NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH

The prosecuting attorney had encountered a rather difficult witness. At length, exasperated by the man's evasive answers, he asked him whether he was acquainted with any of the jury.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness. "More than half of them."

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" demanded the man of law.

The other thought quickly.

"If it comes to that," he replied, "I am willing to swear that I know more than all of 'em put together!"

Green Manure Is Aid to Bacteria

Cover Crop Plowed Under Improves Soil and Increases Water Capacity.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When a farmer plows under a green manure crop such as clover or any of the legumes he brings about almost unbelievable changes in the world of living things under the soil, according to Nathan R. Smith, bacteriologist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Under favorable conditions plowing under a large amount of green material may increase the number of bacteria as much as ten times within two days, says Mr. Smith. In four days there may be 15 to 25 times the original number of bacteria in the decomposing material and adhering soil. After about seven days the bacteria decrease in number almost as rapidly as they increased. No change in the number of bacteria takes place in the soil one-half inch away from the decomposing material.

Bacterial Decomposition.
Bacterial decomposition of green manure gives rise to carbon dioxide and ammonia. The carbon dioxide escapes from the soil into the air; the ammonia is absorbed by the soil and, through the action of bacteria, is first changed to nitrite and then to nitrate. The greater the percentage of nitrogen in the green manure, other conditions being equal, the more nitrate will be formed from its decomposition. When crops low in nitrogen, such as mature rye, are turned under very little benefit will result for the following crop, since the amount of nitrogen bound up by the bacteria in decomposition may be greater than that obtained from the rye. Eventually this nitrogen is changed to nitrate, perhaps too late for the crop.

Succeeding Crops Benefited.
It has been known for many years that growing a cover crop and plowing it under as a green manure improves the physical character of the soil, increases its capacity to hold water, and helps to prevent erosion. The mere growing of legumes, says Mr. Smith, has a stimulating effect upon the bacteria of the soil, and succeeding crops may be benefited even though the tops of the legumes are removed.

Hatch Geese Eggs When Grass Is Well Started

The eggs of geese may be hatched under hens, setting them in the spring when grass is well started. The goose and gander are best mated during the previous fall, as mating may not occur between the gander and more than one female. This accounts for some infertile eggs. Eggs hatch in about thirty days. Remove the first hatched goslings from the nest if necessary to give unhatched eggs more time. Keep them in a warm basket until all are hatched that can be expected from the setting.

Feed the goslings after 24 or 30 hours from hatching, giving stale bread squandered from milk, or equal parts of rolled oats and bread crumbs moistened with water and some sand for grit. Feed moderately several times daily during the first week. Have water for drinking always accessible.

After the first week, in addition to chopped tender green food, give cornmeal, wheat bran and middlings, as much bran as meal and middlings together. Tender green foods form a large part of the ration of growing geese and, if not available in pasture, should be provided. Geese are pasturing birds. Protect the young goslings from wet and cold; do not allow them to swim until several weeks of age and with breast feathers grown. They should be cared for about as young ducks are, but need more green food.

Agricultural Hints

A set of farm records is the most obvious need of the better farmer and better farming methods.

Owing to the good crop of red clover seed produced in the country last year, prices are lower than usual.

Vegetable seeds of doubtful vitality or those left over from last spring should be tested before planting.

A ventilating flue and a fresh air inlet in the outdoor storage cellar are important construction features for good results in storing fruit and vegetables.

The first cutting of alfalfa may be removed relatively early provided the later cuttings are left on the field long enough to permit the plants to re-establish the food reserve in the roots.

Weigh and test the milk of each cow in the herd at least once a month. In no other way can you tell the differences between cows in their money-making ability, and big variations always exist.

Manure containing much straw should be applied to corn land as early as possible for it to undergo the first stages of decay before the crop comes on. It will then provide soluble plant food, particularly available nitrogen, at approximately the time the corn can make most use of it.

Feeding Baby Beef

Prof. D. E. Rusk, of the University of New Hampshire, is an advocate of the use of silage in feeding baby beef. He says that silage and legume hay must largely replace the grain in the ration of the breeding herd if baby beef is to be grown profitably. Allowance should be made for at least 30 to 40 pounds per day. He says that it is possible to put on a gain of about 200 pounds per cow during the winter months where a ration of good silage and legume hay is fed.

