CAST FINISHING UP REHEARSALS

The cast, under the able supervision and direction of Miss Marie Bezdol, who for the past four weeks have been hard at work rehearsing the three-act comedy play, "Getting Acquainted With Midge," are finishing their strenuous work of rehearsing the same. The play will be given under the auspices of the Kewaskum High School Dramatic Club, and will be staged on Friday and Saturday evenings, February 12 and 13, at the High School Auditorium. The proceeds will go towards the school and will be used to buy scenery for the stage. The play is a comedy from the start to finish, and under the able and efficient coaching of Miss Bezdol, who is a dramatic instructor, and who has in the past supervised some of the successful plays given in Kewaskum, together with a well selected cast, gives promise that the entertainment will offer an enjoyable and wholesome one for all. The plot of the play is absolutely different from any other given by the High School. The first act takes place in Arthur's rooms near the University, Braxton, Pa., 8 o'clock Friday night. He receives an expected visit from two lady callers one of whom he decides to scrape acquaintance with Midge loses letter written to her cousin Jerry which is found by Sam Forbush one of the Braxton students. The curtain falls students decide to spend the week-end in Kingsdale where they intend to meet Midge.

The second act takes place in the dining room of the Ridgeway home, Kingsdale, Pa., 4 o'clock the next afternoon. The Ridgeway home is visited by four students personifying prominent men. They create a mysterious atmosphere and all seem intent upon gaining Midge's consent to the Thanksgiving football game. They become involved in many laughable and humiliating disasters. The third act takes place in the Ridgeway home the same day, about an hour later. With the aid of aunt Minnie and Jerry the boys extricate themselves from a very embarrassing position. All ends well for the students gain Midge's friendship and Arthur Tilden receives her consent to go to the football game.

The time—Present. The cast of characters is as follows: Dr. Ormesby Ridgeway, ... Carl Mertz, Mrs. Alicia Ridgeway, his wife, ... Margaret Diesner, Midge, his daughter, ... Bernice Perschbacher, Jerry Saunders, Midge's cousin, ... Helen Schlosser, Aunt Minnie, Arthur's aunt from Montana, ... Hilda Windorf, Lizzie, the Ridgeway's maid, ... Margaret Miller, Arthur Tilden, Sam Forbush, Randolph Graham, Frank Ganer, Harry Neville, students attending Braxton University. Marc David Rosenheimer, Charles Miller, Marvin Martin, Jacob Schlosser, Henry Heidel, Burton, Arthur's servant, ... Philip Mc Laughlin, The managing committee is as follows: Coach, ... Miss Bezdol, General Manager, ... Cecilia Guth, Business Manager, ... Oscar Bogel, Advertisers, Allen Miller, Hanaford Shepard.

Property men, Harold Kocher, Quentin Peters, Make-up, Nelora Klein, Maye Little, Lorraine Boegle. Castmates, ... Alpha Mellahn, Admission: Adults 35 cents. Children, 20 cents. Reserved seats 50 cents. The reserved seats will be on sale on and after today, Saturday at noon, at the Edw. C. Miller Drug Store.

KEWASKUM'S LAST PARK DISAPPEARS

A deal was closed this week whereby Louis Bunkelman of this village purchased the South Side Park from Emil Werner. Mr. Bunkelman intends to raze the large dancing pavilion and use the lumber for building a house and chicken coops. The park will be changed into a chicken farm. Work of tearing down the hall has already been started and it is expected that by spring the chicken coops will be erected. By making this change, the last and oldest of Kewaskum's amusement parks passes into history. No doubt many years will pass by, if ever, when Kewaskum will again be able to boast of having a park and summer dancing pavilion, and as a result Kewaskum, which for many years has been the center of attraction for picnics, will be a thing of the past. We wish Mr. Bunkelman success in his new undertaking, but bemoan the fact that we are losing this popular amusement place.

HEADLINERS AT THE MOVIES

FLYING COWBOY PARACHUTES IN "TRIPLE ACTION"

A cowpuncher turned aviator. Such is the transition brought about by the demands of the movies in the career of Pete Morrison, late of the range and now of the screen. "Well," said Morrison when shown the script of "Triple Action" that called for him to do some dangerous flying, "if other fellows can take a chance in the air I guess I can."

"But it's not only flying you'll have to do," said Tom Gibson, his director, "but you've got to take a parachute and jump from that plane while it is in mid-air. We'll get a 'double' for you."

If Morrison had not already made up his mind to fly and make the jump the suggestion that he be given a "double" clinched his determination to do it.

"I've never used a 'double' yet," modestly replied Morrison, "and I don't intend to start in now. Bring on your plane."

And that is why in "Triple Action" Morrison quits his favorite horse Lightnin' for a time to take a seat in an aeroplane. Morrison is considered one of the most daring men in the movies and those who see his great Blue Streak-Lariat Production that will be screened at the Opera House. "Triple Action" is released through Universal.

Though Morrison takes his thrilling ride in the plane and does his daring leap with a parachute this does not mean that his admirers are deprived of seeing him in some of his great feats of horsemanship.

TO SHOW "ABRAHAM LINCOLN"

The charm and enchantment of the old South in the days before the devastation of the war came upon it—the days of Washington, Jefferson and the heroes of the Revolution; the days of Jackson and Clay, Calhoun, the Lees and their contemporaries; when plantations were fat with abundance and gentle folk held court at countless mansions, are called to life again in all their grace, romance and splendor in the greatest of all films, "Abraham Lincoln," which will be shown at the Opera House on Wednesday evening Feb. 10.

The whole world has felt the enchantment of Dixieland since the motion pictures and songs have carried its beauties to all climes and nations. In "Abraham Lincoln" signal honor has been done the history chroniclers, the immortal heroes and the wonderful women of the south, for the picture is an authentic historical document.

Robert Edward Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Jefferson Davis, and others who wrote their names high in the annals of the South's history, come again in living, breathing forms to thrill the hearts of those who adore their memory.

The story of the picture touches the south at Hodgenville, Ky., the birthplace of Lincoln; at New Orleans; at Richmond; City Point; Appomattox; Charleston, S. C.

PASSES CIVIL SERVICE TEST

Anthony V. Weasler of Campbellsport, a student in the Marquette University College of Engineering, was one of the fifteen students of that institution who passed the civil service examination for rodman given at the Milwaukee city hall, November 15, according to an announcement given out recently. The examination is compulsory for the Marquette students as part of the cooperative system of education at the university. 64 persons took the examination. The Statesman joins the many friends of Mr. Weasler in extending heartiest congratulations for his success.

DEATH OF FRANK DWORSCHAK

Frank Dworschak, a former resident of New Fane, who for the past 10 years made his home with his nephew Joseph Dworschak in South Milwaukee, died there on Friday, Feb. 29, as the result of a fractured skull which he sustained in a fall. Deceased was born March 27, 1853 in Bohemia. When two years of age he immigrated with his parents to America and settled at Milwaukee, later moving to New Fane, where he resided for a number of years, and where he was well acquainted. Deceased had attained the age of 73 years. He is survived by the following brothers: John Dworschak of Niagara Falls, Bartel of Marinette, Mathias of Arcadia, Andrew of New Fane and Joe of South Milwaukee. Peter and Anton died several years ago. The funeral was held on Tuesday, Feb. 2, with services in the Holy Trinity church, Milwaukee. Rev. Spatch officiated. Burial was made in the Holy Trinity cemetery at Kewaskum.

TO DELIVER INITIAL SERMON MARCH 7

Rev. Ernst Irion of Millersburg, Ohio, who on Sunday, December 5th, 1925, delivered two trial sermons at the Ev. Peace church, and who was accepted as pastor of the church by a unanimous vote, will deliver his first sermon here on Sunday, March 7th. It is expected that the reverend will move his family and household goods to this village, either the latter part of this month, or the first week in March. Rev. Irion, who comes here with the best of recommendations, is about thirty-nine years of age, and is a very able and convincing speaker. He made a very favorable impression among the members of the congregation and others whom he happened to get into contact with during his first visit to this village, all are anxiously waiting for the time to come when he will deliver his initial sermon. He no doubt will be greeted by a packed church. It is thought that his first sermon will be delivered in English.

La Crosse—Samuel McKown died at La Crosse four days before his one hundredth birthday. He had lived in La Crosse since 1854.

Janesville—By a vote of 31 to 11, the Jefferson county board adopted a resolution authorizing modification of the federal prohibition act to permit the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines.

Peshigo—Some one near Peshigo has been riding mail boxes in the Homestead district, one patron's box having been raided several times. The most recent offense was the stealing of a consignment of wool sent to a customer by an Appleton firm.

Madison—A method of determining the sex of newly hatched birds and foals has been developed by D. G. Steele, assistant in the department of genetics of the University of Wisconsin college of agriculture.

