

KEWASKUM HIGH SCHOOL COLUMN

JUNIOR PROM MAY 12
On Friday May 12, in the High School Gymnasium, will be held the annual Junior Prom.
Elaborate preparations are now being made that this year's social event may be the best in the school's history.
Wally Bean and his band of ten master musicians has been engaged to furnish the music.
The Juniors wish to extend to all a most cordial invitation. "Meet your friends at the Prom."
OPERETTA TONIGHT, FRIDAY
The Operetta, "In the Greenwoods" to be presented tonight by the pupils of the local grades has all indications of being the type of entertainment that will be much enjoyed by the community. The advance sale of seats indicate a capacity attendance.

PRIMARY NEWS
These people were the winners in our last "Good Conduct Race": Homer Schaak, Donald Mertes, Wilmer Bunkelman and Robert Brauchle.
The following people had a perfect attendance record for the past six weeks: Robert Brauchle, Willard Mustel, Dolores Ramthun, Homer Schaak, Allen Brussel, Donald Mertes, Darwin Brussel and Beatrice Vorpal.
TO OBSERVE MUSIC WEEK
A Community Music program will be held in the High School auditorium on Friday evening, May 5. Any organization wishing to present numbers are invited to make arrangement with the school. The program will be of about one hour's duration and will be closed with community singing. The public is invited to attend.

KEWASKUM 5, RANDOM LAKE 0
The high school ball team opened the season on Tuesday by defeating Random Lake 5 to 0. The cool weather made the game ragged at times and kept the batting average at low ebb. The locals collected 5 hits against Random's 4 hits. Marx hit a homer on his last trip to the plate, Rinzel, pitching the first game for the locals, did a smashing job. He was relieved by Hart in the sixth inning.
The line-up was as follows:

TOTAL	5	0	0

Buenheimer relieved Miller in right field in the 5th inning and Honeck took Marx's place in left field when Marx relieved Rinzel at pitching.
On Friday Grafton plays here, and West Bend is scheduled on the home grounds on Tuesday, May 2nd. Come and see these two games.
Women in Pepin county have been spending a few spare hours each month this winter studying things about home management. One hundred and fifty-one women have attended meetings where they have given consideration to "Business Every Wisconsin Woman Should Know."

BADGER STATE LEAGUE COMPLETES ORGANIZATION

The Badger State baseball league was organized at West Bend on Monday evening at a meeting held at the West Bend News office, six teams buying a franchise.
The six teams joining the Badger circuit are: North Fond du Lac, Mayville, Port Washington, Kewaskum, Sheboygan Falls, and West Bend. Port Washington is the only new member in the league, taking the place of the Menomonee Falls club.
A set of by-laws were adopted at the meeting, the teams to stick to strict amateur ball, confining the different cities to recruiting ball players to a radius of 12 miles.
A twenty game schedule was also adopted, the first games to be played on Sunday, May 14. Three directors were elected at the meeting to handle the affairs and settle all disputes that may arise. The directors elected are: Art, J. Koch of Kewaskum, H. "Frenchie" Du Franc of North Fond du Lac, and A. J. Thielke of Mayville. After the league was organized the directors selected Frank Bingham of West Bend as Athletic Director.
The Directors and Athletic Director will hold another meeting this week to approve of a schedule now being drawn up by Mr. Bingham.—West Bend News.

BASEBALL IN THE LIMELIGHT

The season for baseball is now with us, and from now on there will be plenty of amusement for the baseball enthusiasts every Sunday. For an eye opener the management of the Kewaskum Athletic Club has arranged a pre season game to be played with the Plymouth Merchants of the Eastern Wisconsin League, on the local diamond Sunday, April 30th.
Gibby Juers, who was on the mound for Kewaskum at the ball game played at the Washington County Fair at West Bend last fall, will be on the mound for the visitors. Last Sunday in a game played at Plymouth against a team from Sheboygan Falls, Juers struck out thirteen men. Reliable Stanley Wisniewski will take care of the pitching duties for the locals with "Champ" Kral on the receiving end. The game is expected to start at 2:30 o'clock sharp.
All baseball fans are invited and urged to witness this game. Give the locals your support for a good start of the year.

PEACE EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Welcome all! Sunday school at 9:00 a.m. English service at 10:00 a.m. Young People's meeting Monday evening. All our young people are urged to come. A special invitation to this year's confirmands is extended. Meet with us and join the League.
Monthly meeting of the church council Tuesday evenings.
Regular meeting of Ladies A.M. on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Come, ladies, this is the last meeting before the convention.

Brother and Sister Tortured * In Hold Up and Robbery

Large Amount of Loot Taken by the Robbers. Both the Victims of the Cold Blooded Attack Are Recovering. No Clue to Robbers Found

In the most daring and horrifying hold-up ever committed in this community, Michael Pesch, 58, and sister, Kate, both residing on the Pesch homestead two miles north of this village on the River Road, in the town of Auburn, Fond du Lac county, were unmercifully tortured by three bandits last Sunday afternoon, and robbed of their cash, liberty bonds, mortgage papers, deeds, certificate of deposits, personal notes and numerous other legal papers. The robbery was committed between the hours of 3:30 and 5:30. The fourth bandit remained at the wheel of a powerful new Cadillac sedan parked behind wood piles close to the house.
The bandits, no doubt, were prevented in staging the hold-up at an earlier hour of the afternoon, on account of Joseph Theusch, a brother-in-law, and his son, Walter, who were visiting at the home.
The bandits after being unable to obtain the necessary information as to where the hidden money was, ransacked the whole house, from basement to attic, strewn contents of boxes, cutting up of mattresses and turned up practically every piece of furniture or other articles in the house. They even went so far as to cut open hams and spilled out lard from jars, thinking the money was perhaps hidden in them. The sight of the place after the ransacking was done, was terrible.
The money, liberty bonds and papers were found securely wrapped in a box in a trunk in Miss Pesch's bedroom. It is estimated that approximately $1,650 in cash, which was in gold and currency, and 19 liberty bonds, totaling $8,900 were stolen. $100 cash was also taken from the sister's handbag which was in the dining room.
The four bandits were seen in the village as early as 1:30 that afternoon by several citizens, and later again in the afternoon, when they were driving back and forth, no doubt waiting for the departure of Mr. Theusch and his son from the Pesch home. No one, who saw the bandits driving about, took special notice of the license plates on the car, but from stories told, all took special notice of the make of the car and were wondering who the strangers were.

he was determined not to reveal the secret hiding place of his fortune. Another bandit kept continually striking Mr. Pesch on the tied hands, which soon swelled to an enormous size, but no word would come from the lips of Mr. Pesch revealing the whereabouts of the hidden treasure. He was also struck several times on the back of his head with the butt end of a revolver. While Mr. Pesch was being tortured by two bandits, the third was busily engaged in doing the dirty work of ransacking the house.
At the time the four bandits made their appearance at the home, Kate was gathering the day's eggs. As she returned to the house, she passed the parked car, and the driver told her to go into the house as there were some men waiting for her. When she entered the kitchen, Mich. yelled to her to get out the house, but one of the men grabbed her, blindfolded, gagged and tied her hands behind her back and dragged her in the dining room forcing her to lay on the floor with her face down. She pleaded for mercy different times, but the more she pleaded, the tighter was the band around her mouth drawn, until she became exhausted. Miss Pesch also refused to tell where the money was. She stated that when returning to the house after gathering the eggs, she carefully noticed that the auto was new, large and black with considerable nickel trimming and that the driver was a husky young man and wore a light felt hat. She is positive that she could identify the car and the driver. Her description of the car readily corresponds with the description of the car seen by several village citizens. It has also been reported that during the course of the afternoon this same car was seen at New Fane and St. Michaels.

Washington county officials co-operating.
One party in the village noticed a car answering the description of the bandit car passing through the village going west on Main street at about 5:20 p.m., which time corresponds to the time that Mr. Pesch stated the bandits left his place.
The hold-up, without a question, was committed by men well informed with the surroundings and that the Pesch family had considerable money about the premises. The authorities are of the opinion that someone in the community acted as the tipster, and upon this theory are making a stringent investigation. It is also believed that the men were gangsters from Chicago.
The liberty bonds stolen were not registered, but the Pesch's kept a record of the serial numbers of each bond they possessed. These numbers have been reported to the proper officials in an effort to stop the cashing of the bonds or coupons. The bonds stolen are as follows: K0023550, G00524697, J02406489, C01730003, B00054122, H057-53398, A93666351, K93719170, D03708864, A0019811, G04500437, E03408855, H0247-2708, C02423123, J06362689, K06363700, A06363701, B06363702, C06363703.

