DEATHS WITH VERY PAINFUL INJURY

Eleven-year-old daughter of Mrs. William Kohler, residing at a well known Kewaskum, Wis., met with a very painful injury to her head at her home on Sunday afternoon at about 4 o'clock. The little girl was playing with her brothers across the highway when she suddenly darted across the road in front of a car. Her head struck the hood of the car and she was thrown into the air. She landed on her head and the next moment she was lying on the ground. She was immediately taken to her home and with the assistance of a doctor a car was called, who found that the girl had a fracture of the skull. She was taken to the Kewaskum Hospital where she has since been confined. How she came to get her head so badly injured, whether she was struck by an automobile, several of which were passing up and down on the highway at the time, remains a problem to be solved.

RATTLESNAKE FARM PROTESTED

Residents residing near Kohler, Sheboygan county, Wis., are up in arms over a rattlesnake farm, being operated by Dr. Frederick Eigenberger, of that place. Residents of the neighborhood claim that the snake farm enclosures are insecure and that the reptiles are overrunning the courts. Eleven rattlesnakes have been killed during the past three weeks, near the vicinity of the farm. Residents living east of Kohler are said to be keeping their children indoors and women are keeping away from their gardens and tall grass localities. Theo Jutz, one of the residents killed a rattlesnake with six rattles, when he discovered the reptile near his farm home. Mrs. H. Walters found a snake in her garden while picking flowers. Those who have reached in a complaint to the state conservation, say that they will make every effort to kill off all reptiles this fall to prevent a rattler plague in that locality. State officials pointed out that the residents of the neighborhood of the snake farm have recourse to law without any aid from state officials. LOCAL MAN GASSED IN WABENO WELL

Gregor Harter of Wabeno, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Harter of Kewaskum, had a narrow escape from death one day this week, when he was overcome by gas while at work digging a well on the property of John Volk at Wabeno. Young Harter after being revived by a doctor, was able to go down into the well and finish his job. An article in Thursday's issue of the Milwaukee Journal, gives the following account of Mr. Harter's experience: "Wabeno, Wis.—A little scene reminiscent of the battlefields of the late war was enacted here when workmen digging a well on the property of John Volk found themselves menaced by gas left in the bottom of the shaft after a charge of explosive had been set off to facilitate the digging. Gregor Harter, a World War veteran, descending into the well, was overcome by the gas. He was hoisted out and taken to Dr. George H. Reddick, also a World War veteran, for treatment. "When the patient revived, Dr. Reddick suggested that he tackle the job as they used to tackle gas jobs on the battle front in France. Harter agreed that this was a brilliant idea. A gas mask was retrieved from a heap of cast-off military equipment. Harter donned it, went over the top into the well and finished the job without further ill effects."

REAL PLAY AT THE OPERA HOUSE

A very entertaining story, told in convincing and artistic manner, on the screen Sunday at the Opera House, "K—The Unknown" Universal-Jewel starring Virginia Valli, will be given its initial performance. The pictureplay was adapted from the famous novel by Mary Roberts Rinehart, "K", which not only was read by many thousands of persons, but which, according to all evidence, is justly entitled to that well-known characterization, "a human document." And if this characterization is true of the story, it is true of the screen version. It can be truly said for the picture that it follows the story closely, and accordingly, it appears to the writer of this review that the characterization in both cases is a correct one. Virginia Valli, cast in the part of Sidney Page, beautiful young woman, whose life has been passed in a small town where she has become a social favorite of the younger residents. The gradations she portrays, just one morning from girlhood, through realization of her growing maturity to one who, apparently, has tasted of the extreme bitterness of disillusionment, are convincingly done. The part of "K" silent and mysterious stranger whose coming to the little town presages so much of vital import to the others in the story, is finely handled by Percy Marmont. Margarita Fischer as Carlotta Harrison, misguided, but devotedly in love with Dr. Max Wilson, portrayed by John Roche, and Maurice Ryan, Francis Feeney, are convincing. Harry A. Pollard, who directed, achieved some fine situations, one of which is a complete hospital operating room, which is vividly realistic without being in any way gruesome.

NEW CONCERT BAND ORGANIZED

Kewaskum is again to be represented by a brass band. This fact was brought about through the efforts of Albert Hron and others interested in music in this village. The band consists of twenty pieces. The first rehearsal was held last Monday evening in the Opera House, and regular rehearsals will be held in the hall above the Farmers & Merchants Bank. It is expected that by next spring the newly organized musical organization will make its first public appearance. Let's hope that all who have joined the organization, have done so with the firm intention of sticking to it, and make the band a real one, which will not only be a credit to the members, but to the village as well. Nearly everyone loves and likes to hear music, and a band is a valuable asset to any community. A village the size of Kewaskum or even smaller should by all means be represented by a musical organization of that kind. The band is under the leadership and direction of Mr. Hron, who will do all in his power to make a success of it.

Just before reaching Kewaskum, according to the story told by his mother, an automobile turned into the path of the motorcycle and crashed into the machine. He was hurled from his motorcycle and landed several feet away from the wreck. It is reported that the man is suffering severe pains.

MORE LIGHT ON THE KOHLER CASE

William Steecke, the Manitowish man who is believed to have been murdered in the car near Northem on Sept. 3, purchased the single barrel shotgun found in his car at the Schwandt Hardware store in Campbellport on the day before his death. This fact was established Tuesday when District Attorney Clarence Trietgen of Manitowish, and a brother of the dead man visited the village. Steecke, who was employed at Kohler, did not commit suicide in the opinion of the authorities. Blood stains were found on the grass around the car and it is the belief that he was shot down and then placed in the machine by his assailants. His wound showed that death must have been instantaneous. The windshield of the car was also shattered by the shot which it is believed was fired from the outside. Steecke visited the Campbellport store in the morning and wanted to buy a repeater shotgun and not seeing just what he wanted, left. He returned the same afternoon and bought the weapon found in the car. Just a few days before he had drawn some of his wages at Kohler and made a payment on a car which he had purchased, which further convinces the authorities and his relatives that the man was not thinking of suicide.—Fond du Lac Commonwealth.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

WISHING ON LOAD OF HAY

THE custom of wishing when a load of hay passes is common in the rural districts all over the country. It is a survival from that ancient nature worship which manifested itself in various cults and myths having to do with the spirit of vegetation, the personification of the "kindly fruits of the earth" as the embodiment of a god.

