SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

INDOMITABLE INDUSTRY

THE smiling bow-boy who thrills the hearts of young lads and lassies and warms the souls of sentimental mankind, from the budding sapling to the withered tree of old age, never misses an hour in pulling his bowstring and shooting his fatal arrows.

His work is so delightful, so exceedingly full of exquisite variation and change that the mere suggestion to him of a vacation would instantly sadden his cheerful countenance.

He finds his greatest happiness in indomitable industry.

He is constantly drawing his bow and twanging his string.

As fast as he flings an arrow the game dissolves into an eternity of bliss. Then other game comes over the hill and that, too, is hurried off to meet its joyous fate.

Since the day when Eve gave Adam the apple, and bade him eat, the bow-boy has kept steadily at his work. Neither the tide nor the wind is more regular in its performance.

He made his advent before the sun was dreamed of, yet he is directly responsible for more unions than any other agent on earth.

He works because of his love of work. He sticks to it for the all-sufficient reason that in employment he finds his own greatest delight.

The truth is that if he were to discontinue his occupation the world would soon lose its prized romance, its dreams of conquest, its visions of home, its tenderness, its stirring emotions and the immortality of love.

WHO SAID

"Resignation is a daily suicide."

WHEN one gives up fighting and resigns himself to his fate, he has, to all intents and purposes, committed suicide. That is the sum and substance of the words quoted above, which came from the pen of the great French writer, Honore de Balzac.

Balzac, who is famous as the author of many novels which rank as classics, was born at Tours, France, in the year 1799. Before completing his twenty-fourth year he had published a number of novels under various names de plume but none were attended by any great success. In the year 1820, he published his novel, "Le Dernier Chouan, a Tale of La Vendee." This was the first work to which he attached his name and the sensation which it aroused brought him fame.

A much greater degree of success attended the publication of Balzac's next work, "Physiologie de Marriage," which is noted for its pungent and caustic observations on human nature. All the works of Balzac are characterized by the close observation of human nature which is to be noted in this work. The genius of Balzac is marked by his distinct, although sometimes exaggerated, delineation of character.

Among the best-known works of this writer are, "Scenes de la Vie Paroissienne," "Scenes de la Vie de Province," "Le Pere Goriot" and "Le Medicin de Campagne."

The last named work translated is "The Country Doctor," the publication of which brought Balzac into correspondence with the Countess Eveline de Hanski. This woman is the "Polish Lady" to whom Balzac dedicated his "Moderate Mignon," written in 1844. Fifteen years later he was united in marriage with this same heroine of his literary work.

Balzac's death occurred in the year 1850.

THINGS DESIRED

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WITH all things unattainable, I used to dream the maddest things: I, too, would have a citadel amid the company of kings.

When not a thing a man may wish, Why dream of that? Nay, dream of stone!

And build your castles all a gleam, For, after all, it's all a dream.

Yet, for the merry and the bold, the poorest fortunes often mend: One day I found a pot of gold awaiting at the rainbow's end.

When I might dream a thing or two, Why, almost anything come true, When one so poor was rich again, What think you that I dreamed of then?

With all things unattainable, I used to dream of castled kings; But now, it's rather strange to tell, I dream of very simple things: When anything I well might own, I do not dream of walls of stone, For now I want a roof of thatch, A humble home, and friends to match.

SCHOOL DAYS

Your Last Name

IS IT POLK?

SIX of the Presidents of the United States have been of Scotch-Irish origin. There have been three pure Scotch, one Welsh and two Dutch. The rest as far as paternal ancestry goes have been English.

James K. Polk was one of the six Scotch-Irish. He was born in Mecklenburg county, North Carolina, one of the ten children of a farmer whose ancestors had come to this country in the eighteenth century. It is no wonder that we look in books of the surnames of the British Isles for Polk. The fact is that the ancestral name of the eleventh President of the United States was not Polk at all, but Pollock.

