

WINNERS IN ESSAY CONTEST

Jack Arkenberg, West Bend and Hilda Steffen, West Bend R. 1, are the boy and girl winners in this county in the third statewide essay contest conducted by the Wisconsin Manufacturers' Association, according to an announcement just received by the office of our County Superintendent of schools. The prize is a free trip to the 1926 State Fair and Fourth Wisconsin Products Exposition. The county winners, chaperoned in most instances by the County Superintendent of schools, will spend two glorious days in Milwaukee during the first week of September with expenses paid by the Wisconsin Manufacturers' Association from the time they leave home until they return. During the contest just concluded thousands of eighth grade girls and boys throughout Wisconsin wrote and submitted essays on the subject, "From Producer to Consumer." The numerous contestants who competed in this county are to be commended, not only on the general high standard of the product of their labors, but for the active interest they showed in a subject so vital to the welfare of every Wisconsin resident and of the Badger State itself.

"UNDER WESTERN SKIES"

A galaxy of famous screen stars twinkles through the many interesting scenes of "Under Western Skies," an Edward Sedgwick-Universal-Jewell production which comes to the Opera House tomorrow, Sunday. Norman Kerry is cast in the leading male role, and it is a most unusual role for him. He plays the blase son of a wealthy banker. Kerry then changes to the role of a rancher, and rides with the best of the cowpunchers of the great Pendleton Round-up. Anne Cornwall plays the part of Ella Parkhurst, the character impersonated by Charles K. French. Parkhurst is an eastern Oregon rancher and Ella is a fitting representative of the girlhood of that State.

Ward Crane, as Otto Stern, banker of Pendleton, Oregon, is the "heavy" of the picture and puts into it all that finesse that has won for him the title of the screen's greatest villain. Kathleen Key has been cast in the part of Millie Lewis, who for a time is Stern's accomplice. Eddie Gribbon, movie fans' favorite burlesque, makes the comedy along with Harry Todd. George Fawcett impersonates the character of James Erskine, wealthy New York banker, who leads a group of bankers seeking to obtain control of the wheat.

RADDISMAN HELD ON $2,000

Kirk Raddisman of Hartford, will be held for trial on a charge of manslaughter in the fourth degree in the courts of Dodge county, following the verdict rendered last Friday afternoon by a coroner's jury at Juneau which investigated the death of Herbert Colbach, 26 year old city editor of the Hartford Times, in an automobile accident three weeks ago. The verdict of the coroner's jury was to the effect that Colbach came to his death through the negligent operation of an automobile by Kirk Raddisman, and that it was their belief that criminal prosecution should follow. Conviction on the charge of fourth degree manslaughter, which has been preferred against Raddisman, will bring a prison sentence of from one to two years. Raddisman is now at liberty on $2,000 bail, and the date of his preliminary hearing has been set for August 9 before Justice M. W. Clifford at Juneau.

BUYS HALF INTEREST IN BARBER SHOP

A deal was closed this week whereby Hubert Wittman sold a half interest of his barber business and equipment to Peter Mies of Mayville. The business will in the future be conducted under the name of Mies & Wittman Tonsorial Shop. Mr. Mies needs no introduction here, as previous to conducting a barber shop at Mayville, conducted the shop now known as Mies & Wittman Tonsorial Shop here for a number of years. He is a first class barber and knows his business from beginning to end. Mr. and Mrs. Mies will move to this village as soon as they can find a suitable house to rent.

CALLES TURNS DOWN OFFERS FOR TRUCE

President of Mexico Insists Laws Must Be Obeyed in Religious Matters.

Nozales, Ariz.—A Mexico City dispatch says six persons were killed and more than 100 injured in one day during demonstrations over Mexican incident to the new religious regulations.

Mexico City.—President Calles has rejected the proposal for a truce in the religious controversy made by the Mexican episcopate.

In a statement the President says: "This executive has already made known its opinion regarding the religious situation. Replying to the episcopate statement, I will say that the federal government will only limit itself to act with the required energy to enforce the laws of this country." Former President Obregon, who is regarded as a presidential candidate in the 1928 Mexican elections, is reported to be in accord with President Calles and the government in its contents in the nation's religious controversy.

Although President Calles has rejected the truce offer of the episcopate, gestures for peace are still underway.

Tentative steps, it is learned authoritatively, are being taken which are expected to result in informal personal negotiations between Attorney General Ortega and a high dignitary of the Mexican episcopate.

Overtures are also understood to have been made for a prominent layman, who is close to the episcopate and also persona grata with President Calles to act as intermediary.

Representations, which are interpreted here as equivalent to a protest, have been sent to the Department of State by United States Consul General Weddell as the result of the first instance, so far as known, of the taking over of church property of any United States Protestant denomination since the new religious regulations became effective.

Weddell informed the Department of State that police closed the Episcopal church of San Jose de Gracia. The church has been in charge of a Mexican rector under jurisdiction of Bishop Frank W. Croughan of Mexico City, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in Mexico.

The Mexican authorities say that the church was taken over because the rector had failed to register and to give to the municipal authorities the information required under the religious regulations.

Police state that the conspiracy to kill President Calles apparently has not gone beyond the stage of mere talk. However, they have detained several more men and one woman in addition to the men and women arrested a few days ago.

The economic boycott proposed by the League for the Defense of Religious Liberty in opposition to the government's religious policy so far shows little if any effect in Mexico. Business circles here, however, have much apprehension over the cutting down of all business except in absolute necessities, as proposed by the league.

In contrast to this attitude, the theaters, motion picture houses and theater bull fights draw the usual crowds in Mexico City.

M'KINLEY FIRM GAVE CASH TO AID SMITH

Slush Probe Reveals All Illinois Utilities Helped.

Chicago.—Col. Frank L. Smith had the financial backing in the Illinois primary of all three major groups of public utilities interests, including the Illinois Power and Light company, of which Senator William B. McKinley is nominal chairman of the board.

Former Congressman Ira C. Copley of Aurora, who developed the $50,000,000 Western United Gas and Electric company, contributed $25,000.

Clement Stuebner, who headed the company of financiers who took over the McKinley utilities interests, retaining the senator as chairman of the board, contributed $20,000.

This makes the total of direct contributions to Colonel Smith's campaign from the utilities group $203,735.19.

In addition to this Mr. Insull contributed $10,000 to the Crowe-Barrett Cook county chest, considered as indirect aid to the Smith candidacy, and $10,000 to the Demese-West group.

Another item of $2,500 got into the record, which subsequently may be shown to be a part of the Insull fund handled by Attorney Daniel E. Schuyler for anti-World court propaganda, or may appear as a new item. It was given direct to the Smith fund by Schuyler.

