WOULD PRESERVE HIGHWAY BEAUTY

Nevada Will Not Permit Erection of Billboard, Sign or Notice.

While state, county and local laws governing advertising signs on the highways are designed, in most states, to afford protection to motorists, only in Nevada do they also attempt to preserve the scenic beauty of the roads. This was disclosed by a survey of such laws recently by the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture.

No Permit for Signs.
In Nevada no permit is granted for the erection of any billboard, sign or other form of notice on any location which may measurably destroy the natural beauty of the scenery or obscure a view of the road ahead or of curves and grades or intersection highways or railroads. While the majority of states restrict the placing of signs within certain distances of curves, grades or intersections of highways or railroads, Nevada is the only state of the 48 to restrict the placing of signs where they will spoil the beauty of the scenery along the highways.

"It is unfair to the motoring public that the very industries which depend upon the highway for their whole business should be the worst offenders in erecting and maintaining thousands of glaring, disfiguring signs along our streets and roadways," Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, recently declared.

"The most offensive of these shriek at the traveler who is in hopeful search of the beauty of the countryside and a restful, uplifting change from city streets. They shriek at him to buy gas and oil, automobiles, grease and tires. The tourist is most frequently enticed to stop at second-rate hotels," he continued.

It is to the credit of many of the producers of the best products that their wares are not advertised in this way, he pointed out, and to certain oil companies and others who have withdrawn from this practice.

Other Offenders.
"The billboard advertisers are not the only offenders against the highways," Mr. MacDonald stated. "Nine out of every ten of the roadside filling stations and lunch stands merit the condemnation rather than the patronage of the passerby."

"These conditions will not be cured by scolding. The larger companies will abandon these invasions of the rights of the public, some through an awakened conscience, others through necessity, because this fight for clean roadways is just starting.

"A number of the state highway departments have made splendid progress, and some notable legislation has been made effective. One of the best of such laws is that of Connecticut, which licenses all roadside filling stations, requires the location and arrangement to be approved, and keeps this business off the right of way."

Oil Filter Must Have Its Regular Servicing

Three years ago before adoption of the oil filter, car manufacturers recommended that oil in the crankcase be changed every 500 miles. Today these manufacturers' oil changing recommendations range from 1,000 to 3,000 miles. The average recommendation is every 2,400 miles. This longer use of the oil has been made possible because of adoption of the oil filter, which filters the oil, removing from it foreign matter that otherwise would cause wear to the engine's vital parts.

The manufacturers' oil changing recommendations are based on the use of an oil filter, and it is further recommended that the filtering unit be renewed every 10,000 miles in order to insure its working at highest efficiency. The filter, it is explained, besides removing the abrasives from the oil before they can damage cylinders, pistons and other internal parts of the engine, also effects a saving in oil of about $20 per car per year.

COACHING WOULD-BE AUTOMOBILE DRIVER

The Berlin motor licensing bureau is demanding that all would-be drivers of automobiles or motor cycles under the ages of eighteen pass the most stringent tests before acquiring licenses. In the Berlin technical high school apparatus has been installed on which young aspirants are coached before they take tests. A young lady is shown above going through her lesson.

Costly Coasting
The touring season is at hand again, and many thousands of car owners are faring forth in quest of the inevitable pleasures of long-distance travel. One of the safety precautions that should be borne in mind on such a trip is that it does not pay to coast with the clutch disengaged or the car out of gear on the strange hill. Grades are deceptive, particularly the strange ones that one encounters on the annual tour. Failure to recognize this has caused many an accident.

Source of Annoying Noises Is in Tops

Roadster and phaeton tops that are put up in a hurry when the first drops of a summer rain begin to fall may prove to be a source of annoying rattling. If the attachment in front is to the windshield frame, it frequently happens that the nuts are not tightened all the way down. The bows also may not be firmly moored. In some of the more expensive cars, the bows are held in place by a cotter pin. Unless this pin is put in properly, it will mean an annoying squeak that sometimes is hard to locate. A washer usually will take up all play at this point.

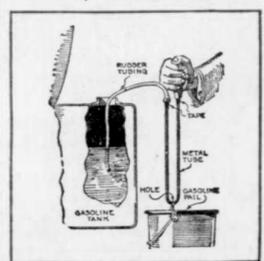

Car Advice of Others Often Is Very Faulty

It is bad business to be guided by other motorists' experiences. Cars are very different in their construction and detail, and the little things are the ones that make the big difference.