Pollock and Pollock are said to have been given first to a native of Poland and to prove this authorities cite the fact that Shakespeare, in the opening scene of the first act of Hamlet, uses the word in this way.

MANN—This may be a surname of the nickname class. Mann was used very frequently in the sense of servant or retainer. Thus we speak of master and man. If there were two men named John, one retained by the other, they would have been spoken of as John Master and John Man. This is an explanation of the name Mann. In other cases it may be a local name derived from Le Mans, in France.

AYRE—This name is said to have had derivation from a word meaning bear.

LEWIS—This is one of the most usual of surnames derived from first names, and it is said that the frequency of it in Wales is due to the fact that it was used as an equivalent of the very popular Llewellyn.

RADIO

Diagram Showing Arrangement for the Prevention of Oscillation in R. F. Sets, Using the "Anostat" Combination Control.

By HARRY J. MARX, in New York Herald-Tribune.

Resistance is an inseparable factor in all electrical circuits. It may not be there in the form of a rheostat, potentiometer or other piece of resistance apparatus, but every part of the circuit, whether it is just copper wire, connections, condensers, coils or any other unit, has some resistance value. It may be great or small, as the case may be, but it exists and is a factor in the circuit. Copper wire is a good conductor, meaning its resistance is low, while a noncondenser simply means something that has a very high resistance.

Present-day radio apparatus is so designed as to reduce as far as practical all resistance in the tuned circuits.

Oscillation.
This elimination of surplus resistance permits much sharper tuning and, therefore, improves selectivity. But in radio-frequency circuits it multiplies the tendency of tubes to go into oscillation, producing the assortment of squeals, howls and whistles which not only come out of the loud speaker, but back up and go out in the air to play havoc with the neighbors' reception.

The old and incorrect practice was to add a potentiometer in the secondary circuit of the radio-frequency stages. This was equivalent to replacing the resistance back into the apparatus. It reduced the oscillation tendency, but it likewise killed the selectivity that was desired and in addition materially reduced the volume. Resistance should not be added where it becomes an integral part of the radio-frequency circuit.

The fundamental cause of oscillation is due to a great extent to the amount of voltage across the plate circuit. If this voltage is controlled so that it can be adjusted to a value just below the point where oscillation starts then radio-frequency amplification can be used to full advantage. But this control must not be such as to add resistance in the tuned circuits.

Plate Voltage Control.
Oscillation can be effectively prevented if a variable resistance is connected in series between the plate or primary coils of the radio-frequency transformers and the "B" battery to prevent oscillation by reducing the plate voltage on the radio-frequency tubes. Now, by connecting a one-half mfd. condenser between the "B" terminal of the primary on the radio-frequency transformers and the filament terminal of the tubes, this artificial resistance can be shunted out of the tuned circuit. This condenser closes the plate circuit to the filament of the tube for the radio-frequency currents. In other words, on account of the condenser these currents do not have to pass through the resistance—hence the resistance does not affect the tuning and selectivity.

This variable resistance provides a means of reducing the plate voltage and therefore controls oscillation. This means of controlling oscillation was first utilized commercially by E. F. Andrews in the dodecahedral receiver.

The "Anostat" Engineers have now developed the use of this bypass plate circuit resistance as a volume control, as well as an oscillation control. This is done by using an extremely high variable resistance having a maximum value of several megohms. The circuit is just the same as for the control of oscillation. The first part of the resistance can be used for oscillation control, and the high resistance part for controlling volume. Volume can thus be adjusted without the slightest distortion, and with great saving in "B" battery current.

A combination control which may be used for this purpose is known as the "anostat."

"Kilocycle" Is Taking Place of "Wave Length"

A new word, "kilocycle," gradually is taking the place of the word "wave length" in the vocabulary of radio fans.

The Department of Commerce has explained that the marking or logging of dials is found to have certain advantages in the new term "kilocycle," which means frequency, or the number of waves per second.