The McKinley total also was boosted by $1,475, which United States Marshal James A. White of Murphysboro contributed.

The revised ledger account, assuming that the latest $2,500 from Schuyler is a new item, reads as follows:

Table with financial data: For McKinley $381,991.72, For Demese county chest $25,735.19, For Crowe county chest $12,295.19, For George E. Brennan $26,841.42, Total $476,863.52.

The public-utility contributions to Colonel Smith's fund, assuming that the Schuyler $2,500 is a new item, now stand:

Table with financial data: By Samuel Insull, direct $125,000.00, By proposition financing $2,735.19, By Colonel Copley $20,000.00, By Clement Stuebner $20,000.00, By Daniel Schuyler $2,500.00, By Insull to Crowe group $10,000.00, Total $180,235.19.

FRANCE PAYS U. S. $10,000,000 INTEREST

Installation on War Stocks Debt $1,000,000 More Than Agreed.

Washington.—France has paid to the United States the sum of $10,000,000. The money was paid in cash and was handled through the Federal Reserve bank of New York being deposited there to the credit of the treasury.

This item of $400,000,000 was included in the debt agreement signed by M. Berenger on behalf of France, and which neither the senate nor the French parliament has ratified. If it had been ratified by France before the day came for the payment, France would have saved the sum of $1,000,000, because under the funding arrangement the amount of interest would have been calculated at $9,000,000 instead of $10,000,000, owing to the lower interest rate.

Under the agreement for the sale of the army stocks, France is required to pay the interest charges in cash rather than in securities. The pending debt agreement, however, would permit the payments to be made in Liberty bonds or securities of equal value.

Paris.—The possibility of the French government's floating a large external loan, either in Holland or Great Britain, is being widely discussed by those in close touch with the Poincare ministry here. This development, which showed itself recently, was in interest with the rumor that Premier Poincare plans to ask the French assembly to ratify both the British and American war debt funding agreements before the summer parliamentary recess.

When M. Poincare and his aids obtained the overwhelming support of the deputies to the proposal of raising more than $900,000,000 by new taxation, and when the government announced the balancing of the budget for the current year, the first rumors of an external loan were launched.

The improvement of France's position as result of the stabilization of government effected by M. Poincare and his ministers affords an opportunity for France to borrow money on terms that would not be extortionate.

At the outset of the Poincare regime, the blunt and outspoken premier announced that France would find the solution of her troubles within herself, that she would pay no heavy interest rates for new money to other countries, and that every loyal Frenchman would pay his share in rehabilitating the depleted treasury and in meeting the country's obligation abroad.

Bankers in Holland, it became known here, are ready to release large funds for application to measures calculated to rehabilitate France in a financial and economic way. In this regard, it is also true that both private individuals in Britain and the government of that country stand ready to make loans to France, irrespective of whether the Anglo-French debt pact is ratified or not.

One item in the new taxation bill which occasioned surprise was the provision for a tax on foreigners. Identity cards and renewal of such cards every five years will cost foreigners 375 francs, instead of 68 francs as at present. Students and journalists will pay 40 francs. Foreigners who served with the French forces during the World war are exempt.

TRAVEL AND OTHER WRAPS; BLACK FROCKS ARE POPULAR

NOW, when half the world is "a-traveling" or getting ready for vacations and outings, the shops are making exhibits of new coats in novel adaptations of current styles. These with their many novelties that will answer for all-round wear, including travel. However, one may indulge in a novelty or so without extravagance, since they are often moderately priced. There are many pretty tailored models in white flannel, sometimes with linings on collar and cuffs of light colors. Flannel and cashmere in coral pink, light green and sand, topped by white linen collars are cut in the straight-line fashion, varied by capes and cape backs and having narrow stitched belts of the fabric.

Capes of all lengths are used on land or sail the seas in ships. Then there are long, soft enveloping capes of tweed that look equal to all emergencies of travel whether by train, motor, ship or airplane. Some of these are in the novelty weaves of tweed and ombre shadings and many coats have raglan sleeves. However flattering the colorful, cool and dainty frocks, popular for present wear in the afternoon or evening, they cannot eclipse the all-black or black-and-white dresses that make their annual appearance in the summer and are with us once again. There is always a place in the wardrobe, summer or winter, for the black dress, but its unique smartness makes a stronger impression in summer among so many colorful rivals that serve to set it off. Among the styles presented for art-coats of the lighter materials—like flat crepe—monkey fur contributes a fringe to many of them.

A very attractive coat is fashioned of black and white hairline stripes, with a short cape at the back. Bands of the material, with stripes running crosswise, serve for trimming the coat and edging the cape, in which the stripes are vertical. Black and white are promoted in coats of black taffeta lined with white cashmere. Facings of cashmere down the front are edged with looped fringe of wool yarn.

Two good coats for general wear lay no claim to novelty but invite attention to good style and appropriateness. The coat at the left of the picture is intricately cut and faultlessly tailored with no trimming except large buttons on the sleeves. It has a charming medium for black-and-white frocks with white lingerie gilet, collar or vestie in white. For evening black chiffon appears in low-necked sleeveless gowns that have full skirts, long-bloused bodices and wide, crushed girdles of the material. Sometimes they have floating panels. A perennial favorite returns in simple gowns of black satin, some of them sleeveless, like those shown in the picture. These are tailored 178cm, but, being sleeveless, they are very adaptable and will see one through a summer afternoon and evening. The frock at the left has a blouse bodice and long shoulder. Fine embroidery and batiste, in collars or trimming the right, is a charming finish for the black satin afternoon frock. But the black treatment may be changed for evening wear. A tulle scarf, a flower on the shoulder or a bit of jewelry may do the trick and convert a day frock into evening dress. This is one good reason for the appeal of black satin.

Simple Trimming

Grocery ribbon is used very effectively to band frocks of chiffon or georgette. So is the lacquered ribbon that has an unusually high gloss and luster.

Correct Attire

Any woman who makes a study of fashion knows it is not the number of costumes that makes a perfect wardrobe, but the type and character of each frock and coat and hat, as well as the correctness of accessories.

Ostrich Feathers on Hats. Coats of pastel-colored kasha, particularly in the beige de rose shades and the new yellow, are delightful with white crepe de chine sport dresses.

BAREE SON OF KAZAN

by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD.

