

AUTO ACCIDENT VICTIMS BURIED

The remains of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lanzer, prominent Menasha people who were killed in an automobile accident on Highway 55, about two and one-half miles north of Kewaskum last Wednesday afternoon, were taken to their homes in Menasha on the noon train last Friday. The bodies were accompanied there by Undertaker Clem. Reinders.

Mr. and Mrs. Lanzer were the parents of four children instead of seven as mentioned in our last week's issue, we being misinformed. The oldest child is 16 years. Their names are: Robert, Frank Jr., Alice and Katherine. Mr. Lanzer is also survived by his mother, Mrs. C. Johnson of Long Island, N. Y., who attended the funeral on Sunday.

Mr. Lanzer was superintendent of the press department of the George Banta Publishing company at Menasha. He was a leader in athletic activities in the Twin cities. He was also prominent in the Menasha Elks lodge and was a member of the Masonic order. He was president of the Menasha Bowling association, president of the Printing Craft Tradesmen's association of Central Wisconsin and for several years president of the Industrial Soft Ball league of Menasha. He was a golfer and a member of the Neenah-Menasha Golf club. The remains were removed from the family home on Saturday to the Masonic Temple from where the funeral was held on Sunday afternoon with services in the Episcopal church there.

Mr. and Mrs. Lanzer had been residents of Menasha since 1926. Their former home was in New York. The relatives on Friday were still undecided whether the remains be buried in Menasha or in New York.

The body of Mrs. Anna Swiderski was sent to Chicago Friday morning from the Murray funeral home at Fond du Lac. The funeral was held at Chicago on Monday.

The body of Mrs. Bruno Fion who was also killed in the accident, was shipped to Chicago the forepart of this week for burial.

This project consists of three miles of paving, five miles of grading, and bridges and culverts. The pavement will extend from the John Stockhausen farm to Goeden's Corner a distance of three miles but grading of the highway will extend through the village of Newburg and 300 feet into Ozaukee county. The cost of grading that part of Ozaukee county will be paid by Ozaukee county who plan to pave all of that portion of Highway 33 that lies in Ozaukee county in 1931.—Cedarburg News

FARM HOME DESTROYED

The farm home of Jos. Hoffmann, southwest of Friess lake in Section 17, town of Richfield, was destroyed by fire last Tuesday evening. All the furniture was also destroyed. Mr. Hoffmann and his family had left earlier in the evening to attend the movies and do some shopping at Hartford and were not at home at the time of the fire. According to neighbors, the fire was first noticed at about 9:45 by resorters who are occupying a cottage at the lake. Phone calls were sent to neighbors and when they arrived the fire was raging throughout the house, although when first noticed it was confined to the upper floor. No fire fighting apparatus was needed as when discovered it was too late to attempt to save the building. The loss is estimated at about $4,000, partly covered by insurance. The barn on the small farm was destroyed by fire about a year ago.—West Bend News.

TIRE THIEVES ACTIVE AGAIN

Auto tire thieves are busy in this city, and car owners are advised to keep their garage doors locked. Last week five tires were stolen from a delivery truck belonging to Arno Herziger, and Sunday night the garage of Zeuser & Vollmar was entered and a tire and spare wheel from the coal truck was stolen. It is believed the thieves were frightened away from stripping the truck of all the tires, as clamps from one of the other wheels were loosened.—Cedarburg News.

STREET CARNIVAL POSTPONED

At meetings held last week by the Kewaskum Post, American Legion and the Kewaskum Fire Department, it was decided to postpone until some time next June the two-day carnival which was to have been held here next month. The reason for this step is due to the fact that the members of these two organizations feel that the time left to prepare for the event would be too short to properly arrange for the affair and bring it to a successful conclusion. Another reason for the postponement is that it is feared that by the time the carnival could be staged, it would be too late in the season, at a time when weather conditions are uncertain. It is planned that next June the event will be staged on a larger scale than was at first planned. During the meantime the members of both organizations will make plans and arrangements for the big affair.

1930 COUNTY FAIR NOW HISTORY

The 1930 Washington County Fair came to a close last Sunday, with a fairly good attendance. With weather conditions ideal and the exhibits plentiful and good, the fair should have had a larger attendance, especially in this day and age when traveling from one place to another can be done in a short space of time. The exhibits and free attractions this year were many and of such quality that they will be hard to equal at any other county fair. The work of the officials was untiring showing that they put forth every effort to bring the fair to a success.

FIRE DOES $20,000 DAMAGE

Fire, which destroyed two barns on the Edward Schnorenberg and Thomas Schaefer farms one mile south of St. Lawrence Tuesday caused more than $20,000 damage which was only partially covered by insurance. The St. Lawrence fire department was called to the scene and was successful in saving the farm homes. The fire was discovered at 7:30 a. m. in the straw stack on the Schnorenberg farm by the Schnorenberg children. They reported the blaze to their father, who was digging potatoes in a nearby field. By the time he reached the scene the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to do anything but save the livestock. The wind carried the sparks across the road to the Schaefer farm where the straw stack was set afire. The cause of the fire has not been determined.