The growing crop is Osiris, Adonis or Balder alive and the harvested crop is the same gods temporarily dead. At the gathering of all crops—the killing of the god—the ancients were accustomed to practice solemn rites, many of which in a modified form, exist among us today as popular superstitions. A load of hay is a gathered crop—it is the body of Balder which is passing, and a wish upon a load of hay is an appeal to the spirit of that god for a fulfillment of the wish.

Those who are inclined to question the survival of ancient religions in fragmentary form under the guise of current superstitions should consider that without considering the significance of the fact at all, we still call

Among the NOTABLES

JOHN LOCKE

IN GREAT contrast to the undemocratic teachings of the German philosophers, are the gentler and far more liberal ideas of the great English thinkers.

There is Locke, for instance, the great English philosopher, born almost a century and a half before Hegel. He was born in Somersetshire, August 29, 1632. He studied at Oxford, and developed a fondness for politics, theology, medicine and philosophy and studied all of these. Thus he fitted himself to look at subjects from a mental, an abstract, a physical and a religious point of view—certainly taking a comprehensive attitude.

A discussion among some friends, one day, concerning the human mind, led to the beginnings of his "Essay Concerning Human Understanding," which was not compiled, however, until twenty years of work had gone into it. Troubled times in politics sent Locke and other liberal thinkers to take refuge in Holland. He was well in his fifties before he returned to England, where he received all of $150 for his copyrights on the great "Essay." He wrote, later, the "Reasonableness of Christianity," and died in 1704, in "sincere communication with the whole church of Christ by whatever names Christ's followers call themselves."

The whole sum of his teachings was universal toleration, freedom of thought and action, almost opposite to the preachings of the German thinkers.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

HANDS UNAFRAID

WHAT the world needs most, and which it cannot hire except in limited numbers are capable, willing hands unafraid to perform hard work in the face of complex difficulties.

And with these hands it needs sturdy backs, nimble feet and willing hearts, loyal to themselves and to others.

To feed, clothe and satisfy himself, man must constantly exert himself. This is the price he is compelled to pay for life.

If man fails to sow he cannot hope to reap.

And, likewise, if he stubbornly refuses to use and train his hands in the direction toward which they naturally incline, the likelihood is that he will go through the world at the tail end of the procession, blaming others for his failure when the fault really lies with his timid hands.

No two hands are cast in exactly the same mold.

Each hand has an individuality, and a peculiar ability and aptitude of its own, just as has the brain, the controlling force which directs the hand.

The world wants hands detached from lusts and superstitions, disciplined in moments of excitement to double up into bony fists.

It wants hands with sensitive fingers and specialized knowledge, competent to perform accurately the work entrusted to them, whether they grip machinery, pound the typewriter, push the carpet-sweeper, embroider a dainty tapestry or play the piano.

If you will consider the cause of the rise or the fall of nations, you will find that it resulted mainly from the good or evil works of hands.

An industrious community shows its handwork in neatly painted houses, shaded streets and a general air of prosperity and contentment. Where the shacks are, where misery and crime stalk in the shadows, the hands of men are idle.

At the root of all discontent lie dormant hands, responsible for most of the human failures and sorrows. Whatever work your hands are capable of doing, do it with all your might.

Give no heed to the lilies of fields, but remember always that by the hands which are unafraid of grime, determined to do, and to do nobly, great cities are built, fortunes are made and humble names lifted to fame and graven on monuments which shall endure for ages and become an inspiration to those yet unborn.

THINGS FOR WINTER

WHEN the cucumbers are just finger size try this recipe: Company Sweet Pickles.

Take one pound each of canned cherries and layer raisins left in clusters two or three on a stem, six dozen of the Tiny Tim cucumbers.

Put a quart of the best cider vinegar into a porcelain-lined kettle, add one pound of granulated sugar and boil to a sirup with two teaspoonfuls each of white pepper and nutmeg, one teaspoonful of mace and one-half teaspoonful of ground cloves. Bring the sirup to a boil, then add the cherries; when they are plump remove them with a skimmer and add the raisins. As soon as the raisins are plump, skim them out and add the cucumbers. Boil two minutes, they should be tender but not soft. Fill glass jars with cucumbers in layers, with the cherries and raisins. Pour over the sirup boiling hot and seal.

Pepper Jam. Wash and remove seeds from six sweet red peppers. Put through a food chopper, sprinkle with salt and let stand three hours. Drain, rinse in cold water and put into a saucepan. Add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of vinegar and boil all together until of the consistency of jam. Pour into glasses. When cool cover with paraffin.

the town and shire of Montgomery in Wales took their names and from them several men in turn took the name of Montgomery. In a great many cases the name was given to a place and the place in turn gave its name to a gown and many men who lived near it, but perhaps the facts can be more clearly traced in this case than in most instances. John Montgomery, who was a member of the Continental congress, was born in the north of Ireland in 1722. He came to the new world for a rather unusual reason—because he inherited a small fortune. Many first settlers came over to mend their fortune, but John came to spend his. He settled in Carlisle, Pa., and was a captain in the expedition against the Indians under Gen. John Forbes in 1758. The family has been distinguished by pioneers, missionaries, soldiers and naval officers.

SHIRLEY—This name has been traced to the old English first name Semullis that also gave Sewell. However, as a surname Shirley was adopted from the manor of Shirley in Derbyshire. The family was well established in the reign of Edward III.

HELLER AND HELLER—Apparently there is little or no connection between these two names. Heller is from the old English heller, meaning one who covers. It had the significance of thatcher or tiler, and it is therefore an occupational name akin to Tyler, Slater, Shingler, etc. Helye is a variation of the same name. Heller, however, is a German name, the first of the family here having been Christopher Heller, who was born near Worms, Germany, in 1688. He was one of the many Palatinates who came to this country in Colonial times. He was the founder of Hellertown, Pa. The Hellers lived in Nuremberg, Bavaria, in the Twelfth century.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT MONTGOMERY?

THERE is an interesting phase of the origin of names exemplified by Montgomery. To begin with there was in France a man named Gomerie. His was an old Teutonic name, Gomeris, from goma. This Gomerie lived on a hill which was therefore called Mont Gomerie. This is a place near Lisieux in Normandy and a family of French counts, because they lived near this hill, were given the title of the counts of Montgomery. Roger de Montgomerie was a kinsman of William the Conqueror and went with him to England where he led the center of his army at Hastings.

THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY

The young lady across the way says she'll believe in the quadruple entente even if France and we were the only ones in it.