Recently a motorist had a new timing chain installed on his car and felt that he was through with chain troubles for some time to come. It developed that he got this idea from a friend whose car is equipped with an automatic take-up device which compensates for the stretching of the chain.

After driving a thousand miles with the new chain, he was surprised to find that the spark timing became retarded as a result of the chain wearing down a little, stretching and then jumping a tooth. Where automatic take-up is not provided an initial adjustment is necessary after the first 700 miles of the new chain's service.

Self-Starting Siphon Very Handy Accessory

Bent Tube and Bulb a Handy Siphon.

Instead of sucking rubber hose to start gasoline siphoning out of a tank, construct the neat siphon shown in the illustration. Bend a piece of brass or copper tubing into a U shape. To one end attach a rubber bulb like photographers use. To the other attach a piece of hose. Then drill a hole in the tube at the bend. Insert the rubber tube in the tank and squeeze the bulb. Press your finger tightly over the hole and release the bulb. Remove your finger and gasoline will flow from the hole in the pipe. The hole must be below the level of the gasoline in the tank.—Popular Science Monthly.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

Unhappily the path of the just is not a one-way thoroughfare.

At the beginning of 1923, Italy had approximately 172,000 motor vehicles in operation.

As to America's sense of humor did you ever notice the spare tires some carry on their cars?

"The part of the automobile that causes more trouble than any other is the nut that holds the steering wheel."

Women are now fairly good car drivers. They have, so speak, started from the back seat and worked up.

We do not see why they call them ambulance-chasers in New York when some of them get to the hospital ahead of the ambulance.

Aid Strawberry With Wild Ones

Four Promising Varieties Are Found Suitable for Home Preserving.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All the strawberries in the United States and most of those of the world—that is, the tame ones—are descendants of two wild American strawberries, one a native of the Pacific coast and the other a native of the eastern United States.

There are many other wild strawberries, however, that did not take part in developing our present kinds. In the untamed wild ones may lurk some valuable trait that can be bred into our domestic varieties which may make them even more desirable than they now are. At any rate, plant breeders are turning to the wild sorts for improving the strawberry, especially to develop new types better adapted to such specific purposes as canning, preserving, and candy making.

Four Promising Varieties.

George M. Darrow, who is in charge of strawberry-breeding work for the United States Department of Agriculture, has already achieved some success in this field. From the thousands of crosses made he has selected four promising varieties especially suited for preserving. They are known only by number as yet, and will need to be tested for adaptation before they can be recommended for planting. The breeding of preserving sorts is only begun, he says, and every region will need its own particular variety.

Technique of Breeding.

The technique of breeding is relatively simple. Mr. Darrow explains, but the important and difficult part is in making the selections. To breed a new kind, no matter for what purpose, two parent varieties are crossed. They may be wild or tame. The pollen from the flower of one is placed on the pistil of the flower of the other. The seed developing from such a cross is planted and every resultant seedling grown to fruiting age before selections are made. If there are three acres of seedlings in fruiting there may be 8,000 kinds, each different from the others. From this enormous number certain promising ones are saved and each is propagated in a separate short row. When they bear, if there is sufficient fruit, canning and preserving tests are made of the more promising ones by canners and preservers with whom Mr. Darrow has made co-operative arrangements.

Oyster Shell for Hens of Great Importance

Profitable poultry raising depends on the elimination of weak, unhealthy chickens, subnormal egg production and soft-shelled eggs. Of course, there are many poultry feeds which will help to keep fowls healthy but there is one mineral food which combined with a balanced ration and plenty of sunlight will do away with all three of the evils just mentioned. This is crushed oyster shell.

The best form of crushed oyster shell contains 98 per cent calcium carbonate and therein lies its value to poultry. The formation of the egg requires three distinct steps. The yolk is made first. This passes to the next stage where it is coated with the white or albumen. The final step of the process is the formation of the shell. Eggshell consists mainly of calcium carbonate. It is therefore evident that if the hen has not a sufficient supply of this mineral in her system, fewer eggs will be produced and those that are produced may have soft shells. In other words the calcium carbonate in the crushed oyster shell supplies the egg shell material.

Agricultural Notes

Infertile eggs keep longest. Seed clover instead of alfalfa if the soil is extremely acid.

Feed poultry yellow corn, cod-liver oil, milk, and leafy feeds for vitamins.

Keep your lawn open for the best effect. Flower beds set in the lawn make the grounds seem smaller.

