LOCAL BOY CHOSEN AMONG U. W. ACES

The following clipping was taken from the Daily Cardinal, Madison, Wis.:

"Posed with dignity, 107 men and women of the junior and senior classes have recently faced the camera with the well known 'Libe' as their background.

"And each time the camera clicked it recorded another picture of an 'ace' of one deemed worthy to be included in that section of the 1927 Badger which is devoted to photographs of those who are doing things at Wisconsin.

"Thus is the mystery of prominent juniors and seniors posing at the library solved, although for many days passing students wondered why the public picture taking was in progress.

"The Badger ace section has become famous as Wisconsin's student hall of fame, for only those upperclassmen are included in its pages who have shown outstanding ability in some major activities, according to Ewart L. Merica '27, editor-in-chief of the year book."

Edwin Morgenroth, son of Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Morgenroth of this village, a Senior at the University, has been honored by being selected as one of the Aces. Congratulations to you Edwin.

HOOT GIBSON IS CANADIAN KIDS' HERO

Going to and from the Calgary Stampede, Hoot Gibson, Universal star, traveled a long triumphal route lined with thousands of vacationing children who crowded the railroad stations from California to Alberta.

"The Calgary Stampede," a Universal-Jewel, starring Gibson, which was made on the actual location in Canada during a two-month's sojourn there and which is reputed to be the biggest and finest picture in which Gibson has ever starred will be shown at the Opera House tomorrow, Sunday.

The trip proved that Gibson is probably the most popular Western actor with the countless dwellers of the small towns and that he reigns supreme in the hearts of boys and girls of country towns and cities alike.

All the rapid action intermingled with heart throbs which has endeared Gibson to his fans has been included in "The Calgary Stampede." The story calls for good acting and Gibson's performance proves that he is the one outstanding Western player who can ride skillfully and act as well.

The story includes action by the Royal Northwest Mounted Police in which actual members of that organization take part. All the atmosphere of the picture is realistic as not a scene was shot south of the Canadian border.

The story was written by E. Richard Schayer and Don Isa. Included in the cast of the picture are Virginia Brown Faire, Clark Comstock, Philo McCullough, W. J. McCulley, Ena Gregory, Yves Seabury, Bill Gillis, Frank Rice, Charles Sellon and Tex Young.

REV. CSATLOS SENDS GREETING

Rev. J. Csatlós of New Philadelphia, O., former pastor of the Salem Reformed church at Wayne writes interesting letter to the publishers of the Statesman. We hereby take the liberty of publishing the same in the interest of the readers of the Statesman:

New Philadelphia, O., March 5-26, Kewaskum Statesman, Kewaskum, Wis.

Dear Friends:—

"I still enjoy reading the news of Wayne and its surroundings as the 13 years of service there seem to have made lasting impressions. I realized this very fact during the last Christmas and New Years holidays, more than ever before, I was overwhelmed by the many good wishes sent me. It really was as though the old saying, 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder', was proving itself true. I too, often wish I could again see the many dear friends and thank them personally for their many favors shown me, as it is, let this suffice. Last summer the family and I spent several weeks with the dear folks at home, in the old New England States, Bridgeport, Conn., on the shores of Long Island Sound. The refreshing ocean breeze, boating, bathing and fishing, all enjoyed immensely. Here in eastern Ohio the harvest was good last summer, especially the corn. The winter was exceptionally cold so far, had more snow and cold weather than for many years past. This reminded me somewhat of the good solid winters of Wisconsin. Personally I have not been so well since November, but feel better again. The family kept well, Paul goes to High School, Ruth and Esther to the District school and Lydia and Marie are keeping Mrs. Csatlós busy at home. The children still speak of Wayne and occasionally ask, when are we going home again. Their birth place seems to remain their 'home sweet home.' I tell them, the ministers and families have as a rule many homes and yet no home of their own. We are pilgrims, sojourners until by the grace of God the eternal home is reached. God speed you well dear friends, one and all and keep us all ever ready for blessed eternity, we shall then surely meet again, if not here below, why in the realms of heaven above.

Your friend,
J. L. Csatlós.

SLINGER BREWERY RAIDED

The Slinger Brewery of which Hy. Storck is president, was raided early last Sunday morning by prohibition agents of Chicago. More than 2,000 barrels of beer said to have an alcoholic content of 3.35 per cent was seized. Henry Storck and three truck drivers were arrested and were ordered to appear before a federal court commission in Milwaukee.

The Storck Products company was refused a license by Prohibition Commissioner E. C. Yellowley of the northern district when application was made for a 1926 brewery license. The refusal was based on alleged delinquencies of the brewery in 1922. He also ordered an inquiry into circumstances which had permitted the company to operate during 1923, 1924 and 1925. About three weeks ago the company asked for an injunction to restrain the dry office from interfering with its "legitimate" business. This was temporarily granted and the hearing on the permanent order was to have come up in Federal court last Saturday but was postponed.

VISITS FORD MOTOR CO. AT DETROIT, MICH.

"I've just had two days of the greatest industrial education in the world," declared Carl F. Schaefer, local Ford dealer when he returned to his home here Thursday, after a visit to the Ford Motor Company at Detroit. Mr. Schaefer was a member of a party made up of Ford dealers and salesmen from all over this territory. "To the average person, the name Ford probably suggests a Ford car, truck or Fordson tractor. Yet that name in its familiar script is also the trade mark for scores of other industries which have organized into one big unit to make the cars, trucks and tractors a greater value.

LONDON-NEW YORK LINKED BY RADIO

Four-Hour Test of 3,500-Mile Hookup Is Satisfactory; Listeners Elated.

London.—Post-office engineers and Londoners generally were elated over the astonishing success of the recent wireless telephoning experiments that took place between London and New York.

Predictions were rife for a regular commercial transatlantic wireless service in the near future.

New York.—Scores of conversations were held by telephone between New York and London at a demonstration of transatlantic radio telephone by the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the Radio Corporation of America and the British general post office.

More than thirty engineers and newspaper men talked from the New York telephone headquarters to a similar group at the British post office in London. The hearing on the New York side was equal to local service. The Englishmen said that it was much better than they were used to.

Representatives of the New York newspapers and of many press services were guests of the telephone company at the New York office and held conversation, one at a time, with about thirty British press representatives.

When the conversation lagged some one on the other side thrust the microphone out the window of the British post-office building while the bells of St. Paul's cathedral, just across the street, were pealing. They rang beautifully across the Atlantic.

Thirty or forty persons with earpieces listened to each conversation and the thrill of hearing London as clearly as the Bronx or Brooklyn kept them interested through four hours of small talk. Sentences were blurred by static, but this occurred rarely. Practically no trouble was experienced at the American end of the 3,500-mile conversation but there were occasional complaints from the British end.

Three and a half years of experiment on transatlantic telephony preceded the demonstration. One reason for holding it was that many radio experts have constructed sets which enable them to capture the weekly experimental conversation across the Atlantic on the 5,770-meter and the 5,200-meter wave length. Inquiries were received at the telephone offices in such a volume that it was decided to answer them all at once by a test which would show the progress made in the direction of commercial service between England and the United States.