BE CAREFUL WITH FIRE

Extreme heat and low humidity this summer coupled with a deficiency of precipitation last winter and spring have combined to create a fire hazard of unusual intensity throughout Wisconsin's forest districts, according to F. G. Wilson, chief forest fire warden for the conservation commission.

"The soil is much drier than usual this summer, the water level in swamps is lower, lakes and rivers are lower than usual, and many of the water holes and springs in the woods are drier than normally," says Mr. Wilson. "If we are to avoid an unusually bad fire season this fall everyone who uses the woods must exercise extreme care with fire."

There were more fires reported last spring than there were altogether in 1929 according to Mr. Wilson. Fortunately none of the fires were bad in the sense of being conflagrations, and fire protection efforts extinguished all fires before great damage was done.

The unusually dry summer coupled with low humidity increases the difficulties in fire fighting. With low springs and water holes it will be impossible to use pumps and hose in many places because of the scarcity of water.

All conditions point to a fall season of intense fire hazard which may be the worst in years unless we have a decided change in the weather. This condition is not peculiar to Wisconsin. In four-fifths of the forest states east of the Rockies the situation is even worse. But the severe fire hazard in Wisconsin now calls for extreme care and the conservation commission appeals to everyone using the woods to be unusually careful with fire.

DROUGHT AID PLANS OK'D AT CONFERENCE

Loans Are to Be Obtained for Needy Farmers.

Washington.—Foundations for a country-wide drought relief organization, extending from a federal council down to county committees, were laid at President Hoover's conference with the governors or their spokesmen from thirteen states most acutely affected by the prolonged dry spell.

After a five hour session in the White House cabinet room, the President announced that the conferees had agreed upon a general program involving loans to stricken farmers, employment, reduced rail rates, and Red Cross assistance where needed.

The relief plan, in brief, calls for the immediate appointment of a federal committee by the President, a state committee by each governor, and organization of county committees in turn by the state groups. Through this network of committees, the needs, physical and financial, of individual farm families will be reported and met as quickly as possible until the damaged districts are rehabilitated.

The chief objectives were outlined by the President to the conferees. Assisting families deprived of means of support by crop failure to survive the winter was the chief of these. Secondary was the prevention of unnecessary sacrifice of live stock and protection of public health.

To accomplish this, the President said he proposed that money be loaned, if necessary with the assistance of state or nation; that the Red Cross be asked to aid, that employment of needy farmers be arranged and that reduced freight rates be made available on food, feed, and live stock in the distressed districts.

After each state spokesman had told of conditions in his state the President laid his plan, already well prepared, before his guests and it was discussed fully.

This is the text of the President's statement follows: We have canvassed the information secured by state and national surveys as to drought conditions. While the extent of the damage cannot yet be determined, it is certain that there are at least 250 counties most acutely affected where some degree of relief must be provided. It was the view of the conference that the burden of effective organization to meet the situation over the winter in the acutely affected counties rests primarily upon the counties and the states themselves, supplemented by such cooperation and assistance as may be found necessary on the part of the federal government.

The objective of such relief is: (a) To assist families over the winter who are deprived of means of support through failure of their crops. (b) To prevent unnecessary sacrifice of live stock. (c) Protection to public health. This is to be accomplished by: (a) Placing of loans privately or where necessary with assistance of state or national agencies. (b) Red Cross assistance. (c) Employment. (d) Reduced railway rates for food, feed and live stock to the distressed districts.

The President will set up a committee comprising representatives of the Department of Agriculture, the federal farm board, the federal farm loan board, the Red Cross, the American Railway association, the public health service. This committee, through its chairman, will co-ordinate national activities and national support to the state and county committees.

The methods for provision of credit beyond local or state resources for the purchase of feed, seed, movement of live stock, or support of families over the winter will be developed by state committees, in co-operation with the federal farm board, the federal farm loan board, the intermediate credit system, and other federal agencies.

Georgia's '30 Peach Crop Brings Over $6,906,400

Atlanta, Ga.—Georgia's peach crop this year brought over $6,906,400, it was estimated by the director of the state bureau of markets, $633 cars being shipped. The watermelon shipments were the largest in history. More than 23,000 cars have been moved, as compared with 21,000 cars handled last season.

William Green.

Springfield, Ill.—The two-year-old struggle between President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America and his opponents in the Illinois union reached a climax when the insurgent faction was 'routinely read out of the American Federation of Labor.

A letter to Secretary Victor A. Olander of the Illinois Federation from President William Green of the American Federation requested that delegates from the revolting Fishwick Howat group be denied seats at the state federation convention in Springfield, starting September 15.

NATIONAL INTEREST FOLLOWS PRIMARIES

Bitter Contests for Seats in Senate Now Assured.

