SCHOLARSHIP OFFERED FOR BEST ESSAY

An offer of four years of college with expenses paid is contained in the announcement made here today by the Highway Education Board of the sixth annual good roads essay contest, in which all high school students are eligible to participate.

In line with administrative policies tending toward economy, students are being requested to write essays on the subject "Economics Resulting from Highway Improvement" having in mind the preceding years written papers in subjects dealing with highways and religion and highways and home life.

The contest in the various states usually is sponsored by one of the leading universities or the state department of education. In Wisconsin the cooperating agency is the Extension Division of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, which will aid in the announcement of the contest and in the termination will name competent judges to determine the best essay from that state. The best three essays from each high school are to be sent there for review.

The principal prize is a four years university scholarship, offered by H. S. Firestone, of Akron, Ohio, a member of the Highway Education Board, of which the U. S. Commissioner of Education, Dr. J. J. Tigert, is chairman. This scholarship, having a value of five years, has been won by three young women and two young men. The successful contestants may attend any college or university in the United States, with tuition, room, board, books and special fees paid by the donor. It is said to be the largest single educational award offered in this country, and its estimated value to the winning student is approximately of the $10,000, or at least $8,000 for the four years.

Rules of the contest do not limit participation to high school seniors, but provide that any student attending high school may submit an essay. No other conditions, except those governing the preparation of the paper itself, are provided. Essays must not exceed 700 words in length and must be handed in by school principal or teacher not later than May 1, 1925. Selection of the essay is by a process of elimination.

Complete information will be forwarded each person who inquires of the Highway Education Board, Willard Building, Washington, D. C.

SLAYER OF LOMIRA FAMILY HANGED

"Ready to die," says John Kammerer, who killed the entire Otto Eder family in Villa Liria last June. Small as I will not interfere," Gov. Small said Wednesday, thereby denying a petition for a reprieve. Thereupon the last chance of life for Kammerer was dispensed.

They certainly picked an auspicious day for the affair," was the succinct comment of John Kammerer when word was given him that the governor had refused to give a stay of execution and that he must hang Friday.

Preparations for the hanging in the De Page county jail at Wheaton, Ill. began at once. A portable scaffold was procured and moved into the jail, and Kammerer placed in an improvised death chamber.

An unusual feature of the hanging will be that a citizen instead of an official will spring the trap. Sheriff John Hesterman appointed to the duty of twelve men of De Page county, each of whom agreed to push a button, none of them knowing which button would cause the springing of the trap, eleven buttons being in operation.

The condemned man, who once sought to study for the priesthood, decided, when his fate was determined, to obtain spiritual advice. After conferences with members of several denominations he finally selected a Catholic priest as his last comforter. He announced that he freely forgave every one who might have done a wrong.

His defense was insanity. He confessed that he killed Eder because of being pressed to repay a debt of $15. He killed Mrs. Eder, he said, because she witnessed the murder of her husband. Then he confessed, he killed the three children so they wouldn't be left orphans.

It was understood that Coroner Kopf will be one of the twelve who will divide responsibility for sending Kammerer to eternity. Coroner Kopf broke down while on the witness stand at Kammerer's trial. He cried heartbreakingly when telling of the mangled bodies of the three beautiful children, all of whom were killed with the axe used in killing their parents.

HAS JAW FRACTURED
Theo. Otto, a prominent farmer of the town of Farmington, had the misfortune of fracturing his jaw on Wednesday when his team of horses which he was driving ran away. Mr. Otto had been in Kewaskum during the day, and took home a load of corn. The accident happened between his home and that of Julius Gessner when in some unknown manner his horses became frightened and ran away. Mr. Otto was thrown to the ground along side of the road, where he was later found. Medical aid was immediately summoned. Upon examination it was found necessary to have the injured man removed to a hospital at Sheboygan where he is suffering from a fractured jaw. It is reported that physicians at the hospital worked four hours before the broken bones were again put in place.

MEMORIAL

In loving memory of our dear husband and father Louis Wilke, who passed away two years ago February 17, 1923.
In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers love to weave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
In his silent lonely grave.
In our hearts there comes a longing,
If he only could come home.
For in life we loved him so dearly,
And in death we love the same.
Sadly missed by his wife and daughter, Mrs. Olga Wilke and daughter Gladys.

LOCALS VICTORIOUS IN SUNDAY'S GAME

Spatz Gang of basket ball artists added another game to their long string of victories, when they defeated the Wisconsin All-Stars of Fond du Lac, in an interesting and hard fought battle by a score of 24 to 31. When the Fond du Lac five first stepped out on the floor, it looked as though the locals would have an easy time of it, as the visitors did not show up any to well in their preliminary practice. This opinion of the fans was quickly changed after the game had started, as the All-Stars proved to be a fast and snappy outfit, and apparently seemed to have things their own way during the first few minutes of play, scoring ten points against the locals. The locals, however, were more accurate in basket shooting and soon gained a lead which they kept during the entire game. All through the first half the visitors more than held their own against Spatz Gang, as far as team work was concerned. In the second half the locals settled down to business and played in their old time form, thereby turning the break of the game in their favor, both in team work and accurate passing.

ODD SCREEN HEROINE SEEN IN 'THE WANTERS'

A lady's maid is the heroine of the John M. Stahl production, "The Wanters," which will be the first National picture presented by Louis B. Mayer at the Opera House on Sunday evening, Feb. 15. She is a maid because she is a "wantor," desiring the finer things of life, the luxuries and the ease that wealth can furnish. And it is because of this wanting that the girl takes a servile position in a millionaire's home. Charming Marie Prevost portrays this unique screen heroine who is discharged when found peering in the finery of her mistress, but who returns to the home as the wife of a young member of the aristocratic family to further complicate the plot. The production which takes a dingy old snobbish and vain wanting is described as one of the most unusual of the season. In the all-star cast besides Miss Prevost are Robert Ellis, Norma Shearer, Gertrude Astor, Huntley Gordon, Richard Healdrick, Lincoln Steedman, Lillian Langdon, Louise Fazenda, Hank Mann, Lydia Yeaman, Titus, Vernon Steele, Harold Goodwin and William Buckley. The production is adapted from Lella Burton Wells' story, the scenario having been prepared by J. G. Hawks and Paul Bern.

In the addition to the superb acting of Miss Gish, who plays the role in which Viola Allen starred so successfully on the speaking stage, "The White Sister" has many thrilling spectacular scenes. The eruption of Mt. Vesuvius supplies the climax for this powerful picture which was directed by Henry King, best known for his work in "Talkie David".