The day selected for the demonstration was the fiftieth birthday of the telephone. On March 7, 1876, the first telephone patent was issued to Alexander Graham Bell.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS

The year 1925 was the most prosperous the Philippine government has experienced since the slump that followed the ending of the World war. It is officially stated that when the books are balanced the revenues will show a surplus over expenditures of approximately $3,500,000.

The Navajo Indians of Arizona must pay half the cost of a $200,000 bridge across the Colorado river near Lee Ferry, the senate decided in finally approving a deficiency report on the $425,000,000 deficiency bill.

Granting of honorable discharges to soldiers who enlisted during the World war and who were dismissed because of misrepresentation of age, is provided in a bill passed by the house.

President Coolidge feels that it is up to congress to determine whether the "lame duck" session immediately after each congressional election should be abolished, and if a resolution proposing a conference amendment to this effect is passed by both houses he will approve it.

Asks Leave for War Vets.—Washington.—War veterans in the government service would be granted a 90-day leave of absence to attend the American Legion convention in Paris next year, under a bill introduced by Representative Britten (R., Ill.).

Test Daylight Saving Law.—Washington.—Validity of state daylight saving laws will be tested in a case brought by the Massachusetts state senate and others, which the Supreme court has set for hearing October 4.

U. S. Grain Exports Higher.—Washington.—Exports of grain from the United States for the week ending March 8 were 1,387,000 bushels, as compared with 935,000 bushels the previous week.

London-Paris Flight 98 Min.—Paris.—A new airplane with three engines developing a total of 1,200 horsepower, and carrying eight passengers, established a new London-to-Paris speed record of 98 minutes.

COOLIDGE'S FIRST YEAR IN OWN RIGHT

President Is Now Enjoying Excellent Health.

Washington.—President Coolidge has rounded out his first year as occupant of the White House in his own right. In all he has served more than two and one-half years as chief executive, his elevation to that office upon the death of Warren G. Harding preceding by nineteen months his inauguration last March 4 as a President elected by the people.

Reviewing the last year, President Coolidge has the satisfaction of realizing that two of his major recommendations for congress—adherence to the world court and tax reduction—had been acted upon.

He was hopeful that a number of other legislative proposals he has sponsored will be enacted into law before the close of the present session.

A loser in his fight last spring to have Charles B. Warren of Michigan confirmed as attorney general, Mr. Coolidge faces a possible rejection by the senate of three other nominations, those of Wallace McCamant of Oregon, who nominated him for vice president at the 1920 Republican convention, to be a federal circuit judge; Thomas F. Woodlock of New York, to be a member of the Interstate Commerce commission, and Charles W. Hunt of Iowa, to be a member of the federal trade commission.

The White House grand which has worn down more than one President apparently has had no ill effect on Mr. Coolidge. He is enjoying excellent health, having recovered from the cold which sent him to bed recently for two days. He weighs as much, if not more than he did on entering the White House, although he takes no outdoor exercise except evening strolls through the business section of the capital, and goes through a daily ordeal of shaking hands with dozens to hundreds of visitors, apparently enjoying it.

Explosion Entombs 28 Miners; 39 Are Saved

Eccles, Va.—One man was killed, twenty-eight miners were entombed, and thirty-nine others were rescued alive following an explosion in mines No. 5 and 6 of the Crab Orchard Improvement company near here.

Hope for the twenty-eight men in No. 5 mine dwindled as a barrier blocked further rescue work near the bottom of the shaft.

Many of those brought out by rescue crews were badly burned and were suffering from the effects of poison gas.

The explosion was in the same mine which was wrecked by a gas explosion in April, 1914, with 186 fatalities. At that time, it was an open light which ignited the coal gas and caused the disaster.

Mine No. 5 lies at the bottom of a 520-foot shaft and is underneath mine No. 6, which has a depth of 260 feet. A connecting shaft joins the two.

MARCH 31 DATE TO OPEN 'WET' HEARING

Senators and Private Citizens Will Be Allowed to Express Views.

Washington.—With Representative Hill (Rep., Ill.) unanimously re-elected chairman, the unofficial house committee for modification of the Volstead act will hold its open special hearings on March 31 preliminary to drafting a bill to revise the prohibition law.

The modificationists have instructed Mr. Hill, who has led them in congress for some years, to appoint a "temperance board" of five to consider questions on that subject and to outline a program for the committee.

At the hearings all members of congress and private citizens will be given opportunity to express their views regarding modification. The committee hopes then to be able to whip these opinions and suggestions into a bill for presentation in the house.

The subject of prohibition not only was brought up in the house a few days ago but it entered the records of the Supreme court, where John W. Davis and Assistant Attorney General Willbraut debated a legal question arising from the provision of the law under which permits to sell distilled spirits are issued.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, added a statement to the discussion, declaring the suggestion of Senator Edwards (Dem., N. J.) for a national referendum on prohibition to be illegal and impracticable.

The Anti-Saloon league, in turn, was attacked again as a "hypocritical, unlawful, un-American pest," by Representative Britten (Rep., Ill.), who in a statement said he had been assured by Chairman Snell of the house rules committee that any prohibition investigation undertaken at this session undoubtedly would include the activities of the league.

On the house floor, Representative Tinkham (Rep., Mass.) declared churches and other religious bodies were seeking political power by assisting propaganda for "sumptuary prohibition laws." His speech was not without interruptions from the dry forces, but these were met by counterattacks that the wetts were not given a chance to present a case.

Church organizations, Mr. Tinkham said, had "filled the corridors of the capitol with their paid professional agents, have directed judicial appointments and are attempting to dictate international, domestic and economic policies."

Muscle Shoals Lease Is O. K.'d by Senate

Washington.—The long-pending struggle over Muscle Shoals, which has been in congress for years, took another turn when the senate adopted, with modifications, the resolution for a joint committee of congress to conduct negotiations for a lease of the government properties at Muscle Shoals and report back to congress.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 15 to 26. However, it differed in important particulars from the resolution as it was passed by the house. In a general way, the joint committee plan has the backing of the administration.

Before passing the resolution, the senate adopted an amendment which, in effect, requires that any concern leasing the Muscle Shoals property shall distribute the power equitably to the surrounding states and communities. This change was one which was backed by the members from states surrounding Alabama.

In addition to nationwide operations covering the Pacific Coast, Mid-Continent and Atlantic seaboard territories, the new company will fall heir to an export business assuring it a strong position in the international field. Additional acquisitions are foreshadowed by its charter, which grants the company powers to purchase the securities of other corporations.

The Kitchen Cabinet

EVERYDAY FOODS

When you have a nice slice of ham and wish to serve it a little different, try:

Ham en Casserole.—Take a thick slice of ham, wipe and remove the outside edges of fat, put into a frying pan, cover with tepid water and let stand for several hours. Prepare sufficient potatoes thinly sliced for the family. Put a thick layer of potatoes in a casserole and cover with the ham. Pour over enough milk to cover the potatoes and cover, cook slowly in a moderate oven for two hours. Season with pepper and salt if needed before taking from the oven.

