Baseball
Kewaskum placed 2nd in the Tri-County baseball tournament held at Campbellsport last Sunday. After using the morning game to Lomira the team came back strong in the afternoon and defeated Campbellsport 3 to 4.

On Friday afternoon of this week the Lomira team will play here for the last game of the season.

BOY RUN OVER; DIES AT HOSPITAL
Martin Brettschneider, aged 7, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Brettschneider of Newburg, died in St. Joseph's community hospital here last Monday afternoon of injuries received on the way home. The little boy with other boys was walking on Highway 33 last Sunday afternoon and when near the edge at Newburg was struck by an auto driven by a Mr. Green of Milwaukee. The driver stopped and took the injured child to Dr. Weber's office at Newburg, where it was found that later was taken to the local hospital. The boy never regained consciousness before he passed away. The unfortunate child was born February 12, 1924 at Newburg and besides his parents leaves five brothers and one sister, Clarence, Oswald, Arnold, Carl, Edwin at home and Edna, (Mrs. Edna Janke) of Grafton. The funeral was held Thursday at 1:30 in the afternoon, with services in St. John's Lutheran church at Newburg. Rev. A. Hermann officiated. Burial was in the adjoining cemetery at Newburg.

A CORRECTION
An error was made in last week's issue in the article of the miscellaneous column given in honor of Miss Al. Ramel at the home of Eleanor Ramel, when it was stated that prize was won in bunco by Wille Wunnt and Mrs. Edwin Krewald. It should have read that a luncheon was given by Mrs. Willie Wunder and Mrs. Krewald.

EXCURSION TO WASHINGTON, D. C.

From Washington county to Washington, D. C. for a five day trip, priced at the remarkable low rate of $36.00, including railroad fare, hotel bills, meals, bus transportation and tips, is the opportunity offered the people of Washington county. An educational tour has been promoted in various counties of the state and in each case those who took advantage of the trip are amazed at the service rendered at such a nominal sum.

The trip is through one of the most scenic portions of the country, including a day at Gettysburg and two days at Washington. Those who have made the trip indicate that the journey from Pittsburg to Washington from a scenic value, is alone worth the price. At Washington, reservations will be made at the Harrington Hotel, one of the finest and first class hotels at the National Capitol. At the hotel, the number in a room is limited to four. For that reason, it would be advisable for those planning to go to encourage their friends to accompany them. They will be pleased with the trip.

Mr. Liechty was in West Bend the latter part of last week making final arrangements with Superintendent M. T. Buckley. Positive instructions have been given by the manager that when three hundred reservations have been made that will limit the number that can go on the excursion. Those who are planning to go should send a deposit of $5.00 to the First National Bank, West Bend, Wisconsin at once. If for any reason a person cannot go, this deposit will be returned to them. The remainder of the fee of $36.00 will be paid before June 8. This trip may not be offered you again and those who have not seen Washington and Gettysburg cannot afford to miss it.

One of the finest commencement presents that could be made to a young person finishing the elementary grades of high school would be an opportunity to make this trip. Fix your vacation dates so that you may be free to be a party on one of the best and cheapest excursions that ever left Washington county. The days are June 14 to the 18 and the price is $36.00. File your reservations with Superintendent M. T. Buckley, West Bend, Wisconsin, and make your initial deposit of $5.00 to the First State Bank, West Bend, Wisconsin.

POSE AS FEDERAL MEN; STEAL SLOT MACHINES

Another robbery was perpetrated in Ozaukee county on Monday forenoon when the Bishop soft drink parlor in the town of Mequon was held up and three slot machines were taken. The robbery was conducted in a similar manner as was the one at the Fred Feister place on Highway 57 several months ago. Two men representing themselves to be federal agents entered the place, and announced that they would take three slot machines with them, selecting of course the three that contained the most money. After the men had gone it dawned on the proprietor that federal men were not interested in slot machines and gave the alarm. The men, however, had so much of a start that they made good their escape by the time the search was begun. The car used by the men bore an Illinois license plate—Port Washington Pilot.

ROADSIDE MARKETING DRAWING ATTENTION

Roadside marketing is the subject of a special conference being called by Commissioner Charles L. Hall, chairman of the department of agriculture and markets. As over four million tourists travel Wisconsin roads annually, it is hoped to draw up special rules and regulations and a standard sign for roadside marketing under the supervision of the department of agriculture and markets.

Roadside marketing offers one of the latest means helpful in developing a home market for fruits and vegetables, according to A. W. Pomeroy, marketing specialist. The special state seal will be a guarantee of high quality to the purchaser.

Organizations represented at the conference include standardization specialists of the state department, the Wisconsin Horticultural Society, and specialists from the horticultural department of the college of agriculture.

BIG BARN DANCE
The 18th annual dance sponsored by the Campbellsport Volunteer Fire Department will be held at Al Seefeld's barn two miles north of Campbellsport, known as the old Chesley homestead, on Saturday, May 23. Good music will be furnished. Admission 50 cents. All are cordially invited.

DEATH OF PAUL SEEFELD AT OSCEOLA

Paul Seefeld, 69, died at 8 a. m. Wednesday at his home in the town of Osceola after an illness of six years. Mr. Seefeld was born May 30, 1861 in Germany, and immigrated to America with his parents when he was six years old, and settled in the town of Kewaskum, after residing here for several years he moved to the town of Scott. On April 15, 1888 he was married to Emma Langner at Sheboygan Falls. After their marriage they moved to Marblehead and in 1895 moved to Osceola, where he has since resided. Deceased leaves to mourn: his widow, and the following children: Arthur of North Fond du Lac, Erving of West Allis and Paul Jr., at home, Mrs. Max Krueger of Milwaukee, Mrs. Maynard Meyer of Antigo, Mrs. Arthur Muench of the town of Mitchell and Luella at home, his aged mother, Mrs. Gottlieb Seefeld of Kewaskum, two brothers Edward of Beechwood and Gottlieb of Milwaukee and three sisters Mrs. J. Vanderhorst of Milwaukee, Mrs. D. Hartcup of Milwaukee and Mrs. Frank Klein of Kewaskum. The funeral will be held at 1:30 p. m. Saturday from the residence and at 2 p. m. from the Dundee Luth. church. Burial will be made in the congregation's cemetery in the town of Mitchell.

WINS COUNTY GRADED SCHOOL CHAMPIONSHIP

Saturday, May 16, at Jackson, Barton, the graded school baseball champions of the north half of the county, met and defeated Jackson, the champions of the south half of the county. Lovers of baseball were fascinated with the manner in which both teams played. "Up into the air and down into the well" or "on the ground and over to first" was the story of many a put-out. Sacrifice hits, bunts, double steals, slides and other baseball plays were executed by both teams. After nine innings the official scorekeeper, Mr. Maronck, announced Barton the winner by the score of 5 to 1.

Four pedagogues, Mehre, Mortenson, Staral, and Buckley officiated as umpires, and the players did not question their decisions.

Following the championship game two pick-up nines consisting of the best players of the other six graded school teams of the county played a seven inning game. The team made up of players from the south half of the county won.

During the past school year special emphasis has been given to teacher guidance of playground activities, and the results achieved have been very worthwhile. Good sportsmanship upon the playgrounds of our schools means better citizens in the days to come.

COUNTY LINE

Richard Backhaus spent Tuesday evening with Theo. Backhaus.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Butzke spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hinn and family.

Walter Stange and sisters Verona and Amanda spent Thursday evening with relatives at Cedarburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Staeger and family spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Martha Staeger and family.

BUSINESS PLACES TO CLOSE AT NOON ON MEMORIAL DAY

Business places in Kewaskum will close at noon on Memorial Day, Saturday, May 30th, for the observance of the national holiday. Business places however will be open Friday evening to allow evening shoppers the opportunity of doing their buying.