LOCAL ALUMINUM PLANT WORKING OVER TIME

The Kewaskum Aluminum Company has been exceptional busy the past few weeks manufacturing beer mugs and other articles. Orders are being received daily. Additional men have been added and all are working approximately 12 1/2 hours four days a week and 10 hours two days a week. The rush still continues, and it is contemplated that with the numbers of orders coming to the office that more men will be added soon.

DANCE AT OPERA HOUSE SATURDAY, APRIL 29

For a real good time and good dance music be sure to attend the dance at the Opera House, Kewaskum, on Saturday evening, April 29. Music for the occasion will be furnished by "The Cardinal High Hatters", an orchestra consisting of ten men. Admission 40 and 15 cents.

DR. H. DRIESSEL CALLED APRIL 25th. OTHER DEATHS

Dr. Henry Driessel, 78, one of Kewaskum's prominent citizen and a noted physician, died at his home in the village, Tuesday afternoon, April 25, at about two o'clock. The doctor had been ill for about a year, but managed to be up and around until a week previous to his death, when he was confined to his bed and gradually grew weaker. Death was due to cardiac and kidney trouble.
Deceased was born at Holy Cross, Wisconsin, on November 25, 1854. When a young man he attended the Rush Medical College at Chicago, and after completing his course there in 1878 he took charge of his father's practice at Hilbert, Wis. On November 25, 1881, he married Miss Dorothy Arenz of DePere, Wis. After practicing medicine at Hilbert for a number of years he then attended the Louisville Medical College, at Louisville, Ky., taking up a post graduate course, graduating from same in March 1898. That same year he commenced practicing medicine at Lomira, and in 1907 came to this village, where he continued the practice.
Besides his wife, he is survived by four children, Dr. Sylvester Driessel of West Bend, Ursula (Mrs. Carl Anderson) of Oshkosh, Mrs. Lena Becker and Miss Camilla Driessel at home. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Mary Miller, of Oshkosh, and Mrs. Margaret J. of Spokane, Wash., nine grandchildren and one great grand child.
The Doctor was a member of the American Medical Society and the present Health Officer of the village.
The funeral will be held this morning, Friday, at 9:30 o'clock which will be conducted by Rev. Ph. J. Vogt. Interment will be made in the congregation's cemetery.

LORRAINE KOCH OF BEECHWOOD PASSES AWAY TUESDAY

The grim reaper again hit the Koch family at Beechwood, when death called, Miss Lorraine, the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Arthur Koch on Tuesday evening, April 25, at 11:15. The young girl had been ill since last Christmas with heart trouble.
Deceased is survived by her grief stricken mother, one brother, Charles, 8 years, and one sister, Margery, 3 years. Her father Arthur Koch, preceded her in death on December 6, 1922.
The funeral will be held this, Friday, afternoon, with services in the Beechwood St. John's Lutheran church. Burial will be made in the Beechwood cemetery. The Reverend's Krueger of Sheboygan and Koehne of Silver Creek will officiate.

Studying Sitting Bull's Own Story of His Life

Museum Claims Hieroglyphs Bear His Signature.

Washington, D. C.—Curious documents relating to Sitting Bull, the celebrated chieftain who generally is held responsible for the so-called "Custer massacre," are being studied by the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution. The story of this colorful Indian leader is now arousing exceptional interest in Europe. Numerous inquiries have lately been received from France, England, and Germany. The bureau has one manuscript which bears strong internal evidence of being an original and hitherto unknown hieroglyph autobiography pre-and scapling was a game for Sitting Bull and every "coup" added one to his score. He esteemed a "coup" about as much as a scalp.

It is as an object of comparison that the bureau's manuscript stands out. It bears the date of 1882. Instead of the hieroglyphic signature the pictures bear the written signature of Sitting Bull—a peculiar, child-like scrawl. It has been verified that before 1882 Sitting Bull had learned to write his name and was rather proud of the accomplishment.

Specimens of the old chief's signature have been preserved. Comparison with the signatures on the drawings shows that if the latter are forgeries they are very clever ones—reproducing minute mannerisms. But, asks Mr. Stirling, why should anybody have gone to such trouble to forge the name of Sitting Bull in 1882? At that time he was "just another Indian." It would have been a very far-sighted person who could have predicted that some day an authentic autobiography by him would constitute an almost priceless historical document. On the whole, it is believed, the evidence points to the authenticity of the newly discovered document.

TYPICAL 1934 BEAUTY

This favored young lady, June Glory is said to fit perfectly the requirements laid down by beauty experts who attended the international beauty convention at Hollywood, Calif. Her measurements are: Height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight, 116 pounds; neck, 12 inches; shoulders, 33 inches; waist, 25 inches; bust, 35 inches; hips, 36 inches; thigh, 20 1/2 inches; and calf, 13 1/2 inches.

pared by Sitting Bull himself. Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the bureau, is now investigating the authenticity of this manuscript which, if it actually was prepared by the chief, shows him to have been a skillful artist.

Autobiography in Pictures. It is well known that the great Sioux leader wished to leave an authentic story of his life. Shortly after the Civil war he prepared his first "autobiography" in pictures. He could not write his name at this time but authenticated each drawing with his hieroglyph signature, a conventionalized picture of a sitting bull. He gave the original manuscript to his brother, Jumping Bull, who—as the story reaches Mr. Stirling—allowed two copies to be made of it by an Indian named Four Horns.

The bureau of American ethnology has one of these reputed copies. The other is believed to have been destroyed in the San Francisco fire. No trace ever has been found of the original. The copy owned by the Smithsonian is mounted on sheets of an 1868 muster roll of the Thirty-first Infantry regiment and evidently was made for one of its officers. It consists of 55 pictures, each illustrating some incident in Sitting Bull's life from his first fight to his leadership of the Band of Strong Hearts.

The bureau also has Sitting Bull's own interpretation of these pictures, given to Rev. J. C. Williamson, a missionary, in which he vouched that all but a few of them were copies of his originals. He believed at that time that Jumping Bull had interpolated a few incidents out of his own life.

Sitting Bull's "Coups." The character of the man himself stands out in these pictures. Nearly all of them relate to personal combats with Crow or Gros Ventre Indians or white soldiers. Many of these fights ending with the scalp of his opponent hanging from Sitting Bull's saddle. But he was even prouder of his "coups" than of the scalps he had taken. His object was to touch the enemy with his "coup stick" and get away. In accord with the tradition of his people, this life of constant killing

44 Legislatures Reduce Expenses

More Than $200,000,000 Was Lopped From Budgets.

Washington, D. C.—Legislatures in 44 states which met this year cut taxpayers $5,875,230 in salaries and effected savings estimated at more than $200,000,000, a survey revealed. The salaries were paid to 6,687 legislators. Incidental expenses for legislative sessions bring the total above $11,000,000. In four states—Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia—no legislative sessions were held. Twenty-four states paid legislators on a work-day basis ranging from $3 to $15 per day. The larger figure is paid in Arizona and the lower in Kansas, Michigan, and Oregon. The remaining twenty states paid their representatives a set amount a session, ranging from $200 for New Hampshire to $3,500 for Illinois and $3,000 for Pennsylvania.

Legislative experts computed that $100,000,000 had already been saved to taxpayers, although 32 legislatures

Nuisance May Become Source of New Industry

Minneapolis, Minn.—The aspen growth of the Northwest, hitherto regarded as a nuisance by farmers, may become the source of a new industry and give Minnesota a new source of income.

Experiments conducted at the University of Minnesota under the auspices of Ralph E. Montona, associate professor of chemistry, show that a high grade of alpha cellulose can be made from the aspen. Alpha cellulose is used in the manufacture of cellophane and rayon fabric.

The research was conducted as part of the rehabilitation program instituted last summer by Lotus D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota.