The man's hatred was different from the beast's, but perhaps even more implacable. With McTaggart it was not hatred alone. There was mixed with it an indefinable and superstitious fear, a thing he laughed at, a thing he cursed at, but which clung to him as surely as the scent of his trail clung to Baree's nose. Baree no longer stood for the animal alone; he stood for Nepeese. That was the thought that insisted in growing in McTaggart's ugly mind. He had not ceased to hate Baree; he still hated him as he had never hated a man, but he had an even greater reason now for wanting to kill him. It came to him first in his sleep in a restless dream, and after that it lived, and lived—the thought that the spirit of Nepeese was guiding Baree in the ravaging of his trap-line!

It was in January that McTaggart caught his first glimpse of Baree. He had placed his rifle against a tree, and was a dozen feet away from it at the time. It was as if Baree knew, and had come to taunt him; for when the Factor suddenly looked up Baree was standing out clear from the dwarf spruce not twenty yards away from him, his white fangs gleaming and his eyes burning like coals. For a space McTaggart stared as if turned into stone. It was Baree. He recognized the white star, the white-tipped ear, and his heart thumped like a hammer in his breast. Very slowly he began to creep toward his rifle. His hand was reaching for it when like a flash Baree was gone.

This gave McTaggart his new idea. He biased himself a fresh trail through the forest parallel with his trap-line but at least five hundred yards distant from it. Wherever a trap or deadfall was set this new trail struck sharply in, like the point of a V, so that he could approach his line unobserved. By this strategy he believed that in time he was sure of getting a shot at the dog. Again it was the man who was reasoning, and again it was the man who was defeated. The first day that McTaggart followed his new trail Baree also struck that trail. For a little while it puzzled him. Three times he cut back and forth between the old and the new trail. Then there was no doubt. The new trail was the fresh trail, and he followed in the footsteps of the Factor from Lac Bain. McTaggart did not know what was happening until his return trip, when he saw the story told in the snow. Baree had visited each trap, and without exception he had approached each time at the point of the inverted V, after a week of futile hunting, of lying in wait, of approaching at every point of the wind—a period during which McTaggart had twenty times cursed himself into fits of madness, another idea came to him. It was like an inspiration, and so simple that it seemed almost inconceivable that he had not thought of it before.

He hurried back to Post Lac Bain. The second day after he was on the trail at dawn. This time he carried a pack in which there were a dozen strong wolf traps freshly dipped in heavy oil, and a rabbit which he had secured the previous night. Now and then he looked anxiously at the sky. It was clear until late in the afternoon, when banks of dark clouds began rolling up from the east. Half an hour later a few flakes of snow began falling. McTaggart let one of these drop on the back of his mittened hand, and examined it closely. It was soft and downy, and he gave vent to his satisfaction. It was what he wanted. Before morning there would be six inches of freshly fallen snow covering the trails.

He stopped at the next trap-house and quickly set to work. First he threw away the poisoned bait in the "house" and replaced it with the rabbit. Then he began setting his wolf traps. Three of these he placed close to the "door" of the house, through which Baree would have to reach for the bait. The remaining nine he scattered at intervals of a foot or sixteen inches apart, so that when he was done a veritable cordon of traps guarded the house. He did not fasten the chains, but let them lay loose in the snow. If Baree got into one trap he would get into others and there would be no use of toggles. His work done, McTaggart hurried on through the thickening twilight of winter night to his shack. He was highly elated. This time there could be no such thing as failure. He had sprung every trap on his way from Lac Bain. In none of those traps would Baree find anything to eat until he came to the "nest" of twelve wolf traps.

Seven inches of snow fell that night, and the whole world seemed turned into a wonderful white robe. Like billows of feathers the snow hung to the trees and shrubs; it gave tall white caps to the rocks, and underfoot it was so light that a cartridge dropped from the hand sank to the bottom of it. Baree was on the trap-line early. He was more cautious this morning, for there was no longer the scent or snowshoe track of McTaggart to guide him. He struck the first trap about halfway between Lac Bain and the shack in which the Factor was waiting. It was sprung, and there was no bait. Trap after trap he visited, and all of them he found sprung, and all without bait. He sniffed the air suspiciously, striving vainly to catch the tang of smoke, a whiff of the man-smell. Along toward noon he came to the "nest"—the twelve treacherous traps waiting for him with gaping jaws half a foot under the blanket of snow. For a full minute he stood well outside the danger line, sniffing the air, and listening. He saw the rabbit, and his jaws closed with a hungry click. He moved a step nearer. Still he was suspicious—for some strange and inexplicable reason he sensed danger. Anxiously he sought for it with his nose, his eyes, and his ears. And all about him there was a great silence and a great peace. His jaws clicked again. He whined softly. What was it stirring him? Where was the danger he could neither see nor smell? Slowly he circled about the trap-house; three times he circled round it, each circle drawing him a little nearer—until at last his feet almost touched the outer cordon of traps. Another minute he stood still; his ears flattened; in spite of the rich aroma of the rabbit in his nostrils something was drawing him away. In another moment he would have gone, but there came suddenly—and from directly behind the trap-house—a fierce little rat-like squeak, and the next instant Baree saw an ermine whiter than the snow tearing hungrily at the flesh of the rabbit. He forgot his strange premonition of danger. He growled fiercely, but his plucky little rival did not budge from his feast.

And then he sprang straight into the "nest" that Bush McTaggart had made for him. The next morning Bush McTaggart heard the clanking of a chain when he was still a good quarter of a mile from the "nest." Was it a lynx? Was it a fisher-cat? Was it a wolf or a fox? Or was it Baree? He half ran the rest of the distance, and at last he came to where he could see, and his heart leaped into his throat when he saw that he had caught his enemy. He approached, holding his rifle ready to fire if by any chance the dog should free himself.

Baree lay on his side, panting from exhaustion and quivering with pain. A hoarse cry of exultation burst from McTaggart's lips as he drew nearer and looked at the snow. It was packed hard for many feet about the trap-house, where Baree had struggled, and it was red with blood. The blood had come mostly from Baree's jaws. They were dripping now as he gazed at his enemy. The steel jaws hidden under the snow had done their merciless work well. One of his forefeet was caught well up toward the first joint; both hind feet were caught; a fourth trap had closed on his flank, and in tearing the jaws loose he had pulled off a patch of skin half as big as McTaggart's hand. The snow told the story of his desperate fight all through the night; his bleeding jaws showed how vainly he had tried to break the imprisoning steel with his teeth. He was panting. His eyes were bloodshot. But even now, after all his hours of agony, neither his spirit nor his courage were broken. When he saw McTaggart he made a lunge to his feet, almost instantly crumpling down into the snow again. But his forefeet were braced. His head and chest remained up, and the snarl that came from his throat was tigerish in its ferocity. Here, at last—no more than a dozen feet from him—was the one thing in all the world that he hated more than he hated the wolf breed. And again he was helpless, as he had been helpless that other time in the rabbit snare.

