NUMBER 5

ALL IS SET FOR THE COUNTY FAIR

At the head of this last call for the Washington County Fair, which begins at West Bend next week Tuesday and continues until Friday evening, something should be said regarding the children. The secretary of the Fair received a number of inquiries as to whether a Children's Day had been designated. This has not been done for the reason that every day is Children's Day, that is, children under twelve years of age have free admission to the Fair on any day, provided they are accompanied by their parents or guardian. Children over twelve and under sixteen years pay an admission fee of twenty-five cents.

There was a time, many years ago, when a special day had been set aside for the children; when they formed a parade and, led by their teachers, marched to the Fair grounds and took in the sights under the guidance of their educators. This custom, although very nice, has been abandoned for some reason, many years ago.

The Fair officers are very anxious to have as many children visit the Co. Fair as possible. They arrange for the young generation by having a merry-go-round, a Ferris wheel and other attractions on the ground, which appeal particularly to them. They should see all the fine things that are exhibited, for if ever the beauty and excellence of an exhibit make an impression on the human mind, it is in childhood. It is of the greatest consequences to acquaint children with forthwith be their model to strive after, and they never will forget it. Therefore, bring the children, the more the merrier.

The stage has been set for the best County Fair ever held on the grounds, and all that is now necessary, to come up to the provisions of the management, is the biggest turnout to make it the success it should be.

The agricultural and horticultural exhibits promise to be the most complete of any Fair in the state because the season is so extremely late this year, and our County Fair, being the windup, left plenty of time for ripening any crop, if there was a possibility to bring it to maturity this year. A great attraction this year will be the exhibits of the apple spray rings organized in the county.

In the animal husbandry line the swine this year will play a leading part, being shown for the first time in the new hog pavilion erected on the grounds this summer.

There will be thousands of new and interesting things to be seen in the educational building, in the art gallery and in the various other show departments.

On securing the free attractions, the management was very fortunate this year. Nothing better was seen on any County Fair. They consist of the great and only Harry Bauer and his company, a lady and a little girl, in high trapeze and Roman ring acts. Little Loretta, a mere tot, astonishes with her tricks on the rings. Another trio, a Japanese troupe consisting of two men and a lady, entertains in two acrobatic comedy acts of double barrel kicking, water or fire juggling, balancing a pole with a platform on top, on which a Jap is juggling, etc. Still another act is that of the famous "Rub" Gas, Henderson, a comedy bounding rope artist who is the sensation and mirth provoker wherever he shows himself.

In addition to these acts, the Lone Pacer "Limited" will run on the race track, and a Trick Pony will do its stunts.

A novelty on the grounds will be a pageant by the Junior Red Cross of the county, illustrating what this organization among the school children stands for.

Horse races will be held Wednesday and Thursday afternoons for purses aggregating $1800. These for some years past have been a great drawing card of the Fair, on account of the many fine race horses on the track, the races being the windup of turf meets in eastern Wisconsin. Friday afternoon the race track will be given over to automobile races. Previous to these, at one o'clock, the grand prize stock parade will be held.

Concerts will be given every afternoon, and there will be side shows of the unobjectionable kind and concession stands of various sorts, everything to make up "the best little county fair in the state."

Tuesday is entry day. Entry of articles closes at six in the evening. Exhibitors should be guided by the premium list, as only listed articles will be premiated.

MEETS WITH TWO AUTO ACCIDENTS

Barthol Jaeger of Campbellsport, certainly experienced a hoozy day last Sunday when he figured in two accidents in about four hours time. At four o'clock in the afternoon he and his wife and daughters Leona and Emma, were going north on Highway 55 from West Bend, in their new Essex car. They were following a Durant sedan driven by Miss Clara Albright of Barton. All went well until Miss Albright turned her car across the road and the Essex crashed into the Durant, both cars were badly damaged by the crash. Shortly after the accident Dr. E. A. Miller and Earl Roelke of Campbellsport came upon the scene of the accident and Miller towed the Essex to Campbellsport while enroute he drove south to Highway 67 and then swung west toward Campbellsport. While driving up a grade they met a Ford car driven by Wm. Krueger, and in passing the Ford car, Krueger in some way swerved his machine into the Essex, causing that car to tip over on the right side of the road, and the Ford to turn over on the left. This crash caused both machines to be so badly damaged that they had to be taken to Campbellsport by a garage crew.

MEETS WITH ACCIDENT NUMBER TWO
Arthur Juech of West Bend, Motorcycle Policeman of Washington County, met with accident number two last Saturday, while in the faithful performance of his duties, which resulted in the fracture of his left arm between the elbow and the shoulder. The accident was the outcome of a reckless driver on a slippery pavement, Juech was driving south on Highway 55, when just a little ways north of the intersection of Highways 55 and 15, he met two cars. The first car was traveling at medium rate of speed, but the last car was going along at a high rate. When the driver of the last car applied the brakes the machine skidded to the left, on the slippery pavement, the car caught the motorcycle of the policeman and threw him off the pavement onto a pile of ties, causing the fracture of the arm. Mr. Juech was taken to West Bend, where medical attention was given him. He will be off duty for some time.

This is Mr. Juech's second serious accident during the time that he has been acting in the capacity as motorcycle policeman. Last year he was hit by a car at the junction of Highway 15 and 29, which caused serious injury to him, and completely demolished the motorcycle.