Angel Food Pudding.—When fresh eggs are plentiful, this makes a delightful pudding and it is not expensive. Bake an angel food in a large sheet. Cut into rounds or oblongs and dip in fondant and cool. Serve with crushed strawberry sauce, fresh or canned. If canned, the fruit may be strained, and the sauce thickened a little with flour and butter cooked together.

Belmont Minced Chicken.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter and add one-fourth cupful of flour, stir until well blended, then pour on gradually while stirring, one and one-half cupfuls of chicken stock. Bring to the boiling point, season with one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt and a teaspoonful of paprika. Add one cupful of cream, one-third of a cupful of cooked sweetbreads cut into cubes, one-half tablespoonful of truffles or chicken livers finely minced. Let stand in a double boiler to heat. Serve in a dish garnished with a border of mashed potatoes; brown in the oven before serving.

Orange Pie.—Bake a shell of rich pastry and heap into it sliced oranges that have been standing in sugar until well sweetened. Cover with whipped cream or floating island and serve. The juice from the fruit will need to be drained. For shortcake, the juice will be sufficient to moisten the cake well.

Apple Pancakes.—Mix and sift together two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt. Add one and one-fourth cupfuls of milk, one tablespoonful of fat, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two beaten eggs and one cupful of grated tart apple. Bake the cakes and stack them, spread with butter and grated maple sugar between the layers. Serve very hot.

Egg and Tomato Luncheon Dish.—Brown six slices of bacon cut into small pieces and pour over it, one can of tomato soup. When the mixture simmers, break four eggs into it and let them poach until firm. Remove the eggs to a platter, pour the sauce around them and garnish with parsley or bits of sweet pickles.

Fruit in the Diet

The importance of fruit cannot be overestimated. The natural fruit is always preferable and usually more digestible, yet when cooked it gives variety and that is always an important factor.

Apple Snow.—Peel and quarter tart apples, add boiling water and cook until tender. Press through a sieve. To two cupfuls of the pulp add one-half cupful of honey, the juice and grated rind of half a lemon. Heat to the boiling point, add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin softened in one-third of a cupful of cold water, stir until the gelatin is melted. Chill and when the mixture begins to thicken add the stiffly beaten white of two eggs and beat with a Dover beater until firm. Turn into a mold and when firm serve unmolded with cream or boiled custard.

Compote of Bananas.—Make a syrup of sugar or honey and half a cupful of water. Peel and scrape two or three bananas, then cut them into thin slices; add to the syrup and boil, shaking the pan to have all sides equally cooked. Add a little grated lemon or orange rind for flavor. Skin the banana slices to a plate as they soften. When all are cooked continue to boil the syrup until thick, cool and add the banana slices and serve with whipped cream.

Fruit Salad.—For each serving take a slice of pineapple, the pulp of one-fourth of a grapefruit, half a canned pear, three heart leaves of lettuce, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one-fourth of a teaspoonful each of salt and paprika. Arrange the fruit on the lettuce, beat the salad dressing until thick and well blended, pour over the fruit and serve at once. Chill the dressing with a bit of ice while mixing. Garnish with a cherry.

Crumbs mixed with grated chocolate and heated until the chocolate melts, then served with sweetened whipped cream, make a very good emergency dessert.

Has "Tuber Coalhouse"

A woman sought aid of a London hospital physician after the family doctor diagnosed her husband's illness as "tuber coalhouse." The hospital physicians gave the same diagnosis, claiming the man's illness was due to working in the coal yards.

Scientific Discovery

Oil fields and other valuable mineral deposits may be discovered by measurements of the heat in deep wells, according to geologists.

HIS FIRST BATTLE

Synopsis—Baree is born in a vast tangle of fallen timber that shuts out the light of day. He is the son of Kazan, the dog, and of Gray Wolf, the blind wolf. He makes the acquaintance of his father and sees sunlight for the first time. He gets the use of his legs.

Chapter I—Continued

In a way Baree sensed this. He was not afraid of the strange blood-curdling cries they made in the black spruce tops. But once fear entered into him, and he scurried back to his mother. It was when one of the winged hunters of the air swooped down on a snowshoe rabbit, and the squealing agony of the doomed creature set his heart thumping like a little hammer. He felt in those cries the nearness of that one ever-present tragedy of the wild—death. He felt it again that night when, muffled close to Gray Wolf, he listened to the fierce outcry of a wolf-pack that was close on the heels of a young caribou bull. And the meaning of it all, and the wild thrill of it all, came home to him early in the gray dawn when Kazan returned, holding between his jaws a huge rabbit that was still kicking and squinting with life.

This rabbit was the climax in the first chapter of Baree's education. It was as if Gray Wolf and Kazan had planned it all out, so that he might receive his first introduction in the art of killing. When Kazan had dropped the hare, he approached the big baree cautiously. The back of Wapoo's, the rabbit, was broken. His round eyes were glazed, and he had ceased to feel pain. But to Baree, as he dug his tiny teeth into the heavy fur under Wapoo's throat, the hare was very much alive. The teeth did not go through into the flesh. With puppyish fierceness Baree hung on. He thought that he was killing. He could feel the dying convulsions of Wapoo. He could hear the last gasping breaths leaving the warm body, and he snarled and tugged until finally he felt back with a mouthful of fur. When he returned to the attack, Wapoo was quite dead, and Baree continued to bite and snarl until Gray Wolf came with her sharp fangs and tore the rabbit to pieces. After that followed the feast.

So Baree came to understand that to eat meant to kill, and as other days and nights passed, there grew in him swiftly the hunger for flesh. In this he was the true wolf. From Kazan he had taken other and stronger inheritance—the dog. He was magnificently black, which in later days gave him the name of Kuskeka Moho-kum—the black wolf. On his breast was a star. His right ear was tipped with white. His tail, at six weeks, was lumpy and long low. It was a wolf's tail. His ears were Gray Wolf's ears—sharp, short, pointed, always alert. His fore-shoulders gave promise of being splendidly like Kazan's, and when he stood up he was like the tree-dog except that he always stood sideways to the point or object he was watching. This, again, was the wolf, for a dog faces the direction in which he is looking intently.

One brilliant night, when Baree was two months old, and when the sky was filled with stars and a June moon so bright that it seemed scarcely higher than the tall spruce-tops, Baree settled back on his haunches and howled. It was a first effort. But there was no mistake in the note of it. It was the wolf-howl. But a moment later when Baree sunk up to Kazan, as if deeply ashamed of his effort, he was wagging his tail in an unmistakably amicable manner. And this again was the dog. If Tusoo, the dead Indian trapper, could have seen him then, he would have judged him by that wagging of his tail. It revealed the fact that deep in his heart—and in his soul, if we can concede that he had one—Baree was dog.

