AUTO SHOW AT MILWAUKEE SOON

After careful planning and test work by a corps of artists, announcement is made by the committee in charge of the operation of the seventh Annual Automobile Show at the Milwaukee Auditorium, January 17 to 24. This time it is China that furnishes the basic theme for the scheme of ornamentation, because of the bright and striking colors favored by the Asiatic races and the splendid effects that they are able to achieve in combination.

NEW JOHNSON PICTURE HAS BROAD APPEAL

The local amusement Co. is fortunate in being able to announce the first showing in this locality of Emory Johnson's production, "Life's Greatest Game". To be shown at the Opera House Wednesday evening, Jan. 11. This is the sixth F. B. O. feature made by Mr. Johnson, and it is adjudged his best by critics who are in a position to know. Baseball, without any of the technicalities which have marred the national game, forms the theme of this latest Johnson film; but the story itself contains such tremendous thrills as a reproduction of the story of the "Red" Kibby, which was not an afterthought, but was planned at the very beginning.

TERESA PIONEER DIES

At the home of her son Fred at Theresa, occurred the death of Mrs. Mary Hoepner, aged 89 years, a well known resident of that village. She had been confined to her bed for some time by the infirmities of old age. The deceased was born in Germany, Dec. 12, 1835, and was married to Henry Hoepner in 1867. Several years later she came to America. Her husband died in a fatal accident on March 13, 1908, and for the last ten years she made her home with her son Fred. She leaves to mourn her demise, five children: Fred of Theresa; Herman of Mayville; Mrs. Ferdinand Pleker of Theresa; Mrs. August Zerkow of Milwaukee; Two brothers Carl Knitt of Chicago and Bernard Knitt of Summit, Ill. She had acted as secretary of the National League of Catholic Women, affiliated with the Central Verona for several terms, also as treasurer of the State League. For two years she edited the "Bulletin" of the National League. The funeral was held at Green Bay on Jan. 2, 1925 from the Cathedral. Deceased had been ill for one year.

MEMORIAL

In loving memory of our son and brother, who passed away December 21st, 1924. We miss you from our home near Fond du Lac. We miss your steps and your voice. We miss your smile and your hand. We miss you all, but we shall never forget you. And life passes on, you should cease. There was an angel born in Heaven, That was not quite complete, So God took you from this world, To fill that vacant seat. Whenever we all do gather, We miss your smiling face, Our hearts will always tremble, No one here to take your place. Peaceful be the silent slumber, Peaceful in the grave so low, You more will join our number, You no more our sorrow know. Yet again we hope to meet thee, When the day of life is fled, And in heaven with you to greet thee, Where no farewell tears are shed. Sadly missed by Hubert Rinzel and family.

LOCAL BOY IN U. W. GLEE CLUB

Ralph M. Rosenheimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Rosenheimer, and student of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, was this week selected to sing in the University of Wisconsin Men's Glee Club. This is one of the finest glee clubs in the Middle West, and it is no small honor to be among the men selected to sing in such an organization. The club will make an extended tour of Wisconsin and several neighboring states this year, giving concerts in many of the principal cities and towns, particularly of Wisconsin, according to a statement issued by the Glee Club management. The University Glee Club of forty members, chosen by competitive tryouts from the 5,000 men attending the University, is rated as one of the best trained choral groups among the mid-western universities. In the inter-collegiate glee club contest held at Chicago in 1923, the club took first place, and as a result, was sent to New York where it competed in the national contest. The work of the club will not start in earnest until early in February, when it will give concerts in Milwaukee and Chicago, followed by a trip to the University of Wisconsin at Madison in the latter part of the school year, when the club will start out on a trip covering four cities in Iowa, several cities in both Minnesota and Illinois, and about a dozen towns in Wisconsin. We wish to congratulate Ralph upon his achievements and wish him the best of success.

WEST BEND TRIMS LOCALS

In what proved to be one of the most thrilling and exciting games of basket ball staged at West Bend for some time, Spatz Gang of all home talent basket ball artists, went down to defeat at the hands of the fast and classy Regner Drug team at West Bend last Saturday evening by a score of 15 to 29. The game for the first 15 minutes of play was a very close one, no side was more than from 9 to 2 points ahead. When the score was 7 to 8 in West Bend's favor, only five more minutes to go in the first half, Maurice Rosenheimer, star forward and one of the main cogs of the team was disqualified from the game, four personal fouls having been called on him by the referee. With no other basket shooter to substitute, Walter Schaefer substitute guard was put in his place. Such being the case the local lineup was badly handicapped, and from which time on the Regner Drug team the locals easier to handle. However, the locals found plenty of chances to score, but like all other amateur and professional teams, they have been having their off days for basket shooting, and in last Saturday night's game, the jinx was still with them, and the locals were again out of a comparatively few times did the ball drop through the iron rim. The first half ended 12 to 12 in favor of the West Bend team. In the second half the locals tried hard to win, and to put up a good game as they could in the interest of the fans, but being some what handicapped, the team from our neighboring city soon piled up a high score. Klassen of the West Bend team was the star player of the evening. Fans of this village and vicinity will be treated to another thriller and hotly contested game, when the locals will clash with their old rivals, Slinger at the Opera House. Little needs to be said about this game as all know the kind of ball that has been played between these two teams in past years. The locals are out to win and will do their best to avenge the many defeats handed them by the visitors in the past.