Madison—For the prevention of oyster-borne typhoid fever, the sale of oysters in Wisconsin will henceforth be safeguarded through rules and regulations promulgated and officially adopted by the state board of health. These are uniform with rules adopted by a number of other states, and will become effective upon official publication.

Ripon—A more stringent entrance requirement for students has been adopted by Ripon college, according to an announcement by Dr. Silas Evans, president of the institution. Letters will soon be sent to high schools notifying prospective students that they must effect a high standing in high school work if they wish to enter Ripon. The plan will be put into effect to raise the scholastic standard and to eliminate the backward student, who often is forced to leave school through failure.

Barron—Tourists from other states who visited Wisconsin in 1925 paid about $600,000 in gasoline taxes, according to Edward Gleason, Barron county highway commissioner. During the tourist season in 1925, about 8,000 automobiles entered the state every 24 hours, bringing 26,000 new tourists who spent $83,000 daily, Mrs. Gleason stated. He said that the Wisconsin gasoline tax last year brought $4,000,000 to the state.

Jefferson—Henry Traxler, city manager of Janesville, principal speaker at the January meeting of the Jefferson Civic association, traced the history of the different forms of municipal government and pointed out that other forms have been abolished while the city manager plan has been gaining. Success of the city manager plan, he said, was due to the businesslike manner in which a city is operated under it.

Madison—Boarders in private houses are members of the household when they use the telephone, the Wisconsin railroad commission holds. The commission has informed the Madison Telephone Co. that it "should consider all boarders in private boarding houses as members of the household." The decision exempts the boarders from paying a non-subscriber charge for using the boarding house telephone.

Oshkosh—An ordinance prohibiting the sale of milk, cream or milk or cream products from herds not tuberculin tested has been advanced to second reading by the Oshkosh city council. If passed, the ordinance is to take effect three months after ratification by the council. The movement was started and the ordinance drafted by Dr. A. H. Broche, local health commissioner.

Rhineland—Archie Sievwright, 80, a pioneer of northern Wisconsin and Oneida county's first sheriff, died suddenly in Green Bay, where he had lived for the last two years. Sievwright was a widely known timber cruiser and estimator. He was appointed sheriff by Gov. Rusk in 1886, when Oneida county was organized.

Fond du Lac—Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, will make two addresses in Fond du Lac on Feb. 5. He is scheduled to give the principal address in the evening at the formal opening of a new $500,000 high school addition. At noon he will address a joint meeting of the Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis and American Business clubs.

Oshkosh—A historical journal of letters in the handwriting of James Duane Doty, the first governor of Wisconsin, and owned by Mrs. D. C. Burdick of Oshkosh, shows that even in 1825 the liquor question was up, the governor giving his views on the legal rights of travelers to bring liquor into the territory.

Appleton—William Verhage, Sheboygan, won the annual Lawrence college oratorical contest, with the oration, The Price of Cooperation. He will represent Lawrence at the state oratorical contest in February at Milton college. Charles, Nichols, Milwaukee, won second place with the oration, The Challenge of Locarno.

Neenah—Preliminary organization of a chapter of the Kiwanis International was undertaken by a group of nine business men at a recent meeting. A. C. Stimmers, Philadelphia, field representative of the Kiwanis clubs, is aiding in the local organization work.

Oshkosh—Mrs. Isabelle Cross died at her home in Oshkosh, where she had lived 73 years. She would have been 88 March 19. She was the widow of Otis Cross, who was killed in the battle of Petersburg in the Civil war, July 31, 1864.

Brantwood—Mrs. John Hautavita, 65, paralyzed for several years, was burned to death at her home, a mile southeast of Brantwood. Her husband, who was working nearby, discovered the blaze too late to save her life.

Rice Lake—Seven horses perished in a fire that destroyed the Central Delivery stable at Rice Lake. Ray Hazelton, who roomed in the office, suffered painful burns. The fire threatened the Central hotel.

Madison—Governmental aid in providing remedies for the agricultural situation and revision of the tariff law, each-Cummings law and federal reserve act were advocated by Gov. Blaine in a letter to John D. Jones, Jr., state commissioner of agriculture.

Merrill—Plans are being drawn by the state highway commission for a new bridge on highway 19 at the entrance to Minocqua from the south. The bridge, it is estimated, will cost approximately $100,000.

1925 TAXES OF U. S. $6,211,625 OVER '24

Gain of $24,599,724 in Income Receipts—Miscellaneous Source Falls Off.

Washington.—Reduced federal tax rates during the calendar year 1925 did not affect the total volume of taxes received by the government, which showed a substantial increase. The gain was entirely in the income tax division, however, with receipts from other sources showing a falling-off under lower taxes.

Figures on internal revenue receipts by states for 1925 compared with receipts for 1924, issued by the Treasury department, show that the receipts for the year just closed exceeded those for 1924 by $6,211,625. Total receipts for 1925 were $2,694,257,249 and for 1924 were $2,688,045,620, while income tax receipts for 1925, totaling $1,825,704,135, exceeded such receipts in 1924 by $24,599,724.

The 1925 receipts from miscellaneous sources were $808,553,110, or $18,888,698 less than in 1924, and yet the total 1925 receipts exceeded those of the previous year. Miscellaneous receipts in 1924 were $880,041,508.

Receipts from the sale of internal revenue stamps aggregated $95,858,414 in 1925 and internal revenue receipts through the customs office totaled $50,212. Figures on internal revenue last year, by states and territories follow:

Bureau Heads Assailed by Colonel Mitchell

Washington.—A parting shot at the "bow and arrow men who make up the self-perpetuating oligarchy" in the War and Navy departments was fired by William Mitchell, whose resignation from the army recently went into effect, and prior to his leaving on his nation-wide speaking tour. "It shall always be on hand in case of war or emergency, wherever I am needed," the former colonel said as he bade good-by to his former counsel, Representative Frank R. Heist of Illinois. On February 10 Mr. Mitchell will start his tour with a speech in New York city in Carnegie hall. He will then speak in Boston. After that he will speak in the following cities: Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Detroit, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Chicago and Milwaukee.

Looking as dapper in his derby hat and gray overcoat as he did in his uniform, Mr. Mitchell seemed in the best of spirits. "No man has had such a wonderful life in the service as I have had," he said.

Dying, Admits Triple Murder

Joliet, Ill.—One hour before he died, Otto Oscar Johnson confessed the triple murder of Henry W. Jeske, Mrs. Eva Jeske and six-year-old Ralph Jeske on December 12 at Batavia, Ill. Johnson was formerly an inmate of an insane asylum, and a burglar all his life. He was shot at Joliet by Police Officer Michael Cassidy. Joliet police had reports of a burglary, and later they encountered Johnson. Officer Cassidy's bullet struck Johnson below the heart.

Thruson Out Wins Appeal

Washington.—President Coolidge has dismissed the remaining points in the Chilean appeal in the Tacna-Arica question.

U. S. Loses Drained Land

Washington.—The Supreme court decided that the title to the land created by the drainage of Mud lake, Minnesota, by the government in 1911 belongs to owners of the abutting property. The land had been sold to homesteaders.

Grange Through for Year

Seattle, Wash.—Harold (Red) Grange, world star, has completed his football season here and will soon begin a motion picture contract.

South Bend Has Big Fire

South Bend, Ind.—Nine retail store buildings were destroyed, the Standard Oil company office building was wrecked, one fireman was killed and three injured in fires here. The loss is estimated at $1,300,000.

Wins Dog Derby

Winnipeg, Man.—Stolidly clinging to the pole set by Earl Brydges and Harry Olenky, Emil St. Goddard won the Pas dog derby by a margin of two and one-half minutes.

$60,000,000 LOPPED OFF REVENUE BILL

Senate Agrees on Enormous Annual Tax Reduction.

Washington.—Estimates place the annual tax reductions resulting from recent action of the senate at $60,000,000. Clearing the revenue bill of noncontroversial provisions, the senate gave tentative approval to widespread tax reductions in the first reading of the measure.

Provisions approved by the house slashing the normal income tax rates, increasing the personal exemptions, and repealing many of the miscellaneous taxes, were accepted without debate. Although still subject to amendment, none of these rate schedules is expected to be opened again.

In accepting some amendments to the house bill proposed by the finance committee, the senate approved repeal of the capital stock tax. Provisions accepted and over which no further controversy is expected by leaders included:

Reductions in the normal income tax rates from 2 to 1 1/2 per cent on the first $4,000 of taxable income, 4 to 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and from 6 to 5 per cent on the remainder. Increase from $10,000 to $20,000 in the amount on which the 25 per cent reduction for "earned income" may be applied.

