KEWASKUM TO BE STRONG CONTENDER

From now on base ball will be the main topic among the Kewaskumites, and from all indications, Kewaskum will have two base ball teams that will merit worthy praise. One of the teams which have a very strong lineup is that of the High School. Principal E. Skaliskey, through his good coaching, has rounded his players into very good shape. Last Friday afternoon, in a practice game with the West Bend Highs, Kewaskum was victorious by a score of 9 to 7. On Wednesday afternoon the students traveled to Campbellsport and defeated the Highs of that place by a score of 4 to 1. Kluehn for the locals pitched a one-hit game. Today (Friday) afternoon they play at Slinger in the first of the Tri-County league games. The High School boys should be strong contenders for first place in the league this year.

PRACTICE GAME SUNDAY

The city team on Sunday play their final practice game, when Waucousta of the Fond-Do league, will be their opponents. The game will be called at approximately 2:30. The game last Sunday with Batavia, was called off after the first inning on account of rain and cold weather. The visitors were leading at the time by a score of 1 to 0.

GEO. H. SCHMIDT MANAGER

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Kewaskum Athletic Club, Geo. H. Schmidt was appointed manager of the city team. As yet Manager Schmidt has not announced a definite lineup, nor is it expected one will be completed until the first game of the season to be played at Menomonee Falls on May 8th. Kewaskum has the making of a real fast ball club. All players are determined to give the best they have, and with this spirit, the club should be well among the top notchers. The opening home game will be played on May 15th, when North Fond du Lac comes here.

WHY NOT A GRANDMOTHER'S DAY

Sunday May 8th, will be Mother's Day. It is a pleasing, sentimental custom to set apart one special day in every year for the particular remembrance of everybody's mother. Very few of us are so unsentimental as not to have tender and pleasant recollections of childhood days, in which mother was everything to us. She stood between the child and all that would harm it. She did not have to save, and probably never stopped to realize that she would gladly give her own life, if necessary, to protect the life of her child. We have known of men and women whose lives have been wrecked by an excess of maternal devotion, by the reluctance of their mothers to let them live their own lives, free from parental interference. But even those who look back to their infancy with a tender devotion to the figure that stood between themselves and harm.

We should like to see somebody, however, start a "Grandmother's Day." It is our observation that grandmothers have had about as much to do with the shaping of lives of most of us as our mothers had. A good many mothers would have made a much poorer job of bringing up their children if there hadn't been a grandmother of two in the background, to give them the benefit of her wisdom gained from the experience of raising a family to maturity. We hope that everybody who reads this will remember his or her mother with some appropriate gift, however small, on Mother's Day, but let's not forget grandma.

SYNOPSIS

Joe Barry, country youth in New York, takes out a living as a gambler and an accordion player in the open country. He is arrested by the police and taken to a jail. Bertolini, a man he has met in the fields, near Newburgh, Bertolini discharges him, and he goes to a man he knows only as "Martin" to impersonate a liquor runner facing arrest. It means a penitentiary sentence for Joe if he accepts the proposition. He defers decision until the next night, and is given $1,000 "on account." Next day Joe posts $800 in country banks, giving his name as Joseph Bradley. A circus attracts him. Outside a tent he sees an accordion player and is tempted to play it. A girl, Sue Dayton, niece of the owner, who admires the music, asks him to take a position with her. She says he must return to New York "on business." He has decided to return to New York. In his first return to New York "on business," he has decided to return to New York. In his first return to New York "on business," he has decided to return to New York.

CHAPTER III—Continued

There came a creaking sound; blue lines, running in long tubes, burst into a glare, changing the complexion of those who entered their range to a marbled, jaundiced hue. Pete Maxwell nodded. Joe Barry went dazed, and pressed it to a steel plate of cold, gummy ink, thence to paper. He took the print of his hand, then of his thumb and fingers. Pete lit a cigarette.

"How do you like to see a record," he asked, "didn't he get a record," he asked, "didn't he get the parade." The fingerprint expert laughed.

"You're a liar!" Joe Barry screamed it. Fullhouse shrugged his shoulders. "How'd I know what you wanted him to look like?" he asked. "Maybe we were looking at different people. That's the one I saw."

The haze closed in again; pierced by new questions as soon as Fullhouse and Louie were gone.

CHAPTER IV

Joe's defiance had anything but a deterrent effect upon his questioners. Here was something which he desired to conceal; therefore it was the thing they desired most to know. But at the end of an hour, Pete Maxwell spread his hands against his chest, straightened, and strode away from the table.