"Just as a musician," the department said, "can vary the number of oscillations of his vocal cords, but cannot control the length of the sound waves, so a radio station can vary the number of oscillations per second, and let the wave lengths be what they will."

"To obtain the frequency when the wave length in meters is known divide 300,000 by the wave length in meters. The answer is in kilocycles. Likewise, the other way round, divide 300,000 by the number of kilocycles to get meters."

Tube Is Not Governed by Brilliance of Filament

The effective operation of any vacuum tube is not governed by the brilliance of the filament. As a matter of fact, one should never use the brilliance of the filament as an indicator that the tube is working properly. Modern vacuum tubes have a coating placed over the filament which greatly increases the electron emission. The filament merely serves as a heater to generate the emission of electrons. One will find that with tubes using the coated filament the life of the tubes is not governed by the filament burning out, but by the loss or deterioration of the coating on the filament. When this happens the tubes will remain lit, but no signals will be heard.

Voltmeter, Hydrometer, and How to Use Them

Although a test with a hydrometer is the only sure way to tell the state of charge of a storage battery of the lead acid type, a voltmeter is also a fairly good indicator if you know how to use it. The instruction cards that accompany most storage batteries give the voltage which each cell should have when fully charged with the charging current still on, but these instructions usually neglect to mention that this maximum voltage depends on the charging rate. If you wish to rely on a voltmeter to tell you the condition of your storage battery, check your voltmeter readings with a hydrometer until you are sure of the voltages that indicate charge and discharge for your own particular battery and the charging rate you are using.

Conflicting Signals

Distortion present on distant stations is not uncommonly caused by interfering signals, and not by any fault in the receiving set. The other waves may not have enough force to produce an audible signal, but quite enough to chop up the sounds from the station to which the receiver is tuned.

Insulation

An insulated wire will pick up the broadcast program just as easily as a bare wire, as the waves penetrate the covering without the least difficulty. If the lead-in is insulated it will act as a part of the aerial.

Speaker Connections That Will Vary Pitch

Many radio listeners find that the pitch of the music received is above or below normal. An impedance placed in the speaker circuit will raise the pitch. With a switch to cut in condensers of different sizes as shown, the pitch may be varied at will.

Three changes are shown, the upper position with the smallest condenser giving the higher pitch. The lower position with impedance and condensers cut out and battery feed through

Seldom Work Together

Radio frequency and regeneration seldom work together for the simple reason that the set becomes unstable and extremely hard to handle. Adding only one stage of radio frequency to an ordinary regenerative set is a pure waste of time, as the regeneration action is fully as good as one stage of radio.

Switch to Cut in Condensers to Control Pitch

The speaker gives the lowest tone. The switch requires two arms, the contact give clearance from the upper. The inner contacts should be smaller than the outer and spaced as close as possible to each other.—Radio Digest.

Friends for Long Had Laugh on Sportsman

A good story is going the rounds in London regarding an experience that befell Sir William Harcourt when he was shooting in the Scottish Highlands with J. E. Millais. According to Mr. Millais, Sir William was strolling about one evening when he spied a magnificent horned beast grazing peacefully on a little hill. In the gloaming it looked like a stag of fine proportions, and without pausing to examine it through a glass, he rushed into the house, and, seizing a rifle, advanced upon his quarry with all the stealth and cunning of an accomplished stalker. The crucial moment came at last. His finger was on the trigger, and the death of the animal a certainty, when a raucous Highland voice belted in his ear: "Ye're no gaen to shure the meenister's goat, are ye?"

LITTLE LADIES IN WARM ATTIRE; PARIS SHOWS GENIUS IN HATS

ADDED to the usual staple shades used for coats, the five, warm colors of this season are chosen for young girls—the wine and copper tones, new blue greens and reds. It is a featured material in both coats and dresses and is often used in combination with other goods—nothing is prettier in the warm brown and strong blue tones, or in the new, deep maroon, called "Black Prince." Kasin is among the popular.

