PUBLIC SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

With the close of this week twenty-four weeks of school will have been completed. Report cards in the grades and high school will be issued next Tuesday and Wednesday respectively. Contest work is now receiving attention and those pupils interested are picking out their selections. On Tuesday evening of next week the high school basketball team will play the last home game of the season when it meets the St. John's team of Milwaukee. The visiting team has established an enviable record in Milwaukee and suburban villages where they have played. We have every reason to feel that they will give our team a real "fight" for a victory. Don't forget the date, next Tuesday evening, March 11th.

The Seniors have selected their commencement initiations this week. John Schaefer has been awarded a silver pin by the Remington Typewriter Company for writing 46 words a minute for a period of fifteen minutes on last material sent out by the Remington Typewriter Company. Mr. and Mrs. Brandt will reside at Milwaukee, where they will be at home after March 15th. They have the well wishes of their many friends for a happy and prosperous married life.

AUTO GOES DOWN 18-FOOT EMBANKMENT

Andrew Pick of this city, his son and his daughter Melitta have been receiving the congratulations of their friends, not because of any celebration but because they are still among the living. They had been at Mayville last Friday evening to attend the basketball game between the Mayville and West Bend teams, and were returning home in Mr. Pick's automobile. When coming down a hill on highway 33, a short distance west of the village of Allenton, the auto skidded on the icy pavement, swung around, and after crashing through the makeshift of guardrails on the northside, went down the 18-foot embankment. The auto turned over several times and was wrecked completely, but none of the occupants were injured—nothing short of a miracle. The place where the car left the highway was inspected the day after the accident and it was the consensus of opinion by all who saw it that if the highway commission of the county wishes to make at least one substantial improvement the embankment should be given attention without delay.—West Bend Pilot.

BUYERS FROM MANY CITIES AT FUR AUCTION

More than 100 buyers from a score of different cities bid against each other for the furs confiscated by conservation wardens, at the annual January auction sale held in Milwaukee last week. The sale of confiscated furs netted the state approximately $5,500.

Buyers came from all over Wisconsin, Illinois and some from the coast. There was one man representing a firm of Berlin, Germany. Of the furs sold, beaver, otter, and silver fox brought the highest prices. The fur market is rather low on weasels, muskrats, and mink, and so the individual prices brought by those furs were lower than in previous years.

By Albert T. Row

In the creations of the Author, Artist, and Composer, the public finds its entertainment, its information, and its education. These creations are the property of those who produce them.

A vast industry, representing a turnover of more than a billion dollars annually is the direct outgrowth of the creative work of the composer, artist, and author and the movies.

This great business gives employment to hundreds of thousands of people, and the rights of those upon whose work this industry depends, are inadequately protected under our antiquated laws.

A bill designed to set out these property rights and protect the rights of those who compose and create, is now before Congress.

If passed it will do much to stimulate these arts in our country and the public will benefit.

THREE HELD ON STATE TRAPPERS SERIOUS CHARGE BEGIN WORK ON 15th

Fred Duenkel, aged 21 and John Penoski, aged 19, of West Bend and Leonard Duenkel, aged 22 of Barton, all three men married, who attended a dance at Allenton last Friday evening, are now held in the county jail at West Bend under $10,000 bail each, on a charge of statutory rape, the complaint was made by a 16-year-old town of Addison girl. According to the girl's story, Leonard Duenkel approached her in the hall for a dance, she asked her brother whether it was proper, he replying that it was. Following the dance she was invited into a side room for a sandwich, instead of doing so, however, Duenkel took her through a side door of the hall to his car where he was joined by Fred Duenkel and Penoski. The girl was then forced into the car, and when she attempted to scream her mouth was covered by Leonard and she was taken for a ride. She stated, "I don't know where they took me". She was forced from the car and assaulted. After being returned to the car she was taken back to Allenton, let out of the car at the Weiss Hardware Co. corner, she then looked for her brother, found the family car and waited for her brother in the same. After reaching home the girl told of her experience to her father who had the trio arrested. The girl appeared in Justice Hayden's court at West Bend on Saturday morning and had a warrant sworn out charging the three with rape. They were then placed under $5,000 bail each. The case was heard Tuesday morning, when it was learned that the affair was "worse and more revolting" than first reports given out. Justice Hayden then set bail at $10,000 each and bound them over to the March term of circuit court. All three prisoners denied their guilt. Fred Duenkel was fined $200 and sentenced to jail for one year, but was placed on probation, on a charge of adultery in the 1929 March term of circuit court. His probation term expires the latter part of this month. Judge C. M. Davison will hold the March term of court beginning on Monday March 17, at which time the three will be tried.

HARTFORD TO VOTE ON CITY AUDITORIUM

The question of erecting a new city hall and community building has been up for consideration for the past four years. Last Tuesday evening the council decided to let the public decide whether they should erect a large public auditorium to the new city hall that is to be erected this summer up on the site of the former Denison Mill building. The council has voted to build a new city hall and library building at a cost not to exceed $85,000, an architect has been engaged to prepare plans for same. While it was at first thought that the city would erect a large auditorium to the city hall, this matter was dropped two weeks ago upon recommendation of Mayor J. H. G. Lieven after it was learned that the addition of an auditorium would cost about $50,000 more. The third episode is a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce whereby that body almost unanimously voted in favor of the city including the auditorium when it builds its building. This was followed up by the presenting of a petition to the city, signed by some ninety voters, asking that the auditorium be built.—Hartford Times.

With the appointment of four state trappers who will begin their work March 15, Wisconsin is starting on the co-operative predatory animal control program being carried out between the state conservation commission and the United States Biological Survey. Wisconsin and Minnesota are in the same district for the predatory animal control work of the Biological Survey, both contributing a like amount of money to the work, and both states being under the supervision of O. L. Coleman, leader in the predatory animal control operations.

Altogether there will be six state trappers in Wisconsin who will work under the direction of Mr. Coleman. Four of the six have been chosen. They are Charles E. Walker of Cranford, Stanley Plis of Cable, Roy E. Gratias of Glen Flora and Leroy Stabrow of Rhineland. The other two will be chosen in the near future.

Each one of these men who begin work March 15, will be assigned to a district in the state in which there is a severe infestation of timber wolves. Because the gray timber wolf does more individual damage to wild life than the coyote or other predatory animals, intensive work will be carried on against it in the beginning although the coyotes, bobcats, and other predators will not be neglected.

Mr. Walker will work in Forest and Florence counties to begin with; Mr. Plis will start in Bayfield; Mr. Gratias in Douglas; and Mr. Stabrow in Ashland and Iron counties. Of the other two men to be chosen, one will work in the northern part of the state and one will be assigned to the Northern Forest Park district of Vilas county.

Each of the men appointed is familiar with the locality, and he will be given an outfit of traps and equipment, and expected to go where he knows he can do the most good. The activities of the men will be judged by the number of wolves and other predators caught.

All pelts taken by state trappers will be turned over to the conservation commission, and will be sold at public auction. Trapping activities will extend throughout the year; and in the summertime when the pelts are valueless, the trappers will turn in the scalps of the animals as their work will be determined largely upon the number of predatory animals they kill. In Wisconsin the state trappers have been granted warden authority, and when not inconsistent with their own work, will assist the regular wardens in game law enforcement.