A gasoline engine will relieve the dairyman of many tasks each day at a cost of less than five cents per hour.

At least one colony of bees should be provided for each acre of your apple orchard to take care of cross-pollination.

Retailers make best profits when prices of produce are low. The farmer gets more of the consumer's money when products are scarce and high priced.

Don't forget that a dairy cow requires an ounce or more of salt a day. This is one of the big little things in successful dairying.

When timber is young, a poor tree cut will allow a good tree to replace it. A good tree saved is a piece of timber for future cutting.

A combination of weight of two parts standard middlings and one part cottonseed meal may be used to replace gluten feed pound for pound in the grain mixture for cows.

Garget Treatment

If the cow is being fed quite heavily and develops garget, then the ration should be immediately reduced at least one-half. As a general routine treatment, a dose of epsom salts should be given. As a local treatment there is nothing gives better results than the ordinary white liniment that is sold at all drug stores. This should be rubbed into the affected quarters thoroughly after each milking and should not be overlooked.

Credit Harris With New Spirit

DETROIT fans are showing an unusual interest in their 1929 baseball machine and Bucky Harris, deposed as Washington leader last season, is given the lion's share of the credit. In the past, the team has been torn by dissension and strife that bordered on war and Harris has proved himself a master diplomat in welding all parts together so that they are functioning together along "all for one and one for all" lines.

His greatest stroke was the asking of waivers on Harry Heilmann, one of his closest personal friends on the club this spring. The big right fielder is the "bell sheep" among the players and when Harris decided that discipline was needed in order to show who was boss and he cracked the whip over Heilmann's head, he proved his point then and there.

Now these are days of peace for everybody on the Tigers' roster, no cliques exist, no petty quarreling disturbs the tranquil air of the clubhouse where, instead of bitter repartee that once marked meetings of opposing factions, there is laughter and good fellowship.

Conditions are quite different from recent years when the fighting wasn't always confined to tests of vocal powers. There is a new spirit on the club, the determination to win, and it is showing surprising results. Harris is given credit for the change and, of course, he is entitled to it. Fans as well as players are with him and already he has accomplished something besides restoring harmony in that his team passed the .500 mark in the won and lost column recently, a stunt it was unable to equal at any time throughout all of last season.

Harris has only two changes in his regular lineup from that of 1928, Roy Johnson cavorting in left field with Dale Alexander playing first. The former, a half-breed Cherokee Indian, is rated as the best player graduating from the Pacific Coast league last year. He is greased lightning afield and on the bases, and hit to a .359 tune, his 342 singles including 22 circuit clouts, 15 triples and 52 doubles. He is said to have cost Detroit $75,000.

Bucky Harris.

FIND HARD NAMES IN BIG LEAGUES

Baseball Fans Dispute Over Pronunciation.

This is the time of the year when the baseball writer is called over the telephone to tell B that A wins the bet because B insists on calling the Yankee shortstop Durocker, writes Daniel M. Daniel, in the New York Telegram. And you'd be surprised at the numerous wagers made over the slightest nuances and variations in pronunciation, battles over the way the "A" in Averill is sounded, and whether the "b" in Combs is given the air.

An the disputes rage not over the new players and some of the old, but even over such ancients as Luque, of the Reds. Some of the fans still insist on calling him, among other things, Luke. In order to settle old scraps and prevent new ones this writer offers a compendium of player name pronunciations. Here goes:

Durocher, Yankees — Due-roo-sheer. The "roe" is pronounced the same as in shad. No syllable is silent.

Schalk, Giants — Shawk. The "t" is silent, as in bass drum.

Lindstrom — Lin-strum. The "strum" is emphatically loud, as in ukelele.

Grabowski — Grab-ow-ski. "Grab," as in catcher; "ow," as in pain.

Heyt, Yankees — Hoyt. Pronounced as "hurt" in Flatbush.

Susce, Phillies — Soo-say. The "say" is loud, as in bushier.

Koupol, Robins — Koo-pal. The "koo" is lisped, as in bullpen.

Meine, Pirates — My-knee. Knee is the unstressed syllable, as in charley horse.

Bluege, Senators — Blue-gie. The "gie" is almost silent, as in the Scottish version of "give."

Roush, Giants — Row-sh. The "row" is pronounced as in battle.

Pielnich, Robins — Pea-sin-ik. The "ik" is pronounced as in hiccough.

Combs, Yankees — Co-ms. The "b" is silent, as in honey.