The fierceness of his snarl did not disturb Bush McTaggart now. He saw how utterly the other was at his mercy, and with an exultant laugh he leaned his rifle against a tree, pulled off his mittens, and began loading his pipe. This was the triumph he had looked forward to, the torture he had waited for. In his soul there was a hatred as deadly as Baree's, the hatred that a man might have for a bull. He had expected to send a bullet through the dog. But this was better—to watch him dying by inches, to taunt him as he would have taunted a human, to walk about him so that he could hear the clank of the traps and see the fresh blood drip as Baree twisted his tortured legs and body to keep facing him. It was a splendid vengeance. He was so engrossed in it that he did not hear the approach of snowshoes behind him. It was a voice—a man's voice—that turned him round suddenly.

The man was a stranger, and he was younger than McTaggart by ten years. At least he looked no more than thirty-five or six, even with the short growth of blonde beard he wore. He was of that sort that the average man would like at a glance; boyish, and yet a man; with clear eyes that looked out frankly from under the rim of his fur cap, a form lithe as an Indian's, and a face altogether that did not bear the hard lines of the wilderness. Yet McTaggart knew before he had spoken that this man was of the wilderness, that he was heart and soul a part of it. His cap was of fisher-skin. He wore a windproof coat of softly tanned caribou skin, belted at the waist with a long sash, and Indian fringed. The inside of the coat was furred. He was traveling on the long, slender bush-country snowshoe; his pack, strapped over the shoulders, was small and compact; he was carrying his rifle in a cloth jacket. And from cap to snowshoes he was travel-worn. McTaggart, at a guess, would have said that he had traveled a thousand miles in the last few weeks. It was not this thought that thrilled the stranger, and chafing at the back of his neck, but the suddenness of the truth that he had found its way down into the south—the truth of what had happened on the Gray Loon—and that this travel-worn stranger under his caribou-skin coat bore the badge of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. For that instant it was almost a terror that possessed him, and he stood mute.

The stranger had uttered only an amazed exclamation before. Now he said, with his eyes on Baree: "God save us, but you've got the poor devil in a right proper mess, haven't you?"

There was something in the voice that reassured McTaggart. It was not a suspicious voice, and he saw that the stranger was more interested in the captured animal than in himself. He drew a deep breath.

"A trap robber," he said. The stranger was staring still more closely at Baree. He thrust his gun stock downward in the snow and drew nearer to him.

"God save us again—a dog!" he exclaimed. The man behind McTaggart was watching the man with the eyes of a forest.

"Yes, a dog," he answered. "A wild dog, half wolf at least. He's robbed me of a thousand dollars' worth of fur this winter."

The stranger squatted himself before Baree, with his mittened hands resting on his knees, and his white teeth gleaming in a half smile. "You poor devil!" he said sympathetically. "So you're a trap robber, eh? An outlaw? And—the Police have got you! And—God save us once more—they haven't played you a very square game!"

He rose and faced McTaggart. "I had to set a lot of traps like that," the Factor apologized, his face reddening slightly under the steady gaze of the stranger's blue eyes. Suddenly his anxious rose. "And he's going to die there, inch by inch. I'm going to let him starve, and rot in the traps, to pay for all he's done." He picked up his gun, and added, with his eyes on the stranger and his finger ready at the trigger, "I'm Bush McTaggart, the Factor at Lac Bain. Are you bound that way, m'sieu?"

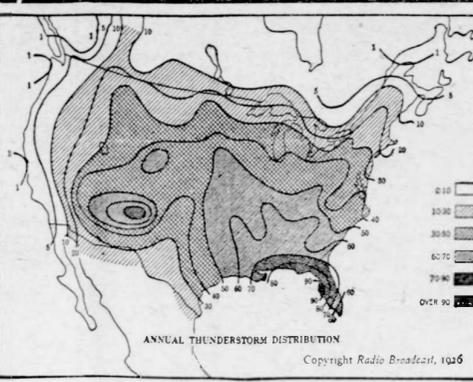

"A few miles. I'm bound up-country—beyond the Barrens." McTaggart felt again the strange thrill. "Government?" he asked. "The stranger nodded. "The—Police, perhaps," persisted McTaggart. "Why, yes—of course—the Police," said the stranger, looking straight into the Factor's eyes. "And now, m'sieu, as a very great courtesy to the Law I'm going to ask you to send a bullet through that beast's head before we go on. Or shall I?"

"It's the law of the line," said McTaggart. "To let a trap robber rot in the traps. And that beast was a devil. Listen—"

Swiftly, and yet leaving out none of the fine detail, he told the weeks and months of strife between himself and Baree; of the madening fury of all his tricks and schemes and the still more maddening cleverness of the beast he had at last succeeded in trapping.

"He was a devil—that clever," he cried fiercely when he had finished. "And now—would you shoot him, or let him lie there and die by inches, as the devil should?"

Thunderstorm Map of the United States. Copyright Radio Broadcast, 1926

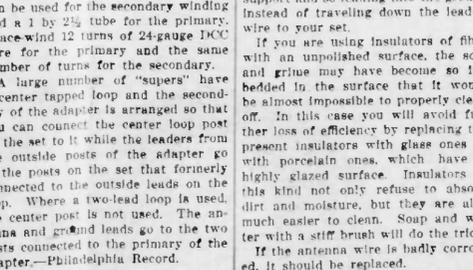

"It is not the sound of thunder that is heard in the radio set, but the actual wave that is propagated by the electric spark or lightning flash," says B. Francis Dashiell, writing in the Radio Broadcast Magazine. "Thunder is merely the sound of the air as it rushes in to fill the space or vacuum made by the passing of the spark. Such a wave will be heard simultaneously with the visibility of the flash, but ahead of the sound of the thunder. Electromagnetic waves travel at the same speed as light waves, 299,725,000 meters, or 186,000 miles per second, while sound travels but approximately 1,000 feet per second. There are certain regions which produce more thunderstorms than others, and there are certain weather conditions, as shown by the daily weather map, favorable to the inception of thunderstorms. Purely local storms of a sporadic character may be caused by local regions of warm air within a high air pressure area and predominating clear sky. These give rise to local static only, last but not a short time, and seldom cross over much territory.

