Showing Constructional Details of the Honeycomb Subpanel.

By HENRY M. BOSLAND

When building a three-coil honeycomb coil receiver, the wiring of the set is usually spoiled by the flexible leads that must be carried through the panel. These leads are fastened to various bus bar connections which go to the other instruments. This means that when the coils are moved the bus bar wires are pulled out of position. This is liable to cause a short circuit at this position, but the main point is that it makes a very untidy job.

When I built my receiver I determined to wire it in a neater fashion and finally hit upon the idea of a sub-panel, as shown in the accompanying drawing. This sub-panel is used with a standard honeycomb coil mounting and consists of a piece of hard rubber or bakelite 2 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches, mounted to the rear of the regular panel and about three-quarters of an inch from it. On this are mounted six binding posts for the primary, secondary and detector connections. The sub-panel is fastened to the panel by means of four brass machine bolts of the required length. The flexible leads from the honeycomb coil mounting are passed through a one-quarter-inch hole in the panel and fastened to their respective binding posts on the sub-panel. The cost of the material needed is very little and is quite compensated for by the improved appearance of the wiring of the set.—Radio News.

Alteration Tips on Jack Wiring

Suggestions for Wiring to Suit Working Conditions of Radio Fans.

By PETER DAVEY

The majority of sets employing two stages of audio frequency amplification have three jacks, one for plugging in each stage of amplification and one for plugging in the detector unit only. It is thought that the following suggestions for the slight alteration of jack wiring will suit the particular working conditions of many fans. The first suggestion concerns the last jack, which plugs in the second stage of audio.

This is usually a single circuit jack, located in the plate circuit of the last tube, as shown in Fig. 1. This jack is generally used for the loud speaker, and in the majority of sets the loud speaker is plugged into it for at least 90 per cent of the time. So why not make the loud speaker a more or less permanent attachment and use the jack for the occasional plugging in of the phones? It often happens that music is coming in quite well from a station on the loud speaker, but fading occurs just before the announcer's voice comes in, and it is necessary to plug in the phones to find out who they are.

Pulling Plugs Is Annoying. To pull out one plug quickly and insert another is, in the writer's experience, very annoying, especially if the cords happen to be twisted up. The arrangement shown in Fig. 2 is a refinement which saves this annoyance, and the only thing necessary is to plug in the phones, the loud speaker thereby being automatically cut out.

In this case the single circuit jack is replaced by a double circuit one. The loud speaker is connected across the two center springs, so that, normally, it is always in circuit. Now when the phones are plugged in the center springs, and consequently the loud speaker, are thrown out of circuit.

The fact of the loud speaker being always in circuit makes no difference when using the phones in the first stage only, provided the second audio tube is switched off, but if it is left switched on you will get a whistle—so there you have a warning to tell you that you are wasting your A battery current!

The best method of connecting up the loud speaker is to have two binding posts on a bakelite base, as shown in Fig. 2. These may be modified either inside or outside the cabinet. There is a tip for broadcast listeners—now here is one for experimenters. What a nuisance it is to have to start slipping down that set which is working O. K. in order to use it for experimenting on another which may or may not work successfully—besides it is liable to make one unpopular with the family.

Keeps the Set Working. But if you just cross over the connections of one jack they may be enabled to enjoy two or three more radio afternoons while you see at the office with that old set before having to put up with the usual wack or two of screws and whistles which accompany the crying out of a new hook-up.

The jack referred to is the one for plugging in the detector only. For all the use you get out of it does it not seem that it might be dispensed with altogether, since it will not operate the loud speaker? Fig. 3 shows the conventional wiring for this jack and Fig. 4 shows the suggested alteration.

It will be noted that in the latter case those wires which were on the outer springs are now on the inner, and vice versa.

Now, if the plug is inserted in the jack and two leads connected with it, we have a connection to the amplifier unit, to which any detector unit can be connected for experimental purposes, and this without disturbing the existing set in any way whatever.

It also has the advantage that the relative merits of two or more hook-ups may be tested on the same stations—New York Sun.

Aerial for Bus Wire. No 14 bare outer aerial wire of the solid type makes excellent busbar wire when it is straightened out. It has the additional feature of having a better conducting surface for radio frequency currents than forms of stranded wire.

one-tube sets as on the more critical ones, but, even at that, an improvement of 25 per cent in signal strength is noted on distant stations with a single-tube "blower" on which one has been installed.

Increasing Volume Is Matter of Importance

Many owners of receivers have heard of the beneficial effect of condenser on an audio-frequency transformer. Doing this clears the signals considerably, but at the same time it increases the volume to a great extent. There is one good point about such a procedure, though, that is not realized. It allows the audio-frequency side of the circuit to strain much more current than would be possible were it not used. Therefore, when a transformer with a condenser across the transformer, always place more plate voltage in the circuit of the tube which has the condenser in it. An extra 22 1/2-volt will usually bring the volume up to the necessary point, and the clarity will be improved considerably.

Improvement in Horse Breeding

In Five States All Stallions Used for Public Service of Pure Breeding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) An improvement in the quality of stallions and jacks licensed to stand for public service, but a decline in their numbers compared with previous years, are shown in a report on the horse-breeding situation, first issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The information, compiled by J. O. Williams and S. R. Spelman of the bureau of animal industry, is based on the latest records obtained from the secretaries of station enrollment boards of the various states. The report shows that more than 70 per cent of the stallions standing for public service during the breeding season of 1923, were pure bred. In five states—Indiana, Michigan, Montana, Pennsylvania and West Virginia—all the stallions kept for public service were of pure breeding. A summary of jack registration shows that nearly 60 per cent of jacks that were registered for public service were pure bred. The figures for both stallions and jacks show approximately a one per cent increase in pure breeds over the previous year.

Decline in Numbers.

In numbers, however, stallions registered in 20 states from which comparable figures were available, totaled 17,330 for 1923, as against 18,400 for 1922, a decline of 1,070 or 5.8 per cent. During the same time jacks declined from 4,888 to 4,944 a loss of 544 in sixteen comparable states. The figures given show the same general trend as the department's estimates of the total number of horses and mules on farms in the United States at the beginning of 1923 and 1924. Both of these classes of animals show a decline in numbers.

Production Behind Death Rate.

"Production of horses and mules is still behind the death rate," the department specialists assert, "although there is no doubt a surplus of horses which cannot be marketed profitably, there is an actual shortage of animals of the heavy draft type, high-class wagon horses, and good saddle horses. Reports indicate a brisk market demand for animals of these classes, and ready sale at good prices." It is noteworthy from the report that the decline in the number of public-service stallions and jacks was greatest in the scrub, grade, and cross-bred classes, this condition being a favorable indication of a better class of foals in the future. Four states—Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and West Virginia—licensed only pure bred stallions and jacks during 1922. Iowa joined the ranks of states licensing only pure bred stallions and jacks by a law becoming effective January 1, 1924.

The complete report on stallion enrollment and the horse-breeding situation contains comments by secretaries of station enrollment boards in various states, statistical summaries on the number and breeding of jacks and stallions in states keeping suitable records, names and addresses of state and national officials in charge of horse and mule breeding work, and a list of pedigree registry associations. Copies of the report may be procured on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Most Practical Way to Save Water in the Soil

How to save water in the soil is a very important matter. We know that soil is moist in the spring when the seeds are planted, and that this moisture dries up and goes off in the air. Covering up the soil prevents this. Moisture from drying up, and the most practical way of covering it is with a thin layer of loose, dry earth and make this covering by raking the bed every few days, once a week anyway, and often if the top of the soil becomes hard and crusty, as it does after a rain, therefore, instead of pouring moisture in, in the shape of water, on the bed, keep the moisture in the soil with this covering of dirt. However, if the soil becomes dry in spite of you so the plants do not thrive, then water the bed, do not sprinkle it, but water it by watering clear through at evening. Then in the morning when the surface begins to get dry, begin raking again to keep the water from getting away in the air. Sprinkling the plants every day or two is one of the surest ways of spoiling them.

Clean Sand Is Favored for Vegetable Storing

Sand makes a very good medium for the storing of potatoes, carrots, beets and parsnips. These vegetables should be kept cool, fairly moist, and free from contact with circulating air, in order to be stored without wilting or starting growth. In the absence of a suitable storage house, the use of sand is most effective. The sand for storing purposes should be free from organic matter. It should also be renewed each year, as the sand in which vegetables have been stored may contain rot spores from the previous winter. The common method of storing is to place alternate rows of roots and sand in a box on the basement floor. Or the roots may be placed in a conical pile covered with a layer of sand about eight inches deep.