Another auto tragedy was near realization at Pesch's Corners near New Fane, the scene of the death of Game Warden Michael Kleist's tragic death two months ago, when a Ford car with two Kewaskum boys, left the highway and crashed into the rock quarry last Thursday evening. The two young men had attended a movie show at Plymouth and were on their way to Kewaskum when the accident occurred. One of the occupants of the car had his arm pinned under the side of the coupe, the bones being broken and the member badly crushed. His companion had his ribs broken. The one with the shattered ribs managed to crawl from out of the wreckage and made his way to the Wm. Pesch farm where his soule for help aroused the family. Leo Kaas, who has a farm nearby, was also summoned and with the help of several farm hands the car was lifted from the boy whose arm was pinned beneath it. Both boys were then placed in the Pesch car and hurried to Kewaskum where they were attended by a physician. REX BEACH WON FAME "THE SPOILERS"
A literary person with a passion for figures has estimated that fully ten million books dealing with Alaska have been sold. Two names head the list of best sellers of Alaska novels. They are Rex Beach and Jack London.

Rex Beach's novel, "The Spoilers," according to the figures, is the most popular novel ever written about the far north. Its sales have run to the half million mark. Numerous editions have been printed. It is even now selling as well as the average novel, and it has been nearly twenty years since it was published.

Interest in the book was revived by the announcement that it was being filmed on an elaborate scale by Jesse D. Hampton at the Goldwyn Studios. When it was screened some years ago it was the first big American picture. The new version has an all-star cast, headed by Milton Sills, Barbara Bedford, Anna Q. Nilsson and Noah Beery. It will be the attraction at the Kewaskum Movies on Sunday evening.

Rex Beach, the author is a picturesque figure; he is not only a popular writer, but he is a shrewd man of business as well. His wealth has been estimated at a million dollars or more. By peculiar coincidence, both London and Beach arrived in Alaska at about the same time. It was during the gold rush of 1898.

Beach left a Chicago law office in answer to the call of gold and adventure. He found both. But he found more than that—but was unaware of it at the time of the finding. It was the background for such novels as "The Spoilers" which have made him wealthy, and famous the world over. The author of many books, he has never surpassed or equalled it.

CAR PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Donnell C. Shepard of Neenah, traveling salesman had an experience on Monday morning at about 10 o'clock, which he doubtless will long remember when the touring car which he was driving plunged into the Milwaukee river at the concrete bridge, near J. P. Fellens' farm on Highway 65, about a mile and half north of Kewaskum. Mr. Shepard was driving south at a high rate of speed going toward Milwaukee; when he approached the bridge, he became confused when he read the sign "temporary bridge", thinking that the concrete was closed for traffic, he took the old road, when he saw that the old iron bridge had also been washed away it was too late to stop his machine, and he drove straight ahead over a six foot embankment and down into about eight feet of water. His car was submerged with the exception of about four inches in the rear. Shepard was able to get out of the car. He clambered to the top of the machine and called for help. A large plank was shoved out to the car so that he was able to get to shore, uninjured although drenched and shivering. His last being about the only dry stick of clothes he had on him. The unfortunate man was brought to this village to the Republican House, where Landford Schuitz saw to it that he received dry clothing until some of his clothing was brought him via car from his home. After the noon hour he proceeded on his way home.

Judith of BLUE LAKE RANCH By JACKSON GREGORY

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

JUDITH'S STORY

SYNOPSIS—Bud Lee, horse breeder of the Blue Lake ranch, convinced Harry Trevors, manager, is deliberately wrecking the property owned by Judith Sanford, a young woman, her cousin, Pauline, Hampton, and Timothy Gray, decides to throw up his job. Judith arrives and announces she has bought Gray's share in the ranch and will run it. She instructs Trevors after shooting him twice in self-defense. The men on the ranch dislike taking orders from a girl, but by subduing a vicious horse and proving her thorough knowledge of ranch life Judith wins the best of them over. She decides to stay for a while at least. Judith becomes convinced that her veterinarian, Bill Crowley, is treacherous. She discovers him and gets back Don Trippe, her dad's father's man. Pauline, Hampton, and Timothy Gray, and Judith's father's man, Pauline, Hampton, and Timothy Gray, decide to visit the ranch. Judith's messenger is held up and robbed of the money. She tells the men to go to the city for more money, getting back safely with it, though his horse is killed under him. Both he and Judith see Trevors' head in the bushes. She chases, hard to account for, because out on the ranch Judith and Lee investigate the scene of the holdup. A cabin in a flower-planted clearing catches Judith's admiration. It is Lee's, though he does not say so. They are fired on from ambush and Lee wounded. Answering the fire, they make for the cabin. Here they find Bill Crowley wounded. Dragging him into the building, they find he has the money taken from Judith's messenger. They are besieged in the cabin.

