BASE BALL NEXT SUNDAY

FIELD TRIALS A BIG SUCCESS

The annual field trials of the Wisconsin Beagle club, which were held here this week, will end today (Friday). The trials this year were the largest and most successful ones held in the history of the club, owners of these valuable dogs came here from far and near. The annual event opened with a dog show on Sunday afternoon at Joe Eberle's place in which dogs were entered offering keen competition, making it rather hard for the judges to decide the winners. This competition becomes keener each year which is just what the members of the club want to see, for it spells success in the way of raising a better grade of valuable beagle hounds, answering the purpose for which these annual field events are being held. The prize winners on Sunday afternoon are as follows:

- 13-inch dog—Masterly Ringman, E. A. Kopp of Johnson Creek owner.
- Puppy Bitches—Eberle's Babe, Jos. Eberle of Kewaskum, owner.
- 13-inch bitches—Kishwaukee Cricket, R. B. Cole of Saukville, owner.
- 15-inch dog—Kishwaukee Workman R. B. Cole of Saukville, owner.
- 15-inch Bitches—Interlaken Russett, S. D. Fell of Oshkosh, owner.
- Best beagle in show—Interlaken Russett, S. D. Fell of Oshkosh.

The field trials which began Monday morning and which will end today (Friday) have also been very successful and hard to judge. All told the members present at this annual event were well satisfied with the outcome of it and the cordial hospitality extended to them while in our midst. The trials will again be held here next year.

—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ramthun and Mrs. Carl Backhaus and Mrs. William Ramthun spent Sunday with the former's son Harvey at the Milwaukee Hospital. Harvey, who was operated upon for the removal of his appendix, is getting along nicely and expects to return home the latter part of this week.

ROBBERS BEAT TWO VICTIMS IN FARM HOLD-UP

Four youthful bandits who beat two brothers into unconsciousness after robbing them of approximately $45 in cash in a hold-up at their farm home, two and one-half miles north of St. Kilian, are being sought by the sheriff's department.

The holdup occurred at the Henry Wagner farm. Although it took place at 9:30 p. m., Tuesday it was not reported until Wednesday and a sheriff's deputy did not investigate until Wednesday afternoon, residents of the neighborhood reported.

Four men in a large touring car drove into the Wagner yard about 9:30 p. m., it was reported. One of the men alighted and asked Henry Wagner, who was in the yard, the route to Lomira. While Wagner was showing him the direction the man drew a revolver and ordered him to put up his hands. The other three men, all of them masked, joined their companion and demanded that Wagner tell where his money was hidden. They tied his hands behind him and took him into the house, where they encountered his brother John, who had come down from upstairs. John Wagner resisted but was overpowered and tied up.

After pressing their demands with threats of violence the bandits finally were told where the money was hidden. Henry Wagner told them that it was in two wallets but begged them not to take some papers, because they would be valueless to the bandits. The robbers found about $45 in cash in one of the wallets. They did not examine the other.

Before leaving the bandits knocked both men unconscious, it is said. Henry Wagner was hit on the head, while his brother was struck twice and his eyes blackened. A sister of the two men who was in the home at the time of the hold-up was not molested and she later freed her brothers. The Wagner brothers said that all the bandits were young and neatly dressed.

Last week Friday night, burglars broke into Simon Strachota's store at St. Kilian and emptied both registers of small change amounting to about $17.00. They gained entrance to the building by breaking through the rear basement window.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Brunner of Maywood, Ill., and Mrs. P. O'Malley and daughter Shirley of Milwaukee spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. John Brunner Sr., on Sunday Mrs. John Brunner Sr., accompanied Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley home where she visited a day with them and also with her son Joe.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR ORGANIZING TEACHERS' CHORUS IN THE COUNTY

Miss Catherine B. Veal, the supervising teacher, is planning to do some very definite work in the training of teachers in service. With that idea in mind she is offering an opportunity to all teachers of the one and two room schools in the county and all others interested to meet with her in the music room of the West Bend high school on Oct. 15 at 7:30 p. m. It is the intention of Miss Veal to start a county chorus among the teachers. If sufficient interest is manifested Miss Veal is willing to contribute her services with a view of the improvement of music in the county schools.—West Bend Pilot.

Eskimo Music

The Eskimo are very fond of music. Their native music consists chiefly of songs, chants and melodies, many of which possess considerable musical rhythm. Although the tunes to which they are sung are very crude, they can be traced to keynotes. The melodies especially are said to be very pleasing and a number of them have been published with corresponding music.—Exchange.

Research and Education

In the last analysis humanity has but one supreme problem, the problem of kindling the torch of enlightened creative effort here and there and everywhere, and of passing on for the enrichment of the lives of future generations the truth already discovered—in two words, the problem of research and education.—Dr. Robert A. Millikan.