Cows Require Much Water

Dairy cows, or all milk cows for that matter, require large quantities of water. They will sometimes drink several times as much water per day by weight as their milk flow amounts to. Pure, moderately cool water is more acceptable to them and they will drink much of it. The milk cows crave much salt. It has a beneficial effect upon her system. It, of course, can be best applied in an open box, where each cow can secure the amount she wishes.

Important to Store Eggs in Dry Place

Gather and Market Often to Obtain Top Prices.

Other things being equal, newly-hatched hen-fruit is one of the most perfect foods in the world. From the moment it is laid by a healthy hen in a clean and sanitary environment it is subject to deleterious influences. The hen is in no way responsible for these, but her owner is. Dirt, heat, excessive dryness or a damp environment are all inimical to quality in fresh eggs. Dirt, discolors the shell and so lessens its value to buyers. It also contracts mold, germs and injurious bacteria which break down quality and nutritive value and vitiate flavor. Hence the importance of placing eggs in a cool, dry, pure atmosphere, and of gathering and marketing them often, or of cold-storing them, which is only another way of maintaining their quality. To eat hen-fruit at its best is to do so when it is yet very young from the nest. When eggs are subjected to damp and moisture, the albuminous protective covering dissolves, admitting decomposing bacteria into the shell through the pores, which causes rapid spoilage. Heat tends to break down the "whites," rendering the egg "weak" and watery; on the yolk the effect is to make them dark and "heavy." Eggs of this character are graded as "bakers," which command reduced prices. An excessively dry atmosphere causes rapid evaporation, or "shrunken" eggs. A careful consideration of these premises will suggest their own remedies. Clean nests protected from the sun and wind, healthy laying hens and wholesome feeding are the fundamental things to provide for good performance flocks. The poultry industries have functioned and defined their product, it is "up to" her owners to take the necessary measures that will insure a good price to the poultryman and fine eating quality to the ultimate consumer.

Manure Is Too Valuable to Be Wasted in Yards

No matter how rich a soil may be, years of constant cropping with no return of organic matter will eventually wear it out. A crop rotation which includes a legume at least once in every four years must be followed if fertility is to be maintained. In addition, all crop refuse available, such as stubble, straw and manure, is necessary. The average increase in crop yields for each ton of manure applied per acre has been found to be worth $3.11 in an Ohio experiment extending over a period of 14 years. Manure is too valuable to be wasted around the barnyards. When it is thrown from the stable into the barnyard, it contains, on the average, 80 per cent water if from cattle, and 70 per cent if from horses. This water contains the major portion of the salts which give manure its fertilizing value. Exposed such material to the rain and the liquid matter will soon be replaced by rain-water if the manure pile is where it will drain easily. Manure exposed from April 1 to September 30 at the New York experiment station lost 43 per cent of its value. Wherever practicable, then, a tight manure pit is a good investment. The one shown here is on the farm of Emil Anderson, Branch county, Mich. Besides conserving the manure, it keeps the barnyard in a much cleaner condition and in case contagious diseases develop, proper sanitary methods are not so expensive.

Importance of Water

The egg is made up of 65 per cent water. It can be readily seen, therefore, that eggs cannot be produced in summer without plenty of water. Water is one of the cheapest and most readily available feeds we have, and yet under farm conditions birds often do not get enough. Clear, fresh water should be before the birds at all times. It is well to have a little salt in the feed in order to induce the birds to drink more water in the summer. Salt should not be fed in too great quantities.

Lice and Mites Thrive

Lice and mites thrive in hot weather, and the vigilance which must be maintained at all seasons must be doubled with the young birds in the summer months. Methods of combating these pests are so well known that no mention of them need be made. Suffice it to say that constant guard must be kept, frequent insect actions must be made and prompt action taken to keep the various fowls in the flock entirely free from insect pests at this time.

Old Rags Go to Make Attractive, Durable Roof

The use of old rags and the artistic temperament of architects are two factors which have combined to produce superior, variegated asphalt shingle and roll roofings. Two-thirds of all roofing requirements in the United States are now supplied from asphalt materials known as "prepared roofing," the product of a typically American industry that has been developed in the last few years, and in which old rags are used chiefly. Now comes the variegated asphalt and asbestos roof—the tpestry or blended color effect produced by a combination of red and green prepared shingles or a combination of red, green, black, and even yellows. Architects felt at times that the flat effect of a single-toned asphalt shingle or roll roofing was an artistic handicap and that something should be done to relieve a certain dull monotony that militates against obtaining certain esthetic values.

Don't Shut Off Windows

Do not cover the windows in the dining room too well, especially if there is an attractive outlook. Start the day seeing all the available brightness, which is not possible if the windows are hidden in layers of materials. If the outlook is not attractive, cover the windows by all means, making the interior as charming as possible. A bit of the out-of-doors early in the morning is always refreshing and if the dining room curtains are left open giving this sort of view it is always desirable. Two sets of curtains may still be used—the glass curtains and the overhangings, even if the first curtains do not cover the entire window.

Modern Crib Will Keep Grain Safe From Rats and Ravages of Weather

Drive Way and Market Often to Obtain Top Prices.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1227 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Corn, no matter how good at shucking time, rapidly loses its value unless it is housed where it will be safe from rats and the ravages of weather. Those farmers who have a good, modern crib and granary have no reason to fear that the corn they store will not be as good in May as it was when it was stored away. It has lost none of its feeding value and the same quantity that was stored is available for sale or feeding when spring comes.

The modern corn crib, such as shown in the illustration, is designed to house corn and grain so that it will be protected until such a time as it is marketed. This building is set on a concrete foundation and has a concrete floor. There are no rats under the floor and if there should be the animals have no chance to get at the stored grain. The building itself is of frame construction, the sides being of crib siding, each piece of lumber set far enough apart to permit a good circulation of air to prevent heating or molding, and still close enough to another to keep out rain and snow. The building is 26 feet wide and 50 feet long. A ten-foot driveway runs through the center and on each side are double cribs. Overhead there are four grain bins, over the driveway. The cupola permits a power elevator with adjustable spout so that the ear corn can be spouted to either of the cribs, or the grain into the bins.

This is the sort of building that pays dividends on the investment year after year in cutting the labor cost of handling the crops and in keeping them in the best possible condition until the markets are favorable.

Picture Frames Carefully Selected Show Good Taste

Frames for pictures are today more beautiful and more adapted to the pictures for which they are made than ever before, according to the American Art Bureau of Chicago. A picture is made or ruined by the frame that is around it, just as a woman's whole personality is enhanced or not by the hat she wears. This fact is recognized by all good picture dealers and by home furnishers of good taste. There is just the right frame for every picture that exists. The great variety of polychrome moldings now to be found at picture stores affords a wide choice in color harmony, width, design and suitability to the picture for which the frame is destined. The chief purpose of the picture frame is to hold the picture and to make the transition between the picture itself and the background against which it is placed. The frame should not command attention of itself; it should serve to bring out the beauties of the picture. For this reason it should not have ornaments that attract attention away from the picture or be of garish design or color. A mat, like a frame, often serves to increase both the beauty and effectiveness of a picture. A mat is in effect a wide margin on a picture, and thus it seemingly enlarges the picture. Decoratively speaking, a mat may do much to heighten the value of the picture in its relation to the rest of the room.

Land

Out of every $1 invested in their business by farmers, 85 cents is tied up in real estate. This is largely responsible for the slowness with which agriculture has been readjusting itself to after-the-war conditions. So says Dr. L. C. Gray, economist of the Department of Agriculture. In many sections of the country, land speculation has played greater havoc with farm prosperity than has overproduction of crops. Another thing, farming is the only remaining basic industry that operates under almost unrestricted competition.

How Pains in Side and Dragging Down Feelings Were Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Messena, N. Y.—"I had terrible pains in both my sides and a dragging-down feeling that affected me so that I could hardly get up. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it with the best results. I do my household work and also some outdoor work on the farm. The Vegetable Compound has given me back my health and I can not praise it enough. I am perfectly willing that you should use these facts if my letter will help other women who still suffer."—Mrs. DEBBIE BUSH, R. F. D. 1, Messena, N. Y. The spirit of helpfulness shown in the letters we are constantly publishing is worthy of notice. These women know by experience what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do. Your troubles are the same as theirs. Isn't it reasonable to expect the same results? If you have pains and a dragging-down feeling and are nervous and irritable, profit by Mrs. Bush's experience and give the Compound a trial.