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES

The committee in charge to arrange for the Memorial Day exercises to be held Saturday morning, May 30, under auspices of the Kewaskum Post of the American Legion, is hard at work making final arrangements for the program to be rendered at the High School auditorium after the parade. In order to make the parade interesting and worth while it is necessary that not only every member of the post but every ex-service man turn out and take part in the same. We owe it to our comrades who sacrificed their lives on the battle fields and to the dead war veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American war, so lets set this day aside as the one day in the year to pay tribute to our departed comrades. The Kewaskum post earnestly requests that every ex-service man participate in the exercises and report at the school grounds not later than 9:30 A. M. where the parade will start.

Beginning in the morning of Memorial Day, the Girl Scouts will sell poppies. The purchase of the Memorial flower will provide funds for the aid of needy ex-service men. More than 100,000 auxiliaries throughout the country will work all day Saturday to dispose of the paper flowers which disabled men have been making for months in hospitals or in special work shops. Money collected will be used to finance legion and auxiliary relief work among suffering ex-service men and their families and most of it will remain in cities and towns where the poppies are sold. The poppy, as the Memorial flower has a double significance—honor to the dead and help to the living.

RADEMANN VIOLATES PAROLE

Frank Rademann of Meeker who was paroled to Sheriff Theo. Haltebeck at West Bend, following a shooting at his hotel at Meeker last fall, violated his parole by not reporting to the sheriff periodically as required, he was arrested Monday by the sheriff and lodged in the county jail. A woman was arrested in his place at the same time, was brought to West Bend and charged with vagrancy. Justice C. S. Hayden before whom she was brought for a hearing, ordered her sent out of the county on the next train.

POPULAR YOUNG LADY WEDS

The marriage of Miss Alfrida Ramel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Ramel of Kewaskum and Albert W. Rheingans, son of Mrs. Carl Deckman of Kiel, Wis., took place at Ev. Lutheran St. Lucas church, last Saturday, May 16th. Rev. Gerhard Karies performed the ceremony. The couple were attended by Miss Helen Ramel, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, while Harold Meisenheimer acted as best man. The bride wore a white satin gown, trimmed with lace, and a long veil in cap effect, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses, ferns and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was dressed in a peach colored net dress over satin with headband of Rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas. During the services Miss Lilly Schlosser sang, "I Love You Truly." After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parent with about 35 guests in attendance. The home was beautifully decorated with pink and white crepe paper, wedding bells and apple blossoms. Mr. and Mrs. Rheingans will reside on a farm two miles north of Kewaskum where they will be at home after June 1st. The Statesman extends hearty congratulations to the newly weds.

Liepert of Milwaukee.

WEST BEND MAY GET AN AUTO-HAVEN

What is known as the National Autohaven Company of Chicago is planning to erect an autohaven, a combination hotel, auto-service station and restaurant building in West Bend, according to a letter received from the National Autohaven Co., recently. The general manager of the company writes that several attractive locations have been submitted, and that the company is ready to make its selection and proceed promptly with the erection of the building. The company proposes to erect one hundred "autohavens" in what it terms a "first zone" which will be located within a radius of about 100 miles of the Chicago loop. It was the company's original thought to award a general contract to one of the largest construction companies in America, but owing to the general business conditions it has now determined to give the work to contractors resident in the cities and towns where the autohavens will be erected, so that the local people will more directly benefit by the purchase of materials and the employment of labor.—West Bend Pilot.

KEWASKUM TIES FOR SECOND PLACE

In an exciting game, the Kewaskum Athletic base ball team defeated Brownsville at Brownsville, in the Wa-Fon-Do league, last Sunday afternoon by a score of 13 to 10. Kewaskum took the lead at the scoring end and held same to the end of the game. Though the game was marred by errors on both teams, giving Brownsville four extra runs out of the ten scored, the locals showed a marked improvement over their first game played here two weeks ago. Their batting eye was better and the boys in general showed more pep in fielding the ball. Though they are playing good ball considering that it is a newly organized team, they must, however, in the minds of the many enthusiastic fans do a great deal of hard practicing before they can class themselves as a pennant winning team.

SECRETARY OF STATE MAKES APPEAL

In a statement given to the newspapers this week, Theodore Dammann, secretary of state, pointed out that auto owners will be "cheating" their local communities of a share of the 4-cent gasoline tax if they fail to fill out their applications for motor vehicle licenses in full and neglect to fill in the name of the town, village or city where the motor vehicle is kept.

Under the new highway law which includes the assessment of the 4-cent tax the secretary of state and not the local tax authorities certify to the tax commission the number of registered motor vehicles in each of the 1,800 tax districts of the state and these figures are the basis of distribution of a share of the gasoline tax to replace the personal property tax which was repealed.

The secretary of state will be able to supply the correct figures for each of these tax districts only if every auto owner properly fills out his tax return blank, Mr. Dammann said.

NOTICE

After June 1st, we will grind feed on Monday, Wednesday and Saturdays.—L. Rosenheimer.

REGULAR PAINS

The modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month.

If you've ever taken Bayer Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry on in comfort. Take enough to assure you complete comfort. If it is genuine Aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Bayer Aspirin will always save the day.

Neuralgia, Neuritis, Rheumatism, Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these remarkable tablets. So are the little nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day or a sleepless night.

Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets cost so very little after all, that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

SMALL INVESTORS. Climb out of the treadmill. Full information FREE. Unusual opportunity for you.

WEAK STOMACH—LIVER ILLS

Faribault, Minn.—"Dr. Pierce's medicines have given me so much relief that I cannot praise them enough. At one time I was suffering from liver ills and weak stomach, could hardly eat anything my stomach was so weak and easily upset and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery relieved me."

Mistaken Maurice Pivar, the film supervisor, suddenly got that spring urge and began to take a personal interest in his Beverly Hills garden.

It was while he was reflecting that a salesman stopped by and tried to sell him a devil-grass rake.

"Can I work it while I sit here in front of the fireplace?" demanded Pivar.

"Why, of course not, but—" "Then you haven't the ideal rake."

"We forgive as long as we love."

AFTER 40 bowel trouble

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at the time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forbes, a newspaper man, cuts in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of Rhoda McFarland and senses a newspaper story. He believes that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother died, she had been happy until she met the man who later became Professor McFarland, associated with the blow is her uncle, William Joyce. They move to Chicago, where her father is engaged in mysterious work. Rhoda takes up stenography.

The only qualms of panic she ever felt when going about alone on her small excursions to the shops, the library, a near-by movie theater, took the form of a belief that she had seen him or that he was following her. If he was the source of the money they lived on, then it meant that he knew where they lived and that he was, for some reason she couldn't fathom, biding his time. But she was, as a matter of fact, too healthy and happy, even too well occupied, to think about him much.

Really she'd never lacked friends. But her father's often repeated instruction not to tell who they were or where they came from, to answer no personal questions at all, brought it about that most of her friendships were with members of the staff of the hotel, rather than with residents.

There was one exception among the guests: a middle-aged pretty woman who always wore black—a widow, Rhoda supposed. She didn't ask many questions because she was deaf, so deaf that you had to shout to make her hear. She was going to a school where you learned lip-reading so that you could tell what people said by looking at them without hearing their voices at all. The school was downtown in one of the big buildings of the loop, and Mrs. George, whose deafness had come upon her suddenly, hated to venture down into that confusion alone. Her need was a godsend to Rhoda, who volunteered to go with her every morning.