Have Much Static. "There are thunderstorms which occur chiefly in the regions of southerly winds, either to the southeast or northeast of a low air pressure area, probably caused by local topographical conditions and consequent upward deflection of the warm surface winds, all of which stimulate the formation of large cumulus clouds. These storms have considerable static associated with them, not entirely due to the storm itself, but also to the meteorological elements of the central low air pressure area to which they are attached. Some of these disturbances will be of the nature of a mere thundershower while others will be intense thunderstorms. "Even after the passing of the storm, static will exist as long as the electric influence of the central low is felt. The most severe of all thunderstorms occur south or southeast of a central low air pressure area along a line or front of a great mass of cooler and drier air which is slowly descending from the upper atmosphere and under-running or lifting up the warmer and moister air ahead of it.

Lightning Affects Set. "Much static predominates, not only from the central low area itself, but from the mechanical action of the vigorous air currents. Lightning associated with such storms is very erratic and spreads out over a large area, affecting radio receivers over many miles, often over a whole state or more. Thunderstorms occur in nearly all parts of the world, but the number decreases rapidly as we pass from the equator toward the pole. In the tropics, there are many places that average a thunderstorm for nearly every day of the year, while in the Far North but one or two storms may occur in the course of several years. Fewer storms occur over the ocean than over land, and mountainous regions have far more than the level plains. In the United States, the largest number occur over the Gulf states. In New England there occur but approximately one-fourth of the thunderstorms experienced along the Gulf, while at certain Pacific coast sections the proportion is very small as such storms are rare."

Attach Adapter for Low Waves on Super. There are many thousands of super-heterodyne receivers in use, but practically all of them have been built for the reception of wave-lengths between 200 and 550 meters. Some of the large eastern stations are now transmitting regularly on the very low wave-lengths, and very often these stations can be picked up on the low waves when it is impossible to hear them on the regular wave-lengths. The adapter shown is very simple and can be wound on the form of an old variocoupler, if you have one handy. A 3 by 8 bakelite or cardboard form can be used for the secondary winding and a 1 by 2 1/2 tube for the primary. Space wind 12 turns of 24-gauge DCC wire for the primary and the same number of turns for the secondary. A large number of "supers" have a center tapped loop and the secondary of the adapter is arranged so that you can connect the center loop post on the set to it while the leads from the outside posts of the adapter go to the posts on the set that formerly connected to the outside leads on the loop. Where a two-lead loop is used, the center post is not used. The antenna and ground leads go to the two posts connected to the primary of the adapter.—Philadelphia Record.

Radio Invention Aids Deaf Children to Hear. Highly successful experiments have been made with a new apparatus for overcoming deafness, designed by a civil engineer of Hull, England, named Caldwell, according to an official British dispatch from Rugby. More than 80 per cent of the children in a Hull deaf and dumb institution have heard speech and music for the first time as the result of the invention, which has the appearance of a small wireless receiving set with an aerial or ground connection. The effect is brilliant, however, can be detected at a glance by submitting them to a certain oil and holding them against the light. All synthetic stones, no matter how excellent, have telltale marks. The modern apparatus for testing the more deceptive specimens is complicated but reliable.

Last Season's Frock. If last season's frock seems not quite fresh, why not make an over-dye of the popular vogue now. Or use it on the skirt in tiers, wide tucks or in plaited lengths. Overlay the sleeves with it and use it as a scarf, collar or bolero. Whales Not Real Fish. Whales have to come to the surface of the ocean to breathe. They are not really fish, and cannot breathe as the ordinary fish does. Their ability to stay long under water is due to their vast lung capacity.

Care of Suede Shoes. Pale colored suede shoes require some care to keep them beautiful. They will not look well after they have been worn in the rain, so do not wear them on a doubtful day. But if they have been caught in a shower only, continual brushing will soften them again. Some suede shoes wear shiny in patches. The nap is quickly rubbed up by a vigorous application of the wire brush sold at most shoe shops.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Who is the wisest woman—the one who saves the right thing at the right time? No, indeed—not she who leaves unsaid the wrong thing at the tempting moment.

The salads which follow may be properly termed national as they are the favorite salads of the people in several countries or localities, the name of which is given to the salad:

French Potato Salad.—Cut cold boiled potatoes into dice, add one small onion finely-chopped, a few tablespoonsful of finely-chopped chives and a tablespoonful of minced parsley. Let stand for an hour or two to season with a French dressing, adding a generous amount of cayenne. Serve on lettuce and top each serving with a spoonful of rich mayonnaise; sprinkle with minced chives.

German Salad With Sausage.—Boil four breakfast sausages twenty minutes, cut into half-inch pieces. Boil one-half pound of sauerkraut ten minutes, drain and cool and mix with the sausage. Cut thin slices of winter radish into very thin slices and arrange around the dish, sprinkle with finely-minced shallot, pickles and capers. Serve with French dressing.

Cuban Salad.—Break four or five dry soda crackers, shred two green peppers, slice one Spanish onion six thin, skin, bone and chop six anchovies. Serve on lettuce with French dressing.

Montese Salad.—Bake four mild-flavored onions until tender, remove the peeling and put a lump of butter on each with salt and pepper. When cold cut into quarters and mix with four hard cooked eggs cut into quarters and six sardines boned and chopped. Add parsley and a teaspoonful of curry to a boiled dressing and serve.

Russian Tomato and Sardine Salad.—Arrange a bed of lettuce in a salad bowl. Peel four tomatoes of medium size, cut fine and mix with a few sardines boned and chopped. Place on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

Chicken Salad a la Americain.—To one cupful of finely-minced cooked chicken add one cupful of tender celery finely cut, one apple minced fine, one-half of a green pepper also minced. Mix with a highly seasoned boiled dressing and serve on lettuce.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS. Salads are always acceptable. The following is nourishing enough to take the place of a main dish at a meal: East India Salad. Cream until smooth two cream cheeses with one half cupful of equal parts of cream and milk, add one-half cupful of grated cheese, three-fourths of a tablespoonful of gelatin softened in a tablespoonful of cold water, then add one tablespoonful of boiling water. Season with paprika and cayenne and turn into a border mold. Chill thoroughly, remove from the mold, arrange on a bed of lettuce and serve with the following sauce: Curry Sauce.—Mix one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper with three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of cayenne, five tablespoonfuls of olive oil, three tablespoonfuls of mild vinegar and one teaspoonful of curried beef with a Dover egg beater until well blended.

Lettuce With Sherry's Dressing.—Mix three-fourths of a cupful of olive oil with five tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, one small southern onion chopped fine, one tablespoonful each of red and green pepper, one teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Put into a mason jar and shake for five minutes. Set on ice and let stand an hour; shake well before using. Serve on lettuce.

