Mr. Dixon—If abstract refers to a subject of thought, what does concrete refer to?
Joseph K.: No thought.
Glee club practice was held Tuesday evening.

The Dramatic club held its monthly meeting Wednesday evening.
A debate was held Nov. 7, between several members of the debating club. The subject was: Resolved, That the Five-Day Week Plan is Beneficial. The judges were Philip McLaughlin, Viola Gayowski and Miss Rosold. The decision was in favor of the affirmative side, 6 to 5.

The first basketball game of the season will be played Nov. 19 at Oakfield.

Why I Want To Go To College

The first thing to know in answering this question is what a college is. My idea of a college is that it is a place to go for the development of your talents. This is why I want to go to college feeling that I have some talent which, by attending college, I can develop by the knowledge gained through the experiences of many people who have gone before me. It is also the duty of every good citizen to develop his talents, as I have learned in Citizenship and to become of some importance to his fellowmen. The chief cause of going to college I have already stated, but there are many other things which are also useful that are derived from college. At college you make many friends through the parties, fraternities, and daily happenings. At college you also come into contact with some of the more serious problems of life and you are taught how to confront them.

BASKETBALL

On Friday evening, November 19, the basketball season will open with a game between Oakfield and Kewaskum. The game is to be played on the Opera House floor. The local boys have been trying to get in trim the past week and a good game is promised. The Oakfield quintet is working hard and will offer stiff opposition. W. A. Shuman will referee the game. Game called at eight o'clock.

The Senior class entertained the High School students at a Halloween party, October 25th. The guests were at first taken through a chamber of horrors. Games and dancing constituted the entertainment for the rest of the evening. The Seniors were also able to secure a fortune teller. The greater part of the student body was represented and a good time was reported by all.

MEMORIAL

In sad and loving remembrance of our dear father, Peter Terlinden, who passed away one year ago today, Nov. 12th, 1925.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled,
God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love has given
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in Heaven.
May he rest in peace.

On Friday evening, November 26 the Athletic Association will present the first number of the Lecture Course in the High School Auditorium. The numbers were purchased from the Extension Division of the University of Wisconsin. The entertainers who will appear have been with the University for several years and have appeared before many audiences in the state. The University requires written reports of the program and in every instance the audiences were well pleased with the entertainments.

S. Platt Jones, who will appear first, gives a program of wit and clean humor. Mr. Jones provides variety by appearing in many well known characters—a transformation in looks, manner, and voice. The skillful use of wigs, paint, pencil, and costume gives the audience many a pleasant surprise. Jones makes you laugh and keeps you laughing.

The second number will be given on January 14 by the Dresser-Williams Company. The program consists entirely of instrumental music. Selections will be rendered on the piano, cornet, saxophone, accordion, bassoon, clarinet and oboe. The West Bend section of the American Red Cross recently organized for disaster relief. Members have been placed in charge of certain districts of this section of the county in order to successfully cope with any situation which may arise that will require the help of the Red Cross.

Rarely are the families and the community visited by calamity able to recover without outside aid. It is for this reason that the West Bend chapter is affiliated with the National Red Cross organization, and pays its membership dues each year. When disaster or calamity should befall this district, the national organization would be prompt in rendering aid.

Lydia of the Pines

By HONORÉ WILLSIE

CHAPTER XI —17— Lydia Giggles

The days flew lightly by, lightly for Lydia, too, in spite of the heavy sea of clouds that carried the heavy camp. The day before they broke camp, Lydia's old squaw appeared and asked for Charlie Jackson's name.

"Charlie and Kent were cooking dinner," she said. "I'll be glad to tell him to take the poor thing away, Lydia."

"He must feel her, first," exclaimed Lydia, leading the old Indian over to the cooking shelter.

Kent and Lydia exchanged glances as Charlie led the squaw—Susie, he called her—into the woods, after Lydia had heaped her old arms with food. Kent and Gustus had put the dinner on the table and they all were seated at the most when Charlie returned.

"What did she want, Charlie?" asked Kent.

"She wouldn't care if I told you," replied Charlie, grimly. "But, he burst forth suddenly, 'Some day you whites will pay. Some day the Japs or the Jews will do to you Americans what you've done to us.'"