TRAPPING SEASON OPENS

Unprecedented numbers of trappers sprang into action Saturday in the opening of the muskrat season in Wisconsin, according to the state conservation commission. For the last week the commission reported, demands for trapping licenses and trap tags have flooded the commissioner's offices. An unusually large number of muskrats this year coupled with the increased number of requests the commission announced. The season will close April 10th in the southern half of the state and April 25 in the northern portion. The season has been open in the Lake Winnebago district since Oct. 25 and will close April 1. There is no limit to the number of rats that may be trapped during the open season.

Badger State Happenings

Viroqua—Bert Jacobs, 57, a farmer at Brush Hollow, six miles east of here, was gored by a bull and died five hours later. He had gone to a shed to feed stock when he was attacked by the animal.

Madison—Mrs. Margaret Sanger, prominently known as an exponent of birth control, will speak here on Mar. 17, appearing under the auspices of the University of Wisconsin Liberal club. Malcolm Morrow, Milwaukee, is president of the club.

Madison—Charging that three progressive state officials pooled their campaign funds in violation of law, Randolph R. Conners, local attorney, filed a petition with Gov. Kohler asking for the removal of Lieut. Gov. Henry Huber, Atty. Gen. John W. Reynolds and Secretary of State Theodore Damman.

Tomah—The agricultural committee of the Monroe county board has assigned to County Agent L. G. Kuenning the task of working on disease control. Contagious abortion is on the increase as are chicken diseases and hog diseases. At farm institutes considerable time will be given to discussing control methods.

Antigo—Tentative plans for the erection of a new Elks' clubhouse were approved at a meeting of the local lodge held in connection with its annual banquet to honor the charter members. The plans call for a building of two stories with basement, and provide for a large gymnasium, lodge room, lobby, lounge and other rooms.

Wausau—Extraordinary heroism during the World war while serving as a sergeant in the 304th Field Signal Battalion of the Seventy-ninth division, won for Walter S. Fisher, Wisconsin attorney, the government distinguished service cross. The award was made by Adj. Gen. Ralph Ingham at a meeting of the Reserve Officers' association here.

Madison—The state railroad commission has announced that the Lake Superior District Power Co. has been given a permit to operate in the town of Presque Isle, Vilas county. The commission said issuance of the permit following an investigation which showed that public convenience and necessity require a second utility in the town.

Sheboygan—Sheriff Louis C. Tasche and Sgt. Arty. Herman C. Runge have adjusted certain differences of opinion and the sheriff stands ready to back up the prosecutor's plans to rid the county of vice conditions. It was announced here. Since a public mass meeting to map out an anti-vice drive was held, there has been no necessity for a raid.

Cashton—The Cashton Co-operative Creamery association received 1,505, 611 pounds of cream during the 1929 season and patrons received $208,927 for butter fat. Total receipts from butter sold amounted to $241,500. Some 3,150,000 pounds of milk went into cheese and more than $75,000 was received for this product. Cheese patrons received $90,302 for their milk.

Marinette—Marinette's local dry ordinance has been held void by County Judge William F. Hanse. He dismissed cases against Stanley Wos and Joseph Eisenpohl, saloon keepers, who had been found guilty and fined by Police Justice W. N. Schomaker. Judge Hanse said the county had a right to regulate the sale and production of intoxicants under its police powers, but that the ordinance constituted class legislation.

Madison—Gov. Kohler has announced the appointment of the following members of the board of managers of the Grand Army Home for Veterans at Wausau for the term expiring September, 1935: Mrs. May L. Luchsinger, Monroe; Edward McGlachlin, Stevens Point; George L. Thomas, Milwaukee, and E. B. Heimstreet, Lake Mills. The board is composed of four ex-officio members in addition—the adjutant general, the state surgeon, the chief quartermaster and the department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Neenah—The common council refused to act on an ordinance introduced at a previous meeting at the behest of Mrs. Helen K. Stuart, providing for election of school board members by the voters instead of by the council. Members of the council favored putting the question to a referendum, but said that they felt the matter should come before them in the form of a petition. Failure of the council to act upon the ordinance prevents a referendum at the Apr. 1 election, for there is not sufficient time to bring the matter before the voters by petition.

Waukesha—With a dead man in the wheel, an automobile ran wild on a downtown street here, crashed into two cars and then hit a pole. The driver, Hugo Hlan, 41, of Hurland, apparently suffered a heart attack just as he drove into the downtown district.

The cost is based on a circulation of 428,288 books during the year, a gain of 42,641 over the previous year. The cost shows an increase of 1 cent a book over a year ago.

Burlington—Illegal possession of Hungarian partridges and pheasants cost Harry Zukebar, Racine county, $60 and costs, totaling $70, in justice court here. Zukebar pleaded guilty.

Beloit—Myron Shain, 22, of Beloit and Herman Kennedy, 23, of Dubuque, Iowa, were sentenced in municipal court here to one to two years at Green Bay and three years at Wausau, respectively, after pleading guilty to chicken stealing.

Janesville—By order of C. E. Moore, county highway commissioner, an embargo on all heavy trucks has been established on gravel roads throughout Rock county. Road limit signs are being erected. The limit is 5,000 pounds gross on most of the roads and 6,000 pounds on others.

Kenosha—Two saloons here reported to police that a stranger had entered each place, has been given a glass of wine and had then placed the bartender "under arrest," saying he was a prohibition agent. He offered to release the saloon men for $20. In each case he got the $20.

La Crosse—For the first time since 1878 the ice has gone out on the Mississippi in February. The last ice went out Feb. 23, the earliest record here. In 1878 the ice went out Feb. 24. The La Crosse river is also open, and the Black river is expected to open in a day or two. No flood danger is expected here.

Platteville—Representatives of the local W. C. T. U. appeared before the city council here and asked that the council draft a liquor ordinance. The council asked that the W. C. T. U. petition to place the matter before the voters at the regular spring election. Many Wisconsin cities have legislated on the liquor traffic by special ordinance.

Montello—George Massey, Highland, has been engaged as the first county agent of Marquette county and took up his duties Feb. 15. Ever since the governor left the hospital at Rochester his physician has advised him to take a complete rest outside of the state, but he has been so busy with business and state matters that he has been unable to leave the capital until now.

Birchwood—The annual exodus of men from the logging districts to their homes has started. The early spell of warm weather destroyed the ice roads of the loggers, compelling them to stop all operations in the woods except the loading of logs, already at the landings, on to railway cars. The season's cut will be much smaller than anticipated, as this is about a month earlier than logging operations usually cease.

Nellisville—When the Presbyterian church here burned and the Methodist pastor became ill, the Presbyterian pastor, the Rev. Lane C. Findley, started preaching to both congregations in the Methodist church building. Services have been very well attended, and although the Methodist pastor, the Rev. S. J. MODIFY PROGRAM OF FEDERAL FARM BOARD

To Extend Loans and Dump Wheat Into Storage.

Washington.—The recently formed wheat stabilization corporation "is still in the ring and does not hesitate to face the fireworks," according to a statement made here by Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board. Mr. Legge was referring to the complaints made by grain dealers on the grain buying policy of the farm board.

Chairman Legge said further that, in his opinion, a number of the complaints that had been received bore a striking resemblance to propaganda to discredit stabilization operations. He said the chief purpose of the operations in wheat directed by the board was to get the farmers the best possible price.

Mr. Legge added that the order to limit the advance price for wheat to co-operatives was made after it was discovered that "roll-top desk farmers" were taking the wheat out of the elevators and offering it on the market at the advance price.

