines you will know where to go. Also, you will know where to go when you are in the market for new machines or implements of real quality and the highest operating efficiency.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

Headaches are in the majority of cases, caused from Eye Strain. Normal eyes use 15 per cent of the vital energy generated by the human system—Strained eyes must use more. Daily they rob some other vital organ of its share—but not without protest—for headaches and "symptoms" are but nature's warning of abuse. LOOK WELL TO YOUR EYES.