What has made them what they are today and which of their several charms has contributed most to the tremendous success of those small velours and felt hats that fill so much of the millinery horizon? They are the darlings of the mode and fate has been kind to them; for their success is not transitory—they are here to stay for some time.

Paris reveals its genius in the group of six chic hats, in fine velours or felt, that are at once so simple and so superior. It takes a good grade of soft velours, or felt, to get the best lighter-weight clothes and there are several smooth-surfaced weaves available among the goods mentioned—all suited to the dressier styles in coats for children. Heavier and coarser cloths are used for utility coats.

Nearly all the dressier coats boast a fur collar and fur is generously used on garments for girls in the last half of their teens. The coat shown in the picture is typical good style for younger misses, and speaks for itself. It is made of suede cloth in a warm brown shade—with hat to match. This pretty affair has an ornament at the front, set with a dark topaz jewel—of the millinery sort—thus paying tribute to the fashion, set by Queen Mary, of wearing a jewel on a plain hat. The coat-and-hat-to-match idea deserves effects—that is the most becoming lines and most pleasing colors. Even so, hats of this kind are not extravagant in price and they stand much wear. Just at present there is a fad for gold in colors, applied figures and other trimmings, on felt and velours hats, but the variety of ways for adorning them is endless. In the hat at the upper left, two slashes are cut in the crown of the right side and one at the left. Both of satin emerge from the lower slash, and form a collar across the front, disappearing in the slash on the left side. Another slash allows three folded ends to escape, and lest we forget to notice this bit of artistry, small embroidered figures are placed by the slashes. The soft velours hat at the right is among the success it has made, having the chic that belongs to ensembles.

Coats for girls from sixteen to twenty employ more lavish fur trimmings and feature the season's new style in trimmings, new styles in collars and revers, and even the introduction of side plaques of fur and pyramid cuts. But these are all discreetly used—especially for sweet sixteen—whose charm is dimmed whenever she is overdressed.

Flares Give Grace

The addition of flares achieves a fluid grace that is distinctive of the new fashions and adds immeasurably to their charm and interest. Never have materials been richer or more beautiful and never have colors been lovelier. The vibrant tones of wine red, deep green, browns and tans as well as blues that are intense, but never crude, are chosen for the new fashions and are strikingly smart when used in the development of coats. One of the handsomest of the latest models is made of a velvety surfaced woolen in the new shade of gracklehead blue and is trimmed with gray wool.

Raspberry Red a New Shade

A shade of red that is being seen a great deal in millinery fashions is the deep tone of ripe raspberries. Hats of this shade are particularly lovely when made of fine straw faced and banded with velvet the same color, or with a single large flower of a corresponding tone.

True happiness leaves no reactions. The mind is at rest with itself and the consciousness is filled with the joy of living.—David Starr Jordan.

SEASONABLE FOODS

As beef loaf is still a very popular and economical meat to serve, as there is no waste, it will probably continue to be served on our tables, at church suppers and at outings. The following is a good one to try:

Beef Loaf.—Take one pound of the round of beef and one pound of fresh pork—both well mixed after chopping—add two beaten eggs, one cupful of bread crumbs, one cupful of tomatoes strained to remove seeds, salt and pepper to taste, with a teaspoonful of finely minced parsley and a few dashes of cayenne. Roll into a loaf, place in a one-loaf bread pan and bake one hour, basting occasionally.

Rice Pudding.—Take one-fourth of a cupful of rice, wash and put into a baking dish with one-third cupful of sugar, a handful of raisins, a pinch of salt and a grating of nutmeg and a quart of milk. Bake in a slow oven, stirring at first, then brown. Serve with a hard sauce using nutmeg as flavoring. If the milk is skimmed or not rich add a tablespoonful or two of butter, for richness.