She went into the class with Mrs. George, and having nothing else to do, she sat and watched and learned lip-reading herself. It took Mrs. George three months to learn, but in half that time Rhoda was infallible at it. It made life more amusing. She liked to ride in the elevated and watch people talk down at the end of the car. And when she and her father had dinner in the restaurant, his long preoccupied silences did not leave her restless. She would be sampling conversations from all over the room. It was a real bereavement when Mrs. George left the hotel and went to New York to live.

But the best friendship of those four hotel years didn't begin until after Mrs. George had gone. It was with Miss Bacon, whose rather incredible first name was Florabel, the public stenographer. Rhoda had been saying good morning to her and sometimes stopping beside her desk for a word or two, for months. But in her loneliness after Mrs. George had gone, she formed the habit of making longer visits when she saw Miss Bacon wasn't busy.

Miss Bacon was not, Rhoda perceived, as old as she had thought; her being rather stout and her wearing spectacles made her look so. But she had a jolly young voice and a nice smile. She didn't ask any prying questions. She talked quite a good deal in a nice friendly way, about her own affairs. Probably she was rather lonely herself. Not that she hadn't any relations, but that they didn't do her any good. Her father, it seemed, had had several wives who had died, one after another, and the children didn't like one another very well, and quarreled. Florabel had been the youngest and she'd had a horrible time until she'd managed to learn a trade that made her independent.

Independence was Florabel's sacred word. Everybody, she said, even a girl who was almost sure to get married, ought to have a trade. Then if anything unexpected happened, she'd got something to tie to. "Of course, not if she's rich," she added. "I'm not rich," Rhoda said. "At least I don't think we are. Father expects to be pretty soon. I wish I could learn stenography. I suppose it's awfully hard."

"It's spelling that is most important," Florabel told her. "Can you spell?" "Oh, I think so," Rhoda said. "Spelling isn't hard, is it?" "It was for me, Florabel told her. But Rhoda, as it turned out, was one of those lucky people who simply can't misspell a word that they've ever seen in print.

"I could teach you myself," Florabel volunteered. "I'd like to, first rate. I haven't much to do, hardly ever, in the middle of the morning or in the middle of the afternoon."

There never was a more enthusiastic pupil, and Florabel seemed as excited about it as she was herself. She worked over the preliminary exercises until her hand cramped and then until it came uncramped again. She was determined, at every lesson, to surprise Florabel by how much more she knew—and she never failed. By the end of two months she could write a clean page if she didn't try to go too fast, and she was taking slow dictation that Florabel read not from prepared exercises but out of the newspaper or anywhere. Then one day a client appeared at the desk in the middle of the lesson. Rhoda caught up her notebook and fled, but not very far; only to the nearest sofa. When the man had finished dictating his letters and gone away she went back to Florabel. "Let me see if I can't write them from my notes," she pleaded. "He talked loud enough for me to hear him, all right, and I know I've got everything."

She cried, rather peacefully until, after a while, she heard the nurse coming to tell her. She buried her face in the crook of her arm and lay perfectly still, and the nurse, believing her asleep, went away again, shutting the door after her.

At that, quite suddenly, her mind went to work. What had her father been trying to tell her, in that last flicker of his consciousness? But thinking about that, she decided at last, wouldn't do any good. The fragmentary words worked out to two opposite meanings.

He might, of course, have been telling her to go to Uncle William and that she'd find his address among his papers. But he might have meant that she was to look out for Uncle William and not let him get possession of the papers. And since her uncle was almost as much an ogre to her as he had been four years ago, it was the latter interpretation that she adopted.

What the doctor had said was the thing that frightened her worst. "You're only a little girl!"

That, of course, was nonsense. She was sixteen and lots of people thought she was older than that. She could pass for eighteen, well enough. He'd said that only because he was sorry for her. But sixteen was still a child according to law. You weren't of age until you were eighteen—or was it twenty-one? And if Uncle William knew where she was and learned of her father's death, he'd come and get her, and she wouldn't be able to get away from him. Well then, the only safe thing for her to do was to disappear before he had time to find out what had happened.

Looking back now on those days, after the passage of two years so packed with life that they seemed longer than the four that had preceded them, she wondered that she, a mere child of sixteen, had been able to follow out that resolution so steadily that no one had tried to put an obstacle in her path.

Except for a telegram, purporting to come from Florabel in Denver, which she had slipped out early that morning and dispatched to herself, she had nothing to show anyone as an indication that she had a friend in the world—and the telegram wasn't much good since if you looked at it closely you saw that it hadn't come from Denver at all.

She couldn't have done it, of course, if she had not had plenty of money, and likely enough, not then if the hotel people hadn't been accustomed to her paying the bills. She paid everybody in cash, that morning, and when this was done she had a little over three hundred dollars left, fifteen twenty-dollar bills and a few small ones.

The papers her father had tried to tell her something about had always been kept in a big leather hat trunk that must have been her mother's. She opened it and looked in with the idea of seeing whether her uncle's address was there, but as the trunk was nearly full she decided against going through it. She didn't much want to, anyway. She took it, as it was, along with her own small trunk in a taxi to a convenient railway station. It hadn't mattered much which station except that it had to be one that had a train that went to Denver.

The next day she took her suitcase with her to the funeral and went from the cold little chapel straight back to the station. She spent that night at the Y. W. C. A., where nothing happened except that by inadvertence she picked her new name when she gave her register card to sign she'd begun writing her old one, Rhoda Whitehouse McFarland. Half-way through she'd seen what she was doing and stopped. Well, Rhoda White made a good enough name, and she was glad that she hadn't discarded Rhoda. She'd have felt lonely, deprived of that.

The very next day she found a job and met Babe Jennings. The job was at the News, where Florabel had told her they took girls without experience in the stenographic department and trained them, themselves. If you were good you had a chance to be promoted to be private stenographer or even secretary to one of the executives.

The only technical untruth Rhoda told the employment manager was that her name was Rhoda White.

Her acquaintance with Babe had progressed slowly at first, and it wasn't until she'd been working for the paper six months that the older girl approached her with a proposal that they live together. Babe was excited about an ad she'd taken, of a studio for rent cheap; unbelievably cheap, seventy-five dollars a month. It was really a whole apartment; two bedrooms and a kitchenette, beside the studio itself. Her scheme was that they get two other girls and that the four of them should keep house in it, getting, that is, their own breakfasts and suppers. The other two girls were dancers, members of the corps du ballet of the opera.

They taught her to dance—the other girls had a phonograph—and it became a passion with her. She'd dance with anybody, who could dance well, in a perfect oblivion of delight. She liked her job and wasn't long getting promoted to be special stenographer to one of the younger men on the executive staff. The only imperfection in her whole scheme of life was the little tremor of fear she felt, every now and then, that it was too good to last.

There was to real threat, was there, in Martin Forbes' imaginary discoveries? She didn't know any one named Lewis nor anyone who could be spoken of as "C. J." The only person who could be advertising for her was her uncle. For all she knew he might have been doing it for years; off and on ever since she'd disappeared. None of the girls knew her story, and they wouldn't give her away if they did. (The two dancers were away just now on tour with the opera, so she and Babe had the whole studio to themselves.) She wouldn't risk asking Babe any questions, though, about Martin. How well, she wondered, did

Babe know him? The thing to do now was to go to bed, and to be sound asleep before she came home.

But she was only half undressed up in one of the little bedrooms that had been partitioned off the loft when she heard the click of Babe's key in the studio door. She listened and felt her skin pringle as she thought she recognized the voice of the man who was urging Babe to let him come in for a smoke. Babe was firm about it and sent him away.

Rhoda put on her bathrobe and slippers and came slithering down into the studio.

"Who was that who brought you home?" she asked.

"You ought to know, dearie," Babe told her. "He's your friend, not mine. When he found out I lived with you I couldn't push him off. He brought me home in his runabout, but it was John Alden stuff I was doing all the time, and I knew it."