"Look here, Lydia, Levine is up to some new ruse. Last night with me on his mind he said he was going to see the old man about the reservation. She lost her head and began to say she didn't find out what it was about. And he's getting the last of my timber now. Lydia, you've got to help me. When you get home, talk to Levine."

"Getting the last of your timber!" exclaimed Kent.

"Yes, the law lets 'em get the 'dead and down' stuff and who's going to sweat it's fresh stuff that he cut this summer and will get out next winter?"

"That how does he come to be taking your wood? Why don't you go to see him yourself?" asked Kent.

"I can't answer either of those questions," replied Charlie, sullenly.

The two young whites thought of the attack on Levine, and looked at each other apprehensively.

"Mother's not so very well. She works too hard at the blamed canning. I told her I'd rather never eat it than have her get so done up."

"I'll be glad to help her," said Lydia. "We had a perfectly heavenly time in camp, Billy."

"Did you?" asked her caller, indifferently. "Going to try to sell fudge, this winter, Lydia?"

"I don't know," Lydia's tone was mournful. "Daddy hates to have me. Now I'm growing up he seems to be getting sensitive about my earning money."

"He's right, too," said Billy, with a note in his voice that irritated Lydia.

"Much you know about it! You just try to make your clothes and buy your school books on nothing. Dad's just afraid people'll know how little he earns, that's all. Men are selfish pigs."

Astonished by this outburst, Billy turned round to look up at Lydia. She was wearing her Sunday dress of the year before, cheap cotton that she had outgrown.

"You always look just right to me, Lydia," he said. "Listen, Lydia, I'm not going to be a farmer, I'm—"

"Not be a farmer!" cried Lydia. "After all you've said about it?"

"No! I'm going in for two years' law, then I'm going into politics. I tell you, Lydia, what this country needs today more than anything is young, clean politicians."

"You mean you're going to do like Mr. Levine?"

"God forbid!" exclaimed the young man. "I'm going to fight men like Levine. And by heck, he paused and looked at Lydia dreamily, 'I'll be governor and maybe more, yet.'"

"But what's changed you?" persisted Lydia.

"The fight about the reservation, mostly. There's something wrong, you know, in a system of government that allows conditions like that. It's against American principles."

Lydia was impressed. She forgot that Billy smelled of the liveryyard.

"Well," she said, "we'd all be proud of you if you were President. I can tell you."

"Would you be?" Billy's voice was pleased. "Then, Lydia, will you wait for me?"

"Wait for you?"

"Yes, till I make a name to bring to you."

Lydia flushed angrily. "Look here, Billy Norton, you don't have to be silly after all the years we've known each other. I'm only fifteen, just remember that, and I don't propose to wait for any man. I'd as soon think of waiting for—Adam, as for you, anyhow."

Billy rose with dignity, and without a word strode down the path to the gate and thence up the road. Lydia stared after him indignantly. "That old farmer!" she said to Adam, who wriggled and slobbered, sympathetically.

She was still indignant when John Levine arrived and found her toasting herself and the waffles for supper, indifferently. Perhaps it was this sense of indignation that made her less patient than usual with what she was growing to consider the follies of Lydia's age.

She liked to sit on the steps and stare at it, dreaming and wondering. For the Indians and the pines were now unalterably associated in Lydia's mind. The life of one depended on that of the other. Strange thoughts and perhaps not altogether cheerful and wholesome thoughts for a girl of Lydia's age.

So it was probably well that Margery about this time began to show Lydia a certain Margery-esque type of attention. In her heart, in spite of her mother's teachings, Margery had always shared her father's admiration for Lydia. In her childhood it had been a grudging, jealous admiration that seemed like actual dislike. But as Margery developed as a social favorite and Lydia remained about the same quiet little dove, the jealousy of the banker's daughter gave way to liking.

Therefore, several times a week, Margery appeared on her bicycle, her embroidery bag dangling from the handle bars. The two girls would then establish themselves on cushions by water and sew and chatter.

"One day Lydia said, 'I wish we had hardwood floors like yours.'"