"Suppose you let the old Bottle and Stopper have this bird alone for awhile," he said.

didn't even know what all this was about until you dragged me here!" "You don't expect us to believe that, you didn't even see anything about it in the newspapers? You told us about being near Orr's Mills on a vacation. That isn't a new gig; it's been worked before by people who know they're licked on an identification; to try to switch it into an alibi. But we brought in the people, didn't we? You showing up there an hour after the murder might have been all right, but it doesn't sound well when it matches up with three guns found in your room and the money of a dead man."

"Martin put them there, just like he called you up so you'd know just when to arrest me." Pete Maxwell reached into a pocket and brought forth a letter. "Read it," he said. It was in feminine writing, upon hotel paper: "I am an Albany woman, in New York for a few days. Naturally, I do not care to give my name, since it is really not necessary, and because this may concern something attracting widespread publicity. I have been reading in the papers about a murder which occurred after the overturning of a rum runner's car. While dining last night at Louis Bertolini's restaurant on Eighth street, I heard a young man quarreling with the proprietor over being absent from work. It seemed he had been in the vicinity of this affair, and on thinking it over, I felt perhaps you might care to question him with the idea of gaining a clue to the murders."

"So you see," said Pete as he retrieved the missive. "Nobody turned you in at all. You did it yourself. We merely went to the restaurant, found out this letter was true and went up after you. You weren't there; so we waited outside until we saw you come in. Got a lawyer, kid?"

"No, sir." "Better get one—as soon as they take you to Newburgh. This thing means the chair, you know." "Yes, sir," said Joe vacantly. Pete looked at his watch. "Look here," came bluntly, "you're only hurting yourself with this story. I'm not trying to bull you—you're an old-timer, I know that. You haven't got any record. Maybe, if you could show me that you'd been pulled in on this thing, and could tell me the names of the rest of the gang so I could get the real heads of it, maybe I could help you to a lighter sentence. You're not up against any easy rap, and you're going up against an upstate jury. That's where you'll be tried, you know. They give a fellow the chair a lot easier than we do. But it's up to you."

Joe Barry rubbed his eyes. "Please—" he begged—"please won't you just leave me alone?" His jaw began to jerk, spasmodically. "Keep a fellow up all night, asking him this and asking him that, never give him any chance to rest, twist everything he says into a lie—leave me alone!" His wild fits pounded the table now. Until at last little lines of blood broke from the creases. "Leave me alone, you and your death house. You and your promises. You and your lies—leave me alone, leave me alone—!"

Gradually he quieted, merely swaying drunkenly. Pete Maxwell rose and walked around him, slowly, "cautiously," a puzzled light in his blue eyes. Then, not unkindly, he caught at the prisoner's shoulder. "All right, kid," he said. "We'd better be moving, I guess."

This time it was another journey by patrol up Center street to a dual building, connected by bridges across the street. Inside one of them Joe was taken and to another cage, on the first floor, whence he could look out upon the monotonous activities of a courtroom. At last Joe was led forward. He heard a question, from above him on the desk—the words were legal and indistinguishable. Then he heard the voice of Pete Maxwell. "Not guilty, your honor. And if your honor please, it may be necessary to re-arrange him on a short affidavit at the expiration of forty-eight hours, on account of the indictment update and some delay on the warrants."

The man above him had something to say in reply; legalities which Joe did not understand. Then tired and numb, he felt the handcuffs again, and knew that he was walking, out of the room and up a long stairway, like the stairway of a castle he had seen once in a motion picture, and after that, into a cage which seemed interminable. They were in the Tombs. More bars and more grills. Then a key clattered and a door opened. "In there," said the guard, and added to some one inside: "Here's a gangster pal for you. Now you two rats can each take a corner and squeal at each other."

The door closed. Joe stood there while a trim waisted youth, his clothing immaculate even here, his hair shining and sleek, his thin, venomous features immobile, except for the jerk of a crooked smile, came sinuously from a bunk. "What's the rap?" Joe knew the term by now. "Homicide. They say I killed two state policemen up Orr's Mills." "Yeah?" His sleek companion lit a cigarette. "Yeah," he asked again. "Where'd you go to school?" "I?" Joe stared. "The last place was in Missouri." "Yeah? Who was your teacher?" "Miss Price. Why?" "Yeah?" asked the rat, and pulling in his under lip, blew his inhalation against his breast. "Why didn't she teach you how to address a gentleman?" Joe Barry glanced dazedly around him. "I didn't know I was doing anything wrong," he said. "I've never been in a place like this before."

"No?" the gangster asked. Then suddenly: "Come here and sit down, Wetters." Once Joe was beside him, he whirled, talking in low, swift tones. "What's the idea, stool?" he demanded. "You're not even smart enough to know how to answer my questions. But if you're after information, I'll give you some information. When they take you out, you tell 'em they ain't fooled nobody. Hymie Fradke's still got friends. Tell 'em I'm going to beat this rap if it takes my life. And if I do, somebody's going to get shoved over."