Legue of congestion in terminal wheat the federal farm board will have to modify its program, Chairman Legge also stated. Instead of having the farmers send their wheat to markets the board will extend loans and have it stored in concentrators. The approach of tax dates has resulted in heavy marketing in some of the terminals, Chairman Legge said.

There is practically an embargo on wheat coming into Omaha and Kansas City, he declared. The farm board also expects to tighten up its buying of wheat through the stabilization corporation and the Farmers' National Grain corporation. Up to the past week the board through its agencies, has purchased or contracted for 25,000,000 bushels of wheat, Chairman Legge said.

Kansas City, Mo.—Announcement was made here that hereafter the federal farm board groups would take wheat only from co-operative elevators which are qualified members of the Equity Union Jobbing association and the Kansas Co-operative Wheat Marketing association. The co-operative elevators will operate on a similar basis, buying only from farmer stockholders in the co-operatives.

Ottawa, Ont.—A proposal to stop wheat future trading was introduced in the Canadian parliament by William Book, liberal member for Maple Creek. His action followed the recent drop in wheat prices.

Omaha, Neb.—Frank J. Taylor, chairman of publicity for the Omaha Grain exchange, charged that "the government has entered the field of wheat speculation by action of the federal wheat stabilization corporation in buying options in the futures market."

Stating that the "flood is now on the government," Taylor called attention to "years of time and barrels of printers' ink" used by the government in criticism of grain exchanges and futures trading, ending in its own funds being used for that purpose.

"Since about January 20 the government agencies have purchased in the terminal markets somewhere around 10,000,000 bushels of cash wheat at a price about 15 cents above its present value in the world's market. With a dead loss of about one and a half million dollars haunting their dreams, they have recourse to the speculator's method for recouping the loss. They bought more wheat, this time in the futures market, but with the hope that later rising prices will enable them to recover past losses."

Byrd Party Is Expected in N. Y. About June 1

New York.—The ships of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, bringing Admiral Richard E. Byrd and his men home from their base on the Ross ice barrier, are expected to arrive here about the first week in June.

The arrival is estimated from the length of time it took the ships to make the voyage into the Antarctic in the autumn of 1928. The barque City of New York, bearing the members of the expedition, left Little America a few days ago. The length of time it will take her to rock her way through the ice depends upon the width of the pack, which at this time of year is usually about 100 miles wide.

The City of New York and the steamer Elinor Bolling, the other ship of the expedition, will proceed to Dunedin, New Zealand, 2,300 miles from Little America. They are expected to reach that port in about twenty-one days.

SHARKEY WINS K. O. VERDICT VS. SCOTT

Heavyweight Fight at Miami Ends in Third Round.

Miami, Fla.—In the presence of about 25,000 people, Jack Sharkey of Boston won on a technical knockout over Phil Scott of England in the third round of their scheduled fifteen-round heavyweight "classic."

Madison Square garden is reported to have lost about $50,000 on the venture, as it is claimed only about 15,000 paid to see the spectacle, the gross receipts totaling near $100,000, while the net receipts were about $161,000. The garden required a gate of $225,000 to clear expenses.

The end of the contest, which was a disappointment to those who witnessed it, came at the end of two minutes and thirty-four seconds of fighting, in the third round. The first round was given to Scott, the other two being Sharkey's, by a wide margin.

In the third round Sharkey met Scott in midring and they began sparring for an opening. Sharkey landed two lefts and a right to the body. He followed with a left hook to the head and then Jack Sharkey.

Scott surprised the spectators by landing his first clean blow of the contest. Sharkey then drove a left to Scott's belt line and the Englishman went down for the count of three. Scott went down for a six-count a moment later from a blow to the same place. He arose and tried to make Referee Magnolia believe he had been hit low. Sharkey then tore in and drove another to the belt line. Again Scott went down. He was dragged to his corner, holding his right thigh and claiming he had been fouled.

Scott was on his feet in a neutral corner hanging to the top rope of the ring when Magnolia gave the decision against him. Sharkey was dancing around and daring him to continue. It was not apparent to the spectators that he had been badly hurt by the fusillade of blows to the belt line.

The first round saw plenty of action, but the fighting was tame. Sharkey floored the Englishman in the second round and he went to his corner groggy. It was evident that the fight was as good as over.

Twelve Killed, Hundred Hurt in Auto-R. R. Crash

Kenosha, Wis.—A coroner's jury brought in an open verdict in the recent wreck of a North Shore electric passenger train at Kenosha, in which both the electric train and a portion of a freight train were derailed by an automobile. Twelve persons were killed and 113 were injured.

The dead include: George Broska, Chicago; James Fitzgerald, Manistee, Mich.; J. G. Goggin, Chicago; Miss Evelyn Metzger, Chicago; James B. Porteous, Lake Geneva, Wis.; Elmer Reibe, Milwaukee; Ruth Reibe, wife of Miss Elizabeth Shoma, Chicago; Norman E. Shinners, Milwaukee, the driver of the automobile; Frank Tomczak, who was riding with Shinners; Miss Alexia Steinhorst, Kenosha, a school teacher; H. Carey, Milwaukee.

A statement issued by the North Shore line declared that neither motor-man nor car had prevented the accident and that it was "another case of a reckless driver disregarding plainly marked railroad crossing and signals and attempting to beat trains across crossings."

LIVE STOCK MEN O. K. U. S. MARKETING BODY

To Operate on Basis Similar to Grain Co-Op.

Chicago.—Representatives of live stock co-operative marketing associations, which handle an annual business of approximately $300,000,000, at their recent session here accepted the farm board's suggestion for a national marketing organization similar to that of the grain corporation.

The proposal was accepted at a meeting of the live stock representatives with federal farm board members, and will be submitted to the boards of directors of the various co-operatives for approval before it is put into effect. The plan calls for the incorporation of the National Live Stock Marketing association, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, to operate on a basis similar to that of the grain marketing corporation. Two subsidiaries, the National Feeder and Finance corporation, and the National Live Stock Publishing association, also were planned.

The live stock marketing group would be the fourth of its kind set up by the farm board, organizations for the marketing of grain, wool, and cotton having been set up previously. The board's statement pointed out that with only $500,000,000 in its revolving fund to assist in financing marketing activities, pyramiding of a portion of the fund is necessary. In the case of live stock industry, it plans to do this by the establishment of regional credit corporations authorized to discount their live stock paper with intermediate credit banks.

The national association would coordinate and control sales through a sales board, which would build up a service to supply information on the supply and demand to sales agencies.

The board's recommendation calls for the incorporation of the feeder and finance corporation with a capital stock of $5,000,000, consisting of 50,000 shares of common stock, with a par value of $100. The farm board would lend money to the National Live Stock Marketing association for the purchase of the common stock of the National Feeder and Finance corporation, which, in turn, would use the money originally borrowed from the association to purchase the common stock of regional credit corporations which would be set up in the various intermediate credit districts.

The Feeder and Finance corporation will operate as a holding company, as far as financing is concerned, but it also will operate as a marketing organization, in that it will deal in feeder stock, both on and off the market. It will not speculate in feeder stock, being limited to handling orders for member associations and individuals.

The regional credit corporations, according to the board's plan, will purchase federal land bank or intermediate credit bank debentures, which will be put up as collateral with the intermediate credit banks, to secure a line of credit which will be approximately ten times the capital stock. The common stock of the regional credit corporations held by the National Feeder and Finance corporation could be pledged to the farm board, the board says.