TO BE constantly discussing the deficiencies of others without considering our own, is a common human failing.

It requires no special perception to see the faults in those around us, but to discern our own, is quite a different matter.

Indeed it is not strange that we balk at the effort.

It is a job that we do not like to contemplate, even when we are in a good humor.

But if we would achieve, attain and be highly respected, the obvious thing to do is to stand up and face the music, though the notes be disquieting.

LIGHTS AHEAD

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SAT alone in all my gloom. Yet moonlight came and filled the room.

The course of life seemed dark, uncertain. And yet a star peered through the curtain.

Though night shut down about me, I found moonlit world and starlit sky. A thousand things to journey by.

I needed but to lift my head To find God's consolations spread Across His azure acres, burning A changeless lamp at every turning.

I needed but to look around And silver was the world I found Where moonlight magic touched the ground.

So often do we choose to dwell Within our souls as in a cell. When right around us moon is gleaming.

When right above us stars are beaming. Whatever path we have to tread, If we will look, as I have said, I'm sure that there are lights ahead.

NOVELTY RIBBONS IN FAVOR; ENSEMBLE FOR THE AUTUMN

WINSOME little novelty ribbons have fluttered their colorful charm into millinery fashionland. That many of our prettiest autumn chapeaux are to be made entirely of narrow fanciful ribbon sewed row on row is the message conveyed by advance models arriving from across seas.

The effectiveness of the ribbon-made hat is demonstrated in the accompanying illustration in two instances. The first is for the ensemble costume. Its triumphs too fair to be repeated to even a greater degree during the coming autumn and winter seasons. Elaborate styling is marked in the development of new models, which establish family ties between wrap and frock.

Wraps which claim kinship to the one-piece dress over which they are posed feature three distinct types.

RIBBON PRETTILY USED

shape in the large oval below is fashioned of shirred ombre ribbon, brown being the predominating color. The feathery fancy dropping low to one side repeats the brown, russet and cream tones of the ribbon.

The little turn-off-the-face model with scrolls of ribbon projecting far out at each side, is also an exponent of the ribbon-built hat. It uses in composition a straw santonche which serves to join the rows of ribbon. That is all there is to it—no other trimming.

It is intriguing ribbon patterning which gives chic and charm to the little round hat with its high-turned brim, shown at the top of this group. In a

Made of selfsame material as the companion dress is the three-quarter length or knee-depth coat, the long or short cape or the scarf which often takes on the Spanish shawl spirit.

A material which makes a particularly handsome showing in ensemble interpretation is tapestry-striped kasha cloth. It is this fabric which is so charmingly utilized for the model in the picture. A convertible collar is one of the pleasing features of the frock.

Tapestry effects are of very great fabric interest for fall. This leads on to elaborate schemes, such as, for instance, an imported tapestry cloth showing all-over woaden embroidery

Bordered materials effectively yield to novelty treatment. In that the border embellishes the hem of the frock, repeating its ornate decoration across the ends of a very wide scarf.

Conspicuous among ensemble conceptions is a three-piece costume which relates a frock of red and blue plaid with a coat of navy suede cloth. In this the self-fabric of the dress is repeated as the lining of the wrap. A raccoon collar adds a note of autumn elegance to the coat.

Feathers play an important role in the decoration of the smart English woman as they did in that of the smart savage. There are feather hems, feather earrings and feather bracelets.

Popular for Riding

Gray riding suits are neck and neck with tan in popularity this season. The breeches are a lighter shade of gray, or white. Felt sports hats are being selected in preference to "hard" hats

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best-- Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overworking kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents, also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Through the Needle's Eye

It is a fact that there is in the wall of Jerusalem a small gateway built for the use of pedestrians and known by a name which is translated as "The Needle's Eye." Through this gate it is quite possible for a small undernourished camel, divested of all its equipment, harness, etc., by kneeling, to work its way, though not without difficulty. The gate is still in existence.

Cuticura Soothes Baby Rashes

That itch and burn, by hot baths of Cuticura Soap followed by gentle anointments of Cuticura Ointment. Nothing better, purer, sweeter, especially if a little of the fragrant Cuticura Talcum is dusted on at the finish. 25c each.—Advertisement.

At Cross Purposes

One of the joys of bus-top excursions is in the scraps of talk heard during the traffic lull.

"Just look at that dreadful woman giving her dog a drink from a public cup!" exclaimed an indignant woman.

"Yes," agreed her equally indignant companion. "Perfectly dreadful. Those Pekes so easily catch distemper!"—London Chronicle.

Don't checkle if you put over a substitute when an advertised product is called for. Maybe your customer will never come back.

There Are Others

"What kind of a fountain pen is yours?" "I fancy it is a soda fountain pen."

The Trouble

COOLING DISHES

THIS is the season of the year when aspic and gelatin dishes appeal to the taste as they supply food easy of digestion.

Aspic jelly is made from clarified meat broth solidified with gelatin. One two-ounce package of gelatin softened in one cupful of water is used for each five cupful of broth. Meat broths are flavored with vegetables freed from fat and clarified with crushed egg shells and white of egg. Aspic made of chicken or veal is a very delicate color. Consomme gives a darker color as it is prepared from beef, veal and fowl with spices and herbs. Beef broth is larkest of all.

The amount of gelatin used is sufficient to hold slices of tongue, or similar solid substances as well as whole eggs in an upright position after molding. It is also firm enough for croquettes, but a jelly that will not hold its shape, as far as taste is concerned, is much more desirable. As flavors are lessened by chilling, all broths used for aspic should be strongly flavored with the particular vegetable or herb that is desired in the particular dish.

The qualities of a good aspic are strength of flavor, transparency and delicacy of texture, that is, as soft as possible, though able to stand up.

SOUND VALUE

Sound products evolve from sound principles.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car is the product of an institution whose principles have always been conceded to be pre-eminently sound.

Sound manufacturing methods that place infinitely more importance on quality than quantity.

Sound financial standing, which permits uninterrupted development and adherence to the policy of constant improvement.

A sound method of selecting dealers, from which an organization has grown that enjoys the complete confidence of the public.

A sound sales and service policy, through which buyers are assured full value for their investment.

These basic principles being sound, it follows as an obvious consequence that Dodge Brothers Motor Car represents sound value.

PLYMOUTH SELF-FEED ENSILAGE CUTTERS

"Plymouth" Feed Cutters are the result of twenty-five years' experience and practical study of conditions and needs in the farm and dairy field. They embrace every advantage known to other similar machines, and many vital features which are original with us and can be had only in the "Plymouth Self-Feed." Below are some mighty strong points for you to think about before you buy a feed cutter.

Automatic Self-Feed—This feature consists of a traveling feed chain, made of heavy iron slats securely riveted to a chain which passes over the lower feed roller. Throw the fodder into the feed box and the "Plymouth" does the rest.

Danger-Proof Self-Feed Rollers—Here's another strong feature original with the "Plymouth." It consists of four large rollers of cast iron. The traveling feed chain passes over the lower hind roller, just passing the lower front roller, which is six inches in diameter, and smooth. The two upper and lower hind rollers are ribbed. The 8-inch automatic roller at the top, to the rear, is a special feature of the "Plymouth." It acts as a lever or weight to keep the fodder passing through continuously, depending on its own gravity to keep the material going through without a hitch. Two coil springs serve to exert an even and steady pressure on the automatic roller as the volume of fodder increases in going through. The spring feature is entirely automatic, and is only to be had in the "Plymouth." It absolutely prevents clogging.

BRYAN PLEDGES FARMERS AID

Vice Presidential Candidate Also Stands for World Peace; Hits Mellon.

Lincoln, Neb.—Pledging efforts to seek world peace through disarmament by international agreement, Gov. Charles W. Bryan, Democratic nominee for the vice presidency, delivered his speech in formal acceptance of the honor.

Referring to labor questions, Mr. Bryan sanctioned the stand of John W. Davis in regard to injunctions and said: "Our party always has been the laboring man's friend."

Aid in co-operative marketing, an expert marketing corporation, development of inland waterways and reclamation of western lands, were pledged the farmers. He promised to do all in his power to abolish child labor and to place women upon an equal footing with men. Prohibition law enforcement also was pledged.