Parades

From without came the low murmur of men's voices. Judith had her back to the door and her hand on the knob. Her eyes bright and eager, at frequent intervals for perhaps three or four minutes the two voices came indistinctly to those in the cabin. Then silence for as long a time. And then a voice again, this time quite near the door, calling out clearly: "Hey, you in there! Pitch the money out the window and we'll let you go." "There's a voice," said Judith quietly, "to remember! I'll be able to swear to it in court." "Certainly a voice to remember, just as my remembrance is a useful face for years, though it is but a chance one seen in a crowd. A voice markedly individual, not merely because it was somewhat high-pitched for a man's, but rather for a quality not easily defined, which gave to it a certain vibrant, unpleasant harshness, sounding metallic almost, rasping, as though with the aim of steel surfaces rubbing. Altogether impossible to describe adequately, yet, as Judith said, not to be forgotten. Lee turned triumphantly to the girl. "I've got his tag!" he whispered to her. "I played poker with that voice one night not four months ago in Eckley's bar."

ous, especially at the very place where the car went over! He wanted me to know so that in case he could not get the work done on it before I came, I would be careful. On top of that would he go and run his car into such danger as that? Oh, I know!" she cried again, her hands hard upon her rifle. "I know, I tell you! From the first I suspected. I know that Chris Quininn had threatened a dozen times to 'get' father. I know that soon or late he would try. I wrote Emmet Sawyer, our county sheriff, and told him what I believed, asked him to go to the spot and see what the signs told. A square man is Emmet Sawyer and as sharp as a tack." "And he told you that you were mistaken?" "He did nothing of the kind! He reported that the tracks of the car showed that it had kept well away from the bank, that again it had gone on, swerving so as to run close to the edge! I know what happened: Father got out to look at the dangerous spot and to put up the sign he had brought with him and that was found in the road. Chris Quininn had followed him, perhaps to shoot him down from behind. Chris Quininn's wife! Then he saw a safer way. He came up behind poor old dad and struck him on the head with something, rifle-barrel or revolver. He started the car up and let it run over the bank. He—" "She broke off then. Bud Lee felt that he knew what she would say if she could bring herself to go on; that she would tell how crooked Chris Quininn had thrown the unconscious man down over the bank to be bruised and broken, by the wrecked car. "You've got to be mighty sure before you make a charge like that," he reminded her. "If Quininn had done it, why didn't Emmet Sawyer get the deed done on him?" "Because," she whispered quickly, "I'm a fool! Quininn established an alibi. A man whose word there was no reason to doubt said that Quininn was with him at the time of the murder. And that man was—Bayne Trevors!" "Trevors?" muttered Lee. He shook his head. "Trevors is a hard man, Judith. And he's a scoundrel, if you want to know! But frame up a murder—plan to murder Lake Sanford—No, I don't believe it!" "Is he the man to miss a chance that lay at his hand? The main chance for him? The chance to hold a man like Chris Quininn in the hollow of his hand, to make him do his bidding, to set him just such work as he is doing now? Answer me! Is Bayne Trevors above a deal like that?" "Bud Lee's answer was silence. "And there is one other thing," went on Judith swiftly, "known to no one but Emmet Sawyer, whom I told, and me and Chris Quininn. In father's letter he told me that a man had paid him some money the day before, and that he was going to drive to Rocky Bend to bank it. That money, several hundred dollars, was never banked. It was not found on his body. Where did it go?" "Even that doesn't incriminate Quininn, you know." "No. The rest is pure guesswork on my part. Guesswork based on what I know. Not enough to hang Chris Quininn, Bud Lee. But enough to make me sure. He's working at Trevors' game right now. If we can prove that it is Trevors' game it will go to show how worthless his alibi was." "Well?" called Quininn, the third time. "What about it? We ain't going to wait all night." "Tell him," whispered Judith, her hand on Lee's arm, "to come and get it if he wants it! One of us can hold the cabin against the two of them while the other slips out in the dark and runs back to the ranch-house for help. If we're in luck, Bud Lee, we'll corner the bunch of them before daylight!" "It's the only way," she insisted. "If we gave them the money they'd want Bill Crowley next. If they got Crowley away with them into the mountains I am not sure they could not hide until they got him safe in Trevors' hands. Then we'd have the whole fight still to make, sooner or later. It's our one bet, Lee!" "And Bud Lee, seeing no better way ahead for them, blew out the candle, forced Judith to stand close to the rock chimney of the fireplace, took his station near her, and answered Quininn, saying shortly: "Come ahead when you're ready. We're waiting." Quininn's curse, the crack of his rifle, the flying splinters from the cabin door, came together like one implacable menace. "And now, Bud Lee," cried Judith quickly, "I don't mind telling you, not seeing the end of the string we are playing, that you are a man to my liking!" "My hat's off," said Lee, with grave simplicity. "And in any old kind of a fight a man wouldn't want a better partner than I can reach now, putting out my hand. He'd want—just a thoroughbred! And now, little partner, let's give them—fits!" "Crouching in the dark, reserving their own fire while they waited for something more definite than the bark of a rifle to shoot at, their hands met. It came about, quite as matters often do, that at the three-mile-distant ranch headquarters it was one who knew comparatively little of the ways of this part of the world who was first to suspect that all was not well with Judith Sanford. To Pauline Hampton her failure to appear at dinner was significant. He learned from Mrs. Simpson that in the afternoon Judith, after a hurried lunch, had taken her rifle and ridden away. Where? Mrs. Simpson did not know. "Hurried lunch?" said Hampton. "Took her rifle, did she?" "His eyes had grown very serious as he stared down into Mrs. Simpson's concerned face. Hampton went to the men's quarters word for Carson and Lee to come to the house. He strode up and down the office, the frown gathering upon his usually smooth brows. Plainly if something had happened to Judith the present responsibility lay upon his shoulders as next in authority. "Here I am," announced Carson briefly. "What is it?" "I am a little worried, Carson," said Hampton, "about Miss Sanford. I'm afraid—" "Afraid? Afraid of what? You don't think she eloped with your son or stole the spoons, do you?" snapped Carson. He had been interrupted at the crucial point in a game of cribbage with Poker Face and the cattle-man's weak spot was carbide. He glared at Hampton indignantly. "Where is Lee?" questioned Hampton sharply. "Why didn't he come?" "Dunno," answered Carson, still without interest. "I ain't seen him. Wasn't in for supper—" "I tell you," cried Hampton, angry at Carson's quiet acceptance of facts that to him were darkly significant, "he, too, was out with his rifle today; I saw him myself. Now he fails to show up! Don't you see what all this points to?" Carson, who