If you are fond of codfish be sure to serve:

Codfish Chowder.—Shred half a pound of soaked salt fish and parboil for a few minutes to remove the salt. Dice one-fourth of a pound of fat salt pork into half inch dice, fry until brown in the chowder kettle, add three sliced onions, six sliced potatoes and cover with boiling water. Cook until the vegetables are tender then add the codfish and one quart of scalding milk, six milk crackers and such seasoning as one's taste desires. Serve hot, a cracker to a bowl. This dish is especially good served for luncheon or supper on a chilly night.

Banana Lemon Whip.—Boil together two cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water and the grated yellow rind of a lemon until it boils. Soften one-half of a package of gelatin in cold water and add to the hot sirup. Stir until dissolved, then add the sifted pulp of four ripe bananas, mixed with the juice of two lemons. Pour all into a large bowl to cool, and when the edges begin to harden beat the mixture with a large sized Jovay egg beater, continuing to beat until the whole is creamy. Pour into a mold and chill, or serve piped into sherbet glasses.

Lobster Chowder.—Remove the meat from a two-pound lobster and cut into small dice. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add the liver (the green part), and two milk crackers; scald a quart of milk with a slice of onion and add milk to the lobster. Cook the body bones ten minutes in water to cover, strain and add to the chowder. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Autumn Dishes.

A delicious and nourishing soup to serve for luncheon, dinner or supper on a chilly day:

Veal and Sage Soup.—Chop fine two and one-half pounds of lean veal. Cover with three quarts of water and bring slowly to the simmering point and simmer two hours, skimming occasionally; strain and reheat.

Soak one-fourth of a pound of pearl sage one-half hour in cold water, stir into the hot stock and cook thirty minutes or until the sage is perfectly clear; now add two cupfuls of scalded milk and pour slowly on four egg yolks slightly beaten. Season with salt.

Salmon Supper Dish.—Heat a can of salmon, turn out on a hot platter, removing the skin and bones and tending slightly with a fork. Around the salmon heap fried, well-seasoned mashed potatoes, and around the potatoes pour a rich white sauce, using two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour to a cupful of rich milk; cook until thick and season well with salt and cayenne. Serve at once.

Lamb Chops With Pork.—Remove the fat from six chops cut two inches thick. Wrap round each a thin slice of fat salt pork—fresh will do—overlapping and fastening well with a wooden toothpick. Place on a greased broiler and cook until the meat is well done. Season with salt and pepper, spread with butter and let stand in the oven for three minutes. Remove to a hot platter and garnish with parsley.

Bread and Butter Pudding.—Spread slices of bread with butter and arrange them butter-side down in a buttered baking dish. Beat three eggs slightly, add one-half teaspoonful of sugar, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, and one quart of milk; strain and pour over the bread. Let stand thirty minutes. Bake one hour in a slow oven, covering the first half of the baking. Serve with hard sauce. Cream four tablespoonfuls of softened butter with a cupful of powdered sugar added gradually; add a tablespoonful of cream and enough grated nutmeg to flavor.

Old English Law Based on Bible

"Benefit of clergy" was a privilege once enjoyed by the clergy of England, whereby they were exempted from civil punishment. The origin of this exemption is unknown, but the custom was probably based on the text: "Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm" (I Chron. 16:22; Ps. 105:15). Edward I in 1274 extended this privilege to all laymen that could read. Such a criminal could not be put to death, but was to be branded on the left hand. The first verse of Psalm 50 was chosen as the reading test, and hence was known as the "neck verse." In 1601, this privilege was extended to women. The privilege eventually became a dead letter; it was variously restricted and finally in 1827 in the reign of George IV, it was abolished altogether.—Kansas City Star.

Output of Stockings

One stocking for every person in the United States is manufactured in the month; 56,639,052 pairs were manufactured in June, 1925, of which 15,950,448 were silk and 24,354,768 cotton.

An Unflattering Light

William Jennings Bryan, a few days before his death in Dayton, told a correspondent:

"So you think that all this limelight is doing me good, eh? Well, a lot of it makes me feel like a doctor."