ALL STARS LOSE TO COLORED TEAM

The much looked forward to game of baseball played here Sunday afternoon between an All-Star team of the Wa-Fon-Do league and the Jones Athletic colored team of Milwaukee, ended in a victory for the latter by a score of 7 to 12. The game was a special attraction of the season and was played before the largest crowd of enthusiastic fans ever assembled here at a ball game. Shortly after the noon hour fans entered the ball park from all sections of this community in an effort to get a good seat. By 2:15 o'clock, the time set for the game to start, the ball park was practically filled. The Jones team well measured up to their reputation, as being a well balanced and snappy team, topping it off with lots of comedy for the amusement of the fans. As far as winning the game was concerned, there was no chance for the home club as they were outclassed, the visitors apparently could hit the ball whenever and wherever they wanted to. They however, were good sports and kept the score close making the game an interesting one to witness.

Next Sunday the Kewaskum team will play Batavia here. The visitors won second place in the pennant race in the Kettle Moraine league this year and therefore ought to give the home club a hard run for their money. Reports have it that Jones, who pitched for the locals the past season will do the twirling for the visitors. This will undoubtedly be the last game of the season. The box score is as follows:

ST. MICHAELS WINS LAST GAME OF SEASON

Playing loose baseball, St. Michaels however, rallied in the ninth inning to win a 12 to 7 game from St. Kilian. The longest hit of the season was a tremendous home run by Ted Schneider, the Saint's shortstop. The game was the last one for the season. During the season the Saints played winning ball all the way, winning 15 and losing six.

ELMORE CUBS DEFEAT ASHFORD SECONDS

The Elmore Cubs defeated the Ashford second team at Hammen's ball park Sunday by a score of 7 to 4. Next Sunday the Cubs will clash with the Wauconsta team at Hammen's place.

CHILD CHOKES ON LARGE PEANUT

Post mortem examination indicated that the death of John William Peterson, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peterson, Route 4, was caused by a giant peanut, which was swallowed whole and which lodged in the intestine.

The child died Wednesday afternoon after an illness of two days and cause of his death was uncertain, although it was learned just before he died that he had swallowed what he said was a hickory nut. Post mortem examination was held to be sure that no disease was responsible for the condition. When the child first became ill, it was thought that green apples had caused the condition. When he became worse and was questioned closely, he said he had swallowed a hickory nut. Examination revealed the giant peanut, one of several which had been presented to the Peterson children. The child had swallowed it shell an all.—Hartford Times.

Events in the Lives of Little Men

IN THE WORLD THAT WAS 'FLOWERLAND'

By FANNIE HURST

FROM the time Ruth Adlon was fifteen and had "quit school," as the saying goes among the Ruth Adlons, she had been an "average" in a dance hall known as "Flowerland." It was one of those resorts where for an entrance fee, you may purchase a strip of tickets; six for twenty-five cents. Each one of these entitles you to a partner for one dance number. There were about fifteen girls and six or seven men employed in the same capacity as Ruth. They were professional partners.

Ruth Adlon's fervor for the dance was something that seemed to surpass her own vitality. She was tireless. Frail, to what seemed a breaking point, nervous, slender, and of those rare occasions when she sat on the sidelines, when a partner had not claimed her with his ticket teetered. The rhythm of the jazz music seemed to run through her veins, and to keep her constantly excited. She was one of the best (if not the best) dancers at Flowerland.

The system there was on a commission basis. Your income consisted of a percentage on the number of tickets you collected during an evening. Ruth earned more than any girl on the staff.

One of the youths employed in a similar capacity at Flowerland was in love with Ruth. His name was Christian Cowen. Ruth used to tease him about this name of his, it seemed so incongruous, considering the environment. And so it was. As a matter of fact, Christian was the son of a Methodist minister in a small Southern town. He had drifted eastward, chiefly to escape his father's insistence that he follow in the ministerial footsteps. He too was a frail fellow, distinctly of a social class above that of his colleagues, yet strangely at home in the gay, relaxed, whirling world that was Flowerland.

It was extraordinary that such an environment could have turned out a girl as unworried as Ruth Adlon. Her partners were just so many customers to her. At the close of her workday, or rather her work-a-night, she forgot them as promptly as a salesman forgets the string of people to whom he had sold coffee over the counter during an afternoon. In fact it might be said of Ruth Adlon, that she was a girl's girl. She enjoyed the gossip among them. She liked to walk home with one for a companion. It was seldom that she consented to an outside engagement, with one of the partners she met in Flowerland. Not that she had any scruples about the life of the dance hall, but Ruth was not interested.

That is why her affair with Christian Cowen, when it came, was one that from the very first started in to be of more serious moment than is usually the case in such an environment.

They fell in love and immediately their solemn young eyes fastened upon the goal of marriage. Ruth entertained no illusions about the ambitions or potentialities of Christian. To her he was merely a darling boy who needed her. And Ruth needed him.