MODES FOR SLENDER WOMEN; LOVELY PARIS EVENING GOWNS

THAT much heralded and discussed fullness of skirts, which is the high light of fall styles, has been very adroitly managed by designers of dresses and coats. How to make the full skirt answer "present" when calling the roll of apparel for the stout woman, takes much sophisticated diplomacy on the part of designers. Fullness is introduced where it will do the most good for the too-slender woman, and where it will do the least harm, or no harm, for the stout woman.

We may not always agree with the French in their interpretations of tailored styles, but when it comes to evening and dinner gowns—well, we are willing to kiss the hem of those adorable expressions of lively fancy, at least nine times out of ten. Perhaps the French are inspired by the daintiness and splendor of fabrics provided for them, and perhaps they prefer to occupy themselves with the poetry of apparel rather than its prose. Anyway French evening frocks

Frock That Improves the Figure.

For the latter it is placed across the front or to one side, and inverted or plain plaits that lie flat are used. The designer must keep a rein on his fancy and suggest rather than actually introduce greater fullness.

But, in designing for the slender woman, the task is not only easy but pleasant. The very means for improving her figure are in the smile of fashion and the pretty frock pictured shows what can be done with them. This dress, of a wool fabric, has a long bodice, plain at the back but full at the front where it is laid in plaits along the shoulder seam and gathered into a wide, plain band at the hips. A long overskirt is shirred to this band and reaches within a few inches of a narrower underskirt.

The treatment of the sleeves and the neck finish is very successful and becoming to every one, the long ties, are all that we expected them to be this fall, and even more. It is evident that georgette crepe is foremost in the minds of Paris designers of evening and dinner dresses and that they fairly revel in autumn's fashionable shades of red, blue and green. Besides the plain georgette they have at hand georgette brocaded with velvet and otherwise embellished. Combinations of this exquisite fabric with chiffon velvet, and with all-over gold lace are emphasized in the new imports. This gold lace appears in many patterns and is usually placed over georgette, as in the pretty frock shown here.

This simple affair has several style points that are noteworthy besides the application of gold lace—as the drapery over one arm, the flare in its skirt, sash made of the material and attached at the neckline, across the back, and knotted low at the front, make a graceful finishing touch that is one of the new season's best ideas. Ecru lace, or tucked net and lace, are most commonly used for the undersleeves and vestee and look well with any of the popular colors for frocks. Fashion emphasizes cloth in fall dresses, including tailored styles for the street, the coat frock and afternoon dresses, as well as those which are expected to do service for any daytime wear—like the handsome model pictured.

Just now black has little representation in dinner and evening gowns, except in lace or sheer fabrics posed over a color. Beading is introduced on all colors.

Flower-Trimmed Dance Frock Clifton in delicate pastel shades fashions youthful dance frocks of indescribable charm whose chic is augmented by a large velvet flower on one shoulder and trailing sprays of smaller flowers extending down on the skirt. Two are attached in front and two in back.

Modernistic Hats The modernistic tendency is well exemplified in the new felt hats of fawn that have angular designs in light brown stamped upon the crowns.

Scarfs Remain Popular The scarf now is chiding as many changes as a Swiss bell ringer. The

ALLIGATORS' APPETITES

"Hello," said the keeper to the alligators.

They were lying about in their zoo tank. Some were stretched out on the surrounding boards.

As soon as the keeper said "hello," every alligator rushed toward the end of the tank near where the keeper was standing.

The keeper did not go too near them for he didn't dare. They are liable to bite of an arm if they are hungry in their eagerness to get at the food being handed to them.

He gave them their dinner and then they went back to sleep and to sleep soundly, too.

Later on he spoke to them, but they paid no attention. It was a little while after this that Miss Alice Alligator began to speak to Miss Agnes Alligator. They quite often talked together and usually in much the same way.

"Good day, Miss Agnes," said Miss Alice in alligator talk.

"Good day," splashed Miss Agnes.

"How are you feeling?" inquired Miss Alice.

"I'm beginning to feel hungry," said Miss Agnes.

"If I hadn't been feeling a little hungry I wouldn't have spoken to you."

"The same is true of me," said Miss Alice. "You know I think a good appetite is the greatest joy in the world."

"I know of no other joy so great," said Miss Agnes, "except that of having plenty of food to match the appetite."

"Oh, yes," said Miss Alice, "Oh, yes."

"Before I came to the zoo," Miss Alice continued, "my mamma told me that it was the nature of the alligator to be tender of food than of anything else.

"Good Day," Splashed Miss Agnes.

"She said that each spring she laid sixty or eighty eggs which she would hatch out in a mound of brush and dry grass."

"She said the heat helped the hatching, which made less work for her."

"She didn't care to work hard."

"She was fond of an easy life. She was a usual alligator, in other words."

"I understand," said Miss Agnes.

"Well," continued Miss Alice, "she also told me that she guarded her eggs closely to see that no harm came to them—except—except—except—except—except—except—and here is the great point of my tale—except when she was hungry!"

"Then she'd quite forget about the eggs which would soon be young alligators, and she would go off in search of food."

"Nothing," she said, "was so important as food and a good appetite, not even the children."

"My mother told me the same thing," said Miss Agnes. "And she also said that once the eggs had become baby alligators they could look after themselves."

"She didn't believe in looking after them and spoiling them and she said that all mother alligators agreed with her."

"If they bothered her she would eat them as would the daddy alligators, which, she said, was a sure punishment against them bothering her again and having to be told they must not be naughty again."

"It's sensible," said Miss Agnes, "not to fuss over anything but our own appetites which are so good, and our food."

"Some people," said Miss Alice, "say the same thing over and over again."

"Don't do this. Don't do that. Don't let me have to speak to you another time. Now do you hear me?"

"No, none of that nonsense for mother alligators. Appetites and food are all-important with them."

And, once more, the alligators seemed to show signs of life for they were hungry again!

A Bible Character

I was a Phillistine, strong in my might, Conceded and proud as could be. The foes of my nation were plainly in sight.

And I thought they would cowardly flee.

So I challenged them all to fight me alone.

And I strutted and swelled with disdain,

But a boy came along with a sling and a stone,

And I found all my boasting was vain.

His name was Goliath.

He Had Reasons

Bobby had difficulty understanding fractions. His teacher went to great length to explain and finally, when she thought she had driven home the explanation, she asked Bobby whether he would rather have a whole apple or two halves, expecting that he would answer that the two were the same. To her disappointment, he replied, "Two halves." "Why would you prefer two halves?" she asked. "Because then I could see if the apple was bad inside," was the prompt answer.