Joe Barry raised his arms, piteously. "Leave me alone, won't you?" he begged. "I don't know what you're talking about. I don't know who you are. I don't care who you are. Leave me alone!" It struck the other man's sense of pride. "Yeah?" he asked. "You're up for that chopper job on the Newburgh road and you don't know Hymie Fradke?"

Joe strove to leave him. Hymie Fradke, a little puzzled, followed. "How'd they fasten that rap on you, Wetters?" he asked. Soon they were talking upon a different basis. It was surcease, a feeling of sympathy which urged Joe forward; Hymie's manner had changed greatly. Now he was settled beside Joe Barry, his thin, carefully manicured fingers tapping on his knees, or jerking his cigarette in a quick swing from his lips, returning it as swiftly. It was not long before he interrupted. "Talk lower, whisper—that's better. We didn't just happen to be put in here together. Ten to one, there's a stool in the next cell with an ear as big as a washbowl."

The clatter of slum time came, Hymie sneering at the bars. The night came and made the lights dimmed. Then Hymie took his dulled companion back to the cot and pressed him down there. "Yeah?" he asked in a whisper. "This guy Martin, describe him again. Never heard him called Big Friday? No, it couldn't be him; he wouldn't do a thing like that in the open. Must've worked through a fall guy." He shook his head. "I never heard of Louie Bertolini, but that guy don't sound right either." The thing seemed to fret him. He paced awhile and came back. "I'd-a funny to do," he said to Joe. "That's Big Friday's run up there from Oswego through Schenectady, across to Albany and then down through Newburgh to the Bronx. Ain't I made it for him a dozen times? Yeah, and what do I get out of it? Double-crossed."

An hour, went by. The sounds of the street became fainter, giving greater volume to the night noises of the cell block, the creaking of bunks as men tossed in their search of sleep, the snoring of the more hardened ones, the maddening stomp of some one pacing, three steps and turn, three steps and turn.

Then Hymie was whispering again. "They gave you a break?" he said grudgingly to Joe. "All you get is the chair; pull the switch and you're out. They ain't so good to me; afraid menting the fact that at the time he was very short of funds himself and that he needed the money for other necessary purposes.

First Use of Coffee? The early history of coffee as a beverage is obscure, but it is believed that the coffee tree was originally found by Arab travelers in the Ethiopian province of Kafa about 1,000 years ago. The plant acquired the name "coffee" from Kafa, and seed was taken from Kafa to Arabia, whence it was gradually introduced to the rest of the world.

Old Saying Explained When we say that a man is driven from pillar to post we mean that he is constantly harried and given no rest. The expression probably originated as "whipping-post to pillory," two old forms of punishment. The pillory was a board with holes for head and hands mounted on a post. It was last used in England a hundred years ago.

I'd squeak if I drew the Hot Mama. But I got friends. I ain't in Danne-mora yet. That's something more Big Friday don't know; I got more friends in a day'n he ever knew. Wanted it all, didn't he? He'll get it, in a bronze box. Ain't he got it coming to him? Ain't he worth shoving across if you can get at him? How about that buty that crucified you? I suppose you'll rush up and kiss him, if you ever beat this rap? Yeah! You'll do what I'll do to Big Friday. You'll set him over, that's what you'll do!"

His voice faded in a confusion of forms were on the walls; gusts seemed to spring from nowhere and everywhere. Wild, racking, the screams of a crazed man rose higher, higher, and then were muffled. There was the scuffling of forms, moving toward the door. Then came the clang of steel, some one screaming at a distance, then farther away, still farther. In the cell with Hymie Fradke, a man walked up and down, his lips bloodless, his eyes burning in fixation.

"Yes, that's right," he agreed. "He's got it coming to him. He's made me a murderer; well, I'll be one, if I get a chance!" The cell block stilled. Slowly Joe walked to his bunk, and sat there, a hand pounding against the steel. After a while, Hymie walked across and caught his shoulders with thin, strong fingers. "Wearing yourself out ain't no way to beat a rap," he commanded. After awhile a dazed man slept.

"I ain't saying nothing!" he answered noncommittally. He was silent until they came to return him through the Bridge of Sighs to the Criminal Courts building for the afternoon session. The long hours passed for Joe, in sodden staring about his cell, in mingling with the other prisoners during exercise hours in the corridors. At last Hymie came back again. He was more nervous now, like a sleek animal eyeing its every surrounding in the hope of an opening. At last he broke forth: "Keep a guy sitting in that cage all day long. They didn't even begin my trial! Fine on a guy's friends," he growled softly. "Keeping a guy caged up all day and then doing nothing!"

As night came, he seemed more stealthily, more excited. He walked up and down, his lips moving. Suddenly, however, he halted and looking at Joe as if just realizing he was there, he asked: "Got any jack, Wetters?" "Money, you mean? No, they took it all away from me when I was arrested."