On the initial equipment of loving one another deeply, and about one hundred and seventy-five dollars between them, they were married, and continued their joint work at Flowerland until four months before Ruth was going to have her child.

In the sixteen months of their marriage, these two little dancing people, so curiously dependent upon one another in the vast amusement world in which they whirled, had feathered their nest of an up-town flat and settled down to a happiness that was drenching and all-sufficient, except for one fly in a smooth ointment.

Christian, who loved his dancing wife with all the tenacious capacity of the frail, was branded in his make-up with a broad streak of jealousy. Because she was so delectable to him, it was inconceivable that she could be anything else to the hundreds who were fortunate to hold her in the dance.

When their baby girl was four months old, a stroke of invisible lightning, as it were, smote the happy little household.

Whether during the dance, or in some twisted motion of which he had not been conscious, Christian after suffering some weeks of pain in silence, went to a physician who X-rayed his hurting spine and found a fracture.

Overnight, as it were, if not only because necessary, but imperative, for Ruth to take upon her slender shoulders the entire responsibilities of the household.

For eight months, Christian Cowen lay flat on his back in a rigid plaster cast on a hospital cot. For eight months, Ruth Cowen twinkled on her toes, to meet the expenses of that driven little household, and strangely enough, thrived doing it. And so did her baby. It was impossible to employ the services of a nurse in the household, and so, to her despair at first, she was obliged to entrust the child to a nursing home for infants. But the little girl, even as her mother, seemed to bloom and blossom under what might normally be considered an adverse condition, and as Ruth beheld this take place, her heart on that score at least was light within her.

It was a strenuous, nerve-racking life, darting like a frenzied messenger of sweetness, between the dance hall, the nursing home and the hospital where Christian lay strapped to his cot.

His recovery was tedious, slow and torturous. And yet, Ruth who hovered so lovingly over him, did not know the most tortuous aspect of it. Lying there day after day, week after week, month after month, the pressure of the secret jealousy came to be almost unbearable to Christian. Evenings, when the ward lights were low and the patients about him had dropped off to their troubled sleep, he was forced to lie there, visioning Ruth in the arms of others. It was impossible to imagine that the men who held her did not thrill to her nearness as he did. It was impossible to fight down the frenzy, knowing that even as he lay there, she was desirable to others. It made of him, as the months wore on, a fretful, nervous, irascible patient, sharp with his nerves, critical, even cruel, in his remarks to Ruth.

There came a time, however, when Christian, on crutches, was able to leave the hospital; was even able, on an evening, to hobble down, when assisted by Ruth, and sit on the sidelines in the dance hall and watch the scene.

It was his idea that this might ease the secret torture.

On the contrary, it only seemed to inflame it. "The sight of her, tireless, enthusiastic, playful, even with the burden of her responsibilities full upon her, actually seeming to delight in the act of the dance, was even more than he could bear."

Poor Christian, in his sense of defeat and in his love for this girl; and in his fear and torment for her, he was all warped inside, and of that Ruth knew nothing. She only saw her maimed, nervous husband through the eyes of her desire to serve him and to ameliorate, if possible, the dreariness of the semi-invalidism that seemed to stretch wearily ahead.

By now, the hurting jealousy of Christian's began to take on a certain menace. He plainly detected that in Ruth's dancing there was a joy-of-life.

There was one Spanish fellow in particular, who used to spend his entire strip of tickets in dances with Ruth, toward whom she seemed to lift a face as dewy as a flower. Sitting on the sidelines with his crutches beside him, slow smoldering hatred began to burn in the maimed husband of Ruth.

The two things that Christian loved best in life, that small, dancing mother and the small child she had begot, were in peril. And somehow, to the feverish brain of the troubled young husband, the Spanish fellow who came to the dance hall once or twice a week began to be the symbol of that peril.

One evening, there occurred in that dance hall what seemed a miracle, although medically, and in the colder annals of science, it is known as "trauma."

In the midst of what was the routine performance of Ruth dancing around the floor in the arms of the young Spaniard, Christian, unable to bear any longer what seemed to him the amorous clasp of these two, jerked himself to his feet, and forgetful of his spine, rushed without his crutches out to the center of the floor, hurling them apart.

In the confusion and the unpleasant notoriety of the moment, one outstanding fact was revealed to Ruth. Christian was standing erect and strong on his two feet. Christian was able to walk off that dance floor without the aid of crutches.

That was the beginning; the beginning of a great many things in their little household. Also it revealed to Ruth the pitiful, tortured mental life that had been her husband's throughout the months. More than that, it revealed to her the power of his mind over the matter of his body.

Christian, who walks as normally as anyone now, has a paying position with a commercial house; Ruth is now able to carry on a life she loves even over and above the life of dancing.

She is mistress of a little home and of the day-by-day destiny of two growing children.