Dutch Cremationists Celebrate Anniversary

In Holland there has just been celebrated a curious jubilee—the 25th anniversary of the Dutch law for Optional Cremation. Since the society was founded a reasonable view has taken place a Protestant church in law of cremation. In 1876 a petition was sent to King William III to be sent chamber requesting a trial of the law regarding burials and the introduction of a special act of cremation. Every year the law was renewed but no answer was made to it. Only in 1925 was the Dutch crematory at Westerveld, Haarlem, opened, though cremation was not yet recognized as law. The Dutch Cremation Society, the oldest member of the society died in April, 1924, at the age of ninety-six. It was desired to cremate his remains, thus being a test case. The state prosecutor of the society but the supreme court of the Netherlands, after a long process, decided that cremation was admissible. Since then the remains of many Hollanders have been committed to the fires in the furnace at Westerveld.

Wasn't in the Curriculum

A knowledge of pedagogy does not always beget a knowledge of the finer aspects of horticulture or arboriculture. For instance, the teacher in charge of the Junior high schools of a certain town in Indiana city had occasion to visit with her father in the little garden the parent had planted in the rear of the factory where he was superintendent. "Daddy, dear," she said in the characteristic of girls who have passed the teen age, "do the cabbage grow on top of the ground or underneath the ground?"

If the world knew how to produce super men there wouldn't be any other kind.

MARKET REPORT

Plymouth, Wis., Sept. 25—Cottages offered 125 boxes of potatoes all sold as follows: 50 boxes at 24c, 400 cases longhorns at 20c, Young Americans at 20c, square prints at 20c.

Built and equipped for satisfactory work in all kinds of soil.

McCORMICK-DEERING POTATO DIGGER

THE cheapest help you can get is wasteful and extravagant compared with the McCORMICK-DEERING Potato Digger. This tool goes into the fields, whenever you wish, and digs the potatoes quickly and economically. Actual users say: "It is the lightest draft digger on the market." It is well lubricated, and is built to last many years—regardless of the heavy work it is called upon to do.

With the McCORMICK-DEERING, the potatoes are brought out on top of the soil, in plain sight and in neat rows. They are separated from dirt, vines, and trash, and are easy to pick up. If you have a McCORMICK-DEERING Potato Digger and two or four horses, you can harvest your potato crop with the minimum of man labor.

WISCONSIN HAPPENINGS

Important News of the Badger State Arranged in Condensed Form

Green Bay—Clarence L. Arnold of Big Sturgeon, Brown county, has been granted a patent on a cheese preserving process. His invention is a process of producing canned cooked cheese. This cheese is made from the curd of skimmed milk, or buttermilk. It is the cheese generally known as "cottage." The cheese prepared by Mr. Arnold will keep fresh indefinitely in hermetically sealed cans, according to the inventor. Before Mr. Arnold worked out his formula it was impossible to preserve this cheese for more than about two weeks. The cheese could be made only for immediate use and distribution to a limited territory.

Milwaukee—Roy P. Wilcox, defeated candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator, withdrew as an independent candidate in the special senatorial election, leaving the regular republican field to Edward F. Dittmar, Baraboo, former lieutenant governor. The withdrawal of Daniel Woodward and Arthur Barry several days ago, and the withdrawal of Mr. Wilcox, leaves Mr. Dittmar alone in the independent field to oppose young Robert La Follette, the nominee.

Madison—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio and Pennsylvania will join in a suit against the state of Illinois and the sanitary district of Chicago to stop diversion of water from Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. Ekero has announced. The complaint will charge interference with navigation through lowering of lake levels, and a public nuisance through the dumping of sewage into the Chicago, Des Plaines and Illinois rivers. Injunctions will be asked affecting both canals.

Manitowoc—The Manitowoc Shipbuilding corporation has announced receipt of a contract for the building of a new steel carrier for the White Star line, work on which will be commenced at once. The boat, which will be used between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, is to be completed early next spring. It will be 375 feet long with 67-foot beam and will accommodate 50 freight cars.

Madison—Stanley Sklenski, 70, was bound over to circuit court in Manitowish to stand trial for murder in the first degree. He is charged with killing his stepfather, Joseph Dettich, of Niagara, Marinette county, during a family quarrel. The mother of the defendant testified that she had been married three times, her first husband having been murdered 10 years ago. Her second husband divorced her.

Marquette—The Ku Klux Klan held a meeting in a park in Marquette recently, charging admission at the gate. Although it had been predicted that thousands from 29 counties would participate in the grand parade, the crowd at the park was estimated at 1,500 to 2,000, while about 300 paraded through the street. The marchers were rebuffed, but not masked.

Madison—E. F. Benn, assistant state geologist, will fill the post of state geologist temporarily, succeeding W. O. Hotchkiss, who becomes president of the Michigan College of Mines. Mr. Benn's salary will be $5,000 a year. This action was taken by the geological survey commission on suggestion of Gov. Blaine as a means of later choosing a man for the position.

Wisconsin Rapids—Jacob Searis, 75, one of the founders of Wisconsin's cranberry industry, died suddenly of heart failure at his home. Mr. Searis, with his brother, Andrew, established a cranberry marsh in Wood county in 1878, when the cultivation of cranberries was almost unknown in this section. Richards imposed one of the stiffest day law fines yet on record in Monroe county when he sentenced Leonard Garske, guilty of transporting liquor from La Crosse to Sparta, to a fine of $300 and costs of $40.63. In addition, he was given a sentence of 30 days in jail on a second offense charge.

URGES NEW PLAN FOR AIR SERVICE

Gen. Patrick Tells Probers Funds Have Been Denied His Department.

Washington.—With all sides asserting that man for man and plane for plane the American aviation service equals any in the world, but that there are not enough men, planes, or the money to get them, the big aircraft battle precipitated by Col. William Mitchell revealed itself as chiefly involving the promotion system.

General Patrick followed Secretary of War Davis, Major General Hines, chief of staff, and Brig. Gen. H. A. Brown, assistant chief of staff on the staff. Until he appeared there had been little but long statements that everything was fine except that the army needed more men for aviation, more planes, and much more money, the only difficulty having been that congress and the budget system had not allowed enough money.

General Patrick hit out for an entirely new system. He does not go as far as Colonel Mitchell in asking for a national defense portfolio, augmenting the War and Navy departments, with a minister of national defense and assistant secretaries of war, navy and air, though he said this would probably be the best plan later on.