"Jeze! You are a Wetters, ain't you?" He explained nothing more until made ready for his bunk. Then, reaching into his shoe, he removed the insole and brought forth a tightly folded bill from beneath it. "Here, Wetters," he said. It was a twenty-dollar certificate. Joe took the currency with some surprise. "They told me I could get money from my envelope whenever I needed any," he said. "Suppose you get hold of a right sefew that'll sell you a paper of snuff? They won't give you money downstairs for that, I got mine!" he whispered after a time. "I know when I'll use it, too."

Nor was there an explanation of that remark. He only paced for awhile, sat on his bunk, eyed Joe eagerly, like a man obsessed with inner thoughts, then turned away, silent. The night passed, with its myriad noises, Hymie made ready for another day in the cage, awaiting his turn in the courtroom. Suddenly he turned to Joe, whispering. "Tell you what I'll do," he exclaimed. "I'll bet you twenty I beat Danne-mora!" Joe reached for the money. "It's your twenty," he said. "Yeah?" Hymie blinked with memory. "That's right," he said. "No fun betting against my own money."

A few minutes later he was taken away to wait anew in the detention room. Joe went back to his bunk; almost immediately he was on his feet again. The guard had returned, and was unlocking the door, this time for him.

Pete Maxwell was waiting to check him out over the Bridge of Sighs. Then down the long, broad staircase they traveled and once more into the magistrate's court on the first floor, where the cage held some twenty men of which group Joe became a silent member.

One by one, guards came to the door, opened it and beckoned men out, pulling the light door, with its ordinary reversed spring lock, swiftly shut behind them as the prisoner passed forth.

CHIEF ATTRACTION

Every school child in New England is familiar with the kindly, benevolent features of the poet Longfellow. During a talk on character, a teacher in a certain school held up a picture of the kindly-faced poet. "Who is this?" she asked. "Longfellow," chorused the class. "Good!" said the teacher. "Now, Mary, tell us what you notice about his face."

"A whole lot of whiskers!" said Mary promptly.—Boston Globe.

LITTLE TO SAY

Little Susan stood looking with round, staring eyes at the visitor's new cloche hat. Eventually the lady turned to the little girl and asked her whether she liked the hat she was starting at. "I do, Mrs. Mugge," came the innocent reply. "Mamma and Auntie Milly said it was a perfect fright the other day, but it doesn't frighten me the weest-bit."

One on the Verger Officer—Is there a man called Dashington-Binks being married here today? Verger—Wedding now in progress. Officer—Well, I have a warrant for his arrest. Verger—Friends of the bridegroom on the right-hand side of the church, please.—London Humorist.

No Foresight "Newspapers are one-sided." "How is that?" "They always make a fuss when a famous man dies but never when a famous man is born."

Getting Training She (engaged)—Jack is so crazy about the radio, I can hardly drag him away from it. Mrs. Wyse—Excellent training for a husband, my dear—listening.

His Line Governor—What is your occupation? Convict—Composer of popular songs. Governor—Put him in the copying department.—Der Wahre Jakob (Berlin).

HIS IDEA OF POLO "Ever see a game of polo?" "Saw one once upon a time, but it must have been a bum one as I got the idea it was against the rules to hit the ball."

Looking for Readers "Why do you refer to politics as a great game?" "My publicity," replied Senator Sorghum, "needs all the readers possible. I want to see if I can't get it a chance on the sporting page."

Leaving It to Papa "Now, young man, you've been coming here quite a lot; what do you want with my daughter?" "Well, sir, you know best what you can afford."

"HERE'S A PAID TESTIMONIAL FOR TARGET!"

"I DIDN'T get a cent for writing this statement about Target Tobacco... but Target has saved me half a buck a week since I started using it, so you might call this a paid testimonial. 'Here's the answer. I switched to Target to save money. But I didn't know I was going to keep on enjoying real cigarette taste. Target is blended cigarette tobacco, just like the ready-mades. And it rolls up easy with those gummed papers you get free. 'So I advise you to spend a dime at your nearest dealer's and see for yourself. Just think, you get thirty or more cigarettes from every package.'"

AND GET THIS: The U. S. Government tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

SAVE MONEY ROLL YOUR OWN SEE WHAT YOU SMOKE Wrapped in Moistureproof Cellophane

It might be that genealogy is worth more to prove what one is good for than astrology.

IT'S SILLY TO SCRUB CLOTHES, SIS. USE RINSO—IT SOAKS UP THE DIRT

WHAT THICK, LIVELY SUDS—FROM JUST A LITTLE RINSO!

MY WASH IS WHITER THAN EVER, YET I DIDN'T SCRUB OR BOIL. RINSO IS GREAT!