"What kind are yours?" inquired Margery.

"Just pine, and kind of mean, splintery pine, too."

"Upstairs at Olga's all the floors were that way," said Margery, "and they had a man come and sandpaper 'em and put kind of putty stuff in the cracks and oil and wax 'em and they look fine."

"Gee!" said Lydia, thoughtfully. "I'll do it! And I'll cut our old living-room carpet up into two or three rugs. Lizzie'll have to squeeze enough out of the grocery money for fringe. I'd rather have fringe than a fall coat."

Amos, coming home a night or so later, found the living-room floor bare and Lydia hard at work with a bit of glass and sandpaper, scraping at the silvers.

"Ain't it awful?" asked Lizzie from the dining room. "She would do it!"

"Lizzie's complained all day," said Lydia. "She doesn't realize how our house looks like 'poverty and destruction' compared with other folks'. I'm going to get some style into it, if I have to tear it down. Oh, daddy, don't you get sick of being poor?"

"Yes," said Amos, shortly, "and I think you're a silly girl to wear yourself out on this kind of thing."

Lydia sat up and looked at him. She was growing fast and was thinner than ever, this summer. "If mother was alive," she said, "she'd know exactly how I feel."

Suddenly there came to Amos' memory a weak and tender voice, with certain notes in it like Lydia's. "Lydia," he said, abruptly, "make the house over if you want to, my dear," and he marched out to the kitchen to wash and take off his overalls.

It took Lydia several days to complete her task. When it was done the cracks were still prominent and the oily finish was spotted. But in Lydia's eyes it was a work of art and she cut the old carpet into three parts with enthusiasm. She sewed the fringe on the rugs, on the front porch. Sitting so, she could see Margery when she appeared far down the road. On the afternoon on which she finished the last of the rugs Charlie Jackson and not Margery appeared.

He admired the rugs and the gleam of the shining floor through the doorway. Then, without preamble, he asked, "Did you talk to Levine, Lydia?"

VOGUE FOR VELVET REIGNS; RICHLY FURRED CLOTH COAT

IT IS a velvet-inspired world in which mildy finds herself this season. Velvet for frocks, velvet for wraps, velvet for hats and velvet even for shoes—thus has the enchantment of velvet completely captured the mode. And now that the woman of the front-opening trim in a conspicuously unique way, by extending the collar into revers which form a triangular section at each corner. The sleeve also emphasizes the tendency toward very deep fur cuffs. The reaching half way up the arm. The importance of fantastic fur cuffs on cloth coats is one of the really new features of the mode. In accord with fashion's command the shoes which are worn with this sumptuous coat rather than the hem borderings which were so universal last winter. The new trend is expressed in luge collars which develop into revers which extend down each side of the front to the very hemline. The ultra-soft woolen coat in the picture, which is luxuriously furred in wolf carries out the front-opening trimming in a conspicuously unique way, by extending the collar into revers which form a triangular section at each corner. Simplicity the Keynote of This Gown.

pleure. Ample width and irregular hemline is achieved through shirring at the side which is caught at the waist, giving a touch of blouseness. Nearly every other evening frock has a suggestion of pink in its effect. This particular gown is in a refined dull rose.

Lending in lustrous chiffon velvets are the fuchsias and red tones; especially is the fashionist exploiting the new eggplant color. Pinkish beige is another favorite hue and many young girls are choosing pale blue for their evening frocks of velvet. However, select any color and you will make no mistake for the new velvets present a galaxy of rainbow shades. A pleasing them is the frock of one shade of velvet worn under an evening wrap of velvet in darker shade.

Clever manipulation of fabrics is the stylist's joy and pride in creating new modes, and especially in velvet is adroit handling of the material featured. The dainty supple lightweight character of modern velvet yields gracefully to generous shirring and the smartest gowns and wraps make profuse use of this treatment.

For the black velvet frock, yokes and sleeves, especially the latter of real lace or black clantilly, also gold lace are the latest style touch.

Outstanding style prestige is bespoken for the lavishly furred cloth coat. Not only the luxuriousness of the fur itself, but the novelty in its placement on the coat adds enthusiasm to the vogue.