Meantime, he would have the aviation services of the army and navy made into separate corps in the two departments similar to the marine corps in the Navy department at the present time. This plan, he said, would permit an easy swing later into the separate air service under the minister of national defense by combining the two corps.

Many of his recommendations, he said, had been ignored by the War department and many others turned down. His requests for appropriations had been rigidly pruned before congress ever had an opportunity to pass on them.

YANK FLYERS IN RIFF SCORN U. S. WARNING

Men Feel Justified in Serving Under Sultan.

Ouezzan, Morocco.—The American aviators of the Sherifian squadron are not worried by the State department's ruling that they are violating the laws of the United States. They received the first inkling of the ruling through the Associated Press dispatches. The aviators say they feel fully justified in serving under the sultan of Morocco.

The American aviators dropped three tons of bombs on Moorish concentrations in morning and afternoon flights. Col. Charles Sweeney and Captains Holden, Bullen, Cousins, Sussan, and Mustaine, all accompanied by French army officers, participated in the two raids.

The Americans devoted their entire attention to villages near the source of the Agourou in the foothills of the Rif mountains. Scores of plantations north of the Ouergha river, which only last year were flourishing and prosperous, are today blackened heaps of ashes.

Col. Mitchell Ousted From U. S. Air Service

San Antonio—Col. William Mitchell, stern center of the army and navy air service controversy, has been relieved from active duty as Eighth corps aviation officer. The disciplinary action was taken by Maj. Gen. Ernest Hinds, in command of the Eighth corps area.

Following the Shenandoah disaster, Colonel Mitchell, who already had been demoted from brigadier general to colonel for friction with superiors over air service matters, charged in a statement that recent disasters were "due to the almost criminal negligence of the United States air service."

PROCLAIMS FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

President Says Year's Record Justifies Sense of Shame and Sorrow.

Washington.—President Coolidge in a proclamation recommending that the week beginning October 4 be observed as national fire prevention week, expressed great concern over the disclosure that during the last year there occurred the greatest fire losses in the history of the country.

"The time has come for the annual review of the nation's enormous waste, alike in human life and in property, and for the annual appeal for the lessening of this huge loss. I am informed that during 1924, fire caused the loss of approximately 13,000 lives and of property exceeding $48,000,000 in value. The figures are startling; they are yet more so when it is added that this is declared by competent authorities the greatest fire loss in any year of our history.

"This waste results from conditions which justify a sense of shame and sorrow; for the greater part of it could and ought to be prevented. Not only was the 1924 fire loss greater than that of any preceding year, but the loss for the first half of 1925 exceeded that for the like period of 1924. As a result of careful inquiries, I am informed that whereas the absolute as well as the per capita fire loss of this country tends to increase from year to year, the same losses in comparable European countries tend to decrease. For the most recent comparable periods fire losses in Great Britain are calculated at less than $1 per capita per annum, while those of the United States are placed at approximately $5 per capita. Comparisons with other European countries are similarly to our discredit.

"It is highly desirable that every effort be made to reform the conditions which have made possible so vast a destruction of the national wealth. To this end for a long time past it has been customary to set aside a week in each year, during which the need of fire prevention may be emphasized. It is important that this practice be continued.

President Is Almost Run Down by Careless Autoist

WISCONSIN HAPPENINGS

Important News of the Badger State Arranged in Condensed Form

Green Bay—Clarence L. Arnold of Big Sturgeon, Brown county, has been granted a patent on a cheese preserving process. His invention is a process of producing canned cooked cheese. This cheese is made from the curd of skimmed milk, or buttermilk. It is the cheese generally known as "cottage." The cheese prepared by Mr. Arnold will keep fresh indefinitely in hermetically sealed cans, according to the inventor. Before Mr. Arnold worked out his formula it was impossible to preserve this cheese for more than about two weeks. The cheese could be made only for immediate use and distribution to a limited territory.

Milwaukee—Roy P. Wilcox, defeated candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator, withdrew as an independent candidate in the special senatorial election, leaving the regular republican field to Edward F. Dittmar, Baraboo, former lieutenant governor. The withdrawal of Daniel Woodward and Arthur Barry several days ago, and the withdrawal of Mr. Wilcox, leaves Mr. Dittmar alone in the independent field to oppose young Robert La Follette, the nominee.

Madison—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio and Pennsylvania will join in a suit against the state of Illinois and the sanitary district of Chicago to stop diversion of water from Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. Ekero has announced. The complaint will charge interference with navigation through lowering of lake levels, and a public nuisance through the dumping of sewage into the Chicago, Des Plaines and Illinois rivers. Injunctions will be asked affecting both canals.

Manitowoc—The Manitowoc Shipbuilding corporation has announced receipt of a contract for the building of a new steel carrier for the White Star line, work on which will be commenced at once. The boat, which will be used between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, is to be completed early next spring. It will be 375 feet long with 67-foot beam and will accommodate 50 freight cars.

Madison—Stanley Sklenski, 70, was bound over to circuit court in Manitowish to stand trial for murder in the first degree. He is charged with killing his stepfather, Joseph Dettich, of Niagara, Marinette county, during a family quarrel. The mother of the defendant testified that she had been married three times, her first husband having been murdered 10 years ago. Her second husband divorced her.

Marquette—The Ku Klux Klan held a meeting in a park in Marquette recently, charging admission at the gate. Although it had been predicted that thousands from 29 counties would participate in the grand parade, the crowd at the park was estimated at 1,500 to 2,000, while about 300 paraded through the street. The marchers were rebuffed, but not masked.

Madison—E. F. Benn, assistant state geologist, will fill the post of state geologist temporarily, succeeding W. O. Hotchkiss, who becomes president of the Michigan College of Mines. Mr. Benn's salary will be $5,000 a year. This action was taken by the geological survey commission on suggestion of Gov. Blaine as a means of later choosing a man for the position.

RADIO

By PETER MOMBELLO, in New York Herald-Tribune.

Very often a radio set, especially if it is one of the popular radio-frequency type, will not work very well on DX stations, even after the fan has taken great care in making the proper arrangement of coils, spacing, soldering, etc. This is very often due to the fact that the set builder does not recognize any difference in the way that the four leads from the tuned coupler and audio transformers are connected.