Happy Woman Tells How She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "it's the little daily dose that takes off the fat." Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and ketone are expelled from the stomach. At the same time the system, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing nature's six life-giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and cell of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful, natural attractiveness and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

Church's Soaring Tower

Not Idea of Architect
St. Mary's church, Hagerston, London, England, designed by Nash in 1827, possesses an abnormally lofty tower, concerning which two amusing stories are current. One is to the effect that the contractor inquired of the architect how high he should carry it, and was told to go on building until he was ordered to stop. Then Nash went off, forgot all about the matter, and on returning home some months later, was flabbergasted to find that the tower had grown to its present unusual height. The other is that a local builder, having a quantity of spare stone on hand, told the building committee that he could afford to build them a very high tower at a very low price. The committee closed with the offer; and the result was what we now see.

The hurt of a burn or a cut stops when Cole's Carbolic is applied. It heals quickly without scars. 30c and 60c by all druggists, or send 30c to J. W. Cole Co., Rockford, Ill.—Adv.

Diphtheria May Be Eliminated
Modern publicity methods, allied with the application on a vast scale of the latest principles of public health administration, were so effectively used against diphtheria in New York last year that the disease is expected to be extinct there within five years. Such was the purport of the first annual report of the diphtheria commission concerning its work in 1929 under Dr. Shirley W. Wayne, commissioner of health, which pointed out that a half century ago one out of every two contracting the disease died of it.

"Brought Back My Strength"

"My little daughter was born at a homestead in northern Alabama. She had four other children and I worked hard that I suffered a nervous breakdown. The doctor's tonic did not seem to help me and when she told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to take that instead. I kept on until I was well again. It brought back my strength. Today I can do anything, thanks to the Vegetable Compound."

Newlyweds Get Vow Cards

Cards reminding husbands and wives of their marriage vows are being issued by the Mothers' union of England. They are of a size convenient for carrying in the pocket, and are printed in silver and white. They record the date and place of the marriage and the names of the groom and bride, and they reproduce the essential portions of the marriage service which have reference to marital fidelity. It is planned to give a card to every bride and one to every groom at the time of the ceremony.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All druggists today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any ailment, and could by no possibility do the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

Before Planting Time, Make Sure YOUR Planter Is Right

The McCormick-Deering "100 Series" planters combine old-time-proven principles with a simplified design which insures greater accuracy, a wider range of adaptability, and easier ways of adapting the planters to the different requirements. It has taken a number of years to perfect this combination. The result is a series of planters, which have no untried features. Their superiority lies in the manner in which these proved principles are combined and applied. The McCormick-Deering "100 Series" planters are furnished both as check-row planters and drills. The check-row planter can be quickly set for drilling, and only a moment is required to change it to power hill-drop for bunch-drop drilling. The pea-and-bean and fertilizer attachments are of an improved design, and can be quickly installed both on planters and drills. If you are looking for a planter that will plant your crops accurately and that will require minimum attention, it will pay you to ask us to demonstrate a McCormick-Deering "100 Series" planter.

U. S. TO SCRAP THREE WARSHIPS IN SLASH Three-Power Pact Involves Saving of $800,000,000.

Washington.—That the three-power agreement reached at the London naval conference between Britain, the United States and Japan involves a saving of $800,000,000 to $300,000,000 in the next six years was disclosed by Ambassador Hugh Gibson, an American delegate.

Ambassador Gibson declared that the three-power pact slashes naval armaments "far beyond reasonable expectations."

The ambassador made this surprising revelation for the first time in a speech delivered in London and broadcast by radio throughout this country.

He further declared that a five-power treaty may yet be signed.

Ambassador Gibson disclosed that the United States, Great Britain and Japan have agreed to a tripartite pact embracing these highly important points:

1. Scrapping of nine battleships—three of each power. 2. Suspension of the battleship replacement program of the three powers for six years.

Gibson's pronouncement, cabled to the State department, was the first official word that a three-power agreement had been reached. It was the most optimistic statement yet to come from the conference.

The ambassador said: "Definite agreement has been reached between the United States, Great Britain and Japan. It means that from the fleets of the three powers nine battleships are to be scrapped, without replacement."