LOCAL PEOPLE IN BAD AUTO COLLISION

Mr. and Mrs. Clemens Reinders, of this village, figured in a bad automobile accident at about 2 o'clock last Sunday morning, which may have resulted in the death of both of them. Mr. and Mrs. Reinders were at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Reinders in the town of Barton during the evening, where they attended a birthday celebration and shower of Mr. Reinders' brother George. Upon their return home their car, a Buick six passenger sedan collided with another six passenger Buick car on Highway 55, about a mile and a half south of this village at a point where the road passes through the swamp. The occupants of the other car were Math. Dangelio, Erwin Rose, son of Frank Rose, and Fred Landvatner of West Bend, who were on their way home from Kewaskum. A heavy fog hung over the road, preventing the drivers from seeing ahead of them, is given as the cause of the accident, resulting in the worst auto smashup seen here in years. The accident was a head on collision. The Reinders car is a total wreck, being practically in the same condition. Mr. Reinders received a broken nose, broken rib, a deep cut on top of his head, cut lips, a badly bruised arm, leg and his spinal column was severely injured. His head was practically helpless for several days. Mrs. Reinders received a dislocated hip, cuts about her face, and other minor bruises about her body. Both occupants were brought to the Bradley hospital at West Bend, where they received first medical aid at the office of Dr. N. E. Hausmann. Mr. Reinders was later removed to his home here, while Mrs. Reinders was taken to the Milwaukee hospital where an X-ray was taken of her hip again put in place. She suffered severely. Both are now getting along nicely. Dangelio, driver of the other car, received cuts about the face and forehead, while sitting being required to close the wound. He was also bruised about the body, and it was at first thought that he was suffering from internal injuries. He was removed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lazarus, Rose, who sat in the front seat with Dangelio, was badly cut about the face. His condition was at first serious, and hopes for his recovery were slight. He is receiving medical attention at the Bradley hospital at West Bend. Landvatner, who was sitting in the rear seat, was thrown against the back of the front seat from the sudden impact with such force that he received cuts about the face and bruises on his head, he received the least injuries. All patients are getting along nicely and will recover.

The wrecked cars were brought to this village, where hundreds of people from far and near came here during the week to view same, and all expressed the opinion that it was the worst wreckage they had yet seen. It is reported that considerable trouble was experienced by local garage men to get the two cars apart, as both machines were so welded together that they had to be broken apart.

When one views the wreckage, no one can understand how it was possible for the occupants of both cars, especially those sitting in the front seats, to escape death, or for more severe injury. The unfortunate people, although suffering from painful injuries, can consider themselves lucky and congratulate themselves that they are still with us to tell the story. Mr. Reinders who is one of the local furniture dealers and undertakers, wishes to announce to his many customers, that although he is confined to his bed, and probably will have to remain there for a few days yet, that his business will be conducted in the usual way. The unfortunate people, who are in need of his services, are in care of promptly. Mr. and Mrs. Reinders also wish to thank all who so willingly assisted at the accident, and all who are now rendering aid and assistance while they are laid up.

SCHOOL TO STAGE A BIG BENEFIT PLAY

The Kewaskum High School Dramatic Club, has been busily engaged under the able and efficient coaching of Miss Bezold, one of the assistant principals of the high school, rehearsing a three act farce comedy play, which will be staged at the Kewaskum Opera House on Friday evening, Feb. 20, 1925. The play will be given for the benefit of the new Kewaskum High School. The play is entitled "A Bunch of Fun," consisting of four ten characters. The plot of this play crackles with fun as though charged with laughter smiles. Beyond all questioning doubts, it will offer an evening's entertainment, worth going miles to see. The coach and cast, are doing their level best to bring this entertainment to a most successful conclusion, judging from the spirit in which they take to this particular work, they are bound to make good their intentions, and are deserving of liberal patronage from all. The curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock. Reserved seats are on sale at the Edw. C. Miller Drug Store. A dance will follow the entertainment for which music will be furnished by Webers All-Nite Rounders.

O'NEIL OIL STATION READY FOR BUSINESS

The O'Neil Oil Company, who for the past several months, were busily engaged erecting a filling station in this village, now have same completed, and received their first shipment of three car loads of oil this week, which was unloaded into the large tanks. The company has erected four large oil tanks, placed on concrete footing about ten feet high, each having a capacity of 11,200 gallons each, and are so arranged that the oil tank can be driven underneath them for loading purposes. The company has erected a first class up-to-date filling station here, modernly equipped, the kind one seldom is able to find in villages of this size or larger. They will handle low, medium and high grade gasoline and kerosene, and high grade kerosene at all times. The local station will at present be in charge of "Jerry" Schlegel of West Bend, who is well known here, and who has had a great deal of experience in the gasoline business, having worked in that capacity for many years. The company is now ready to give their customers the best of service.

TWO DAYS' FARMERS' MEETING FOR WEST BEND

A farmers institute with the following program has been scheduled for West Bend on Feb. 19 and 20. THURSDAY, FEB. 19—10:00 Feeding the herd. A Real Problem now, by Mr. Brill. 11:00—Mineral feeds in live stock rations by Mr. Brant. 1:00—Clover pastures by Mr. Brill. 2:00—Producing Bacon, a profitable dairy sideline by Mr. Brant. 3:00—The relationship of the buckley and the business man by Mr. Buckley. FRIDAY, FEB. 20—10:00—Make them lay when eggs are high by Mr. Brill. 11:00—Why buy apples, better sell 'em by Mr. Swartz. 1:00—Why some farms pay by Mr. Brill. 2:00—Alfalfa, the farm saver in times like these by Mr. Skartz. 3:00—The relationship of the community and the business man by Jerry Riordan. 3:45—Things we want to do in 1925 by Milton H. Button.

The merchants and business men of the city are cooperating with the farmers in putting on this institute by offering special bargains on these days. A large attendance is expected. A farmers institute is really a school of agriculture brought to our own door and offered free of charge to farmers, manufacturers, in fact all business men have their associations that meet annually or semi-annually to discuss their problems. A farmers institute may well be likened to one of these associations in that it is a common meeting place for farmers to discuss their own problems in their own way. Mr. Brill is a prominent farmer of Sheboygan County. Mr. Brant is a swine specialist at our University of Wisconsin. Peter Swartz, a capable and alfalfa king of Wisconsin is a Waushara County farmer who needs no introduction to Washington County. These men with Jerry Riordan, County Supt. of Schools, M. T. Buckley and County Agent Milton Button, make up the program. Every farmer attending this meeting will be given a ticket entitling him to a chance on seed corn that will be given away in one-half bushel lots. Everyone invited.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES NAB RUNAWAY BOY