It should be pointed out that every coil in a set is at a high potential at one end and at a low potential at the other end. This potential difference is necessary for a flow of electricity. For example, in a primary coil the end connected to the aerial is at a high potential while the side connected to the ground is at a low potential. A current can thus flow through this coil from the side of high potential to the side of low potential. In so doing a magnetic field is set up about the coil, which is constantly rising and falling with the reversals of the radio-frequency currents flowing through the primary since this is an oscillating circuit. The changes in the magnetic field induce a current in the secondary coil, which also changes direction as many times as there are reversals in the primary coil.

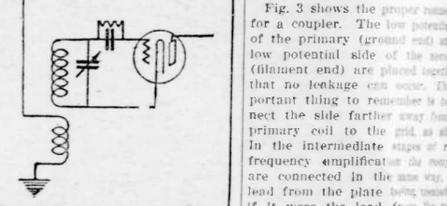

Fig. 1—Showing the Primary Circuit Incorrectly Connected.

Let us now go back to our idea of potential difference in a coil. The idea of potential is relative. A conductor is at a high potential with respect to some other part of the circuit which may be grounded and thus will be at a low potential. Also it has been shown that the end of a coil which is farther away from the source of current is the side of higher potential. Thus in the secondary coil the end that is farther away from the primary is the end of higher potential. Advantage should be taken of this fact and the proper connections made on a coupler so that the current from the aerial will flow through smoothly from end to end without any losses and that the end which is at the highest potential should be connected to the while to check them up and see that they are correct before connecting them, so as to save trouble in making reversals. The secondary in the side winding in the transformer, being wound over the primary, has two leads. The lead from the outer turns is farther away from the source, which is the primary, since it must be connected to the ground since it is the side of the highest potential.

The simplest means of fastening ends of wire when winding coils is to punch a few holes in the transformer to thread the wire through. This operation takes only a few minutes and involves only the use of a tool like a large sharpened nail or a center punch.

Counterpoise Will Cut Out Much Interference

When a set refuses to work on a low wave length, the cause is usually one of the following two points: The antenna resistance is too high or the antenna capacity is too high. In the former case the antenna oscillating circuit has such a large value of resistance that it cannot be induced to sustain oscillations; they are damped out. In the second case, the capacity is too high, and the antenna really acts as a short circuit to the vacuum tube oscillator circuit. A counterpoise will remedy this trouble, as it will reduce both antenna resistance and capacity. At the same time it will be the equivalent of a perfect ground, and it will enable the operator to have almost double the radiating surface that is presented by an ordinary antenna and ground system. For best results a counterpoise should be stretched underneath the antenna, near the ground, but not touching it; its area should be equal to or more than the area of the antenna itself. Good results, however, may be obtained with a counterpoise consisting of another antenna just like the one that runs up in some direction and is used instead of the ground. A counterpoise will also improve the tuning both for receiving and transmitting, and will, up to a certain point, cut out a great deal of interference. When a good ground cannot be obtained, a counterpoise offers the best solution.

Wave Lengths

A wave length is that distance measured from the crest of one wave to the crest of the next. A radio wave measures approximately tens of a mile between the crests of the waves. A 300-meter wave is about one-quarter of a mile. Eight hundred and thirty-three 360-meter waves pass a given point a second.

high on the topmost wave. And so before long—my thought a mother to the thing, I suppose—it really seemed to me I saw her, the Ocean Rider, a lovely, slim, white woman triumphant on the waves. I worshipped it. It was a god to me. I have only been able to work on it when the passion is hot upon me, so it has been a very slow thing. A dozen times, in a storm, I have gone off to the islands to do another bit on the Ocean Rider. It isn't right yet. The ocean is good enough, but the Rider—I haven't quite got it. There was brooding discontent in Theresa's voice. "The light in her eyes—It's not right. I wonder, Jerry—"

Theresa shook her head. "Not right, it's her eyes. I've known it all the time—that is, I've felt there was something lacking. And when I saw you, I knew what it was. She must have the light in her eyes that you had when you came first to the city, as you were when I saw you first. I shall never forget it—that sort of radiant assurance. Look! Her eyes are too deep, they are too subtle for a free woman."

Jerry flushed. "Theresa, that is irony! Eyes like mine for a free woman! Why, I don't know what freedom is. I haven't the nerve to find out when I have a chance. I am bound hand and foot—to conventions—to convictions—to Prudence."

Theresa smiled at her gentle defiance. "Yes, that is what I mean. You don't find that blithe and buoyant confidence, that triumphant joyousness of surety, in freedom itself. Only in the pursuit of it. In eyes that have seen freedom"—she waved a light hand toward her Ocean Rider—"like this, subtle, understanding, inscrutable."

herself together, dimpled, used the long lashes to the best possible effect. "She's tired, poor thing," she said sympathetically. "You must excuse her. She works so hard, you know."

Jerry went about a great deal, sometimes with Mimi. She was not fond of Mimi, but enjoyed her immensely. She was a constant source of gay delight, with her pretty vanities and boasted conquests, where Theresa was like a brooding pain to her. She laughed at Mimi, but in her heart she wept aloud over soul and body-worn Theresa.

Theresa Allerton sent her flowers. Rhoda, in such a case, would have tossed them from her window in "300" scorn. Theresa could have crushed them to crumpled petals between her bare hands, the thorns of them pricking her skin to crimson. Jerry looked at them, gave them to Mimi. He wrote to her. Jerry read the notes, and tore them up. She never thought of returning them to him, unopened, although she knew from whom they came. That would have been too dramatic, too theatrical, for her. The waste basket served her purpose well enough.

One afternoon she saw him. She was dancing at tea at the Billmore with Mimi and two young friends of hers, boys fresh from college. One was exuberantly infatuated with Jerry, and she, in mischief, had set herself to tantalize him to the limit of her charm. In the midst of her pretty coquetry she looked up suddenly, and saw Duane Allerton at a table across from them, sitting with a woman, very lovely, very sophisticated, very young. "Franny," Jerry thought at once.

Mimi would have rebuked her attentions to the young admirer, to what Allerton's interest, to his jealousy. Jerry could not do that, she did not even think of it. She yielded to the natural hush that swept over her at seeing him, and sat, a subdued and softened figure, with the others at the table. She knew his eyes remained steadily on her face. She knew he marvelled that she permitted the silly exaggeration of this ardent boy's devotion, and yet repulsed his own meek advances. Jerry herself did not know why she did.

CHAPTER VI
Jerry Meets a Genius.

Jerry's slender hand upon the flimsy banister of the stairway grew suddenly tense so that the blue veins stood out clearly upon the delicate whiteness of her skin.