Croque Loaf.—Take one and one-half pounds of meat—pork and beef mixed; one good-sized onion chopped, salt, pepper and one cupful of cooked oatmeal; make into a loaf, adding a cupful of tomato. Place in a baking pan and pour over the loaf another cupful of tomato and one-half of a chopped onion. Roast, basting often. Thicken the gravy, serve with the meat. Bake one-half hour in a moderate oven.

Lamb Patties.—Put through the meat grinder any uncooked meat from the shoulder or neck, form into balls, wrap each in strips of bacon, skewer with a toothpick and fry until the bacon is crisp and brown. Serve the patties with a pan gravy.

Now that the field mushroom is in season there are so many delightful dishes which may be prepared with them. Creamed and served in party shells of timbal cases, served with broiled beefsteak, by cooking them in a little butter and adding them to the beefsteak gravy. Creamed on toast or in combination with sweetbreads, broiled and served on toast and any number of other ways will be suggested as they are used. It is a pity that this delicious vegetable should go to waste from lack of appreciation, as often there will be found bushels of them in the fields.

First Qualification. It is not fit the public trusts should be lodged in the hands of any, till they are first proved and found fit for the business they are to be entrusted with.—Henry.

WEIGHED ONLY 98 POUNDS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I have really had all kinds of trouble. After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I didn't get any better, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."

—Mas. M. REISSINGER, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio. If some good fairy should appear and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose? Wealth? It's a transient thing that brings its own cares. Happiness? It's an elusive thing which we keep by giving away. Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you the priceless gift of better health.

Make Sure of Your Corn Harvest

There is no uncertainty about corn harvest when you have a McCormick Corn Binder on the job. No matter whether the corn is tall and straight, short and crooked or down and tangled, McCormick Corn Binders gather all of it and tie the stalks into snug, firm bundles with even butts. Bundles are deposited on the ground without breaking ears from stalks—a detail of smooth, certain operation. In down and tangled corn the gathering points, which have a wide range, slip gently under the corn and with the aid of special down-corn elevating chains straighten it before it is cut. The knotters are the same as those used on McCormick grain binders. They tie with absolute certainty. There are many features on McCormick Corn Binders that will recommend these machines to you. Come in and let us tell you all about them.

Improving Cream and Milk Supply

Scoring Contests Serve to Create Interest in Better Quality.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)
 Cities, villages, and even whole counties are improving their milk and cream supply through scoring contests, says the United States Department of Agriculture. While the contests are of various kinds, all of which serve to create an interest in better quality milk, two general classes are emphasized by the department as worthy of consideration. These are the contests in which samples of milk and cream are submitted voluntarily and surprise contests in which the samples are collected without warning. The bureau of dairying has drawn up plans for use in such contests which should be of interest to any community contemplating a milk-improvement program.

Samples Specially Prepared.
 Where the samples are specially prepared by the exhibitor and submitted voluntarily for scoring, the results may or may not indicate the quality of the product regularly sold. And yet, says the department, when contests are first held in a community or large territory, they do have considerable educational value because they show that milk of high quality can be produced by observing certain simple rules. Voluntary samples are perhaps a better method to use in the first stages of improvement work.

Surprise Contests.
 Surprise contests, on the other hand, are a means of determining the average quality of the milk which each distributor is selling daily. Each dairy is generally scored on the average of several samples taken at random over a period of several months. The score is therefore representative of the daily output. Well-organized inspection departments usually give the dairymen reports of each sample soon after it is collected, and if it is unsatisfactory there is a chance for improvement before another is collected. For this reason an excellent opportunity is offered the inspector for doing educational work. This, coupled with the public recognition given dairymen who produce a superior product, has helped to obtain marked improvement in the quality of milk and cream in communities where surprise contests have been made a part of the regular inspection program.

Stock Keepers Without Silos Are Handicapped
 Stock keepers without silos in many parts of our country are handicapped and sooner or later will be obliged to give way to the man who is producing with economy and profit. It is estimated that an average silo will save a stock farmer $200 per year, and on this basis $400,000,000 would be saved each year. At the same time the corn growers would be securing as much more by getting a good price for the corn they market.
 Such a proper use of the silo would not cause an oversupply of stock or crop products, but it would produce them at a great saving which would be enjoyed by both the producer and consumer. Economy helps all, while waste and extravagance damage all. The stock farmers of this country,

Sudan Grass Forage Is Recommended for Swine
 Sudan grass and sorghum are very similar, and while the Missouri station does not have any experimental data available showing the value of Sudan grass it is believed that they will vary little from those obtained with sorghum. The general recommendations for feeding hogs on Sudan grass would be the same as those given for feeding on sorghum. Sudan grass may be pastured with little or no risk.

AUGUST SEEDINGS OF ALFALFA NOT FAVORED BY SPECIALIST
 Winter Poorly and Produce Small Crop.
 August seedings of alfalfa are poor security for the farmer. L. F. Graber, alfalfa specialist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, warns farmers against August seedings, for experiments at the college show that they winter poorly and quite often produce a small crop the following season.
 "If we have plenty of rain and good weather to promote late fall growth, alfalfa may get a good start before winter sets in but drier weather and unfavorable fall growing conditions are far more likely," Graber declares. He points out that August seedings which make only three or four inches of top growth do not yield profitably the following season.
 August seedings sometimes succeed, but are always a big risk, Graber asserts. Since the farmer is completely at the mercy of the weather with late summer-sown alfalfa, he recommends waiting until spring to make a successful seeding.
 In warning against the late fall cutting of alfalfa, Graber maintains that there is absolutely no danger of alfalfa smothering itself even though a fall growth of two or three feet remains during the winter. At the college farm, alfalfa has been allowed to grow to an entire year without cutting. The following year this field was among the best in thickness of stand and vigor of growth. A heavy fall growth for winter protection is good insurance, Graber concludes.

Pure-Bred Ram Improves Flock in Short Period
 "Pure-Bred Sires and Flock Improvement" is the title of a chart issued by the United States Department of Agriculture showing the advantages of good breeding. It demonstrates by diagrams that a pure-bred ram improves a flock as much in two generations as a grade does in five, the grade in this case being three-quarters full blood.