"The board recommends," its statement to the co-operatives said, "that before any dividends are paid (by the marketing association) reserves equal to the authorized capital stock shall be set up. The board further recommends that control of sales and policies be vested in the national association. This would qualify the national association as a marketing association, thus enabling it to obtain financial assistance from the federal farm board."

Insects Change Habits of Feed

Many Bugs Have Ability to Thrive on Newly Introduced Crops.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) The unusual habit of many insects to make themselves at home wherever they happen to be carried, whether by flight or through commerce, is in a large measure responsible for the presence of so many plant pests, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Then, too, many insects have a surprising ability to survive, and even to flourish, under changed conditions brought about through cultivation of the soil and other activities of civilization. Thus, many of our well-known crop pests formerly fed on wild plants, but when the land was planted to cultivated crops the insects not only changed their diet but thrived enormously on their new food.

Feed of Pests. Chinch bugs feed on both wild and cultivated plants. They spend the winter on native grasses and come out in spring and feed on young grain crops. Grubs of June beetles eat roots of native grasses until grain crops are available. Practically all of the pests of cereal crops fed entirely on wild plants until the large fields of cultivated crops offered a better feeding place.

The Colorado potato beetle is an example of a native insect that has become "domesticated." Formerly it lived on wild nettle, a plant which grows in the foothills of the Rocky mountains. When the potato was introduced into that region the beetle promptly adopted it, and in 20 years spread to the Atlantic ocean.

California Pests. In California there is a strain of codling moth, the well known apple pest, which has developed a liking for walnuts. Since the walnut trees are large and spraying them is difficult, this insect promises to become a serious walnut pest. The new peach moth from Japan is a serious enemy of pears in that country, and the well known European corn borer is a pest of hops and millet in Europe.

Cultivation of field crops over a long period of years produces ideal conditions for the perpetuation of insects. That is why it is necessary for the department of agriculture and the state experiment stations to continue to wage war on the pests.

Kentucky Wonder Beans Will Return Big Yield. The Kentucky wonder bean has pods which grow from eight to ten inches long that are very fleshy and tender, and when very small, are delicious cooked whole. The vines bear quite heavily, beginning early in the summer and continuing till frost. It is as good as any bean while young, but is especially desirable to shell for late fall use and also for canning or drying, says a writer in the Farmer. Early frosts do not injure the beans in the pods for cooking purposes. At this time the shells fairly pop open, each yielding a generous amount of deliciously flavored, large, dark beans.

This bean requires a pole on which to climb. One woman gardener first planted four hills in the back yard. These hills stood in the form of a square, each hill six feet apart, and the runner poles were tied together wigwam style. The vines grew luxuriantly and provided an excellent little playhouse for her two little girls. With the resulting shade provided by this overhang, the ground underneath retained much of its moisture which no doubt helped to account for the abundant yield, for the family of four had all they could use from these four hills of beans.

 Agricultural Squibs  Replace broken fence posts. Provide shade for the growing chicks. Clean up trash in the barn lots before weeds grow up and hide it. The presence of the proper kind of bacteria in the soil is essential for the production of all legumes. A clay soil can give a very good garden. The main difficulty is getting a start at it, for it is not the easiest soil to work. One can make as much money putting phosphorus on the soil, where it is needed, as in any other kind of farming activity. You can hack out parsnips and oyster plant with a pick any time you want them if you were forehanded last year and planted a supply. In 1910 it required seven man hours of labor to produce an acre of wheat. Today, due to modern machinery, it takes less than two man hours. Early and frequent cutting of alfalfa is not advisable if the stand is to be left for a number of years. Cutting stages differ in various parts. Glass substitutes should be kept free from dust and dirt, as a very little contamination will reduce the power of the material to transmit ultraviolet rays. An engine that has to climb a very steep hill in high gear is often harmed more than its high gear pride is satisfied. Both the motor and the governor commutators can be cleaned by making a piece of sandpaper against the while in motion. It is rather too bad that the man who wrecked his automobile by driving two bandits apparently didn't stop in wrecking either of the bandits.

Sweet Corn Develops in Sixty Days in Dakota. Sixty days from the time of planting the Gold Nugget sweet corn, a new variety recently developed by Prof. A. F. Yenger, horticulturist of the North Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station, is ready for table use. Seed planted on the experiment station plots May 21 and the first ears picked July 21. Gold Nugget sweet corn was developed from a cross made in 1927 by Mr. Yenger between Sunshine and Plokaninsky. As compared with Sunshine it is eight days earlier, the same quality and the color is golden yellow. The ears carry 8 to 10 rows and are produced nearly twice as abundantly as Sunshine, according to Mr. Yenger. This description is based on the performance of Gold Nugget on the college plots and may not hold elsewhere, he states. The new variety of corn is being tried out in all parts of the country by seedsmen and experimenter stations workers. Its success throughout the country will be known next fall.

Fertilizing Asparagus to Insure Big Cuffing. The Tennessee experiment station has made some explicit recommendations about fertilizing asparagus beds. They apply to both home and commercial plantings. One is to fertilize liberally during the first three or four seasons to insure a maximum cutting of large shoots during the fourth season. This can be done by applying manure at the rate of ten tons per acre or poultry manure at the rate of one to two tons per acre. If applied during winter either manure scattered over the plants but not applied between the rows should not come in direct contact with the plants.

Weak Bee Colony Never Makes Surplus of Honey. Spring is the time when bees are in the most danger of starving. They should be short of honey, but they are so strong in number of bees at the time the honey flows rapidly, that they will store surplus honey, but in many cases completely destroyed by moths, do not need a patent of any kind to keep away moths. They can't trouble a colony of strong bees. Pollen is scarce in the spring, so some four where the bees can't find it to use instead of pollen. An engine that has to climb a very steep hill in high gear is often harmed more than its high gear pride is satisfied. Both the motor and the governor commutators can be cleaned by making a piece of sandpaper against the while in motion. It is rather too bad that the man who wrecked his automobile by driving two bandits apparently didn't stop in wrecking either of the bandits.

Open Shed for Cows Is Practical Plan

Covered Barnyard Is Improved in Mild Climates.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) The open shed or covered barnyard is a practical method of housing dairy cows in moderate climates, and dairy officials of the United States Department of Agriculture. It provides the best-known method of preserving all the fertilizing value of the manure. When there is plenty of bedding, cows in open sheds keep cleaner than those confined in stanchions, even when manure is allowed to accumulate for several months at a time. At the experimental station of the bureau of dairy industry at Beltsville, Md., 68 per cent of the bedding is used in the open shed when the cows are stanchioned. The open-shed method permits freedom of action of the cow and gets off the hard floors of the cow barn. Also where a small milking barn is used, the open shed is a cheaper method of housing than the customary dairy barn.