ALL-NIGHT LIGHT PROVED OF VALUE

Stimulates the Production of Winter Eggs.

How does the rooster know when to crow, asks a correspondent of the Rural New-Yorker, referring to the recently advocated practice of lighting the henhouse all night. According to a bulletin from the Ohio experiment station (Bulletin 476) this all-night lighting has proven a great help in getting winter eggs. It is an extension of the idea in morning or evening lighting and its trial came about through the use of natural gas lighting through the use of natural gas lighting. It is impracticable to turn the gas on and off at the necessary intervals so let it burn. The results were such that the Ohio station conducted some controlled experiments with all-night lighting and, in the bulletin referred to, gives the following conclusions: The evidence indicates that all-night lighting is the most effective way fully to realize the value of artificial light for winter layers. The supposed ill-effects from unrestricted use of artificial lighting failed to materialize. Pullets or hens so lighted laid more eggs than those without light or with morning light at 4 a. m., though the latter laid more eggs in the spring. No ill effects upon fertility or hatchability of eggs resulted; the all-night light proved especially valuable in bringing slow maturing, late-hatched or inferior pullets into production; it was effective both for the prevention of a fall or early winter molt and bringing about recovery of production in pullets that had started to molt in October. September molted hens with all-night light laid 42 per cent more eggs and consumed 10 to 15 cents a dozen less than Mr. Willard could obtain on the local market. This trade demands clean eggs, and that is one of the reasons why Mr. Willard keeps his flock in the laying house until noon.

Advices Keeping Flock Confined All Morning

All of the eggs from the Dale Willard farm, Vermilion county, Ill., go to a select trade in Chicago, and bring from 10 cents to 15 cents a dozen more than Mr. Willard could obtain on the local market. This trade demands clean eggs, and that is one of the reasons why Mr. Willard keeps his flock in the laying house until noon. "Hens that are kept up until noon seem to develop the habit of laying in the forenoon," said Mr. Willard. "We get from 75 to 90 per cent of our eggs in the first half of the day. Whether it is fair or rainy the eggs are clean. If hens have their freedom throughout the day they track mud into the house and nests in bad weather and most of the eggs are so soiled that we would have to clean them before shipping. "The hen that is permitted freedom only a part of the day will eat more mash and her ration will be better balanced than if she runs out all the time. We have been getting better egg production since we have kept our hens up. They eat more mash and it is mash that makes the eggs." -Capper's Farmer.

Baby Chicks Notes

Don't feed baby chicks too early. Let them go without feed for 72 hours. For starting feed, oatmeal or good starting mash are extra good. Feed oatmeal five times each day, one heaping tablespoon at each feeding for 15 baby chicks. Leave mash before them. Give plenty of sour milk of same acidity each day. Green feed is essential after first seven days. Keep clean, fresh water before the chicks all the time. Charcoal and grit are essential for best results. Practice cleanliness with utmost care. Use good judgment in all things and your success with baby chicks will be assured.

Pullets Worth While

There is no mystery or slow about growing good pullets. Slow-growing pullets that are not ready to lay until they are eight or ten months old are a dead loss and should not be tolerated. With good and strong pullets and hens that are physically fit to lay eggs and have the feed necessary to make the eggs there will be a margin of profit from eggs this next winter. -R. B. Thompson, in the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman.

Poultry Hints

A poultry farm with 900 birds requires about $15,000 in capital. Have the poultry house ready so the pullets can be moved in promptly when they begin to lay. Straw or excelsior that has been used in nest boxes until it is all stamped up fine is too old. Empty it out, burn it and the vermin will go "up in smoke." Provide clean, fresh nesting material. Placing the hoppers on clean ground is another small chore which will help to prevent the spread of diseases and parasites. When pullets are removed from the range and placed in laying houses it is best to supply them with different kinds of green feed. Never frighten your fowls; keep them as tame as possible. If occasion requires you to remove a hen from the nest, do not throw her out, but lift her up gently.

Explorer Sets Forth Sahara as Man's Cradle

Upon his return to the United States after an 18,000-mile exploration trip through Africa Dr. Arthur Torrence, Los Angeles explorer, announces his belief that the southern Sahara desert was the cradle of the human race. Not only did he make extensive investigations of the primitive tribes and the geological history of the Sahara, but he claims to have found evidence refuting the Darwinian theory of the origin and perpetuation of new species. While he does not deny that man evolved from a lower type of animal, he thinks this evolution took place in the southern part of the Sahara.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times the amount of acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

Caring for the Aged

Approximately $3,000,000 is expected to be distributed annually among some 8,000 persons under Massachusetts' old-age assistance act, which went into effect in July. All needy citizens seventy years or over, who have been in the state at least 20 years, are eligible for assistance, which ranges between $2 and $3 weekly.

Sleep is the greatest blessing when there is no one who has the right to break into it.