Washington.—Politicians of the country generally are especially interested in the primary results of the past week in various sections of the country. Outstanding features of the contests were the Norris victory in Nebraska, the flareup in prohibition repeal sentiment in Ohio, and the nomination of former Senator Gore in Oklahoma.

Norris may need the aid of all factions as he is facing ex-Senator Gilbert Hitchcock, the Democratic nominee. The Democrats have high hopes of capturing two Republican seats through the nomination of the blind ex-Senator Gore in Oklahoma and former Representative Robert J. Bulkley in Ohio.

Bulkley furnished a surprise of the primaries by winning a substantial victory on his platform of dry law repeal. In the general election, he will face Senator Roscoe T. McCulloch, a dry Republican who was appointed to office.

The overwhelming renomination in Arkansas of Senator Joe T. Robinson, the Democratic leader, was virtually a foregone conclusion. He will be re-elected for his fourth six-year term without opposition.

The nomination of John T. Bankhead in Alabama, who defeated Frederick L. Thompson for the Democratic nomination means that he will face Senator Tom Healin in the November election. The latter must run as an independent, having been ruled out of the primary ballot for bolting Al Smith in 1928.

Fruit Crop Will Show 18 Per Cent Decrease

Washington.—The nation's fruit yield, on the basis of August 1 condition, will be 18 per cent above last year's crop, although about 10 per cent below the ten-year average, the Department of Agriculture announced.

The increase over last year applies to all crops. The greatest percentage increase is in prunes and plums, largely grown in California. The largest portion of the country's fruit supply is grown outside the area of greatest drought damage and these crops for the country as a whole have not been affected as seriously as some of the grains. In the Cumberland, Shenandoah region and in the Ohio valley, however, apples have been seriously injured by the drought.

APPLY U. S. AIR LAW IN BOMBING OF MINE

Federal and State Warrants Charge Violation.

Murphysboro, Ill.—Federal and state warrants charging conspiracy to destroy nonunion mine property were sworn out against Paul Montgomery and James Malone, aviators, and others in connection with the aerial bombing at Providence, Ky., a few days ago. Montgomery is from Murphysboro and Malone from Duquoin.

The federal warrants charge violation of the act of congress giving the Department of Commerce authority to regulate air traffic. These, as well as the state warrants, were sworn out before Charles L. Porter who is both a United States commissioner and a justice of the peace. The state warrants charge the conspiracy was concocted in Illinois.

The warrants were served immediately on Montgomery and Malone, who are in jail here. Montgomery, who confessed he piloted the bombing plane, had been held pending extradition to Webster county, Kentucky, while Malone had been held for further investigation after he admitted he had acted as a go-between in the bombing plot. He said two men offered three weeks ago to employ him as a pilot, but he was unable to accept the job and turned it over to Montgomery, a friend. He declared he did not know the purpose of the flight.

Officers refused to disclose others named in the new warrants, pending their arrest. Essel Grant, thirty, of Clay, Ky., president of a local mine union, and Ewing Riley of Providence, Ky., are under bond in Webster county on charges of having accompanied Montgomery in his plane on the bombing expedition.

Providence, Ky.—Fire destroyed a 60-foot tippie at the No. 3 mine of the Providence Coal company, with loss estimated at $50,000. It was the highest property damage resulting from an act of sabotage since disorders began in Webster county last July 1, when mines reopened after a three months' shutdown. Wayne Crow, deputy sheriff, who investigated the blaze, said it undoubtedly was of incendiary origin.

The mine is one of the three in the county that did not reopen. It employed 200 men when it closed April 1. Officials said the burning was an act of retaliation against two company stockholders who went to Murphysboro, Ill., recently and identified Paul Montgomery's airplane as the one from which bombs were dropped in Webster county.

Airplane Plunges Into Gas Tank; Three Killed

Chicago.—Falling out of control in a raging storm of lightning and torrential rain, an airplane with two girl passengers, sisters, and a pilot aboard, dropped 300 feet, crashed through the top of a gas tank of the Peoples' Gas company, fell through the gas-filled chamber, and disappeared in a 40-foot pit of water below.

Nine hours after the plane sank out of sight in the water a hundred firemen and policemen who had worked frantically for many hours raised the twisted wreckage from the bottom of the well and it in they found the bodies of the two young women. An hour later the pilot's body was found by a diver partly buried in mud on the floor of the pool.

A ten-foot hole torn in the tank by the crash was widened to 40 feet and the gas which still remained in the dome was forced out with steam from a locomotive which was shunted onto a nearby railroad siding. Damage to the gas tank was estimated at $30,000.