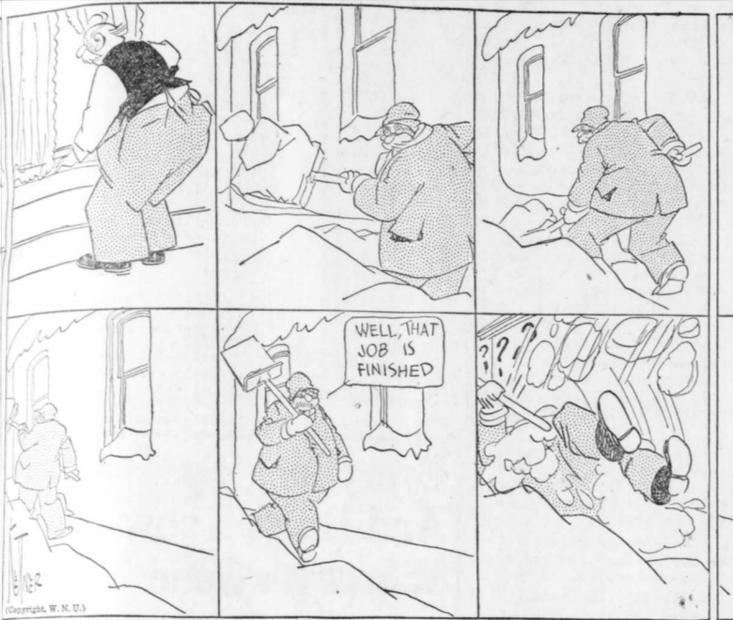

The bureau of dairy industry is building sheds at some of its field stations and dividing them into groups. The herd may be divided into groups. Mangers with rigid sides are built at the feed alley, so they may be fastened and fed individually. This is desirable because animals are often fought away from feeders when the cows are not fastened to time feeding. Cows housed in sheds should be deboned.

Self-Feeders Best for Fertility of the Soil

If we feed the land it will give us a slim but profitable profit for the work we do. The best, cheapest and most satisfactory way to feed land is with self-feeders in the way of manure which draw nutrient from the soil and store it in the soil. The leg

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS

Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

During the 22 years I spent in the majors, I experienced many a thrill, but if you asked me the greatest one of my career, I would say it happened in the opening game of the 1929 season. It concerned the debut of Earl Averill. He was the young man I was banking on to fill Tris Speaker's shoes and be a most important cog in the effort to make the Indians over from a seventh place club to a first division possibility.

After purchasing Averill from the San Francisco club, the youngster had a disagreement with that team over his share of the purchase price. The two couldn't get together and, since I had $45,000 invested in Averill, I decided it was wise for me to make a hurried trip to the coast and see if I couldn't help iron out the difficulties. I arranged to do so and decided to personally chaperon Averill from Los Angeles to our training camp, so as to be sure he would report on time.

On the long trip from Los Angeles to New Orleans I was thrown into close contact with Averill, and in those three days had a better insight as to his temperament than could have been gleaned in a year through merely occasional contact. It was apparent to me that Averill didn't worry, that he wasn't in the least fussed by his graduation into the big league ranks, that he had confidence in his ability to hit, and that there wasn't a doubt in his mind but that he could play center-field to the satisfaction of Manager Peckinpaugh, myself and the Cleveland public. In his quiet manner, Averill made me certain that he had a great chance to deliver when he made a chance remark something like this:

"I suppose if I should hit .350 for Cleveland I would get a substantial raise in 1929."
"You certainly would," I replied, "but don't worry on that score, because you are not going to hit .350."
"Maybe not, but I'll wager a couple of suits of clothes with you that I finish .320 or better."
"If you can do that, you will make me look like a smart guy in buying you, also .320 will be enough to get the substantial raise you are talking about. You can buy yourself a couple of suits with my compliments out of that." That one speech of Averill's impressed. It wasn't conceit, nor ego, but simply sublime confidence; he believed in himself. He more than made good on that .320 speech. His batting average in his first year in the majors was .331. He made 18 homers, more than any Cleveland player has ever made.

But to get back to my greatest thrill, Averill came to the American league well press agented. In spring training he had shown flashes of the great ability that made him an outstanding star on the coast. The critics said he would step right into the picture and deliver. That Cleveland fans would pronounce him almost as good as Speaker, that some might like him as well, or even better. It was quite a job the experts had chiseled out for the young man.

When Averill stepped to the plate for the first time in the majors, it was at Dunn field, in Cleveland, with Detroit as the opposing team and Earl Whitehill, one of the best southpaws in the game, as the rival pitcher. It was no soft spot for a left hander. Averill walked to the plate with the nonchalant stride that is characteristic of him, stepped into the batter's box with his 44 ounce bat, the heaviest in baseball, resting seemingly lightly on his shoulder. Whitehill wound up to deliver the ball and still Averill didn't seem very much interested. As it neared the plate, he began his rhythmic swing. It was anything but a "Ruthian" effort, but the timing was perfect. The ball sailed far over the right field wall for a home run. It was the biggest thrill of my career, for never did I want anyone to make an auspicious start more than I did Averill. He made good on one pitch with the Cleveland fans. He continued to make good throughout the season.

COLLEGIANS FIND PRO CAGING HARD

More Difficult in Basketball Than in Baseball.

The leap from college stardom to success in the professional ranks appears to be even harder to make in basketball than in baseball.

Of the seventy men now playing in the American Professional Basketball league only about fourteen ever went to college. Half a dozen of these are regulars.

Fort Wayne has two of the best of the collegiate products—Shang Chidwick of Wahash college, center, and Frank Shimek, Iowa, guard.

Chicago has Gilbert Ely, Michigan, who plays either forward or guard, but Ely did not learn much of his basketball at college; also Whitney Wickhorst, Michigan, and Tilly Voss, University of Detroit, both substitutes.

Rochester boasts a single collegian—Tiny Hearn—but he is big enough for two. Until they put up the new Chrysler building Tiny was in a class by himself. Towering six feet nine inches, this former star athlete at Georgia Tech is the best center in the league at getting the tap.

Syracuse before losing its franchise had done more experimenting with college men than any other club in the league using Eddie Winorpe, Providence college; Gotch Carr, former running mate of Vic Hanson on one of the best of all-Syracuse university teams; Allen, another ex-Orange player, and Gillian, who is working his way through Syracuse university by playing the professional game. The one and only Nat Holman also belongs with the coonskin coat brigade, as he attended Savage Institute and C. C. N. Y., but it was not at college that he learned to dribble and shoot.

Ray Barbuti, former Syracuse collegian and American hero of the 1925 Olympic games, announces his retirement—for this season at least—from track athletics.

The former Syracuse flyer competed in the sprint series of the annual Newark A. C. games, but his insurance business hadn't kept him in condition. He ran the full 50 yards of the first sprint event, but was left at the post in the 60-yard race and turned out to be a poor fifth in the 70-yard race.

Atlanta Crackers of the Southern league won't have to worry about managerial material this year.

"Head" Manager Johnny Doibis, the new Cracker boss, who won the Southern title for Birmingham last year, has four former pilots on his roster.

They are Milton Stock, former pilot of the Dallas Steers of the Texas league; third base; Jimmy Johnston, former Chattanooga boss, shortstop; Jack Sheehan, manager of Elmira of the New York-Pennsylvania league in 1928, second base, and Red Wingo, ex-manager of Columbus of the American association, catcher.

Intercollegiate boxing at Annapolis has outgrown the commodious facilities at McDonough hall.

The problem of handling the crowds has become so troublesome that Annapolis athletic authorities have decided to institute a ticket system for all the rest of the dual meets on the Navy schedule this year. It means that the fans will have to order well in advance to secure seating accommodations.

More than twenty-five of this year's 150 major league recruits are former college athletes, a check of the rosters of the sixteen clubs revealed today.

The Cleveland Indians will carry south nine collegians, the most prominent of which is Bruce Caldwell, All-America ball (1928) from Yale.