seldom lost his poise, with one-half of his brain still given over to the hand he meant to play with Poker Face, merely sighed and shook his head. Hampton came swiftly to Carson's side. "They left the Lower End this afternoon and came on here. Then, both armed, they rode away again at four or five o'clock. I tell you, something has happened to them." "Don't believe it," returned Carson. "Not for one little half-minute, I don't. What's happened? Hub?" "You know as well as I do what sort of characters are about. The man who robbed Charlie Miller—was shot at Bud Lee—" "Whoa!" grinned Carson. "Don't you go and fool yourself. That stick-up you got is a clean hundred miles from here right now and still going real lively. If any other Jasper lent him a hand, why, he's on his way, too. Not stopping to pick flowers. It's the way their kind plays the game." Carson was so cheerfully certain, so amused at the thought of Bud Lee and Judith Sanford requiring anybody's assistance, so confident concerning the methods of outlaws, that finally Hampton sent him away, half-assured, and went himself to his friends in the living room. He loit'ered an hour slip by in rest, less inactivity. For, no matter what Carson might say or these people here, Judith had not yet come in. Hampton left them and went to his room for a rifle and cartridge-belt. He intended to slip out quietly. Marcia met him in the hall; she had heard his quick steps and guessed that he was going out. Now clearly, though she was frightened, she was delighted with him. He had never thrilled her like this before. She had never guessed that Pauline Hampton could be so stern-faced, so purposeful. She whispered an entreaty that he be careful, then, as he went out, ran back to the others, her eyes shining. "Pauline is going to see what in the matter," she announced excitedly. Hampton passed swiftly through the courtyard. He saw the light of the bank-house gleaming brightly. On his way down the embankment came upon Tommy Burkitt. "Is it Mr. Hampton?" asked Tommy, coming close in the darkness to peer at him. "Yes. What is it? Who are you?" "Tom Burkitt, Tommy Burkitt, you know—Bud Lee's helper. I—I am afraid something has happened. Lee hasn't come in yet. They tried to pick him off once already, you know—" "Neither has Miss Sanford come in," said Hampton quickly, sensing here at last a fear that was fellow to his own. "They rode toward the Upper End. You know the way, Burkitt?" He moved on toward the corral; Burkitt turned and came with him. "Sure I know the trail," muttered Tommy. "You're going to see what's wrong with 'em? Miss Judy, too? My G—!" "Bring out a couple of horses," Hampton commanded crisply. "We've lost time enough already." "I'll go tell Carson and the boys—" "I have already told Carson. He says it's all nonsense. Leave him alone—" Tommy, boy that he was, asked no further questions, but ran ahead and brought out two horses. In a twinkling he had saddled them and the two riders, each with a rifle across his arm, were hurrying over the mountain trail. In the blackness which lay along the upper river Hampton gave his horse a free rein and let it follow at Tommy's heels. When, finally, they drew rein under the cliffs at the lake's edge all was silent save for the faint distant booming of the river below them. "Now which way?" whispered Hampton. Tommy was shaking his head in uncertainty when suddenly from above there came to them the sharp report of a rifle. Then, like a band of fire-crackers, a volley of half a dozen staccato shots. "Listen to that, Burkitt," muttered Hampton. "They're at it now—over on the—" Tommy slipped from the saddle wordlessly, came to Hampton's side and tugged gently at his leg, whispering for him to get down. Leaving their horses there, they slipped into the utter darkness of the narrow channel in the rocks which gave access to the plateau above. "Now," cautioned Tommy guardedly, as they came to the top, "keep close to me if you don't want to take a header about a thousand feet. Look!" He nudged Hampton and pointed. "There are two horses across yonder; Bud's and Miss Judy's, most likely." Hampton did not see them, did not seek to see them. Something new, vital, big had swept suddenly into his life. He was at grips first-hand with unmasked, pulsing forces. "They're at it now!" he whispered to Burkitt. Men—yes, and a girl—were shooting, not at just wooden and paper targets, but at other men! At men who snarled back, and shot to kill. "Listen," said Burkitt. "Somebody's in the old cabin; somebody's outside. Which is which? We got to be awful careful!" They began a slow, cautious approach, slipping from bush to bush, from tree to tree, standing motionless now and then to frown into the folds of the night's curtains. Abruptly the firing ceased. They made out vaguely the two forms of the attackers, having located them a moment ago by the spurring flames from their guns. Then, "Get enough in there?" came the snarling voice of Quininn. "If you haven't, I'm going to burn you out an' he-d to you!" He got an answer he little expected, for Hampton, running out into the open, now that he knew that Bud and Judith must be in the cabin, was firing as he came. Burkitt's rifle spoke with his. "Run for it, Shorty!" yelled Quininn. "You know where. We're up against the Blue Lake boys." "Bud!" shouted Tommy. "Oh, Bud!" "In the cabin," came Bud's ringing answer. "Give 'em h—! Tommy! Coming!" With his words came the sound of the door snapping back against the wall, the reports of Tommy's rifle and Hampton's pumping but lead after two racing forms. "They'll get away!" shouted Hampton, a sudden red rage upon him. "Curse it! It's too dark—" Then Tommy gave over shooting and yelled to Lee to hold his fire. For instead of two there were three flying forms, three fast-racing, blurring, shadowy shapes merging with the night. Pauline Hampton, his rifle clutched in his hand, was running with a college sprinter's speed after Quininn and Shorty, calling breathlessly: "Look out, they'll get away!" "Hampton, come back!" shouted Lee, running after him. But Hampton was gaining on the heavy-set Shorty and had no thought of coming back. Nor a thought of anything in all the wide world just then but overtaking the flying figure in front of him. Shorty stumbled over a fallen log and rose, cursing and calling: "Chris! Lead a hand." That little chance of an uprooted tree saved Hampton's life that night. Shorty, falling, had dropped his gun and put his knee. For a moment he groped wildly for the lost rifle, then ran off without it. Hampton cleared the log and, with a yell rather betting a victorious savage than the young man whom Mrs. Langworthy hoped to call her son, threw his long arms about Shorty's neck. "I got him!" shouted Hampton. "By glory—" Shorty drove a big brutal fist smashing into his captor's face. But Hampton merely lowered his head, hiding it against Shorty's heaving shoulders, and tightened his grip. Shorty struggled to his feet, shaking at him, tearing at Hampton's body. But, with a grimace of purpose as new to him as was the whole of tonight's adventure, Hampton held on. Judith and Lee and Burkitt came to them as they were falling again. Now suddenly, with other hard hands upon him, Shorty relaxed, and Hampton, his face bloody, his body sore, sank back. He had done a mad thing, but triumph lay in that he had done it. "A man never can tell," muttered Bud Lee, with less thought of the captive than of the captor—"never can tell." "I am thinking," said Judith wonderingly, "that I never quite did you justice, Pauline Hampton!"