Contagious Abortion Is Difficult to Eradicate
 When contagious abortion has gained entrance into a herd, it is not advisable to dispose of aborting animals with the intention of replacing them with non-infected cows. Even though the aborting animals were removed, there may still remain some disseminators of infection in the herd, as all infected animals do not abort. Consequently, new animals introduced into a herd may contract the disease. By proper control and sanitary measures the valuable cows in a herd can be retained and the offspring from the most resistant dams used to replenish the herd.
 The disease is often spread by the sale of infected members of a herd. An unsuspecting breeder may purchase such animals and place them in a healthy herd, thus establishing a new center of infection.
 Control measures are essential to prevent animals from infected herds being shown at live stock exhibits, or offered for sale where infection is known to exist. Unless the most rigid,

Cobb Gives Ruth Sporting Chance

To the everlasting credit of Cobb, it must be said that there is no manager in the American league who gives Ruth as good a sporting chance as the Georgian. Where Speaker orders Ruth walked on every possible occasion, Cobb is willing to match the prowess of his pitchers against Ruth's slugging ability.

A great hitter himself, one who realizes that the fans paid to see him hit just as they now pay to see the Babe, Cobb is willing to play fair with his patrons.

Speaker also was a great hitter, but this fact never seems to enter his head when he plans his campaign against the Yanks. No team walks Ruth as much as Cleveland, and off-hand I should say that since coming to New York Ruth has received one-quarter of his bases on balls from Indian pitchers.

Perhaps Speaker is superstitious. Lee Fohl lost his job in Cleveland when Ruth hit a homer with the bases full. Fohl yanked a right-hander, who had been going pretty good, and sent in Combe, a southpaw, to face Ruth, a left-hander. The Babe cleaned decks, and the next day Tris Speaker was made manager of the Indians.—Fred Lieb in New York Telegram.

M. Mingund, a professional billiard player of Paris, was the first to use the leather-tipped cue.

Eddie Held of the Algonquin Golf Club, St. Louis, 1923 titleholder, again won the trans-Mississippi golf championship.

John L. Sullivan, who was 5 feet 2 1/2 inches tall, was one of the few prominent heavyweight pugilists who have been under 6 feet.

D. G. A. Lowe set what was claimed as a world's record at Stamford Bridge by running 900 yards in 1:10.25.

The public playground field, which had its birth in Boston in 1885, has since spread to 748 cities and towns in 45 states and Canada.

Gehrig Is Big Help

Odd-Year Swatter

Harry Hellman, star outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, has won the American league batting championship three times. And, oddly enough, he has turned the trick every other season since starting in 1921. In 1921 Hellman won his first crown, hitting .394. Two years later he came through again with a mark of .403. And last year, after a sensational uphill battle, nosed out Tris Speaker on the final day of the chase. His average was .393.

SOUTHPAWS ENJOY LENGTHY CAREERS

Pitch Many Games After Being Tagged as Through.

Remarks by club owners and managers in the American association that any left-handed pitcher can be a winner in Tom Hickey's league if he is smart and has control, lends one to ponder over the fact that southpaws last a mighty long time in the diamond pastime.

Baseball history is dotted with instances where left-handed pitchers were figured to be all through in the majors and Class AA leagues only to make startling comebacks. The pioneers of the league this year are Rube Benton of Minneapolis and Nick Callow and Ernie Koob of Louisville. Benton is thirty-eight years old, while Callow is close to that mark. Koob is about thirty-four.

The great and only Rube Waddell was well up in his thirties when he helped pitch Minneapolis to three championships in 1910, 1911 and 1912. Waddell was one of the greatest of all left-handers. When one considers how long Waddell retained his effectiveness despite the fact that he never took care of himself, one must marvel at his feats on the mound.

Chances are that if Waddell had possessed the morals of Christy Mathewson or Walter Johnson he would have established records for winning games, strikeouts and low-hit games that would have stood for all time. In some of the games Waddell pitched for the Millers he showed some speed or since. Whenever old-timers tell you about the great pitching feats of Rube Waddell don't give them the wise-guy look and turn away, for Waddell was everything that has been said about him.

Nick Altrock, Lefty George, Howard Merritt, Cy Young (not Denton), but the younger pitcher of that name) and Bill Burns are several other southpaws who were effective at an age when most pitchers are through.

Many left-handers go to excesses and do tricks that would kill a right-hander, but these things only seem to make these southpaws leave a more baffling brand of speed and curves than ever. They seem to regard the thirty-year mark as a sort of tonic and go better after that age than ever before.

Remember Dusty Miller? He was a great pitcher for Brooklyn years ago, but he began cutting up such capers that he was shunted to the minors in 1916. Miller then got down to business and pitched such sensational ball that he was purchased by the Cleveland American league late in the season of 1920 and helped pitch the Indians to the pennant and the world's championship that season. Eventually, his peculiar way got him into trouble again and he was shipped back to the Pacific Coast league, but you will note that a guy named Dusty Miller was pitching for the St. Louis Cardinals as recently as 1925.

United States Supreme in Billiards for Years

The United States was supreme in billiards for years, with Willie Hoppe holding the leading crown, but at present the lead is held across the water with Erich Hagendocher and Edouard Horemans ahead of the field. Frederick S. Hovey of the executive committee, National Association of Amateur Billiard Players, believes Europe is going to continue this advantage, basing his opinion on comparative showings of European and American amateurs in this year's tournaments.

In Europe the amateurs that competed for continental honors represented Holland, Belgium and France. Matches in the European tournament are of 400 points compared to the 300 points that constitute matches on this side.

The highest grand average in the American play was 10.427, and that was less than the grand average of the last man in the European tournament, an average of 12.10.

Donoghue to Retire

Steve Donoghue, England's crack jockey, is to retire from riding and is to start training horses. Donoghue has been riding for more than twenty years and has been on the backs of six Derby winners—three in succession—and he also rode Papyrus, a Derby winner, in the United States in a match against Zev.

Arthur Fletcher Cries for More Scrap in Game

Modern baseball will lose its attraction for the public unless the fraternizing of rival players is replaced by the combativeness of the past. In the opinion of Arthur Fletcher, aggressive leader of the Philadelphia Nationals, "There is too much hand-shaking and back-patting nowadays," said the former shortstop of the Giants. "The Rubes has been connecting at the plate in regular fashion."
 "The fans like to feel that the players are opposed to each other in spirit. I am against rowdiness. The game has grown out of that stage. But that does not mean we expect players to act like a lot of Little Lord Fauntleroy."
 "We used to regard the players of an opposing club as deadly enemies while the game was on, but now there is too great a tendency to turn the big leagues into college fraternities."

Gus Krock a Thriller

Gus Krock was a thriller in the National league for one season only. Anson believed he had a marvel in the "Big Swede," but Krock cooled off after having one season of sensational hitting and was soon lost to big leaguedom.
 Krock was the hurler who stopped Tim Keefe after that Irish gentleman had set a record by winning 10 consecutive games. Keefe couldn't get reached by "Big Gus" for his twentieth and deciding win.