Women, Don't Suffer!

Kokomo, Ind.—"I was suffering with all kinds of aches and pains—head, back and side, dizzy spells and nervousness. The doctors tried to help me and I tried all kinds of remedies but got little relief. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I hesitated on account of the failure of other treatments, but at last I tried it. One bottle helped me so much I got two more, and by the time I had taken them I was feeling like a different woman. It had relieved me of all aches and pains and made me well."—Mrs. Roy Grifley, 1225 W. Taylor St. All dealers.

It is a fact not generally known that the majority of coconuts drop from the tree in the night after hanging for a period of about fourteen months for ripening. The action of the heavy dew loosens the seal with which nature has provided the nut and allows it to fall.

Keep Fit!

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

To be well, you must keep the blood stream free from impurities. If the kidneys lag, allowing body poisons to accumulate, a toxic condition is created. One is apt to feel dull, languid, tired and aching. A nagging backache is sometimes a symptom with drowsy headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. If you have reason to suspect improper kidney functioning, try Doan's Pills—a tested stimulant diuretic. Users praise them throughout the United States. Ask your neighbor!

How to Calculate Tube Constants. Plate Impedance Is Ascertained With a Simple Apparatus.

That it is not beyond the means of the average radio fan to calculate the constants of his own tubes is amply proved by the enlightening article on this subject by Keith Henney, laboratory expert in the "Special Shows Number" of Radio Broadcast magazine. The only apparatus necessary, besides the tube socket, rheostat, batteries, and perhaps, a potentiometer to control grid bias, consists of two meters—a double-range voltmeter and a milliammeter. The former should have ranges of from 6 to 10 and 0 to 100 volts, while the milliammeter should read up to 10 mls. and, as higher readings may be required of it, a shunt will be necessary. The object of a shunt is to enable higher readings than the maximum figure marked on the dial face to be read.

In his Radio Broadcast article Mr. Henney explains how the amplification factor, plate impedance, mutual conductance, and d. c. and a. c. resistances may be found. Here it is intended briefly to outline his method of arriving at the plate impedance. To get the plate impedance at zero volts grid bias the filament posts of the socket and adjust the rheostat until the meter reads 5 volts. For our first curve, that shown as E₁ on the chart, we shall omit the grid battery. E₂ represents grid bias.

The set-up complete, we place our voltmeter across the filament posts of the socket and adjust the rheostat until the meter reads 5 volts. For our first curve, that shown as E₁ on the chart, we shall omit the grid battery. E₂ represents grid bias.

Diagram Showing How to Set Up the Apparatus.

Change in Plate Voltage
Change in Plate Current
Referring to our chart, we find that with a zero bias, a plate voltage of 125 volts gives us a 12-milliamper plate current and, a 48-volt plate voltage gives us 3 milliamper plate current. We put down that information thus:

Plate Voltage	Plate Current
125	12

Therefore, the plate impedance at zero volts grid bias is 7.80 ohms. Further curves may be drawn to obtain the plate impedance at various grid biases, and these are shown in Fig. 2 as E₂-4, E₂-5, and E₂-6.

Tandem Tuning Condensers. Tandem tuning of condensers, to decrease the number of separate controls, has become quite common. There are some fundamental facts concerning tandem tuning which must be considered if satisfactory results are to be obtained, and these are interestingly outlined in a short article in the Radio Broadcast magazine.

The output and input characteristics in which the tuned circuits work must be exactly similar in each stage before the condensers may be successfully ganged. In a standard circuit with two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification, it is not a difficult matter to gang the condensers across the secondary coils of the transformers in the grid circuit of the second radio frequency and detector stages, providing the coils are matched. It would not be possible, however, to control the condenser tuning the grid circuit of the first radio frequency tube by the same knob frequency which controls the other two condensers, even though the coils and condensers in this circuit were matched with the others.

The reason for this is simple. While the circuits controlled by the second and third condensers by virtue of the fact that they are both fed from the plate of a preceding tube, the circuit tuned by the first condenser is being energized by the antenna and ground system, and is therefore unlike the others in characteristics.