In another way Tusoo would have found judgment of him. At two months the wolf whelp has forgotten how to play. He is a slinking part of the wilderness, already at work preying on creatures smaller and more helpless than himself. Baree still played. In his excursions away from the windfall he had never gone farther than the creek, a hundred yards from where his mother lay. He had helped to tear many dead and dying rabbits into pieces; he believed, if he thought upon the matter at all, that he was extraordinary fierce and courageous. But it was his ninth week before he felt his nose and fought his terrible battle with the young owl in the edge of the black forest.

The fact that Oohoomiseew, the big owl, had made her nest in a broken stub not far from the windfall was destined to change the whole course of Baree's life, just as the blinding of Gray Wolf had clunged here. The creek ran close past the stub, which had been shrouded by lightning; and this stub stood in a still, dark place in the forest, surrounded by tall, black spruce and enveloped in gloom even in broad day. Many times Baree had gone to the edge of this mysterious bit of forest and had peered in curiously, and with a growling desire.

On this day of his great battle its here was overpowering. Little by little he entered into it, his eyes shining brightly and his ears alert for the slightest sounds that might come out of it. His heart beat faster. The gloom enveloped him more. He forgot the windfall and Kazan and Gray Wolf. Here before him lay the thrill of adventure. He heard stranger sounds, but very soft sounds, as if made by padded feet and downy wings, and they filled him with a thrilling expectancy. Under his feet there were no grass or weeds or flowers, but a wonderful brown carpet of soft evergreen needles. They felt good to his feet, and were so velvety that he could not hear his own movement.

He was fully three hundred yards from the windfall when he passed Oohoomiseew's stub and into a thick growth of young balsams. And there—directly in his path—crouched the monster!

Papayuchiseew (Young Owl) was not more than a third as large as Baree. But he was a terrifying looking object. To Baree he seemed all head and eyes. He could see no body at all. Kazan had never brought in anything like this, and for a full minute he remained very quiet, eyeing it speculatively. Papayuchiseew did not move a feather. But as Baree advanced, a cautious step at a time, the bird's eyes grew bigger and the feathers about his head ruffled up as if stirred by a bit of wind. He came of a fighting family, this little Papayuchiseew—a savage, fearless, and killing family—and even Kazan would have taken note of those ruffling feathers.

With a space of two feet between them, the pup and the owl eyed each other. In the moment, if Gray Wolf could have seen, she might have said to Baree: "Use your legs—and run!" And Oohoomiseew, the old owl, might have said to Papayuchiseew: "You little fool—use your wings and fly!"

They did neither—and the fight began. Papayuchiseew started it, and with a single wild yelp Baree went back in a hump, the owl's beak fastened like a red-hot vise in the soft flesh at the end of his nose. That one yelp of surprise and pain was Baree's first and last cry in the fight. The wolf surged in him; rage and the desire to kill possessed him. As Papayuchiseew hung on, he made a curious hissing sound; and as Baree rolled and gnashed his teeth and fought to free himself from that amazing grip on his nose, fierce little snarls rose out of his throat.

For fully a minute Baree had no use of his jaws. Then, by accident, he wedged Papayuchiseew in a crotch of a low ground-shrub, and a bit of his nose gave way. He might have run then, but instead of that he was back at the owl like a flash. Flop went Papayuchiseew on his back, and Baree buried his needle-like teeth in the bird's breast. It was like trying to bite through a pillow, the feathers were so close and thick. Deeper and deeper Baree sank his fangs, and just as they were beginning to prick the owl's skin, Papayuchiseew—jabbing a little blindly with a beak that snapped sharply every time it closed—got him by the ear.

The pain of that hold was excruciating to Baree, and he made a more desperate effort to get his teeth through his enemy's thick armor of feathers. In the struggle they discovered his wings as a fighting asset. An owl has never really begun to fight until he uses his wings, and with a joyous hissing, Papayuchiseew began beating his antagonist so fast and so viciously that Baree was dazed. He was compelled to close his eyes, and he snapped blindly. For the first time since the battle began he felt a strong inclination to get away. He tried to tear himself free with his forepaws, but Papayuchiseew—slowly in reason but of firm conviction—hung to Baree's ear like grim fate.

At this critical point, when the understanding of defeat was forming itself swiftly in Baree's mind, chance saved him. His fangs closed on one of the owl's tender feet. Papayuchiseew gave a sudden squeak. The ear was free at last—and with a snarl of triumph Baree gave a vicious tug at Papayuchiseew's leg. In the excitement of battle he had not heard the rushing tumult of the creek close under them, and over the edge of a rock Papayuchiseew and he went together, the chill water of the rain-swollen stream muffling a final snarl and a final hiss of the two little fighters.

An owl has never really begun to fight until he uses his wings, and with a joyous hissing, Papayuchiseew began beating his antagonist so fast and so viciously that Baree was dazed. He was compelled to close his eyes, and he snapped blindly. For the first time since the battle began he felt a strong inclination to get away. He tried to tear himself free with his forepaws, but Papayuchiseew—slowly in reason but of firm conviction—hung to Baree's ear like grim fate.

At this critical point, when the understanding of defeat was forming itself swiftly in Baree's mind, chance saved him. His fangs closed on one of the owl's tender feet. Papayuchiseew gave a sudden squeak. The ear was free at last—and with a snarl of triumph Baree gave a vicious tug at Papayuchiseew's leg. In the excitement of battle he had not heard the rushing tumult of the creek close under them, and over the edge of a rock Papayuchiseew and he went together, the chill water of the rain-swollen stream muffling a final snarl and a final hiss of the two little fighters.

To Baree it was a different matter. He went down almost like a stone. A mighty roaring filled his ears; it was dark, suffocating, terrible. In the swift current he was twisted over and over. For twenty feet he was under water. Then he rose to the surface and desperately began using his legs. It was of little use. He had only time to blink once or twice and catch a lungful of air when he shot into a current that was running like a millrace between the butts of two fallen trees, and for another twenty feet the sharpest eyes could not have seen him or hide of him. He came up again at the edge of a shallow riffle over which the water ran like the rapids at Niagara in miniature, and for fifty or sixty yards he was flung like a hairy ball. From this he was hurled into a deep, cold pool; and then—half dead—he found himself crawling out on a gravelly bar.

For a long time Baree lay there in a pool of sunshine without moving. His ear hurt him; his nose was raw, and burned as if he had thrust it into fire. His legs and body were sore, and as he began to wander along the gravel bar, he was the most wretched pup in the world. He was also completely turned around. In vain he looked about him for some familiar mark—something that might guide him back to his windfall home. Everything was strange. He did not know that the water had flung him out on the wrong side of the stream, and that to reach the windfall he would have to cross it again. He whined, but that was as loud as his voice rose. Gray Wolf could have heard his barking, for the windfall was not more than two hundred and fifty yards up the stream. But the wolf in Baree held him silent except for his low whining.