The reduction of the combined battleship fleets of the three countries will equal in number the third largest battleship fleet in the world, Gibson pointed out. He added: "This is not all. Under the terms of the Washington treaty the United States, Great Britain and Japan were committed to the laying down of twenty-six battleships between now and 1933."

"Under the arrangement of the last week, not one battleship will be laid down during the next six years."

"These twenty-six battleships cost between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000. How much of that will be spent after 1933 depends on the next conference."

"We have good reason to hope that a five-power agreement may be signed before we leave here. Whether this is to be, we ought to know within a few days."

The great achievement of this conference is that it has arrived at a basis for limiting all kinds of vessels in the three largest fleets, and the cruiser, destroyer and submarine tonnage under this limitation will be far below the lowest limit which was discussed at Geneva in 1927, Gibson said.

Russian Anti-Religious Drop Big Easter Drive Moscow.—Leaders of the Society of Militant Atheists decided that their anti-religious activities during the approaching Easter holidays would be centered largely on helping to fulfill the government's five year industrialization plan, collective farms scheme, and fight against alcohol, instead of ridiculing priests and the church as heretofore.

1930 BUILDING WILL TOTAL 11 BILLIONS

Commerce Secretary Outlines Plans for This Year.

Washington.—In a radio address here, Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, announced that government experts now estimate that $11,000,000,000 will be spent in the United States this year for construction.

Doctor Klein pointed out that the latest figures mean an advance of at least $1,000,000,000 over previous figures. Approximately $7,000,000,000 will be spent for construction and maintenance of federal and state public works and construction work to be done by public utilities, he said.

According to Doctor Klein, building contracts awarded last month showed an increase of 45 per cent over February of this year and were only 5 per cent below the figures of March, 1929, when business in general was progressing at top speed.

As the construction contract awards in January of this year were 21 per cent below January of last year and difference for March, 1930, and March, 1929, was only 5 per cent, the "dawn of the new day" could be forecast, Doctor Klein stated.

Klein stressed the value of the new economic theory that in times of business collapse construction work must be pushed. He said that in 1921 the government first had tried to meet the business depression in that manner and had found that it worked so well that seven years of prosperity followed.

"We did not act so sensibly when some of our earlier business troubles came on us," Doctor Klein went on. "Our predecessors acted differently in the case of the financial upsets of 1857, 1857, 1873, 1893 and even as late as 1907."

"Construction makes jobs. It helps to keep the wheels of manifold industries revolving. Construction work is basic. In the modern world, and especially in such a restlessly progressive country as America, it is a 'key activity' if ever one existed."

House Leaders to Halt Debate; May Quit June 1

Washington.—Republican leaders who dominate the house have turned thumbs down on most of the controversial legislation for the balance of this session, it was indicated here.

This means, if the leaders prevail, that the Norris constitutional amendment to abolish "lame duck" sessions of congress, anti-power trust legislation, railroad consolidation, branch banking bills and other political explosives are going on the shelf until the December session.

Owners Ignorant of Logs' Worth

Much Timber Sold From Farm at Less Than Its Value to Buyer.

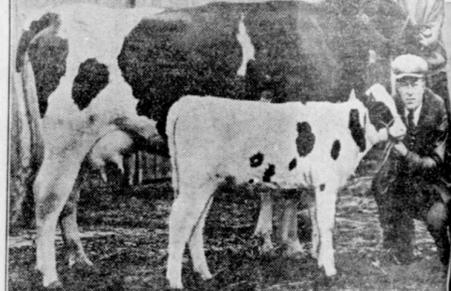

Much timber is marketed from the farm woods of Ohio with little idea in the mind of the owners of the real value of the product, according to F. W. Dean, extension forester for the Ohio state university.

The scale which has been used in Ohio for many years, called the Doyle, Doyle-Scribner, or Buckeye log rule, gives two sets of results, both of them incorrect, when applied to large logs.

"One of the chief difficulties with the Doyle rule is that it is based upon a formula which allows too much for slabs from small logs, and too little for slabs from large logs," says Dean.