Clothes last longer SOAK clothes in creamy Rinsol suds for the whitest wash ever! No scrubbing, no boiling. Clothes last longer. Cup for cup, Rinsol gives twice as much suds as puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water. Makers of 40 famous washers recommend it. Great for dish-cloths, too. Get the BIG package.

MILLIONS USE RINSO in tub, washer and dishpan

WASHINGTON COUNTY HAS FEW TUBERCULOSIS DEATHS

Washington County has fewer tuberculosis deaths in proportion to population than the average Wisconsin county, according to statistics compiled and issued today by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

"During 1930, eleven Washington County residents died from tuberculosis," declare physicians of the W. A. T. A. "These eleven deaths represent a tuberculosis death rate of 41 deaths per 100,000 population, or a rate lower than that for the state as a whole."

"However, it should be borne in mind that careful research studies indicate that there are approximately nine active cases of tuberculosis for every death. At this rate, Washington County may be estimated to have approximately one hundred active cases of tuberculosis."

"Many of these have probably never been diagnosed, since only fifteen cases were reported to the State Board of Health during the year from Washington County."

Early diagnosis and early treatment for tuberculosis are being stressed in a nation-wide Early Diagnosis Campaign, carried on during spring months by more than 2,000 public health organizations, including the W. A. T. A. The slogan of the campaign is "Tuberculosis causes tuberculosis—every case comes from another."

"Chronic bronchitis, asthma, pleurisy and a run-down condition are often only pulmonary tuberculosis in disguise," state physicians of the W. A. T. A. "If any of these conditions are present in your family, or if members of your family have been exposed to tuberculosis, a thorough physical examination by your family physician is advisable."

"For active cases of tuberculosis, the sanatorium should be the first resort, not the last. Not only does sanatorium care usually afford the best chance for recovery to the patient, but it protects other members of the family or community from infection."

The 1932 Early Diagnosis Campaign is financed by the annual sale of anti-tuberculosis Christmas seals.

WHY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING IS PREFERRED

We clip the following written by a subscriber to an exchange: "The first reason is this: My newspaper comes into my home as a regular visitor by my invitation. I look forward to its appearance. When Mr. Advertiser comes with my friend I naturally give to him a more colorful welcome than when he comes as a stranger without any one to recommend him."

"Again I like to take my advertising in my paper for the same reason that I like coffee with cream and sugar. The advertising along with news items about neighborhood events and editorials upon matters of interest has a finer flavor than without them. And in this way a more complete picture is presented of the community in which I live. An ad by itself lacks background and atmosphere. It looks lonesome and friendless."

"Another reason why I like advertising that comes through the newspaper medium is that this method seems to show more confidence in the value of the wares offered. The newspaper advertiser possibly pays a little higher rate than others, but he thus shows a higher estimate of the worth of his merchandise to the public and incidentally of the quality of the customer whom he seeks to reach."

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS ANNOUNCED

Air Force Figures Worry to Britain

London.—British aeronautical authorities are much concerned over Great Britain's increasingly inferior position of its air corps, as revealed by armament statistics, which most of the nations have submitted to the League of Nations for consideration.

Table with 2 columns: Country, First line aircraft, Total with all reserves. Includes France, Great Britain, Italy, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Spain, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, U. S. of America, Japan.

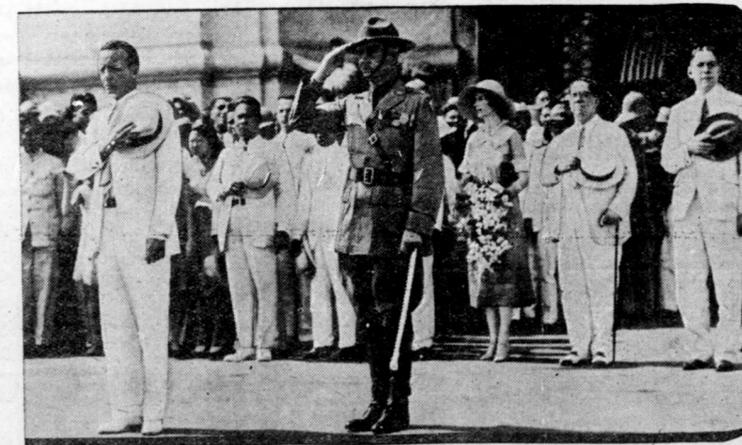

It is believed, however, that Great Britain's numerical inferiority is considerably offset by the exceptionally high standard of her air force personnel and the superiority of her types of pursuit planes to those of most of the other nations.

Los Angeles.—Recent political activities in Mexico have resulted in new found independence to the laboring classes. Dr. James H. Batten, director of the Inter-American foundation, who was a recent visitor here, declared, "The revolution in Mexico," he said, "has brought a new-found independence to the laboring class of the country and is the beginning of a movement which finally will result in true democracy and a republican form of government."