Todd, Red Sox — Tote. The "d" is given the go-by, as in wood alcohol.

Averill, Indians — Ah-ver-ill. The initial "A" is pronounced as in animal crackers.

Prudhomme, Tigers — Prude-ahm. The "h" is forgotten, as in "alf-and-alf."

Lerlan, Phillies — Leary-ann. The "enny" as in Baker field.

Bisnette, Robins — Bizun-net. "Net" is pronounced as in right field in Flatbush.

Rochester Signs Indian

Falt V. Elkins, well known Indian all around track athlete, who has signed with the Rochester club of the International league, Elkins is an outfielder, and, according to report is not only fast and agile, but can hit.

Pat Malone Began His Ball Career in South

Pat Malone, the Chicago Cubs' big right-hander, is making a strong bid to become Joe McCarthy's ace on the mound this year. He won eight games last year, his first in the National league, but if his early season victories are an indication, he will win a lot more this season.

Malone began his professional career in 1921 with Knoxville and was purchased by the Giants at the end of the season. He was sent to Waterbury the following year and released to Toledo in 1923.

He later played at Minneapolis, Beaumont, Shreveport, Des Moines, and again at Minneapolis. His brilliant showing with Minneapolis on his second visit prompted the Cubs to purchase him.

Rivalry Heightened by Manager Wade Killifer

More baseball rivalry will exist in San Francisco in 1929 because fans believe that Wade Killifer and his Mission team are going to make the older San Francisco club, the Seals, do a lot of hustling to try to win the pennant. And Oakland, across the bay, promises to make it a hot three-cornered district fight. Killifer has made a hit here and the fans are beginning to worry lest they should lose him to the majors if he is successful this season. It seems that when the Boston Nationals were after him only a few dollars stood in the way of agreement. Boston may wish that it had taken him.

Babe Ruth Selects Cubs and Yanks as Winners

Babe Ruth picks the Chicago Cubs and his own Yankees as the rival teams in the 1929 world series. The home run king figures that the Philadelphia Athletics, generally rated second in the American league, will finish no higher than fourth. Here are his selections:

American League—New York, St. Louis, Detroit, Athletics, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Boston.

National League—Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia.

Try Out for Rookie

In the process of developing youngsters to fill out the gaps in the Chicago White Sox pitching staff, Manager Blackburn is carrying a number of raw youngsters this year, several of whom have shown encouraging signs. One of these lads is Daniel P. Dugan, a big lefthander, who attracted notice as a pitcher at St. Louis university. While it is a long jump from the campus to major league baseball, Dugan appears to be one of those rare naturals and the wise ones are saying that he'll be a sure-shot before long.

Baseball Is Best

Earl (Greasy) Neale, former Cincinnati outfielder, football coach at Washington and Jefferson, University of Virginia and other institutions, likes his job as coach with the St. Louis Cardinals. Asked if baseball held the attraction for him that football has in many autumns past, he voted for baseball. It may be interesting, however, to call for another vote next October when the collegiate vote next October when the collegiate pastime of football gets well under way.

Might Be "Antique"

Whether the word "sterling" on silver would destroy the value of the piece as an antique would depend upon the piece. The word "sterling" appears on Chester silverware as early as 1690. It is also found on silverware made in Cork, Ireland, at the end of the Seventeenth century.

Who Can Recall Days of the Singing School?

The passing of winter recalls an institution that flourished in the Middle West, as it had in earlier days farther east—the old-fashioned singing school, says the Omaha World-Herald. It ran its course in the earlier '80s, and was at its best in the '70s. Little is ever heard of this pleasant educational feature. It flourished mostly in small towns and rural districts, ending with an entertainment at the schoolhouse or a town hall, where the singing teacher exhibited his wares in the shape of bass, tenor, alto and soprano voices that had been trained with the aid of the old-time tuning fork. Singing masters were difficult to obtain. Sometimes a traveling teacher sought, generally having schools in several different localities, all easily reached, but not conflicting. Notes and scales were first taught, written on a blackboard. Singing of simple tunes by note came next. Eventually came the songs with words.

Views Future of World With Pessimistic Eye

Dr. Frederick Graves in an article entitled "2000 A. D.," in Chambers' Journal, discounts the anticipation of those who expect the evolution of a race of supermen living roseate and perfect lives. Remarkable on the strain of modern life, he says that it has been predicted by medical men that the wear and tear of existence will make the world little better than an asylum of nervous wrecks in a hundred years more. There is the more serious threat of a state of strife in which not only cities but perhaps nations will be pitted out of existence by laboratories. Mere armies and navies will be obliterated before they have a chance of deploying into action, according to Doctor Graves. It might well happen that such another calamity would paralyze or even destroy humanity and civilization together.