Three former University of Michigan batters will try for major league berths. Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt, which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active. Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on an island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshawe. His holiday ended, Amory arrives back at Daru. He meets an Englishman, Spicer, there on development business for a syndicate of which Fanshawe is head. Fanshawe's name recalls to Amory a long-forgotten incident in which he witnessed the escape of Fanshawe from a leper colony. He tells his friend Lassett about it and decides to inform Laurier. He goes to Thursday Island to send the message. Amory hears Fanshawe dictate a message which indicates that the secret of the gold field is known.

The more I thought of it all, the surer I was that Mrs. Brownrigg, before her death, had told somebody about Tatata. And in order to do that, she must have got it out of Grace. Lord knows, it was sensational enough.

Well then! what then! I knew what then. The chain of logic was too clear to miss. It looked as if fortune had delivered Richard Fanshawe into my hands; as if opportunity were there, ready and waiting, for very satisfying revenge. He was certainly fond of Genevieve Treacher, or he would not have taken the risk of spoiling his chances with Pia, by running off with Gin-Sling. She, I made no doubt, could do anything with him that she chose. She would do anything—find out anything—if I lifted my finger.

Minds are illogical; they make small trouble about swallowing camels, then balk at something less than a sparrow. I don't know why I, Phil Amory, black sheep, who had just been listening to a private telegram, and planning to act on knowledge thus discreditably acquired, should have decided, suddenly and irrevocably, that I would not do the thing I had been tempted to do, in the matter of Jinny and her lover.

"It's a dirty trick," I said to myself, and shook the thought away. Jinny was not to be seen when I got back to the hotel. I knew she would be looking for me, later on. I knew I should find her at my corner of the veranda, when the great moon of Torres began to sail like a golden galleon among the palm tree tops, and the straits and islands were veiled in fairy blue. I knew what the magic of Thursday—for Thursday is magic, still, despite all going and decay—would do for me and for her. And I thought of that little head, with its close-cropped, shining hair, so very far away. And I took my gear from my room, and marched down to the beach below, where the cutter, out in green water, was swaying with the tides.

Night found me at Cape York, with my telegram ready to send.

CHAPTER V

I have never had a harder task in my life, than the framing of that telegram. To say enough, and not too much—to influence Pia's unknown father, by a dozen words wired across a continent, so that he should exert himself to break, or postpone, his daughter's marriage—to show authority for what I conceived, and at the same time conceal the vivid personal interest that had prompted the sending of the message—this I found, in its entirety, more than I could manage. There was no doing the thing well; to do it somehow, anyhow, was all that I could expect.

This was what I produced, in the end:

"Joseph Laurier,

"Laurier Downs Station,

"New South Wales;

"Serious reasons existing against Fanshawe marriage most strongly advise awaiting mail for necessary inquiries cannot sufficiently emphasize necessity delay."

And I signed my name, my insignificant, unknown name, in full—"Phillip Cosgrove Amory." Laurier would not know Phillip Cosgrove Amory from Adam, but that was perhaps something to the good—all things considered. He would be bound in common prudence to wait the arrival of my letter before giving judgment on the matter. I had done the best I could with the letter; it contained a plain statement of the occurrences on Iota Island, mentioned the fact of my acquaintance with Miss Laurier, and so concluded. No apologies—either the thing was unforgeable, or it was a service beyond all thanks. No attempt to make capital, on my own account, of the circumstances that had brought me into communication with Pia's family. Just the facts, no more.

I sealed, registered and posted the letter, and put to sea again, with a lightened heart. I had done the best I could, and given time, I could make sure that this unspeakable, brute would never place a ring on Pia's finger. As to what might happen to myself, I made no guesses. Like so many men in similar case, I thought I could be content not to have her, not to drag her down to my own hazardous life, if only I might be sure that no one else would take my place. I pictured her remaining an eternal maiden, never of course, developing into an old maid, for my sake, and was quite well pleased.

Well, I sailed back to Thursday Island, very late, and all in the dark. And I suppose I was tired, after the long day and its many emotions. I had a theory that I never was tired; it seemed to me a disgraceful condition, it only for detours of forty, so I never allowed that it had touched or could touch myself. But the laws of nature took no heed of my feelings, and that night, they laid their revenge. I fell half asleep at the tiller, rammed the jetty, and was tumbled down into the hold, before my boy could catch me. He picked me up instantly, but the careless moment had done its work. I had a badly cut head and concussion of the brain; and it was my unlucky fate, in consequence, to spend the next three weeks in Thursday Island hospital.

I cannot tell how tiresome, maddening, I found the resultant confinement and delay. It was worst towards the end of the third wretched week, for then, I had calculated a reply by letter might reach me, from Laurier Downs. None did, nor was there any telegram. The silence remained unbroken.

That She Had Not Come for the Sole Purpose of Looking at Black Sheep, I Knew as Well as If She Had Told Me.

Afterward I heard what had happened, and—as one always does—wondered why I couldn't have guessed it at the time. Nobody had died, as I frankly assumed. Nobody had treated me with silent contempt. Nothing had fallen into the hands of Fanshawe, or Spicer—though I had guessed at all these solutions of the mystery. It was simply that Joseph Laurier was in England, not at home, and that my letter, marked "Private," and carefully sealed, had of course been sent on after him, instead of being opened by his secretary. The telegram had also been posted on; over that, the secretary had used what he was pleased to call his judgment, and decided apparently, that he was less likely to risk losing his billet by sending my extraordinary and unconvincing wire under cover, than by hanging the Lauriers' direct line out over the cable lines of the world.

Ideal Dwelling Place for the "Simple Lifer"

The loneliest village in England boasts six names—Wiston, Wissington, Wisson, Wisseen, Wiseton and Whiston—and one motorcycle, one wireless set, one inn and one dart-board.

This village, surrounded by corn-fields and towering trees, has hardly changed since the old cottages were built hundreds of years ago. The village was in existence in 1066.

It has no electric light, gas or water supply, shop, telephone or meeting hall. There is not even a village green. It shares a policeman with three neighboring villages.

Many of the inhabitants have never been more than ten miles from home, and the majority of the old farmers and laborers have never been inside

No Record of Wren's Work

There is comparatively no evidence to prove that there are any spires on American churches designed by Sir Christopher Wren. Certainly he did not visit this country. Sir Christopher Wren was born in 1630 and died in 1723. Between the years 1670 and 1711 he designed 53 London churches. There are comparatively few churches in this country that were built prior to 1723. Among the early churches or meeting houses, erected in the manner of Sir Christopher Wren, are Christ church, Philadelphia (A. D. 1727); St. Philip, Charleston (A. D. 1733); St. Paul, New York (A. D. 1767), and St. Michael, Charleston (A. D. 1752), of which the probable architect was Gibbs, the designer of the Bodcliffe library, Oxford.

The nurse's white frock came speeding along my veranda. "There's a lady to see you," she said, bringing up beside the lounge. "Matron says she may come. She's called to inquire before, but she wouldn't come in. She asked to come in today."

I did not ask the lady's name; I thought I knew it. When Jinny Treacher, tall and thin, but graceful, like Trilby, in her very bones, appeared at the veranda's end, I knew my guess was right. More than that—I knew Sir Richard Fanshawe was gone.

Jinny's presence, Jinny's visit, meant that she was, according to her own lights, free; that she could call on me with a clear conscience. She was, in her pale muslin dress, with her wonderful fluffy red hair peering under a black hat, the prettiest, most disturbing thing that could have entered the chaste wards of that hospital for many a day. I could have sworn that every one in sight envied me, when Jinny checked her flitting walk before my lounge, dropped into a chair, and crossing her yellow silk-stockinged knees with an air of entire composure, asked me how I was.