They Struck Oil on Mother's Farm in Texas.

New York.—J. Malcolm Crim, mayor of Kilgore, Texas, settled himself into an easy chair at the Hotel New York and delivered himself of a lecture on the futility of being wealthy. "I'm having fun," he said, "while I'm in New York. But it won't last he said, "and I'm still getting letters. Every mortgage in the world was being foreclosed. People wrote me even from Russia that their mortgages were being foreclosed and would I please give them a little dough." Crim was elected mayor of Kilgore a year ago when the town was incorporated. Prior to his acquisition of wealth he ran a general store. "I sold everything," he said, "from cradles to coffins." "I never went in for politics," he explained, "I never even heard of this fellow Garner till lately. But I took the job as mayor because the town was getting overrun with the wrong kind of people. I took a census in January and there were 800 people in town. I took another one in March and there were 15,000 people there. "We didn't have any streets worth mentioning, no water, no sewer system, no nothing. GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE

DAINTY dessert and one easy to make at home. Here is one: Marshmallow Dessert.—Cut into small bits a cupful or more of marshmallows, add a handful of blanched and shredded almonds, cover with a cupful of whipped cream and at serving time serve in sherbet glasses topped with shredded pineapple.

Graham Cracker Date Tort.—Roll twenty-four graham crackers into fine crumbs with a rolling pin. Pour over the crumbs four large tablespoonsful of butter melted. Prepare the following custard: Mix one cupful of sugar with one-half cupful of cornstarch, blend well, add a little salt and one quart of rich milk, cook until thick. Beat four egg yolks until light, add a little of the milk mixture and pour into the saucepan; cook until the custard is thick and smooth. Beat the egg whites until stiff, fold in gradually one-fourth of a cupful of sugar. Cut up one package of dates into fine bits. Now prepare a layer of the buttered crumbs in a good-sized dripping pan, pour over the custard, then on the custard sprinkle the chopped dates; cover this with the meringue and over that another layer of the buttered cracker crumbs. Bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve cut into squares, top with whipped cream and a maraschino cherry. Use a pancake turner to serve the squares as they are very easily broken.

Fruit Salad.—Prepare a bed of shredded lettuce. Place a slice of canned pineapple upon it. Fill one-half of a canned pear with diced bananas and celery mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Lay on top of the pineapple. Garnish with strips of green pepper. Serve with french dressing.

A potato salad is one of the easiest salads to make and one which is often the poorest. Potatoes are tasteless when cold and should always be marinated with a french dressing for two or three hours before the mayonnaise is added.

Too Much Isolation The 1,000 inhabitants of the picturesque hamlet of Vinegar Hill, Durham, England, are complaining to their rural council because they have no parson, no doctor, no barber, no saloon, no main road, and no bus service, and the nearest link with civilization requires a rough two-mile walk.

Orators Must Bow to Sentiment for Beauty

A shorthand expert says that Americans talk much faster than they did twenty years ago. Is the old poise and dignified deliberation weakening? Or is it the case, that if you don't talk fast, you don't get listened to? Do people regard it as an imposition that you should think you are entitled to all the time you like to make your utterance? Other people want to tell their stories, too.

It is irking to a long-winded though pithy person to have to whisk into the conversation and whisk out again. He wants time for his weighty observations to "sink in." Whereas, if he takes up too much time, some of his auditors on the outer fringes are sure to sink out.

The learned and verbose are at a disadvantage. The world has only so much time to spare and few are allowed to claim more than their share. Make it brief, is the universal sentiment. This being true, those who have something to say would better bide their time and keep their powder dry. "Don't fire till you see the whites of their eyes," and use your best bombshells.—F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FIRST FOUR WEEKS VITAL TO CHICKS

Start of Life Everything in Flock's Success.

"Let me control a child's surroundings, teaching and care for the first seven years, and I won't worry about what will happen after that," a noted religious leader said.

The same could almost be said for raising chickens, provided you shorten the important period to a month. Of course, there are numerous diseases and parasites that can kill or stunt or destroy profit after one month of age, yet success with poultry is more often made or marred during the first month than during the rest of the whole raising process.

There are so many things that are tremendously important during that time that lose their importance later.

Teaching good habits, such as roosting where they belong, eating and drinking out of clean containers only, keeping busy with food and litter instead of picking and fighting each other, come easy during those first few weeks, but hard afterwards. Failure to get the brooder house cleaned and litter renewed every few days is vital those first few weeks, but it is not a serious omission after the chicks are a month old, if they are properly trained as to eating, roosting and playing.—J. W. In Wallace's Farmer.