CHAPTER VIII Just a Girl, After All Hampton's captive, known to them only as Shorty, a heavy, surly man whose small, close-set eyes burned evilly under his pale brows, rode that night between Hampton and Judith down to the ranch-house. He maintained a stubborn silence after the first outburst of rage. Burkitt and Lee, despite Judith's objections because of Lee's wounded leg, remained at the cabin with Bill Crowley. Crowley had lost a deal of blood and, though he complained of little pain, was clearly in sore need of medical attention. Crowley, like Shorty, refused to talk. "Aw, h—!" he grunted as Lee demanded what influence had brought him with Shorty and Quininn into this mad project, "let life alone, can't you?" "The events of the rest of the night and of the morning may be briefly told; Shorty's modest request for a glass of whiskey was granted him. Then his hands still bound securely by Carson, he was put in the small grain-house, a windowless, ten-by-ten house of logs. An admirable jail this, with its heavy padlock snapped into a deeply imbedded staple and the great hasp in place. The key safely in Judith's possession, Shorty was left to his own thoughts while Judith and Hampton went to the house. In answer to Judith's call, Doc Trippe came without delay, left brief, disconcerting word that without the shadow of a doubt the boys were stricken with cholera, and went on with his little bag to see what his skill could do for Bud Crowley. "Ought to give him sulphur fumes," granted Trippe. But his hands were very gentle with the wounded man, for all that. Pauline Hampton had no thought of sleep that night; didn't so much as go to bed. He lay on a couch in the living room and Marcia Langworthy, tremendously moved at the result, Judith gave of Hampton's heroism, fluttered about him, playing nurse to her heart's delight. Mrs. Langworthy complacently looked into the future and to the maturity of her own plans. Before daylight Carson, with half a dozen men, had breakfasted, saddled and was ready to ride to the Upper End to begin the search for Quininn. But before he rode, Carson made the discovery that during the night the staple and hasp on the grain-house door had been wrenched away and that Shorty was gone. Carson's face became a dull brick red. Not yet had he brought himself to accept the full significance of events. A hold-up, such as Charlie Miller had experienced, is one thing; a continued series of incidents like these happening upon the confines of the Blue Lake ranch, was quite another. Only too plainly he realized that Shorty had had an accomplice at the ranch headquarters who had come to his assistance.

Shorty's escape shows there is treachery in Judith's ranks. Who is the traitor? Colored Onions Repel Germs In the course of an investigation of some plant diseases that attack the common onion plant, Dr. J. C. Walker has discovered that the colored varieties of onions are highly resistant to the diseases, whereas the pure white onions succumb at once. The secret is that the skins of the colored onions contain a chemical which is poisonous to the germs causing the disease. If one of these germs tries to penetrate into the colored onion bulb the germ is killed. White onions lack this germ poison and disease finds them, therefore, an easy prey.