EDEN HAS HAD FIRE

Fire, causing a total loss of $10,000 destroyed half of the warehouse building of the Stephens Packing Corporation of Elkhart Lake, at Eden last Thursday afternoon. The structure had been under construction since last October. Besides the warehouse, six automobiles, $900 worth of building material and conveyors valued at $500 were also consumed by the flames. The fire originated from overheated asphalt roofing being prepared to complete the new warehouse. The Eden fire department with limited apparatus on hand, was unable to check the flames, and officials of the company called on the Fond du Lac fire department for help. The building, 64 by 240 feet, had been completed in three days, and ready for business next summer. The loss is fully covered by insurance. Rebuilding of the damaged structure will be started as soon as insurance adjusters have completed their work.

$15,000 LOSS IN TWO FIRES

At a meeting held last Friday afternoon at Fond du Lac, by county highway committee of Fond du Lac and Washington counties, it was finally agreed, after long and hotly contested arguments, to rescind the committee's action of December 19, in declaring Albert Pergande's contract to rebuild the county line bridge on Highway 55, located two miles north of Kewaskum, to be in default, for reason that the committee feared that he would be unable to have the bridge completed by next spring. The committee was soon on hand to finish the job, under certain conditions, to which the latter agreed. First that said contractor must be on the job and supervise the work at least seven hours each working day. Second, he must order shipment of steel to the site of the bridge immediately after being given reconderation to finish the work, and release the county from any possible claim against the county by reason of the contract or its default; third, if Pergande fails to give the job his personal supervision or in any other way violates the terms of the agreement, the contract automatically becomes default.

PERGANDE GIVEN ANOTHER CHANCE

Mr. Pergande, now has a crew of men engaged at the bridge, getting ready to put in a new abutment at the south end of the structure. Steel for the bridge is being hauled on the job from Milwaukee via truck. Mr. Pergande is making a very strong effort to fulfill the agreement in the hope of having the bridge completed by next spring.

LOCATE IN VIRGINIA
Close to Big Markets

The price of land in Virginia is lower and the market price of crops is much higher. Virginia Lands valued at 4% less per acre produce crops worth 62% more than average for the United States, as shown by the statistical records. You can buy Virginia land at 30% to 40% lower price per acre and receive practically twice as much money for your crops. An average Virginia acre yields more than 100 bushels of better quality corn, less freight. For instance, when the price of corn in Virginia was $1.00 per bushel, it was 59 cents to 60 cents per bushel in Western States, and the same a true comparison of all crops. The average yield per acre in Virginia, with proper cultivation, is practically that of the Western States. In Virginia you can grow all Grains, Corn, Fruit, Potatoes, Live Stock, Etc. Much money, healthy climate. Why not better your conditions by locating in this favored section. Write for Brochure. B. W. KOEHLER, State Commissioner of Agriculture, Richmond, Virginia.

Cat and Radio

One of the radio fans of Augusta, Maine, has to share his radio concerts each night with the family cat, as Sir Fungus insists upon listening in. Music and broadcast stories and oratory are all the same to the cat, and he listens with rapt attention to everything that is on the air. Sometimes the high plaintive wailing of a violin will make the cat uneasy, but not to the extent of causing him to leave his reserved seat in the chair near the set.

LEFTOVER FOODS

It takes real thought and planning to use the leftovers in a palatable way. After company dinners there will always be some foods left and "that nothing be wasted," try some of the following:

Mexican Hash.—Take two cupsful of stuffing or any that is left, add an equal amount of bread crumbs, any leftover corn, salt and pepper to taste. Moisten the ingredients with leftover gravy, put into a baking dish and bake until well heated through.

Salad.—Take two cupsful of diced white meat of chicken, goose or turkey of any portion, one cupful of dressed celery, one cupful of drained cooked peas, one-half cupful of shredded almonds, one-fourth cupful of chopped pickles, one tablespoonful of oil, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, a dash of red pepper. Let stand to season until ready to serve, then serve on lettuce leaves with a boiled dressing.

Cranberry and Cottage Cheese.—Put any stewed cranberry sauce through a sieve; if thick enough to mold pour into small molds; if not, add a bit of gelatin. Unmold and serve with a mold of well-seasoned cottage cheese and a spoonful of thick mayonnaise.