"Was it Max Lewis?" Rhoda asked. "None other, darling," said Babe. "I had forgotten you had two of them on, tonight."

There was a silence for a moment after that. When Babe spoke again it was in a different manner.

"He asked me one queer thing about you, Red. He asked if your real name wasn't Rhoda McFarland."

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

Wind Vane Insect Trap Used by Entomologists

A new wind vane insect trap devised by entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture is proving useful in determining the source of pest-leaf hopper migrations, the department reports. The source of infestation is known. It may be possible to apply direct control measures before the insects migrate to the sugar beet fields, if the natural breeding area is small. This new trap consists of a light wooden box housing a series of parallel upright screens, connected by a funnel with a jar containing cyanide. A weather vane attached to the box causes it to rotate so that it always faces the wind. The traps are mounted on high poles. Insects flying with the prevailing winds are caught by the screens and carried by air currents down a tube, through the funnel, and into the jar of poison. By examining the jar at regular intervals entomologists can tell which winds bring the insects and the extent of the flight.

Flat Burglary

Martin Forbes told himself firmly as he went to bed that night that he'd had his lesson. Rhoda had treated him not as a friend but as a reporter trying to run down a story. It must be a pretty good story if she was so afraid he'd get it. All right, by golly, he'd be a reporter, and the first thing tomorrow morning he'd go after that story and nail it down.

That maneuver he'd been so proud of at the time—getting rid of Babe Jennings and Max Lewis by introducing them to each other—appeared now as likely to have been a downright idiotic blunder. Babe and Rhoda might inhabit very different spiritual worlds, but wasn't it likely that if Babe knew her well enough to call her Red and get away with it, she'd also know the crude material facts about her—where she lived, where she worked, and so on—which were all that Max Lewis was interested in? And wouldn't Babe spill anything she knew to anybody who was interested in finding it out? Why the devil hadn't he thought of that last night?

Well, it was probably too late to repair the error now. He'd got to get hold of Babe, though, at the earliest possible moment. The more he thought about the possibilities of his blunder the worse they seemed.

Next morning he dressed, bolted his breakfast and was waiting at the foot of the elevated stairs a good quarter of an hour before Babe could be expected to appear.

By the time he'd finished his second cigarette he felt as if he'd been standing there for hours, as if everybody that came along wondered what he was doing there. And then, so surprisingly that he had to blink and shake his head to make sure that his imagination wasn't deceiving him, he saw not Babe, but Rhoda herself coming down the stairs. What would she do when she saw him? Toss her head and walk scornfully by without speaking at all? Or pause to make some other brightening aspersions on his good faith in having tried to help her?

She didn't do either of those things. Her face lighted up at the sight of him, and when she came within reach she held out her hand. "This is an awfully nice way for the day to begin," she said. "I'm sorry I called you a reporter last night."

"I am one," he told her. "Oh, I know you are, but you weren't being one last night. I don't know why I said that. I suppose because I have red hair."

"This is turning out a much better day than I thought it could," he observed. "I wish I'd known last night that this was going to happen. How did it happen? Do you often come down these stairs about this time? Have you got a job near here?"

"The door's about fifty feet away," she told him. "I've worked for the News for two years."

"Look here," he demanded, when he'd digested this fact, "did you know who I was all along—last night, I mean?"

"I thought it might be you. I wasn't sure, though, till Babe called you Marty."

"Honest?"

"Honest."

She answered him quite simply, not seeming surprised at his pressing so minute a point. He didn't quite know himself why it was so important, but it was.

"Well," he said, "we've got a lot of lost time to make up for. If I'll agree not to talk about anything you don't want to talk about, will you have dinner with me tonight?"

"Yes," she said, "but I'll tell you what I'd rather do if you'd just as leave. I'd rather you came to supper at the studio. Give me a pencil and a piece of your newspaper, and I'll write down the address."

He'd have asked her what sort of studio it was if she hadn't glanced up as she handed back his paper and pencil and exclaimed, "There comes Babe! It must be getting late."

The cost of the plant ills of this country is estimated at a billion and a half dollars. If it were not for their attacks the wheat crop would be 97,000,000 bushels greater, and the corn borer and other pests account for 271,000,000 bushels of corn. Canada's loss amounts to about $45,000,000.

THOUSAND DISASTERS RECEIVED RED CROSS AID IN 50 YEARS

American Society to Celebrate Its Birth Year With Nationwide Observance

Tornadoes, floods, forest fires and other calamities and upheavals of nature have visited the United States more than one thousand times in the last half century.

All of these were of severe intensity, causing loss of life and great property damage. Minor catastrophes were not counted in this list of disasters, which has been made public by the American Red Cross, in connection with the celebration this year of its fiftieth birthday.

It was on the evening of May 21, 1851, in the modest home of Miss Clara Barton in Washington, D. C., that the American Association of the Red Cross was first formed. Before the year was out, and before, indeed, the United States Government had officially moved to approve the Treaty of Geneva, adding this nation to the company of thirty-two others adhering to the treaty to protect wounded in warfare, Miss Barton had planned the small society into a disaster relief task.

First Red Cross Unit

This was in the north woods of Michigan, where forest fires swept the homestead farms of pioneering families. Miss Barton, as president of the Red Cross, had organized a branch in Danville, New York, where she was sojourning. This little group immediately raised money, food, clothing and other supplies and sent them to the forest fire victims. In Rochester and Syracuse, New York, nearby, word spread of this charitable enterprise, and Red Cross auxiliaries were organized there to help. So began the disaster relief work of the Red Cross fifty years ago. In the intervening years, millions of men, women and children have been aided. Thousands of homes have been restored. Thousands of persons, overwhelmed by floods, tornadoes, and fires until all they possessed had been wiped away, have been rehabilitated and prosperity and happiness again smiled upon them.

This year has been dedicated by the Red Cross and its chapters in 3,500 communities to commemoration of the events which led to the birth of the society in the United States.

President Hoover Speaks

The celebration of the anniversary was inaugurated in Washington at a dinner, attended by many distinguished men and women, at which Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes presided, and President Hoover, who is the president of the American Red Cross, was the chief speaker. Judge Max Huber of Geneva, Switzerland, the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross, in which fifty-seven nations are joined in a Red Cross brotherhood, also was a speaker, as were Chairman John Barton Payne of the American Red Cross, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary, and veteran leader of the society.

The Red Cross standard, which flies all around the world where mercy is needed, was first introduced as an ideal in our modern civilization in Geneva in 1864, when the International Red Cross convention, afterward to be known as the Treaty of Geneva, was signed by twelve countries agreeing that on the battlefield the wounded should be given aid by doctors, nurses and others, who should wear the sign of the Red Cross, and be treated as neutrals in the warfare.

Two Americans attended this first convention, the American Minister George C. Fogg, and Charles S. P. Bowles, representative in Europe of the United States Sanitary Commission, a volunteer organization of sympathizers with the North in our Civil War. Facts they gave resulted in adoption of some of the American ideas.

Returning to the United States, Fogg and Bowles sought recognition of the Geneva Treaty, but the Grant administration took no interest. Under Hayes' the same lethargy was encountered.

Clara Barton Founder

But there had emerged from the Civil War period a middle-aged woman who had seen much service on the battlefields around Washington. This was Clara Barton. Ill health caused her to make a trip to Europe in 1869. There she became interested in the Red Cross idea, and joined a unit which saw service in the Franco-Prussian war. Upon her return home, she launched an active campaign for the treaty, but met the same opposition as her predecessors. However, President Garfield, when he came into office, recognized the merits of the movement, and when death by assassination removed him, his successor, President Arthur, sought approval by the U. S. Senate of the treaty. Thus was consummated a seventeen-year fight in this nation for a humanitarian ideal. Clara Barton was recognized as the society's founder and was its president for twenty-three years. She died in 1912 at the age of 90 years.