In the Radio Broadcast article, a diagram is shown which makes possible the ganging (tandem tuning) of the three circuits by means of the addition of an extra tube ahead of resistance, its grid circuit being untuned. To the output of the new tube is connected the former input of the previous first r. f. stage. Thus, the input of the two r. f. stages and the detector circuit are all connected to the plate circuit of a preceding tube.

and, providing the coils and condensers are matched, they may be tuned by one three-gang condenser.

It would be possible to gang the three condensers without adding the tube, but this would require extremely accurate cutting of the condenser plates so as to compensate for any effect of the antenna circuit. This is a difficult job, and it is preferable to either retain two controls or to use an extra tube. Many so-called single-control receivers are equipped with some compensating device which permits exact tuning of each circuit to resonance. In some cases this device consists of a small midget condenser connected in parallel with one of the main tuning elements; sometimes the stationary plates of one of the condensers are mounted on a pivot so as to permit more accurate tuning. But no receiver that has such an adjustable feature can be called a single-control set.

Watch Polarity. The polarity of the phone or speaker tips should be ascertained and the proper connections made. If the current is allowed to flow in the reverse direction for any length of time the permanent magnets will gradually become demagnetized and the unit will become useless.

Youngest Manager. Iowa this year provided the youngest team manager in professional baseball. George ("Dutch") White, a wide-range infielder and a .300 hitter, took over the management of the Cedar Rapids club in the Mississippi Valley league for the last two months of the season after two previous leaders had fallen. He was just twenty-one when he took the team in hand. He was sold at the close of the season to the Danville club of the Three-I league.

PLAY OPEN GOLF AT LOS ANGELES

Some of the Best Known Golfers to Tee Off.

That a just share of the country's best known golfers will tee off in the Los Angeles $10,000 open golf tournament is evidenced by the large entry list already received. More than thirty "out-of-town" noble wielders have signed for the West's big event, to be held in Los Angeles, January 5, 7, 8 and 9.

Willie Hunter, former British open champion and member of the "Big Six" committee in charge of the affair, declared that the West will have the greatest field in its history of golf. Mike Brady, Tom Kerrigan, Bobby Cruickshank, MacDonald Smith, Johnny Battini, Johnny Black, Larry Holtz, Johnny Golden, C. R. Murray of Canada, Frank Minch, Elmer and Donald Harrison, Eddie Loos, Joe Novak, Tom Lally, Charles Johnston and Fran Spregell are a few from the East and Middle West who have already entered.

With the raising of the handicap limit, the field is expected to double.

Willie Hunter International

Qualifying this year will be over four or more courses, instead of just two. By the ruling of the "Big Six" committee the first thirty of the 1926 Los Angeles open will not have to qualify on January 5. This will give a number of golfers a longer burning season.

The first 18 holes will be played on January 7, the second 18 on January 8, and 36 holes on the following day. Low 64s and ties of the seventh and eighth go into the finals on Sunday, the 9th, to battle for the $10,000 prize money and silverware.

Young Harry Cooper, who has associated himself with a Los Angeles club, will defend his title. His was the first entry received for the big event. George von Elm, the West's greatest golfer and runner-up in the 1926 Los Angeles open, has also entered. It's a sure bet Von Elm will attract a good share of these golfers who are a bit undecided as to whether they will come westward or not.

The recently crowned amateur champion was accorded an ovation worthy of a national hero on his homeward trip to Los Angeles. More than 5,000 people greeted him upon his arrival there.

Stars Sold for $50,000 by Mississippi League

Twenty-six players sold by the Mississippi Valley league this season will bring approximately $50,000 to the various clubs if the players all are retained.

A number of the deals were made on condition that the candidate be retained after May 1. A curious feature of the graduation this season was the fact that seven were taken from the tailenders, Cedar Rapids. The list of players advancing follows:

Cedar Rapids—Denison, Schroeder, Mondino, Mordenson, White, Burris and Shields. Burlington—Mann, Bartholomew, Farr, Huffman and Nelson. Ottumwa—Eamer, Foley, Marloff, Johnson and Sattagauer. Rock Island—Shanklin, Bryant and Cottelle. Waterloo—Rice, Abbott and Worthington. Dubuque—Bartells and Harvel. Moline—Adamsen, Marshalltown—Schult.