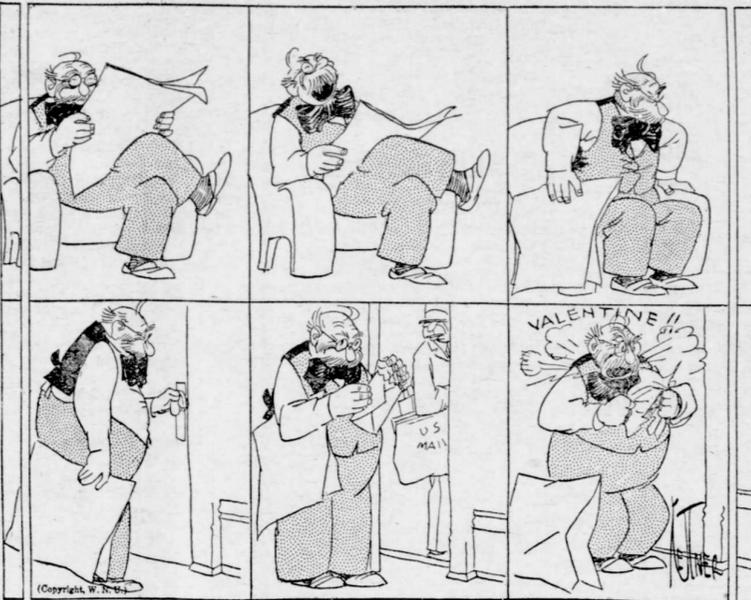

Striking the main shore, Baree began going downstream. This was away from the windfall, and each step that he took carried him farther and farther from home. At the end of half an hour Baree would even have welcomed Papayuchiseew. And he would not have fought him—he would have inquired, if possible, the way back home.

Well, Baree, has had his first battle and come out alive. Also, he is lost and homesick. What next?

Picture Diagram of Receiver Which Will Be of Assistance to Novices Who Desire to Construct Voluminous DX Set.

By HERMAN BERNARD

Associate Institute of Radio Engineers

Once upon a time one saw variable condensers that had about 43 plates and were rated at 500 mfd. capacity. Do you remember the days? That value of capacity was extremely popular. But as receiver design improved and a higher ratio of inductance to capacity was thought advisable, such values as .00025 and particularly .0005 mfd. came into favor. Now the .0005 mfd. condenser is the most popular, and as they fall in nicely with schemes of space conservation they well deserve their hour.

But the .001 mfd. tuning condenser still has its use. It is in the antenna circuit. There are several ways of factoring it, but the one shown in the diagram is as good as any.

The condenser is used to tune the aerial circuit. The reason for the abnormal capacity is that it is perfectly normal in the position where it is incorporated. It is in the aerial circuit and the antenna system capacity is across it. To be sure the coil L would seem to be short-circuiting that antenna capacity, but that is not quite the case. The inductances L and L1 are in the antenna-ground system, and the aerial-ground capacity plays its important part in that lead, this joint contribution constituting the reactance of the circuit. A .0005 mfd. condenser might be used instead of .001 mfd. If one were sure of what one's aerial capacity was, but the .001 gives a wider margin of safety.

Coil Data.

L1, L2, L3 may be a commercial 8-circuit tuning coil, the capacity of C2 depending on the coil used. Just often this would be .0005 mfd. For those desiring to wind their own 3-circuit coil, a 3-inch diameter stator form, 4 inches high, may be employed, the primary L1 consisting of 10 turns. Leave 1/4 inch space, then wind 45 turns for the secondary L2. The tickler is wound on a 2-inch diameter, 2 inches high and consists of 22 turns. The wire is No. 24 double cotton covered. It is often more convenient to use smaller wire on the tickler, say No. 28, for it doesn't matter there, on the resistance score. As a shaft must penetrate the stator and be secured to the rotor, part of the rotor winding will be separated, at least the width of this shaft, and finer wire makes it easier to put on enough turns to get regeneration on the highest receivable wave.

The secondary is to be tuned with .0005 mfd. For .00025 use 55 turns, for .001 use 33.

As for the coil L, that will require some experimenting. My own aerial has a capacity of .00027 and the proper coil, in conjunction with a .001 condenser for C2, tuned to 300 mfd. comprising 21 turns on a 3-inch diameter tuning No. 24 DCC wire being used. But some antenna systems will require a greater number of turns, some a lesser number. It is a good plan to put on 40 turns, then post 'em off, as necessity dictates.

The set operates efficiently on any of the popular types of tubes, including dry-cell tubes.

Mount the condenser C1 on the panel, also the condenser C2. Then mount the coil in the center and next put on the rheostat and jack. Put the baseboard temporarily against the panel bottom and provisionally place the coil L and the socket. The coil is at left, behind the first condenser, the socket at right. The aerial post will be at left rear, the ground post at rear center. A battery cable avoids the necessity of binding posts.

Wiring Directions.

Connect the "A" battery wiring on the baseboard parts first. Join "A" battery plus to the F plus post of the socket and to the rotary plates of C2. Connect A minus to one side of the rheostat, R1, the other side of R1 to the F minus post of the socket. The .001 type tubes have their filament, grid and plate posts differently positioned from the standard base tubes, so see that you correctly read the post designation on the socket.

After mounting L, connect aerial to one of L's terminals and to the stator of C1, while the rotor of C1 and the remaining terminal of L go to the beginning of the primary L1, the end of which goes to ground.

The end of the secondary goes to the lead that was connected to the rotary plates of C2 (the A plus lead), while the other terminal of L2 goes to one side of the grid condenser, C3. The other terminal of C3 is connected to the grid post of the socket, marked G on the socket. Across the grid condenser, which has mounting or clips for the purpose, is placed the grid leak, normally 2 meg., although the .-90 type tube will stand a higher value of resistance, say 5 meg. This plate post of the socket, marked P, goes to one terminal of L3, the other terminal of which is connected to the hooked spring of the jack.

It will be noted that in the picture diagram and in the text the grid return is designated as A plus, and this is correct for nearly all tubes, although in some few instances the grid return to A minus will work better.

The correct return is important.

Radio Phones Should Have Very Best Care

Radio phones should have the very best care possible and it is well to observe the following rules as to their treatment:

Do not drop the receivers or subject them to heavy jars in any way. A fall may demagnetize the permanent magnet.

Do not press on the metal which is seen through the hole in the cap. This diaphragm is made of very thin metal and must be a perfect plane to vibrate as intended. The slightest dent or bend will ruin it.

How to Find Center for the Rotor Shaft

Procure a piece of stiff paper with a straight edge and of any convenient width, with a length to reach around the circumference of the rotor or stator. Lay the paper around the part to be marked and cut the ends so they will touch; they must not overlap, thus forming a length exactly equal

Frequency of Generator

The frequency of a generator is equal to the number of poles multiplied by the number of revolutions per minute, divided by two. The product is divided by two because half of the poles are of opposite sign and there are only half the changes in linkings that there are poles.

Bakelite

Bakelite is made with phenol (carbolic acid) and formaldehyde, together with a binder of some sort under heat and pressure. Although formed by heat, the material will not again melt and change form when heated. Its form is set and remains thus forever.