Chicken Soup With Rice.—Cut all the meat from the bones of the fowl and chop fine. Put the bones into a kettle, breaking them; add cold water to cover, at least two quarts. Simmer slowly for two hours. Add one cupful of boiled rice to the meat and pound together to a pulp. Strain the broth into this then stir well and put through a puree sieve. When ready to serve bring to the boiling point, add one cupful of cream, season with a teaspoonful of salt and a dash or two of cayenne.

Potato Croquettes.—Season leftover mashed potato with a pinch of mace, salt and pepper if needed. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one beaten egg yolk, a sprig or two of finely minced parsley and mix well. Roll into balls or long rolls, dip into egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Serve garnished with sprigs of fresh parsley.

MORE GOOD EATING

An unusual apple dumpling is easily prepared in the following manner:

Potato Apple Dumplings.—Boil six potatoes and mash fine; add salt and butter the size of an egg; roll this out with a little flour, enough to make a good pastry crust—into this put peeled chopped apples; roll up and steam for an hour. Serve with a hot liquid sauce.

Savory Casserole of Mutton.—Cut a slice from the middle of the leg of a yearling, a slice two inches thick. Remove the bone and fill the cavity with onion or bits of celery. Dredge with flour, salt and pepper. Prepare in the casserole a rich gravy of one cupful of brown stock, one-half cupful of currant jelly, a dozen chopped olives, six peppercorns, three whole cloves and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Thicken when boiling with one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little water. Lay into this the mutton, spread the top with beef marrow. Cover the casserole and bake for one and one-half hours in a moderate oven.

Duck Giblet Soup.—The necks, wing tips, feet, livers, gizzards and hearts of two or more ducks will be needed for this soup. Chop all the meat with one-half pound of beef shank and two onions, add two quarts of water and stew until the meat is in shreds. Strain the soup, season with kitchen bouquet, salt, pepper, one tablespoonful of tomato catsup and two of Worcestershire sauce. If the water has boiled away add enough to make three pints.

Cheese Souffle.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; add three tablespoonfuls of flour and, when well mixed, add one-half cupful of scalded milk. Season with salt, cayenne and one-quarter of a cupful of grated, smoky cheese. Remove from the fire; add the yolks of three eggs, beaten until thick. Cool the mixture and cut and fold in the stiffly-beaten whites of three eggs. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake twenty minutes in a slow oven. Serve at once.

Goose giblets may be used in the same way. Serve hot with croutons or toasted crackers.

A layer cake may be slightly thinner than a loaf cake; this is true of small cakes baked in battery pans; a butter may be slightly thinner. Flour all fruit and put it in alternate layers with the cake mixture, then it will be more evenly distributed and not sink to the bottom of the pan.

For a white cake omit the yolks and add three additional whites. For gold cake use six yolks in place of the three whole eggs.

CHILDREN'S SPRING FROCKS; SIMPLICITY MARKS FOOTWEAR

FOR little tots and for girls of the intermediate ages—from seven to fourteen—stylists who specialize in designing their frocks have already presented many spring models. These include practical day dresses, and also party frocks, all in gay colors and made of various materials. These materials are already in the hands of merchants, so that the spring outfitting of little folks may be undertaken at once and be out of the way by the time Mr. Robin announces the coming of the birds.

But there has been a reaction, away from the more fanciful styles in footwear for daytime, toward simple lines. This is in keeping with the vogue for simplicity in garments. Fashionable pedients are employed, to furnish grace of line. Needlework is, as always, an important decorative feature on children's clothes, and it appears in simple, sketchy designs. It is this simple stitching that adorns the pretty linen frock pictured, which one can imagine in any of the bright shades of blue, green, red or yellow that are displayed, and stitched with white or a contrasting color. Red is very well represented in the new collection, and much is made of natural pongee, plied with red and finished off with tiny red buttons. The coarser rayon materials are liked for tailored frocks and striped crepe de chine for the better wash dresses.

Women, and particularly American women, have grown very fastidious about their footwear—they demand more in the way of decorative value in their shoes and hose than ever before—at least in modern times. Some of the ancients clothed their feet magnificently—which ought to put us moderns above reproach—even when facetious male relations accuse us of wearing millinery on our feet.

Paris Noise Protection

Street noises of Paris have become so great that a chemist has invented a tiny plastic ball that will fit any ear and shut out sounds, with benefit especially to "light sleepers," nervous persons and invalids.

Buttons

Buttons are one of the newest trimmings to be found on trimmed blouses. Very small ones are used and are put on in rows very close together. Matching and contrasting ones are both used and very popular are either gold or silver ones.

Jewels Popular

The rage for jewels is now at its height, and necklaces, chains and ornaments of artificial stones are seen everywhere. It is interesting to note that jeweled ornaments are again being worn in the hair.