Haucek Wins Nomination for Kansas Governorship

Topeka.—Republicans of Kansas nominated Frank Haucek, farmer, and state representative, for governor over Gov. Clyde M. Reed in the recent primaries. Haucek's majority over Reed was approximately 30,000. Senator Henry J. Allen won the senatorial nomination over several opponents. Senator Arthur Capper had no opposition for the senatorial nomination. Former Gov. Jonathan Davis was unopposed for the Democratic nomination against Capper. George McGill, Wichita attorney, was the Democratic choice against Allen. Harry Woodring, Neodesha banker, was chosen Democratic nominee for governor.

Forty Mexican Farmers Are Accused of Murder

REDUCE COST OF UPKEEP OF AUTO

Use of Proper Oil and Attention to Filter Will Save Money.

The use of the proper grade oil and attention to the oil filter every 10,000 miles, engineers agree, will reduce cost of mechanical upkeep of the car, saving the motorist perhaps as high as $150 in car wear during the life of his automobile.

The thin oil film between the moving parts is what protects the automobile engine against wear. This film is six times thinner than the page of this paper. But it must be kept clean and free from carbon residue and other foreign matter.

Function Efficiency This can be done by proper attention to the oil filter—the device through which the oil passes and is filtered. When the oil is filtered properly it has less tendency to form carbon residue or develop gummy matter which will absorb dust and dirt. The oil filter will function at highest efficiency up to 10,000 miles driving. After this mileage it becomes filled with carbon and other foreign matter and should be serviced immediately.

Inability of an oil to properly lubricate is nearly always the result of its contamination rather than faulty refinement, assuming, of course, that the correct grades to meet engine operating conditions have been selected.

Filter Cleans Oil The oil filter cleans the engine oil constantly at the rate of one quart a minute while the engine is running and the entire contents of the crankcase every five to ten minutes. In 10,000 miles of driving it removes sometimes as much as two pints of dirt, foreign matter and sludge from the oil, thus preventing this destructive material from injuring the engine's vital parts.

The use of an oil filter gives clean lubrication and reduces engine wear. But if the cartridge is not renewed every 10,000 miles, its whole purpose is defeated and wear of the engine parts will result from dirty oil.

After 10,000 miles of driving it is important that the filter cartridge be renewed. This is important because this mileage the filter unit becomes filled with dirt, sludge and other foreign matter taken from the oil.

New Device is Help in Parking of Automobile

A device which may be installed on any automobile and which, it is said, will save time and space in parking, has been invented by R. W. Branson, an employee in the office of the state auditor at Jefferson City, Mo.

It consists of a set of two small auxiliary wheels that are attached to the front axle and which are hinged so that they may be dropped to the ground through a control on the instrument board. When the small wheels are touching the ground, the driver puts the car in reverse and backs up from two to four inches, raising the front end of the car on the auxiliary wheels and lifting the front wheels of the car off the ground.

As soon as this operation is carried out the steering gear automatically becomes attached to the auxiliary wheels and the driver may turn the car to either side by merely turning the steering wheel.

Faulty Contact Points Cause Engine to Miss

Missing of the engine and "bucking" frequently blamed on the carburetor are often due to nothing more than improper adjustment of spark plug of breaker point gaps or both. Before making carburetor adjustment in high compression engines the car owner or mechanic should make sure that the plug gap is adjusted according to the car manufacturer's recommendations, and breaker contact points are filed square and likewise adjusted.

Dirty or worn out plugs also cause trouble often blamed on the carburetor, and spark plugs and breaker contact points should be examined at least twice a year.

Regarding Car Safety

Many car owners, a large majority perhaps, are not aware of the fact that the wisdom of putting the best tires on the front wheels is seriously questioned. The latest thought on the subject, not entirely the outgrowth of universal four-wheel brake use, is that a rear-wheel blowout is more dangerous. It arises from the fact that the driver has comparatively greater control over the front wheels through the steering. However, a doubtful tire should be discarded.

THE STORY

She was never so well as when she is seven years old. She is a little girl, with a big, round face, and a pair of eyes that are as blue as the sky. CHAPTER VI

Tangled Dreams

She would not tear her eyes from the parade. It was the first parade she had ever seen. The band was playing a tune she had never heard before. The floats were so tall and so colorful that she could hardly believe her eyes.

She looked at the parade with a mixture of awe and wonder. The floats were so tall and so colorful that she could hardly believe her eyes. The band was playing a tune she had never heard before. The floats were so tall and so colorful that she could hardly believe her eyes.

So had everybody else. They were rich enough to have their names in the paper every day and that is something to be rich without being notorious. It is an achievement, and the Fentresses were impeccable. She knew that Simon Fentress, who had most of the money, was a secret power in Washington. Converse had often spoken of him with envy, for his own wealth was a little thing in comparison. The memory of the young girl's face, blond, inexperienced, with everything to give, sent a little shiver of pain to her heart.

"The heiress?" she said dully. "Yes, I know."
"She doesn't like to be called an heiress," explained Brian, "and she's a wonderful old pal. I'd like you to meet her some time."
Linda made a wry face unseen by him. "Girls bore me," she said indifferently.