"The farmer needs a Democratic administration and a congress that will not permit the Mellon tax plan to relieve the multimillionaires from paying their just share of the cost of government," he announced.

He gave special attention to the platform pledge in regard to the development of Muscle Shoals and announced himself in complete accord with that plan.

Twenty thousand persons were present at the notification ceremonies. Lincoln was decorated gallantly for the occasion. The notification took place at the University of Nebraska Memorial stadium.

The national committeewoman from Missouri, Mrs. Emily Newton Blair, presided at the ceremony and introduced the speakers. The notification address was delivered by Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who delivered the keynote address at the convention.

"The refusal of the present Republican administration to permit the railway mail employees to receive a living wage at American standards was unfair and unjust to labor and illustrates the economy program which is at the expense of labor," said Mr. Bryan. "Economy at the expense of humanity is further illustrated in the veto of the pension bill and the soldiers' bonus."

Bankers Speed Up Loan to Berlin, Says Dispatch

New York.—With the successful conclusion of the inter-allied conference, American bankers began speeding up the machinery for flotation of their share of the $200,000,000 international loan to Germany upon which operation of the Dawes plan will hinge. Preparations for underwriting this huge financial transaction will be started at once, international bankers indicated, with prospects that ratification of the London protocol by France and Germany will be followed by an early sale of the loan. The offering, however, is not expected before October.

Around-World Flyers Damage Their Planes

Reykjavik, Iceland.—Lieut. Lowell Smith and Lieut. Eric Nelson, the two Americans around-the-world flyers, attempted to take off on the long North Atlantic hop to Fredericksdal, near Cape Farewell, east Greenland, and in doing so both of their planes were injured in perhaps the most serious mishap so far of their trip. Lieutenant Smith's plane broke its spreader bar, while the propeller of Lieutenant Nelson's plane was shattered.

French Troops Evacuate German Towns in Baden

Strasbourg.—French troops have evacuated Offenbourg and Appenweier. An official announcement said the evacuation of the two Baden towns was due to the recent resumption of international train service between Paris and Warsaw and Paris and Prague, the suppression of which on the German section of the line caused the occupation as a penalty in February, 1923.

One Slain as De Valera Takes Up Republic War

Ennis, County Clare, Ireland.—One man was killed by military in a disturbance which followed Eamon de Valera's first public appearance before his "Irish republican" followers since his release from a Free State prison. Michael Harnett, a Tipperary man, was the victim. He was shot by the troops as he was returning from the De Valera meeting, but other details of the killing are thus far unknown.

W. T. Rawleigh, a wealthy and prominent resident of Freeport, Ill., has been named treasurer of the LaFollette-Wheeler national candidacy.

GERMANY AGREES TO FRENCH TERMS

Berlin Delegates' Final Appeal Is Unavailing.

London.—Germany accepted the French terms for the evacuation of the Ruhr through her delegates here after obtaining slight textual changes. It is understood, The French are to stay in the Ruhr another year.

The day was one of excitement. In the course of the afternoon the German representatives received from Berlin a 7,000-word report of a special cabinet meeting. The message was in a special code in the possession of Chancellor Marx and was decoded by him. A visit of the Germans to Downing street followed early in the evening, and Marx and Stresemann conferred for more than an hour with Prime Minister MacDonald and Ambassador Kellogg.

This last appeal proved something of a disappointment, as the Englishman and the American, it is understood, joined in representing to them the advantages of acceptance of the French proposal, trusting that later events would force a reconsideration of the evacuation date at a later time.

The Germans tried to strike a bargain over the forthcoming loan, asking Ambassador Kellogg and Premier MacDonald to guarantee that it would be raised. The British and American statesmen replied, however, that they were powerless to do this, the matter being solely in the hands of the bankers, who, after arrangements have been made here, must decide whether or not the loan is practicable and safe.

Prince of Wales Began to Be Left Alone on Visit

London.—The greatest service the American press can do for the prince and Germany will be followed by an early sale of the loan. The offering, however, is not expected before October.

Chicago Lawyer to Be Envoy to Japan

Washington.—The vacancy left by Cyrus E. Woods, former ambassador to Japan, will be filled by Edgar Addison Bancroft, prominent Chicago lawyer. Mr. Bancroft is at this time a member of the law firm of Scott, Bancroft, Martin & MacLeish. He is a native of Illinois and a graduate of Knox college and the Columbia law school.

Treasury Moves to Make 'Iron' Dollar Popular Coin

Washington.—The treasury embarked on a campaign to restore the silver dollar, so widely used 20 years ago, to general circulation. The initial step was taken when one of the coins was placed in the pay envelope of each of 5,000 treasury employees. Similar action will be suggested to other government bureaus.

Rebuilding of Europe Put in Yankee Hands

Paris.—The solution of the reparations problem and the rebuilding of Europe has been placed almost entirely in the hands of Americans through the signing of the Dawes pact in London. This statement was made here by one of the French delegates to the London conference during an interview with representatives of the press.

Free Buffalo Almost Gone

Washington.—Requests for surplus buffalo offered to the public by the Department of the Interior are pouring in so fast that officials believe that there will be none of the surplus herd left in a day or so.

Herrick Is Home

New York.—Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, arrived on the French liner Paris from Havre. Mr. Herrick is to go to his Ohio farm for a two month's rest.

DAWES PACT IS SIGNED AT LAST

All Delegates Sign the Protocol at London; Means Real Peace.

London.—The pact of London is a reality. All the delegates signed the protocol, Prime Minister MacDonald signing first, with Premier Herriot, Premier Theunis, Chancellor Marx, and the smaller powers following. The United States representatives did not sign, as they were not yet initiated, but it was agreed in the protocol that all powers will assemble in London on August 30 to sign the annexes as now drawn without change. This is merely a formality to comply with the wishes of Premier Herriot and Chancellor Marx, so they can get the formal consent of their parliaments.

The signing followed a meeting of the allied delegates, which merged into a plenary session on the arrival of the Germans. A few minor details were disposed of and the documents were carefully checked over which an hour was spent speaking. Mr. MacDonald paid high tribute to the industry and earnestness of the delegates and congratulated them on the successful accomplishment of the work they had come to London to do, and which now all must unite in working to make fruitful for good.

"Maybe we have not been able to eliminate as thoroughly as we wished the fears and suspicions which flourished like weeds in Europe and the world, but those that remain are only the end of the crop, which will soon wither and die," he said.

"I believe we have given Europe something better than a formal agreement drafted by lawyers and printed on paper. We are now offering the first really negotiated agreement since the war. Every party here represented is morally bound to carry out the agreement because it is not the result of an ultimatum."

$6,000,000 Labor Bank Grows in 15 Months

New York.—When the 500 delegates to the State Federation of Labor convention meet at Schenectady they will have read to them the report of the Federation bank. Starting 15 months ago under labor auspices, the institution is now a $6,000,000 concern. The report cautions labor unions to be prudent in organizing labor banks in view of the large capital required.

Washington Deems New Parley on Arms Sure

Washington.—It is considered certain here now that President Coolidge will carry out his announced intention of calling another parley for the limitation of armaments, since he is convinced the successful conclusion of the London reparations conference means that the agreements reached there will assure the successful operation of the Dawes plan.

Two Farmers Drown in Flood; Farms Under Water

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—Two farmers, J. M. Schalley and De Claude Barrett of Bertram, eight miles east of here, were swept away and are reported to have been drowned in flood waters while searching for cattle. A cloud-burst placed thousands of acres of farm land in this vicinity under several feet of water.

Illinois Dry Raiders Swoop Down on Ottawa Saloons

WISCONSIN NEWS

Important Events of the Week Around the Badger State

Manitowoc.—After being separated 52 years, two sisters, Mrs. Frank Maurer, Schleswig, and Mrs. Herman Wiegardt, North Bergen, N. J., are holding a reunion at the Maurer home, several miles from Manitowoc. Mrs. Maurer is 73 and her sister 79. The event is marred only by Mrs. Wiegardt being unable to see her sister. She was stricken blind two years ago. The two parties in Germany in 1872 when Mrs. Maurer came to America. Nine years later her sister followed and settled in New Jersey. This is her first visit west.