Migratory Habit Still Exists With Americans

A young man in Europe looks forward as a rule to spending his life in the city of his birth and, very likely, in the profession or business pursued by his father. But in the United States, for 200 years, a large part of each generation has moved West and created new homes for itself. Nothing could more effectively foster individualism of the type advocated (and typified) by Herbert Hoover. This migratory habit persists to the present day even when it has lost much of its economic justification. Americans are forever on the move; the man who lives in the house where he was born is almost a curiosity. The sense of transience thus created leads also to a certain looseness of community organization, and specifically to a toleration of corrupt practices in business and politics. The mayor of your town may be a hoodler; but after all, since you are thinking seriously of moving to Austin, Tex., next spring, what does it matter? The departure from the old Americanism which was created so largely by the existence of the frontier, has naturally gone further in the Eastern states than in the West, which is, even today, much closer to pioneer condi-

PLYMOUTH SELF-FEED ENSILAGE CUTTERS

"Plymouth" Feed Cutters are the result of twenty-five years' experience and practical study of conditions and needs in the farm and dairy field. They embrace every advantage known to other similar machines, and many vital features which are original with us and can be had only in the "Plymouth Self-Feed." Below are some mighty strong points for you to think about before you buy a feed cutter.

Automatic Self-Feed—This feature consists of a traveling feed chain, made of heavy iron slats securely riveted to a chain which passes over the lower feed roller. Throw the fodder into the feed box and the "Plymouth" does the rest. Danger-Proof Self-Feed Rollers—Here's another strong feature original with the "Plymouth." It consists of four large rollers of cast iron. The traveling feed chain passes over the lower hind roller, just passing the lower front roller, which is six inches in diameter, and smooth. The two upper and lower hind rollers are ribbed. The 8-inch automatic roller at the top, to the rear, is a special feature of the "Plymouth." It acts as a lever or weight to keep the fodder passing through continuously, depending on its own gravity to keep the material going through without a hitch. Two coil springs serve to exert an even and steady pressure on the automatic roller as the volume of fodder increases in going through. The spring feature is entirely automatic, and is only to be had in the "Plymouth." It absolutely prevents clogging.

Record for Milk and Butterfat

Adriandac Wietse Dairy Maid.

By producing over 31,500 pounds milk and 1,000 pounds butterfat in one year for the fourth consecutive time, Adriandac Wietse Dairy Maid, an eleven-year-old pure bred Holstein-Friesian cow, is the only cow in the world to make such a record. Her latest record, just completed, is 31,517 pounds milk and 1,005.82 pounds butterfat—equal to 1,257.2 pounds butter, which, with the three made in previous years, gives this cow an average for the four successive yearly test periods of 32,349.9 pounds milk containing 1,948.12 pounds butterfat, equivalent to 1,210.1 pounds butter. "Adriandac" shows in the photograph, holds also the highest record for both milk and butterfat in the United States for ten months' production—27,773.3 pounds milk and 872.12 pounds butterfat, made at ten years of age. Was Never Pampered. This cow, like all other cows on yearly semi-annual test in the bridge-

The KITCHEN CABINET

Despite not any man, and do not care anything for there is an idea that has not let her, nor is there anything that has not let her place—Kathleen Lee Egan.

FOODS FOR AUTUMN DAYS

Even after summer has passed there come days so warm and sultry that heavy, hearty dishes do not appeal to the appetite. Here are a few to serve on such days:

Jellied Chicken.—Stew a fat old hen until quite tender and use all of the white part of the meat twice through the meat grinder and measure it. Add to the meat the same measure of thick white sauce and when well mixed put through a sieve. Add one tablespoonful of olive oil, one tablespoonful of vinegar, eight tablespoonfuls of aspic jelly, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of onion salt. Mix and heat over the fire to melt the jelly. Oil a mold, pour in the chicken mixture and set in a cold place to harden. Serve garnished with cubes of aspic and parsley.

Aspic Jelly.—To make a quart of jelly take four or five chicken or beef moulton cubes, add to one quart of boiling water, add the juice of half a lemon and five tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in one cupful of cold water. Season to taste and stir in the whites of three eggs well beaten. Place over the heat and stir constantly until the boiling point is reached, then let stand thirty minutes in a warm place. Strain through a cheesecloth. Put into the icebox to set.

Chicken Aspic.—Take a chicken which has been stewed. Carve the meat into thin little slices twice the width of the little finger by the length of it. Cut slices of ham of the same size and shape. Slice three hard-boiled eggs, and prepare two tablespoonfuls of mushrooms chopped. Use aspic jelly and see that it is well seasoned. Fill the mold in layers and dot with the mushrooms, using the eggs for the sides and bottom. Let it become firm before turning out.

A mold of aspic filled with green and filled with peas, and chopped cooked beans, hard-boiled egg-white chopped, and any other vegetable which blends well in flavor and color may be used. Serve on lettuce with a rich mayonnaise.

Conviction brings a silent, indelible beauty into faces made of the commonest brown clay. A few drops of water after an astringent wash something of its golden glow, even as the glory of a noble face shines like a star of light from a woman's face—Baltica.

ORDINARY GOOD THINGS

Just the common ordinary foods when served in a tasty manner are as much enjoyed as more elaborate and expensive dishes with which we are unfamiliar.

French Fried Potatoes.—Wash, pare and cut into eighths, lengthwise, enough potatoes to serve the family. Soak them one hour in cold water, drain and parboil in salted water two minutes, drain, plunge into cold water and dry between towels, fry in deep fat until delicately browned—a few at a time—and drain on paper to absorb the fat. Heat the fat to a higher temperature, return all the potatoes to the fat, using a frying basket and fry until crisp and brown, keeping the basket in motion. Again drain and sprinkle with salt.