45,000,000 Visit Parks

The state parks of the country, now numbering more than 300, were by no means idle across last year. Figures gathered by the National Park service indicate that there were 45,000,000 visitors in the reservations last year, making an average of 15,000 per park. The parks, incidentally, averaged 1,000 acres each although naturally many were much larger and many much smaller.

Old Legend Concerning World-Famous Painting

Raphael's "Madonna of the Chair," says a noted Paris art lecturer, was the realization of a hermit's wish. "There have been many stories told regarding the painting of Raphael's 'Madonna of the Chair,'" the artist said, "but the one that seems most fitting is as follows: "An old hermit, widely known and loved for his charity and Christian service, lived in a hut in the valley. Near his humble home stood a giant oak tree, which he called his silent friend, because it gave him shade and sheltered him from the storm. Close by lived a vine dresser's daughter, known to everybody for her kindness to the old hermit, who called her his friend that talked. "One day a terrible storm arose, which was followed by a disastrous flood. The hermit sought shelter in the branches of the tree and was rescued by the vine dresser's daughter, who took him to her home. The hermit was very happy and prayed that two good friends might be glorified together. Long afterward the hermit, Bernardo, died, and the oak tree was cut down and made into wine casks. By this time the beautiful girl had married and was the mother of two fine sons. "One day the young mother sat at the door of her cottage with her two sons at her side. Raphael passed by and noticing the beautiful picture made by the mother and her sons quickly took his crayon and sketched it on the head of a wine cask. From this sketch the artist is said to have painted the popular picture of the 'Madonna of the Chair,' and the wish of the old hermit was realized."

Golf Ball's Velocity

A golf ball hit 250 yards on the carry (about 250 yards carry-and-run) would have an initial velocity of about 230 feet per second. An approximate rule is that the initial velocity of the ball in feet per second is numerically the same as the carry in yards.

World's Largest Airship Makes Test Flight

The United States Dirigible Akron flew from its home field outside of Akron to Cleveland and back on its first flight with 113 persons aboard. More than 150,000 spectators turned out at the field to watch the new battleship of the skies start on its maiden trip. The ship and its hangar extended more than a third of a mile when the above picture was taken.

GOOD BABY TEETH ARE VERY NECESSARY

If you are thoroughly interested in your children's health, you must be interested in their teeth and watch and care for them.

The child's first teeth, called deciduous teeth, come in from about the fourth month to two years of age and should last until they are naturally shed between the ages of six and twelve.

These are important teeth, and the Educational Committee of the Washington County Dental Society insist that every effort should be made to keep them, because the child needs them the greater part of the most important time of his life, that time wherein he has the most rapid growth.

All of these teeth are used for as long as ten years. They are just as important as the permanent teeth, and in health or disease they have a vital influence over the development and growth of both the child's mind and body.

In order to help the child to keep these teeth, parents should see that he has plenty of the different kinds of food which furnish mineral salts and vitamins for building good strong tooth structure. The best of these are milk, leafy vegetables, fruits, bread and cereals, especially those made from whole grain. Without sufficient supply of these foods the teeth will be undernourished and consequently more susceptible to decay.

As soon as the first few teeth have fully erupted, a tiny, medium soft bristled tooth brush should be used with tooth paste or water.

In addition to the cleansing, the child's teeth should be examined by the dentist at least once each six months after two years of age, or earlier if there are any dark spots on the teeth. See that the child has plenty of rest and sleep, plenty of fresh air, and plenty of play in the sunshine.

MEMORIAL

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, August Kummrow, who passed away one year ago, October 8, 1930:

Oh, so often our thoughts do wander, To a grave not far away, Its here we laid our dear husband and father.

Just one year ago today, Sad and sudden was the call; He was so dearly loved by all.

His chair is vacant in our home, His voice is but a dream, We miss his kind and willing hand, He must come home it seems, We miss his fond and earnest care "Tis true, he is missed everywhere.

But God is almighty, it was His will, Tho' in our hearts, he lingers still, We hope to meet him some day, On the golden shore up yonder, Where the Lord, our shepherd, reigns, On high, in beautiful splendor, Sadly missed by Mrs. August Kummrow and children.

The true way to go about restoring confidence is not to pretend that there is no ground for anxiety, but to face and come to terms with the fundamental cause of the general anxiety, writes Walter Lippmann in a recent editorial.

ISSUES WARNING TO SAFEGUARD AGAINST HOG CHOLERA

Sporadic outbreaks of hog cholera have recently been reported in such widely separated parts of the state that a general warning is being issued to farmers by Dr. W. Wisnicky of the state division of livestock sanitation in co-operation with Dr. J. S. Healy, federal inspector in charge for the United States department of agriculture.

State and federal authorities are co-operating at present to stamp out the cholera in scattered areas in Richland, Dodge, Winnebago, Lafayette, Burnett and Walworth counties.