A young lad, giving his name as White, aged about thirteen years, came to this village via the blind baggage route on the 8:20 north bound passenger train on Tuesday morning. Station Agent Anthony Schaeffer notified Deputy Sheriff Joseph Eberle who took the youngster into custody. Upon questioning him he gave his name and address, the latter at Milwaukee. The boy took his prison-er back to the city, and upon investigation learned that there was no such address as the boy gave in Milwaukee. Mr. Eberle then took the lad to the Central Police Station, where he was questioned by the Chief of Police, being of the tough type, the officers were unable to get any definite information from the youngster. He not only told the officers different places such as Chicago, Detroit, Michigan and Minneapolis where he has been supposed to be, but also changed his name. Mr. Eberle did not stay long enough at the station to learn just what the officers did with the prisoner. That the youngster was a roguish roust-a-about, a "real" kid, one who was ready to do most anything, whether right or wrong, could easily be determined from the way he talked and acted. While waiting for the train at the local station, Mr. Eberle asked the boy what he thought he would do for "stick the Arent up for it." And when he asked if he had any money to pay his bail, he again told officer Eberle, that he was the officer and that he was talking him.

Scene, Kensington gardens at eleven A.M. Two children and an Aberdeen terrier are playing with a ball. The girl, six years old, throws it to the boy, who is about a year younger, just as the silence gun goes.

The boy does not try to catch it and it rolls down the sloping pathway. The Aberdeen retrieves it for his young master, who is standing unaccountably still with his hat in his hand. Tired of waiting he drops it and looks up motionless and rather puzzled. One fancy, one sees a look of wonder come into his great brown eyes, a reflection, maybe, of that in his young master's. Almost every section of the United States is confronted by a traffic problem.

Month by month this problem is becoming more and more serious.

Hundreds of cars pass a given point every hour on many of our state and county roads. Down-town city streets are jammed with traffic.

Think, too, how narrow many of our roads are, and how comparatively few paved highways there are in proportion to the steadily increasing number of cars.

If the motor vehicle is to continue giving the economic service of which it is capable, we must have more concrete highways and widen those near large centers of population.

Every citizen should discuss highway needs with his community and his local authorities.

Your highway officials will do their part if given your support.

Why postpone meeting this pressing need?

An early start means early relief.

FLY-AWAY NANNIE

"AND be sure to lock the door after you," ended Nannie's mother. But by this time Nannie was out of sight and hearing. It was always that way. This was just like her—going off half-cooked and losing the end of her mother's directions. Now the chickens would all escape while she was bringing in the eggs. Nannie was what the neighbors called a "fly-away child."

Then she grew up. She was pretty and she was pursued. Christopher pursued her with slow and deliberate methods. Christopher always weighed the consequences before acting. The ground was solid, not only beneath Christopher's feet, but also several yards in advance of him. Indeed, he cut a poor figure beside young Dashwood, who would take a situation by storm, who—like he won at all—by his arduous and sweeping ways. Dashwood posed and gestured before Nannie with his hat on the side of his head and his air of "Take me or leave me and be quick about it—you won't get a second chance." But, in spite of the fact that young Dashwood was so gay and romantic, and Christopher unsmiling and rather heavy, Nannie really liked Christopher better.

Then, one day at the railroad station in town, she thought she saw Christopher's broad shoulders through the crowd—Christopher and another girl. As she watched he bent and bestowed an unmistakable farewell kiss upon the lady clinging to him. Then Nannie, hot with indignation, boarded her suburban train. Presently Dashwood joined her. During their half-hour journey Nannie brought matters to a head and reached home engaged to be married. There on her own porch was Christopher, who had never been to town that day at all.

When Nannie had been married for a year young Dashwood left her. She had enough money to scrape along with—but that was all. One day she read the alluring advertisement of a mining investment. By purchasing shares at the existing low price she might triple her income in a month. If she waited a day to get advice from her broker her opportunity would be gone. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Nannie got together every bit of her capital she could lay hands on and bought mining stock heavily. Then, before long, her friends heard that she was penniless. "Firing without aiming, as usual," was the general verdict. But Christopher went to see her. Laboriously and methodically he told her that he had always loved her. Nannie's reaction was outraged anger. She would show Christopher that, even if she was destitute and a beggar, even if her husband had deserted her, she would keep to the narrow path of virtue, she wouldn't be insulted by any one, she was still Dashwood's wife. So she interrupted him with old-time vehemence and Christopher went away for good. Too late she learned that, had she waited for the end of Christopher's long proposal, she would have known that he came to tell her the news of Dashwood's sudden death and her own freedom.

Her habit of pulling trigger before she took sight had lost her her last friend.

WASHINGTON

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THIS was his greatness; he could be kind. Vision and judgment, fact and dream; His was the truly balanced mind. Not skeptical nor yet extreme. No thinker quicker caught the gleam Of new-born stars in human skies, And yet he tested star and stream, On earth and heaven kept his eyes.

THIS was his greatness; he could be Leader and comrade, matter, man; He wore the robe of dignity, With human brotherhood his plan. He was the first American, A pattern for a nation won. His soul as large as heaven's span, His heart as tender as its dew.

THIS was his greatness; Washington Met strength with strength, yet could be kind Without the look of weakness—one Who firmness, gentleness, combined. His was the truly balanced mind That none could flatter nor defame; To glory and ambition blind, He won, unsought, a deathless name. (By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

SCHOOL DAYS

The Young Lady Across the Way

A fact that has been cited in proof of the English origin of the family. But this might be explained in another way. The Kissams were from the first persons of prominence in Queens county, Long Island, and intermarried with the Whitehead, Rutgers, Hewlett, Treadwell, Combs, Van Bunt, Vanderbilt and other prominent families in and about New York city.

Samuel—There is no doubt that this is derived from an earlier form of surname, St. Paul. This sort of contraction of a saint's name was quite usual.

Holland—At first sight you might suppose that the first to bear this name was a native of the Netherlands, but it is an English name derived from a small place in Lancashire called Holland.

Maid—This is clearly a matronymic. That is to say, it is a surname derived from the mother rather than from the father.

Lowie—This is usually a German Jewish name and, of course, is from the word meaning Jon in German. About a hundred years ago, when German Jews were required by law to adopt a definite surname, many took names of animals and birds, as Adler, Eagle, Hirsch, Hart and Wolf.

There is no right without a parallel duty no liberty without the supremacy of the law, and no high destiny without perseverance—there can be no greatness without self-denial.—Francis Lieber.

SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS

THE evening meal on Sunday is usually a light one. To the old-fashioned folk, there is no dish that they like better than mush and milk.