What is here narrated took place years ago, and all concerned have since passed away except the reporter mentioned—and he is not so young as he used to be.

A prominent woman had passed away. In one of the Georgia cities. The local newspaper sent a reporter to see her son, a leading business man, to get the data for the obituary notice. After the reporter had secured most of the information desired he asked:

"Did your mother leave any brothers or sisters?"

"Rather a singular question," said the man courteously, his curiosity obviously excited. "Queer that I had never thought of that before. Let's see—did mother leave any brothers or sisters?"

He considered it for a moment, but it was evidently too much for him, and calling his sister from an adjoining room he asked:

"O, Mary, did mother leave any brothers or sisters?"

It seemed that she did—two, to be specific—and their names were duly supplied.

"I declare, this is news to me," said the man, speaking frankly to the reporter, in the freedom of old friendship. "I had never suspected it."—Atlanta Constitution.

The color of the flowers of the shiny-leaf hydrangea is variable and seems to be dependent on the acidity or alkalinity of the soil. An abundance of lime produces pink in the flowers, while blue is produced by acid conditions which may be augmented by the use of alum, rusty iron or iron filings. Too much lime will check the growth of the plants and cause a yellowing. Treatment for any effect needs to be begun a year before the result is desired.

Hardware for Home Is of Great Importance

Protection, convenience and decoration are uses of builders' hardware which require consideration on every building job. In most structures one of these factors, at least, is deemed of greater importance than the others although none should be neglected. All items of builders' hardware now give such efficient service that many builders are prone to devote too little attention to the selection of it.

In addition to its utility, builders' hardware should be chosen to harmonize with the character of the building into which it is placed. Manufacturers have, in recent years, produced hardware that is designed and executed with archeological accuracy for any style of home. Considering the simplicity of escutcheon plates, knobs, handles, hinges, etc., the wealth and profusion of designs applied to them are truly wonderful.

This is the contribution of builders' hardware makers to the progress of home building. Their accomplishments can be better appreciated by comparison of the builders' hardware of today with that of a generation ago. Locks and keys, for example, have been used since the early ages, but not until about sixty years ago was there notable improvement in their design, construction or ornamentation.

Locks are, perhaps, the oldest form of builders' hardware. The first ones were made of wood, some requiring keys three feet long. In the ruins of Nineveh were found some wooden specimens, although the early Egyptians used brass and iron—crudely wrought but nevertheless serving the purposes of their day.

Dust Painted Woodwork

Painted woodwork should, as far as possible, be kept clean by dusting rather than by washing, since the latter is harder to do and wears the paint much more rapidly. When washing becomes necessary it should be carefully done. It pays to wipe off dirt, such as that around door knobs, as soon as it appears. If we practice goodness, not for the sake of its own intrinsic excellence, but for the sake of gaining some advantage by it, we may be cunning, but we are not good.—Cleo.

Judgement for an evil thing is many times delayed some day or two, some century or two; but it is as sure as life, it is as sure as death!—Carlyle.

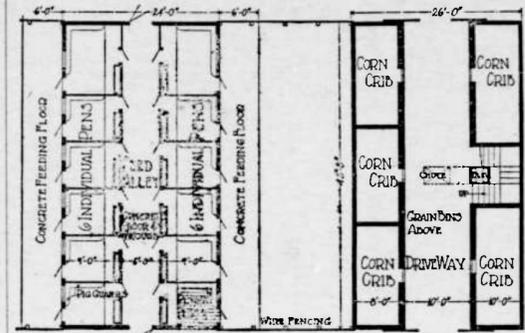

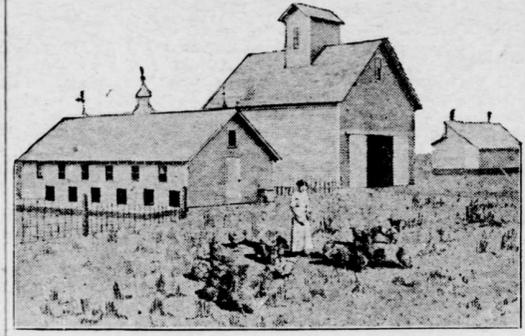

Use of Short Lumber

Through their failure to buy short lengths of lumber for the construction of small houses, many builders are losing money, both in the waste of materials and loss of time by carpenters, according to a report issued by the Department of Commerce.

These builders, who constantly buy the regular lengths for the construction of the house, lose money because their carpenters must spend time in cutting the lumber into smaller lengths, and that which is left over goes to waste because the builder has no new operation on which to use it.

A survey of the construction uses of short lengths of lumber was made by the Department of Commerce and the Central Committee on Lumber Standards to determine the practicability of buying short lengths of softwood lumber for use in the building of small and medium-size houses of lumber construction.

Radford, No. 1827 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

When big business executives plan new factory buildings they spend large amounts of money employing high-priced experts to study their manufacturing requirements in order that their buildings shall be properly grouped and the machinery within the buildings properly grouped to save time and labor in the progress of the manufacturing process.

The hog house is of the saw-tooth roof type and has sties 20 feet by 28 feet. It is large enough to house more than 100 hogs. There is an entrance at the front, at each end, which gives access through a passage to four separate rooms in which are provided roasts and nests. These are shut off from each other by doors. At the back, each of these rooms opens into a separate scratch floor which in turn opens onto an outside runway.

The poultry house is of the saw-tooth roof type and has sties 20 feet by 28 feet. It is large enough to house more than 100 chickens. There is an entrance at the front, at each end, which gives access through a passage to four separate rooms in which are provided roasts and nests. These are shut off from each other by doors. At the back, each of these rooms opens into a separate scratch floor which in turn opens onto an outside runway.

These three buildings are of similar construction all being frame construction with shingled roofs, and in addition to their practical utility they are built in the same style, which adds an air of neatness and efficiency to the whole group. This is an item not to be overlooked. It has a real value in the morale of farm employees. There is not a man, not even the farm owner himself, but that will work harder and better in an atmosphere of neatness and efficiency.

The hog house is of the gable-roof type and contains 12 farrowing pens, six along each side of the building, which are separated by a feed alley. The feed alley has a concrete floor and trough but the pens are all floored with planks. This building is 46 feet long and 24 feet wide and there is a concrete feeding floor, outside the walls, on each side of the building. Wire fencing at each side provides tight hog yards.