Catching Sap on Coolidge Sugar Lot

The coming of spring is the signal for the maple trees to begin yielding their maple sugar sap. And the old sugar lot of the late Calvin Coolidge once more takes on an active appearance. It was at this same old sugar lot that the late President and his father, Col. John Coolidge, worked year after year gathering the sap and boiling it down into maple sugar. It may be spring but still three feet of snow covers the ground. Here are the oxen dragging the maple sap to the sugar house for boiling down.

Henryetta, Okla.—An ordinary black and yellow speckled house cat has adopted two rats to raise along with her brood of four kittens at the Miracle Sweet Feed mill here. E. A. Croom, part owner of the mill, found a nest of young rats in the building. Intending to furnish a wholesome meal for the mother cat and her four young ones, Croom placed the baby rats in the cat's pen. Instead of devouring them, however, the sympathetic cat promptly began to mother them.

Wife Investigates; Is Knocked Out by Burglar

Stockton, Calif.—When Charles H. Huston arrived home early in the morning, he found his wife unconscious on the floor with a swollen jaw. When she regained consciousness she related that, hearing a noise, she arose to investigate and encountered a burglar, who struck her. She had been "out" for about fifteen minutes, she estimated.

WHAT GIRL IN HER TEENS SHOULD DO FOR GOOD HEALTH

By AMELIA H. GRANT, M. A. R. N., Director, Bureau of Nursing, New York City Health Department.

THAT BOYISH FIGURE

Trim lines can be maintained or attained; it is wholly a matter of diet and exercise. Proper weight cannot be gained safely by so-called reducing powders, soaps, or dangerous nostrums. If you are overweight, all that is necessary is to cut down on fatty and starchy foods. Eat plenty of fresh green vegetables and fresh fruits; drink plenty of milk, tomato juice, and orange juice; refrain from confections, puddings, pies and pastry.

A "daily dozen" each morning, and a walk morning and evening, each about a mile, will give you ample exercise. A daily shower bath, or tub, if you prefer, will aid the skin to exude perspiration and eliminate body poisons.

No special diet is necessary. Just eat fewer fats, starches and sugars. Above all, avoid reducing fads. Fat cannot be dissolved by baths, or sweated off or rolled off by massage rollers. It must be worked off.

Be sure that you are really overweight before you undertake to reduce. Many young girls ruin their health by trying to be too thin. It is better, particularly during the adolescent years, for you to be a little heavier than the average.

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual, National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

At the moment, good news concerning business is outweighing the bad. Corn, wheat, rye and sugar all recently reached new highs for the year. Electric power output tends to be proportionately better in comparison to earlier part of this year. The American Railway Association forecasts that in the second quarter of 1933, the reduction in freight car loadings will be the smallest in three years. Steel output is showing a moderate advance. Money rates continue to come down rapidly. Tremendous importance is attached to the forthcoming international economic conferences between President Roosevelt, his advisors, and representatives of the principal foreign governments. World rehabilitation will naturally be the subject of conversation—and that entails an enormously varied number of subjects, Tariff, war debts, armaments, gold standard, currency problems, inflation deflation, reflation—these are some of the topics which must be discussed, and when the average citizen reflects how little he knows of any of them he can appreciate the difficulties that will be faced by all concerned. At this writing, it is assured that Ramsay Mac Donald will come personally; that Mussolini will do likewise if possible; that France has sent Herriot, and that Hitler will send a representative. Only major power not invited was Russia, as no diplomatic relations exist between her and the United States. One of the main barriers to recovery is that there exists throughout the world today what might be called a "currency blockade." Fifty of the fifty-two existing nations, in order to save their currencies from collapse, have forbidden the normal international flow of money. Trade between countries has all but come to an end. To restore foreign trade to the dominant economic position it once held, is a problem all countries face.

By shearing the government of what the Administration believes to be luxuries, the budget balancing program is expected to produce at least $350,000,000 in economies during the 1934 fiscal year, in addition to the $670,000,000 cut already made. Features of the billion-dollar saving plan which have been announced or effected so far are: Veterans' cuts totaling $450,000,000; salary cuts totaling $120,000,000; savings on direct expenses, $350,000,000; additional revenue from beer, $150,000,000.

A short time ago the Committee for the Nation, representing 300 industrial leaders made public its plan to restore prices. The plan includes: Fastest possible reopening of banks; currency expansion to protect depositors of banks which have not yet reopened; government guarantee of deposits of all banks which have been reopened and held sound; continued embargo on gold exports and suspension of specie payment; removal of restrictions upon foreign exchange dealings which do not involve gold; revaluation of gold, by raising its stipulated price from the present level of $20.67 per ounce to $36.17 per ounce; creation of a Federal non-partisan board to stabilize the United States' general price level of wholesale commodity prices at 100, this being the average of price levels from 1921 to 1930. The report was signed by the following directing committee: Lessing J. Rosenwald, Chairman, Sears, Roebuck & Company; F. H. Sexauer, President, Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc.; F. H. Frazier, Chairman, General Banking Company; Vincent Bendix, President, Bendix Aviation Company; J. H. Pand, Jr., President, Itemington Rand, Inc.

FOREIGN TRADE—Despite declines of 23 per cent in the volume and 33 per cent in the value of shipments to foreign countries, the United States was the world's leading export nation in 1932.

RETAIL TRADE—Definitely improved in most large centers. This has been due partly to Easter—seasonal—buying, partly to what is apparently a new "pending attitude" on the part of a public with renewed confidence.

WHEAT—Winter wheat production this year is forecast at 334,000,000 bushels as compared with 462,000,000 bushels last year, and 589,000,000 bushel average for the five years 1928-30. Prices are steady and improving.

WOOL—In western growing regions, the market is very firm, with trading reasonably active. Prices are on the upgrade.

MOTORS—Automobile executives are both surprised and elated at reports of retail sales reaching them from all parts of the country.

RAILROADS—Awaiting working out of Administration program with confidence and hope. Cheer sign is the possibility of the elimination of the recapture clause of the Transportation Act.

Business Always Looks Dark to He Who Waits

Easy chairs went out of style almost two years ago. Getting business today requires action. Business staffs are too small and the business man does not have hours enough to personally go out after every piece of business to be had through hustling. That is where the printed word works most effectively for him. And the cost of selling is so much less—upon strained budgets. Printing prices in our city are also down, but there's no let down in the quality of the work. Prompt service too. We are geared for speed. Waiting here.

AUGUST ARNDT, BEECHWOOD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

The funeral services of the late August Arndt, 69, of the town of Scott, Sheboygan county, who died at his home at Beechwood on Easter Sunday, April 16, was held on Wednesday afternoon, April 19, at the Immanuel Lutheran church, Town Scott. Burial was made in the adjoining cemetery. Rev. G. Kanless officiated. The pallbearers were: Charles Staeger, August Staeger, William Koepke, William Janssen, Fred Schultz and Oscar Muench. The deceased had been ill for several months. He was born April 18, 1864 in the town of Scott. On November 24, 1891, he was united in marriage to Miss Wilhelmine Gatzke. Mr. Arndt practically lived his entire life in the town of Scott. He is survived by his wife, and five daughters, Mrs. John Brandenburg, Mrs. Louis Butzke, Mrs. Ernst Hausen, Mrs. Albert Lohse and Mrs. Alvin Butzke. There are also 10 grandchildren, one great grandchild, and one sister, Mrs. Ewald Theil, of Leavenworth, Kansas.
Those from afar who attended the funeral were: Mrs. Otto Arndt and son, Waukegan; Mrs. John Arndt and son, Albert Schultz and family, Me; and Mrs. Fred Arndt, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wells, Random Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Mau, Saukville; Mrs. H. Plantz, West Bend; Mr. and Mrs. R. Schmidt, Herman Schmidt and Ruth Schmidt, Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. F. Heller, Mr. and Mrs. Art. Boettcheff, Bonduel; Mr. and Mrs. Aug. Heller, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wagner, Cecil; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Bartelt and son, Arthur, Underhill; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gatzke, Campbellsport; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wasmuth and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Wasmuth, Cascade; Mrs. Wm. Ebelst, Plymouth; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Gatzke, Milwaukee; and numerous other relatives and friends.