Sponge Pudding.—Stir one-third of a cupful of flour into one cupful of milk, until smooth. Set into boiling water and cook. Cool, then add one-half tablespoonful of butter, the yolks of three eggs, well-beaten, and one-quarter of a cupful of sugar. Cut and fold in the stiffly-beaten whites and flavor to taste. Set in a pan of hot water and bake twenty minutes. Serve with powdered sugar, butter and whipped cream. Take a tablespoonful of butter and add as much sugar as it will take well-creamed; now add a half-cupful of whipped cream and a few drops of flavoring.

Broiled Meat Cakes.—Prepare the meat and shape into a large flat oblong. Place on a greased broiler and cook eight to ten minutes under the flame, turning often. Place on a hot platter, butter well, and garnish with parsley. Small cakes may be made if preferred.

Maryland Fried Tomatoes.—For those who enjoy fried tomatoes, they may have them in the winter, when firm tomatoes and fry them just as if they were to be served at once. Pack them in stone jars while still hot and pour over them a covering of sweet hot lard. When the lard has cooled, cover with a clean cloth and a heavy paper tied over the jar. Set in a cool place. When ready to use carefully remove the lard and cook until heated. They are every bit as good as fresh fried tomatoes. It is best to put them into containers small enough so that when opened they may be used soon.

BRUSHED WOOL IS IN STYLE; FALL BLOUSES ARE NOW HERE

When it comes to ultra style, much of the new fall knitted outerwear seems to "say it" with brushed wool. Not that brushed wool in itself is an unknown quantity, but it is because of its fascinating knitted interpretations that we are experiencing new thrills this season. Designers have succeeded in lifting the brushed wool today it is the outstanding expression of knitted style distinction. Part of the scheme of displaying brushed wool at its handsomest is to contrast it with something else. For instance, in case of the effective sweater here pictured, the brushed wool assumes a greater sluggishness and attractiveness because of its wide trimmings of fiber silk at collar, hip and sleeves. This mode of finishing is a decorative feature emphasized throughout the brushed wool collections this season. Note, also, the new Russian neckline.

It is a foregone conclusion that the schoolgirl's wardrobe will include a brushed wool sweater in some or other of the newest loose-fitted models. Especially popular is the middle of brushed wool, and long sleeves must

It varies as to length, having grown longer with the advance of the season, and employs all the fabrics at hand for making afternoon or evening costumes—as georgette, brocaded chiffon and other broadweaves, crepe de chine, velvet and laces. It impresses endowments, headings, plaatings into its service for adornment and undertakes all the responsibility of afternoon or evening dress when worn with plain satin skirts. One of the earliest arrivals in knitted-blouses is shown at the right of the picture in which black and white all-over laces are combined with plaited georgette. Edges of the black lace are finished with bindings of black satin. Tunic-blouses and overblouses reveal variety in necklines, with the "V" shaped neck opening, high at the back, a favorite. Convertible collars, which may be worn up about the throat or open at the front, scarf attachments and several styles in high collars are points of interest in autumn blouses.

Crepe de chine continues to rank first among fabrics for making the overblouse, but canton crepe, knitted bengaline, georgette, lace and metal brocades are all represented—the last three for blouses to be worn with the costume suit. Simple models for afternoon are shown in long and short-sleeved designs and are very often trimmed with emplacements of flax lace or narrow val lace edgings—or both. Val lace frills and a lattice-decoration of narrow ribbon give a good account of themselves as a finish for the simple and pretty blouse pictured here.

Lingerie of Linen Lingerie of fine white linen is again in favor. The ultramodern French woman has so many dainty items of this sort, but nowadays she permits it to be embroidered in customer-shawl tones of faded blue and red and gold.

Effective Trimming More than a touch of luxury is added to a pair of flesh-colored girdles that are covered with two ruffles of black chamois lace. A brassiere of the same filmy material over flesh color silk completes the costume.

Colors That Blend Trimmings, whether for headgear or gowns, employ many nectarinum shades. Brown and sand are popular color combinations, as well as black and white and two shades of gray.

Chilling Tomatoes Not Good Practice

May Result in Product Becoming Soft and Flabby.

Among dealers and handlers of produce the opinion is rather generally held that tomatoes which are fully developed but still green in color when once cooled to low temperatures, even though not frozen, will not ripen normally when held in the ripening rooms. They consider that the chilling of tomatoes, that is cooling them to temperatures which, while low, are not at or below their freezing point, may result in the stock becoming soft, flabby or wrinkled and shriveled and prevent their taking on the attractive red color. Inasmuch as definite information as to the effect on tomatoes of temperatures slightly higher than their freezing point is lacking, investigations were conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The results of the investigations on the chilling of tomatoes are reported in Department Circular 315 just issued. From these studies it is concluded that within certain limits an exposure to low temperature is not injurious to fully developed tomatoes provided they are not frozen. It has been shown that exposure to low temperatures just above the freezing point is not harmful to Globe tomatoes which were just beginning to change color, if this exposure is not extended beyond five days, and it has also been shown that tomatoes may be cooled below their freezing point for a short time without apparent injury if they do not freeze.