Monarch Not a Myth

With the Wisconsin Legislature

Madison—Appropriations for which the finance committee has reported bills have been increased $2,277,523 over the sums allotted to them by the legislature two years ago.

For operation and maintenance the board of control will receive $4,653,272 as compared with $5,923,340 in the preceding two years.

Teachers' colleges will receive for operation and maintenance $4,225,560. That allowance in 1927 was $3,567,655.

General appropriation bills for state departments other than the three big boards carry increases totaling $167,800 over the allowances to the same departments two years ago.

How well the two houses will be satisfied with the work of the committee remains to be seen.

The assembly passed Carlton W. Mauthe's bill to permit high school graduates to enter the University of Wisconsin and elect courses in or outside the required lot if they do not wish to work for a degree.

Endorsement of the proposed 1930 and 1931 Wisconsin good will tour was withheld by the assembly until finances of the 1928 advertising tour through southwestern states are settled.

The senate killed Senator Schuman's enabling act to provide a method by which one or more counties may consolidate if their voters approve merger.

The senate killed the Gettelman bill authorizing county judges to exempt boys and girls between 10 and 18 from compulsory vocational education.

Outlawing of dog racing in Wisconsin, as operated on the "contribution and refund" system, lacks only the approval of Gov. Kohler, the senate having voted, 25 to 1, to concur in the bill by Assemblyman Davies, Waukesha, to prohibit that type of "gambling."

With only four dissenting votes, the senate passed the Michigan bill empowering the Milwaukee commissioner of public works to assess benefits for street improvements on all property owners whom he believes benefited.

Senator Howard Readale's bill to tax cigars was sent down to defeat by the state senate by a margin of two votes. The vote was 13 to 11.

The children's code, providing for care of dependent and delinquent children, was passed by the assembly in the form recommended by the judiciary committee which has conducted extensive hearings in the subject.

Final passage of the bill was by a vote of 81 to 7 after the assembly had overcome repeated attempts to add amendments not countenanced by the committee.

Unemployment compensation for Wisconsin industries was turned down by the assembly. By a vote of 44 to 36 the lower house indefinitely postponed Assemblyman Robert A. Nixon's bill designed to prevent unemployment by requiring employers to provide for workers throughout the year.

Amendment of the Wisconsin state constitution to permit state ownership and operation of water power and electric utilities was recommended by the assembly judiciary committee.

The upper house engrossed four bills dealing with the forestry program, the subjects being the purchase of timber lands by the conservation commission, taxation of forest lands and the exchange of forest lands owned by the state and the counties.

MAC DONALD SAID TO PLAN VISIT TO U. S.

Disarmament and Other Matters to Be Discussed.

London.—There is strong belief in well informed circles in London that prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald is prepared to go to Washington this summer for a personal conference with President Hoover. This would include discussion not only of naval disarmament, but also of the whole scope of Anglo-American relations.

Should this belief prove well founded, it would be the first time in history that a British prime minister, actually in office, had visited the United States. It is also currently reported that Prime Minister Mackenzie King, of Canada, will be requested to join in the deliberations.

Meanwhile Arthur Henderson, the new secretary of state for foreign affairs, in an interview voiced sentiments of the strongest friendship for the United States and confirms the report that diplomatic and trading relations with Soviet Russia will be resumed "with expedition."

Persons in close touch with him forecast that, assuming cabinet approval—which may be pretty well taken for granted—the labor prime minister will be prepared to make the journey soon after parliament adjourns, probably sometime in August.

Washington.—J. Ramsay MacDonald, new prime minister of Great Britain, and Mackenzie King, premier of Canada, will find a highly receptive administration awaiting them if they come to Washington this summer to personally discuss with President Hoover the whole scope of relations between the United States and the British empire.

As yet neither President Hoover nor Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state, have been advised that the new British prime minister contemplates such a trip, but it was said that it would still be too early to expect official notice of such an epochal proposal.

Administration quarters everywhere were enthusiastic at the prospect of President Hoover and the members of his cabinet sitting down at a conference table with the outstanding leaders in British public life to go over the whole book of Anglo-American relations. It can be stated on the highest authority that the Hoover administration would welcome it.

Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, said close cooperation between Mr. MacDonald and President Hoover would give exceptional assurance that progress would be made toward lifting the burden of armaments.

Sailing Yachts to Be Tested at Washington

Ten Million Needed to Aid in Farm Research

Washington.—Increased appropriations for farm research activities by the United States Department of Agriculture were recommended by a group of national farm organizations at a luncheon meeting with Secretary Hyde and Assistant Secretary Dunlap, Dr. A. F. Woods, director of scientific work of the department, declared that an additional appropriation of $10,000,000 a year was needed.

NAMES NEW CABINET

J. Ramsay MacDonald.

London.—J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor party, became premier of Great Britain and announced the appointment of his cabinet.

Britain now has its second Labor government by virtue of the victory in the recent general elections. In the first Labor cabinet five years ago, Premier MacDonald also held the post of foreign secretary. This time he will be first lord of the treasury in addition to premier, but he has named Arthur Henderson foreign secretary and Philip Snowden chancellor of the exchequer.

CONGRESS ASKED TO AID IN DRY REFORM

Shift of Bureaus and Agencies Planned by President.

Washington.—President Hoover in his second message to the special session of congress has asked for appointment of a joint committee to study prohibition law enforcement under a reorganization of the prohibition administration as a part of the department of justice.

The President stated that his law observance commission and a special committee of representatives of the government departments affected would co-operate in the study of the questions involved in the transfer of the prohibition enforcement bureau from the treasury to the justice department.

The presidential message calls upon the joint congressional committee to make recommendations to congress at the regular session in December. Congressional leaders indicated that prompt action to provide for such a committee would be taken.

One portion of the message revealed that the President intends to establish a border patrol to harmonize the work of prohibition, customs and immigration officials on the national boundary.

Since the prohibition unit must work in co-operation with the coast guard, customs officials, and immigration agents, the new system to be worked out will involve the justice, treasury and labor departments, as the immigration bureau is a unit in the latter.

The President's message follows: "To the Congress of the United States:

"In order to secure the utmost expedition in the reorganization and concentration of responsibility in administration of the federal bureaus connected with prohibition enforcement, so greatly needed to improve their effectiveness, I recommend that the congress appoint a joint select committee to make an immediate study of these matters, and to formulate recommendations for consideration at the next regular session.

"I shall be glad to appoint a committee from the departments to co-operate with such a committee of the congress. The national commission on law observance and enforcement will also co-operate through their studies of the department organization.

"The subject involves the transfer of parts of various bureaus and agencies from certain departments to others, and it includes as well the necessity for the unification and strengthening of our border patrols, both in connection with prohibition and illegal entry of aliens.

"As the question embraces numerous laws and regulations in federal bureaus, it will require extensive consideration, which if given jointly by such committees of the congress and the departments prior to the regular session will save months of delay."

HOUSE REPEATS O. K. ON FARM AID BILL

Measure Sent to Senate; Prolonged Fight Expected.

Washington.—The administration farm bill, stripped of the senate provision for government export bounties, went through the house again and was sent to the senate. Signs of a prolonged struggle were apparent there when Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, summoned his followers to a conference in an effort to hold the lines against the administration and declared for disagreement with the house.

Administration and Democratic leaders of the senate were in a tug-of-war over two or three Democratic and insurgent Republican senators who virtually have the power to say, by their votes, whether the bill is to become a law within two weeks or be delayed beyond the opening of the new crop season.

Washington.—Complete agreement was announced by senate and house conferees on a farm relief bill which is satisfactory to President Hoover. As expected, the conferees eliminated the export debenture provision of the senate bill, retention of which would have meant a veto.

Two of the five senate conferees, Senator George W. Norris (Rep., Neb.) and E. D. Smith (Dem., S. C.), dissented from this action. The other three senators and all of the five house conferees voted to strike out the debenture provision.

The final bill represents a compromise between senate and house bills on features other than the debenture plan. Essential points of the house bill, which was regarded as the administration measure, were retained. The farm board is given broad powers to deal with a crop surplus. The new law will be known as the agricultural marketing act.

The bill provides for a farm board composed of the secretary of the treasury and eight members appointed by the President at salaries of $12,000. The President will designate the chairman of the board.

Provision is made for setting up commodity advisory councils to advise the board on methods of dealing with crop surpluses.