For those who enjoy the chafing dish or who are fortunate to have men in the family who like to dabble in meat getting, Sunday night is a good time for their activities. Omelets, rarebits, with sandwiches and coffee, toast with various additions, are all good. Oysters stewed, fried or served in a coquille.

A good piece of toast may be the basis for any number of good things. Creamed eggs, fish, oysters or creamed vegetables of some kind, as vegetable oysters. An easy way to prepare fried oysters is to dip them in milk, then in rolled cracker crumbs and fry them until plump, in butter. Serve with a relish of some kind, even the ordinary cabbage finely shredded and dressed with vinegar and salt, is most palatable. If one wishes to be quite elegant, serve the relish in halves of lemon, one for each plate.

An onion sandwich is very popular for a night lunch. Cut the mild onion into very thin slices, dip in a good highly seasoned French dressing and use between slices of thin buttered bread. With a glass of hot milk, or a cup of cocoa, the appetite is satisfied. Onions are especially recommended to ward off disease, and in keeping the body in good health.

A simple salad the even a child may be taught to serve is lettuce with peanuts and a mayonnaise dressing. Use head lettuce, sprinkle with chopped nuts, a very little minced onion and a generous portion of mayonnaise. This with bread and butter and a hot drink, is another good meal.

Cottage cheese with minced pepper, chives and a bit of salad dressing is a nourishing dish.

Cold meats, fish and fowl are always popular to serve for a supper dish. Any may be used as sandwich filling which are in too small pieces to serve as cold meat.

Rocka.

Take one and one-half cupsful of brown sugar, one cupful of butter, one cupful each of walnuts chopped, and raisins, also chopped; three cups, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three and one-fourth cupsful of flour and one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one and one-half cupsful of hot water. Mix as usual and drop by teaspoonfuls on baking sheets.

Saddle of Venison.

Lard a saddle of venison and cook the same as a saddle of mutton. Serve with currant jelly sauce. To prepare it take one cupful of brown sauce and one-fourth of a cupful of currant jelly and a tablespoonful of orange juice.

Deviled Pecans.

Put shelled pecans into a frying pan, add a teaspoonful of olive oil, stir until slightly browned, pour out on absorbent paper, sprinkle with salt and a few dashes of red pepper. Serve at once before the crispness has been lost.

Ill Luck for the Turks

Cherif in Bessarabia should certainly be memorable in the annals of Turkey, since the Turks were defeated in battle there four times—in 1624 and 1673 by the Poles, and in 1739 and 1769 by the Russians.

The KITCHEN CABINET

111-123, Western Newspaper Union.

A nice leg of mutton, my Luella, I pray thee have ready for me; Have it smoking and tender and juicy. For no better meat can there be.—Thackeray.

SEASONABLE FOOD

While oranges are plentiful let us use them freely in our menus. They add vitamins, mineral salts and fruit acids to our diet which are very essential to health.

Orange Charlotte Russe.—Take six round sponge cakes, baked in gem pans and scoop out to make baskets. Peel oranges, remove the white membrane and cut into small pieces, reserving all the juice. To one cupful of diced orange add one-fourth cupful of powdered sugar and allow to stand for thirty minutes. Whip one cupful of heavy cream and moisten the cake baskets with the orange juice, then fill with the fruit. Pipe whipped cream on the fruit and garnish with pieces of orange.

Eggs and Mushrooms.—Dried mushrooms that have been well soaked and chopped may be used for this dish if the fresh ones cannot be obtained. Take four eggs, four pieces of toast, and a cupful of mushrooms. Make a white sauce of two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and one-half cupful of milk. Cook until smooth and thick; season with salt and pepper. Add one tablespoonful of cream. Toast rounds of bread, cover with the sauce to which the mushrooms have been added, then drop an egg on each, place in the oven long enough to cook the egg. Garnish with watercress.

Rice Pudding.—Well cooked rice is one of the most easily digested cereals. Put two tablespoonfuls of rice into a quart of sweet milk with one beaten egg, salt and sugar to taste and a handful of raisins and bake for several hours in a slow oven. Serve with a hard sauce.

Tomato Rabbit.—Melt one pound of rich cheese over hot water, grate one onion and add to a can of tomato soup; add the hot soup to the cheese, season with one-half teaspoonful of mustard, salt and pepper to taste, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and lastly fold in a stiffly beaten egg white. Serve on crisp crackers or buttered toast.

Eggs With Rice.—When eggs are scarce and high this makes a good egg extender: Put three tablespoonfuls of washed rice into an omelet pan, stir with a tablespoonful of butter until a light brown, add a little water and steam until the rice is tender. Now add three eggs and one-half cupful of rich milk. Stir and cook until the eggs are set. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Simple Desserts.

A dessert that one need not fear to give to the little people is:

Date Pudding.—Wash and cut into pieces one package of dates. Add a quart of milk and cook in a double boiler until slightly thickened, add a speck of salt and serve cold.

Figs With Lemon Sauce.—Soak or steam figs until soft and plump, add one-fourth of a cupful of lemon juice to a cupful of figs, simmer until the figs are tender. Thicken the sauce, chill and serve poured over the cooled figs. Garnish with whipped cream.

French Pie.—Into a baked pastry shell put a layer of well-cooked apple sauce that has been seasoned and a tablespoonful of butter added while hot. Cover with a layer of raspberry or currant jelly and top with a meringue, set in the oven to brown. If a meringue is not liked, whipped cream may be used instead.

Canned blueberries poured over sliced bread and allowed to soak, then served with sugar and cream makes a fine pudding for the children.

Chocolate Bread Pudding.—Soak a pint of bread crumbs in a quart of scalding milk for half an hour. Melt two squares of chocolate, add one-third of a cupful of sugar, and milk from the bread crumbs to make of the consistency to pour. Add to the bread mixture with another third of a cupful of sugar, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of finely minced almonds, two eggs slightly beaten and a quarter of a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake one hour. Spread with a meringue, brown and serve with any desired sauce.

Bordeaux Pudding.—Cut sponge cake in thin slices, put together in layers with raspberries, jam. Cover with whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Baked Bananas.—Remove the skins from as many bananas as needed. Place in a baking pan and baste while baking with butter, a little water and lemon juice. Serve with broiled beef steak.

Coffee Tapioca.—Take three cupfuls of coffee infusion to one-half cupful of tapioca and sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and cook as usual. Mold and serve cold with cream and sugar.

"Scalped the Man."
A Scottish footballer was as hard as a billiard ball, but managed to keep it concealed by means of a cap and wig. In one match, however, as one of his opponents took a rebuff about the goal, "Wiggy" got his head in the way of the ball and the wig and cap were knocked off. When the first judge saw the result of his shot he seemed thunderstruck for a moment, and then exclaimed: "Gud heavens! He scalped the man!"