Green for Tiny Girls

For the very tiny girl see coats of wool in a new shade of green rather bright in tone. These are trimmed with king fox, a new fur which is of a lightish gray tone.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

OLD LION

He was an old, old lion and he had lived in the zoo for many years. His mate had been in the zoo, too, though he had met her in the jungles. How well he remembered that time. What a beautiful young lioness she had been and how wonderful it was to walk by her side through the deep, dark forests and thick underbrush. Oh, how lucky he was to have had her say "Yes" when he had asked her the most important question in the world. Then he had been lucky, too, that both of them had been brought to the zoo. They had been very well and very contented here, though at times there were longings for that great, free, wild life. Of course there were dangers there and there were no dangers here. Accidents might happen there which could never happen here. One day a visitor came to the zoo. The visitor came and looked at all the lions and he stopped and looked at Old Lion for a long time. There was a sign saying how very, very old, Old Lion was. And the visitor was amazed. "But he looks like a powerful old brute still," the visitor said. That pleased Old Lion. And a shadow of a smile came into his great, thoughtful eyes. "But I'd hate to meet him anywhere. He looks cruel and terrible as though he cared for no one," the visitor added. Old Lion did not look at the visitor. He would not do the visitor that honor. No, he looked over his head. He looked far out beyond and he seemed to see straight through the cages at the other side of the lion house and he seemed to see even beyond—far, far beyond—through to another land. The visitor had gone. The other lions were asleep. But Old Lion was wide awake. His mate was asleep. But he did not feel like sleeping. "He said I was cruel and terrible and that I cared for no one," Old Lion repeated. "That shows how little he knows," he added. "Maybe I have been cruel to my enemies and maybe I have been terrible. "Maybe I have my faults and maybe she thinks all lions are alike. "That is the great mistake people make about animals anyway. We are not all alike. "We have many similar ways—we build and market and we wonder and we are along the same family lines (that is not supposed to be a joke, I hope no one will take it as such) as others do. "But each creature is just a little different from the next one. "Lions are almost all devoted mates. But above all I think I am the most devoted mate. "I do not say this because I wish to praise myself. I say it because I think it is due my beautiful lioness—because she is so beautiful and so lovely she deserves great devotion. "I loved her when first I saw her. "I have always loved her. And the man had no right to look at me and say that I looked as though I cared for no one. "What does he know of the love that is in my lion heart? "What does he know of the affection and the devotion and the admiration I feel toward my dear lioness? "She is not so young as she once was, but she is still so wonderful. Her charm, her superb lioness' charm, is greater today than ever it was. "Her roaring voice is more lovely to my ears. Her wild, wild eyes more beautiful. "Oh, he should not have said I looked as though I cared for no one when I care so deeply for my beautiful lioness mate. "Did you speak to me?" the lioness said as she awoke. "I simply said I cared for you," answered Old Lion.

The Fervent Prayer

Little Annette was always devout in saying a prayer on entering church. As she had been taught no special prayer for the occasion and her repertory was known to be limited, she had been invited to tell her mother what she said. "I always pray," said Annette frankly, "that there mayn't be a litany."—Boston Transcript.

The Easier Way

Mr. Goode—My boy, why is it always best to tell the truth?
Boy—Because you don't have to remember what you say.

Too Much Static

Mother (to Betty, who has been very naughty)—And only yesterday I heard you asking the angels to make you a good girl.
Betty—Yes, I did, but they haven't, have they? I guess they couldn't have been listening in just then.

Beating Time

A New York newspaper placed a loud speaker alongside a linotype machine in its composing room during the world series game. The compositor cast the type describing the plays as they came to him over the radio. In this manner the newspaper beat its contemporaries on the street by several minutes with a complete detailed description of each of the games.—Collier's.

Must Wait

A certain furniture shop was famous for its antiques. A stranger entered one morning and was met by a small boy, who told him the proprietor was not in. "Perhaps you can tell me what I want to know," he said to the boy. "I called two weeks ago regarding half a dozen genuine old Empire chairs. You had only two of them in at the time, but were expecting the other four at any moment. Have they arrived?" "No, sir," replied the boy. "They haven't finished making 'em yet."—Minneapolis Tribune.

So It Seemed

The Boss—And what have you been doing all this time, Miss Montgomery?
New Typist—Typing the letter you dictated, sir.
"Really! I thought you might have been working it up in embroidery or something."—Judge.

IF YOU DO NOT keep clean internally your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. Avoid Laxatives—say Doctors Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. Mr. E. H. Palmer, Neenah, Wis.
Dear Sir and Friend:—
I received your letter dated Dec. 26, 1924, in reply will say regarding my class of insurance, and that I am one of the unfortunate victims who contributed to the gigantic trust fund for over twenty-five years, which was purported by the Great Order of the Equitable Fraternal Union to belong to the contributors of this fund for protection, and upon information that this order has made final cash settlement with members of this class, would it not be fair for the custodians of this fund to consider my case from a business point of view tempered with justice. I am not surprised that there is a movement on to bring about adequate legislation which will meet with justice to the unfortunate victims of fraternal insurance societies, the time is ripe when patience ceases to be a virtue, the oppressed can no longer tolerate the extortion practiced thro vindictive contrivance.
Yours truly,
John L. Gudex.