Commodity stabilization corporations, all the stock of which is owned by co-operatives, are authorized to buy, store, and market surplus commodities. The stabilization corporations will be able to obtain loans from a $500,000 revolving fund at the disposal of the farm board. Only such part of this fund as congress appropriates will be immediately available.

The board may make loans for the handling of crop surpluses and also for the purchase of warehouses and other physical market facilities and may make advances to co-operatives for insurance against price decline. The board may fix the terms of the loans, the interest rate being limited to an amount approximating the rate on outstanding government securities.

One of the last actions of the conferees was elimination of a provision in the senate bill which would permit loans to co-operatives formed for the purpose of buying farm supplies. The sum of $1,500,000 is provided in the bill for administrative expenses of the board.

The wheat situation, and the feeling that it is important to get the farm legislation on the statute books and the farm board organized, is a factor in the parliamentary contest, very, tending to cause a desire in congress to get the conference report out of the way and send the bill to the Executive.

Lack of Passing Faddish Influence Makes This Home Good for

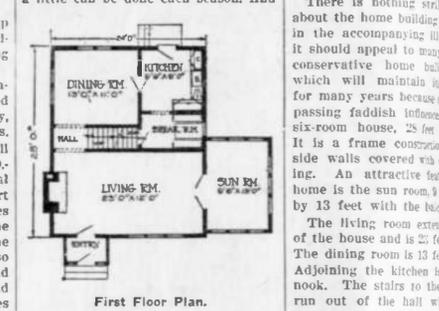

There is nothing striking or novel about this home, but it stands out to many of the more conservative home builders as one which will retain its appearance through many years because of its lack of passing faddish influence.

By W. A. RADFORD Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1227 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The delightful thing about building and owning your own home is that you can add to and improve it year after year, and every investment of money or of time and labor is not lost, but becomes a real and growing improvement for years to come.

The new home looks bare and raw when the carpenters are finally through; but to the eye of the owner this holds an interesting invitation to set out shrubs and plants, to lay out a garden and establish a lawn. It can't all be done the first year, he knows; but a start can be made and a little can be done each season. And through imagination the owner can see the future beauties which some day will be realized.

And there is hardly any other satisfaction in life equal to this of cre-

Ornamental Mouldings for the Small Home

For the small home a new fashion in decorating interiors has been opened. It is said, by the introduction of period mouldings in ornamental wood. These may be used for cornices, wall panels and other purposes. Heretofore decorative wood mouldings have been limited to large and expensive interiors. Hand carved mouldings and even plaster have been far too expensive for the small or medium-sized home.

By means of these new mouldings, this authentic form of decoration is available for every room. Playing an important part in beautifying interiors, possessing strong decorative appeal, they are made of solid wood so will not chip or crack. They reproduce faithfully the ornamental quality of hand-carved mouldings and may be used for door heads, fireplaces and mantels in a single room or throughout a house.

One Per Cent Monthly Fair Carrying Charge

The financing of a home means far more than the mere matter of putting up a few hundred dollars to cover the bare equity. Among the things to be considered are: Saving the money, buying the land, planning the house, buying the material and budgeting for both the investment and the running expenses.

Building a home, or even buying a home, ought not to be considered in a slipshod manner. Few people realize that the home for the family should not be invested in the same manner as a real estate operator or speculator buys up property on the moment or on a shoe string. While the former is putting his hard-earned cash in a place where he plans to

Good Paint, Painter, Assure Satisfaction

Springtime is house painting time just the same as it is moving time, June bride time, flower garden time.

In the process of freshening up the house and making it springlike as the painter, it is always well to heed the gardener's plea for a two-coat job.

The painter says, "It is next to impossible to get the proper kind of a job with less than two coats, in repainting. The outside of a house is bound to become discolored with dirt, such a coat will not completely hide job will last more than twice as long more economical."

It has also been proved time and again that using only the best paint and pays. No matter what kind of material is put on, the labor charge for applying it is the same. The cost of application represents from two-thirds to three-quarters of the cost of the whole job, in the majority of cases. If the job wears, bills for painting will not come around again for three or

and there borrow an idea from the but it is our own little idea that really arouses our interest.

There is nothing striking or novel about the home building idea. It should appeal to many of the more conservative home builders who for many years because of their passing faddish influence, have built six-room houses, 25 feet by 24 feet. It is a frame construction with side walls covered with stuccoing. An attractive feature of home is the sun room, 9 feet 6 inches by 13 feet with the balcony above.