Astrologers Say Stars Favored Tunney to Win

English astrologers contend that it was written in the stars that Gene Tunney should beat Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship. Tunney's horoscope was distinctly favorable for the issue, whereas Dempsey's was not.

The sun, at the time of the fight, it is asserted, was transiting the place of Jupiter at Tunney's birth, and also was in sextile with the place of Uranus at his birth. Mercury was in much the same place, and about to reach the trine of the sun's position at his birth. Moreover, Mars was stationary, close to the trine of the moon's north node when he was born, all of which were auguries of victory.

In Dempsey's case the sun and Mercury at the time of the fight were in square with the sun's place at his birth which was an unfavorable influence.

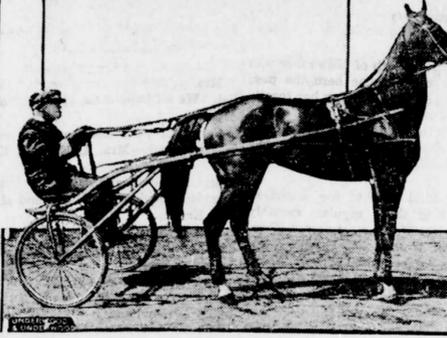

Oldest and Youngest

Illinois lays claim to the oldest and youngest performers in major golf tournaments this season. Lewis W. Pletcher, G. A. R. veteran, won second low net honors in the Illinois senior tournament a few weeks after his eighty-fourth birthday. Sammy Alpert, a fifteen-year-old southpaw, won the western junior championship after a training period which began when he was eleven years of age. He gives much promise for a young player.

French Team Plans

According to Captain Gillou, vice president of the French Tennis federation, he will make every effort to have France challenge in the American zone next year for the Davis cup competition. He believes that in order to make a successful fight for the trophy the French players must arrive in the country early in summer and become thoroughly acclimated and accustomed to the turf and balls used on American courts, and to American ways.

Major League Managers Overlook Finer Points

Managers that berate catchers for calling the wrong ball, or pitchers for delivering the wrong ball to batsmen, forget a few things:

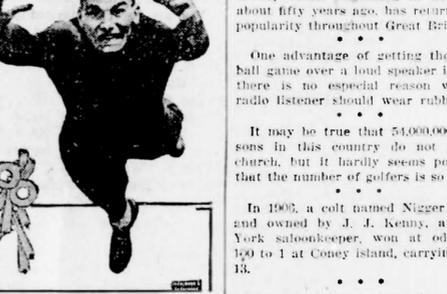

A pitcher cannot always pitch what he wants to pitch. He may try to curve a ball on the inside and the ball will break on the outside. He may try to pitch just above the knees and the ball will get away from him and come to the batter west high. A catcher may call for the right ball and the pitcher will be unable to deliver it.

If the pitcher could always put the ball in the exact spot where he wanted to put it, baseball would perish in a few months.

Incidentally, managers forget that their players hit the deliveries of other pitchers and therefore it is quite plausible that opposing batsmen should occasionally hit the deliveries of their own pitchers.

Major league managers, with one or two exceptions, know less about pitching than about any other angle of baseball. And the pity of it is that they assume an attitude which makes it impossible for them ever to learn.

High-School Star

Here is a photograph of Vint Lawson, a former Omaha high school star half back, but who is now a career half back on the Nebraska university team. This is his first year on the university squad, and our photograph shows him in the act of making a flying tackle.

Feels Golf Election Is Big Tribute to America

Howard F. Whitney, who has been elected as one of the rules committee of the Royal and Ancient Golf club of St. Andrews, in a statement declares he feels his election "is not a personal matter but is a recognition of the position that our country holds in the game and a genuine desire to co-operate with us in a closer understanding of the problems of both countries, with a view to unity and uniformity in all that is embodied in the conduct and structure of the game of golf."

Whitney is a former president of the United States Golf association and is the first native-born American to be elected to the governing body of the St. Andrews club.