Marquette.—A sailboat carrying eight young people from Pine beach sank in Green bay, about a mile from shore, during a gale. The wind tore out the main sail and the water swept over the gunwale, foundering the boat. The occupants walked ashore, the water being only neck deep. Included in the group were Shirley Wilson and Dorothy and Mary Elizabeth Jackson, Minneapolis; Dorothy and William Payne, Wausau; Jack McDonough, Eau Claire, and Warren Kirkham, Marinette.

Racine.—Herman Tilley, 80, died at a hospital in Racine, as a result of injuries received when run down by an auto. The district attorney has ordered an investigation to determine the responsibility for the accident. The auto was being driven by Mrs. Edward Matausent, wife of a piano dealer in Racine. It is said that Tilley, who was deaf, crossed the street directly in front of the car and did not hear the horn.

Oshkosh.—When the last will of Mrs. Ida C. Grundeman, Oshkosh, could not be found after her death last May, a carbon copy of the instrument, unsigned, was found in the office of the notary before whom it was attested, and offered for probate. The will left all the property to Melissa Delameter, a sister, and the husband contested. Judge D. E. McDonald, Oshkosh, held the duplicate was admissible.

Sturgeon Bay.—James G. Martin, manager of the 800-acre Martin orchard, Sherrys Bay, is advertising for cherry pickers and assures them that the crop will not be picked until the latter part of August. Owing to the continual rains, pickers are unable to work and many have left for their homes. It is expected that Door county farmers will pick most of the remaining crop.

Oshkosh.—A score of cities of the state were represented in a parade of 1,000 Masons in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic temple in Oshkosh. One division of the parade comprised men in uniform from the commandries of Appleton, Green Bay, Neenah, Menasha, Clintonville, Berlin, Fond du Lac and Oshkosh.

Merrill.—Carl Sall, farmer living within the city of Merrill, was fined $200 and costs in county court by Judge M. C. Porter for possession of a quart of moonshine. Complaints came to the officials. Sall was giving moonshine to minors and he pleaded that he gave it to auto parties at night and did not know the age of his guests.

Oshkosh.—City officials of Oshkosh are co-operating with the county agricultural agent have mobilized power sprays and huge quantities of arsenate of lead in a drive to resist the invasion of a species of army worm following the discovery that some millions of the worms had visited Riverside park and totally denuded a number of trees.

Spooner.—Miss Helen Braun, 17-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Braun, Spooner, is suffering from sleeping sickness. Miss Braun graduated from the Spooner high school in June, completing the teachers' training course. She had intended to teach when school opened in the fall.

New Lisbon.—W. H. H. Cash, 81, died suddenly at New Lisbon, of heart failure. He was known throughout Wisconsin as a pioneer railroad builder and operator, member of the state legislature in 1877, bond buyer, broker and banker.

Merrill.—The Wisconsin river registers 5.2 feet above the low water mark at the government gauge at Merrill, which is 7 feet above normal. Much water from recent rains is being stored in up-river reservoirs for emergency use.

Merrill.—A chapter of the Isak Walton League of America has been formed in Merrill with 17 charter members.

Stevens Point.—Ben and Felix Zoromski, Amherst Junction; Frank Korleski, Chicago, and Peter Korleski of Wausara county, were fined a total of $350 at Wautoma on charges of having netted fish in Koolet lake, Wausara county. A 100-foot lamp net and 60 pounds of bass, perch and blue gills were confiscated.

Madison.—Fifty-three persons lost their lives in Wisconsin by drowning during the first six months of this year, the state board of vital statistics reported recently.

Oconto.—Allen G. Brunner was elected chairman of the Oconto county corn and potato show which will be held in the Oconto armory in November. A surplus of $200 from last year's show will be used for civic improvement or for advertising the city park.

Madison.—Wisconsin's allotment on war trophies will again be delayed, probably until next year, according to information received by Gov. Blaine from Secretary of War Weeks. The last congress failed to make necessary appropriations for carrying out provisions of the trophy distribution act, and not until the next congress meets will the department be able to proceed with distribution. About 2,500,000 trophies of the war will be distributed among the states, according to the number of men from each state that served in the war.

Beaver Dam.—The Phenix Cheese Co., New York and Chicago, has purchased the old woolen mills property and taken over the Clover Blossom creamery, Beaver Dam, and will use it to produce soft cheese of various makes and imported cheese of different types. Some $25,000 is being spent repairing the building. The retail milk business of the creamery will be continued, cold storage facilities will be increased and the manufacture of ice cream is also considered. Twenty persons will be employed at first.

Green Bay.—Fines of $100 each were imposed upon Edward Murphy, 23, and his brother, Leo, 19, Sampson, Oconto county, after they had been found guilty of assault and battery upon Patrick Fitzgerald, De Pere. Fitzgerald appeared in court with his hands over his left eye which, he said, he nearly lost as the result of being kicked in the face by Leo Murphy during a quarrel after Edward Murphy drove his car over the fresh concrete of the Upper De Pere road.

Birchwood.—Taking a piano from one of the first farm houses to be torn away in the tornado which swept a path in Chippewa county, north of Bloomer, carrying it a half mile into a patch of timber and then placing it right side up, was one of the freak stunts performed by the wind. The piano was slightly damaged. On the same farm a heavy wagon was broken to bits, growing oats were cut close to the ground as if harvested and the grain was shaken from the straw.

Rhinelander.—Following the arrest in Woodruff of John Lindgren, who is alleged to have passed counterfeit money, Officer Joseph Miller discovered an incomplete counterfeit outfit in woods on the outskirts of Woodruff. The outfit included a ladle, a quantity of metal, and spurious coins. Miller says he has information regarding location of the dies used for making coins. A witness is being held who claims to have seen the counterfeiters at work.

Janesville.—The Rock County Farm Bureau took the lead and at the executive committee meeting in the court house voted an appropriation of $500 for a Rock county home demonstration agent. The money will be turned over to the proper authorities when sufficient funds are realized to pay for a county woman worker. No strings were attached to the appropriation, the bureau voting the money to encourage rural welfare work.

Madison.—Construction work on the addition to the main building of the Whitewater Normal school is the only major building project in progress at normal schools at the present time, says the quarterly report of the state, engineer's department. Foundations are laid already for the Whitewater building, and contracts for all the work have been let. The structure will cost approximately $225,000.

Waterford.—Mrs. William Schenkenberg, 59, wife of the postmaster in Waterford, committed suicide by drowning herself in the Fox river, back of her home. The body was recovered. Mrs. Schenkenberg is said to have been dependent over the death of her son-in-law, John J. Pettit, who died a year ago. Her husband and three children survive.

Oshkosh.—John Bloechl, meat market proprietor, is at a hospital in Oshkosh, with a large part of the flesh of his left arm cut off. Bloechl was butchering a cow at the slaughter house and had a large knife in his hand. The cow turned suddenly and knocked Mr. Bloechl's arm against the sharp edge of the knife. Amputation may be necessary.

Oshkosh.—Oshkosh will have a "stop and go" system of automatic traffic signals. The system used in Milwaukee and Racine so impressed city officials who made an inspection trip that the commission council seems definitely committed to such an arrangement of signals.

Green Bay.—The Manitowoc county highway commission has started construction of pavement on highway 18, near Whitelaw, Wis. The commission has requested state highway engineers at Green Bay to establish a three-mile detour.

Ashland.—Judge McCloud, in municipal court, Ashland, made good his statement of a few days ago when he fined Fred Lindquist the maximum for driving while intoxicated, $100.

Oshkosh.—Mrs. Dan Witzel, wife of City Clerk Witzel, Oshkosh, committed suicide by submerging her head in a cistern at her home. She had been in poor health for several months, and it was the intention of her family to remove her to the Northern hospital for treatment.

Tigerton.—Taxpayers of Tigerton have voted to build a dam over the Embarrass river to provide a bathing pool, skating rink and adequate fire protection. One thousand dollars of the cost will be paid by the Swake estate.

Superior.—Hanniman Homecek, 45 years old, a crane operator and ally for the Northwestern Fuel company, Superior, was instantly killed when 14,000 volts of electricity passed through his body while he was at work.

JUDITH TAKES POSSESSION OF BLUE LAKE RANCH

"You wildcat!" he cried. And his two big hands flew out, seeking her shoulders. "Stand back!" called Judith. "Just because you are bigger than I am, don't make any mistake! Stand back, I tell you!"

Bud Lee marveled at the swiftness with which her hand had gone into her blouse and out again, a small-caliber revolver in the steady fingers now. He had never known a man—himself possibly excepted—quicker at the draw.