BUSINESS BRIGHTENS IN WASHINGTON COUNTY

That business is picking up in Washington county, can be best judged that over 40 men have notified the Washington County Relief Committee that they no longer need further aid as they were successful in finding work that will keep them busy, for at least, a few months.
Not only have these men been able to secure work, but reports come to us from all sections of the county that numerous people have found employment, who have been out of work for some time.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO OFFER PRIZES

The Kewaskum Woman's Club has decided to observe National Garden Week by offering prizes to the boys and girls who, on Wednesday afternoon, September 6, 1933, bring bouquets to the Public Library.
The four first prizes, of one dollar each, will be given to the boy or girl who brings in the most beautiful bouquet of either asters, dahlias, gladioli, or a mixed bouquet. Four fifty cent prizes will be given to the boy or girl who has the second prettiest bouquet.
Each contestant is to care for his or her garden.
All who wish to enter this contest please notify Mrs. Otto E. Lay before May 5.

TONE UP, PURIFY IN THE SPRING

Every woman knows that her house has to be cleaned thoroughly every Spring. During winter, dust, dirt and germs accumulate in the corners, under the rugs, in the curtains "an" every place. Just so with your system—it should be given a thorough cleansing, purifying this spring. HOOLISTER'S ROCKY MOUNTAIN TEA will do the job slick and quick. It will clean your system, freshen and purify you all over—you'll enjoy living, eat better, sleep better—feel better.—Otto Graf.

Historic Montreal Church Burns

Firemen are seen directing streams of water into the flaming roof of the historic St. Jacques Mineur church, Montreal's oldest and most famous religious edifice, during the fire that reduced the once beautiful structure into a mass of ruins. The fire started while nearly 2,000 worshippers were attending mass, but all escaped.

Lights of NEW YORK

One of the tears of your correspondent is that when he is somewhere else—the old home town for instance—he'll forget and think he's still in New York. Should that happen, it would be just too bad. Possibly, he would get his face mused. Certainly, the mildest thing that would happen would be that he would be told he had been brought up better. The reason for that worry is the bad manners of New York. Bad manners are contagious and your correspondent has been shuttled about, allowed, shoo-kicked, brushed out of the way and snarled at for quite some time now.

In justice to New York, it must be said that bad manners are by no means a distinguishing feature of the metropolis. Your correspondent has observed extremely bad manners in Paris, which, once upon a time, he considered a courtly and gracious city. Bad manners have been thrust upon him in the U. S. A. at points quite remote from the island of Manhattan. But bad manners seem to be more universal here. They are encountered uptown and downtown, all around the town. They prevail on Park avenue just as they do on Delancey street.

One outstanding instance is the instinctive desire of the New Yorker to get ahead of others. As has been said often before, time seems of greater value here than elsewhere. The greater the crowds, the greater the hurry. Always there are those who advance themselves by the liberal use of elbows and sometimes the old straight arm. They may be only pint size or in build resemble a certain well-known make of trucks. But they try to get ahead just the same. And in that endeavor the female of the species is far more deadly than the male.

The subways are the finest examples of bad manners to be found anywhere. The race belongs not so much to the feet as it does to the strong. In it is absolute equality of sexes. Women and children are brushed aside when it comes to boarding a train. That is some women. Others are the ones who do the shoving aside and they are just as pitiless with their own sex as they are with men. Elevators in busy office buildings fur-

How It Started

"Sub Rosa"
THE English language is no respecter of persons, places, things, institutions or history. What it wants, it takes. Consider, for example, the Latin phrase, "Sub Rosa," meaning literally "under the rose"—meaning actually "secretly."
What has "under the rose" to do with "secretly"?
Therein lies a story involving legend, church ritual and etiquette.
Legend has it that Harpocrates was bribed by Cupid with a rose, in return from which he promised to be mute concerning the love life of the goddess Venus.
And those who desire, may seek the connection between this legend and the fact that Roman Catholic confessionals are graced with consecrated roses.
It is undoubtedly from these associations that the rose became the flower symbolic of silence.
At one time, it was quite the vogue to include as part of the decorations of public dining rooms in Europe, sculptured roses—a gentle hit to those who ate, to be deaf to what they heard at table.

Ocean Depths Give Up Rare Creatures

Washington, D. C.—Under the tossing surface of the southern seas is an infernal world of everlasting darkness inhabited by multitudes of curious creatures which exist almost together by the laws of claw and talon.
Such is the picture of conditions a few hundred fathoms below the surface of the Puerto Rico Deep, the deepest part of the Atlantic ocean, which much clinical material for those who desire to study the manners or lack of manners in New York. So do theater and motion picture lobbies. Much data can also be picked up in restaurants.

Judging by a somewhat extended survey of New Yorkers en masse—the individual New Yorker is apt to be quite another story—the New Yorker, if he is in a hurry, thinks only of himself. Traffic congestion would not be nearly so bad were not that true. In case of collision, it is perfectly good form for the guilty one to haul out the innocent victim. That holds true whether the violent meeting is between two cars or two pedestrians. To your correspondent's knowledge a trodden corn brings forth harsh remarks about feet taking up too much room, or a glare that subdues the injured party. There are a lot of towns where your correspondent would hate to try to get away with anything like that. But it can be done here.

Much has been written about the frozen insolence of theater box office men—they are a little more human now with so many theaters dark—as well as that of waiters, doormen and others. Your correspondent is willing to bear witness to the truth of such charges. He is also willing to bear witness to the fact that the local constabulary, when informing the motoring public of errors, is none too gentle in voice or words. In fact, he could cite a great mass of evidence of bad manners. Not so much as in the past, however, since there has been no little assimilation. Hence that worry.

Indians Give Young Paleface Real Thrill

Said to be the first white child of his age ever honored by an Indian christening, five-year-old Bobbie Alberts is the recipient of unique honor at the hands of braves from several tribes assembled at the southern California oasis in Palm Springs. Bobbie came wide-eyed to watch an Indian inter-tribal council held at Palm Springs. His flaming red hair attracted the braves who asked the privilege of giving him an Indian name. Conferring, they chose "Sunset" because of his hair and the fact that the christening pow-wow was held just as the sun set behind Mount San Jacinto.

INFLUENCE OF DIET ON TEETH

Need Proper Materials for Their Maintenance.

By EDITH M. BARBER

Teeth used to be considered largely a matter of luck—a matter of predestination—decided perhaps by the power of the good fairy who presided over our worldly affairs. While we do not cast aside our belief in the pre-natal influence upon teeth, we do, however, give credit or discredit largely to the diet of the mother. We also do not despair entirely if the teeth come in, in less than the best condition. Instead, we take even more than the usual care to add to the diet, foods which will help to strengthen the structure of the teeth and which will enable them to resist decay. We also are careful not to feed an oversupply of sugar, which seems to hasten decay of the teeth when eaten in too liberal quantities.

The tooth itself depends upon an adequate amount and a proper balance of the minerals, calcium and phosphorus and upon the vitamins A, C and D. As the first teeth are formed before birth, the diet of the mother must have liberal quantities of these essentials. At the same time, that the new baby's teeth are assured of proper nourishment, the mother's own teeth are protected. It used to be common to hear that the teeth of a new mother had been injured during pregnancy and that more than the usual amount of attention by the dentist was demanded after the birth of a child. It is strange that with this it took us so long to realize that the teeth, like every other part of the body, need nourishment.

Research work in regard to teeth is now going on in a number of laboratories and clinics throughout the country. Scientists disagree in regard to the cause and prevention of tooth decay, but most of them agree that the teeth must be supplied with proper materials for their construction and maintenance.

For calcium and phosphorus, milk is the best source. For vitamin A we turn to milk, to vegetables, especially carrots, spinach, lettuce and other greens; to fruits, especially oranges, bananas, pineapple, prunes, and to eggs.

For vitamin C, we depend upon citrus fruits, bananas, pineapples, tomatoes, raw cabbage, lettuce, spinach and other greens.

For vitamin D, we go outside the regular food supply and get it from the direct rays of the sun, from cod liver oil or from irradiated foods. The irradiation of food by ultra-violet rays from a certain type of lamps is one of the newer departures in the food world. There are several breakfast cereals which are treated in this way and as well, both a white and whole wheat bread—a few slices of which will give us what we need of this vitamin.

One or two dairy companies have been experimenting with feeding irradiated food to animals to produce milk with an adequate supply of vitamin D, especially for infant feeding.