The initials N 2 H and the design are stamped on the lumber in Northern Hemlock—your favorite building lumber. The stamped initials and design are stamped on the lumber in Northern Hemlock—your favorite building lumber. The stamped initials and design are stamped on the lumber in Northern Hemlock—your favorite building lumber.

Northern Hemlock, as an all-round construction lumber, has long been favorably known for its immunity to dry-rot, an important factor in the service life of your buildings. Being free of resin, it takes and holds paints and stains perfectly.

Add to these natural qualities of native Hemlock, the guarantee of the Grade-Mark—responsible manufacture and rigid uniform grading at the mill with every piece plainly identified; that Northern Hemlock lumber is full standard size; that Northern Hemlock studding, rafters and joists are extra standard size, more wood and greater strength to the piece, assuring greater strength and rigidity to your buildings—and you'll appreciate the many advantages and investment value in Northern Hemlock construction.

Also, when you utilize the products of home industry, you contribute to the prosperity of your State and community upon which your income directly or indirectly depends. Prosperity, likewise, enhances property values.

Yes, any practical way you figure it, it pays to use Northern Hemlock. BUT—BUY BY THE GRADE-MARK. SAVE MONEY. Your Lumber Dealer will gladly assist you in selecting the right grade for the right purpose.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY PROCLAIMED

Madison, Sept. 18.—Gov. John J. Blaine pointed to the huge loss in life and property annually through fires in today proclaiming Oct. 9 as Fire and Accident Prevention day.

"Fire respects neither man, thing, place nor time; it is an enemy which never sleeps; it destroys the resources of field and forest, the products of human labor, the cottage and the palace, the shop and the factory; it robs employers of property and income and laborers of employment; it lays waste cities, country and forests; it calls for thousands of human victims each year mostly women children and dependents; it wastes and never creates, save smoke, ashes and misery," Gov. Blaine declared.

"Five hundred forty-eight million dollars in property and 15,000 human lives was the toll the nation paid to the fire fiend in 1924. Wisconsin's share of this waste of property is estimated at $70,000,000. Each year also from 75 to 100 humans perish in fires in Wisconsin, and many others are maimed and disfigured by fires. As life insurance does not bring back a life sacrificed, so fire insurance does not bring back the wealth wasted and destroyed by fire. Fire is a constant drain upon our resources; it raises costs, and places a heavy tax upon individuals, municipalities and the state.

"Most fires are preventable. They are due largely to carelessness and thoughtlessness. Fire prevention day and week are for the purpose of arousing thought and calling attention to the waste caused by fire and its economic results, and to methods of prevention.

"I earnestly recommend that on this day and during the week special exercises be held in all public, private and parochial schools, also public meetings under the auspices of the municipalities or of civil bodies to consider this needless waste of property, lives and manpower, through fire and accidents, and the best methods of prevention.

"I further urge that the week beginning Oct. 5 be devoted to clean-up work and the removal of fire hazards in homes, shops, factories and public buildings, and that the municipalities, the school, the pulpit, the press, civic bodies and citizens generally give their aid to make this worthy movement a success.

"I also urge that on Oct. 9 factories and department stores employing a considerable number of workers conduct a fire drill, and that all schools conduct the monthly fire drills and give definite instructions in fire and accident preventions, as required by laws."

BOYS' AND GIRLS' CLUB WORK PRAISED

Boys and Girls club work in Washington County this year was of a very high type as was made evident by the exhibits in the club departments at the County Fair.

The calf, corn, pig and garden crop, exhibits showed that much interest was taken in the work and by glancing over the club record books it is readily evident that many lessons were learned and much experience gained through participation in the projects. Unfortunately in club work, as in everything else, we find some who start a thing and do not follow it up to a finish. As a rule the type of individual who has gumption enough to start a club project finishes it and therefore, though some dropped along the wayside, most of the youngsters completed their project. The county fair patrons showed much interest in the club exhibits and when one remembers that they represent the endeavors of boys and girls from ten years old and over, they are really worthy of praise. "We must build our community with boys and girls", and how can we do it better than by teaching them, through experience, the problems in a small way, that will confront them in their lives when they take over the responsibilities that now rest upon your shoulders as parents.

Surely raising that acre of corn, or calf, or pig, does not afford or comprise an education for the youngster, but it does give him problems and if he is earnest in his endeavors to do his best, each problem solved and each difficult task accomplished is a lesson learned.

The ability shown in the corn and livestock judging contests show a knowledge of the principle feature to be taken into consideration in these matters, which I believe, would surprise many of the older folks if they were in competition in similar events.

The showman's contest for which all calf club members entered was quite a problem for the judges. Fine showmanship was portrayed by all of the boys and girls but two outstanding showmen were evident namely, John Piek, Hartford and Frederic Schroeder, West Bend. After much deliberation and many trials on leading and placing the judges awarded the prize to John Piek of Hartford.

In the corn judging contest Emil Zindars, West Bend and Bernice Grubbe, West Bend tied in the actual placing, each scoring 90, but Emil Zindars being more explicit in his reasons received first place and won the contest. The other winners are as follows: 2. Bernice Grubbe, West Bend. 3. Robt. Walter, West Bend. 4. Elda Grubbe, West Bend. 5. Fred Schroeder, West Bend. 6. Nelson Rodenkirch, Kewaskum. 7. Avis Albright, West Bend. 8. Wm. Molkenkin, Richfield. 9. Arthur Bauer, West Bend. 10. Julius Wegener, West Bend.

William Molkenkin, Richfield topped the livestock judging contestants with a score of 96. The other winners are as follows: 2. Roman Peters, West Bend. 3. Elda Grubbe, West Bend. 4. David Borchert, Richfield. 5. Avis Albright, West Bend. 6. Julius Wegener, West Bend. 7. Theo. Schoofs, Kewaskum. 8. Frederic Schroeder, West Bend. 9. Leslie Gerner, West Bend. 10. Erwin Theisen, Richfield.

The township corn club winners are as follows: First prize winners in each township is awarded a scholarship consisting of expenses for a week at Madison during club roundup week in spring.

SWEEPSTAKES—Oliver Arnold, Richfield, LaVerne Eisentraut, Random Lake, Clarence Wolf, Allenton.

The winners of the sweepstakes receive silver loving cups.

Though some did not receive prizes they are worthy of praise, as all club exhibitors had very good entries and to win premiums they had to be of outstanding quality. So to those of you who did not win premiums I will say that I appreciate your effort and I hope that you will come back with renewed zest next year and carry off the honors. I wish you success.