The NEW IDEA SPREADER

The Spreader That is Easily Drawn by Two Horses

This Manure Spreader differs somewhat in appearance from our former models, even painted different. Where we formerly used red as the body color, the new machine is finished in a beautiful rich yellow, with an olive green trim—really an artistic combination, one that will stand out as the color of the Genuine NEW IDEA Spreader, enabling the tourist to distinguish the machine when he sees it in the farmer's yard. The Model 8 is herein briefly described. It uses the Auto Steer or Pivot Axle construction. The Model 8 is securely held in place by the side sills and the front axle is secured by strong angles bolted together and has end trunnions bolted to these angles, making a front structure that is practically indestructible. The axle ends are forged out of cold rolled steel in one piece and are strengthened at the bend by a heavy casting cast around them. The steering arms are wide steel forgings riveted to the axle ends and are so set that the front wheel on the opposite side does not slide over the ground when turning, a very important feature. The steering rods are provided with hardened steel bushings, eliminating all wear. There are no adjustments necessary. They are right when they leave the factory and a chance to make adjustments would usually result in misalignments and trouble. The main axle oscillates in the uprights, preventing twisting of the bed when driving over uneven ground. Wide wearing plates are provided at these oscillating points. The tongue on this model is a slip tongue held in the bracket by a steel pin with a cotter pin. This enables the user to take the tongue out without removing a lot of bolts, a valuable feature when the spreader is to be used in a machine shed or barn. A safety stop prevents breakage in case of too short a turn. The construction of this front end is very simple, very strong and exceedingly durable and is the result of 14 years' experimental work with this type. Track is 60 inches center to center, and 8 ft. 6 in. from center of front axle to center of rear axle. Turning radius is 11 1/2 feet. The cylinder bars are made out of angle steel with pointed teeth held rigidly by a rivet through the flattened end of the tooth. The bars are bolted to the cylinder heads. Anti-wrapping shields at each end of the main cylinder prevent straw and twine from wrapping around the shaft. A collar upon the upper cylinder and distributor shafts prevent wrapping around these shafts. The upper cylinder is set ahead of the lower one so as to take the upper part of the load off ahead of the lower part, which greatly reduces draft and prevents choking. The two cylinders are set apart just far enough to prevent choking at the same time pulverizing all the manure, a feature that will please the particular farmer who wants to see a nice job of spreading. The distributor is distinctly New Idea. Its construction is covered by strong patent claims. The shape of the blades and their relative position to each other are vitally necessary to do good work. The steel blades or paddles are cut out of heavy gauge copper bearing steel which is rust resisting. They are riveted to castings fastened to the shaft. The rear axle has the feed cam on the one end and the drive sprocket hub on the other end, and runs in self-aligning bearings fastened to the main side sills and properly braced to the bed. All bearings are self-aligning and are provided with a spring top roller. All bearings are small inexpensive journals held in place by steel forgings. The feeding mechanism, operated from the rear axle, provides four changes of conveyor speeds—4, 8, 12 and 16 loads per acre—or can be shut off entirely with the lever at the operator's right side. A safety is provided by the key in the ratchet wheel, which in case of a frozen load or a load run into the idle cylinders, will shear off. A new key can easily be inserted. The conveyor is of the chain type traveling over a solid bottom. Tempered steel sprocket chain to which at regular intervals angle steel cross bars are riveted, is used. The bed of the machine is 1 1/2 inches wider in the rear than in the front—freeing the load from the friction against the side. This method has been in use by us for 25 years. The drive is also operated from the rear axle. A large sprocket wheel is bolted to the main sprocket hub that is keyed on the axle. In case of breakage it provides inexpensive repairs, and also enables us to fasten it securely by a press fit, not possible any other way. A tempered steel drive chain transmits the power from this wheel to the main cylinder shaft. This chain is raised or lowered by the drive lever at the operator's left side. A spring tension on the rod holds the chain to the sprocket wheel, preventing jumping or climbing. The upper cylinder and the distributor are driven by tempered steel chains from the main cylinder. We use separate chains for each drive as it prevents short bends of the chain, thereby prolonging the life of the chain and making a lighter draft machine. Both chains are provided with hardened steel slide tighteners. The construction of the sides and bottom are distinctly New Idea. Heavy cross pieces, to which the matched bottom boards are bolted with cement coated nails that can't pull out, are fastened to the main side sills and held in place by 5 steel bolts the full width of the machine. The main side sills are forged out of one piece—not two or three pieces patched together. All main bearings are fastened to these sills as well as the footboard in front. The boards in the sides are grooved and matched and are riveted to the steel uprights riveted to the main sills. It makes a one-piece construction, light in weight, yet far stronger and durable than the old methods. Steel braces from the long center upright to the bottom cross piece underneath keep the sides from twisting or bulging out in the center. The angle steel saddle over the upper cylinder and the front end board hold the front and rear end rigid. A steel angle fastened over the top of the sides for convenient loading. All castings are made in our own foundry out of the strongest possible mixture of iron and steel melted together. Nearly all steel parts and forgings are made out of high carbon steel with cover bearings steel in the distributor blades, upper axle shields, chain shields and other sheet metal parts.

PIT IN TURMOIL AS WHEAT DROPS

Selling of Fleischmann's Holdings Believed to Have Started Slump.

Chicago.—May wheat threw the pit into pandemonium on Friday with another break in price. It dropped to $1.85 a bushel, which was a full of about 21 cents from the high mark eight days ago.

With it went the paper profits of many a clerk and stenographer and dabbler who merrily flipped aboard the market when prices were rising, towards the $2 mark, but who did not jump off in time.

Other markets.—Winnipeg, Kansas City, Minneapolis and the rest took the parachute drop as did Chicago. To all appearances exporters were the chief beneficiaries of the tumble.

Veteran traders said the bedlam in the pit had not been duplicated since the days of Joe Leiter's wheat corner. Trades came so fast that at times the price at one side of the pit was half a cent higher than at the other side.

In analytical mood after the close, the professional talent held that the slump was started by the selling of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels of long May, credited to Julius Fleischmann, the yeast man, who died suddenly at Miami.

All told, more than 100,000,000 bushels of May wheat were dealt in on the Chicago exchange, almost a record for the last four years.

How the farmer is affected is a question which the experts are pondering. From some quarters comes the claim that agriculture itself is not much of a beneficiary of the recent net advance.

Some figure that 80 per cent of the wheat crop of 1924 has already been sold at an average price of between $1.30 and $1.40 a bushel.

Business Situation Is Expected to Improve Soon

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of business: Despite the irregularities which still appear, the business situation is favorable and gives promise of further improvement.