"Daisy wouldn't," he blundered. "She's an innocent child—you'd be amused by her old-fashioned notions. She's very much against—"
Linda recovered herself. "I had said something about a decision."
"You wanted my opinion about something," she said softly. "I'm afraid it will be terribly worldly, but I am like that, you know." Her eyes challenged him to discover anything old-fashioned about her.

His face lighted. "Did you remember that I said that? Are you sure I won't bore you talking about myself?"
"I shouldn't be bored."
"Well, then, if you care enough to bother," she said, eager eyes sought and found hers, holding them in spite of a hundred stranger eyes that might have been watching.

She did care enough. She cared enough to listen to anything he had to say. Her eyes told more than she dreamed.
"I've been offered a post," said Brian, telling his story—"diplomatic, and I'm on the fence whether to take it or let it go past along with other things. It's a thing I've wanted for years, and now that it's here a dozen reasons have sprung up why not."
"Not a nice appointment?" she sympathized. It was just a trivial opinion, after all, that he wanted.

"Splendid—for me. It's not that. But I told you I wasn't rich, didn't I? I'd have nothing but my pay, and I've begun to wonder if I could make a go of it."
She gave a silvery laugh, so spontaneous that he looked his surprise.
"I beg your pardon," he said stiffly. "I shouldn't have begun this. How could you possibly understand? His name traveled over her rich furs, the expensive little hat, her gown reflecting its extravagant maker. In every line, she recognized the stigma of economy. How could she understand what it meant to be poor? And Linda laughed again, understanding far more than he would ever know.

"Go on. Tell me about it," she encouraged, to hide the tremor beneath her gaiety.

Long Eyelashes Called Signs of Ill Health
Long eyelashes always have been considered a mark of beauty, but it is a Japanese physician who has pointed out that they are also a sign of poor health. Doctor Tamaki of the pediatric department of the Kyushu Imperial University has made a two-year study of about 7,000 children and has found that most children with long eyelashes are in poor health. It is reported to the American Medical Association.

Roads of Spain
Spain is a tempting country for the motorist. There are hundreds of miles of beautiful roads, rivaling any in Europe, and always new highways under construction. Over wide hot plains and difficult mountain passes and following precipitous rivers they are smooth and broad and made to last forever. What if it is necessary to pass a bad car? It is not necessary to walk the driver from his nap, for the road there is plenty of room to pass on either side.

Beef Grading and Stamping Service

Activities Extended to Several Large Slaughtering Centers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Expansion of its beef grading and stamping activities to provide service at several additional slaughtering centers, has been announced by the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture. These centers include Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, Detroit, and St. Louis. Experienced beef graders will be stationed in the five cities, to grade and stamp carcasses and wholesale cuts of beef for slaughtering at a nominal charge.

Invent Stamping Devices
The federal beef grading and stamping service was inaugurated at a few slaughtering centers in May, 1927, in response to a widespread demand for a grading service to indicate the quality of beef in a way that would be comprehensible to the consumer. Roll stamping devices were invented that made it possible to display the federal grade label on each cut of beef. The label informs the consumer that the meat or other cut was designated by the federal grader as U. S. Prime, U. S. Choice, U. S. Good, or U. S. Medium, depending on its quality.

Requests for Service
The popularity of this government grading and stamping service from all branches of the meat industry, including slaughtering, wholesalers, retail meat dealers, hotel supply houses, and scores of hotels and restaurants in all parts of the country. The service was made available at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Kansas City, Topeka and Omaha. The department received requests for further expansion to additional centers, and it is in response to these requests that the July 1 additions are being made.

Prevent Occurrence of Goiter in Lamb Flock
Prevent the occurrence of goiter in lambs by feeding the breeding ewes one or two grains daily of either potassium iodide or sodium iodide, according to a statement by animal husbandry specialists at Michigan State college.
The chemical can be fed to the ewes by mixing it with grain or it can be dissolved and poured over salt which is fed to the sheep. Another method of administering the medicine is to mix one ounce of it with 25 pounds of salt and 25 pounds of steamed bone meal.
Care must be taken in mixing the chemical with the salt and bone meal to get an even distribution of the iodide. It is best not to make up too large a quantity of the mixture at one time.

Sugar-Beet Growers Profit by Research Made by Government
Application of Fertilizer Increases Value of Crop.
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Application of phosphatic fertilizers to sugar beet fields has increased the annual value of the crop by millions of dollars, members of the National Fertilizer association were told recently by Oswald Schreiner, chief of the division of soil fertility of the United States Department of Agriculture. Comparatively, this is a new practice, and it was introduced into the principal beet-growing states following soil fertility experiments carried on in Colorado and Nebraska by the department.