The unusual proceedings, however, were arranged as a mark of the deep affection in which Justice McKenna was held by his associates.

BLACK SHIRTS OF ITALY HUNT FOES

Mussolini's Troops Prevent Meetings From Being Held.

London.—According to a dispatch from Naples to the London Times, Fascists who had planned to hold a meeting in the Umberto gallery were prevented from doing so by Mussolini's soldiers.

The Fascist railway militia are hunting the authors of a plot, unearthed by the police, to stir up disorders on the railways as recently evidenced by incendiary fires at stations in Rome, Florence and Parma.

Professors throughout the kingdom have been authorized to search and dissolve all political clubs of an anti-patriotic character, while various other sections of the Fascist militia have been mobilized in order to strengthen the police.

In various parts of Italy the Fascist militia carried out demonstrations, in Rome the local legion, 1,500 strong, engaged in tactical maneuvers with machine guns.

The suppression of the centers of agitation, together with the muzzling of the opposition press and reinforcement of the police, the premier believes, will break down the opposition.

"HE'S A BEAST"

SYNOPSIS — Nurses in the Southern hospital at Avonmouth are angered by the insolent treatment accorded Dr. John Lancaster, head of the institution, and there is a general feeling of unrest. Miss Wentworth, probationary nurse, is drawn, Doctor Lancaster, to performing a difficult operation, for which he has won fame. Joan, with other nurses, is in attendance.

"That scalpel—quick!" he cried. Joan started and stretched out her hand toward the tray, which gleamed afar off, elusive through a black cloud. "The one I handed you. Don't stare at me like a fool!" Joan bent over the tray, putting one hand to the table to support herself. She was conscious that everything was suspended and that everything was watching her. In the interval she heard the patient's gasping sighs, as if he was breathing the last wisps of life away. She fingered the instruments in the tray feebly and nervously, and her hands seemed numb and useless. Her fingers closed on something and she brought it out. Then Lancaster's hand closed over hers, tore it away, and she dropped with a splash. Joan's hand backed to her side, paralyzed by the patient's gaze. The next instant Lancaster had the scalpel and started swiftly back toward the table, supporting the bicorne, which lapped over the patient's feet.

The moments went by like hours. At last Joan became aware, through the sudden untravelling of the suspense, that the crux of the operation was over. Her head grew clear again. She saw the assistant surgeons unfastening the artery clamps. The head nurse rose to her feet, not looking at the patient. Joan realized that she was crying, and her strong, epileptic face looked grotesque in grief. The orderly came up, and together they placed the patient on the stretcher. And suddenly Joan knew that the man was dead.

As the stretcher was wheeled out of the theater Lancaster turned toward his visitors. "A very successful piece of work," he said. "It's a pity the poor fellow will never know how much I have done for him."

Joan felt the visiting surgeons' disgust at the execrable jest. Lancaster seemed to sense it, too.

"Unfortunately," he continued, "the best of surgeons is not proof against the stupidity of a nurse."

Joan looked at him in amazement. At his first words, at his tone, she had felt the shock of anger in her heart and his gaze leaped to meet his own. His face grew frightened, her head bowed and she was sick from the shame which still penetrated the theater. She tried to answer him, but her tongue failed and she broke into tears instead, sobbing in complete nervous abandonment.

Lancaster turned to her with a very face. "Well, gentlemen," he said, "with an affection of jealousy, better luck next time. I'm sorry the operation was not successful, but, after all, the patient's life is not the principal thing. The method was correct, you see, but I did not reckon on an incompetent assistant."

"Put the blame on the anesthetist, Doctor Lancaster," said a white-headed surgeon, with cavalierous intent. "With a nephritis history operation's useless. Better let them die peacefully."

"I did not quite grasp the technical innovation you spoke of, Doctor Lancaster," said another. "To my mind it was the original Leonard operation, except that—"

"Why do you divide the arterial coats below the site of the aneurism?" queried a third.

Lancaster led them from the theater, expostulating and explaining. The dark-haired girl flung with the spoons. The assistant surgeons had already gone hurriedly out. Joan put her tray away. She still was unable to control her sob.

Suddenly Lancaster reappeared, furious after the cross-examination to which he had been subjected. He came straight toward Joan with a face of malice. Unconscious of her pitiful aspect as a child might have been, she raised her streaming face and looked at him.

"You had no right to speak to me like that, whatever I did," she said.

"Whatever you did? Whatever you failed to do? What do you think you are here for?" he stormed.

He glared at her, turned away, hesitated and then came back.