A reader recently wrote me to ask if there was any danger to health in getting an oversupply of vitamins. This can be answered in the negative. Doctor McCollum, the famous nutritionist of Johns Hopkins university states that there is no danger of this, so that we can go on comfortably putting in as many vitamins as we can get into our diet in the interests of good teeth and good health of the whole body.

Caramel Bread Pudding.
1/2 cup sugar
3 cups milk
1 1/2 cups soft crumbs
3 eggs
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 teaspoon vanilla, or
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
Caramelize sugar by stirring in frying pan over moderate heat, until melted and light brown. Scald milk in double boiler and add caramel gradually, stirring constantly until dissolved. Pour over crumbs and let stand fifteen minutes. Beat eggs slightly, add salt and stir in crumb mixture and melted butter. Add flour and pour into greased baking dish. Set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one hour, or until set. Serve plain, with cream or foamy sauce or meringue.

Tomato Rarebit.
1 1/2 cups soft crumbs

This mountain goat's a funny sight: His shaggy hair is long and white, His little horns are sharp and black, He has a hump upon his back.

And if you had a winter coat Like this old Rocky Mountain goat, You'd know just how he keeps so warm In driving snow and winter storm.

He climbs up jagged rocky slopes Where men can scarcely go with ropes. If we should jump across such chasms We'd surely give our mothers spasms!

But he can scale a rocky wall And never slip or fall at all, For that's the way his mother did When she was just a little kid.

My Neighbor Says:

IN MAKING apple pies add a few raisins and see how the flavor is improved.

Combs should not be washed, for the water is apt to stiff the teeth. An old and fairly stiff nailbrush will be found very useful in cleaning them. Work the bristles well in and out between the teeth until all the dirt and fluff are removed and then wipe the comb carefully on a damp cloth.

When taking cakes from the oven, turn your tins upside down and let the cake steam or sweat for ten minutes. This will keep the cake moist, and it will drop out of the pan very easily.

To clean the top of an oil stove take a piece of cloth, wet it with kerosene and rub the top of stove. It will remove grease and dirt. Kerosene will remove grease or dirt on any surface when nothing else will.

Normandy Dons Festival Attire

Greets Spring With Quaint Age-Old Ceremonies.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

NORMANDY is planning for apple blossom time. Like Winchester, in the Valley of Virginia, and other great apple-growing regions of America, Normandy fares forth in festival attire when the buds of its famous apple trees burst in the spring.

Although the French are largely a wine-drinking people, the natives of Normandy drink apple cider. There, you can't eat a meal without cider, and you can't get married or die without cider. The old duchy, slightly smaller than the state of Maryland, is one huge orchard.

Even "When it's apple blossom time in Normandy," however, the duchy has many world-famous spots that also attract the attention of the traveler—Rouen, Deauville, Cherbourg, Havre, Bayeux, Honfleur, Dieppe, Falais, Alencon.

Normans swooping down, raiding, destroying, but finally settling on the land and giving it a softened form of their name; stalwart son of duke and tanner's daughter crossing the channel to make world history at Hastings; Norman dukes reigning in England; the king of the English reigning in Normandy. Armored knights clanking about, in London, Sicily, Naples, at the tomb of Christ. The Maid burnt at the stake. Daring sons of Normandy roaming the seas to fish, to explore and colonize unknown lands, from Newfoundland to the Antarctic, to the South Seas, around the world. Normans building lordly castles, chateaux, cathedrals, and abbeys of distinctive "Norman architecture," painting pictures, writing poetry, plays, and novels of enduring fame. Fousin and Miller, Pierre Corneille, Alain Chartier and Malherbe, Flaubert, De Maupassant, and others—a Norman galaxy.

Normandy does more than sit around and dream of the long ago. Through Havre, second seaport of France; through Cherbourg, it saw some of the legions pass to the western front. It has greeted kings and queens, admirals and generals, and heard the roar of cannon salutes, the boom of sky craft. Through these ports today pass travelers from the western world, and processions of consuls, agents, buyers, salesmen, ambassadors of commerce of every kind—hunters all, scenting the romance and adventure in foreign trade, in anything from anchovies to antiques.

Dress designers, looking to Paris for the first and last word on fashions, send "scouts" to the golden beaches of Deauville and its less aristocratic vis-a-vis, Trouville. Here, where the beau monde disports itself in season beneath gaily striped tents, at the casinos, along the promenades, and at the races, the gods and goddesses of style display their latest creations of beautiful women.

Back from white chalk cliffs and sandy beaches stretches a green and pleasant land of winding streams, fertile grain fields and pastures, hedgerows, orchards, well-kept farms, and villages of thatched cottages. There are hills and dales and glens, forests and waterfalls, and the typically Norman long, straight roads.

Famous for Cattle.
And cows! Innumerable herds spot the lush meadows everywhere, but especially in the Cotentin, the peninsula which points toward England. It has given its name to a Norman breed of cattle famous for beef, but more so for milk production. Paris drinks Normandy's milk and cream, and both London and Paris eat its fresh butter and cheese—Camembert, Neufchatel, Pont L'Eveque—with histories as distinguished as the duchy's own.

In one field men in blue smocks are leading hay into carts drawn by ponderous horses. "They're percherons!" exclaims the horse lover from the Middle West. "My Indiana neighbor used to import carloads of them. Don't they remind you of Rosa Bonheur's 'Horse Fair'?" As a matter of fact, most of her models for that picture were percherons.

Not all percherons come from Normandy, but breeders flock to the horse fairs held every year at Caen, Bernay, and elsewhere; and Normandy supplies the French cavalry with many of its mounts.

Another Normandy product is its patois; one's school book French will not serve here. In the daily common speech one authority has counted some 5,000 words which are foreign to French.

On an early visit to England, the future Conqueror found Normans everywhere. There were "Norman prelates in the bishoprics, Norman lords and soldiers in the fortresses, Norman captains and sailors in the seaports." The Conquest itself affected every phase of England's national activities, especially its political and social institutions. One writer has called attention to the fact that for more than 800 years the British parliament has used Norman French when imploring the king to approve or reject its laws.

Though the old Norse language died out quickly in Normandy, it left behind place names as Dieppe, "deep"; Harfleur and Barfleur, "har," "har," "har," meaning "small river"; in Tancarville, "toft" or "inclosure." As William the Conqueror lies in the last of the Scandinavian types which persist to this day in various districts.

As to the origin of the Normans' inclination to "hedge" on every question, let historians argue as they will, but it is a fact that one must usually labor hard to extract a plain yes or no from him. "Was the apple tree large this year?" You ask. His classic reply is: "Well, for a good apple year, it is not too good; but for a bad apple year, it is not too bad."

The tendency to avail himself of subtle distinctions may account for the Norman's reputation as a somewhat grasping character, and his fondness for legal forms and lawsuits has earned for him and his fellow-countrymen the title of "the lawyers of France."

For all that, the Norman has his own traditions of fun and good fellowship. Remember, he likes his cider! And never Norman more so than one Oliver Basselin, he of the red nose, who sang songs in praise of hard work long before Villon roistered and recited in Paris wine shops. Basselin ran a fulling mill near the little village known as Vaux de Vire. From it his songs took their name, and these, in turn, gave rise to the corrupted term "vaudeville."

Natural Curiosity.

Thirty miles southwest of Vire, on the cross fells, on the border between Normandy and Brittany, towers the duchy's most imposing natural curiosity and its finest coastal monument of the Middle Ages—stupendous Mont Saint Michel. It is a granite island 3,000 feet in circumference, with immense walls and towers, placed with houses climbing up its sides, and the whole crowned with an abbey, shrine of the Archangel Michael, seat of high places. Lower of the unique find in its historical associations, in the grandeur of its ward aspect, an appeal and a fascination similar to those of Carossano.

East of Vire is Falaise, where Robert the Devil, the Magnificent, looked out of the castle window and saw in France; through Cherbourg, it saw some of the legions pass to the western front. It has greeted kings and queens, admirals and generals, and heard the roar of cannon salutes, the North of Falaise is Caen, a Norman Athens and unrivaled center for the study of Norman art. Here the Normans' extraordinary faculty for adaptation appears at its best. Though they invented little that was new, they adopted from other countries, developed and improved. French language and literature, French feudal doctrines, and Romanesque architecture in particular bear the stamp of the genius. In Norman hands this structural form from northern Italy became a distinctive, living thing, made by great size, simplicity, and massiveness, and love of geometric ornament. The two abbeys founded here by the Conqueror and his wife are superb examples of the architecture which preceded the rise of the early Gothic in the Thirteenth century, and which also crossed the channel even before the Conquest.