VOGUE FAVORS SOFT-LINE SUITS; SELF-TRIMS FOR THE FELT HAT

THE task of selecting a new spring costume isn't going to be a task at all. It's going to prove a delightful experience. Couldn't be otherwise with everything pertaining to the vogue so joyously springlike in material, coloring and styling. Even the most blasé fashion connoisseur is due to find thrills in the doings of the mode this season. At sight of the gay togs for spring one's spirit just naturally tunes into a spring styles that are an appreciation for the rest of our apparel.

Along with the rest of our apparel, the tailored spring suit has departed from the severity of its ways, having taken on marvelous pastel coloring while both materials and styling are distinctly novel. Of course one may wear a man-tailored navy cloth suit and be up in the foremost rank of fashion, for there is a revival of navy this spring, but one may also wear a "dusty" mauve or an almond green, a bold rose or some equally as delectable a pastel colored tweed tailcoat and be attired quite as much to the mode's liking.

In the new models there is a tendency to feminized tailoring, which is most flattering in its youthful soft lines. Analyzing the chic suit in the picture from the standpoint of charm, firstly, it has color fascination being made of a novelty silk and wool tweed in two tones of green of the almond cast. Secondly, with it is worn a feminine blouse which is of printed silk crepe in exotic coloring, for crepe prints, mind you, are the last word in silken fabrics. Thirdly, this blouse interprets the vogue for fine plaits—"in doubt" have your spring tunic plaited, for plaits have taken on a new lease of life, playing a most important role throughout the designing of new clothes. Lastly, the crowning touch of smartness is achieved in the metal fabric tie wrapped choker fashion about the throat. The latest novelty is a scarf of this sort which resembles a tie and is worn tied about the throat as pictured or with a bow at the side with flowing ends. Plaid turtlenecks with tailored suits or coats are tres chic.

Attractive soft-line suits which are youthful show a coat of solid colored cloth worn with a plaited skirt of plaid or stripe material. Later these fancy plaited skirts will be topped with plain cloth capes which are lined with novelty material to match the skirt. Both capes and coats are apt to be finished with scarf collars.

Just as the felt hat seems about to retire from the millinery scene, back it comes again to the center of the fashion stage with some new intriguing act to perform. At present moment inventive genius and a pair of scissors are upholding the reputation of the felt chapeau as an outstanding number on the leading spring style programs.

The newer felt hats feature novelty

Farm Societies Have Weaknesses

Every Director Must Feel That He Has Accepted Position of Trust.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the serious weaknesses of many agricultural co-operatives is the tendency of members of boards of directors to shirk responsibility in the matter of management.

"Too frequently," says the United States Department of Agriculture, "the individual member looks upon his elevation to the office of director merely as a recognition of his standing in the community. Such an attitude is unfortunate and until every director comes to feel that he has accepted a trusteeship for the successful conduct of the business, co-operative enterprises will fail of attaining the full measure of success they wish to achieve."

Every Director Obligated. This trusteeship, say the department, obligates every director to inform himself thoroughly respecting the operations of the business with which he has become vitally connected. In addition he will need to understand fully the broader principles upon a thorough working knowledge of which depends, to a large extent, the degree of success and progress of the business.

"If lack of interest is a weakness," says a department economist, "the wrong kind of interest is equally bad. Too frequently one finds the board interfering instead of directing. It is the duty of the board to formulate policies and to see that these policies are carried out by the executives. Dictation by the board of the petty detail of day to day operation is not formulating policies. It is interference. Such interference can only result in unstable and unsatisfactory management."

Unwise Management. Probably the most frequent cause of unwise management, he points out, is a lack of essential facts, or if these be at hand, an unwillingness to face the facts. To the extent that the board of directors makes a real effort to understand the demand for its products, and to formulate price and merchandising policies on the basis of all the facts, rather than on the basis of mere opinion, he says, will its activities contribute to whatever measure of success is achieved.

Grapevines Thrive in a Wide Variety of Soils

Grapevines thrive in a wide variety of soils. Those that are too shallow, wet or excessively dry should be avoided. Sandy loams, loams and gravelly loams grow vigorous vines that carry productive crops, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. In commercial practice the vineyard is plowed early in the spring, then the soil is worked into a fine texture through cultivation and thus kept until the latter part of July. At this time a seedling of clover, millet, rape or rye and hairy vetch should be made. The crop thus put in is allowed to occupy the ground until the following spring, when it is plowed under. The home vineyard should be plowed or the soil spaded about the vines, and all weed growth suppressed during the active growing season. Usually frequent hand hoeing will suffice to accomplish this end.

Grapevines over a wide range of country are responding with increased growth and productiveness through the use of nitrate of soda scattered about the vines in early spring just as leaf growth is starting. The usual treatment per vine is six ounces of the material. Some commercial growers use twice this quantity per vine with good results. It might be well to begin with the smaller amount and gradually increase it if occasion requires.

Milk-Producing Cow Is Entitled to Good Feed

In order to be most profitable, all live stock must be fed for a definite purpose: For instance, a dry beef cow can be maintained very successfully and very cheaply on coarse, cheap feed such as corn fodder, corn silage, hay and straw. It would be a waste of money to feed such a cow any considerable amount of grain. A cow producing milk through the winter months, however, requires a good grain ration liberally fed in addition to a liberal supply of good roughage and it would be just as much a waste of money not to give this grain to the cow in milk as it would be to give it to the dry cow that doesn't need it. Likewise there are proper feeds and proper amounts of feed required by every type of live stock and the most economical and profitable feeding practice is to give each type of animal the kind and amount of feed needed by that type of animal.

Opinion That Silage Is Not Fit Food for Bulls

The opinion that silage is not a fit feed for bulls that are heading herds prevails quite generally. Whenever a sire becomes impotent one of the first questions asked is: "Do you give him silage?" This has led many to fear the feed like poison, far as the bull is concerned.

In view of this the experience of Prof. W. J. Fraser, head of the department of dairy husbandry of Illinois College of Agriculture, is enlightening. Professor Fraser says: "I have fed Holstein bulls 40 pounds of silage a day with no serious result in any way, when they were worked night and morning on the tread power. I think the amount of silage that can be fed depends entirely upon the amount of exercise the bull gets. If he stands around all the time the silage should be limited, or he will get too large in the barrel and too logy."

Plowing Under Clover

There are various opinions as to the best time for plowing under sweet clover. Some think it is best to let it grow until late April or May before plowing under. One will get more value out of sweet clover to plow it under in the spring before growth has started. Its fertilizing value at this time is mostly in the roots and quite deep in the ground. After growth has been made by late April, the clover has about the same fertilizing value.