I told her, briefly and, I think, untruthfully. I was anxious to get to the reason for her call. That she had not come for the sole purpose of looking at Black Sheep, I knew as well as if she had told me. But it seemed hard for her to begin. She chattered like a pretty, painted parrot, asked fifty questions about the nurses and the doctors and the conduct of the place generally, didn't wait for an answer to any one. At last, losing patience—I was not patient in those days—I asked her point-blank what she had come to tell me.

"Can anyone hear us?" she asked, half below breath.

"No," I answered her. "Look about you. Nobody nearer than that old chap at the end, and he's deaf."

"Well, then! He's off."

"I guessed that. What else?"

"How soon'll you be ready to go?" she asked me.

"I'm practically ready now."

"He's off—to Port Moresby. By Cairns. He'll go, his stores there, and he'll attend to some business."

"She cleared her throat. "Business," she went on. "And get away immediately—to Tatata."

I knew it; I had been expecting it—but the word hit me like a stone. "Go on," I said, with some difficulty; my tongue seemed stiff.

"He wired for a prospector to join him, three weeks ago, and he's come. Tatata is—"

"I know all about it. I know," I said getting angry, "a d—n sight more than Fanshawe knows."

"He got it straight," she said, "from some woman who died; she had it from her bloke, who was killed and eat by the cannibals."

"No, that was his mate. How could he have got back to tell anyone?"

"I thought," said Jinny, and now she looked away from me. "I thought, somehow, the woman was with the bloke who found it—on the expedition."

"On the expedition. Never, Jinny. That's one thing that a woman can't do yet, and hasn't done—go exploring in Papua."

"Can't she? Why?" asked Jinny. She was still looking away from me.

"The candle that burned ever behind her gold-brown eyes, was lighted to new brilliance by reflections from the dancing sea."

"The answer's plain. It's because the only things left to find—and New Guinea's got most of them—are as tough that it takes the best men over their best—more than their best—to get through. Exploring means the last ounce that the strongest men can squeeze out of their bodies, driven to the last ditch. It means the male brute, all out. There's no use for women. In a pinch like that."

It seemed that she was not interested. She yawned a little, delicately changed the subject, or rather, went back to the beginning.

"Sir Richard's 'if, anyhow," she remarked. "He won't be more than a week or two getting things together and starting. That's the name of the place, what I told you. And whisper—I'll tell you what he's after—"

She leaned over to me; breathed into my ear a secret I had thought was known to no one but myself. "Now," she said, drawing back, and nodding wisely, "what do you think of little Jinny for telling you that?"

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

Emergencies and How We Meet Them.

EVERY living being has an inborn emergency equipment. For countless beings the equipment is inadequate; they go down like flies before new foes, new diseases, new situations. A large percentage of all the human beings ever born died before maturity; the emergency may have been a rusty nail, a venturesome spirit, a backward disposition. Anything which threatens life or disturbs its peace of mind or upsets the system is an emergency. Emergencies cannot be listed; they are too numerous. Nor can they be described in general terms; they are individually discrete. Half a loaf is always better than no bread, but there are times when a half-loaf is the dynamic equivalent of a human life, when half a minute spells victory or defeat, or life or death. There are few of us whose life at one time or another has not hung by a thread.

What do we do; what is our response to crises? Fight or flee? It depends. The cry of "Women first!" on the Titanic was enough to keep the men from fighting for the boats; life was not worth fighting for when the loser was a woman. Nor worth saving when a spar would only support one; a man let go of a spar that a woman might live! This is human behavior at its highest. Possible because our inborn emergency equipment can be trained, conditioned, educated, made to obey the orders of our head. But it is so well organized and so powerful that few can turn its command over to the cortex, fewer still who can conquer it. Greater is he who conquers self than he who taketh seven cities!

Greater, because self-preservation is the first law of nature; and the higher we climb in nature's scale, the better organized life becomes for self-preservation. Man has more means at his command for self-preservation than any other animal, largely because he has more ways of destroying his enemies. Cities and the "taking of cities" arose in response to man's desire to anticipate emergencies.

The difference between self-preservation and self-control is the difference between all gorillas and some men. If man used only his inborn emergency equipment in a fight with a gorilla, he would lose—or die of fright before the gorilla could lay hands on him. Fighting instinct, yes; and fleeing instinct also. But a woman will turn. A rat will run for its life; cornered, it will fight for its life.

There is another kind of response, the kind we keep on making during our unconquered self lives. We are dressing, already late for dinner. We break a shoestring; we cannot find a certain shirt stud; and then that crowning insult, we drop the collar button and it rolls under the bureau. Now we are mad. We roar like a caged lion; we say words, stamp the floor, kick a chair, yank out the bureau. Battles have been lost on account of such trifles.

What happened? Almost everything. Upset—literally. Lost his head; that is true also. Also lost his appetite. The wife is so disgusted she loses her temper—and calls him "brute."

It is a brute reaction. It is a biological reaction; it requires neither learning nor headpiece. Out of our inborn emergency equipment we build up our attitudes, fight windmills and straw men, and rip and roar up and down the world, or tremble like a leaf at every breath.

"Every little movement has a meaning of its own," as the old song declared; it is also true that every movement moves something. We are never more physiologically correct than when we say, "That moves me." Between birth and death many are "moved" enough to dig a Panamanian canal, yet they never move themselves up out of the cellar of life.

The difference between being moved to disgust at the sight of a dead cat and moving to remove the cat is one of life's little jokes that make human life so interesting.

We are moved with unstriped or visceral muscle. We move with striped or skeletal muscles. To make a gesture is to make an excuse for moving. We are moved with less effort than we move; our unstriped muscles function without the cortex. They run themselves, and if we are not in charge they run us. In mobs and panics they run riot.

Emotions vary. In individuals, communities, nations, races; are under different degrees of control; are aroused by varying situations. Emotions are older than the human race; but outside the human race put to no such sublime or ridiculous ends. We do not begin life with specific loves, hates, and fears. Some can go through life without set hates and loves. They can look people and things over and decide whether they are worth loving or hating, and if they are, possess them or do their best to clear the earth of them. But as we are not one in ten can love a Hindu or a Jap or the other political party. And much of thinking and talking is in terms of hates and fears and loves. We murder at least something, if not somebody, every day. And love—there are quite as many things to be loved as people. In fact, there is nothing. It seems, that cannot come within range of our love, except our enemies.

(By George A. Dorsey.)

Honor in Defeat

The privilege of going out with the honors of war is very generally accorded to a garrison surrendering after a brave defense. It permits the soldiers to carry away their arms and in some cases to march out with drums beating and colors flying.

"Spring with that nameless pathos in the air which dwells with all things fair, Spring with her golden suns and silver rain is with us once again."

THIS AND THAT IN COOKERY

Apples are so commonly found in all markets, so wholesome as a fruit and so popular as a food, we find new ways of serving them most welcome.

Pierrot Apples—Pare and core six large cooking apples, cut into eighths. Make a syrup with one cupful of water and cook gently until they are nearly done. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and finish cooking. Now add one cupful of rich cream, stir to mix and pour into a glass dish, grate nutmeg over the top and serve just warm.