It is not generally thought of, but the flag so familiar in every civilized nation as the emblem of the Red Cross, had a simple derivation. Because the originator of the movement, Henri Dunant, was a Swiss, and the first treaty to protect wounded in battle was drafted and signed in Switzerland, the flag of that Republic—a white cross upon a red background—was reversed, and the Red Cross came into being.

Eskimo Music

The Eskimo are very fond of music. Their native music consists chiefly of songs, chants and melodies, many of which possess considerable musical rhythm. Although the tunes to which they are sung are very crude, they can be traced to keynotes. The melodies especially are said to be very pleasing and a number of them have been published with corresponding music.

Highest Paid Short Fiction Writer

FANNIE HURST is the highest paid short story writer in the world today. There's a good reason for that. She knows human nature and under the magic of her touch, the people about whom she writes become real people, not mere literary creations. The plots of her stories are based on incidents from real life as it is lived every day by the common people.

Such are the stories which are appearing in this newspaper. Be sure to read them and talk to your friends about them, for they like interesting stories, too. And Fannie Hurst's stories are interesting stories.

FARM REAL ESTATE AT LOW POINT

Land values as reported by crop reporters for March of the present year were apparently close to prewar values in Wisconsin. According to the reports tabulated by the crop reporting service of the Wisconsin and United States departments of agriculture at Madison, the value of land as given by Wisconsin crop correspondents was only 4 per cent above the average prevailing from 1912 to 1914.

For the United States the average this year is given as being only 6 per cent above the prewar period. In Wisconsin land values did not rise as high during the war as in some other neighboring states and accordingly they have not had to decline so far. In Iowa where land values rose to very high levels they are now reported as being 28 per cent under the prewar average.

A slump in farm real estate values in virtually all states during the year ended March 1, 1931, carried average values to new lows since the post-war agricultural depression, 9 points below the index of last year, or about 8 per cent below the last years average, according to the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture. The index for the year 1920 was 170 per cent of prewar, and in 1925 it was 127 per cent. For Wisconsin the high point reached in the index 171 in 1920 from which level values have declined to 104.

The bureau says that the combination of low prices, drought, world depression and an already congested farm real-estate market, was followed and accompanied by a widespread and substantial tendency toward a writing down of the value of farm lands. The index of wholesale prices of all commodities during this period dropped from 133 in March 1930 to 109 in March 1931.

Largest declines in real estate values were registered during the year in the South Central, North Central, and South Atlantic States. Small decreases are reported for the New England, Mountain and Pacific States. The indexes of value in the East South Central States as a group average 117 compared with 128 a year ago; West South Central 121 compared with 136 a year ago; East North Central 87 compared with 96 last year; West North Central, 97 compared with Atlantic States, 116 compared with 128.

CHILD STRANGLER BY ROPE

Authorities were puzzled here Saturday night as to how Norman Irlweg, 11, had strangled himself to death in a knotted rope hanging in the basement of his father's home. The boy was found dead, in a kneeling position, about 7:30 p. m. The rope that had strangled him had once supported a punching bag near a post and the boy's father, Frank, said that the rope had been looped loosely with a slip knot. The boy was quite active and it was believed that he ran downstairs and in some way plunged his head through the loop, probably striking the post at the same time with his head and stunning himself so that he could not get out of the noose—Cedarburg News.

CARD OF THANKS

I, the undersigned wish to thank all my neighbors, relatives and friends for the kind sympathy shown me in my late bereavement, the death of my beloved wife, Mrs. Wm. Olwin. With the Wisconsin Legislature

Green Bay—The $25,000 statue, "Spirit of the Northwest," by Sidney Bidwell, Green Bay sculptor, will be dedicated on June 10.

Portage—Mrs. Leonard Heim, 24, was burned to death when an oil stove exploded at her farm home near Friesland. The Heim farmhouse was destroyed.

Racine—Effecting a saving of $10,000 in salaries alone, the board of education at a special meeting discontinued summer school sessions in public schools.

Eau Claire—Rev. Philip Schneider, Appleton, was re-elected state superintendent of the Wisconsin Conference of the Evangelical church at the 75th annual meeting here.

Wisconsin Rapids—George Goehler, Jr., 16, and Leo Webb, 11, both of Wisconsin Rapids, drowned in Lake Koshong, south of here, when the skiff in which they were rowing overturned.

Stevens Point—John Schwartz, aged 4, was burned to death when he entered the blazing barn of his father's farm near here in an attempt to save some pet kittens that he believed were marooned in the hay loft.

Kenosha—After a week's experimenting with daylight saving time, Kenosha on May 18, a referendum in the public schools showed parents of the school children stood 3 to 2 against the early hour schedules.

Fond du Lac—Alton Balthazor, 27, who shot and killed his sweetheart, Ruth Smith of Curtiss, was found guilty of second degree murder by a circuit court jury here. The charge carries a sentence of 14 to 25 years.

Madison—Wisconsin shipments of dairy cattle to other states and countries in April were 30 per cent below those of April, 1930. Total exports for the month were 3,781 head as compared with 5,050 in April, 1930.

Rhineland—R. I. Hooper, former treasurer of the town of Schoepke, Oneida county, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $15,129.70 of the town's funds. Hooper was removed from office last January after his books were audited by a representative of the state tax commission.

Wautoma—Fire in the principal business block here did $50,000 damage. The Wautoma Publishing Co., owner of the building, and the Lowe-Bemis Furniture Co. were the heaviest losers. The presses and other heavy equipment of the newspaper plant tumbled from the second floor into the basement.

Stevens Point—Fire destroyed the factory and three warehouses of the Folding Furniture Works, Inc., and menaced nearby property, including the Stevens Point gas works. The furniture factory loss, owners estimate, will exceed $100,000, while the roof of the gas plant, burned in many places by embers, will have to be replaced.

Madison—Sterling A. Leonard, 43, associate professor of English at the University of Wisconsin, drowned in Lake Mendota here after clinging two hours to an overturned canoe. His companion, I. A. Richards, professor at Cambridge University, England, was rescued. Richards, here for a lecture, went canoeing with Leonard. The lake was rough and the craft capsized.

Madison—Paul Rathie, Chippewa Falls attorney, was held for trial, June 8, on a charge of attempted bribery in connection with public utility bills before the senate, after his preliminary examination here. The charge is based on Senator P. J. Smith's claim that Rathie, during a conversation in Smith's hotel room Feb. 4, offered to help the senator get a better salary if certain utility bills were handled right in the senate.

Madison—A drive to force payment of delinquent taxes is urged on all counties by Edward Kelly, chairman of the state tax commission. He pointed out that authority to enforce payment rests with the county sheriff and treasurer and that stringent measures should be taken to collect from those able to pay. In Milwaukee and Dane counties the authorities have brought many delinquents to time by threatening to seize personal property and attach bank accounts.

Burlington—Three masked bandits robbed the Meinhardt bank here of about $5,000 in currency and escaped in a volley of shotgun fire aimed at their car by Police Captain Schenning. A few hours later, Reinhold Fleucker, Burlington saloon keeper, and Frank Kamin of Silver Lake were captured in a lake cottage near here and charged with the robbery. Kamin was suffering from several wounds in the back of his head and was in a critical condition. Miss Eda Meinhardt, the bank cashier, entered the building while the robbers were at work, but ignored commands of the bandits and ran to the street, giving the alarm.

Madison—Receipts from the two-cent gasoline tax during March, the last month of its existence, were $702,962.45, according to figures released by State Treasurer Levitan. The figure represents an increase of $143,854.37 over receipts during the corresponding period last year.