UNION COUNTY, KENTUCKY, HAS DISPOSED OF ITS SCRUB SIRES

First Community in Country to Accomplish Feat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The manner in which Union county, Ky., disposed of its last scrub bull is described by County Agent R. O. Wilson in a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture. A survey made early in the year showed that cattle owners in Union county had in use 103 pure-bred bulls, 22 grades and seven scrubs. Through publicity and personal interviews with owners of grade and scrub bulls, the county agent succeeded in getting the last scrub bull in the county removed during the year. Of the 22 grade bulls only four remained, and their owners are planning to replace them with pure breeds. This county appears to be the first in the United States entirely free from scrub bulls, and it is very close to a pure-bred sire basis with respect to its breeding stock. The present status is the result of live stock betterment work started five years ago by County Agent L. C. Brewer. On January 1, 1923, 550 live stock owners in this county were participating in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign conducted by the various states and the United States Department of Agriculture. All of these stock owners have agreed to use pure-bred males exclusively in all breeding operations. Material financial benefits already are evident in the superior quality of the on-coming young stock.

To Exclude Fruit Stock

The Department of Agriculture has indicated that it will confirm the recommendations made last summer by nurserymen and horticulturists to restrict the importation of fruit and rose stocks. In making these recommendations the department's statement includes the suggestion that the members of the association should heartily co-operate with the American growers of seedling fruit stocks and rose stocks in their efforts to organize and develop production to the extent that it may be reasonably depended upon as an adequate source of supply.

FARM NOTES

Dark brown or black spots in potatoes may result from piling them too deeply in bins, from lack of ventilation, or too much warmth.

Grass is better than all for protecting plowshares from rust when they are stored for the winter, as the grease stays where it is put.

Pump seeds make the most vigorous plants. Thus, in one try-out with peas, the largest seeds of a sample produced a crop for picking four days earlier than the smallest ones.

Soy beans should be planted either with the corn planter in rows three feet apart at the rate of about 20 pounds of seed an acre, or with a grain drill at the rate of about 50 to 60 pounds an acre.

Both sweet and red clover may grow without nodules on their roots and on rich soil often make good growth. However, they generally become inoculated in time whether the seed is artificially inoculated or no.

To Ignore the Early Warnings of Kidney Trouble Is Serious and Often Fatal

ONE'S health depends upon one's kidneys. The kidneys must filter every drop of blood. If they fail to properly do this work, there's a poisoning of the whole system. Then comes backache, dizzy spells, bladder irregularities and loss of vitality. Why wait? Why not use Doan's Pills? Doan's have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

A Wisconsin Case

Albert Schroeder, retired farmer, 334 S. Main St., Hartsburg, Wis., says: "My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly. The condition of my kidneys brought on a dull ache through my back and when I stopped, sharp, cutting pains darted across my kidneys. I often had headaches and dizzy spells. After using Doan's Pills, I was relieved."

Radio Over the Phone

At The Hague, in Holland, a telephone subscriber can have radio also, says Popular Science Monthly, for a unique installation has been made that enables telephone subscribers to get broadcast music over the wire by calling up a special radio number. The radio connection is broken off automatically if the subscriber's telephone number is called.

Thousands of people who are suffering from constipation do not know the cause of their frequent headaches.

"Those bilious headaches can be prevented"

"I know how agonizing they are. For years I was a chronic sufferer.

"And the headaches were not the worst part of it. The strong drugs I used to take to relieve the pain upset my stomach and slowly but surely undermined my general health.

"Finally I found out that my headaches were due to constipation. My doctor advised Nujol. After taking it regularly a few weeks the trouble disappeared.

"Since then I have never had another headache. There is no reason why I should, for the cause has been corrected."

Nujol Corrects Constipation in Nature's Way

Constipation is dangerous for everybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. Nujol simply softens the waste matter and thus permits regular and thorough elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is gentle, safe and natural in its action.

To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

WHITE SOX CLUB LOOKS DANGEROUS

Eddie Collins' Men May Furnish Surprise of Year.

"The Chicago White Sox must be reckoned with in the American league race this year," said a former club owner during a recent meeting. "The team has a capable manager in Eddie Collins, who may produce a pennant winner if he is allowed to run things in his own way."

Collins was appointed manager of the White Sox last winter. Owner Charles A. Comiskey was persuaded by his intimate friends to give Collins a long-desired opportunity to prove that he could handle a big-league ball team.

From the beginning of the training season Collins was a success. He organized everything in connection with the team. He established a system of play that required quick wit, business and great mechanical skill. His pitchers were sent to the box in rotation, and, better still, he inspired all of the players, young and old.

Though compelled to assign a green recruit to short field, Collins soon had the White Sox breezing along in third position, taking the dust kicked up by the Athletics and Senators. Comiskey's team had been transformed into a winner from a chronic loser.

In September, Collins injured one of his legs and was forced into retirement for the rest of the year. As he had played magnificently at second base and had batted .346, his team disrupted the White Sox so completely that they finished in the second division.

It is the ambition of Collins to drive the White Sox until they win a world series.

Sport Notes

New Orleans has bought Catcher C. Lingie from Des Moines.

Babe Ruth says he will have a smashing come-back. He may meet his derby.

The Yankees, around the American league circuit, are being taken seriously as a pennant possibility.

Indianapolis is going to train at Hot Springs this year, deserting Florida where it did its last season.

Apparently Carpenter's object in coming to the United States is to join the Dempsey disarmament conference.

Princeton has 140 candidates for rowing a list of 20 per cent larger than in any other year in the university's history.

Emerson G. Walk, former shortstop of the West Virginia university baseball team, has been released under option by Pittsburgh to Wilson, N. C., of the Virginia league.

Houston of the Texas league has sold Pitcher Hal Divinye, a spitball hurler, to Beaumont of the same league. He was loaned to Beaumont by Houston last season.

Newark of the International league has announced the purchase of Leslie McCullough, third baseman, from the Bloomington club of the Three-I league. His home is in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Babe Ruth rewed a bat as a training stunt. It probably won't help the morale of the opposing pitcher any when Babe approaches the plate the coming season swinging a pair of oars.

Outfielder Harvey Hendrick has been sold by the Cleveland American league baseball club to the New York Yankees. Last spring Hendrick was sent to the Providence club of the International league.

Three clubs, the Giants, Cardinals and Phillies, had a great battle for home-run honors last season. McGraw's team finally won out with 114 circuit bluffs. The Cards had 109 and the Phils an even 100.

The New York Yankees have sent Outfielder Frank Kellers to Salt Lake City in part payment for Tony Lazzeri.

The Kingston team of the Virginia league has the smallest number of fans in the circuit to draw from, but the support it gets is of the best.

Joe Cantillon, manager of the Little Rock team of the Southern league, has announced the acquisition of Eddie Wright, infielder, from the St. Joseph club of the Western league.

Sporting Squibs

The timing of a foot race is done from the flash of the pistol and not the report.

Arne Borg, the great Swedish swimmer, is the son of a former chief of police of Stockholm.

Age in race horses always is reckoned from the January of the year in which the horse is born.

Winston-Salem of the Piedmont league has signed Outfielder Bensley of Atlanta, Ga., and a pitcher named Guifford, who bats from Orlando, Fla.