Increase in the personal exemptions from $1,000 to $1,500 for single persons and from $2,500 to $3,500 for married persons. Repeal of the taxes on automobile tires and parts, jewelry, cameras, photographic films and plates, firearms and ammunition, gunners' articles, automatic slot machines, works of art, brooms, bowling alleys and billiard tables, shooting galleries and riding academies, automobiles for hire, tobacco manufacturers, deeds and conveyances.

While controverted provisions, on which the Democratic-Progressive coalition will center its fight, were passed over temporarily, progress made indicates the bill will be passed within two weeks.

WORLD COURT WILL CUT U. S. EXPENSES

President Coolidge Cites Advantages to Country.

Washington.—Entrance of the United States into the world court and the League of Nations' disarmament conference will not, in the opinion of President Coolidge, endanger the national sovereignty of the United States. But the entry of the United States will help to establish the peace of the world, reduce the expenditures of the United States for armaments, promote good will between nations, and thereby add to the national prosperity at the same time that it will promote national security, the President believes.

This view of the meaning of the steps taken to co-operate with Europe in the world court and disarmament bodies was outlined before the "business organization of the budget" by Mr. Coolidge at a recent meeting. The meeting was attended by cabinet officers, department chiefs and thousands of government employees. The meeting was designed primarily to promote economies in government.

The President declared that any safeguards put around the peace of the world promote economy, provide financial stability and economic progress. The Washington disarmament conference was cited as the first step in this direction, the President holding that it not only afforded great financial relief by stopping the competition in naval armaments, but that it has promoted international good will and confidence.

He pointed to the League of Nations disarmament conference as holding the promise of a further advance in that field.

U. S. Dry Agents Sent to State Court for Trial

Washington.—Federal prohibition agents accused of murder while enforcing the liquor laws are entitled to trial in federal courts. They must, however, be prepared to show the killing was in line of duty if they would escape trial in state courts and they may not claim federal court protection from state indictments for perjury or conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with their activities.

This is the gist of two opinions of the United States Supreme court delivered by Chief Justice Taft, which climax the clash of Maryland state authorities with a Baltimore federal district court over the right to try four prohibition agents indicted on November 19, 1924, by a county grand jury for the murder of Lawrence Wanger, an alleged moonshiner, in Harford county, Maryland.

Sen. Johnson's Father Dead

Sacramento, Cal.—Grove L. Johnson, father of United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson, is dead at his home here, at the age of eighty-four years. Mr. Johnson served one term in congress.

Barbara La Marr, Actress Dies

Pasadena, Cal.—Barbara La Marr, a star favored with screen fame and fortune, died at Altadena. The actress' death was due to a lingering tubercular affection.

Cashier and $60,000 Gone

New Florence, Mo.—A loss of $60,000 to the Farmers' bank here was disclosed when a safe in the bank was found to contain only $40. The cashier, Leslie Lichtenberger, who recently disappeared, had held the position for five years.

Rejects Labor Amendment

Frankfort, Ky.—By unanimous vote the Kentucky senate rejected the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

SEES RESTORATION OF PRE-WAR TRADE

Head of National Foreign Council Issues Call for Convention.

New York.—"This is the period which bids fair to see the restoration of international trade to the volume it held before the outbreak of the World war," declared James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade council, in his call, issued a few days ago, to the 1926 national foreign trade convention to be held at Charleston, S. C., April 28 to 30.

"The world did more work last year than it did the year before," Mr. Farrell says, "and its trade grew correspondingly. Expanded production and the importation of raw material by the great industrial nations of both hemispheres indicate further expansion of production and consumption for this year. Every step of this recovery and advance carries with it its own problems, demanding continued study and thoughtful examination."

According to the estimates of the council, the world's export trade for the current year will exceed $28,000,000,000, thus equalling in volume, allowing for the decreased real value of money, the export trade of $19,422,000,000 done in 1913.

Mr. Farrell also announces the preliminary program of the 1926 national foreign trade convention, which is to be held on the south Atlantic coast for the first time since these conventions were inaugurated in 1914. The council has held its annual gatherings twice on the Pacific coast, twice on the Gulf and in six cities in the interior.

The program of the Charleston convention lays special emphasis on accelerating American exports. The general and group sessions are planned to promote intensive attention to foreign trade in southern products and especially to exports originating in the southeast, where foreign trade in recent years has been increasing more rapidly than any other part of the country.

The American Manufacturers' Export association, the National Association of Credit Men, the Export Managers' Club of New York, and national banking, advertising and importing organizations will co-operate with the National Foreign Trade council in the convention. Group sessions will cover all these phases of foreign trade, as well as export problems of the South-east, education for foreign trade, and modern policies in export seaman-ship.

Out of the 1,500 delegates to the national foreign trade convention last year at Seattle, about 1,075 were presidents and other executives of firms representing most of the important business houses of thirty-two states actively engaged in foreign trade.

Corn Sugar Act Wins Favor of U. S. Senate

Washington.—Unanimous approval was given by the senate to the Cornwheat corn sugar bill, amending the pure food laws to permit the use of corn sweeteners without requiring manufacturers or canners to denote their presence by labels.

The bill, introduced by Senator Cummins (Rep. Iowa) and favorably reported by Senator McKinley (Rep. Ill.), chairman of the committee on manufacturers, originally limited the proposed amendment to removing the restrictions on corn sugar as a means of providing additional revenue for the disposition of corn surpluses in western states.

Two to Arms Conference; Senate Allows $50,000

Washington.—Unanimous approval of the $50,000 appropriation for the participation of the United States in the preliminary arms conference at Geneva February 15 was voted by the senate. The house had passed the resolution. Hugh Gibson, minister to Switzerland, and Allen Dulles, chief of the far eastern division of the State department, have been selected as the principal representatives. It was stated in official circles here.

Charge Bishop Stole Funds

Copenhagen, Denmark.—The public prosecutor has issued an indictment against Rev. Anton Bast, M. E. bishop of Scandinavia, who is charged with having converted 635,000 kroner.

Farrell Wins Ice-Skate Title

Binghamton, N. Y.—Ozell Farrell, young Chicago star, won the all-around national ice skating championship with 70 points, all scored in one night, in the half mile, three mile, and 440-yard dash.

Chicago's Debt Increases

Washington.—Indebtedness of Chicago increased from $28.30 per capita in 1917 to $47.23 in 1924, according to a summary issued by the Department of Commerce.

George, Author, Is Dead

London.—W. L. George, noted writer and lecturer on women, died here. He was forty-four years old, having been born of British parents in Paris. He received his education in France and Germany.

Torres, Mexican Rebel Shot

San Antonio, Texas.—Demetrio Torres, alias Chaparreras, prominent revolutionist, was executed at Torreon after being deported from the United States. It was reported from Mexico.

OLIVER OCTOBER

by GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

COPYRIGHT, BELL SYNDICATE (W.N.U. SERVICE)

"The best trained automobile in America," said Sammy, with his customary modesty. "Kindness is what does it."
"So sorry to be late," said Mrs. Sage, as Oliver ceremoniously handed her out of the car.
"What is that I hear, Oliver?" said the minister as he stepped out of the car. Jane and Mrs. Sammy had preceded him. "Is it true the detectives are here and expect to start this ridiculous search tomorrow?"
"They're here all right," replied Oliver. "One of them tried to sell you a set of Dickens the other day."
"What?" cried Jane, gripping Oliver's arm. "What, that man a detective?" She was startled.
"No less a person than Mr. Sherlock Hawkshaw Malone, the renowned sleuth," said Oliver, smiling.
"The best—the best!" she cried hoarsely. "Good heavens! That accounts for the interest he took in your father's disappearance."
"At any rate," said Mr. Sage, complacently, "he did not succeed in selling you a set of Dickens."
Jane started to say something, but, instead, abruptly turned away and joined the other women on the porch. A queer little chill as of misgiving stole over her.

"Hey, Oliver!" called out Sammy from down the drive where he was parking the car. "Come here a minute, will you? Say, he went on, lowering his voice as Oliver came up. "I've just picked up something rich. Fellow came in day before yesterday and showed me a volume of the 'Arabian Nights,' absolutely unexpurgated."
"I know. And you fell for it, didn't you?"
"Sh! Not so loud. My wife doesn't know a thing about it. But say, who told you about it?"
Then Oliver told him, Sammy leaned against the mudguard and swore softly.

"Say, I wish I could remember what I said to the guy about—about your father. Lord, he had me talking a blue streak. Darn my fool eyes! You'd think I'd have sense enough to— Oh, well, go ahead and kick me, Olive. Right here. Just as hard as you like."
"Come on. They're waiting for us. You needn't worry, old boy."
Sammy and Oliver entered the sitting room. Mrs. Sage was standing almost directly under the chandelier, talking to dumpy Mrs. Grimes; the light from above fell upon her arched eyebrows and arms, and then wavered timidly, almost helplessly, as it first came in contact with resplendent opposition. The actress was a head taller than Mrs. Grimes, who nevertheless bravely stood her ground and faced comparison with all the hardihood of the righteous.