All-Year Layer Counts on Poultryman's Books

The average hen eats 75 to 90 pounds of feed per year, according to data kept on large flocks. The size of the body counts some and a heavy layer will eat more than a poor layer, but the poor producers don't eat enough less to offset the difference in the cost of "keep." The hen that lays no eggs at all through the winter requires nearly as much, just for body maintenance, as the one that lays just enough to pay her way. The latter may lay eggs enough during the spring and summer to make her profitable to keep, while the one that lays no eggs during cold weather is not worth boarding for half the year in order to get eggs in the spring.

The only hens really worth keeping are those that are able to lay all the year except during the molting period. Continual culling to eliminate poor winter layers has a very positive effect on the yearly balance.—Nebraska Farmer.

Soft-Shell Eggs

Soft-shelled eggs may result from lack of lime in the ration, a defect that can be corrected by keeping crushed oyster shells before the hens, or it may result from some inefficiency in the egg producing mechanism of the hen that is hard to assign a cause to.

Alfalfa or clover leaves from well-cured hay supply needed lime and minerals and cod-liver oil and direct sunlight that does not come through glass helps in the utilizing of the lime and other minerals in the food. If the hens are laying soft-shelled eggs at this season of the year, I would suspect that they are not getting the crushed oyster shells that form a necessary part of poultry rations. An occasional egg of this kind may mean nothing more than an accident of production.—Rural New-Yorker.

Keep Birds Healthy

Most of the destructive fowl diseases are of bowel origin and are carried through droppings, either of domestic fowls or wild birds, and of the latter principally sparrows. These little pests also are impartial distributors of mites if permitted to nest about the buildings.

It is possible to maintain healthy profitable flocks if due attention is given to the control of parasites and prevention of disease. Many have found 1931 a profitable season, despite the low price of eggs. Broiler prices and the prices of all poultry meat held up fairly well all summer. Feed prices also were cheaper.—Exchange.

Dried Milk With Grain

Dried milk fed with grain rations has about equal value for chicks as whole liquid milk and is fed with less loss and less danger of attracting flies. A flaky product rather than a too finely ground dried milk powder is preferable. Meat scrap and dried skim milk in combination with the standard Wisconsin chick ration is satisfactory, but raw bone may then be omitted. But when the liquid milk is used the raw bone ought to be included.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Control of Worms

C. M. Ferguson, speaking on the control of worms in chickens, the Ohio Farmer reminds its readers, said control of parasites is dependent on a knowledge of the life cycle of the parasite and breaking this cycle. For this purpose confinement, range rotation, wire floors and cinder yards are beneficial. Worm remedies, says Ferguson, should not be used until one is sure that a flock is infested. Treatment should then be given according to the kind of worm found.

Hens Paid Well

Hens last year paid Elmer Hanson, Clary county, South Dakota, $2.32 an hour for time spent on them. Mr. Hanson kept a complete record which showed that he devoted 490 hours to caring for 334 high producing hens. The flock returned $1,160.78 above feed costs. Mr. Hanson's record shows that even at low prices, eggs and poultry still are money makers. The record also revealed the most economical methods and the feeds that give best results.—Capper's Farmer.

GREAT LOVE KNOWN ONLY TO THE FEW

Ordinary People Incapable of Intense Emotion.

To the disinterested observer, the present-day attitude toward romantic love seems compounded of two closely connected elements. There is nothing new about this; only the two used to manifest themselves, in accordance with a different fashion.

For the simple fact is that the great love of which poets used to sing and novelists to write was, is, and always has been, the possession of the few; a gift as rare and as inexplicable as genius.

The hypocrisy of the past lay in assuming it to be something of which every one was capable, and trying to dress up small affections and ordinary sex attractions in its splendid habiliments; the hypocrisy of today lies in denying its existence even as the distinction of the few, a denial perfectly in harmony with that general dragging-down process, now so energetically pursued under the sweet and euphonious name of debunking.

In its mental and emotional aspects, this so-called machine age is primarily an age of leveling down. Instead of striving to reach up, it is the easy fashion to deny that there is anything above which might be worth striving to reach up to.

Because the vast majority of people are as incapable of feeding great emotion as they are of composing great music, they find satisfaction, as well as an immense lessening of strain, in declaring that great emotions are merely so much bunk.

Inability to grieve intensely they miscall being sensible; inability to hate intensely they miscall tolerance; and because they know they are themselves incapable of loving greatly, they blithely echo Rosalind's playful statement: "Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love!"—Louise Maunsel Field in the North American Review.

Noisy Silence

Paul, who made his home with his grandmother in a large house in the country, missed his older sister while she was at school.

Trying to dispel his loneliness, he resorted to conversation with his grandmother. This had gone on most of the forenoon one day, when his grandmother in desperation asked him:

"Paul, why don't you keep still for a while? You are about to talk me to death."