The Conqueror was buried in one of these abbeys, and Matilda, his only wife, in the other. Both were built with the hope of conciliating the English regarding their marriage.

What a courtship was William's! A seven-year siege of Matilda's land. Matilda from the lady, slighted not to be rushed into Matilda's prison, but her by the hair, dragging her across the room, striking her, flinging her on the floor. After that she said yes!

Gathered His Hosts.
Still farther north is Dover. Here in those stirring days of 1066, the victor at Hastings gathered together "an innumerable host of knights, slingers, and foot soldiers," and adventurous spirits, the war veterans of northern Europe, eager for the battle over the sea. In the river's mouth lay some 700 ships. The largest carried hold fifty knights with all their horses and men; the smallest bore only a few even decked over and were loaded with the gunnals with stores and provisions, including small grinding stones for the grain.

For pictorial history of the Conquest go to Bayeux and look at the famous Bayeux tapestry. Probably no other fabric anywhere in the world surpasses it in interest and importance. Crude though it is in design, and generally defaced, it nevertheless records a momentous period in world history.

But all Normans roads lead to Caen at last. Rouen, "Gothic Queen of France" and the duchy's ancient capital, where "each monument is a battle, each stone a souvenir." Yet, in its architecture, more than any other city, Joan of Arc is the strongest influence for Rouen is her town, saturated with glorious and tragic memories of her spirit still hovers over the city. Her place where, condemned for "heretic" fallen back into "heretics," she died to fiery martyrdom.

Tiger Tortoise, Pet on Vessel's Long Voyage

Perseus is an African tiger tortoise measuring seven by ten inches on its under-side.

After voyaging for 70,000 miles in three years as a pet on the steamer Tonzarino he was presented to the Auckland zoo, New Zealand. When the ship was at Port Phillip the third engineer bought Perseus from an Arab for 75 cents, and he became a favorite on board. He was allowed to roam all over the ship, and when the ship reached Auckland he was owned by the fifth engineer, who decided that a tortoise was much trouble to look after. Perseus lived mostly on bananas and tomatoes. Now Perseus, after voyaging three times round the world, has a permanent home.—Montreal Herald.

David's remark about the daily grind of housework gave Paul his first cue to helpfulness. Mary began to feel the kitchen fire built and the teakettle boiling when she came down stairs in the morning, the wood box filled, the furnace tended faithfully day and night, the porches and paths kept free from snow. On Monday mornings he appeared to empty wash-tubs and hang out clothes. At his suggestion, Mary agreed to do all the housework for both houses until "things got straightened out." Violet understood the meaning, and Jane actually gave up a meeting of the Foreign Missionary society to finish the weekly sweeping. And when, in spite of all this relief, Mary paid for her long strain and quietly crumpled up in a heap on the floor one afternoon when she was out of danger, and Sylvia's grave was hidden with snow, Paul picked her up and laid her on the bed, loosening her dress and taking off her shoes as he called for help. Jane, fortunately, was in the house and answered her while he went downstairs to telephone for Doctor Wells and to get a hot-water bottle and a hot stimulant ready. And when he saw that it was her inability to care for the boys that was worrying her more than anything else, he turned his attention mainly to them. It would have been hard to discover anyone more stupid and awkward in dealing with a little child than Paul was, but he did what he could. He did better than he realized and his reward was greater than he expected. The first time that the children fell upon him, the small simultaneous, with hugs and kisses, was when he came in with two small wooden snow shovels—"to use when they were outdoors again, in no time now." As he hugged and kissed them in return, his embarrassment was equalled only by the inner glow of contentment that permeated his being. Mary, up again for the first time, came in to find them thus occupied. The inner glow of contentment glared at her and saw the expression of surprise and gratitude on her pale face.

latter had improved somewhat during the last few months. "Let Paul alone, honey," he said. "He looks to me like a man who is working out his own salvation." Paul, with the rest of the village, was glad to have his sister and brother-in-law at home; glad not only because he was fond of them, but because it was easier, in their presence, to keep from saying the things he was longing still more, from touching her. Time, mercifully, softens everything—lovers' quarrels and children's sufferings and even the thought of the Valley of the Shadow. Austin was finding his solution, Algy, thin but thriving, was in his high chair at the table once more. Phillip and Blanche, radiantly happy, were with them again. After Christmas day dinner, while the two little boys took their naps, Violet went to lie down, Seth to smoke his pipe, and Constan Jane to help Myra, loomed for the occasion, with the dishes. The four young people were left alone together. And, as the door closed behind the last retreating elder, Phillip suddenly

And Blanche Curling Up in His Arms Like a Contented Kitten.

"You're awfully good to those children," she said softly. "They're great kids. I never knew before how much fun a kid is. I thought they were horrid little nuisances," returned Paul apologetically. "Mary set down beside him. 'Blanche and Phillip are coming home for Christmas,' she said. 'Isn't that nice?' Constan Violet has a letter saying they'll surely be here the twenty-fourth, and of course she's perfectly delighted." "That is good news! Got any more?" "I don't know whether you'll call it good or not—but Austin Gray is going to France. I think that's much the best thing he can do, really. He says he's been a matter of months now before the United States will be in the war, too. He's going over as an ambulance driver, but he says he can get transferred to the 'real job' later on if we do. He was just here to see you, I went downstairs for a minute just as he came in, but I didn't know you were here, so he didn't wait. He asked me to invite you to go to New York with him, after Christmas. He'll be there for a fortnight, at least, making final arrangements." "New York?" "Yes. Wouldn't you like to go? I thought you were crazy to get away from Hamstead." "I'm not quite so crazy as I used to be." "No, you're getting fairly sane!" said Mary with a little laugh that made her eyes leap, and—just as kind and thoughtful as you can be. But for you? And I'm sure you'd be a comfort to Austin, too. He must think so, or he wouldn't have asked you. Won't you, Paul?" "Yes, of course, especially if you think it's better. Mary, wait a minute—but she was gone. "Blanche, for the first time since they had 'made up,' Paul saw that she was avoiding him again. The fact was she was willing to go for thought. She was willing to be his cousin, his friend, his companion. She was grateful far beyond his deserving for the little he had done for her. But more than that she could not and would not do.