Mr. Sage, with a distinctly bewildered and somewhat embarrassed expression keeping company with the frown and dotting smile that seemed to be stamped upon his lean visage, stood across the room with his daughter and Mrs. Sammy.
"Do you mean to tell me, Oliver, that those blighters intend to begin digging up your place tomorrow?" Josephine asked incredulously.
Oliver laughed. "I think we'll all rather enjoy the excitement, Aunt Josephine," he said. "I suppose they'll begin prying up the kitchen floor tomorrow, or digging trenches in the cellar, or tearing up the flower-beds."
She looked at him narrowly. "What utter rot! Do they expect to find your father buried in the cellar or under the kitchen floor?"
"They don't expect to find him at all," replied Oliver, with unintentional shrewdness.

He glanced over his shoulder at Jane. Their eyes met and their gaze held for some seconds. He detected the clouded, troubled look in hers and was suddenly conscious of what must have seemed to her a serious intensity in his own. He knew now that he was in love—that he always had been in love with Jane, that he always would be in love with her. He compressed his lips and fought against the strange, mad impulse to shout that he was in love with her, that she was his—all his—and that no man should take her away from him.

And she? She was thinking of that dry, hot night when he came to see her after leaving his father, out of breath, his shoes covered with fresh black mud. There had been no rain for weeks. The roads were thick with dust. And Lumsden, too, had noticed that his shoes were muddy. He had spoken to her about them, he had wondered where Oliver had had to get into mud up to his shoe tops! And she, herself, had never ceased to wonder.

Oliver was strangely restless during dinner, and immediately after the company rose from the table at its conclusion he asked Jane to come with him for a little stroll in the open air.
"I want to speak to you about something," he urged. "Better throw something over your shoulders. The night air—"
"Ought you to go off and leave the others, Oliver?" she began, a queer little catch, as of alarm, in her voice. "Auriel and Sammy—"
"Come along," he pleaded. "They won't mind. I must see you alone for a few minutes, Jane."

"I will get my wrap," she said, after a moment's hesitation. "It may be chilly outside."
"Why, you're shivering now, Janie," he whispered anxiously, as he threw her wrap over her shoulders. "Are you cold?"
She did not reply. He followed her out upon the porch and down the steps. No word passed between them until they had turned the bend in the drive and were outside the radius of light shed from the windows. He was the first to speak.
"See here, Jane," he blurted out. "I'm— I'm terribly troubled and upset." That was as far as he got, speech seemed to fall him.
She laid her hand on his arm.
"Is it about—about the detective, Oliver?" she asked tremulously.
"No," he answered, almost roughly. "It's about you, Jane. You've just got to answer me. Are you going to be married?"
"Yes," she said, her voice so low he could scarcely hear the monosyllable.
They walked in silence for twenty paces or more, turning down the path that led to the swamp road.
"I was afraid so," he muttered. Then fiercely: "Who are you going to marry?"
She sighed. "I am going to marry the first man who asks me," she replied and, having cast the die, was was serious when he spoke again, after a moment's pause.

"I have never asked a girl to marry me, Jane. Never in all my life. Do you know why?"
She buried her face against his shoulder. A vast, overwhelming thrill raced through him. His arms went about her and drew her close.
"I never realized it, Jane—I never even thought of it till just a little while ago—but now I know that I have always loved you."
Her arm stole up about his neck, she raised her chin.
"I began calling myself your wife, Oliver, when I was a very little girl—when we first began playing house together, and you were my husband and the dolls were our children."
He kissed her rapturously. "Oh, my God!" he burst out. "You'll never know how miserable I have been these last few weeks—how horribly jealous I've been."
She stroked his cheek—possessively. "I haven't been very happy myself," she sighed. "I—I wasn't quite sure you would ever, ever ask me to be your wife."
"That reminds me," he cried boyishly. "Will you marry me, Miss Sage?"
"Of course I will. Didn't I say I would marry the first—what was that?"
As she uttered the exclamation under her breath, she drew away from him quickly, looking over her shoulder at the thick, shadowy underbrush that lined the road below them.
"I didn't hear anything," said he, turning with her. "It must have been my heart trying to burst out of its—sh! Listen. There is someone over there in the brush. D—n his sneaking eyes, I'll—"
"Don't! Don't go down there!" she cried, clutching his arm. "You must not leave me alone. I'm—I'm afraid, Olive. I am always afraid when I am near that awful swamp."
"Let's walk down the road a little way, Jane," said he stubbornly. "Don't be afraid. I'll stick close beside you."
"You won't go down into the swamp," she cried anxiously.
"No. Just along the road."
They ran down the little embankment into the road. After fifteen or twenty paces Oliver pressed her arm warningly and stopped to listen. Ahead of them, some distance away, they heard footfalls—the slow, regular tread of a man walking in the road. They stood still listening. Suddenly the footfalls ceased.
"He knows we have stopped," said Oliver. "He's listening to see if we are following."
She was silent for a moment. "You remember what I said about being spied upon, Oliver. I feel it, I feel it all about me. You are being watched all the time, Oliver. Oh, how hateful, how unfair!"
"See here, Jane, I've been thinking. It's wrong for me to ask you to marry me till all this mess is over. It's wrong for me to even ask you to consider yourself engaged to me."
"Nobody believes that you had anything to do with—"
"My dear girl, nobody knows that to believe," said he seriously. "That's the worst of it. My father is gone. I was, so far as anyone knows, the last to see him. As you say, no one may believe that I had anything to do with it—but where is he? A queer thing has just happened. You know Peter Hines—that queer old bird who has always lived in the cabin at the lower end of the swamp? He has skipped out. Boarded up the door and windows and—"
He started violently, the words dying on his lips. Off to the south, beyond the almost impenetrable wall of night, gleamed far-off lights in the wall of Peter Hines' shack.
"He must have returned," he said, in an odd voice. "Those lights—"
"Let us go in, dear," she pleaded. "I—I hear something moving among the weeds down there. It's grisly, Oliver—creepy." Oliver yielded to her entreaties and they made their way back to the house.

"But you composed when you were thirteen."

Unique Winter Racing on Ice

Racing between ice boats and motor cycles furnishes a new thrill for this season on Lake Ontario. Tremendous speed is attained and thousands assemble to witness the unique contests. The extreme cold weather has resulted in ideal surface conditions.

Basket Ball as School Sport Meets Approval
Approval of high school basketball provided players are subjected to thorough physical examination, has been given by 3,000 physicians affiliated with the Indiana State Medical association.
Taking notice of the growth of basketball as high school sport, since the abolition of football 15 years ago because of numerous fatal injuries, the association adopted a resolution advocating an investigation into the effect of competitive contests upon high school boys. The recent announcement was the result.
Eight hundred Indiana high schools now play basketball from December until the close of the season with the state tournament in March, and the sport enjoys wider popularity than high school football.

Getting Into Shape for English Channel Swim
Miss Helen Walnwright, the world's champion all-around girl swimmer and diver, has started preparatory work for her attempt to swim the English channel next summer. The star mermaid says that most of her time during her stay at Tampa this winter will be devoted to developing her stamina and resistance for the record trial.
Miss Walnwright was to have attempted the channel crossing last August, but a strained ligament forced her to abandon for the time being and made possible Gertrude Ederle's trip for the attempt. The failure of Miss Ederle to negotiate the hazardous journey has stimulated Miss Walnwright's desire to be the first woman to swim the English channel.

KID McCOY FULL OF ODD TRICKS

Resorted to Questionable Means to Win in Ring.

Conceding that nothing succeeds like success, neither does anything flop like a flop.
The stories of Kid McCoy's tricks in the ring are standard classics because he got away with them. He'd point to the floor and exclaim: "Look!" and while his opponent on the unprotected jaw. The books say that Sullivan whipped some of his patients by outcroaring them or glaring them into panic while they were lacing on the gloves.
Here's the other side:
Two champions were down for a no-decision, interclass bout which was to be a polka, with the understanding that if the public liked the number they would take several encores. When the act wore out they would enter the ring for a real fight or shooting match.
The smaller champion decided, however, that the big one was a bunny and made up his mind to throw a fight into him.
"Tell that big bum of yours," he phoned to the big champion's manager, "that I'm going to shoot. He can't fight and I'm going to stop him."
"You're making a mistake," the manager said, "but if you don't want to use blanks, thanks for telling us. We'll shoot, too."
Before the sixth round the little champion had been knocked out.
Another incident:
As large Bill Brennan stood facing Luis Firpo just before the bell began their fight in the Garden, he playfully reached out, plucked a tuft of fur from Luis Angel's chest, held his glove up to his face and blew the fuzz into Luis Angel's eyes. It was a very insulting way to treat a Wild Bull.
Then large Bill remarked, "Moo-oo-oo!" insinuating that the Wild Bull fought like a Holstein cow.
In the twelfth round large Bill went down so hard that it took two weeks in a hospital to get him in shape to sit up in bed.