Tunney-Dempsey Battle Not Wanted by British

London—Sporting writers are voicing in their newspapers views on the proposed Tunney-Dempsey fight next year at the Wembley exhibition arena. They give especial attention to a reported demand by Tunney for a purse equal in amount to that received by Dempsey when Tunney defeated him in Philadelphia.

Several of the writers, including the expert of Sporting Life, concur that it would be most difficult to obtain admission money to satisfy such a demand, let alone what Dempsey himself also would want.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean that you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and sluggish. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is hot you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jud Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jud Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

Might Almost Claim That Clock "Thinks"

A clock that turns the lights of the house off or on at any time desired and almost puts out the cat was exhibited at the National Research council in Washington recently. The clock is termed almost human by its inventor, Dr. J. F. Van Slyke, of the Horological Institute of America. It responds an every-day clock, but it is wound up by a motor built into the movement and operated by the ordinary house electric current. Not only does it record the time of the day, but also the day of the month and the month of the year. This is indicated by two small hands in place of the second hand. The clock can be so set that it will turn the electric lights in the house or office where it is located off or on at any time desired. If the electric current is accidentally cut off the clock will keep on running for more than four days without electrical winding, and at the end of that time if the current is turned on again the clock will "pick up" the lost windings.

wants to keep her job or hopes for a better one, she must guard her health.
Atlanta, Ga.—"My system was weak and run-down, and I was tired, I was this way for five years or more. I read your advertisement in the papers and I decided to try your medicine, the Vegetable Compound, but I did not begin to take it regularly until after I was married. I got so much good from it that I feel fine and have gained in weight. I work in a broom shop, but my work is not so hard on me now, and I keep my own house, and work my garden, too. I am telling all my friends of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it has helped me."—Mrs. W. M. BAILEY, R. F. D. No. 5, Box 27, Atlanta, Georgia.

Missouri Woman Helped

Parkville, Mo.—"I am proud to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was so ill that I could not lie down at night. Then I got my husband to go to the store and buy me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was up and around before the first bottle was gone, although I only weighed about ninety pounds. I took six or eight bottles and was able to do all my household, washing and ironing, take care of my five boys, and tend to my chickens and garden, where before I had to hire my washing and part of my household."—Mrs. ANNA COLE, R. R. 2, Parkville, Missouri.

Peace and Faith

Senator Park Trammell was talking in Lakeland about the era of universal peace.

"I used to think before the World war crashed down on us," he said, "that universal peace had already come; but the World war has given me such a low opinion of humanity that now I think, Baptist though I am, that it will never come."

"Those who believe in universal peace certainly have faith. Faith! It's a wonderful thing. A school man said to a boy one day: 'James, what is faith?' 'Faith,' said James, 'is believin' what you know ain't so.'"

Variable "Live Stock"

An economic value of fifteen hundred billion dollars is placed on the lives of the men and women of this country by statisticians of a leading life insurance company. It is estimated that this vital capital, measured in dollars and cents, is about five times as great as the total national wealth contained in money, stocks, bonds, merchandise, real estate and other factors of wealth.

Rattlesnake Serum

The dread of the rattler may soon be greatly reduced, if not totally eliminated. Anti-rattlesnake bite serum in portable cases can now be purchased by hikers and outdoor workers. The San Diego Zoological society makes a business of extracting poison from the fang sack of rattlers, preparing the serum from it, and then selling it at little more than cost, put up in little cases that can be easily carried by any who venture into rattlesnake territory.

Fourteen Million And All Good Cars

Have you ever realized what it means to have fourteen million people use one product? It means that the product must be good, mighty good, to deserve such public confidence.

Cars have come and gone, models have changed, so-called improvements have faded out—but for over 20 years Ford cars have been recognized as sure, dependable transportation.

Every Ford buyer has always received his money's worth. This was never more true than today when good looks combine with traditional Ford quality to make your Ford car the best transportation for the money.

Strengthen the Chain

Careful production insures satisfied customers and better market conditions for your milk. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. Follow a certain number of rules for the production of good milk, and make every rule a link in your chain for the production of better milk. Breaking one of these rules means breaking a link in your chain and is liable to render useless all other precautions taken for sanitary production of milk. Pure milk is far better than purified milk.