The living room extends the width of the house and is 25 feet by 12 feet. The dining room is 13 feet by 12 feet. Adjoining the kitchen is a breakfast nook. The stairs to the second floor run out of the hall which makes the living room and dining room stairs are two bedrooms and a smaller room which is used as a playroom, 9 feet by 12 inches but which is large enough for a small bedroom.

Oliver Wendell Holmes has said the training of a child should be "one hundred years before he is born." While we would not carry out this extreme statement in connection with the financing of a home, it is necessary to think of and work far in advance the home-owning problem. It cannot be done in a hurry and the greatest amount of deliberation should be exercised.

Colored Tile Useful Inside House

In considering various features of the outside of a house, the floors, steps, pergolas, seats, patios, and walks, as well as the walls, floors, etc., it is well to consider the versatility and durability of tile. One great factor of its simplicity, and because of its brilliancy of coloring it permits simple and artistic furniture arrangements. For outside as well as inside use these distinctive tiles, fashioned of clay and burned by an intense heat, make them lasting and unobscured, a material unfading and permanent.

Some of the simple ways of putting at how much one ought to invest in a home may be worked out according to the following lines: One should not invest in a home the total of which is more than three times one's yearly income. Also, one should not plan to pay out more per year for carrying charges (which would practically be the same as rent in an apartment) than one's weekly income.

In financing, as in other matters, one should seek the advice of an expert, whose character is established beyond question. Money and will be saved by so doing.

To Give Height

When additional height is desired in low rooms, wall paper with striking rising lines in the pattern should be used. The paper should run from the ceiling line, and a strip of cloth should be papered with a pattern close to the shade of the wall paper of the walls, if it is not too dark, that the change from wall to ceiling will not be so marked.

Good fences pay for themselves

YOU are paying for good fences in the form of lost profits if you do not have them. Damaged crops that cannot be harvested, corn the pickers overlook, grain scattered in the stubble field, valuable animals killed on the highways or by goring—all are losses that good hog and stock-tight fences will prevent—losses that are greater than the cost of the fence—losses that can be turned into profits.

Hog and stock-tight fences not only stop these wastes but put you in position to diversify your crops and stock and rotate both and to practice the McLean county system of hog sanitation. Yields per acre are increased, crops sold more profitably on the hoof, soil fertility replaced, value of farm increased and much farm labor saved by letting hogs and stock do part of the harvesting.

You can follow these practices without a large cash outlay. Come in and let us show you how you can add good fences to your farm, erect them on Red Top Steel Fence Posts which prolong the useful life of any fence—and make them pay for themselves.

Our customers know the old reliable Red Top—the springy tough steel of which it is made, how easy it is to drive and how long it lasts in the fence line. There is no element of risk in buying Red Tops—they are guaranteed.

15 MILLION WOMEN USE GAS

According to the latest figures of the American Gas Association, over 15,000,000 women are using gas for cooking purposes. The advantages of gas are its intense heat, the speed it gives to cooking operations, convenience and clearness.

Wherever gas is available, it is the preferred cooking fuel. Women in cities, who have the choice of using any fuel, choose gas in every instance. Until recently, gas has been nearly exclusively a big city convenience but now real gas service is available anywhere. Now you can cook with gas. Kewaskum Hardware and Electric Co., authorized local dealers of SKELGAS are equipped to install this product in local homes. They explain that SKELGAS is real natural gas from gas wells of Skelly Oil Company which has been purified so that all odorous, low heat producing and soot forming gases are removed. The resulting product is compressed in steel cylinders to aid transportation. Each cylinder holds gas sufficient to provide gas for cooking for the average family for many weeks.

Thousands of women are now enjoying the comforts and conveniences of real natural gas for cooking purposes, through SKELGAS; women who live hundreds of miles from gas mains. They report the SKELGAS brings dependable, efficient service and is a convenience of immeasurable worth.

The Kewaskum Hardware and Electric Co., invites all home makers here in town and on farms in this vicinity to see SKELGAS in operation in their store, to light it and actually cook with it themselves. This offer is made without any obligations, of course.

SURPLUS MILK

The surplus problem can not be solved without the cooperation of the producer. Plenty of work and planning are required on the part of the producer, but it can be done here as well as any where else. Every producer should try hard to equalize his output and work for quality. Producers themselves should insist that all milk be graded, and undergrade milk paid for according to quality or rejected. Thousands of dollars are lost annually on account of poor cooling, and many thousands of dollars more because of the large surplus produced in the spring.