"Grand Old Man"
The photograph shows Connie Mack, who has just celebrated his sixty-third birthday and who still functions as the very astute and able manager of the Philadelphia Athletics. Although one would like to call him the "Grand Old Man of Baseball," he would probably resent the "old" part, for he's as young as his youngest player on the Shibe park diamond in Philadelphia. He is shown above with the mascot and trade mark of the Athletics.

Hornsby Tops .400 Mark for His Third Season
Rogers Hornsby, pilot of the St. Louis Cardinals, has taken his place in the baseball hall of fame as one of a trio of major league stars who, for three years, finished the season with a batting average of about .400.
Hornsby's mark for 1925 was .403, which enabled him to join ranks with Jesse Burkett, famous member of the old Cleveland Nationals, and Tyrus Raymond Cobb, fiery leader of the Tigers.
Hornsby, in 1922, batted .401. In 1924 he established a modern high mark of .423. In 1923, although champion of the National league, he hit only .384.
Burkett made his marks in 1895, 1896 and 1899. Cobb led his league in 1911 and 1912 with a mark above the .400 and finished above this figure in 1922, although not leading the league.
In addition to capturing the 1925 batting honors, Hornsby is the home-run king of the major leagues with 39 circuit blows. He also had the highest total bases mark of .380.

Mathewson and Johnson as Opposing Pitchers
Did you ever know that the late Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson, now the Senators' ace, ever opposed each other as pitchers in a game?
Well, they did, and it was in Joplin, Mo., not long before the World war, which by the way might well have been the "world's series." McGraw and his Giants were touring the "sticks" with a smudged playing exhibition game. Joplin is not far from Coffeyville, Kans., and Coffeyville is where Johnson lived. It was agreed that Johnson and Mathewson should oppose each other. McGraw divided his squad of players into two teams, and the Big Train and Big Six went at it.
Each pitcher was allowed to pick his team. They went in after tea before practically the entire population of Joplin and Coffeyville, with no score. Matty's fade-aways against Walter's speed. It was recorded that Matty finally won by a one-run score.

Giants Obtain Ring in Deal With Philadelphia
The New York Giants have traded Wayland Dean, right-handed pitcher, and Jack Bentley, southpaw, to the Philadelphia Nationals for Jimmy Ring, veteran right hander. No cash was involved.
Dean was one of the leading pitchers of the Louisville club for three years prior to his purchase by the Giants for $50,000. Bentley was with Baltimore before joining the Giants.
Ring was a member of the Cincinnati team that won the world series in 1919 that resulted in banishment from baseball of several members of the Chicago White Sox team.
Ring won one game for his team during that series. Later he was traded to the Phillies.

Marquard Is President
Baseball fans were not surprised to hear the announcement made recently that Richard W. Marquard, veteran pitcher of the Boston National League Baseball club had accepted the offer made to him during the sessions of the magnates in New York of the positions of manager and president of the Providence club of the Eastern league. The Providence club was recently transferred from Worcester where C. D. Stengel was the playing manager.

J. B. (Red) Burger, a young pitcher given a trial by the Chicago Cubs several seasons ago, has signed with Memphis of the Southern league.
Roy Wilson, left-handed pitcher, has been purchased by San Antonio of the Texas league, from the Lincoln club of the Western league.
Robert M. Clark, umpire in chief of the Cotton States league, in 1925, has been signed as manager of the Vicksburg team of that league. He is a former pitcher.

Field hockey is now played by women athletes in Japan.
Baseball teams in the American league used 34,164 balls last year.
Big game hunters in Alaska engage an airplane to carry them to the caribou herds.
Now and then the call of the dollar also falls sweetly upon the ear of the football coach, as well as the football player.
Woman tennis players in England are wearing shock socks to add speed to their footwork on the hard courts.
All boxers who lose on fouls, whether held intentional or unintentional, are to be suspended by the New York state athletic commission.

Denver of the Western league, has signed Benny Keyes, a home product, for a tryout. He filled in for a few games with St. Joseph last season when that team was in Denver and looked every bit a hitter.
Pittsfield of the Eastern league, sold shortstop Waddy McPhee to the Salt Lake club of the Pacific Coast league. He was captain and star of the Princeton university team before entering organized baseball.

Order or Notice of Final Settlement

STATE OF WISCONSIN—WASHINGTON COUNTY COURT—In Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Margaret Kirsch, deceased.

On application of Gregor Kirsch and Anna Kirsch, executors of the estate of said Margaret Kirsch, deceased, for the adjustment and allowance of their administration account, and the assignment of the residue of said estate to such other persons as are by law entitled to the same.

It is ordered, that said account be examined, adjusted and allowed at a regular term of said court, to be held at the probate office in the city of West Bend, in said county, on the first Tuesday of March, A. D. 1928.

It is further ordered, that upon the adjustment and allowance of such account by the court, as aforesaid, the residue of said estate be by the further order and judgment of this court assigned to such persons as are by law entitled to the same.

It is further ordered, that notice of the time and place of the examination and allowance of such account and of the assignment of the residue of said estate be given to all persons interested by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks before said day in the Kewaskum Statesman, a weekly newspaper printed at Kewaskum, in said county.

Dated February 24th, 1928.

By the Court, F. W. HUCKLIN, County Judge.

MEMORIAL

In sad memory of our dear father, John Schield, who passed away two years ago Feb. 1st, 1924.

A happy home we once enjoyed, How sweet the memory still.

But death has left a vacant chair, This world can never fill.

Peaceful be thy rest, dear father, 'Tis sweet to breath thy name.

In life we loved you dearly, In death we do the same.

Sadly missed by the children.

Details for Your Information

Color—Beautiful rich yellow, with olive green trim. Artistic and distinctive.

Construction—A special high carbon steel is forged into the parts that make up the frame work of this model, making it actually "as strong as steel." The result is a machine that is not only much lighter in weight but is much stronger and more durable.

Axle—Pivot Axle or Auto Steer, arranged to permit short turning, with a safety stop to prevent wheels cramping. The front and rear wheels track—60 inches center to center. Turning radius 11 1/2 feet. Bolster held in place by side sills. Front axle secured by strong angle steel braces and plates. Front axle ends forged from cold rolled steel in one piece, strengthened by heavy casting. Steering rods protected by hardened steel bushings, eliminating all wear. No adjustments necessary—that is done at the factory. Oscillating main axle prevents bed from twisting on uneven ground.

Cylinder Bars—Angle steel, with pointed teeth riveted in. Anti-wrapping shields prevent straw and twine from wrapping about shafts and cylinders. Cylinders arranged to prevent choking and to reduce draft, but close enough for perfect pulverizing.

Distributor—A distinctly NEW IDEA feature and is covered by strong patents. The shape of the blades and their relative position are vitally necessary for perfect, even, wide spreading. The material used is a heavy gauge copper bearing steel that is both rust and acid resisting. These blades are riveted to castings fastened to the shaft.

Rear Axle—Cold rolled shafting has the feed cam swaged on one end and drive sprocket hub on other. Runs on self-aligning bearings.

Bearings—All bearings are self-aligning and provided with spring top oiler. All bearings are small inexpensive journals, held in place by steel forgings.

Feeding Mechanism—Operated from rear axle. Four changes of conveyor speeds: 4, 8, 12 and 16 loads per acre, or can be shut off entirely by lever at operator's right side. Safety key prevents load from feeding into cylinder when out of gear.

Conveyors—Traveling chain type of tempered steel chain riveted to steel bars running over solid bottom.

Bed—Finest grade oak and pine—1 1/2 inches wider in rear than in front to prevent choking.

Drive—Operated from rear axle. Large sprocket wheel bolted to the main sprocket hub that is keyed to axle. Securely fastened by press fit. Tempered steel transmission drive chain raised or lowered by drive lever at operator's left. Spring tension holds chain in place.

Upper Cylinder and Distributor driven by tempered steel chains from main cylinder. Short chains for each drive prolongs the life of chain and secures lighter draft.

Bottom of Bed—Matched bottom boards nailed to heavy cross pieces with cement coated nails to prevent loosening. Fastened to main side sills by 5 steel cross bolts the full width of machine.

Side of Bed—Grooved boards matched and riveted to steel uprights which are riveted to main sills. Main side sills forged out of one piece. One piece construction, lighter in weight, but far more durable than the old type. Steel braces prevent bed from spreading. Front and rear ends are held rigid by end gate in front and angle steel arch in rear.

Castings—All castings are made in our own foundry, of a mixture of steel and iron, called semi-steel, very strong and tough.