"Consequently, small logs from 8 to 20 inches in diameter yield from 50 to 150 per cent more board feet of lumber than the scale shows. Large logs, 30 to 40 inches through, yield decidedly less lumber than the scale calls for. The Doyle rule was fairly accurate when applied to the virgin

For me, like every one else "dove West," had known of my departure. It was difficult to answer him. "I came back," was my lame reply.

"Well," he said, "well"—after a pause during which he had looked swiftly, keenly, at both of us. "I suppose I'm to have the pleasure of fetching you along to Daru also?"

I was thinking rapidly; calculating just what this new turn in my affairs might mean. The Tauri was a fast runner; she could take me home in a day and a half; half a day to fix up matters there, and get stores. Then a day and a half back in the Tauri again—I calculated that the government would owe me as much for doing its work at my own cost. Half a day for contingencies. Two days to get through my four days' cut in the bush. . . . Eight days in all from now ought to see me—should see me, if I were alive—once more at the point where I had turned back. If there was no one ahead of me—

"I suppose," I said to the waiting Bassett, "that you didn't see any sign of another party on the river."

Bassett was busy lighting a cigarette.

"You suppose wrong then," he said, his head bent over his hands. "There's a prospecting and exploring party down at the river mouth at this minute." He did not look at me as he spoke. Bassett was—a little gentleman.

"How soon can we get away?" was my reply.

"As soon as you can chuck your carriers on board, and get you and this lady on."

He kicked me, slyly, and I replied, as intended, with an introduction to Jinny.

"I'm sorry to offer you such rough accommodation, Miss Treacher," he apologized, fixing her with his grave ministerial stare. "But you are fairly lucky to be alive this minute, which I suppose is some compensation."

"Do you?" said Jinny. "I don't, and turned her back on him. I could only tap my forehead, and nod significantly at Bassett. "The bush," I explained, as he moved a little away. It was explanation enough, for any one who saw less clearly through a stone wall than Bassett usually did.

We made a very silent party, dropping down river. With the current, and the speed of the launch, it was a comparatively short journey. Dusk of next day found us on the opening reaches of the Komilly estuary, with the gulf of Papua, flat and gray as a

First Steam Carriage Met With Disapproval

The London Times reprints the following from its issue of August 5, 1825: A Gurney's steam carriage arrived on Monday, at the Cranford Bridge inn, from an experimental tour to and from Bath. The success of this trial much exceeds the most sanguine friends of the invention.

Mr. Gurney, his brother, Colonel Vinay, Captain Dobbin, and assistants started from Cranford bridge about 4 a. m. They proceeded at a most rapid rate to Maidenhead, which they reached notwithstanding two or three delays in about an hour and five minutes—a distance of nearly fifteen miles. After this proof of their capability of speed, they traveled more leisurely, until they arrived near Malskham where they were attacked by some brutal fellows, who, imagining they were "come to take the bread out of their mouths." To prevent similar occurrences, it was thought advisable to draw the carriage the remainder of the way by horses. Having exhibited the powers and practicability of the invention publicly in Bath, the party left early on Monday morning to return Prudential considerations induced them not to fight their fire

After the Unattainable

"He's on a hunt for blue roses"—to say this of anybody is to indicate that the person referred to is on a quest for unattainable objects.

This is a rather colorful expression which comes down to us from the days when there was no such thing as a blue rose.

As a matter of fact, this was the case until quite recently. For it was only a few years ago that the climbing rose called "Veilchenblau"—violet blue—was introduced by the Germans. Until the advent of this species of rose, the flower was cultivated only in the common varieties.—Kansas City Times.

Pewter table, opening out before. There was a long strip of beach at the river mouth; you could scarcely see it at that hour. But if you could not see the beach, you could see quite clearly, that which stood upon it—the pointed shapes of several canvas tents.

"We'll stop here for a few minutes," said the magistrate. "I didn't call going up; just halted them, and asked if they had seen anything of a white woman."

"What did they say?" I asked.

"One of them—Caxon it was, I think; I hear he went with them—shouted back that they hadn't, and asked who she was, and what it was about."

"Caxon?" I said. "Who were the others?"

"Only one other white. You know him—Spicer." He gave an order to the brown, bare-limbed steersman; and our boat took a wide sweep, and began heading inshore.