"Oh, George," said the doctor's wife, "and so you're actually saved old Mr. Million?"

"Yes," said the doctor. "I'm happy to say old Million is now out of danger."

"Oh, George," she said, "what a marvelous doctor you are. Oh, if I had only known you seven years ago. I'm sure that under your skillful treatment my poor first husband, Harry McMaisters, would have been alive today."

Sunday Schools

There are more than a quarter of a million Sunday schools in active operation in the world, attracting an attendance of more than 30,000,000 pupils. North America is ahead of other continents in this census, with some 150,000 schools and 20,000,000 pupils. Europe has fewer than 70,000 schools and about 8,000,000 pupils. Asia ranks next with 30,000 schools and 13,000,000 pupils.

Two Letters

The first written twenty years ago, the second recently by Mrs. J. L. Bourland, Frankston, Texas.

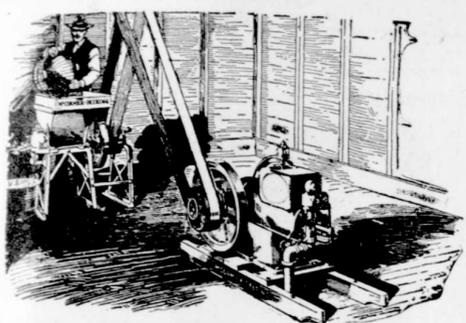

June 2, 1904, she writes:—

"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucous into my throat causing frequent expectoration. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy good health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good done. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders. Send 4 cents postage to the PER-UNA COMPANY, Columbus, Ohio, for book on catarrh. Pe-ru-na is either tablet or liquid. (1925) 449 9997/whp

PEACE IN BALKANS ORDERED BY LEAGUE

France, Britain and Italy Support Council's Move.

Paris.—France and Great Britain, supported by Italy—the most powerful combination of force which Europe possesses—working with the machinery of the League of Nations council, ordered Greece and Bulgaria to withdraw their forces behind their own national boundaries within sixty hours. This ultimatum also calls on the Balkan belligerents to give the withdrawal orders to their troops within twenty-four hours.

French, British and Italian military attaches from both Sofia and Athens have been ordered to meet at the Yugo-Slavian town of Nish, near the scene of the hostilities, and proceed from there to observe and report directly to Paris whether the two forces have been called out under the terms of the ultimatum.

The council met in the famous Hall of the Clock in the foreign office, where the peace negotiations were first opened in 1919 by Woodrow Wilson, Georges Clemenceau, David Lloyd George and the other plenipotentiaries. It was here that Wilson first offered the idea of the league covenant and it was here that the greatest powers within the league threatened Greece and Bulgaria with the consequences of Article XI of this document unless peace were re-established within sixty hours.

Foreign Minister Briand, president of the council, and Foreign Secretary Chamberlain, who came from London for the meeting, were practically only spokesmen at the session. Both public and private sightings were held. It was at first suggested that Athens and Sofia be given forty-eight hours to return from behind the frontiers, but Mr. Chamberlain insisted that this time be cut in half.

Likewise, during the private sitting he declared that unless satisfactory action followed the council's orders, he would immediately consult his government looking toward the use of the British fleet in carrying out the sanctions provided in such cases. In its resolution, which in part orders the opposing states to withdraw behind their own frontiers within the time limit, the council also states that it has inquired of the parties as to whether their obligations under Article XII of the covenant—not to resort to war—have been fulfilled, since the council "considers them to be of vital importance and an essential preliminary to any subsequent action by the council on any of the other aspects of the dispute."

ESTATE TAX REPEAL URGED BY GOVERNORS

Tell House Body States Are Entitled to Revenue.

Washington.—Repeal of the federal estate tax was urged by the governors of six states, representatives of thirteen others and speakers for the American Bankers' association and the National Committee on Inheritance Taxation at a hearing before the house committee on ways and means.