Forgings—At every point possible, high carbon forged steel parts are used. Forged steel is strong and flexible—resisting tremendous strains. Its use not only reduces the weight of the machine but makes it stronger and more durable.

Oak and Yellow Pine of the highest grade, free from all defects, are used for wood parts.

"We hereby guarantee the NEW IDEA SPREADER to be well made, of good material, and to do the work as represented when set up and operated according to our instructions. Should a part break or prove defective in material or workmanship within one year from date of purchase, a new part will be furnished free of charge, f. o. b. factory, providing the defective part is returned to us transportation charges prepaid."

WELL QUALIFIED FOR HIGH OFFICE

Lincoln's Travel and Study Made Him Conversant With Problems.

By D. K. DODGE, University of Illinois.

The claim has been made recently by a distinguished northern historian that at the time of his election Lincoln's knowledge of public affairs was limited and that he knew very little of the country through personal contact. According to this authority, Lincoln's single term in congress was "negligible" and, with the exception of a trip to New Orleans in his youth, he had spent most of his time in his own state.

Unfortunately generalizations of this sort, especially when they are made by men who are supposed to know what they are talking about, are convincing to the average reader, who is unable to check up on the writer. Let us consider how far this particular generalization is justified by the facts, or rather, whether there are any facts of the important political speeches of Lincoln were made in his own state, but that is probably true of most men in public life.

Spoke in Many Cities.

An examination of the biographies, supplemented by newspaper reports, leads the student to quite a different conclusion from that reached by Professor MacDonald, in his curious review of Stephenson's book. To be sure, Lincoln had not appeared in New York before he made his famous Cooper Institute address in February, 1860, but in 1848, twelve years earlier, he spoke in Tremont temple, Boston, his later opponent, William H. Seward, sharing the platform with him, and during the same Taylor campaign of 1848 he spoke in Worcester, New Bedford and other Massachusetts towns. In 1850 he delivered a long speech in Cincinnati, and in the same year he gave his remarkable agricultural address in Milwaukee, which was followed by a political speech, and later in the year he made a number of speeches in Kansas, only fragments of which have been preserved. After the Cooper Institute address he spoke in New Haven, Hartford and other Connecticut towns.

Four States Knew Him.

In 1849 he delivered the recently discovered eulogy on General Taylor in Chicago, and nine years later he made a very important speech in the same city. In 1848 he spoke several times in Maryland and Indiana. He is also known to have spoken a number of times in Missouri, possibly, among other places, in St. Louis. In 1842 Lincoln visited his friend Joshua Speed in Kentucky, but the nearest approach to a speech in that state that I have been able to discover is a reference in the Cincinnati speech to the Kentuckians across the river. On at least one occasion Lincoln spoke in Michigan, and this completes the list of states in which Lincoln is known to have spoken. It is quite within the limits of probability that Lincoln visited and spoke in Iowa and Minnesota, but the known facts are sufficient for our purpose.

His Ability Recognized.

The facts assembled show that, before his nomination in 1860, Lincoln had spoken in at least nine states and one territory, and that he had appeared in at least as many cities of considerable size and importance. A local paper characterized the Worcester speech as "a truly masterly and convincing speech" and the Tribune said of the Cooper Institute address: "No man ever before made such an impression on his first appearance before a New York audience." The Cincinnati speech was included in the volume containing the Lincoln-Douglas debates, published in 1860, and the Cooper Institute address, besides being reported in full in the newspapers the day after its delivery, formed one of the Tribune tracts and was issued a few months later in an annotated edition. It is doubtful whether even Seward, whose knowledge of the country has never been questioned, had covered so great and varied a territorial address as speaker as Lincoln. It may be added that Lincoln supplemented his first-hand observation of different sections by a careful reading of a number of newspapers, including the Weekly Tribune and the Charleston Mercury, and that he knew personally many political leaders of both parties in different parts of the country.

Intimate With Great Men.

During his "negligible" single term in congress he formed an intimacy with Alexander H. Stephens, later vice president of the Confederacy, and on his way back from New England in 1848 he stopped at Albany in order to meet Thurlow Weed, later Seward's campaign manager. It is an interesting fact, indicative of Lincoln's breadth of view and freedom from prejudice, that his most intimate early friend was a Kentucky Democrat and slave-owner, Joshua Speed, whose brother became a member of Lincoln's cabinet. In his knowledge of the real sentiment and character of the South, a very important matter at that time, Lincoln was undoubtedly far better equipped than any other of the Republican candidates in 1860. Before as well as during the Presidency Lincoln was able, through his knowledge of the country as a whole and not merely of a section of it, to take a truly national view of the difficult situation, in marked contrast to the narrow sectional view of many of the political leaders, both North and South.

Might Have Prevented War.

If the questions at issue in 1861 had been referred to him and to that no less broadminded southerner, Alexander H. Stephens, for final settlement, there is every reason to believe that the Civil war would have been avoided, slavery would have been gradually abolished with justice to all, and the Union would have been preserved in a spirit of charity rather than of bitterness. We are, therefore, in my opinion, justified in assigning to Lincoln a place in the upper class of unusually well prepared and seasoned Presidents. The difficult and probably unanswerable question of his relative rank in this upper class need not be discussed here.

Both Wisdom and Moderation in Lincoln's Letters and Speeches

(To General Hooker, 1863.)

"And now, beware of rashness, beware of rashness, but, with energy and sleepless vigilance, go forward and give us victories."

(Address, 1860.)

"I know there is a God, and that He hates injustice and slavery. I see the storm coming, and I know that His hand is in it. If He has a place and work for me—and I think He has—I believe I am ready."

"I am nothing, but truth is everything. I know I am right because I know that liberty is right, for Christ teaches it, and Christ is God."

(Message to Congress, 1861.)

"Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the higher consideration. Capital has its rights, which are as worthy of protection as any rights, nor is it denied that there is, and probably always will be, a relation between labor and capital, producing mutual benefits."

(Address, 1863.)

"Some of our generals complain that I impair discipline and subordination in the army by my pardons and respites, but it makes me rested, after a day's hard work, if I can find some good excuse for saving a man's life; and I go to bed happy as I think how joyous the signing of my name makes him and his family and his friends."

Lincoln and His Message

America's immortal President, historians tell us, acquired much of his knowledge by reading borrowed books under an old oak tree near Old Salem. Day after day and week after week he sat in the shade of this tree and moved as the sun shifted the shadows. They tell us that at times he was so absorbed that people thought and said he was crazy. And as the years pass the words of Lincoln and his message take on an added luster from the immortality of their truth and beauty.

Lincoln Truly American

Abraham Lincoln is the culminating point of the evolution of the truly American type. No other race or nation could have produced him. He is America's chosen hero and prophet.

RADIO

Action, Stability in Five-Tube Set

Receiver Using Basket-Weave Coil Mounted Behind Condensers.

By CAPT. P. V. O'ROURKE in Radioc World.

The standard five-tube tuned RF set is shown in the diagram. The receiver uses basket-weave coils that are mounted behind the tuning condensers. This introduces an action in the circuit which tends toward stability. Unless this were done the tubes on the radio side would be uncontrollable.

As a further check upon disastrous action by the radio amplifying tubes the rheostat controlling the two RF tubes may be varied. The greater the resistance of the rheostat in the circuit, the less brightly the tube burns and the less oscillation.

Fits On a 7 by 18 Inch Panel.

The set may be constructed on a 7 by 18 inch panel. A convenient method of assembly is to use a socket shelf. There is just enough room for the coils behind the condensers. Angle irons are used to secure the coils to the socket shelf. Although called irons, they are most commonly brass. A tubing is inserted through one of the apertures caused by the method of winding a basket-weave coil. This aperture formerly was occupied by a dowel stick or other rod of the winding form. Inside this tubing a long machine screw is placed, with a thread toward the condenser, so that a nut may be affixed at that end, to clamp the screw down upon the brass angle. The other end of the angle is affixed to the socket shelf. Usually one angle, bent like an L, with a short horizontal plane as the base, is sufficient for each coil.

The Coils.

The inductances are alike in construction. The primaries have eight turns and the secondaries have 56 turns. The wire is No. 24 enameled silk covered. The form diameter is three and one-half inches. Usually there are 15 rods on which the wire is wound, thus constituting the form.

The secondary is wound for 24 turns, then the primary wire is picked up and wound along with it, side by side, for eight turns. The primary winding being terminated then, the rest of the secondary (25 more turns) is put on. The small primary is used as a further aid in obtaining a receiver that will not cause troublesome oscillations.

The set, made under these directions, with .00035 mfd. tuning condensers, will tune approximately in step. One factor that tends to operate against this is the added capacity in the first aerial-ground system, L1L2, due to the aerial-ground system. Thus C1 might tune with readings a little lower than those of the other condensers. To get away from this four turns may be removed from the secondary of the first radio transformer, or, in the actual winding, the number of turns might be made four fewer than that on the other secondaries (i. e., 52 instead of 56).