"With the occurrence of hog cholera in these widely scattered areas a widespread epidemic—such as the one in 1926 is to be feared," says Dr. Wisnicky. "The 1926 epidemic caused enormous losses to farmers and everything possible is being done to prevent the spread of the disease.

"The disease is sometimes spread by various means. Migratory birds and rodents sometimes convey it from one section of the country to another. Cholera may be innocently brought to the farm by the farmer himself when he brings raw market pork home to eat and the trimmings are later fed to the hogs. If the virus is present, the hogs may become infected in that way."

Feeding city garbage is also responsible for cholera in some instances. Due to the economic depression, many farmers have discontinued preventive vaccination and this factor paves the way for large losses in the event a wave of the disease hits the state.

Dr. Wisnicky warns that careful watch should be kept over non-immune herds and in case any trouble is indicated, a graduate veterinarian should be called immediately.

Do you know where your best profits are made?
Even with low prices, the cows have paid me a profit.
So said a prominent farmer who kept a careful record of income from the cows and all expenditures for them.
A checking account made his record keeping easy. When he decided to curtail part of the farm activities, he kept the cows. He knew they were paying.
In these days it pays to know costs and income. A checking account provides a practical way.
Do you know where your profits are made? Do you know where your expenditures go?
A checking account in this bank will help to answer these questions.

My Neighbor Says

When preserving plums, if you wish them to retain their shape and size, pick the skins in two or three places before you start cooking them.

Should an egg have been boiled too long it can be softened again by lifting the saucepan off the fire, quickly placing it under the faucet, and allowing a good stream of cold water to run onto it. The sudden shock of changing from hot to cold water has the curious effect of softening the egg.

Fish which contains few bones may be converted into filets by dividing the flesh from the back-bone in long, wide strips and then removing any smaller bones. Soles supply the best filets.

Water in which vegetables are boiled should always be saved, as it contains the most valuable minerals and vitamins. It may be used as stock in making soup.

HOW IT STARTED To Have a "Confab"

If ever there is a line which seems rooted in slang and colloquialism of the day, "to have a confab" signifying to converse with intimately, would seem to be entitled to first honors.

Yet, interestingly enough, such a surmise would be far indeed from the fact. For, as you shall see in a moment, "confab" is rooted about as classically as could be.

To have a confab is simply an expression embodying an abbreviation of "confabulation" which in turn is derived from the Latin "confabulatio" having the same meaning as the word "confab" today.

Woman Runs 2 Homes; Hubbies Unsuspecting

Worcester, Mass.—For more than two months Mrs. Elsie Lavigne, forty, managed two homes without arousing the suspicions of either of her "husbands."

After twenty years as the wife of Henry Lavigne the woman, mother of a nineteen-year-old daughter, secretly married James L. Tully, cable repairman, last June.

She then told her two mates that she was taking up practical nursing, and thus was able to divide her time between her two homes.

One day her real husband lost his man hand touching them. The machine operated by a single "electric eye" or photo-electric tube, resembles one of a man playing solitaire, and resembles in appearance a miniature railroad switching terminal with the card routed over its proper track.

Operation of the newest trick is so simple that it requires the services of only one person. When the names and addresses are stenciled on the bills, a number is printed also. This number guides the sorters in classifying the stub when returned. With the new sorting machine, this same principle is carried out, except a simple printed code is substituted for the numbers. By this system of code, it is possible to get more than 100,000,000 combinations of numbers on a card 1 1/2 inches wide by 3 1/4 inches long, and still have enough room for customer's name and address.

Cards are placed in the feeding receptacle and a weight is placed on top of the cards exerting pressure on the bottom card. This lower card is then picked up by a device covered

Wall Paper Cleaner.—Take one cupful of sifted flour, one tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of coal oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of ammonia and one-half cupful of water. Mix in a small saucepan and cook until the moisture is evaporated, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire and knead until smooth. Take a small piece, kneading and turning it to keep the outside clean, as the paper is rubbed with a downward stroke.

Field Mushrooms.—Gather the luscious morsels in the morning if possible, do not wash them—if carefully picked and handled they will need none. Peel the caps, remove the stems and cook them in butter by themselves, after cutting into bits. Broil the caps first, turn and put a teaspoonful of butter into each cap and finish cooking. Serve with the sauce prepared from the chopped mushrooms. Mushrooms are delicious served over well buttered and browned toast, as a luncheon dish.

Pennsylvania Towns Put Curfew on Radio

Shamokin, Pa.—Councilman ordinance set 11 p. m. as the curfew hour for all radio sets within Shamokin borough.

At that hour all sets must be turned down so that they cannot be heard outside the house and all windows must be closed when the radio is playing.

Shamokin was not alone in seeking to place restrictions on radios playing late at night.