"That's just the way with you women," he cried. "You lost that case for me. And now you are thinking about your dignity. You shouldn't have taken up a nurse's vocation. You women don't know what you can do and what you can't till you find yourselves in a post of responsibility, and then you fall down. What made you take up nursing, anyway? Thought our style of caps becoming, I suppose?"

"I've done my best to qualify. I've never been blamed before."

"Well, you've made a big mistake," said Lancaster. "That's all. A very big mistake," he added, emphasizing each word with a nod. "And my work and patients' lives are too important to allow mistakes to happen. You're too pretty to be a nurse, anyway," he added in a lower tone.

"You don't need to tell me that, Doctor Lancaster," cried Joan furiously. "I'm a nurse, and I'm here to do my duty. You're right, get on your legs and go!" she said. "Just remember that I'm at the head of the Southern hospital, and what I say goes, that's all."

He swung upon his heel and went out of the room, leaving her gripping the table fiercely in her humiliation. The dark-haired girl, who had been leaning in a corner, came up to her.

"He's a beast!" she exclaimed passionately. "He hates women—decent women. My! If he dared to speak that way to me I'd have told him what I thought of him, right in the middle of the operation. I don't care for anybody when my temper's up. I could tell him a few things I've heard about him if I were minded to. Do you know he went on a five years' spree once?"

"I don't care what he did!" cried Joan passionately.

"Well, I guess you could make it your business to know," answered the other. "A girl's got to fight her way, the same as a man. He threw up his job and just went away for five years, drinking and living with traps, and then had the nerve to come back as if nothing had happened. I got it from a girl that used to be friendly with him. He's—"

She broke off abruptly as the orderly appeared with his rubber broom and bucket.

"What are you going to do about it?" inquired the girl in a low voice. "I

"I don't know yet," answered the lady superintendent evasively. "I suppose Doctor Lancaster will decide later after he has laid the matter before the board at their next meeting and looked over your record. Anyway, Miss Wentworth, you may as well take a holiday for a week or so until you hear from us."

She turned back to her books while Joan, after looking at her for a moment in silence, turned and went into the corridor. She made her way toward the hospital entrance. And she passed hundreds of times without noticing it, suddenly became vivid with detail; the hospital, which had been a part of her unconscious life, looked strange and new to her.

Chapter II

Joan had a room in a nurses' boarding house a few minutes' walk away. She walked mechanically homeward, hardly even yet realizing the magnitude of the blow which had befallen her. Avonmouth lay almost deserted in the noontide glare. The shuttered windows, gay with striped awnings, looked down on the white, dusty streets. The little park that contained the Confederate monument was bright with geraniums, but the grass was parched and withered, and the feeble efforts of an automatic sprinkler seemed almost instantly absorbed by the thirsty ground.

Joan made her way toward an overhanging tree, brushed away a prickly caterpillar from a seat beneath it, and sat down. She was trying to estimate the magnitude of the catastrophe that had happened to her, to free herself from the stupefied wonder and passionate resentment that held her. Two hours before life had seemed reasonably bright; now its entire course was changed. For she did not doubt that the lady superintendent had been trying to soften the news of her dismissal.

Her mind ran back to the beginning of all things for her—her father's death. That had happened ten years before, and the mortgage on the estate, ruined after the war, had grown like a spreading weed, eating away field after field, until it allowed everything except nine hundred dollars. After the enforced sale, Mrs. Wentworth and her daughter had gone to Avonmouth for the sole reason that the mother remembered a wealthy godmother there, distantly related, whose activities she hoped to enlist on behalf of her daughter. It was characteristic of her that she should not have known the woman had died six years previously.

Still, Avonmouth was the nearest large town in which a girl, flung on the world untrained, might hope to support two people. Joan had long before wanted to be a nurse. She decided to attempt to enter a hospital; but now her father's slow, mortal illness kept her nursing her at home. Six months after their arrival Mrs. Wentworth died. What remained of their nine hundred dollars after the doctor's and funeral expenses had been paid would suffice for Joan's meager needs until she had graduated from the Southern hospital. But the physician who attended Mrs. Wentworth in her last illness had seened the girl a position as a probationer, and Joan was as happy as she could expect to be. Since that date he had moved away, and Joan was altogether alone.

At home they had known hardly anyone, for the whole region was in that condition of resettlement that began in the seventies and is still proceeding. Their friends had scattered to the north and west; their letters had long since ceased. Prosperity, stalking through the nation, had left a little ridge of poverty between the swaths of its progress through the foothills of the back country. In Avonmouth Mrs. Wentworth's illness, and afterward, the hospital work, had kept the girl both from making friends and from the realization of her need of them. Her whole mind was set upon obtaining that diploma which would mean an assured living, and before her eyes was ever the specter of such poverty as she had known at home among others and had seen approaching her mother. After she graduated, perhaps, life might begin to unfold before her eyes. But even this she realized only vaguely; she lived altogether in the moment.