BASEBALL NOTES

Cobb of Detroit is giving up his place a great deal to Manush.
 Columbus is still on top in the American association in alphabetical order.
 George Burns of the Indians is the first major-league player to make 100 hits this season.
 Eppa Rixey, Cincinnati pitcher, is an active member of the Cincinnati Indoor Tennis club.
 Johnny Rawlings, veteran second baseman, is back in the game for the Pirates after a long layoff.
 Utility outfielder Johnny Tobin was released unconditionally by the Washington American baseball club.
 Wiltse, recruit pitcher from Mobile, is doing some very fine box work for the Boston Red Sox in last place.
 Chet Nichols, pitcher for the New Haven Eastern league team, has been sold to the Pittsburgh National league club.
 Twelve hundred dollars a year was the top-notch salary for ball players in the early days of the National league.
 "Cy" Young was in the major leagues for 22 years. Mathewson served 17. This is Walter Johnson's twentieth.
 Jimmy Johnston, former star infielder with the Brooklyn Robins, was sold to the New York Giants by the Boston Braves.
 Rube Bressler, Cincinnati's all-round player, is having a great season. The Rubes has been connecting at the plate in regular fashion.
 Baseball in the colleges may be waning, as some think, but it remains a big attraction at Princeton university, second only to football.
 The Columbus team is so far down in the American association race that when they lose a game it doesn't take anything off the percentage.
 It is interesting that the new Harvard and Yale baseball captains are both third basemen, and that last year they were both left fielders.
 Jack McCarty of the Chicago Cubs, playing the outfield, in a game April 23, 1905, started three double plays in a nine-inning contest. Anderson, in a nine-inning contest for Brooklyn in playing center field for Cincinnati, May 21, 1890, performed a similar feat.
 Walters have been asked on Dick Kerr, diminutive pitcher with the San Francisco Seals. It marks the virtual end of Kerr's baseball career, which reached its climax in the world's series of 1919.

Freight Train Phone Latest in Railroad Engineering

By means of a telephone connecting the caboose and the cab of a freight train with 73 cars, the engineer and conductor of an Eastern line held conversation recently, saving the need for hand signals and speeding the progress of the train. As they were pulling out of the yards, the conductor notified the engine man that a car repair man was riding in the caboose and would get off at the east end of the yard and close the switch when the train was in the main track.

This saved slowing up, and later the engineer notified the conductor that, if conditions were satisfactory with regard to the train, he would not stop for water at the next station. Permission to proceed was given, sparing another delay. The wires were strung over the tops of the cars.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Relic of Old Race

Remnants of a race believed to have existed in Florida 2,000 years ago have been dug up in Broward county in that state. Near a burial mound was discovered an idol, 35 feet tall, made of sea mussel, or "wood eternal," as it is called by those who regard it as indestructible. The features, seemingly those of a female, were carved from shells. They were of the Mongolian type. The body was fashioned from wood. Scientists found the burial mound about 500 yards from the Atlantic ocean. It is one of the highest spots of the country and the site of the first white settlers who came to Florida.

Billions of Bibles

The Bible in the English language is the most widely sold book in the world. Whether or not it is as widely read we do not know, but the American Bible society reports the remarkable total of ten and one-half billion copies sold in 1925. This breaks the record for all previous years. Increases were shown in China, Japan, and throughout the Far East. Russia alone declined to admit the Bible as an influence for good.—The Outlook.

Chewing Gum

America's chewing gum bill in the last year was $30,000,000, exclusive of the cost of gasoline necessary to remove it from the trousers.

New Dishwasher-Sink

A dishwasher sink has been invented. In the middle of the bottom of the sink is a large opening which is closed by a cover-plate when the dishwasher is not in use. Beneath the opening is a wire-net basket held in a cylindrical metal container.

Thrifty Britishers

Rare paintings are well done.

Indians Increase

The Department of the Interior says that the Indian population is approximately 350,000. This represents a gain during the past 12 years of almost 19,000, while during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, the increase was 2,693. These figures apply strictly to the United States. Alaska, with a large Indian population, is omitted.

Emigrants Seek Cities

In 1920 there were about 14,000,000 foreign-born persons living in the United States and of this number more than 10,000,000 lived in the cities and large towns. Of this latter number more than 5,000,000 entered the country after 1900, while only 1,416,000 of those entering went to the rural sections.

Dairymen's Fly-Kil

Insect Killer and Repellent
These Things Are True of "Dairymen's Fly-Kil"
1. "Fly-Kil" quickly kills every fly fairly hit with the liquid or enveloped for a moment in the gas.
2. When properly applied "Fly-Kil" is effective as a repellent for from 12 to 24 hours after application. (Read and follow instructions carefully.)
3. "Fly-Kil" is pleasant to use, has a sweet smell, is not harmful to the hands of the user; contains no phenol cresol, tar, or carbolic acid.
4. "Fly-Kil" will not stain nor mat the hair of cattle. When correctly applied as a timely divided spray, it leaves the coat soft and Glossy and will not make the hair die.
5. "Fly-Kil" will not readily taint dairy products and no such difficulty will result if reasonable care is used to prevent the spray from settling directly into dairy utensils.
6. "Fly-Kil" is equally effective as a killer and repellent against bees, moths, mosquitoes, bedbugs, cockroaches, and certain other insect pests.
7. "Fly-Kil" is valuable for winter use because it can be depended upon to rid cattle of lice and keep chicken lice out of the poultry house.

Figures of Interest and What They Mean

How many farmers realize that more than 30,000,000 people in the United States derive a living directly or indirectly from the dairy cow, that one hundred and ten billion pounds of milk are annually produced in the United States. The value of milk and milk products amounts to over $2,500,000,000 a year to the dairy farmer. The annual return to the farmer is greater than the combined value of such metallic substances as pig iron, silver, gold, copper, lead and zinc. Truly in the dairy cow we have the world's greatest gold mine not only in wealth but even much more so in health. No food furnishes the healthful elements for growth and energy as completely as milk and milk products. Clean high quality milk and milk products are a blessing to man-kind, but dirty carelessly handled milk and its products may become a serious menace to public health.

Speed in Cooling a Big Factor.

A good point to bear in mind is that if milk is cooled slowly, many germs may develop during the process even though a low temperature is reached ultimately. If germs thus develop, and if the temperature again becomes favorable for the growth of bacteria, the milk will soon spoil. Dirty cans cause the producer more losses each year than perhaps any one factor. It is well for our milk patrons to wash their cans after they have been returned and not regard the washing and sterilizing we give them as complete or final.