Since it became evident to the western sugar-beet growers that the application of comparatively small amounts of phosphatic fertilizers would enable them to increase their yields of beets by an average of three tons an acre, and thus increase their income by approximately $18 an acre, the quantity has increased steadily until it is now estimated that phosphates are applied to from 200,000 to 300,000 acres annually. With an increase of three tons to the acre, valued at $7 per ton, the value of this year's crop will be increased by about $5,000,000 over what it would have been without the use of fertilizers, said Doctor Schreiner, who estimated the cost of fertilizer at approximately $700,000. Doctor Schreiner cited the discovery and demonstration by department specialists of the remarkable response of western sugar beet soils to phosphatic fertilizers as one of numerous examples in which the research work of the department has been of great practical benefit to farming regions of the United States.

Cattle May Contract Tuberculosis From Hogs
While the danger that cattle may contract tuberculosis from hogs is not so great as it is that hogs may contract the disease from cattle, it is possible that cattle will contract the disease from hogs and when both are in the same pasture it is very likely that cattle will contract the disease, provided, of course, the hogs have the disease.
Cattle will generally refuse to eat the manure voided by hogs, while hogs will readily eat the manure voided by cattle, and on this account it is more likely that hogs will contract the disease from cattle than it is that cattle will contract it from hogs.

FARM NOTES
In agriculture, as in other industries, the margin of profit on each unit produced may narrow as volume increases, yet not adversely affect the total income.
Pigs or chicks raised on clean ground grow fastest and require the least feed per pound of gain.
Garden furnishings give completeness and finish to the garden. In one form or another they have a place in every home yard.
Sudden grass is about the same quality as timothy hay, and is relished to the same degree by live stock. The great advantage of it is that it will make a quick growth the same year.
Small weed patches may be smothered by straw, manure and stack bottoms. Such smothering materials must be kept moist so that decomposition will be prompt, and they must be deep enough to prevent stems from penetrating through to sunlight.
Summer following is one of the most effective practices for killing weeds. One of its advantages is that it requires practically no outlay of capital, about all that is required being the labor of the farmer and the use of equipment which he has.

Hessian Fly Has Cost Country $100,000,000
Of all the insects working at cross purposes with man, few have such records for destructiveness as the Hessian fly whose activities have cost the country as much as $100,000,000 in a single year, the United States Department of Agriculture's records show.
In 1927, according to estimates, Kansas alone lost 20,000,000 bushels of wheat to the Hessian fly. Serious outbreaks of Hessian fly activity occurred in 1914 and again in 1919 and 1920. At least eight serious outbreaks have occurred over the northeastern one-third of the country within the last 45 years. Local activity is evident almost every year somewhere in that large territory of infested areas on the Pacific coast.
To assist the farmer in combating this pest, the United States Department of Agriculture has recently published Farmers Bulletin 127-F, "The Hessian Fly and How Losses from It Can Be Avoided." It is free to anyone requesting it.

Insecticides in Safe Place Best

Never Keep Poison Where It May Be Mistaken for Harmless Article.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
A clerk's error in selling a sulphur-arsenic insecticide instead of sulphur resulted in the death of a number of hogs and caused the dangerous illness of two persons on a farm in New York, an investigation by an official of the food and drug administration, United States Department of Agriculture, has revealed.
The supposed sulphur was used in preparing a sulphur and molasses mixture as a home remedy for a cold. This resulted in the critical illness of one person. Then the drug was burned and the fumes were inhaled by another, also as an attempted treatment for a cold. This person became unconscious and for some days was severely ill.

Used to Cure Hogs
Investigation by a federal food official revealed that this same sulphur had been used last fall in an attempt to cure hogs thought to be suffering from cholera. The preparation was mixed with the feed of 60 hogs, and a majority died. It was thought at the time that the deaths were due to cholera.
The sulphur used in the three cases was analyzed by the food and drug administration and was found to contain arsenic. Fearing that others would buy this same product and use it as sulphur, the food officials traced it to its source.
Investigation showed that the mixture supposed to be sulphur had been bought at an implement store. This store had a bag of sulphur and also a bag of sulphur-arsenic insecticide. Both were in a dark attic. A clerk had sold the poisonous mixture thinking it was sulphur.

Three Errors Made
Officials of the food and drug administration point out three errors in the situation. A poison should never be kept where it may be mistaken for a nonpoisonous product. Sulphur is not recognized by the modern veterinary science as a cure for hog cholera. Modern medical science does not consider sulphur effective in the treatment of colds either as a mixture of sulphur and molasses or as sulphur fumes.

Plan to Keep Rodents Away From Fruit Trees
Rabbits may be kept away from fruit trees by several devices. Perhaps the most satisfactory one is to put wire screens around the trees, says W. H. Alderman of university farm, St. Paul, Minn. Among the various treatments which are applied to the trunks of trees to prevent rabbit injury, one of the best is a whitewash made out of lime-sulphur solution.
Use the solution instead of water in moistening the lime. A little salt added to this will make it stick better. If this is applied in the fall it will generally protect the trees throughout the winter, although in the event of much freezing and thawing weather, the whitewash may chip away.
Rubbing the trunks and the main branches with a piece of fresh bloody meat will keep rabbits away for a short time.