"Well, grandma," he replied, "when I don't talk, the clock ticks so loud."

For Police Dogs, Maybe

Virginia's dad was pointing out to her different things in an old picture of Camp Knox. At one side was a group of small tents which he told her were "mud tents." She seemed very much interested and said:

"Why dad, were they for the police dogs in the army?"—Indianapolis News.

The villain is always caught in the act—usually the last act.

Doesn't civilization include kindness of heart, too?

The Gloom Chasers—Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle and Bud—comedians heard twice weekly over the WABC-Columbia network, have signed a contract calling for their appearance in the near future in vaudeville houses in the Middle West.

The best place to use commercial fertilizers, as top dressing for permanent pasture, has been found to be on level meadows or fields where the soil is deep and holds the moisture. The use of commercial fertilizer on sand or gravel knolls, or on dry, thin, stony pastures does not yield generally satisfactory results.

THIRTY-ONE MORTGAGES FORECLOSED IN FOND DU LAC COUNTY

For the first quarter of 1932 there have been 31 farm and city foreclosure judgments entered in the circuit court at Fond du Lac. This total is more than the total of twenty years after the panic of 1893. Several reasons might be given for this condition, the shrinkage of valuations, and the fact that many farmers who borrowed money, are faced with the problems of paying larger amounts of interest and higher taxes with considerable lower incomes.

At the time of the panic in 1893 farmers were better prepared to meet the situation, although prices were low, they owed very little, and were accustomed to living in a decent way, being economical with their expenses. When the times began to get better and money was more plentiful spending was more free. When the crash came in August, 1929, the farmer failed to grasp the situation, but carried on believing everything would be rosy within a short period of time. The city people were thrown out of employment, could not keep up their payments, and immediately were forced to relinquish their holdings at severe losses.

As soon as weather conditions are favorable, grasshopper eggs which were deposited in the late summer and early fall, will begin hatching, according to entomologists. The largest number of grasshoppers are expected to appear during the months of June and July with the adult forms appearing about August 1 when they will be flying about and be more commonly noticed.

ASSESSORS RECEIVED INSTRUCTIONS

The assessors of Fond du Lac county attended an "instruction conference" at Fond du Lac last week Thursday, and were given a new schedule of basic values for livestock in conformity with the present market quotations, the lowest in many years. Good grade milk cows valued last year between $50 and $60 were cut to $35 and $50, while purebreds valued at $60 were cut to $25 and $35. Common grade milk cows were cut to $20 and $30. Last year they ranged from $35 to $50. Two-year-old heifers classed as beef cattle, last year were $30 to $50. This year it will be $20 to $25. Yearlings in 1931 were $20 to $30, while for 1932 they will be valued up to $20. Bulls last year were valued at $50 to $100; this year the range will be from $40 to $60.

Brood sows will be assessed from $10 to $15 per head, pedigreed stock a trifle higher. Other swine will be assessed the same as last year, $1.00, under the Chicago market. Steers of all kinds will be set down at market prices for beef. Breeding sheep will be valued at $2 to $5 per head, while other sheep will be assessed at market prices. Assessors were instructed to start work at once, taking values of personal property and real estate as of May 1. Each assessor is to make 15 assessments of personal property and send copies to the office of Assessor of Incomes, then discontinue and await further instructions. Horses, wagons and sleighs will be omitted this year, these being exempt.

MUSICAL FESTIVAL AT GONRING'S

One thousand children of the one and two room schools of Washington County will appear in a musical festival at Gonring's Pavilion on Sunday, May 8th, beginning at 2:00 o'clock p. m. This festival is one of the projects that the teachers have been working on in connection with the music work. The children have been working earnestly and the group practices indicate that the program will be one of the most pleasing that has been rendered by those young musicians.

The program will begin with Songs of the Seasons, German Folk Songs. This will be followed by unison and two part singing. The program will be concluded by an Adaptation of Humperdyck's Children's Opera "Hansel and Gretel," Miss Katherine Vea, supervisor of music has been assisting the teachers in arranging this program.

The last county musical festival was attended by at least six thousand people, many of whom could not gain admission to the hall. If the attendance will be as large this year it is the intention of those in charge to repeat the program.

The parents and teachers are giving excellent cooperation and everything points to an interesting program.

IN MEMORIAM

In remembrance of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. George Kibbel Sr., who died a year ago April 29, 1931. One year has passed since that sad day. The one we loved was called away. God took her home as was His will. But in our hearts she lives still. Her smiling way and pleasant face are a pleasure to recall. She had a kindly word for each, and died beloved by all. We think of her in silence, No eye may see us weep, But many silent tears are shed. When others are asleep, Some day we hope to meet her; Some day, we know not where, To clasp her hand in a better land Never to part again.
Sadly missed by her Husband and Children.