One of the best signs is the absence of speculative excesses in trade, there being a strongly marked disposition to avoid overextension of commitments and to prevent a too rapid rise of prices.

Expansion of demand in recent months has brought about a sharp recovery in manufacturing activity, but the buying has been based chiefly on actual needs and in most cases a close balance between production and consumption is being maintained.

LINCOLN FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

Lawyer Convicted of Slaying Wife—Given Life in Prison.

Geneva, Ill.—Warren J. Lincoln of Aurora was sentenced to life imprisonment by a jury which found him guilty of murdering his wife, Lillian. An indictment for the murder of her brother, Byron Shoup, still is pending against Lincoln.

When the verdict was announced Lincoln's son, John, threw his arms around his father's neck and they both wept tears of joy.

The trial of the eccentric lawyer and horticulturist, who burned bodies of his victims in his greenhouse furnace and later imbedded their heads in a block of concrete, ended without a direct demand for the death penalty by the state.

According to Robert T. Emberson, a farmer who was foreman of the jury, only two members of the jury at any time favored hanging Lincoln. The deliberations lasted three hours and fifteen minutes.

Lincoln will be eligible for parole in twenty years. He is forty-six years old. The state is reserving another indictment against him to be used should he gain his freedom.

In his closing argument to the jury the state's attorney Charles L. Abbott recalled the amazing circumstances of the murders and their detection. The crime was committed on January 10, 1923. Lincoln disposed of the bodies in the next few days and continued his seemingly uneventful life among his flowers until April 23, 1923.

Meantime no one had missed either Mrs. Lincoln or Shoup, and he might have kept his secret for years.

Lincoln, however, preferred to disappear spectacularly. He made a trail of blood from his greenhouse to the well, making it appear that he had been murdered by his wife and her brother, and his body had been tossed into the well. He vanished.

On June 12 he was found in Chicago. He was questioned at length but revealed nothing. He said he had been kidnapped. He remained in Aurora for a month and then disappeared again.

He was discovered again in Chicago months later and on January 12, 1924, he confessed and led police to the spot where the heads had been embedded in stone. The great block of concrete was cracked open, the heads were found and identified and the murder was solved.

U. S. to Control Drainage of Sewage Into Lakes, Rivers

Washington.—Chicago's sanitation problem is rapidly approaching a settlement. Secretary of War Weeks announced that he is considering a recommendation to the chief of engineers under the terms of which Chicago would be permitted to divert 8,500 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan for the next five years on the condition that the sanitary district begin the construction of a sewage-treatment system, that compensating works to control lake levels be constructed, and that the metering of the city water be established.

The attitude the War department contemplates assuming in regard to Chicago's sanitation problem is of far-reaching significance. It is to signalize the inauguration of a policy of strict control of the drainage of sewage into navigable inland waters, which fall within the jurisdiction of the federal government.

"The time will come," said General Taylor, chief of army engineers, "when every city in the United States will have to treat all of its sewage and its municipality will be allowed to contaminate the waters of rivers or inland lakes.

The dumping of sewage in lakes and rivers, the army engineers say, is slowly killing off fish.

Gotham Millionaire Shot; Sister of Serb Envoy Held

New York.—Chris G. Hupfel, thirty-three, millionaire realty operator and son of John C. G. Hupfel, wealthy brewer, was shot twice in the face by Mme. Kora Spaljakowitch, sister of the Serbian ambassador to France.

The shooting took place in Lexington avenue near Forty-sixth street and was viewed by scores.

This Mme. Spaljakowitch carried out threats she made in 1918, preceding her flight to France, when she brought a suit for $150,000 she brought against Hupfel.

At the police station Mme. Spaljakowitch, moaning in hysteria, kept saying: "I had to do it. The Germans were persecuting me."

She said that following her meeting with Hupfel in 1917 he began an arduous courtship.

Julius Fleischmann Succumbs at Miami Beach.

Miami, Fla.—Julius Fleischmann, former mayor of Cincinnati for two terms, millionaire philanthropist and sportsman, president of the Fleischmann company, said to be the largest yeast manufacturers in the world, died suddenly at Miami Beach while playing polo. Death was believed to have been caused by a sudden attack of either acute heart trouble or apoplexy brought on by the violent exercise.

For several years Mr. Fleischmann maintained a polo stable here and took an active part in the game despite the fact that he was in his fifty-third year and weighed almost 200 pounds.

Mr. Fleischmann, who had been divorced twice, is survived by a daughter, Mrs. H. C. Yeiser, Jr., of New York, who gave birth to a baby boy in a Cincinnati hospital earlier in the day, and a son, Julius Fleischmann, Jr., of Cincinnati, who, friends here said, was en route to New York, from where he was to sail for Paris.

He also left a sister, Mrs. C. R. Holmes of New York, and a brother, Col. Max Fleischmann, who is in the heart of Africa on a big game hunting expedition with his wife. Messages may not reach him for a considerable time.

LOOKING IN ON THE LEGISLATURE

Madison.—The administration tax bill has come to be a topic of brisk discussion in both houses, although this measure is not scheduled for hearing until Feb. 17. This bill would raise approximately $12,000,000 in income taxes, of which nearly $4,000,000 would go to the state.

The amount which the state would receive is nearly $3,000,000 more than it now receives from income tax sources. This additional sum will be used to pay mill taxes now raised on general property.

It is stated that the increase in revenues will be obtained chiefly by repeal of the personal property offset. The offset is used much more extensively by corporations than by individuals, the average individual income tax payer having little personal property with which to offset his income tax.

Introduction of the flat rate of 4 per cent on corporation incomes, in place of the sliding scale, would have a tendency to raise the rates of the smaller corporations, which formerly enjoyed rates of 2 or 3 per cent, but this has been taken care of by giving all corporations an exemption of $1,000.

More Highway Legislation

As soon as the administration highway bill is out of the way some of the other bills affecting the highway department and the highway education in the state are to be reported. The Staudenmayer bill for removing the ex-officio members of the highway commission is scheduled for early action.

Senator Staudenmayer is following the lines suggested by Gov. Blaine in his message for the removal of the state geologist and the dean of the engineering college from the highway commission.

Curb on Appointments Loses

Senator William Titus, Fond du Lac, lost his fight to prevent the appointment of legislators to state offices in the senate when his bill was defeated by a vote of 19 to 13.

Under the Titus bill, no member of the legislature could be appointed to a state job during his term of office. In defending his measure, Senator Titus explained that an undue pressure could be brought to bear on the votes of legislators by the governor through the prospects of an appointment.

Opponents of the Titus bill took the stand that they would rather see the appointment of legislators with whose connections they were familiar, than to have men appointed to offices whose affiliations were not known.