The circuit enables one to use earphones at the detector output, but the jack providing for this purpose, J1, is to facilitate the tuning in of distant stations.

The circuit comprises two stages of tuned radio-frequency amplification, tube detector and two transformer-coupled stages of audio-frequency amplification.

The Tubes.

The tubes should be 201A, operated from a six-volt storage battery, with 45 volts or less of B battery on the detector plate and 90 on the RF and audio amplifier plates. The set will operate fairly well on dry-cell tubes, such as the 1G9 type, but the greater volume and amplification from the large tubes make it well worth while to spend the extra amount of money. Except with some types of superhet electrolytes, the small tubes, or any dry-cell tubes, are not for a permanent set, because in time the radio user goes over to the five-volt tubes, because of their more satisfying service.

The following parts will be needed:

- Three radio-frequency transformers, basket-weave (L1L2, L3L4, L5L6).
- Three .00035 mfd. variable condensers, C1, C2, C3.
- One 7 by 18 inch panel.
- One 2 1/2 by 17 inch socket shelf with five sockets.
- Two ten-ohm rheostats.
- One double-circuit jack, J1.
- One single-circuit jack, J2.
- One 2 meg. grid leak.
- One .00025 mfd. grid condenser.
- Two audio-frequency transformers.
- Three four-inch dials.
- Three dial pointers.
- One A battery switch.

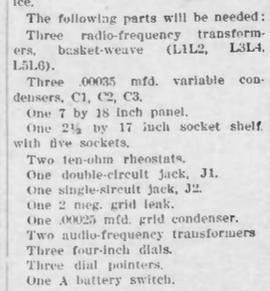

How to Connect Loop to Your Receiver Set

A loop antenna consists of a number of turns of wire arranged on a wooden framework of diamond or square shape.

One advantage of a loop antenna is the fact that it has directional qualities or will receive a signal from one direction with greater strength than from another. Also, in rotating the loop to help in selecting the station one wants to listen to, this kind of an antenna may at times aid in reducing interference from undesired stations or from static.

The extreme disadvantage of a loop antenna, however, is that with the gain of directional quality and possible selectivity, the overall received signal strength from a given station is usually very much reduced requiring a receiver of extreme sensitivity, and possibly instability. If far-distant stations are to be received.

The drawing illustrates four different methods of connecting loop antennas to a radio receiver set. It will be often found that by using either of the methods shown here satisfactory reception of local and semi-distant broadcasting stations up to possibly 200 to 500 miles can be had.

When using a loop with neutrodyne radio receivers, it is extremely desirable that the loop be placed from 6 feet to 10 feet away from the receiver to eliminate possible interference with one another. Results with a loop can probably be equaled if not exceeded by using about 20 feet of wire strung around the picture molding, making up a simple indoor antenna.—Cleveland News.

SHORT CIRCUITS

Cheap batteries are often noisy and have a short life.

A portable set should have the batteries in the cabinet.

A scratchy noise is sometimes due to corrosion in the joints.

A good ground and aerial system will eliminate body capacity.

Ammonia quickly neutralizes acid if the latter is spilled on the carpet.

A large condenser requires closer turning when tuning than a small one.

Making the grid slightly positive will prevent oscillation, but will cut down amplification.

Insulated wire may be used as an aerial, and sometimes will reduce interference.

An iron-nickel type of battery can not be damaged by an over or under-charge of current.

A set should be placed where it will be as free as practicable from shocks, jars and vibrations.

No dry battery will deliver a heavy current continuously without becoming quickly exhausted.

Coat-Dress Has Strong Appeal; Smart Party Frocks of Taffeta

WHILE praise of the two-piece dress is being shouted from the housetops of fashionland the aristocratic one-piece taffeta, such as the picture shows, goes quietly and elegantly on in the tenor of its way. In fact, the coat dress has not lost in prestige. Of course as an exponent of ultrasmartness it must be fashioned of cloth of first quality, displaying correct detailing of collar, one which will give eminent satisfaction to the standpoint of both utility and arresting appearance. It is of covert cloth made in double-breasted fashion, featuring sleeves that fall into a wrist band.

A One-Piece Model.

has been completely won over to the idea of dresses as narrow, as straight-line and as short as can possibly be. Stylists suddenly throw upon the screen billowy full skirts, with bodices which somewhat mold to the figure, the entire ornate with lace flourishes and flower trimmings.

So here we are confronted with a study in contrasts—slender svelte modernistic frocks versus bouffant picturesque period gowns. Stylists invite you to take your choice.

When the imposing robe de style, with its yards and yards of material in the skirt first made its appearance this season it was not taken seriously, but now its acceptance as a reigning mode for evening has become a fact rather than a passing fancy. Another very charming interpretation of the full-skirted mode takes on the quaint expression of the 1830 frocks as well as those of Colonial days.

The lovely taffeta frock shown in the picture is without a doubt a strong argument in favor of the bouffant and the picturesque. The taffeta is changeable. Its exquisite rose-lavender tones reflected in the handmade tinted silk flowers which together with beautiful lace adorn this picture frock.

By the way, a taffeta silk vogue is

The KITCHEN CABINET

It would be thought a hard government that should tax its people one-tenth part of their time, to be employed in its service, but idleness takes up much more. If we reckon all that is spent in absolute sloth or doing nothing, with that which is spent in idle employments, or amusements that amount to nothing. Sloth by bringing on disease, absolutely shortens life. Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears.—Poor Richard.

GOOD OYSTER DISHES

When there are a few oysters left from the can, not enough to make a soup or stew alone, add a pint or more of chicken broth to the stew—the flavor of the oysters and chicken is especially good together. The oysters may be chopped and added to the soup.

Deviled Oysters.—Place oysters in the following sauce and let them stand an hour: One-half cupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of grated horseradish, one tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, four drops of tabasco sauce, two-thirds of a cupful of olive oil, one teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of paprika and a little grated onion. After standing, roll in crumbs and beaten egg, then again in crumbs. Fry in deep fat, drain on paper. Serve very hot.

Oyster fritters are delicious served with:

King Sauce.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of finely minced pepper, cook until well done, add one cupful of milk, and two-thirds of a cupful of oyster liquor. Cook until well blended.

Oyster Scramble.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add three beaten eggs, one-half cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of parboiled oysters cut into small pieces. Cook until well heated through and serve on toast.

Oyster à la King.—Cook two tablespoonfuls of minced mushrooms in four tablespoonfuls of butter and one green pepper chopped (for four minutes), add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one and one-half cupfuls of milk, two egg yolks beaten, one chopped pineapple, salt to season, two cupfuls of oysters, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful of onion juice. Cook until the oysters curl and serve hot on buttered toast.

Loyster en Casserole.—Shred one cupful of lobster. Make a paste of one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour and a little from one cupful of milk. Place the rest of the milk in a double boiler and when warm add the flour paste. Cook, stirring until the sauce thickens, then add one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika, four teaspoonfuls of minced parsley, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of butter, and the same of lemon juice. Drain two cupfuls of canned peas, then stir them into the sauce. Place a layer of bread crumbs in the bottom of a baking dish, then add layers of the lobster and the sauce, using bread crumbs to finish the top. Set into a pan of water and bake about thirty minutes. Any other sea food such as crabs, shrimps, oysters, salmon or other fish will be good instead of lobster.

Foods That Are Liked.

For a change when nothing seems to appeal to the taste try:

Stuffed Baked Potatoes.—Cut a core with an apple-corer from the center of good-sized potatoes and insert a roll of bacon, stop the end with a cork of the potato and bake until well done. Small sausages may be served in this way, adding variety.

Chicken Soup.—Take the neck, wing tips and feet of one or two chickens, cover with cold water and bring to the simmering point. Simmer for several hours, then remove the bones, strip off all the meat and return it to the soup. Serve with a little rice or thickened with a tablespoonful of flour and butter. Serve with small squares of bread fried in butter or buttered and browned in the oven. Scald the chicken feet and remove the skin before using them for soup. They contain, with the bones, sufficient gelatin to use as soup for a salad, if not used as soup.

Minute Pudding.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter with two of flour and when well blended add a cupful of milk, a little salt, cook until smooth and thick and serve with sugar and butter as pudding or with diced bacon in a white sauce, as a hot dish for luncheon or supper. The bacon should be cooked crisp and brown before adding to the white sauce.

Cabbage Salad.—Shred very fine a quart of crisp cabbage. Drop into ice water to stand and chill for an hour, drain and serve with a teaspoonful or less of salt, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a half-cupful of cream and a few tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Mix well and serve well-chilled.

Green peas cooked, a few chopped peanuts and one or two sour pickles finely minced, adding salad dressing, will make another good salad.