A copy of this circular may be had upon request, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Encourage Dairy Cows to Eat to Full Capacity

Since sweet clover pasture furnishes a constant supply of fine, green feed, the cow always has a good ration before her, night and day. She can get as much food as she wants whenever she wants it, and this encourages her to keep filled up to her maximum capacity all the time. As it is the last feed that a cow eats and makes into milk, she should be encouraged to eat as much as possible of this feed.

Encourage her to eat as much as possible of this feed. Sweet clover pasture is good not only from the standpoint of high production, but also because it stimulates the cow in the natural way with good, fresh, green roughage to give a large yield of milk. It does not "burn out" the cow as does a heavy grain ration, but rather keeps her in the best physical tone because it is the kind of feed which she was designed by nature to handle over a long period of years, and tends to add to her length of life.

Bothersome Bot Flies

The bot fly lays its eggs on the shoulders, forelegs, or on the hairs between the jaws of the horse. The nose bot, darker than others and with a reddish tail, is the worst of all. Darting at the lips of a horse, and sometimes nearly driving him frantic. The common method is to keep away these flies are to make a leather fringe by cutting a piece of thin leather into strips and fastening onto the bridle. Some use burlap, especially for the throat and forehead. In serious cases carbon bisulphide is given the horse, but this should be done only by a veterinarian.

When Vermin Multiply

Lice are usually most plentiful at the end of summer. By this time the fruits of their rapid multiplication during the hot weather become evident. By autumn the lice are somewhat low in vitality as a result of hot weather and molting. In addition, vermin often suck the life blood out of the fowls, making them weak and an easy prey to disease. If the chicks mope around, too, dropping their wings and crying continually, it is a pretty sure indication of lousiness.

Smut Reduces Yield and Quality of Grain Crops

No doubt every farmer is acquainted with the common smut of oats, but it is doubtful if they think of this trouble as an active plant disease. As a matter of fact, smut is a serious trouble on oats, barley, and wheat. It is caused by a fungus which infects the plant and destroys the heads before they can mature. Once plants are infected there is no cure for the trouble. One cannot be sure that seed are free of disease just because they look clean, or because they come from an apparently clean field. At threshing time the smut spores are liberated by the millstones and these settle on the individual grains and are carried back to the field where they infect the new crop.

The formaldehyde treatment will kill the smut spores and will not affect the germination of the seed. Make a solution of one pint of commercial formaldehyde (40 per cent formalin) in 40 gallons of water. Put the grain to be treated in bags, about one bushel to the bag, dip into the barrel of solution and allow to remain five to ten minutes. Move the bags up and down in the barrels so as to insure a thorough saturation of the seed. Then lift out the bags and allow all of the solution to drain off, and either pile together and cover with canvas, or pour the grain out on a clean floor and keep it covered for six to twelve hours. After this spread the grain out on a clean floor to dry. This treatment can also be used for straining smut of wheat and for covered smut of barley.

Honor for Pure Bred

A pure bred Holstein calf had the distinction of being the guest of honor at a picnic and basket dinner of the Chestnut Grove community in Daviess county, Ky. For many years the community had paid slight attention to improved live stock, but now becoming interested it is now one of the most active in the state for the betterment of its farm animals. The calf is the offspring of a pure bred sire and a pure bred dam, and is believed to be the first pure bred animal born in the community.

Putting in Silage

Silage may be put up during any kind of weather which permits wagons to haul over the land. If the corn has become matured before harvesting for the silo, it will be necessary to add water to insure proper packing. This may be done by hose, or probably better, water can be run into the blower and thus mixed with corn as it is coming into the silo. It is seldom, if ever, necessary to add water to sorghum silage.

FARM NOTES

Keep weeds mowed from pastures.

Use extra precautions in caring for dairy products.

Clean up the garden promptly after harvesting crops to help control insects.

Plow early or double disk to kill weeds, save moisture, and combat the Hessian fly.

Spray with nicotine sulphate or dust with nicotine dust all plants infested with plant lice.

Provide plenty of fresh water and shade for the hogs. Do not drive hogs in the heat of the day.

In making your provision for next winter's dairy supplies do not overlook the bedding. Provide an abundance.

Dairying will always occupy a prominent and strategic place in any successful plan for balancing agriculture.

Farming, to be really successful, must pay dividends in good homes, schools, roads, churches, and community life.

Take care of the work horses, and the tractors, too. Both require special care, and will do more work in return for a little extra attention.

MR. HORSE BUYER

In a recent article published by our friends (?), Weber Bros., of Hartford, they attempted to pass us off as frauds. Here is the truth as published previously -- "and as usual Present Bros. came home with the blue ribbons." These ribbons can be seen at our office at West Bend.

We went to Cedarburg to enter our horses in the dealers' class, as the Ozaukee County Agricultural Society officers had agreed. Our entries were made, but when judging time arrived we were informed that Weber Bros. had not made any entries, although they had 20 head on the grounds.

A. F. Pynn, the horse judge at the Ozaukee fair, had no opportunity to judge our horses as there was no competition, and for this reason his letter as published by Weber Bros. must be disregarded. Blue ribbons were awarded us by Secretary F. Schnette.

We wish to extend a cordial invitation to Weber Bros. to exhibit their horses at the Washington County fair here next week. There will be open competition, and premiums and ribbons will be awarded.

A Carload of Our Iowa Horses is now at our stables at West Bend, and these animals will be shown at the Washington County fair, Oct. 7, 8, 9 and 10. It will be well worth every farmer's time to visit our stalls and look them over.