But Bayne Trevors, from whose makeup cowardice had been omitted, laughed sneeringly at her and did not stand back. His two hands out before him, his face crimson, he came on.

"Fool!" cried the girl. "Fool!" Still he came on. Lee gathered himself to spring. Judith fired. Once, and Trevors' right arm fell to his side. A second time, and Trevors' left arm hung limp like the other. The crimson was gone from his face now. It was dead white. Little beads of sweat began to form on his brow.

Lee turned astonished eyes to Judith. "Now you know who's running this outfit, don't you?" she said coolly. "Yes, have a team hitched up to carry Trevors wherever he wants to go. He's not hurt much; I just winged him. And go tell the cook about my breakfast."

But Lee stood and looked at her. He had no remark to offer. Then he turned to go upon her bidding. As he went down to the bunkhouse he said softly under his breaths "Well, I'm d—d. I most certainly am!"

Meet here, heroine and villain—Bud Lee, Judith Sanford and Bayne Trevors! Rather an energetic and efficient young woman is Judith, isn't she? Not, just the same, she is what we Americans call "a nice girl" to say nothing of being a beauty when dressed up for a ball.

You see, Judith has to get busy. Part owner of the big ranch, she comes to the realization that she is being robbed by her foreman, Bayne Trevors. She suddenly appears at the ranch, discharges him and takes the management into her own hands. Judith wins the favor of the men's leaders by taming an outlaw horse, Bud Lee, daring foreman of the horse department, about whom there is a considerable element of mystery, is Judith's principal aid in ferreting out and checking the schemes of Trevors. Finally Lee realizes that he is in love with Judith. The girl surprises similar feeling in herself toward him, but keeps him at a distance until their mutual trials and dangers force a showdown and a declaration of affection.

CHAPTER I

Bud Lee Takes a Look

Bud Lee, horse foreman of the Blue Lake ranch, sat upon the gate of the home corral, bulled a cigarette with slow brown fingers, and stared across the broken fields of the upper valley to the rosy glow above the pine-tinged ridge where the sun was coming up. His customary gravity was unusually pronounced.

"If a man's got the hunch an' egg is bad," he mused, "is that a good and sufficient reason why he should go poking his fingers inside the shell? I want to know."

Tommy Burkitt, the youngest wage-earner of the outfit and a profound admirer of all that tactfulness, good humor and quiet capability which went into the makeup of Bud Lee, approached from the ranchhouse on the knob. "Hi, Bud!" he called. "Trevors wants you. On the jump."

Burkitt stepped at the gate, looking up at Lee. "On the jump, Trevors said," he repeated.

For a moment Lee sat still, his cigarette unlighted, his broad black hat far back upon his close-cropped hair, his eyes serenely contemplative upon the pink of the sky above the pines. Then he slipped from his place and, though each single movement gave an impression of great leisureliness, it was but a flash of time until he stood beside Burkitt.

"Stick around a wee bit, laddie," he said gently, a lean brown hand resting lightly on the boy's square shoulder. "A man can't see what is on the cards until they're tipped, but it's always a fair gamble that between dawn and dusk I'll gather up my string of colts and crowd on. If I do, you'll want to come along?"

He halted at young Burkitt's eagerness and turned away toward the ranchhouse and Bayne Trevors, thus putting an early end to an enthusiastic acquaintance.

"They ain't no more men ever feasted like him," meditated Tommy, in an approval so profound as to be little less than out-and-out devotion.

And, indeed, one might ride up and down the world for many a day and not find a man who was Bud Lee's superior in "the things that count." As tall as most, with sufficient shoulders, a slender body, narrow-hipped, he carried himself as perhaps his forebear walked in the days when open forests or sheltered caverns housed them, with a little graceful, sun-born of the perfect play of superb physical development. His muscles, even in the slight movement, flowed fluidly; he had slipped from his place on the corral gate less like a man than like some great, splendid cat. The skin of hands, face, throat, was very dark, whether by inheritance or because of long exposure to sun and wind, it would have been difficult to say. The eyes were dark, very keen, and yet remarkably grave. From under their black brows they had the habit of appearing to be suddenly withdrawn from some great distance to come to rest, steady and calm, upon the man with whom he chanced to be speaking.

The gaunt, sure-footed form was lost to Tommy's eyes; Lee had passed beyond the clump of wild lilacs whose greenish, heart-shaped leaves screened the open court about which the ranch-house was built. A strangely elaborate ranch-house, this one, set here so far apart from the world of rich residences. There was a score of rooms in the great, one-story, rambling edifice of rudely squared timbers set in field-stone and cement, rooms now closed and locked; there were flower-gardens still cultivated daily by Jose, the half-breed; a pretty court with a fountain and many roses, set upon which a dozen doorways looked; wide verandas with glimpses beyond of fireplaces and long expanses of polished floor. For, until recently, this had been not only the headquarters of Blue Lake ranch, but the home as well of the chief of its several owners, Luke Sanford, whose own efforts alone had made him at forty-five a man to be reckoned with, had followed his fancy here extensively and extensively, allowing himself this one luxury of his many lean, hard years. Then, six months ago, just as his ambitions were stepping to fresh heights, just as his hands were filling with newer, greater endeavor, there had come the mishap in the mountains and Lee Sanford's tragic death.

Lee passed silently through the courtyard and came to the door at the far end. The door stood open; within was the office of Bayne Trevors, general manager. Lee entered, his hat still far back upon his head. The sound of his boots upon the bare floor caused Trevors to look up quickly.

"Hello, Lee," he said quietly. "Wait a minute, will you?" Quite a different type from Lee, Bayne Trevors was heavy and square and hard. His eyes were the glinting, gray eyes of a man who is forceful, dynamic, the sort of man who is a better captain than lieutenant, whose hands are strong to grasp life by the throat and demand that she stand and deliver. Only because of his wide and successful experience, of his initiative, of his way of quick, decisive action directed to a marked executive ability, had Luke Sanford chosen Bayne Trevors as his right-hand man in the colossal venture as the Blue Lake ranch. Only because of the same pushing, vigorous personality was he this morning general manager, with the unlimited authority of a dictator over a petty principality.

In a moment Trevors lifted his frowning eyes from the table turning in his chair to confront Lee, who stood lounging in leisurely manner against the door-jamb.

"That young litor wants money sharp," he growled, his voice as sharp and quick as his eyes. "As if I didn't have enough to contend with already."

"Meaning young Hampton, I take it?" said Lee quietly.

Trevors nodded savagely. "Telegram. Caught it over the line the last thing last night. Well, have to sell some horses this time, Lee."

Lee's eyes narrowed imperceptibly. "I didn't plan to do any selling for six months yet," he said, not in explanation but merely in explanation. "They're not ready."

"How many three-year-olds have you got in your string down in the Big meadow?" asked Trevors crisply.

"Counting those eleven Red Duke colts?"

"Counting everything. How many?"

"Seventy-three."

The general manager's pencil wrote upon the pad in front of him "73." Then swiftly multiplied it by 50. Lee saw the result, 3,650 set down with the dollar sign in front of it. He said nothing.

"What would you say to fifty dollars a head for them?" asked Trevors, whirling again in his swivel chair. "Three thousand six fifty for the bunch?"

"I'd say the same," answered Lee deliberately, "that I'd say to a man that offered me two bits for Daylight or Ladybird. I just naturally wouldn't say nothing at all."

Trevors snarled cynically. "What are the seventy-three colts worth, then?"

"Right now, when I'm just ready to break 'em in," said Bud Lee thoughtfully, "the worst of that string is worth fifty dollars. I'd say twenty of the herd ought to bring fifty dollars a head; twenty more ought to bring sixty; ten are worth an even hundred; seven of the Red Duke stock are good for a hundred and a quarter; the other four Red Dukes and the three Robert the Devils are worth a hundred and fifty a head. The whole bunch, an easy fifty-seven hundred little iron men."

He stared hard at Trevors a moment. And then, partially voicing the thought with which he had grappled upon the corral gate, he added meditatively: "There's something amazingly peculiar about an outfit that will listen to a man offer fifty bucks on a string like that."

His eyes, cool and steady, met Trevors in a long look which was little short of a challenge.

"Just how far does that go, Lee?" asked the manager curtly.

"As far as you like," replied the horse foreman coolly. "Are you going to sell those three-year-olds for thirty-six hundred?"