snatched up Blanche and kissed her, announcing that he was so full of joy and dinner mixed, that he'd got to let off steam, some way, that very minute. And Blanche, curling up in his arms like a contented kitten, smiled and kissed him back. They settled down in the big wing chair before the fire together— "Over their unconscious heads, Paul looked at Mary. Then he crossed to where she stood, and the expression on his face was unmistakable. Before he could speak, she fled from the room." Paul went after her. She had almost reached the stairs. He stepped in front of her. "See here, Mary," he said, "I can stand almost anything you want to do or say and I know I deserve it. But please don't look at me that way. I can't stand it." "Well, don't look at me the way you did then." "I'll try not to. I'm trying not to, all the time. I only thought—it's Christmas day—that perhaps you could, just once—I won't ask you again for a long time. . . ." It is unfortunately true that many naturally sweet-tempered women, if they are also clever, take refuge, when they are hurt or frightened, in flippancy or sarcasm. It is to be hoped that they do not know how deeply they can wound with these weapons. But whether they do or not, Mary was no exception to this rule. "Why should you care about it so much?" she quoted scathingly. "A kiss doesn't mean anything." Paul stepped to one side, leaving the passage upstairs clear for her. She went by him swiftly, her head up. Then, on the landing, she turned and came still more swiftly down. "That wasn't fair," she said. "Please forgive me, Paul." "No," he said slowly. "It wasn't fair, and it wasn't kind of you to remind me of it. But what I said was true. There are some kisses that don't mean anything in almost every fellow's life. They drink too much sometimes, too. I'm sorry, but it's so. But that doesn't mean they're hopeless drunkards and degenerates. There hasn't been anything to drink, or any of that kind of kisses for me in a long time. You know that, and you know why, too. And you ought to know that it would mean more than anything in the world to me if I could kiss you again." Paul had learned a good many valuable lessons in the last months. Mary learned one now. The boy was bumble, but he was not abject. If he had a right to demand nothing else from her, he deserved and demanded, at least, fair play and respect. "When you go to New York—" she began. "You'll let me kiss you good-by?" This was not at all what Mary had intended to say. She hesitated a minute, and then, in spite of herself, she nodded. Then she leaned forward and touched his cheek with her lips, so lightly that it seemed merely as if a flower had brushed it. "The telephone is ringing," she said, over her shoulder and left him to answer it as she fled. "I wonder if Mary and Paul are really going to make up, after all?" Phillip asked Blanche, a few days later. "Oh, I hope not—even if he is my brother! You wouldn't want her to marry him now that she's got such a splendid chance?" "Splendid chance?" "Yes. Of getting Mr. Hamlin. Why, if she took Paul, even if he was good enough for her, which of course he isn't, she'd be buried in Hamstead all the rest of her life!" "Well, I shouldn't mind being buried in Hamstead, with someone I loved," Phillip said. "What do you say about starting in to fix up the little law office for ourselves this spring after all? I know you didn't care much for the idea when I first suggested it. But I'd enjoy the work immensely, and I can probably get off for a month next summer." "Oh, Phillip, couldn't we go somewhere else? There's plenty of time for that! I'm crazy to see Bar Harbor or Newport." "All right, honey, just as you prefer," he said quietly. He left Hamstead with the growing certainty that Paul and Mary were "really making up." Violet shared this certainty and ran up several new bills on the strength of it. Mary came in and out of her house again as if nothing had ever happened. She helped with the preparations for Paul's departure for New York, with energy and interest. Austin had decided to go by way of Boston and they were therefore leaving on the morning train instead of the midnight. And when Paul came downstairs ready to start, he found Mary, and not Seth, waiting in the little old sleigh, to take him to the station. She had, as Violet often remarked, "no style to her," and this morning she had even less than usual. It was bitterly cold, and she had on an old fur coat of her mother's, worn and shabby and out-of-date, a knitted hood of red wool, and red wool mittens. But Paul thought he had never seen her look half so lovely. She had seemed, since Christmas, so much less tired than for a long time, so much like his old playmate, his old sweetheart. Mary drove, and they rode along, talking of trivial things, laughing often, until they had almost reached the village. Then Paul put his arm around her and laid his hand over hers. "You promised me," he said softly. "You turned her face to his exactly as she might have done ten years before. Paul had meant above everything else, that this embrace should be gentle, reverent even, and he did not for one minute forget this. He had not reckoned on its proving so utterly impossible to keep all traces of the passion that was surging through him from his lips, and when he felt the cold, soft cheek growing suddenly warm beneath them, involuntarily he sought her mouth. Instead of drawing away from him, as he instantly feared she might do, she returned his kiss. For one heavenly moment they clung to each other. Then he bent over and kissed the little red mittens holding the reins. "You dear girl," he murmured. "My own dear Mary—and suddenly seeing tears in her eyes, he exclaimed, "I didn't hurt you, did I, darling? I wouldn't have, for the world!" "No—Oh, no!" "What is it then, sweetheart?" "I wish you mustn't call me that," she whispered. "I didn't realize, when I promised, that you wanted that kind of a kiss. I thought it was just for a proof that we were friends again—for always." "We are friends again for always. And that's all I did expect. But of course this was the kind I wanted, even if—" "It wasn't fair." "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to, on my word of honor. But you kissed back!" he ended exultantly. "I know I did. That's what wasn't fair. I—couldn't seem to help it. You were so—so—you meant it so!" "I'm glad you see that now," he said quietly. But his heart was singing. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Leap-Year Prerogative Runs Through History
February, besides being the scapegoat month when it comes to adjusting man's record of time, is also blamed at times for leap-year customs. Even the matter of women's prerogative to propose marriage during leap year has been laid at February's door. But the charge scarcely holds water. The true source of the custom seems to be lost in antiquity, but nearly seventy years ago an English almanac quoted a law said to have been enacted in Scotland in 1228—perhaps it was in February— "Ordon that during ye reign of her majestie blessed maistrie, Margaret, like maidin shall of bath high and lowe estate, shall hae libertie to speak ye man she likes. Gif he refuses to tak hir to be his wife, he shall be mulet in the sum of ane hundredry pundes, or less." But while 1228 was leap year, there was no "blessed maistrie, Margaret" at the time, for Alexander II, whose wife was Joanna, daughter of English King John, ruled Scotland from 1214 to 1249. However, France once had such a law, and so did Genoa and Florence in the Fifteenth century. England, so far as is known, never had such a statute.

Dangerous "Animal"
A first-grade teacher was telling the children about different wild animals and in order to test the knowledge they had gained she asked: "Now, who can tell me the name of an animal that has horns and is very dangerous for us to get near?" Before she could call on any particular one, little Bobby piped out enthusiastically: "I know, Miss — it's a truck!"

Man-Tailored Vies With Fur-Trim

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COMES stepping along in the spring style shows the strictly tailored suit, daintily mannish down to the minutest detail, so much so as to provoke a question mark shrug of the shoulders on the part of the more conservative. Some of the new suits have gone so far as to be actually trousered, worn with man-tailored shirts, sporty ties, stiff cuffs and swagging fedora hats. Bide a wee, ye who are skeptical, and give eye to another number of fashion's program, for equally prominent on the horizon there rises a gracefully silhouetted figure clad in softly furled delicate gray or beige, made even more appealingly feminine with the accompaniment of a sheer little be-frilled blouse or the flaunting of one of those amusing huge butterfly bows of crisp organdie which are the rage just now. What with the elusive pastel tone of these costumes so perfectly blended with hazy, misty fox fur the ensemble melts into the springtime scene as does the faintly tinged leafy verdure during the lovely Maytime days. Which to choose, the severely and daintily man-tailored or the beguilingly feminine, for the new spring outfit, ay, that's the question! Toss a penny if you will, for either way leads triumpantly on to the very height of fashion. If your flippant penny happens to head toward the strictly tailored you will be tremendously interested in the ultra chic suit which the lady seated in the pictured group is wearing. Here

HOW COLORS ARE USED IN STYLES

Dark colors are in favor for costumes and bright accents of accessories—sweaters, blouses, belts, collars and cuffs, scarfs, pocketbooks, gloves, hats and handkerchiefs. For evening, the pastel family of colors are in exceptionally good repute. So that you will be up-to-date on the names as well as the shades for old colors well in mind: Eel-gray, sunset-orange, sulphur-yellow, Jerusalem-cherry red, Algerian-blue, Byzantine-green, teal-leaf-green, deepwater-blue and that intangible new shade of blue that is going to be very popular and which, at least for the moment, is called moonlight-blue. Many of these shades are old friends wedded to new titles to give you a fresher impression of them.

Warm Weather Fashions Show a Youthful Trend

Warm weather fashions indicate that the predominant trend this year would be toward youthfulness in design and fabrics. The variety of materials run all the way from chiffons to piques, and the colors shown were equally diversified. Reds, blues, browns, beiges and grays were in evidence, used separately and in combination. The trends indicate that day wear will be shorter, slimmer and younger, while evening wear evidences a distinct Victorian influence. Many two-piece jacket and dress models are being shown, which indicates a tendency toward utility in street wear.

Satins for Summer

Satin is enormously indorsed, and is expected to materialize this summer mostly in lacquered accessories and supple evening gowns in delicate shades like pearly pink or blue and nude.

Brief Hints About the Season's Styles

Latest blouses have drawstring necklines. In silks classic weaves reclaim their prestige. Satin stages a conspicuous comeback. There is much interest in belts, and one hears of elastic novelties of various types. Tiny crin horsehair veils and tortoise shell motifs are among the smart millinery trimmings. A favorite color scheme includes navy accents on gray. Most of the frocks are designed with a touch of contrasting color at the neckline, cuff or belt. The pique crown with straw brim in white and navy is one of the styles identified with suit fashions. Shoulder bows on dance frocks for the younger set grow bigger and bigger as 'ie season advances.