"Caxon!" I thought. "Spicer is not such a fool as he looks." For Caxon, old-time goldminer and survivor of a past era of mining successes, was about the ablest prospector who ever washed a dish between Daru and the Mambare.

"Do me a kindness, Bassett, will you?" I said. "Don't mention to anyone ashore just where it was that you picked us up."

"No fear."

"Miss Treacher coming?"

"I don't."

Silently Jinny's head appeared above the canvas, cutting off my words. She stepped out on deck. "There was still some light left; I could see that she had found Bassett's store of clothing and looted it ruthlessly. A cummerbund of dark-blue silk circled the waist of her—my—trousers; she had white socks on, and a silk tie about her neck.

I looked at her in amazement, as she swung lightly down into the boat, avoiding my eyes (she had not looked at me, or spoken to me, since we came aboard). I saw her go ashore with Bassett, disappear among the tents.

Before I had time to grow more than a little impatient, the boat was back again, and the launch under way. What had Jinny been saying, doing, out there in the camp? Why had she been so anxious to go ashore, and why, now that she had returned, was she still keeping hidden, avoiding sight or sound of me?

Bassett was sitting on the cabin roof, a whitish blur in the dark. I edged up to him and asked him point-blank—

"Did you—anyone—say anything ashore?"

He knew what I meant. He did not look up, or turn his face, but he answered immediately, in Bassett's own crisp, precise way—

"I saw Spicer. I asked him what the delay was; asked if I could assist in any way. He said no; it was all right; they had stopped because he wished to buy snags; they'd be off tomorrow at daylight. I got back to the boat then. Miss Treacher,—he spoke carefully, seeming to weigh his words even more than usual—"Miss Treacher stayed behind for a while; I waited for her."

"Was she—" I stopped; it was difficult to phrase.

"There appeared," said Bassett precisely, "to be something in the nature of a friendly understanding between her and Mr. Spicer. I gathered an impression that she was pointing out to him something in connection with the course of the Komilly river."

On purred the launch; the stars fell away right and left from her wake. Going forward, where I could be more or less alone, I sat on deck, and digested as best I could this unwelcome news. It did not help matters, or make me more hopeful, that I heard once in a way, a sound like some one, down below, trying to stifle bitter weeping.

Simple as That

Over lunch in a London hotel one day not long ago, a certain wealthy but unlettered man was invited by a friend to join his shooting party in Scotland after that week. "Man," said the prospective guest, "that's a splendid idea. I'll get on the telephone at once and get my man to clean my gun."

He rose and rang up his house. "Is that you, Forbes?" he said to his servant. "Well, I want you to go ahead at once and get my gun cleaned." "Beg pardon, sir," said the man, "did you say 'gun'?" "No," shouted the Scot. "I said 'gun'—G for Jew, U for union, and N for pneumatic."

Power of Softness

A bank of snow six feet thick will stop a bullet shot at the distance of 50 yards. The bullet will not penetrate that downy bank of snow, but it will go through the solid embankment when fired at three times the distance. It is delightful! The bullet shatters the steel, penetrates the solid bank; but the soft feathery snow has a way all its own, and it takes in that murderous lead and loves it, and, as it were, soothes it.

Get Out and Hustle

Far better is it to work your way to success than to weep your way into failure. Labor will always get you a lot more than sympathy. Drops of sweat from honest effort are far more productive than idle tears from weak wishing.—Grit.

"The Is Risen"

Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

And they entered in and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments.

And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?

He is not here, but is risen.—Luke 24:1-6.

Easter Sees Flowers at Their Best

By KATHERINE EDELMAN

There's something very human about flowers. Not only do they grow and blossom and even fade and die but their beautiful frailties are so human, too. They do so love to look their best, and if you don't believe this, go to a greenhouse around Easter time and see for yourselves. They're smiling with superb flowering rancidness over their loveliness and their glory. So it was at the greenhouse which I visited.

Among other things was a cross of lilies in the "show room" of the greenhouse. In this cross were about three hundred and fifty lilies—pure white. Their yellow centers had been removed, only their white purity was permitted to remain. Their yellow streaks—even the pure lilies are human enough not to be perfect—had to be discarded.

There was a cross, too, made of pansies. Sweet, wise, human little pansies!