"Yes," answered Trevors bluntly. "I am. What are you going to do about it?"

"Ask for my time, I guess," and although his voice was gentle and unassuming, it was steady and unflinching.

Bayne Trevors, his lips tightly compressed, his eyes steady, a faint, angry flush in his cheeks, checked what words were flowing to his tongue and looked keenly at his foreman. Lee met his regard with cool unconcern. Then, just as Trevors was about to speak, there came an interruption.

The quiet of the morning was broken by the quick thud of a horse's hoofs on the hard ground of the courtyard. Bud Lee in the doorway turned to see a strange horse drawn up, so that upon its fore bunched hoofs it still to a standstill; saw a slender figure, which in the early light had mistook for a log, slip out of a saddle. And then, suddenly, a girl, the spurs of her little riding-boots making jingling music on the veranda, her riding-quirt swinging from her wrist, had stepped by him and was looking with bright, snapping eyes from him to Trevors.

"I am Judith Sanford," she announced briefly, and there was a note in her young voice which went ringing, bell-like, through the still air. "Is one of you men Bayne Trevors?"

A quick, shadowy smile came and went upon the lips of Bud Lee. It struck him that she might have said in just that way: "I am the queen of England and I am running my own kingdom." He looked at her with eyes filled with open interest and curiosity, making swift appraisal of the flush in the sun-browned cheeks, the confusion of dark, curling hair disturbed by the furious riding, the vivid, red-blooded beauty of her. Mouth and eyes and the very carriage of the dark head upon her superb white throat announced boldly and triumphantly that here was a well-petted lily of a lady, but rather a maid whose blood, like the blood of the father before her, was turbulent and hot and must bell like wild mountain-stream at opposition. Her eyes, a little darker than Trevors', were the eyes of lightning.

Trevors, irritated already, turned hard eyes up at her from under corrugated brows. He did not move in his chair. Nor did Lee stir except that now he removed his hat.

"I am Trevors," said the general manager curtly. "And, whether you are Judith Sanford or the queen of Slam, I am busy right now."

"You talk soft with me, Trevors," cried the girl passionately. "If you want to hold your job five minutes?

the job I've got in my hands? You know that the ranch is a million-dollar outfit; you know that you can ride fifteen miles without getting off the home-range; you know that we are doing a dozen different kinds of farming and stock-raising. But you don't know just how short the money is? There's that young litor now, Hampton. He holds a third interest and I've got to consider what he says, even if he is a weak-minded, inbred pup that can't do anything but spend an inheritance like the born fool he is. His share is mortgaged; I've tried to pay the mortgage off. I've got to keep the interest up. Interest alone amounts to three thousand dollars a year. Think of that! Then there's Luke Sanford dead and his one-third interest left to another young fool, a girl! Every two weeks she's writing for a report, eternally burling in making suggestions, hampering me until I'm sick of the job."

"That would be Luke's girl, Judith?"

"Yes. Two of the three owners' kids, writing me at every turn. And the third owner, Timothy Gray, the only sensible one of the lot, has just up and sold out his share, and I suppose I'll be hearing next that some superannuated female in an old lady's home has inherited a fortune and bought him out. And now you, the best man I've got, throw me down?"

"I don't see," said Lee slowly, after a brief pause, "just what good it does to sell a good string of horses like these were sheep. Half of that herd is real horse-dust, I tell you."

"Well," snapped Trevors, "suppose you are right. I've got to raise three thousand dollars in a hurry. Where will I get it?"

"Who is offering fifty dollars a head for those horses?" asked Lee abruptly.

"It might be the Big Western Lumber company?"

"U-huh. Well, you can kill the rat in your own barn, Trevors. I'll go look for a job somewhere else."

Bayne Trevors, his lips tightly compressed, his eyes steady, a faint, angry flush in his cheeks, checked what words were flowing to his tongue and looked keenly at his foreman. Lee met his regard with cool unconcern. Then, just as Trevors was about to speak, there came an interruption.

"I'll tolerate none of your high and mighty airs!"

Trevors laughed at her, a sneer in his laugh. "I talk the way I talk," he answered roughly. "If people don't like the sound of it they don't have to listen! Lee, you round up those seventy-three horses and crowd them over the ridge to the lumber camp. If, if you want to quit, quit now and I'll send a hot man!"

The hot color mounted higher in the girl's face, a new anger leaped up in her eyes.

"Take no orders this morning that I don't give," she said, for a moment turning her eyes upon Lee. And to Trevors: "Busy or not busy, you take time right now to answer my questions. I've got your reports and all they tell me is that you are going in the hole as fast as you can. What business have you got selling off my young steers to a sacrifice?"

"Go, get those horses, Lee," said Trevors, ignoring her.

Again she spoke to Lee, saying crisply: "What horses is he talking about?"

With his deep gravity at its deepest, Bud Lee answered: "All L-S stock. The eleven Red Duke three-year-olds; the two Robert the Devil colts; Brown Babe's filly, Comet—"

"All mine, every running hoof of 'em," she said, cutting in. "What does Trevors want you to do with them? Give them away for ten dollars a head or cut their throats?"

"Look here—" cried Trevors angrily, on his feet now.

"You shut up!" commanded the girl sharply. "Lee, you answer me."

"He's selling them fifty dollars a head," he said with a secret joy; his heart as he glanced at Trevors' flushed face.

"Fifty dollars?" Judith gasped. "Fifty dollars for a Red Duke colt like Comet?"

She stared at Lee as though she could not believe it. He merely stared back at her, wondering just how much she knew about horseflesh.

Then, suddenly, she whirled again upon Trevors.

"I came out to see if you were a crook or just a fool," she told him, her words like a slap in his face. "No man could be so big a fool as that. You—you crook!"

The muscles under Bayne Trevors' jaws quivered. "You've said about enough," he shot back at her. "And even if he do own a third of this outfit, I'll have you understand that I am the manager here and that I do what I like."

From her bosom she snatched a big envelope, tossing it to the table. "Look at that," she ordered him. "You big thief! I've mortgaged my holding for fifty thousand dollars and I've bought in Timothy Gray's share. I swing two votes out of three now, Bayne Trevors. And the first thing I do is run you out, you great big grating fathead! You would chuck Luke Sanford's outfit to the dogs, would you? Get off the ranch, you're fired!"

"You can't do a thing like this," snapped Trevors, after one swift glance at the papers he had whisked out of their covering.

"I can't, can't I?" she jeered at him. "Don't you fool yourself for one little minute! Pack your little trunk and hammer the trail!"

"I'll do nothing of the kind. Why, I don't know even who you are! You say that you are Judith Sanford? He shrugged his massive shoulders. "How do I know what game you are up to?"

"You can't bluff me for two seconds," Bayne Trevors, he blazed at her. "You know who I am, all right. So go for Sunny Harper," she ended sharply.

"Discharged three months ago," Trevors told her with a show of teeth. "Johnny Hodge, then," she commanded. "Or Tod Bruce or Bing Kelley. They all know me."

"Fired long ago, all of them," laughed Trevors, "to make room for competent men."

"To make room for more crooks!" she cried, her own brown hands balled into fists scarcely less hard than Trevors' had been. Then for the third time she turned upon Lee. "You are one of his new thieves, I suppose?"

"Thank you, ma'am," said Bud Lee gravely.

"Well, answer me. Are you?"

"No, ma'am," he told her, with no hint of a twinkle in his calm eyes. "Leastwise, not his exactly. You see, I do all my killing and highway robbing on my own books. It's just a way I have."

Yes, Judith has fired Trevors, but will he go? What if he says, "No?"

First Bifocal Lens Benjamin Franklin invented the bifocal eyeglasses—one of the greatest of blessings—to fit his own needs. At Paris he frequently dined out where there were beautiful women in the company. Like all sensible men, he was fond of good food, and fond of looking at lovely women. He decided it to be important to see your food before you put it into your mouth; but he also wished to see the faces of the guests that decorated the table. It was inconvenient to put on one pair of spectacles to eat, and another pair every time anybody spoke to him. He therefore invented the device of having the upper part of his glasses consist of one lens, and the lower of another, which proved in practice, like nearly everything he thought of, eminently satisfactory.—W. L. Phelps in "Some Masters of American Literature."

"What Would You Say to Fifty Dollars a Head?"

even pleasant, his eyes were hard. "I'll take my own little string and move on."