Measures Approved by House

Among measures adopted or passed by the assembly are the following: The Price resolution referring to the Titus proposal for publication in the 1925 Wisconsin Blue Book of the names and salaries of officers, members and employees of state governmental agencies.

Senate bill abolishing one superior judgeship and creating another circuit judge in Dane and Sauk counties.

The senate bill providing for two additional circuit judges for Milwaukee county.

The resolutions, previously passed by the senate, calling for registration of lobbyists twice weekly.

The senate had spirited arguments over the feasibility of a short session of the legislature and then voted 36 to 16 on a resolution by Senator Walter Hunt, River Falls, providing that the session be limited to 100 days.

Lieut. Gov. Huber held that he had no right to vote on the resolution and the measure was killed.

Favor Child Labor Amendment

The Padway resolution, ratifying the federal child labor amendment, was adopted by the state senate. The vote was 19 to 10. The resolution now awaits action by the assembly. There is no indication as to when the matter will come up for consideration in that branch.

The vote came after debate by senators on either side had continued for two hours. Senator Joseph Padway, Milwaukee, opened the argument for legislative ratification. He was followed by Senator J. E. Caston, Denmark, who made a stirring address in favor of ratification from the farmers' standpoint.

Sensors Ben Gettelman, Milwaukee, and James A. Barker, Antigo, led the faction against ratification.

With the sky clear and the temperature almost that of summer, Main street was crowded with his neighbors and fellow citizens who came to pay their last respects to the man who had twice honored Oconto by being elected governor of the state for two terms. The state legislature was duly represented at the funeral by Senator John B. Chase, representing the senate, and Michael Laffey and Samuel Walsh, representing the assembly. Many notables in political life attended, as well as representative business men.

La Crosse.—In a petition filed with the state railroad commission, the Wisconsin Railway Light and Power Co. asks for an increase in street car fares in La Crosse from 7 to 8 cents and the abolishing of all cut rate fare books except one book of seven tickets to sell for 50 cents. The company claims the automobile has cut down its revenue to the point where fares must be increased and one-man cars must be installed on the North side line to make a profit.

Skull Shows Skill of Indian Surgeon

Evidence that skull surgery was successfully practiced by prehistoric people in Michigan has been presented to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Prof. E. T. Groom of the University of Michigan. Pointing out that Michigan has been greatly neglected as a field for archeological investigation, he said: "In Alpena county, Michigan, several trepanned skulls, that is, skulls into which holes were drilled during the life of the patient, have been reported. One of them is in the University of Michigan museum and careful examination of anatomists of repute shows that a healing had begun after the operation and therefore the area of the practice of skull trepanning must be extended far beyond Mexico."

"THEN HELP ME!"

I thought I heard an auto drive up to the Institute last night.
Myers looked at her in the same manner. "The doctor came back last night unexpectedly," he said.

none came. He seemed struggling to control himself. He flushed and looked from one to the other.
"Then help me," said Lancaster. "It was myself of whom I spoke to you. Will you help me with loyalty and sympathy, and refuse to be discouraged?"

"Why, Miss Wentworth?" Stammered the Doctor.

deal of your time here. There was nothing unexpected about your visit last night. You knew that you would come here when you employed me.
She must have spoken more anxiously than she knew. For the web of deception was smothering her, and she felt that her position was becoming unendurable. For an instant a glimmer of amusement passed over the doctor's face.

Lancaster, who had been regarding her intently as she spoke, glanced hurriedly into the hall before replying. A look of fear had come into his eyes.
"Joan, turning from the man in distress, saw Lancaster standing at the door. She went toward him, and then she looked at him in consternation. For Lancaster was undeniably ill. His face was a dead white, and he was leaning on a stick, as if to support himself.

"Miss Wentworth," said Lancaster in a low tone, "believe me, I have no intention of deceiving you. On the contrary, it is my wish to confide in you. Will you come out on the porch and permit me to smoke?"

She bowed, and they went out together. They took their seats upon two chairs at the end of the veranda, Joan purposely seating herself between her companion and the door. She knew why he kept glancing toward it.
"Miss Wentworth," Lancaster began, "we spoke of loyalty the other night. If you saw a human being in trouble of his own making, would it be your impulse to help him, or to leave him to fight his battle alone?"

"I should help him if I could," said Joan.
"Then help me," said Lancaster. "It was myself of whom I spoke to you. Will you help me with loyalty and sympathy, and refuse to be discouraged?"

"I'll stay," said Joan, and then, looking at his white face and trembling hands, she thought she knew what was the matter with him.
"Listen, Doctor Lancaster," she began, laying her fingers on his arm. But then she saw that he was not looking at her. He was looking past her toward Myers, who was coming across the pasture toward the entrance. His expression was transformed.

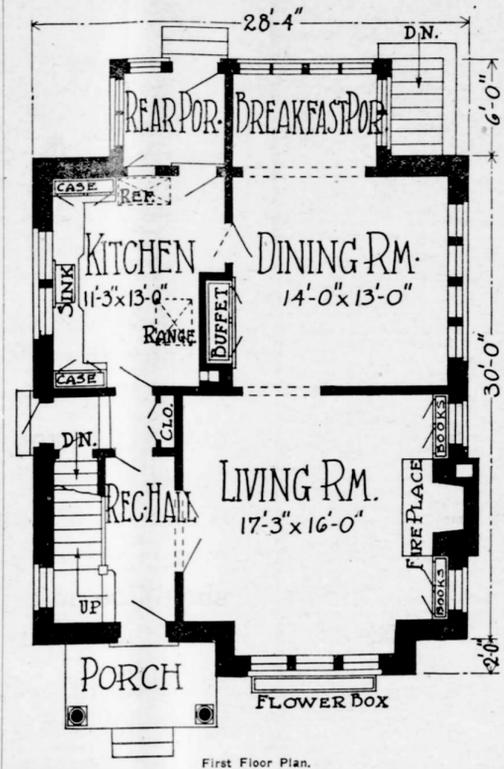

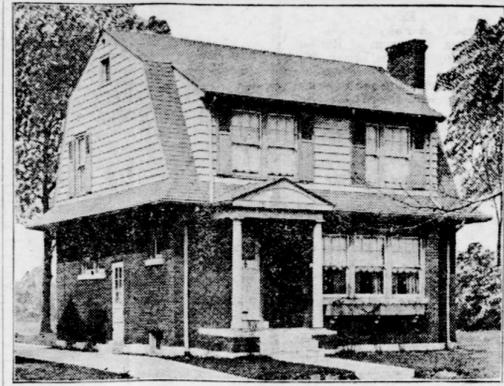

And, as Myers came up to them, the same hopeless, cringing expression came into his eyes.
The secretary ignored Joan completely. "Well, doctor," he said, "I have the quarterly statement ready for you. Won't you come and look over it? I must have your signature, and you know how hard it is to fasten you down."