But the cross of lilies was so magnificently simple and its symbolism was so apparent that one gazed upon it with a kind of reverence. The cross of lilies is significant of the cross of suffering, but it also is significant of the Resurrection. And flowers, perhaps, are the very best of nature's mediums in which to express the Resurrection.

The flowers, shrubs, plants and bushes are always all decked in their very finest array for Easter. Not only do humans feel the urge of the spring, the ever new fresh awakening of the springtime as is embodied in Easter, and so wear their very best finery, but the flowers, too, are dressed in their Easter best. And proud of it they are to be! Yet their beauty has not spoiled them. Still are they as sweet and fragrant as ever, giving forth their sweetness to all who come to them—as though they almost understood better than humans the actual meaning of democracy.

I saw hyacinths of all colors, purple and lavender and pink and white and some of the palest yellow. How entrancingly lovely they are!

There are the bright yellow glisters shrubs, true shrubs of the sun and of the springtime. And the magnificent rhododendron bushes add their different colored blossoms to the scene, as do the vivid azalea plants. Of course the tulips and the jonquils and the daffodils do their part, too. The spring couldn't get along so well without these flowers. The tulips of pink and white and of red and of yellow so flamingly and dashingly tell that spring with nature in her love-lively garb is here. And yet for all their startling dress they are always so eminently refined and so delicate. Of course, too, there are always the geraniums and the quaint, sweet nigellets and every other plant you can think of. And to every flower and every plant you feel almost like exclaiming:

"Your Easter costume was never more beautiful—even though you follow the same styles year after year there is something about the way you look this year that seems prettier than ever."

I saw flowers of noble family names, mighty inheritances, such as the cyclamen flowers. They are cup-shaped and though their blossoms stand up they are looking down at the same time. Unassuming I'd call them, wouldn't you?

I passed some paper whites and hydrangeas and then came to the butterfly flowers, or poor man's orchid. It was told these flowers were called schizanthus. You may, or may not, as you wish. Their other names seem better, for you can see at once a family resemblance to the orchid, and the flowers do look like butterflies.

I met the metrosideros shrubs. But the clumsy name for them is bottle brush. They're red with gilt edges.

This pretty view was made at the greenhouse in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, of 5,000 Easter lilies in the form of a cross.

and though they are shined just so they'd come in most beautifully for cleaning milk bottles, one would never dare have the effrontery to suggest such a humble domestic task to so regal a set of flowers.

A tall shrub—a tree, it would more fittingly be called—stood in the corner of the show room of the greenhouse. Pieroma lasandra is its family name. It has a sweet scent. Its blossoms are purple at first but they become white with age and on the tree I could see both white and purple blossoms, for there are newly opened flowers on the shrub at the same time as the flowers possessing some degree of age. It seems strange to think of a flower becoming white as it grows older. I couldn't help wondering if at the first sign of white it felt sad as it realized that age had crept over it.

I saw a primula—it's a higher form of primrose—perhaps it could be called a primrose which had made the most of life's opportunities.

There were daisies and ferns and mosses. All abound, too, for Easter were the rose cactus plants and the euphorbia or crown of thorns, which were covered with their crimson flowers. You could tell the crown of thorns at once. There is no mistaking it and it seems almost a nature wonder that on such a sharp, pointed, thorny plant such gay bright little flowers have blossomed. The tropical house made one feel as though one were stepping into another country.

A visit to an Easter greenhouse is not only worth your while. It is something which if missed will mean that you have let an hour of beauty and of sweetness and of nature's Easter message of Resurrection pass you by.

The Life Everlasting

Of all human aspirations the most intense is for life after death. In all ages man has more or less believed in it; he has tried to persuade himself of it. Under the influence of desire he has accepted childish proofs of it. And after all, he has not been very sure of it. But the empty tomb of Jesus of Nazareth gives every Christian the certainty not only of existence after death, but of glorified existence, existence of purity and beauty and the highest elevation, existence in the presence of the Author of the universe, whose presence explains the enigma of this life and answers all the questions that man through the ages has been asking, and to which he gets no answer elsewhere.—Portland Oregonian.

Teutonic Easter Customs

Many of the chief customs and observances, as for instance Easter eggs, Easter fires and Easter games, are derived, directly or indirectly, from the festivals of spring gladness held in the hearts of ancient Teutonic forests.