"Curse it!" cried Trevors heatedly. "What difference does it make to you? What business is it of yours how I sell? You draw down your monthly pay, don't you? I raised you a notch last month without your asking for it, didn't I?"

"That's so," agreed the foreman equably. "It's a cinch none of the boys have any kick coming at the wages."

For a moment Trevors sat frowning up at Lee's inscrutable face. Then he laughed shortly. "Look here, Bud," he said good-humoredly, an obvious seriousness of purpose under the light tone. "I want to talk with you before you do anything rash. Sit down."

But Lee remained standing, merely saying, "Is that all?"

"I wonder," explained Trevors, "if the boys understand just the size of the job I've got in my hands? You know that the ranch is a million-dollar outfit; you know that you can ride fifteen miles without getting off the home-range; you know that we are doing a dozen different kinds of farming and stock-raising. ### HELPFUL HINTS

During the summer months try to make the housework as light as possible for yourself and family. If even the tiny people are taught to care for their own belongings, hang up wraps and caps and put away toys it will save the housemother many steps.

If possible, and not adding too much distance from the kitchen range, have the meals on a porch, using paper napkins, silver-ware, tablecloth or doilies. And thus save the family linen as well as yourself.

Mothers often remark: "It is easier to do things myself than to see that the children do them." If no injustice were done to herself, it is hardly fair that a child should be untrained in usefulness. It takes effort to teach anything even to a small puppy; one has to go over and over the lessons, while we all know it is quite worth while for training isn't for the day, but for the life.

Save a few minutes in every piece of work possible; wash the potatoes with one of the magic mitts that will take off nearly all of the skin and then boil a kettle full at a time. Serve them hot for dinner, fried for supper or for potato salad.

Put all dishes in soak as soon as used. If possible, get one of the large round dish drainers with a centerpiece to hold the flat silver. When the dishes are washed they may be scalded in this drainer, set into a pan and left to dry in the sink, needing no wiping, except the cutlery.

Desserts of gelatin are wholesome, easy to digest and may be prepared overnight or early in the morning and placed on ice. Such foods are much more wholesome than rich pies and puddings, and very little work to prepare.

An hour saved here and there in housekeeping may be used for reading, rest or in doing anything one loves to do, but never takes the time for. Every mother owes it to herself and the welfare of her family to keep well and happy.

Don't put off the kind acts too long. Tomorrow may not come. Do something for somebody today, now, while the matter is fresh in your mind.

SEASONABLE FOODS

A delicious salad while ripe peaches are plentiful is prepared thus: Place ripe halves of peaches peeled on heart leaves of lettuce. Fill the centers with a small ball of cream cheese, sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts and serve with cream salad dressing made as follows: Beat until firm one cupful of double cream, add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, the same of paprika, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and two of orange juice. Mix and heap on the side of the salad.

Custard Pie.—The shell or crust is previously baked, then filled with the custard and baked again. Whip five eggs with six tablespoonfuls of sugar, add one pint of hot milk, flavor with vanilla or lemon, strain and bake in the shell.

Banana Whip.—Peel three bananas and cut into half-inch pieces, cook in one-half cupful of water with six tablespoonfuls of sugar, the thin rind of half lemon grated. Cook ten minutes, add one-half tablespoonful of gelatin softened in cold water, one cupful of cream, and the juice of a small lemon. Beat all together and mold; chill and serve garnished with bright colored jelly.

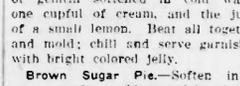

Brown Sugar Pie.—Soften in a saucepan four tablespoonfuls of butter, stir in four tablespoonfuls of flour, mix to a paste and add, by degrees, a pint of milk. Stir over the heat until it boils. Mix two cupfuls of brown sugar with one-half cupful of milk and stir into the thickened mixture. Cook until the sugar is dissolved, then remove from the fire and stir in two beaten egg yolks and the juice of a half a lemon. Pour into a baked pastry shell, cover with a meringue, using the whites of the eggs, and brown in a moderate oven. Serve cold.

Nice little cakes may be prepared by putting a marshmallow on small, round salted crackers and setting them in the oven to puff and brown. These are well-liked with a cup of tea.

Coffee Cake.—Cream one cupful of butter, add a cupful of sugar and one beaten egg, one cupful each of honey and cold coffee, two cupfuls of dried fruit, a mixture of raisins and currants or dates, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg, four cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of soda and two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar. Mix well and let stand for a half hour before baking.

Not Matter of Principle Honesty is the best policy, but he who acts on that principle is not at best a snip.—Bishop Whately.

Recovery From Influenza Hastened by PE-RU-NA

Mr. C. A. Allen, R. R. No. 2, Bondurant, Iowa, gives testimony to the healing power of Pe-ru-na. Influenza left him much run down in health with catarrh of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes punctuated with attacks of asthma. He writes:

"While recovering from the Influenza I was so weak I could not gain any strength for two months. The latter part of the winter, I bought six bottles of Pe-ru-na and began taking it. My weight increased to 175 pounds, the most I ever weighed."

My usual winter weight is 155. If you can use this letter for any good, you are perfectly welcome."

Such evidence cannot fail to convince the rankst unbeliever of the merits of Pe-ru-na.

Insist upon having the old and original remedy for catarrhal conditions.

at Milwaukee—August 25th to 30th

Fair Week is the one great get-together event for all Wisconsin—the time and the place when city folks, farmers and manufacturers from every section gather to view the efforts of the past year, to discuss problems, to inter-change ideas and have a generally interesting time. Surely you're planning to come—it's important to you! The "Fair Board" promises a record-breaker, this year! And here let us remind you that

A Visit to Milwaukee is Not Complete Without a Visit to "Wisconsin's Greatest Store"

The Boston Store is a great Merchandise fair in itself, where, under one roof, you can see merchandise collected by experts from every available market in the world! From our Oriental representative we receive beautiful works from far-away Japan, China and the Philippines—from our European representatives the products of Germany, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, France, England, and sunny Italy—and from the great markets of these United States we have chosen the kind of merchandise which experience has taught us, will supply the needs and wants of Wisconsin!

If you have shopping to do or not, we urge you to make this store your headquarters. Wander through our wide aisles and spacious departments to your heart's content. Avail yourself of our many conveniences—our rest rooms where both tub and shower baths are available—our writing rooms—our service station where all postal business may be transacted—our free checking of parcels—our public telephone—our big, airy lunch rooms where delicious foods may be had at reasonable prices.

We Have Prepared Many Special Sale Events for You! Watch for Them in the Daily Newspapers While You are in Milwaukee.

Motorists! You Can Have Two Hours Safe Auto Parking Free at Boston Store Auto Park with a Purchase of $1 or More. Additional Time Will be Charged at Only 10c an Hour.

Hundreds of folks have expressed their satisfaction of this up-to-date service—directly across the street from our store, on Fourth Street—a convenient and safe place to leave your car without fear of violating the parking ordinance.

DUCK SEASON OPENS SEPT. 16th.

Now that our summer—have we had one—is about over sportsmen are now looking forward to the opening of the hunting season in this state and it is only about a month's wait before it will be possible to hunt wild water fowl under the laws of Wisconsin. Local hunters are expecting some unusually good duck hunting this season on account of high water which has flooded all marshes and has furnished a fine feeding place for water fowls. The same condition exists throughout the southern part of the state and unless exceptionally warm weather which we have not had this season soon appears the high water will exist when the hunting season opens.

There can be no activities in the woods until Sept. 7, the date of the opening of the season for Hungarian partridges in Jefferson and Waukesha counties, but that will excite little interest here.

The red letter date in these parts is Sept. 16 which is the opening of the season for wild duck, including coot or mud hens, as well as wild goose, brant, plover snipe, rail and rice hen. The season closes Dec. 20.

October 1 will usher in the rabbit hunting season which closes Jan. 1, but next to deer hunting the chief attraction is the partridge season which is from Oct. 4 to 8. The squirrel season is from Oct. 15 to Jan. 1. Skunk and racoon may be trapped between Oct. 25 and Jan. 31, muskrat from Oct. 25 to March 31 and mink from Nov. 1 to March 31.

The next big event is the deer season which is from Nov. 13 to Nov. 22 in northern counties only. There is no open season on moose, elk, beaver, otter, squirrels, in a few southern counties, marten, fisher, wild swan, woodcock, pheasants or quails.