It's plain that Joan is a nice girl, but Dr. Lancaster seems to be no good, either as surgeon or man.

Cannibal Ancestors

The discovery of a pile of human bones dating from the Neolithic period—at least 6,000 years ago—in a cave near Auch, in the south of France, has given rise to the theory that prehistoric men at that period were undoubtedly cannibals. The bones all bear marks of teeth and apparently form the remains of some gigantic cannibal feast.

Diagram That Introduces a New Field of Selectivity Into the Multi-Audi-Plex Circuit. Will Interest All Radio Fans.

By LEON W. BISHOP

Those who became interested in the multi-audi-plex circuit have spoken of the wonderful selectivity and volume of distant stations through tremendous local interference.

Here is a diagram that introduces a new field of selectivity into the multi-audi-plex circuit. Directions should be carefully followed in regard to the tuning coil T.C. Procure a four-inch dry cardboard tube. Use no shellac or any compound whatsoever on this tube. Wind this tube with 50 turns of No. 20 or 22 double cotton covered wire.

A tap is taken at the fortieth turn, which is connected to the plus side of the tube filament and also grounded. Starting from this fortieth grounded tap, tap every three turns until the fifty-fifth turn, which will leave five taps. This switch S, is connected to the aerial.

With this selective system, it is possible to connect in three, six, nine, twelve and fifteen turns in the antenna circuit. This, under local interference, will enable you to tune out your local stations and still receive from distant points.

Connecting the Taps.

In connecting the taps, the wire may be cut and holes punched in the tube and the wires drawn through these. By punching holes in the tube and drawing the wires through, you will make the winding much firmer and eliminate the use of shellac or any other kind of goo.

The variometer V may be of any standard make on the market. The grid condenser should be of the mica type and have a capacity of .0025 mfd. The grid leak should be anywhere from three to nine megohms, a fine megohm grid leak being used for local reception. Do not put on variable grid leaks. It is much better to have a spare grid leak, say, for instance, a three megohm and a nine megohm and snip these in at will.

The variable condenser, VC, should be .0005 mfd., preferably of the 23 plate type of condenser. Here I might say,

Series-Parallel Switch—Its Uses in Receiver

The series-parallel switch eliminates the necessity of changing of wires during a test of a circuit. It comes in very handy for a quick change-over from one circuit to another of the head phones. Another use for the series-parallel switch is found when it is used in connection with a battery charger and the battery for the set.

When the switch is in one position the battery is thrown to the charger circuit and when in the reverse direction the battery is connected to the set. The method shown in the accompanying diagram is used in connection with the honeycomb coil circuit. It is used in the primary part of the circuit to throw the condenser across the coil or in series with it.

The honeycomb coil circuit requires the use of such a switch in order to change from medium short waves to longer waves. The switching arrangement allows the use of a certain coil for a wide wave-length range.

An example of the series-parallel switch in honeycomb coil set is shown as follows: Suppose an L-25 coil was being used in the primary to tune to amateur waves below 200 meters and there was an immediate need to go up on the higher wave-length of the broadcasters to hear some particular program.

Ordinarily, for amateur work, the condenser would be in series with the coil, but the change would necessitate the condenser being put across the coil. The condenser is shunt with the coil.

condensers that are advertised as having exceptionally low dielectric loss would be best applied in this circuit.

The rheostat should be 30 ohms, and connected in the negative side of the A battery.

The best tube for use in this circuit is the UV201A, although the C801A, UV109 and C250 tubes may be used. The B battery should be from 38 to 45 volts, depending upon the tube characteristics.

The bypass condenser should be .002 mfd., and preferably of the mica type.

Connecting the Circuit.

In connecting up the circuit, it is best to have the variable condenser on the left hand side of the panel, the variometer on the right hand side of the panel, the switch taps below in the center of the panel. The rheostat may be placed in the center, high on the panel. A panel 7 by 9 should be used. Shielding is of little avail, but the rotary plates of the variable condenser VC must be connected to the ground.

It must be remembered that the lead from the grid on the socket to the grid leak and condenser should not be more than one inch in length. The body capacity effect of this lead is the most critical of the set. The next lead is the one from the plate to the variometer. This should be kept as short as possible.

The A battery, AB, should be four dry cells in the case of the UV201A and C250A tubes, and three dry cells for the UV109 and C250 tubes.

Although the switch points are only three turns apart, they make a vast difference in selective tuning.

In no case can there be more than 15 turns in the antenna circuit. Thus the chance of radiation is almost nil. Again I wish to warn against the use of shellac on the tuning coil T.C.

This circuit may be amplified in the same manner as the multi-audi-plex circuit. The point added in this circuit is selectivity and the practical elimination of re-radiation. The circuit will be immediately noted for its wonderful quality reproduction.—New York Sun.

boosts the wave length up without putting in a new coil.