At Wilkes-Barre police announced that they would respond promptly to any complaint against excessively loud radios and would direct set owners to cut down the volume immediately.

Greedy Island

In my airplane to Greedy Isle, I went one afternoon, 'Tis many thousand miles away, 'Tis far beyond the moon, And there I found the queerest tribe Of boys and girls, I ween, They really are quite different, From any you have seen.

This country is most beautiful, As fair as our own land, The streets are broad and cleanly kept, The buildings tall and grand; But all these funny children In this Isle I went to see, Have eyes right in the very place, Their "tummies" ought to be.

I noticed when their mothers called For them to come to meals, They answered—tumbling with a rush, With greedy grunts and squeals:

They pushed and crowded right and left, Each scrambling for a place, And not one paused a moment, Nor bowed his head for grace.

They never waited to be served, When once they had a seat, Put ransack for things, and without shame

Began at once to eat; And not one used a knife nor fork, But dived into his food, With little fingers all unwashed, I'm sure you'd think them rude.

And when they'd stuffed their little selves, 'Till they could eat no more, There yet would be upon their plates Enough for three or four; These greedy little children Wanted all that they could see, Because their eyes are in the place, Their "tummies" ought to be.

—Margaret Wheeler Ross.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK by WALTER TRUMBULL

It was only a few short years ago that all of my friends and acquaintances were reading. Their favorite literature consisted of the ticker and the financial page. Now that Wall Street is as animated as the mummy c' Ramesses the Great, they have taken to writing. Jack Dempsey, for example, has written the story of his life by using Charles Francis Coe as a medium. One-Eyed Connolly told me the other day that his autobiography was in a state of construction. On every hand, citizens of this fair land are rushing into print. If the next generation reads all the books which are being written by this generation, there will be no more wars. They will be too busy to fight.

One of the most amusing books I have read lately is Damon Runyon's "Guys and Dolls." Damon Runyon knows his Broadway. Moreover, he likes it. He has caught the life which lies between Times square and Columbus circle with an accurate and understanding typewriter. The short stories in this book have more than mere humor; they have both insight and sympathy. I know of no man today who could have written those stories except Damon Runyon. They are as full of color as Broadway itself. New York has changed since O. Henry christened it "Bagdad on the Hudson." "Guy and Dolls" is a strictly modern book. But there are stories in it that

O. Henry would have liked; that he would have been amply satisfied to write. I do not mean that any of them are an echo of any writer who has gone before. They are original and stand on their own merits. And, with me, some of them stand high. Here is the voice of Broadway recorded by an ear true for all of its nuances.

When Leopold Auer was in New York, a party was given for the master violinist which was attended by several of his pupils. Among the guests was a wealthy society woman, who was considerably impressed by the company. As those present separated, into little conversational groups, she approached her host. "Don't you think," she said, "that with so many famous musical stars present that it would be a good thing if you asked those two young men to stop unking on that piano?" "Well," replied the host, "I feel just a little bit backward about interfering. You see those two are Jascha Heifetz and Erem Zimbalist."

Roger Bacon, who has decorated most of the big houses at Palm Beach with Spanish and Moorish tile of the Fifteenth and Sixteenth century, has been visiting our city and telling me fish stories. He told me of a trip to islands of the Bahama group some 300 miles northeast of Nassau, where, in shallow water, his party caught forty bone fish in one day. Take it from Izaak Walton, that is a record. Many a fisherman has spent a day trying to get one bone fish, which according to no less an angler than Dr. John Oliver La Gorce is about the gamest fish that swims.

Mr. Bacon also seriously told me a story of trolling with a Japanese feather for bait and of the feather being swallowed by a yellow tail, the yellow tail by a larger fish, and the larger fish by a shark, all within a few moments. This is what I'd call fishing with a party line. I am told that Mr. Bacon once took a course in romantic literature at Wesleyan.

It seemed a great pity to me that those ardent fishermen, Irvia Cobb, Bob Davis and Maximilian Foster were not present to tell some of their fish stories; although Mr. Foster never was quite the same as an angler after taking William O. McGeehan on a fishing trip. Mr. McGeehan insisted upon referring to a split bamboo rod of great price as a "pole."

Carl Fisher once displayed on his boat some seven or eight bone fish to weary guests of his who had been off hours and miles in a small boat and had returned practically empty handed. Mr. Fisher was willing that his guests should believe he had caught the fish while seated comfortably in a deck chair smoking a cigar. It later was discovered, however, that Mr. Fisher had offered the natives of Bimini five dollars per fish and that practically that entire island had gone fishing.

Oyster Culture

The sow-and-reap method so common to agriculture is on trial in the oyster industry. An enterprising company operating at Padilla bay on Puget sound will plant seed oysters from Japan about the first of each year and harvest them the following fall. Fifty million oysters are now growing in the Padilla beds and will be ready before long. Care will be taken not to let the oysters reach the gigantic, "beefsteak" size they would if allowed to attain their full growth.