Fond du Lac—H. R. Potter, 60, president of the Commercial National bank, is dead. He was treasurer of the board of trustees of the Episcopal diocese of Fond du Lac and a past chancellor of the state Knights of Pythias.

Stevens Point—Harry Hewett, 64, Wisconsin's first deputy state prohibition commissioner under the Severson law, died in his sleep here. He was a former sheriff of Portage county, Stevens Point police chief and state assemblyman.

Monroe—Billy Sunday, noted evangelist, will speak at the first Sunday session of the Green county fair in August. Local ministers opposed having the fair extended through Sunday and Rev. Sunday was engaged to give the exhibition a religious aspect.

DOUMER IS ELECTED FRANCE'S PRESIDENT

Briand Resigns as Foreign Minister After Defeat.

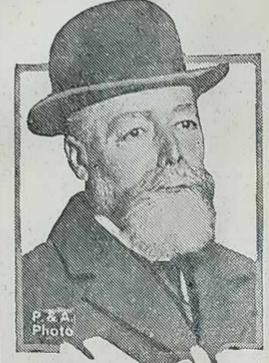

Paris.—Aristide Briand, defeated in the recent Presidential election, immediately offered his resignation as foreign minister, a post he has held for seven years, but Premier Laval and his other colleagues in the cabinet, persuaded him to remain in that important office at least until his immediate tasks at Geneva are completed.

The cabinet decided that he should go to Geneva for a meeting of the committee on European federation, as he had planned to do before the election.

When Briand left the Quai D'Orsay, where the cabinet met, he confirmed the report of his resignation, adding "they refused to accept it," but indicating that the resignation still stood.

Premier Laval's attitude was that the Presidential vote in no way affected the French foreign policy, which has been frequently ratified by parliament. It was believed he would request Briand to remain in the government at least until June 13, when, according to custom, the cabinet of an outgoing President presents its resignation to the incoming official.

The Parisian press generally rejoiced at the selection of M. Doumer. There were a few exceptions, such as the Paul Doumer.

Socialist organ, Populaire, which called him "the candidate of reaction and treachery."

The Petit Parisien, widely circulated and the representative of the views of the average Frenchman, saluted Doumer as a man whose humble origin and long career in the service of the republic were placed in striking evidence by the homage paid him.

Geneva dispatches, commenting upon the defeat of Aristide Briand for the French Presidency, indicated a hope that he would continue in the foreign office where his efforts in behalf of the League of Nations and world peace would still be felt.

Berlin newspapers generally regretted his defeat and the Tageblatt commented: "May 13 must now be reckoned as a black day for French politics." Vossische Zeitung declared that his defeat was caused by petty parliamentary distrustful of a man of his caliber, who is rare in post-war Europe.

"There is no one in Europe to succeed him," the Zeitung added. "Should he make good his word and resign as foreign minister the loss would be irreparable and not to France alone."

Paul Doumer, seventy-four-year-old President of the French senate, was elected President of the republic by the national assembly, sitting in the hall of congress in the Palace of Versailles.

Victory came to him on the second ballot, when he received 504 votes, or 55 votes above the absolute majority of the membership of the assembly required to elect. Pierre Merraud, senator from the department of Lot-et-Garonne, was runner-up with 333 votes.

Aristide Briand, who was Senator Doumer's real rival, was eliminated on the first ballot and withdrew his supporters, switching to Senator Marraud in a vain effort to block the veteran president of the senate. It was on this first ballot that M. Briand suffered the greatest personal defeat of his long career.

Dr. Michelson, Scientist, Dies at Age of 78 Years

Pasadena, Calif.—Dr. Albert A. Michelson of Chicago, one of the greatest scientists of modern times and famed for his determination of the speed of light, died here. He was seventy-eight years old.

Doctor Michelson was one of the three greatest names in physics. Distinguished scientific societies in all parts of the world recognized his genius as being on a par with that of Sir Isaac Newton, formulator of the laws of gravity, and Albert Einstein, propounder of the theory of relativity.

SAVE $20,000,000 OF U. S. DROUGHT FUND

Allowances Total $47,500,000 of $67,000,000 Appropriated.

Washington.—Virtual completion of the government's drought relief program was announced by President Hoover the past week.

The announcement followed receipt of a report from Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, showing that loans of $47,500,000 had been made or were projected on the basis of applications in hand. Requests for loans were not as heavy as had been anticipated when congress approved appropriations for the emergency and the applications now have rapidly thinned.

As a result the federal treasury stands to save almost $20,000,000. Appropriations for drought loans amounted to $67,000,000, the President pointed out.

"Of the $10,000,000 allocated to assist agricultural credit corporations, only $471,000 has been called for," the President stated, adding:

"Of the $45,000,000 appropriated for feed and fertilizer loans, $39,000,000 has been called for. Of the $10,000,000 allocated for agriculture rehabilitation, about $5,140,000 has been loaned. Of the $2,000,000 reappropriated from a former fund applicable to the southeastern states, about $1,500,000 has been loaned."

Of the loans for agricultural credit corporations, Texas absorbed the most, but the total there was only $75,300. Arkansas, which was the state hardest hit by the drought, took $7,621,471 in individual loans for seeds and fertilizers. A total of 51,453 loans were made in this single state. In Mississippi 21,635 individuals received $3,729,707. Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Texas and Virginia were other states in which very large numbers of people secured similar aid.

Of the government loans for agricultural rehabilitation Arkansas again took a major share, with 25,528 persons receiving $1,562,290. The reappropriations of former seed loan balances in southeastern states went to benefit Alabama, Florida, Georgia, and North and South Carolina.

Ohio State, Wisconsin Are Leaders on Track

Chicago.—Ohio State's strength in track events and Wisconsin's power in field events promise to make those two schools favorites in the battle for the Big Ten track and field championship at Evanston May 22 and 23.

Ohio State captured 15 out of a possible 32 places in the running events in a recent quadrangular meet here and nosed out Wisconsin by 1-3 points. Ohio State scored 74 1/2 points. Wisconsin 73 7-16, Chicago 15 and Northwestern 13 1-3. Wisconsin won 17 out of a possible 28 places in the field events, taking all four places in the shot put.

Indiana became a contender by nosing out Illinois in a triangular meet at Bloomington, 80 2-3 to 76 1-3. Purdue scored only 13 points.

Michigan joined the select group by defeating Minnesota in a dual meet at Ann Arbor, 80 1/2 to 49 1/2.

Spain Seizes All Wealth of Former King Alfonso

Madrid.—The banks of Spain were ordered by the republican government to turn over to the minister of finance, Indalecio Prieto, all funds credited to Alfonso de Bourbon, the deposed king, who at present is in exile in Paris.

The Banco de Espana was empowered to take charge temporarily of all personal property of the former monarch and to create a special account for accruing rents until the forthcoming constitutional convention decides what to do with the money.

Consuls and representatives of the republic abroad were ordered to make a report on Alfonso's investments and properties in other countries, the government decree charging that Alfonso had not been king since 1923, when he permitted Gen. Primo de Rivera to become dictator, and that he misused his royal office for his personal enrichment.

Simultaneously the government announced that full authority to check disorders which have culminated in the burning of scores of churches and church buildings and been given to Miguel Maura, minister of the interior.

American Golden Gloves Team Beats French Boys

Chicago.—In the greatest amateur boxing program ever produced, the American Golden Gloves team, a composite of the Chicago and New York squads, defeated the champions of France, five bouts to three.

The fights were held before 40,000 spectators on Soldiers' field. The crowd was the greatest ever to witness amateur boxing in America.

The Chicago boys scored victories and two were by the New York members of the American team.

None of the bouts went beyond the scheduled three rounds. I had been provided that, in case of a draw at the end of three rounds, an extra round was to have been fought.