Texas university has appropriated $10,000 for the construction of 15 to 20 new tennis courts on newly acquired property east of the Austin speedway.

Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, has joined hands with Mike Latzo of Scranton, and in the future will assist in the management of Pete Latzo, sturdy middle-weight boxer.

According to Col. Henry Breckinridge, president of the National Amateur Athletic federation, baseball among the small boys of the United States has fallen off 50 per cent in the last three years.

Lucien Vigneux, lightweight champion of Europe, left for his home in France after failing to receive his chance at the world title. He left a challenge for the new title-holder, Rocky Kansas of Buffalo.

Georgetown university will play 20 games this season. Of the games 14 will be played on the Washington (D. C.) college field including Yale, Princeton, Syracuse, Fordham and Cornell in early April.

Open Golf Champion

Willie Macfarlane, national open golf champion, announces that he will defend his title in the national open tournament to be held in July over the Soloto club course, Columbus, Ohio.

Plan Foreign Tour for Two Young Tennis Stars

Two schoolboy and schoolgirl players will be sent to England next year to play against British champions if plans being considered by several progressive leaders of the United States Lawn Tennis association are looked upon favorably on the other side.

No official mention of this plan to encourage scholastic tennis has been made, but it is likely that it will be mentioned at the annual meeting of the association on February 6.

The association has been very successful in making tennis a universal game among senior players by fostering the Davis cup competitions and by sending older players to foreign countries.

Leaders of the association feel that tennis has been established as a senior international game and that it is now time to give more attention to the juniors and novices.

Southpaw Batters Lead

Of the 55 batsmen in the American league listed among the 300 hitters, 29 are left-handed hitters. Of the 13 league batters who hit .350 or over 10 are the boys who hit from the left side of the plate. In the National league the proportion of left-handed batsmen wasn't so pronounced. Out of the 56 batsmen who were in the 300 circle only 19 batted from the left side. Of the 18 who were successful in making a mark of .330 or better, 11 were right handed.

Schaefer's Two Long Runs

Young Jake Schaefer holds two of the best long-run performances in 182 billiard history. Both were made in 1925. In the international tournament last winter Schaefer put over the unique in the green-cloth game by running out from spot, getting 400 points on his first turn at the table. He followed that sensational bit of work by clicking off 432 straight caroms during his special match with Edouard Horemans. A record never before dreamed of by billiardists.

Assistant Editor: Coila Guth.
On Friday night the Campbellsport teams played our teams at the Opera House. The teams were greeted with a packed house. The girls game was called at 7:45. The first half of the game proved very exciting and our opponents realized that they were playing with a strong team. During the second half, however, our girls lost out and when the final whistle blew the score was 2 to 5 in favor of Campbellsport.
The boys game was one of the snappiest and cleanest games played this season. Both of the teams were equally matched and one could tell that the game could only be won by superior wit. Both teams worked hard and at the end of the first half one could clearly see that the out come of the game could not be foretold. Kewaskum, in the second half showed their opponents some real passwork and how to net some real baskets. Victor, C. Miller and Kohn presented the most spectacular features when they literally rolled in the ball and Rosenheimer showed a fighting spirit that cannot be equalled. The final score was 9 to 14 in our favor.

This game is going to be worth while for our local five have defeated the West Bend team twice and they are coming back with a strong lineup and a fighting spirit. As this will be the last game that the team of 1925 and 1926 will play we expect a large turnout; let's all get out and root for Kewaskum.

The details will be printed in the next issue. The members of the Senior class are busy trying to select their class play. The play this year promises to be the best ever given by any of the graduating classes.

CUTS LARGE OAK ON FARM NEAR RANDOLPH

While this section of Wisconsin has nearly all been cleared of timber there are a few timber lots and from one of these a good sized tree was cut the past week. H. N. Phelps cut down a large tree on his farm about three miles east of Randolph and was well rewarded for his work. He got two cords of wood from the top, made 50 fence posts and had a bar left that measured 16 feet in length and 4 feet in diameter. In addition to the wood he got from the tree he had an extra reward of 200 pounds of honey that was made in the tree by aboriginal bees.—Randolph Advance.

Reporting the Facts

The by-laws of The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, which was chartered by a special act of the Wisconsin legislature away back in 1857, very wisely provide that every year a committee of its policyholders shall fully inquire into the affairs of the Company and make a report of its findings. All the books, records and files are placed at the full disposal of the Committee and it may freely call on the officers and employees for information and assistance in its work.

The reports by these Committees are such as naturally interest policyholders and they are published in full in the Annual Statement sent to each policyholder. Extracts from the report filed by the last Committee on January 19th, 1926, are here given for the benefit of the general public, as well:

"MANAGEMENT: The Committee finds the Company to be in a sound condition. Those in control of the administration follow a conservative policy in the conduct of its affairs. The personnel of the administration, which includes not only the officers, but also the members of the Executive and Finance Committees, are men of high standing. The interests of the policyholders are paramount in their deliberations and actions.

"RESERVES: The Committee is satisfied that the legal reserves required by statute are maintained by the Company.

"INVESTMENTS: The Committee finds that the investment of the reserve funds has been carefully made. There has been a wise selection of investments, the mortgage foreclosures have been small and the net yield on investments satisfactory. The officers and members of the Finance Committee have followed a cautious and conservative course.

"DIVIDENDS: The so-called dividends are in fact primarily portions of the premiums which policyholders have paid. The Committee examined the basis of distributing these dividends to policyholders and believes it to be fair and equitable.

"CLAIMS: Policyholders quite properly expect prompt payment of claims. The Company promptly pays claims."

The Committee closed its report by expressing the belief that "the policyholders have every reason to have confidence in the administration and stability of The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company."

There were two Wisconsin men on this committee: Hon. John B. Chase, State Senator from the Second Wisconsin District and Attorney at Law, of Oconto, Wisconsin, and Joseph W. Simpson, President of the Milwaukee-Western Fuel Company, Milwaukee. James L. Madden, Manager of the Insurance Department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C. was chairman of the committee. Other members were: Hon. Ernest C. Kohn, Atlanta, Ga., and Reginald T. Blauvelt, East Orange, New Jersey.

Appreciation of the results which the Northwestern furnishes its policyholders is evidenced by the fact that in 1925, of all the business written by it, 53.3 per cent was upon applications of persons previously insured in the Company.

The Northwestern now has approximately 600,000 policies in force and it is issuing paid-for life insurance—pure and simple—at the rate of nearly one million and a quarter dollars per office day. The Executive Committee again, in the Annual Statement this year, expressed its firm adherence to this fundamental principle, which, for years, has been the policy of the Company, viz:

"The ambition of the Northwestern has been less to be large than to be safe; its aim is to rank first in benefits to policyholders rather than first in size. Valuing quality above quantity it has preferred to secure its business under certain salutary restrictions and limitations rather than to write a much larger business at the possible sacrifice of those valuable points which have made the Northwestern pre-eminently the policyholders' Company."