CLOVER BLOAT AMONG CATTLE

Difficulty with alfalfa and clover bloat among cattle has increased greatly throughout the state since the recent general rains says Dr. W. Wisnicky, chief of the division of livestock sanitation of the department of agriculture and markets.

Farmers are cautioned against using the crop indiscriminately as both clover and alfalfa bloat can quite generally be prevented according to Dr. Wisnicky.

The best procedure varies with different conditions. If cattle are accustomed to grazing on green clover or alfalfa the danger is not as great as when they are turned into the pasture in a hungry condition to take on large quantities of the green feed in a short period of time.

A good procedure to follow in grazing is to give cattle a good fill of some dry forage before they are turned out. Good quality hay is the best to use.

It is claimed, Dr. Wisnicky states, that bloating in cattle is more apt to occur when the pasture is wet after rains, during damp and muggy weather, or after heavy dews. It is therefore desirable to keep cattle off and graze during dry periods.

Careful watch should be kept at all times when cattle are grazing on fresh alfalfa and clover. At the first indication of trouble, the cattle should be removed and first aid given. It may be advisable to introduce transversely into the mouth a large rope or a stick to keep the mouth open to assist expulsion of gas from rumen.

If the first aid measures are not successful a veterinarian should be called. In emergencies where time will not permit calling a veterinarian the trochar and canula should be used and a puncture made in the center of the area which in the unbloated condition is sunken and in the bloated condition is the highest point on the left side. It is advisable to call a veterinarian to take charge of the treatment from this point.

Pure metal is water-tight forever

BECAUSE pure metal is proof against moisture, it is used exclusively in the construction of the Buckstaff Burial Vault. Purified Keystone Copper Steel is the metal selected.

Each Buckstaff Vault is tested by 5000 pounds of hydraulic pressure, to prove that no moisture can enter—a much more severe test than natural conditions will ever impose.

Then the producers, with a combined business record of 80 years, guarantee each vault to continue this protection for at least 99 years.

When our loved ones are taken from us, it is a source of comfort to know that the precious remains will be safe through the ages. The Buckstaff Burial Vault is just one feature of our complete and considerate funeral service.

CIVIL SERVICE APPLICANTS ANXIOUS TO LEARN RATINGS

The Civil Service Commission stated today that a considerable number of persons who competed in the file clerk examination held throughout the country in the latter part of August are already making inquiry regarding their ratings.

Officials explained that this was the largest civil service examination ever held, approximately 29,000 persons being examined.

Because of the large number of applicants in this examination and because of the volume of the work of the Civil Service Commission at this time, it was estimated that it will be at least two or three months before reports of rating will be ready.

It was pointed out that 8,500 persons competed in the statistical clerk examination held on September 9. It will be approximately two or three months, it was said, before ratings of this examination can be mailed to competitors.

The Commission has instructed its examiners throughout the country to request competitors for government positions not to make premature inquiries about their ratings in as much as such inquiries increase the volume of the work. Rating reports are mailed in every instance as soon as possible.

CHANGES MADE IN AUTO LICENSE LAW

Your attention is directed to the following important changes in the automobile license laws enacted by the 1931 legislature.

The following increase in fees is effective beginning with 1932 registrations: Cars weighing 4,000 lbs or more and less than 4,500 lbs., $24.00; weight 4,500 lbs. or more and less than 5,000 lbs., $36.00; weight 5,000 lbs. or more, $48.00. The correct fee for your automobile is indicated on the application blank which is being mailed to you with this notice.

Applications for 1932 licenses will be accepted any time after October 31, 1931, and no automobiles, passenger buses or motorcycles shall be operated without new licenses after February 1st, 1932. (Penalty $10.00 to $100.00).

License plates must remain upon the vehicle for which they are issued until plates for the succeeding year are received and attached. (Penalty for using plates on vehicle other than that for which they were originally issued, $50.00 to $200.00).

Be sure to indicate in the space provided on the enclosed application blank the city, village or township in which your automobile is kept in order that its share of the gasoline tax may be credited to your community.

Apply for your 1932 license as soon as possible, sending us your certificate of title, application blank and the correct fee in the enclosed envelope. Your cooperation will result in prompt and efficient service.

Up-to-the-Minute and Practical

Every woman wishes to be as well-dressed as possible without spending too much time or money on her clothes. That is why so many women in this community turn first to the page in this newspaper which contains the illustrated fashion articles by Miss Cherie Nicholas. For Miss Nicholas is an authority on fashions—not the freak models and the extreme styles, but the fashions in dress which the modern woman demands, those which are up-to-the-minute and at the same time economical and practical.
Be sure to look for these articles in each issue of this newspaper and then tell your women friends about them. They will be glad to know how they, too, can wear clothes which carry the message of the well-dressed woman.