The American team was trained to the minute and in skill and hitting power exhibited a marked superiority over their foreign rivals in the majority of the bouts.

Immigration to States Is Lowest Since 1862

New York.—Immigration to the United States this year will be the lowest since 1862—lower even than the bottom mark established in the war year of 1918, it was learned here. Officials of the immigration bureau said that according to the present steep decline of alien immigrants entering this country, fewer than 100,000 will be admitted during the year, or 10,000 less than were admitted in the lowest war year.

Invite Hoover to Open Games

Washington.—President Hoover has been invited to attend the opening of the Olympic winter games of 1932 to be held at Lake Placid, N. Y., beginning February 4 next.

Philadelphia.—Max Schmeling will train at Conneaut Lake, Pa., for his bout with Young Stribling at Cleveland on July 3, when he will defend his world heavyweight title, it was disclosed here.

U. S. BUILDING PLANS TOTAL $429,604,364

Largest Program at One Time in History of Country.

Washington.—The federal public building program now under way covers projects involving the huge total expenditure of $429,604,364, it was disclosed in White House figures.

Accelerated since fall by the desire of the administration to contribute to relief in the unemployment situation, the program is probably the largest ever proceeding at one time under the federal government. Liberal appropriations by congress are helping to speed it.

The figures were gathered for President Hoover, who has taken a special interest in the progress of public works. On a great bulk of the 707 projects involved, located in every part of the Union and the District of Columbia, actual construction has not yet begun. Sites have been acquired in most instances, however, and plans are being rapidly completed.

This status of a large part of the program makes it likely that more men will be employed later this year than are now engaged on the program, although already a high point in labor employment on public works has been reached.

The building projects for the country as a whole at the present time are in five different stages.

Sites have been acquired, contracts let either in whole or in part, and construction is in progress for 150 projects, total limits of cost for land and building to be $120,213,900.

Plans have been completed for 56 projects, total limits of cost for land and building to be $20,987,000. Specifications are now being prepared for approximately half of this number, and the remaining projects are on the market for construction bids.

Sites have been acquired for 100 building projects and plans for them are partially completed, total limits of cost for land and building to be $102,173,723.

Sites for 115 projects have been determined and have recently been acquired or are in course of negotiation or condemnation, total limits of cost for land and building to be $50,621,941.

Some 196 projects have been specifically authorized by congress and the sites are in the process of selection. They will cost $46,404,800.

Building permits issued in 581 leading cities and towns throughout the United States during April totaled $171,346,394, a gain of 7 per cent over March, according to official reports. The increase compares favorably with an anticipated seasonal decline of 2.7 per cent between the two months. It is pointed out. April permits fell off 16 per cent from the same month of 1930, when the total was $205,543,923.

In the 25 cities reporting the largest volume of permits for the month, a collective gain of 13 per cent over April, 1930, and 8 per cent over March, 1931, was reported.

BORROW COSTERMONGERS LATEST STYLE IN SPORTS

THREE hundred buttons! And all of them used to trim a single costume. Yes, that's how high enthusiasm is running, this season, in regard to buttons as a style theme, especially in the realm of sports clothes where some of the frocks and pajama ensembles have, so to speak, buttons all over 'em."

If you follow the ways of fashion as the summer advances you will be impressed more and more with the importance of ocean pearl buttons, buckles, slides and novel fastenings as a trimming feature.

As to the muchly-be-buttoned spectator sports suit which we started to tell about, see it pictured herewith. Buttons to the number of three hundred outline the edge and armholes of the bolero jacket and form gleaming military stripes from the hipline to the bottom of the skirt.

The story of how this smart "costermonger suit," as it is called, came to be, is interesting. For generations (far back in history) London costermongers (sellers of various wares) have attended the Derby day events wearing costumes covered with ocean pearl buttons. This curious custom gave an American designer an idea and he made up a spectator suit which you will agree is at once novel, attractive and wearable. The model as illustrated is fashioned of bright quality-kind red flannel, but in any preferred color it would be stunning.

Another costume suggested for a model vacation wardrobe is the new beach pajama of white linen, the wide trousers striped down the sides with red pearl buttons with the jacket sleeves striped with pearl buttons to match. A suit for town wear in red and tan with tiny red pearl buttons lavished on the jacket-cape is also a thought well worth entertaining.

Sports frocks of linen, cotton, ratine, pique and stanting, as well as afternoon and garden frocks of dotted swiss, embroidered batiste and cotton net are all making use of pearl buttons and buckles, with emphasis placed on decorative treatments.

The idea of pearl buttons being matched to the dominant color in the costume is an intriguing one. For instance many of the little transparent ocean pearl fastenings in unusual designs, these tuned to the delectable tones and tints of the wrap such as clerybloom pink, buddha blue, bamboo tan, lantern glow yellow, oriental red and pagoda green.

Harry Gill, Outdoor Track and Field Pilot, Is Back at University of Illinois

The fellow who long ago formed the habit of developing a Big Ten outdoor track and field championship team at a rate of one about every two years back at the University of Illinois, Harry Gill has come back to his old job of teaching hitch-kicks, rolling-arts, double-turns and Osborn-rolls to the boys who wear the long blue stripe diagonally across the front of their track shirts.

Triumphant track teams have been the rule since Gill became coach at the Illinois in 1904. In the Big Ten, where the class of competition annually rates as strong as in any section of the country, Gill's teams have won eleven outdoor championships over the twenty-five-year period. Illinois during the same period has chalked up more than 100 dual meet victories and less than twenty losses.

The parade of Illinois champions has been replenished with colorful performers. In the last decade there have been Dewey Alberts, Harold Osborn, Russ Wharton, Dean Brownell, Doug Fessenden, Dan Kinsey, Chuck Werner, Jack Sittig, Dave Abbott and a host of others, including Verne McDermont and Lee Sentman of the current Gill team. All have been champions in intercollegiate circles and many have topped brilliant international fields in Olympic competition.

The raised seams on the 1931 baseball will help National league pitching, in the opinion of Bill McKechnie, Boston manager, who says:

"The curve ball rules the National league roost today. It is no exaggeration to say that 95 per cent of the batters in our league are fast-ball hitters."

Several amateur baseball teams have been organized in Australia, and the game is reported to be popular there.

Japan has its eyes on the Olympic meet which is to be held in 1940. The movement was launched at Tokio in sports circles and has the backing of the hotel and other business interests as well as the Tokio municipality.

One principal obstacle, as the Japan Athletic Sports league fully realizes, is the long distance to be traveled by the participants and the enormous expense funds required.

In view of this fact, the officials of

Present-Day Oil Has Been Aging for Many Years

Did you ever stop to think that the motor oil you order so casually poured into the crankcase for lubricating the family car's engine may be derived from petroleum that was molting in the earth more than 100,000,000 years before present-day civilization found a way to utilize it?

"Petroleum products are among the oldest natural commodities in the world that man uses today," says a bulletin issued by the American Research Foundation. "Crude oil was being stored away in the ground dim eons ago in the Paleozoic era, which scientists estimate began at least 150,000,000 years ago."

Gilbert Is Reliable

Playing only his second season with the big leagues, Wally Gilbert, the Brooklyn third baseman, has already gained the enviable title of "The Old Reliable." Strong, supple, quiet, dependable, a good fielder and a 300 hitter, this young man makes but few spectacular plays or home runs, but he does his regular stuff day by day over the 150-game route and always puts up a good game.

Worn-Out Automobiles Seen as Menace and Should Be Scrapped as Protection

Driving an automobile that is not in perfect mechanical condition, either through defect in its equipment or wear and tear in its parts, is a danger to life and limb, the Chicago safety council warns. Yet, thousands of cars are driven on the streets and highways daily with defective brakes, faulty steering mechanisms and other defects, while hundreds of others are in such a worn out and dilapidated condition that proper maintenance is impossible and should be eliminated from the highway and scrapped for the protection of the driver of such a vehicle and the general public.