The use of eggs is an instance. The egg is the symbol of the germinating fertility of spring and the Easter egg is an expression of the resurrection.

It is identified with the Easter observances best known to Americans, and here, and in Europe, too, reciprocal presents of colored eggs are sent, in families where there are children.

Early Easter Celebrations

In the primitive days of the ancient church in the West, when forms and festivals meant a great deal, much was made of Easter. People on Easter morning greeted each other with the Easter kiss, and the exclamation "Sur-rex-it" (He is risen). The reply was "Vere sur-rex-it" (He is risen indeed). Atms were dispensed to the poor, slaves were given their freedom and the popular sports of the season of rejoicing went sometimes a little to extremes.

HAIL EASTER MORN!

Writer Would Revive Old Custom of Easter

In old England it was believed that anyone who acquired a new piece of finery for Easter would ensure good fortune in love for the new year. Here perhaps is the origin of the Easter hat, or possibly only a connecting link, for the flowers on an Easter hat—or do they wear flowers any more?—must be at once an outward expression of tribute to a joyous Christian festival and a relic of more primitive times when our savage ancestors welcomed with dance the budding blossoms on the trees and the tentative blooms in the forest. The Easter use of colored eggs, symbols of beginning life, probably had the same mingled Christian and pagan origin.

There is a fine old English Easter Monday custom which I should like to see revived in the streets of Cleveland. They called it "heaving."

On Easter Monday it was the privilege of the men to go out on the streets, and joining their hands together, lift into the air such women as they encountered. On Easter Tuesday the women were permitted to return the compliment, and they did so by the thousands.

There is also recorded in the old books a whimsical variation of this observance. On Monday the husbands beat their wives, on Tuesday the wives beat their husbands. And everybody, it would seem, was happy.—Ted Robinson, in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ACHES

There's scarcely an ache or pain that Bayer Aspirin won't relieve promptly. It can't remove the cause, but it will relieve the pain! Headaches. Backaches. Neuritis and neuralgia. Yes, and rheumatism. Read proven directions for many important uses. Genuine Aspirin can't depress the heart. Look for the Bayer cross:

You are worth just as much as the things you are living for are worth.—Baptist Record.

If you work hard for your money, don't fool it away.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

INTERNATIONAL SUGAR FEED CO.

Dear Sir: This is my first season's experience raising baby chicks. Have purchased 300 White Leghorn Baby Chicks from the N. H. Winkler Poultry Farm & Hatchery, Port Washington, just ten days ago. An feeding your Health Chick Mash; and do those chicks grow. Have not lost a single chick so far. This shows what a combination there is possible when good chicks are fed the right kind of feed. This entire community is all for International Health Chick Mash and is recommended by everyone.

Sincerely yours,
WM. KLAS, Belgium, Wis.

Tomah, Wis., April 5, 1930

International Sugar Feed Co.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir: Just a few words to let you know, that we purchased 2000 White Leghorn Chicks from Schwartz Poultry Farm, Lomira, Wis., just 5 weeks ago. We have fed them on your International Health Chick Mash, as recommended by your local dealer and salesman. The Lomira Co-op. Co. guaranteed to feed those 2000 chicks up to eight weeks old, on three tons chick mash; which is an all mash ration. Those chicks are now past five weeks old, and consumed only a little over 1 ton of your mash, and have not fed an ounce of other feed in connection. Our chicks are the finest in this community, lost only about 4% and the balance are the most uniform lot of chicks around Tomah. I now admit that 3 lbs. International Chick Mash will grow a Leghorn to eight weeks old with wonderful results.

Sincerely yours,
FRED VOIGT

April 5, 1930

International Sugar Feed Co.

Dear Sir: Just a few words to let you know that feeding of baby chicks on International Health Chick Mash is a pleasure. We have placed 1000 chicks under our brooders now exactly eight weeks ago. We lost just 94 chicks out of the lot and have sold 900 broilers at just eight weeks old that averaged just two lbs. We call this wonderful growth, and our chicks all developed uniform. When a better chick mash is made, the International Sugar Feed Co. will make it. Nearly all the poultrymen in this territory are feeding it with good results.