"Yes, I'll come, certainly, Myers," said Lancaster, rising.
The two men went into the house together. Joan heard the door close behind them. She was left to ponder over that interview.
She was conscious of two conflicting impulses: to leave, and to remain for Lancaster's sake. There was something about the man's pliable condition that aroused all her sympathies. But there was something about the whole place repulsive in the extreme. She must get allies in this blind fight against the secretary if she remained. Whom? Mrs. Fraser? That was impossible as yet.

At that moment she saw Doctor Jenkins driving up the path, and went to meet him.
The boy sprang to the ground and raised his hat. "Good morning, Miss Wentworth. How is the doctor today?" he asked.

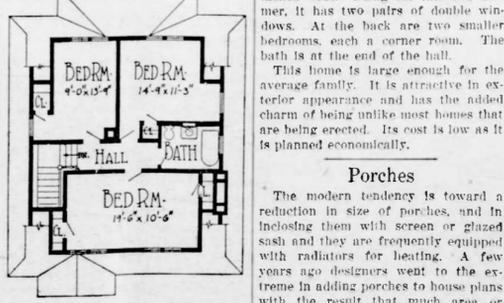

"Doctor Lancaster looks very ill," she answered. "And Doctor Jenkins, I want to ask you—" contains six good rooms and some very desirable features, such as a good-sized, light and airy breakfast room, a large living room and an unusually good-sized bedroom.

Second Floor Plan.

The house is 28 feet 4 inches wide and 30 feet deep. The foundation is of concrete, upon which is set the brick walls that extend to the second floor.

Above this the frame is used, with a roof overhanging over the first floor and the usual wide dormer and broken roof lines that mark the Dutch Colonial.
The entrance is at the extreme left off a small porch. It leads into a narrow reception hall. To the right and connected with the hall by a double-cased opening is the living room extending nearly the width of the house. The room is 17 feet 3 inches long and 16 feet wide. A large fireplace with bookcases in the front furnish this room with light and ventilation. A cased opening also connects the living and dining rooms. The latter is 13 by 14 feet. At the left of the dining room and also reached through the reception hall is the kitchen, 11 by 11 feet 3 inches. Set into the rear wall of the dining room is the breakfast nook, cased on three sides. This makes an unusually pleasant small dining room.

Upstairs are three bedrooms. The one in the front is exceptional. It is 19 feet, 6 inches long and 10 feet, 6 inches wide. Being set into the dormer, it has two pairs of double windows. At the back are two smaller bedrooms, each a corner room. The bath is at the end of the hall.

This home is large enough for the average family. It is attractive in exterior appearance and has the added charm of being unlike most homes that are being erected. Its cost is low as it is planned economically.
Porches
The modern tendency is toward a reduction in size of porches, and in enclosing them with screen or glazed sash and they are frequently equipped with radiators for heating. A few years ago designers went to the extreme in adding porches to house plans with the result that much area or doubtful utility often was added. Concrete porches are economical to maintain.

Placing Radiators
In the modern apartment and house the radiators are kept away from the windows, where they do not soil curtains. Use good shingles, generously applied.
Your building laws may require you to use asphalt shingles. Your taste or judgment may dictate their use. In any case specify what you want, get the product of a manufacturer that has stood the test of time and have your shingles laid exactly as the manufacturer directs.
Moods and Walls
In wallpaper the whole range of possibilities in textile design is represented so that every quality, every feeling, every mood that can be expressed by line and color can be found in some wallpaper pattern.
Do Winter Painting
Master painters are urging that as many painting jobs as possible be done in the winter months when labor is more plentiful.
A fungus disease is proving a menace to gold fish in California and may spread to other states.

The pampero is the name given to the cold southwest wind which blows over the great southern plain of Argentina. Loosely the name is applied to any strong southwest wind in that region, but more especially to a rain squall or thunderstorm. At Buenos Aires, the capital of Argentina, the pampero is experienced, on an average, about a dozen times in the year, chiefly in the months of October, November and January.

Probably the almanac preserved in the British museum, which dates back 1,200 years before the birth of Christ, to the time of Ramesses the Great of Egypt, is the oldest in the world. The entries relate to religious ceremonies, to the fates of children born on given days, and to the regulation of business enterprises in accordance with planetary influences.

Gypsy Tongue in Print

The Gypsy language, which is not regarded as a written tongue, has been put into print for the first time this autumn for political-campaign purposes, says the New York World.
It is printed in Slavic characters, but most of the words are unintelligible to a Bulgarian or any other Slavic-speaking person. The political terms, however, are Slavic words.
An agrarian-campaign document, printed in the Romy language, points out that the late dictator, Stamboulsky, was anxious to enfranchise the entire Gypsy race, but the democratic union prevented the enfranchisement by putting an end to the Stamboulsky regime.

A character that is honest and trustworthy seldom changes. Vice versa.

HARTFORD LUMBER CO. SELLS GILT
HARTFORD BOASTS OF HAVING HOUSE ON WHEELS

Burlington business men evidently have a keen liking for Hartford, for this week a second business deal represented by Burlington business men was consummated when the Hartford Lumber company, one of the oldest lumber and fuel yards in the county, was sold to the Darrin Lumber company of Burlington Wis. Possession is to be given April 1.—Hartford Times

An ingenious house on wheels is the work of Joseph Assenmacher of this city, who from an old and partially wrecked Kissel car has constructed as neat and complete a camping car as one would wish to see. This car contains all the essential necessities to comfort on a camping trip, including beds, refrigerator, table, drawers and compartments for baggage and electric lights.—Hartford Press.

"THIS IS MY TOWN"

A pledge of citizenship is an enthusiastic and whole-hearted support in act and thought, of Kewaskum, its ideals, its institutions, its homes, its attractiveness, its advantages, its business and of your neighbors. When any individual or local organization makes an effort for a bigger and better Kewaskum they deserve and have a right to expect the loyal support of every citizen. At that moment they represent Kewaskum and there should be no bickering, no backbiting or factional disagreement which will detract from gaining the objective.

Only in proportion to our combined efforts can we hope to make our town more attractive and more prosperous. No matter the size, every town is too small in number of citizens, to grow when part of its folks take their money and trade to other centers. Our interest in state and national prosperity is not diminished through a strict loyalty to home affairs and town development. On the contrary, when we build an up-and-doing, prosperous and progressive town we add to our state's assets, and, likewise to the nation's.