The manufacturers of motor vehicles are giving more and more attention to the building into their products of the safety factor, and the best engineering thought and skill is being directed to the development and improvement of the mechanical features of the motor car. The development of the four wheel brake and other mechanical improvements, which have been made in recent years, has given the driver greater control over the movement of his vehicle, but proper maintenance is essential to keep the vehicle in safe operating condition.

From surveys made in various parts of the country on the causes of accidents, it is generally agreed that vehicular defects are an important or contributing factor in at least fifteen per cent of all fatal motor vehicle accidents. In a report on this subject the Chicago safety council states:

"Defective brakes are outstanding among the causes of fatal accidents resulting from faulty equipment. From 45 to 50 per cent of accidents resulting from faulty equipment are due to bad brakes. In a number of the eastern states where vehicle inspection campaigns have been conducted, from 25 to 28 per cent of the vehicles examined have been found to have faulty brakes."

My Greatest Thrill in Sport

By FRANK KRAMER

For Many Years World's Champion Bicycle Racer

Thrills are a daily occurrence in sport life, and it's rather hard to define one as the greatest of all. However, the following stands out as perhaps the best of all those experienced in my long career:

In June, 1905, Trainer Jack Neville accompanied me to Paris, where I was booked to represent America in the annual Grand Prix bike race.

Other countries had entered their best pedal men. The distance was one mile, with heat, semi-final and final to be run on Sunday, Thursday and Sunday, respectively. This annual classic is sponsored by the city of Paris and the proceeds are donated to charity. A cash prize of 5,000 francs (approximately $1,000) is awarded the winner.

As we lined up for the initial heat I glanced over the field of my competitors. Here were numerous crack bike riders, all foreign to me, each of whom had won prominence in his native land. They all appeared in perfect trim. My best efforts would be called into play here, even to survive the heat. Truly, though, I felt confident and very much determined to win.

To make a long story short, I survived the heat and entered the semi-final with an extra supply of confidence. Here, again, fortune favored me, and, with Amiel Froid of France, and Henry Myer, of Germany, two of the world's fastest pedal men, I earned the right to compete for the grand final prize.

During the elapsed hours between Thursday and Sunday Trainer Neville paid the strictest possible attention to my physical welfare. Condition is a large factor in any branch of sport, and no one appreciates this more than Jack Neville, who, incidentally, still ranks on top of his profession.

Off to a flying start in the final, the three of us raced along as though our very lives depended on the outcome. The Frenchman first cut a bare lead; then the German; then myself. Not far from the finish I sprinted and dashed triumphantly across the tape.

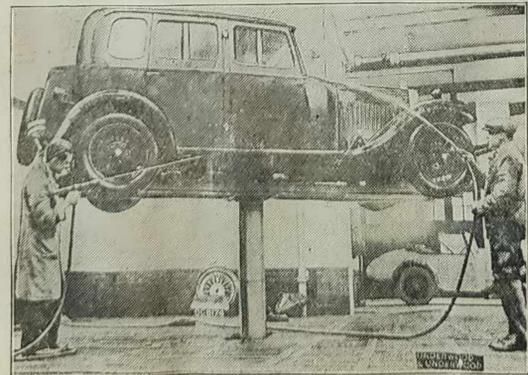

The French people received my victory with wonderful sportsmanship. They treated me like a hero and gave huge receptions in celebration.

Seven years later while visiting the French capital, I was honored next to Georges Carpentier in a sport popularity contest.

These combined incidents afforded me my greatest thrill in sport.

WASHING AND GREASING AUTOMOBILES

An ingenious method of speeding up the washing and greasing of autos, first introduced in the United States, has been adopted at a Birmingham (Eng.) garage. A steel tube operated by compressed air bodily lifts the car into the air while water is forced by the same means over every part of the vehicle, the mud being washed into a container sunk below the level of the concrete floor. An average of an hour and a half is saved by this method—the afterwork of greasing being so greatly facilitated by the position of the car.

MANY EXHIBITS AT EXPERIMENT STATION DAY AT MADISON JUNE 6th.

When farmers and their families attend the Experiment Station Day, at Madison, June 6th, many interesting exhibits showing recent findings in research will be ready for their inspection and study.

Something of interest and value for most everyone will be included among the exhibits and demonstrations on the day's program.

On the subject of livestock, displays will show how stunted growth in calves can be prevented; what minerals are needed by dairy cows and pigs; how anemia, that silent foe of young suckling pigs, can be prevented or cured; and how self-feeding of pigs compares with hand-feeding. Pigs from about a dozen litters from different parts of the state will be found in adjoining pens to show the difference in strains or families of swine. Methods of saving time in the feeding of beef cattle will be shown.

New developments in the feeding of livestock as well as in human nutrition will be shown. Displays will also include other subjects as poultry, dairy husbandry, and sheep.

While the men of the family are learning about the newest things in farming, the women will have an opportunity to hear and see a number of interesting talks and demonstrations on everyday problems of home-making. The members of the home economics staff and the students will be "at home" to visitors that day.

During the morning, there will be exhibitions at the home economic building of new and practical ways of preparing vegetables, of egg cooking for the young child, and of animal feeding experiments showing the value of an adequate diet. For those interested in handicrafts, there will be an exhibition of weaving and other crafts.

The university nursery school on the ground floor of the home economics practice cottage will be open to station day visitors during the morning. Here will be a display of meals for the pre-school child, children's clothing, toys for children, and children's art.

Homemakers are sure to pick up any helpful new ideas during the afternoon program which is to be held in the auditorium of the home economics building. For this, the students in home economics are planning demonstrations of simple tests for use in buying household equipment, helpful hints in selecting fabrics, care of the two-months old baby, hints for home decoration, and a style show.

Women visitors will have a chance to become better acquainted with each other and with the home economics staff over a cup of tea which the home economics people will serve to them at the conclusion of the afternoon program.

WAUCOUSTA

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Backhaus of Auburn visited relatives here Thursday.

Miss Carrie Buslaff of Fond du Lac is spending a week's vacation at her home here.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Almon Buslaff Tuesday, May 12th. Congratulations.

Men in all ways are better than they seem. They like flattery for the moment, but they know the truth for their own. It is a foolish cowardice which keeps us from trusting them, and speaking to them rude truth.—Emerson.

One Penalty of Success
A successful man is one who is quoted on subjects he doesn't know anything about.—San Francisco Chronicle.

WHAT is NEWS of the DAY?

Mr. Average Citizen seldom pauses to define what constitutes the "news of the day"—but he is always interested in his home town newspaper and reads the news columns and the advertising displays with equal zest. Being human, his attention is always attracted by pictures and illustrations—even as you, Mr. Merchant, have been attracted by this.

Our service to advertisers using the columns of this newspaper or our print shop department, includes supplying seasonal pictures or cuts—no matter what the business may be—and without extra charge. Our Spring Art Service is now complete and we are anxious to assist you in layout, copy and supplying your first class illustrations to make your display more attractive. Call us in today.

Nobody Loves a Policeman!

That's an old saying but it isn't true any more. At least, it hasn't been true since F. O. Alexander added "Finney of the Force" to the list of famous comic strip characters. For "Finney", with his twinkling humor and his shrewd comment on people and the common everyday events of life, is a lovable character, as thousands of newspaper readers who have followed him through his various adventures will testify.

"Finney of the Force" is a regular feature in this newspaper with whom our subscribers are acquainted, and all enjoy him. Then tell your friends about him, for they will enjoy him as much as you do.