Fried Apple Pudding—Line a buttered pudding dish with strips of sponge cake (cut one-half inch thick) which have been dipped into milk and sautéed lightly in melted butter. Cut, cored, pared apples into rings and cook them in the butter. Place half of the apple rings in the lined dish and spread over them one-half cupful of strawberry preserve or jam with plenty of the syrup. Repeat and top with more cake. Bake one-half hour, turn out, sprinkle with sugar and serve with cream.

Apples With Cheese—Cut circles of white bread one-fourth inch thick, dip into melted butter then roll in grated cheese. Place half on a buttered baking dish. Cover with rings of cored apple. Bake in a hot oven and serve sizzling hot.

Chicken Custard—Chop cooked chicken, stir in a thick white sauce, add one beaten egg, and cook stirring constantly; pour into custard cups, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and brown delicately.

Prepare some biscuit sandwiches by rolling out the biscuit dough thinner than usual, spread one with chopped, seasoned ham and cover with another. Bake until well browned. Cheese or any other filling may be used. Grated maple sugar, peanut butter are some other fillings which are worth trying.

Windmills—Roll out a rich pastry cut into four-inch squares, slit each an inch deep in the corner of each square. Brush with egg yolk and milk beaten together, and press the corners toward the center. Place half of a peach cooked in a rich sirup on each and bake until the pastry is well browned. Serve with cream as dessert.

Various Good Things
Honey, because of the water it contains, should when using sugar, reduce the liquid one-fourth, in recipes for honey.

Being slightly acid, honey dishes should have a very little bit of soda used with any quantity over a cupful. Honey in the comb, if kept dry and in a fairly warm place, will not spoil. Extracted honey will crystallize when allowed to stand for some time, but it will quickly melt if the can is set in hot water.

Honey Sauce—Take one tablespoonful each of flour and butter, one cupful of currant jelly, one cupful of boiling water, two ounces of honey, and two ounces of lemon juice. Cook until thick before adding the honey and lemon.

Apple Meringue—Grate one apple, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one egg white and beat until light. Serve as cake filling or sauce for various puddings.

Soup From Roast Beef Bones—Remove all the fat and cover with one quart of water, add salt and a lump of sugar, one teaspoonful of beef extract. Simmer three hours with a sliced carrot, add one cupful of chopped cabbage and simmer for one-half hour longer. Serve hot.

Oxtail Soup—Take one oxtail, jointed, three pieces of water, one tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, a teaspoonful of sugar. Simmer several hours, then add one slice of carrot and one onion. Simmer another half hour. Serve with the meat in it.

Combination Salad—Take two tart apples cut into slices, one-half cupful of english walnuts, one orange cut into bits. Dress with french dressing and heap on water cress.

Greens in Ramekins—Take fresh cooked greens, season well with buttered crumbs, pack into buttered ramekins, cover with a slice of hard-cooked egg, add a bit of seasoning and butter and set in the oven to be well heated. Serve hot. Any greens—dandelion, spinach or chard—may be used for this dish.

May nettle, burdock, milkweed, marsh marigold are all most delectable greens. If eaten early in the spring, burdock, mustard, cow cabbage all have a different flavor and should be used freely when tender and young.

Water cress as soon as the snow is off is ready to serve. It is delightful as a garnish to lamb chops; served with a bit of french dressing it is an especially well liked and piquant salad.

Straw Season Predicted
Any kind of straw, just so it is straw—speaking of chapeaux for spring and summer, year 1930. Milliners declare that the long-prolaid "straw" season has actually arrived.

What is more, as wide and as picturesque as one may choose, or as intricately molded to individual type as smart style may demand.

So there you are! Real millinery at last, the sort that tunes to costume distinction such as fashion insists upon—hats apropos of the time, the place and the occasion!

As to the new straws, their name is legion. Here's mentioning a few leaders—baku, sisal, panamaque, bambu, porte bonheur—being among the linenlike types, some very glossy, others dull finish, and each that soft length or three-quarter with every dress ensemble. If not a jacket then a cape is matched to the print frock or skirt. In other words, every costume has its own cape or jacket and with the new bright printed silks the theory is working out delightfully gay and sparkling.

It's fashionable, too, for considerable white to show about the neck of spring frocks. Ever so many necklines are cut out, as the picture shows, accentuating plastron fronts or vestee effects made of lace, net or organza or a light-toned silk matched to the background of the print.

At the immediate moment the silks which are attracting most attention for practical daytime wear are those with navy, black or other dark backgrounds. The color contrasts are striking.

Daytime frocks made of these sprightly silks are attractively fashionable and they yield to manipulation with the facile of fabric or felt. Lots of fancy straws, too, including crocheted types not infrequently worked with angora, straw lace which will flourish this summer in picturesque versions, in fact, there is no end to the list of new straws.

The millinery group pictured, tells in part the story of straws and brims for the future. The first hat is made of a soft crocheted straw hood, its brim and its crown are ingeniously manipulated in latest approved manner.

A back view of an off-the-face glossy panamaque straw is shown below. The positioning of the feather is significant, for back trimmings are especially featuring back bow treatments. That very much-brimmed hat at the top to the right is a navy blue panamaque straw, and it is as glossy

SPRIGHTLY PRINTS FOR SPRING; STRAW HAT SEASON PREDICTED

The new prints tell quite a different story from those of the past. This applies not only to their patterning, for the manner of styling the 1930 print silks is also refreshingly different.

Among silks which have a really "new" look are those referred to as two-color prints. That is, the flowers or other motifs in monotone, either navy, black, red brown or some other color, are silhouetted against a light background. The jacket dress in the picture is made of one of these smart stencil-patterned silks as they are sometimes called.

The newer printed modes make much of including a jacket either hip as glossy can be. The butterfly motif which trims it is of felt in matching color. Paris having acclaimed navy as a leading color for spring, it follows that this color will be featured for hats.

The last model is fashioned of one of the numerous straws which work up like fabric, because of their suppleness. The brim in this instance is extended at the sides, being a favored silhouette for the draped hat.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

BAYER ASPIRIN

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monocaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

Jinks—Well, he says he has reached the conclusion that ole Solomon was the dumbest instead of the wisest man in tackling the job of trying to please a thousand wives.

Fliers Say Courage Varies with the Way they Feel

AEROPLANE
Pilots tell us that their courage, their whole attitude toward flying, varies from day to day, with the way they feel. If they feel full of pep, healthy, they can try anything—nothing frightens them. Their nerve is unshakable; their skill keen; their flying is machine-like in its perfection.

It is an entirely different story, however, if they wake up in the morning feeling sick, down in the mouth. Then flying becomes a real danger.

MEMORIAL

Nachruf zur Erinnerung an den Verstorbenen unseren geliebten Gatten und Vater:

Treuet still zu meinen Grabe
Stoert nicht in meiner Ruh,
Denkt was ich gelitten habe,
Geht mir doch die ewige Ruh
Ein Jahr ist nun dahingegangen
Das du von uns geschieden bist
Doch is der Schmerz nicht ueberwunden
Weil man dich lieber Gatte und Vater nicht vergisst.

Jetzt fuehlen wir wie schwer es ist,
Das du von uns gegangen bist
Doch bist du nun befreit von allen Leiden
Und auch von jeder Angst und Noth!
Drum ruhe sanft, ob wir auch weinen
Und Traenen unser Herz erfuelt:
Einst aber wird uns Got vereinen
Der alle Traenen wider stillt.
Gewidmet von deiner Gatten, Alvine Giese und Kinder.