Current Wit and Humor

NON-STOP

Colonel Pepper was relating his jungle experiences to a party of uninterested listeners. "I well remember the incident that gave me the biggest fright of my life," he said. "We were hot on the track of a lioness, when suddenly I found myself separated from the rest of the party. Even my gun-bearer had deserted me. I was helpless. At that moment the lioness' mate sprang out of a bush right in front of me. What do you think I did?" "About sixty miles an hour," put in one of his audience, tiredly.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

WHEN BIRDS COURT

Song is the most conspicuous feature of bird courting. Males are the best singers, and they do most of the singing. They employ their songs chiefly in courting the females, and usually cease singing—like modern husbands—as soon as they have won their brides, and started their families. Song sparrows and red-eyed vireos may continue their music even during the moulting season in August or September when other birds are usually silent. The females of a few species sing as well as the males, but their songs are always more timid. Female cardinals, purple finches, and a number of tropical American wrens sing operatic duets with the males during the courting season.—Missouri Farmer.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels. That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 5,000 births without loss of one mother or baby.

AN OUTRAGES CRIME

The editorial "An Outrages Crime" by the Sheboygan Press in their issue of April 25 pertaining to the torture and robbery at the Pesch home should be read by everyone. It is a timely and advising editorial and reads as follows:

"The torture and robbery of a brother and sister on a farm near Kewaskum Sunday is one of the most revolting and outrages crimes committed in this section of the country for some time.

"Entering the home of Mike Pesch and his sister, Kate Pesch, with drawn revolvers, four bandits succeeded in robbing the couple of $1,600 in currency and $15,000 in Liberty bonds, besides a number of mortgages, deeds and other valuable papers representing a considerable amount. In addition to their act of robbery the bandits mistreated the sister, tortured the brother with a red hot iron and beat him in an attempt to make him tell where the money was hidden. The manner in which the crime was committed was nothing short of reverting to medieval methods of brutality and force.

"While the victims probably can be thankful for escaping with their lives, the fact remains that the bandits robbed them of practically everything they had—their life savings for which they had toiled many long years are gone.

"The authorities are doing everything in their power to apprehend the perpetrators of this vicious crime, and we sincerely hope that the bandits are captured and given their just desserts. The fact that somebody in that territory must have known about the money being taken from the bank to the home may help the investigators in their search.

"While we have sympathy for the people who were robbed, we cannot help but point out that crimes of this nature should serve as examples of the folly of keeping large sums of money in a home where it is accessible to the unscrupulous. The bank is the place for large sums of money and valuables."

EIGHTY NINE ARRESTS MADE

According to the monthly summary for the month of March issued by the Wisconsin Conservation Department there were 89 arrests made for various game violations, 40 for hunting violations, 7 for trapping violations, 40 for fishing violations, 1 for carrying a gun in woods in 5 day period and 1 for mounting a deer head for consideration without a license. Of the 89 arrests made, 71 were found guilty, 9 acquitted, 4 cases remain open, and 5 cases were appealed or taken to higher courts.

The summary shows that two arrests were made in Dodge county, both for disturbing and molesting muskrat houses. Both cases were appealed to the circuit court. No arrests were made in Fond du Lac or Ozaukee counties. One party in Sheboygan county was found guilty for illegally mounting a deer head without a taxidermist's license. In Washington county there were two violators, R. C. Courtney of Hartford, who was found guilty of operating a set line without a license, and H. C. Pennies of Slinger, who had in his possession pike in closed season.

Weekly News Letter From Washington

By Michael K. Reilly, M. C.

Events have been moving fast and furious the past week in Washington. Ever since the depression began there has been a tremendous controversy in the Press on the platform and through publications of all kinds as to the merits of the gold standard.

Some of the leading thinkers of the country have denounced the gold standard as responsible for at least accentuating our industrial depression. The gold standard argument has revolved around the idea that because of the scarcity of gold, the gold dollar had become too valuable, and that as a result commodity prices had fallen to an unusual and unjustifiable level, with the result that the man who contracted a debt before the depression found himself unable to pay the debt, because of the difficulty in getting the dollars, which had become twice as valuable as they were when the debt was contracted.

During the past two years efforts have been made by Congress to depreciate the value of the gold dollar, by increasing the circulating medium through the purchase of Government bonds by the Federal Reserve System, and in 1932 about a one billion dollars increase of money was pumped into the business world, but this method apparently had no effect upon commodity prices, because the money found its way back to the banks and the Federal Reserve vaults.

Shortly after the inauguration of President Roosevelt he took the first step to take our country off the gold standard by putting an embargo on gold withdrawals in this country. The past week the President took the second step, that completely takes our country off the gold standard, by putting an embargo on foreign shipments of gold from this country. With the exception of a short time during the world war this is the first time in more than fifty years that our country has been off of the gold standard.

The reader may inquire, why is our country now off of the gold standard? The answer is first because the Government will not permit our citizens to bring gold certificates to the banks or the Treasury and get gold for them as we have done heretofore, and the Government will not permit the citizens to go to the banks of the Treasury Department and get gold for any purpose as he formerly could do; second because our country has forbid the chipping of gold out of this country for any purpose except those specifically approved by the Treasury of the United States.

To give the reader some idea of how gold can, and does often go out of this country, it might be stated that within three months in 1931, almost a billion dollars of gold left our shores for the European shores. This was said to be the greatest flight of gold in all the world's history.

Our country did not go off of the gold standard, because of a lack of gold, for the reason that there is in the vaults of the United States Treasury, and the Federal Reserve Banks and other banks of the country, about forty per cent of all the gold in the world.

However, when England went off the gold standard a year or so ago she did so because she was compelled to such action, because of a lack of gold. The action of the President in taking our country off the gold standard was not due therefore to a lack of gold in this country, but rather to a belief that such a move on the part of our Government would result in reducing the purchasing power of the gold dollar and increasing commodity prices.

France and Germany are the only large countries in the world today on the gold standard, and newspaper prophesies at this writing are to the effect that France also will be obliged to desert the gold standard.

Allied with the movement to take our country off the gold standard is another movement to re-valuate the gold dollar. In other words to declare by Congressional action that the gold dollar of the future shall contain a smaller amount of gold.

The content of the present gold dollar was fixed by an Act of Congress in 1900 after the McKinley and Bryan silver campaign at 25.8 grains of gold 0.900 fine, thus making the dollar contain nine hundred parts of gold and one hundred parts of alloy.

Immediately after the President issued his final order to take our country off its gold standard price rose and the value of the dollar shrank.

It is too early at this writing to tell just how far-reaching will be the effect of this last movement by our Government on the checkerboard of National and International finance, but the matter of the raising commodity prices.

Any way our Government has taken a step that many have feared to take but to this hour, apparently more than five per cent of the people, have not been aware of any effects other than that commodity prices have gone up.

The House of Representatives in past week put through two important pieces of legislation, the first was to continue the one cent gasoline tax as a revenue measure for another year, and the second provided for the reorganization of a two-cent postage rate on local drop letters, and he giving to the President the power after a trial of the two cent rate on drop letters, to survey the income situation of the Post Office Department, to wipe out the three-cent postage rate on all letters.

It is to be hoped that it will only be a short time when the two-cent postage rate will be restored on all first class mail.

On yesterday the House passed the Lewis Relief Bill. This Bill was passed by the Senate and was known as the Wagner Relief Bill. This Bill carries an appropriation of five hundred million dollars through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the purpose of assisting the States to handle their relief problem. The number will recall that a year ago Congress appropriated three hundred million dollars for this same purpose, all of which sum has been expended to this except about sixty million dollars.

The only controversy over this relief measure was about the question whether the money advanced to the States should be advanced in the shape of a loan or a gift. The Reconstruction Finance Law as provided in the loan plan; the bill passed by the House this week follows the gift plan.

While the money furnished to the States in carrying their management burdens up to date have been intended as loans, the general belief is that these advances by the National Government to States and cities for date for relief purposes will in the end prove to be gifts.

Many States are forbidden by the Constitution to borrow money or to take loans from the National Government. Under the Reconstruction Finance Law subterfuges have been used in order that certain States might receive relief money. Again loans to carry out relief purposes on collateral has seriously impaired the credit of these States.

These are extraordinary times like of which our country has never experienced before. It is a time when the National Government is in a time when our country is confronted with a condition and a time when the money is to be loaned or given the fact is that according to the best authorities the relief problem has become too big and burdensome a problem to be handled by the States and local communities, and that it is the duty of the National Government to come to the aid of the States, and States at least, and assist them in feeding, clothing, and housing the armies of the un-employed.