Farm Fish Ponds Will Be Found Profitable
It is estimated by Cornell university experts that with proper stocking and management an acre of farm pond will produce 200 pounds of fish per year without artificial feeding. This is in addition to its value for supplying water for live stock, for cutting leeches, and for skating, bathing, fishing, and for irrigation under special conditions, and for skating, bathing, fishing, and for irrigation under special conditions, and for skating, bathing, fishing, and for irrigation under special conditions.

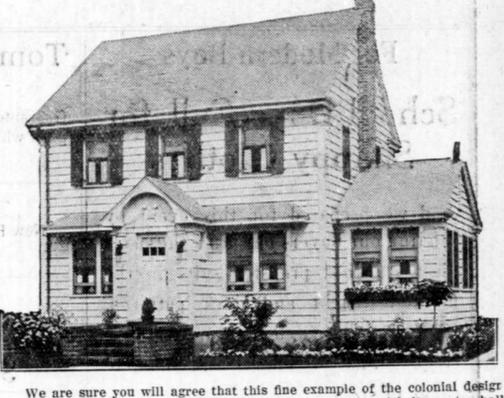

Irregular Soy Stands Not Considered Good
The best yields of soy beans cannot be obtained from stands that are very irregular as is common in most fields. Beans put in with a grain drill at the University of Illinois, and which produced what was considered a good stand, were found to vary all the way from one bean plant in a foot of drill row to fifteen plants. Such irregularity is largely due to variation in flow of seed through the drill as modified by the jarring or lack of jarring of the irregular physical condition of the soil caused by clods and ridges and notes make for irregular distribution of the seed and consequent irregular stands and lower yield.

Use Paint for Profit in Selling Your Home
Though about the least expensive item in home modernization, observes a writer in the Household Magazine, paint is one of the greatest factors in paying greater returns in satisfaction to the home owner or occupant or in earning actual profits in resale or rental value.
"Paint is refreshing, symbolic of cleanliness, and to most of us, the embodiment of sanitation. Engines idle as we drive through streets of painted houses, but as we enter the unpainted districts, a heavy foot of seeds upon the gasoline feed. Did you ever try to rent or sell a house that needs painting? Then you know, or strongly suspect, that paint is just as good business for the home owner as it is for the merchant or filling station operator," advises the writer.
"An ordinary roof shingle, sixteen inches long and one-fourth inch thick, will last about 25 years, but with creosote stain, a foundation of aluminum, it should last indefinitely." One man purchased a cottage for $2,500, and spent $100 in painting, and sold it soon thereafter for $3,200. In these days when houses are not so scarce as they were back in war times," continues the Household Magazine, "tenants not only will not rent houses in bad condition but will not stay in houses if the owner neglects them. Agents may justifiably claim that tenants may move from neglected homes or apartments. Unpainted exteriors and woodwork are depressing. Depression stifles progress, breeds inferiority. Brightening a home's appearance stimulates similar improvement in appearance of the entire neighborhood, and thus increases value of entire real estate blocks.

How Many Coats?
Three coats of paint should be applied to a surface that has never been painted—a thin priming coat and two heavier coats of white lead paint. Two coats suffice for repainting, but two coats on new work is false economy. A third coat costs only one-third more and makes the work last twice as long.

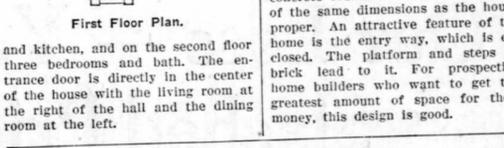

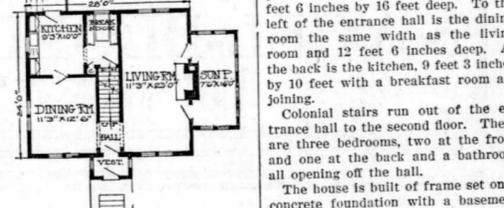

Example of Colonial Type of Home That Has Many Pleasing Features

We are sure you will agree that this fine example of the colonial design is worth a second look, and don't overlook the floor plan with its center hall and large sun room off the living room. The entrance is one of the best colonial designs.

By W. A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

There are many variations of the colonial type home, but the one shown in the accompanying illustration is about as near the true colonial as it is possible to get. The only variation from the colonial in this home is the addition of the sun porch at the right. Without this porch this home is exactly the type that will be found in so many New England villages.
This is a two-gable, rectangular house, 28 feet by 24 feet. On the first floor are the living room, dining room and kitchen, and on the second floor three bedrooms and bath. The entrance door is directly in the center of the house with the living room at the right of the hall and the dining room at the left.

and kitchen, and on the second floor three bedrooms and bath. The entrance door is directly in the center of the house with the living room at the right of the hall and the dining room at the left.
The house is built of frame set on a concrete foundation with a basement of the same dimensions as the house proper. An attractive feature of the home is the entry way, which is enclosed. The platform and steps of brick lead to it. For prospective home builders who want to get the greatest amount of space for their money, this design is good.