"But constipation is serious, Grace"

"Not so long ago I was like you—headaches a good deal of the time, sleeping badly, and the least bit of housework tired me out. My complexion too, was bad."

"Finally, I went to see Dr. Farman. He showed me that it was constipation that was back of my troubles. He said that it was a very serious thing because poisons from clogged waste matter were carried to every body organ. And if I didn't correct it in time I might become a victim of one of those terrible organic diseases."

"He made me drop laxatives altogether, changed my diet, and put me on Nujol. I don't think I've ever felt better. I sleep well, my headaches have disappeared, and you can see for yourself what an improvement there is in my skin. Nujol has done wonders for me."

Nujol Works Like Nature
Constipation is dangerous to anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It is neither a food nor a medicine. It does not gripe. It is gentle and natural in its action and is prescribed by leading medical authorities.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricants in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly, in accordance with the directions on each bottle. As Nujol is not a laxative, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin the perfect health that is possible only when intestinal elimination is normal and regular.

Canada's Cattle "Take the Cream"

LIVE stock breeders in Canada grow rich. The men who farm in your easily-reached neighbor country find every encouragement for raising high quality beef and dairy cattle.

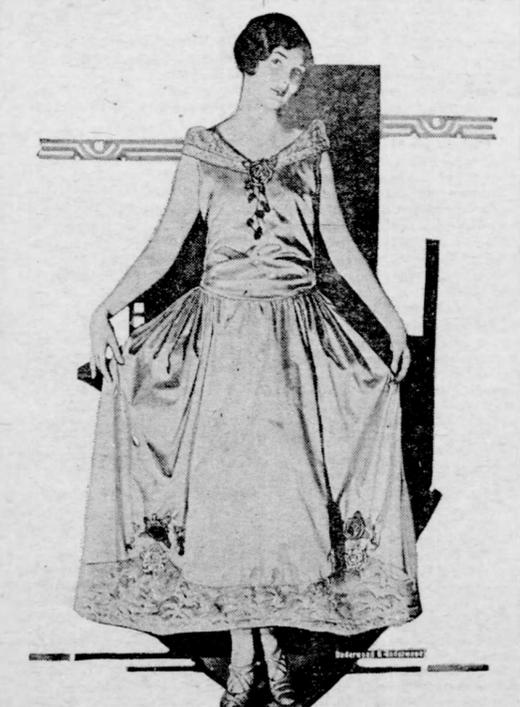

At the great National Dairy Exposition at Indianapolis in October, 1925, the most coveted prize offered—first award for State Herd—was captured by Canadian Holsteins. The Senior and Grand Champion Female was a Canadian cow. Likewise, the Junior Champion Bull came from Canada. Of 24 animals entered by 10 Canadian breeders and shown against approximately 300 of the best dairy type animals produced in North America, 18 won individual prizes. The uniform high quality of the exhibit from Canada was conceded by all and was very generally commented upon.

Equally great are the opportunities in Canada for grain growing, mixed farming and fruit and poultry raising. Cheaper land, larger crops and bigger profits await you—along with a cordial welcome, and every facility for prosperous, independent life. Three hundred million acres of North America's richest agricultural land—virgin soil on which the best hard wheat in the world can be raised at lowest cost and marketed at highest prices!

This most productive land is fully served by railroads. Freight rates are lower than in the States. Land taxes, too, are lighter. Good roads, markets, schools, and churches. Rural telephone service. Good neighbors, who probably include folks from your home district. Yet the cost is only $15 to $20 an acre—with long-term payments arranged, if desired. Farther back from the railroads, free homesteads, partially wooded, are still available within reasonable distances. In 1924 Americans took up 608 of these homesteads; during the period from January to November, 1925, Americans took up 657 homesteads in Canada.

If you are a farmer, or a young man eager to farm under ideal conditions, do not put this paper down until you write a letter to salaried officials of the Government of Canada who are at your service to assist you in moving and getting suitably located. Canada wants you and is willing to serve you. Act at once!

Among the materials employed for afternoon dresses are crepe de chine, crepe chenet, satin and tulle, while colors tend toward tones of black, red, coral, violet, bordeaux, violette, mauve, gray, beige, old pink and some brown.

Black Velvet and Cream Lace
With a molded bodice and smart uneven hemline, the new frocks of black velvet for the young girl gain in chic by the addition of collars and cuffs of cream lace.

Satin and Wool
The satin coat for winter is often lined with wool, particularly with light-colored kasha cloth. Inevitably, it is fur-trimmed.

Fur Cuffs
Fur cuffs have slipped off the sleeves to the gloves. Overdress hand coverings, which are entirely without linings, are being decorated with narrow cuffs of fur which usually contrasts with the shade of the kid to which it is attached.

OTHER SIDE OF AREA TEST

West Bend, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:—

I seek the favor of a brief space in your valuable paper in which to write a word to my fellow farmers of Washington county in relation to the effort being made to bring about the general test of the herds of the county for tuberculosis. My experience as a veterinarian through many years of active practice brings me to know that the tuberculin test is not dependable in any great degree in determining the existence of tuberculosis in the animal to which it is applied.

In Denmark where the method of testing by injecting tuberculin was first developed, it is used as one of several tests for the purpose of determining whether an animal is afflicted with the disease. The scientists of Denmark do not depend upon a tuberculin test alone but upon a variety of careful observations and a greater study of the animal. Moreover, they use the greatest care in making the test. It is always made by the herdsmen and not by a stranger. One test is not relied upon as dependable evidence of the existence of tuberculosis but the tests are repeated after varying periods of time. Herds are not slaughtered after a single test is made as in Wisconsin. In my own observations where as many as eighteen cows of a herd reacted and were condemned and driven to the slaughter house not one of the carcasses showed any signs of tubercular ailment and nearly all of the carcasses were turned over to the butcher for sale in the markets.

Moreover, I believe that great damage is done to herds through the careless use of the tuberculin. There are many instances in the state of Wisconsin where herds have not reacted for several years and where, upon another test, many of the herds tested reacted and were condemned. Whether the use of the tuberculin brought about infection and the presence of the disease no one is able to show.

It is to be remarked as worthy of attention that where herds have been kept under model conditions in modern barns with perfect ventilation and complete care, tuberculosis has developed after the tuberculin test was used on more than one occasion.

It is my belief as a veterinarian that the careful farmer who keeps track of his herd and observes the members of it carefully will always be able to determine whether or not any of his cows are afflicted with tuberculosis, sooner and more satisfactorily than can be determined by the use of the tuberculin test.

It brings about great loss to farmers in many cases and occasionally the entire ruin of men who have worked for many years in building up the herds of cattle.

It is an expensive method of protecting the public from disease.

The burden upon the state is very large and it must be borne by the taxpayers. If the test was dependable and reliable this loss might be stood without complaint, and no one who has followed the results reached by applying the tuberculin test in this or any other state will truthfully say that it has eradicated tuberculosis among cattle. If, indeed, it has lessened the number of cows suffering from the disease.

Very truly yours,
Dr. M. W. Braden,
West Bend, Wis., R. 7, Bx. 84

When You Get to Florida

HAINES CITY GETS YOU

IT GETS you, first because of its natural attractions. Its elevation of 221 feet above sea level, and the six lakes within the city's limits mirror the blue of a frequently cloudless sky.

Again, Haines City gets you because of its own possibilities. "This town has a thrill," said a stranger who came to look it over. "That's it exactly. A Thrill! Everybody senses it. It's something in the air. You can't help but feel it. Things are on the move. Improvements everywhere. Wide streets. New stores being built. Enlargement of older premises. Churches going up. A Big Hotel taking shape. A new Grammar School. A new Theatre. New Everything. Yes, there's a business thrill about the place.

And it's infectious, too. Come to Haines City and it will get you. There's nothing unpleasant about it. In fact, it's just what most people are seeking, namely, a good place to locate where there's a chance for a profitable investment; a place where one can grow with the growth of a city that knows what it wants, and which is now reaching out to its destiny.

FIRE DESTROYS FARM HOME

The Henry Waechter home near the western village limits of Jackson, was practically destroyed by fire early last week Wednesday morning. Mrs. Waechter was awakened by the smoke in the house at about 12:30 in the morning, and when she wanted to awaken her husband to move furniture from the house found that the fire had gained such headway that nothing could be moved. Mr. and Mrs. Waechter, attired in their night clothes, each took one of the children and carried them to the neighbors. The damage was confined to the house, which is practically gutted, the entire furniture is scorched, destroyed or badly damaged by smoke and water; the entire house will have to be rebuilt. The Waechter family has been very unfortunate with fires during the past year. Early in spring their home was damaged, then they moved into temporary quarters in the barn, which was struck by lightning, but no damage done, and now a very disastrous one.—West Bend News.