The governors' chief argument was that the state was entitled to the revenue from its own estates. Other arguments advanced by them can be summarized in the address of Frederic A. Delano, speaking for the National Committee on Inheritance Taxation. Mr. Delano advocated the following ten points:

1. Making inheritance taxes substantially uniform throughout the United States.
2. Making inheritance tax rates stable.
3. Making inheritance tax rates moderate.
4. Enacting legislation at the coming session of congress repealing the federal estate tax. This repeal to take effect in six years.
5. Immediate downward revision of the rate structure of the federal estate tax, with the maximum rate of 15 per cent.
6. Extension of the credit provision of the present law so as to allow a credit of all inheritance taxes paid to the several states up to 80 per cent of the federal tax.
7. Abolition of the gift tax.
8. Substitution by the states of an estate tax law in place of the succession tax laws now generally employed.
9. Abandonment of the multiplicity of taxation of the same property.
10. The taxation of intangible personal property only in the state of domicile of the decedent.

Lieut. Doolittle Flies 235 Miles an Hour—Wins Schneider Trophy.

Ray Shore Park, Baltimore, Md.—Lieut. James H. Doolittle, army pilot, kept the Jacques Schneider trophy in America in the world's premier seaplane classic. Displaying marvelous skill on the turns of the 50-kilometer triangular course and racing down the straightaway legs like a black bird of prey, Lieutenant Doolittle flung his somber little ship through the seven laps for a new Schneider time of 234.772 miles per hour for 200 kilometers and 235.036 for his maximum speed, the latter made on his last and fastest lap. The records will be presented to the Federation Aeronautique Internationale for recognition.

Records which Lieutenant Doolittle bettered were made by Lieut. Ralph A. Ofsite, U. S. navy, who flew 178.25 miles per hour, and by Capt. Henry C. Baird, whose speed of 226.752 miles per hour made in a trial flight at Southampton of England's supermarine Napier S-4, was recognized by the federation. The supermarine was entered in this race, but was wrecked in a practice flight here.

Yellowley, prohibition administrator for Illinois, who believed Asher might have been poisoned by some of his countless enemies among booze racketeers. Asher's operations, and his conduct in Peoria, Ill., was condemned by Circuit Judge T. N. Green as outrageous. The grand jury, charged to investigate Asher and his partner, Max Hartzig, indicted them for assault, for larceny, and for robbery. The indictments still are pending, and the agents were to stand trial this week.

If Mark Twain Came to Kewaskum

---he might be tempted to remark about our town---as he did about the weather ---"Everybody talks and talks---and talks but nobody does anything."

Our great human weakness is "good intentions without action." Every citizen is more or less guilty on this count in regard to the development of Kewaskum. Our intentions are the best. We all want a bigger and better town—but so far in this generation a majority of our good intentions have ended in talk only. It is now time for action.

The object of this ad is to urge action. It is a call for an awakening of all citizens to their individual responsibilities in making ours a bigger and better town.

Unless your good intentions and desires to see Kewaskum develop and grow are backed by personally living up to all of the rules—then our town is weakened at that point. One slacker may do little harm—but one hundred slackers do untold damages in retarding our town's progress.

Boosting Kewaskum is a habit easily acquired—if you will but look for the good things here and the privileges we enjoy. When you speak a good word for the town in which you live; its business houses; its homes; and your neighbor's, you interest others—you attract them to your town, and to yourself. So much for that.

Trading at home—buying all your necessities, luxuries and pleasures here at home is often another thing. And it should not be so—because it is the very foundation stone upon which better towns are built. More business means more money in circulation; bigger business houses; better jobs; more pay; bigger and better schools; bigger churches—and for you who own your own home or farm—increased realty values.

Money spent at home, means—your neighbor's profit on your purchase puts him in a position to pay you a profit on that commodity you have for sale—whether it be a home; a shirt, an egg—or YOUR LABOR.