Many Good Reasons for Remodeling Old Home
Home modernizing appeals to owners of old homes from a number of different angles. Following are some of the reasons for modernizing which dealers have put before home owners.
The sale or rental value of an old home may be greatly increased by improving its appearance and equipping it with modern conveniences. The increased value is considerably greater than the cost of making the improvements.
People not able or willing to pay for the construction of a new house may have their old home modernized in appearance and convenience for but a part of the cost of a new building.
Most old homes hold a hidden treasure—sound lumber in a sturdy construction. The sound lumber in an old house is well seasoned. Architects and contractors take from old buildings for use in building apartments and other structures. Most old houses are of real good construction—a value that the owner would be wise in taking advantage of.
Many old homes have an unsatisfactory arrangement of rooms, doors and windows. These features can be made to the owner's liking by modernizing. It is not necessary to do all of the modernizing work on a house at one time, although this usually is desirable. The owner can determine on the work he wants done and have it completed step by step as he is able to pay for it.
A nondescript type of house can be changed into a good architectural type, such as an English cottage, one of the colonial types or an adaptation of one of these styles.
A house may be modernized easily, without impairing the strength of any part.
Some owners of old homes want to keep their because of sentimental attachment. By modernizing they can retain that to which sentiment is attached and at the same time have modern conveniences and attractiveness.

Hard, Durable Stone Required for Walls
Stone walls must be built of hard, durable stones which stand the test of time. Before selecting the stone for a home it is a wise plan to examine homes which have been built of various kinds of local stone and to notice which kinds, if any, show signs of disintegration. Some kinds of stone contain a large amount of iron which eventually dissolves and runs down over the face of the wall, staining other stones, the mortar and any adjacent concrete and brickwork with unsightly rust-colored stains.

Use Paint for Profit in Selling Your Home
Though about the least expensive item in home modernization, observes a writer in the Household Magazine, paint is one of the greatest factors in paying greater returns in satisfaction to the home owner or occupant or in earning actual profits in resale or rental value.
"Paint is refreshing, symbolic of cleanliness, and to most of us, the embodiment of sanitation. Engines idle as we drive through streets of painted houses, but as we enter the unpainted districts, a heavy foot of seeds upon the gasoline feed. Did you ever try to rent or sell a house that needs painting? Then you know, or strongly suspect, that paint is just as good business for the home owner as it is for the merchant or filling station operator," advises the writer.
"An ordinary roof shingle, sixteen inches long and one-fourth inch thick, will last about 25 years, but with creosote stain, a foundation of aluminum, it should last indefinitely." One man purchased a cottage for $2,500, and spent $100 in painting, and sold it soon thereafter for $3,200. GETTING BUSY FOR FALL FOX HUNTS

Pat Scanlan, the advance agent of the Milwaukee Hunt club, and a crew of men, have been busy for the past two weeks putting up what the farmers call jumping gates, through the fields in the central part of Erin. Mr. Scanlan, soliciting permission from the different land holders for permission to erect the gates during the hunting season this fall. Over 40 foxes have been released by the club in the towns of Richfield and Erin and to hunt down and kill the scattered foxes will be the sport of the members who love to ride horseback. The club has at least 40 well trained foxhounds, which will round up the foxes and help add to the sport of the club. Pat Scanlan, who looks after the interests of the club, sees us to be a favorite son among the farmers.—Hartford Times.

McCormick-Deering Corn Binders Save Time Cutting Corn

WHEN your corn is ready to cut, depend on the McCormick-Deering Corn Binder to do this heavy job for you, quickly. It has a record of successful, reliable performance throughout the corn belt. It does the work of 5 to 10 men. The McCormick-Deering gets all the corn between the leaning and down stalks. The throat of the binder pushes the corn over against the elevator so that cutting and carrying to the binding mechanism is positive. The reliable McCormick-Deering assures binding every bundle. Short corn is bound equally as well as tall corn, because the binder pan, which provides evenly butted bundles, has a wide range of adjustment. Clear, open sides permit easy removal of undergrowth. The shielded gear drive excludes trash and undergrowth and gives long life. A bundle loader can be furnished at an additional cost. Let us show you these features that have made the McCormick-Deering the popular binder among corn growers.

Early Diving Suit
The diving suit is not so new as one might think. A patent was granted to John Stapleton on March 17, 1833, for a new engine so-called, which contrived a way to permit a person to be in it to walk under water, and to a new invented way to force air into any depth of water to supply the person in the suit engine therewith and for continuing a lamp burning under water; also a way to deaerate and purify the air so as to make the same serviceable for respiration.