This is a much easier method than hunting around for another primary coil and taking time to plug it into the circuit after removing the first coil from its primary plug. Not many will find this method to be used in a honeycomb coil set, but may be used with any variocompound primary.

It is sometimes desirable to sharpen the tuning of a single-circuit set. This is accomplished by taking the series condenser out of the circuit and connecting it across the primary tap switch and the lower end of the coil winding.

The form of switch shown in the accompanying drawing may be purchased in any radio store, as it is of the standard type. Be sure to make good connections on the back and keep the switch tight, so that it does not wobble out of adjustment.

The contact points may be mounted on the panel, as well as the rest of the switch. The switch points should be kept clean to insure better contact with the switch arms.

The market also affords a series-parallel switch all mounted so that only one hole is necessary in the panel for the center shaft. Such a switch eliminates the necessity of drilling eight holes in the panel, and is recommended where space on the panel is at a premium.—Chicago Daily Journal.

Pointers About Makeup of Dry Cell Batteries

A dry cell battery consists of a zinc container filled with chemicals. In the center of which is a brass-tipped carbon rod. The zinc can is the negative pole or electrode and the center carbon is the positive pole or electrode. The voltage of a dry cell is about 1.5 volts when it is not in circuit (open circuit voltage) and it is lower when it is in circuit (closed circuit voltage). Depending on the cell resistance of the circuit to which it is connected.

For Low Voltage

All circuit connections should be soldered. Terminal connections should be light and free from corrosion. A wormout socket or switch, producing dim and flickering lights, should be replaced by material of ample capacity and rugged construction. If a cartridge fuse is used, avoid a poor contact by keeping clips and ferrules free from corrosion.

Finishing of Panels

Never use emery cloth to finish the surface of panels. This may leave small particles of carbonydium on the panel, which is a conducting medium. Use a fine grade of sandpaper. After working the panel to a dull finish, dust it off and apply a light oil with a rag. Rub it on both sides of the panel and wipe dry with a clean cloth.

SICK 3 YEARS WITHOUT RELIEF

Finally Found Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbia, S. C.—"Your medicine has done me so much good that I feel like I owe my life to it. For three years I was sick and was treated by physicians, but they didn't seem to help me any. Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got strong enough to do my housework, where before I was hardly able to get up. I have also taken the Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and it has left me in good health. I recommend it as the best medicine for women in the Change of Life and you can use these facts as a testimonial."

Mrs. S. A. HOLLEY, R. F. D. No. 4, Columbia, South Carolina.

Why suffer for years with backache, nervousness, painful times and other ailments common to women from early life to middle age, when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will bring relief? Take it when annoying symptoms first appear and avoid years of suffering.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 200,000 replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by its use.

Don't wait for time to heal that itching rash

NEGLECT of even the slightest skin rash, roughness, chafing or soreness may have serious consequences. Painful, disgusting complaints like eczema, ringworm, etc., all start in a small way.

The safest plan is to keep a jar of Resinol Ointment ready to use at the first sign of skin trouble. It promptly stops itching and reduces inflammation and burning. The tiny pores readily receive its soothing ointment, and its healing influence is carried far below the surface of the skin.

Cost of Candy In the year 1923 the people of the United States spent nearly $200,000,000 for candy, an average of more than $1,000,000 a day. Assuming an average price of 40 cents a pound for all grades, this amount of money would purchase nearly 1,000,000,000 pounds of candy in a year.—Lydia J. Roberts in Hygienic.

A MESSAGE!

From the Businessmen of Kewaskum TO YOU.

Perhaps you as a buyer are a staunch advocate of the trade-at-home and community boost idea. If so, such loyalty is only to be commended. The logic of the appeal to boost Kewaskum and trade in Kewaskum is obvious. Every mother's son of us, home owners, workers, merchants and professional people, know that if Kewaskum is to hold its own, grow, and amount to anything that it is up to us, individually and collectively, to do our share.

However, the trade-at-home idea has never yet been approached in quite the manner desired, from the merchants' and tradesmen's point of view. For that reason we have taken this means of telling you upon what basis they solicit and expect your trade.

To be a successful transaction, both you, as the buyer and they, as the seller, must profit. This act of trading is more than an exchange of money for merchandise. It also includes service throughout, from the appeal for your patronage to your complete satisfaction in value received.

Briefly, the merchants of Kewaskum are making a sincere effort to give you good service and the right merchandise at the right price. They expect to enjoy your trade on MERIT ONLY. In Kewaskum you will find just as good merchandise, just as obliging sales people and just as many good values and low prices as in the big city stores or mail-order houses.

They appeal for your patronage on this platform of MERIT.

They ask you to inspect their goods, and give them the opportunity of serving you. Your judgment and decision will of course be final. If they cannot please you on the merit of merchandise and in price, then they cannot consistently solicit your patronage.
