LOMIRA BANKER FOUND NOT GUILTY

Louis H. Zaun, 18 years cashier of the Lomira State bank, and charged with making false statements concerning the conditions of the bank in reports to the Wisconsin banking commission, was late Tuesday evening found not guilty by a jury in Waukesha circuit court.

Many economists believe that international recovery will be delayed until gold and silver are related—so that when gold rises and falls, silver follows it. And it is a certainty that a genuine silver revival would mean much to the United States—in providing jobs, purchasing power, and industrial and social opportunity.

MISS ROSE SCHAEFFER BECOMES BRIDE OF EDWARD WEDDIG

A very pretty wedding took place at the Holy Trinity Catholic church in this village on Saturday morning, April 21st, when Rev. Father Ph. J. Vost united in marriage Miss Rose Schaeffer and Edward (Huck) Weddig.

The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Schaeffer of the Town of Auburn, wore a white crepe gown with a lace embroidered veil and carried white roses and white sweet peas. She was attended by her sister, Miss Cynthia Schaeffer, as maid of honor, who was attired in a coral crepe gown and carried pink roses and orchid sweet peas. Miss Marie Schaeffer, also a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a blue crepe dress and carried yellow roses and blue sweet peas.

The groom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Weddig of this village, was attended by Arnold Zeimet and Otto Weddig.

After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding dinner was served to about forty guests. The decorations at the house were of pink, blue and white color scheme.

The bride for the past few years was employed at her brother, Paul Schaeffer's place in this village. The groom is an employee of the L. Rosenheimer Malt & Grain company of this village.

After a short honeymoon trip the young couple will go to housekeeping in the Ernst Ramthun residence on North Fond du Lac avenue, this village, and will be at home to their many relatives and friends after May 15th. We extend hearty congratulations for a most happy and prosperous married life.

KEWASKUM CREAMERY ENLARGING THEIR PLANT

Work was started last week whereby the local Kewaskum Creamery plant will be considerably larger. A new building, one story high, 40 by 52 feet, will be erected on the company's property just west of the present building. It is expected that the new building will be ready for occupancy in about six weeks.

Enlarging the plant was necessary because of the large demand for cottage cheese and other package goods. When the new addition is completed the company will be in a position to increase their output in an unlimited way. There are now on the waiting list a large number of farmers who either want to haul their milk or have it hauled to the local creamery. This opportunity will be given them soon.

The Kewaskum Creamery has had the reputation of paying good prices to the farmers, but their taking in of milk was limited on account of the strict rules laid down by the Chicago Board of Health, as most of the milk received was shipped to that city. The new building will be a complete unit by itself of which the Chicago Board of Health will have no jurisdiction.

As the supply of milk received will increase, additional help will be employed. Mr. Quade, superintendent of the plant, has perfected a new kind of cheese, "a quality cheese of its own class," that should create a large demand when once placed on the market.

The Kewaskum Creamery has for years been a very successful institution. It deserves your patronage.

EDGERTON BOY CRASH VICTIM 2 MATES HURT

The citizens of this community were greatly shocked on Friday morning when they learned of the tragic death of Robert Miller, 21, son of Dr. and Mrs. John B. Miller of Milwaukee, who died at the eMercy hospital, Janesville, late on Thursday, April 19, from injuries received in an automobile collision early that morning. Doctor Miller, the father is a former Kewaskum resident. A more complete account of the sad accident is taken from the Milwaukee Sentinel, morning of April 20, which reads as follows:

Janesville, Wis., April 19.—Robert Miller, 21, Edgerton, died in Mercy hospital late today from injuries received this morning when the car in which he and two companions were returning to Edgerton from Fort Atkinson lost a wheel and skidded off the highway between Milton and Koshkonong, early this morning.

One of his companions, Carl Grassman 22, son of Assemblyman and Mrs. Edward Grassman was reported resting comfortably by hospital attendants tonight, from injuries received in the accident. He suffered possible broken ribs and severe bruises.

Underhill Jensen, 21, also of Edgerton, the third member of the party was confined to his home in that city suffering from shock and bruises.

WAS VERSATILE ATHLETE

Miller, who was manager of the Edgerton Country club at the time of his death, was widely known for his athletic ability while a student in Edgerton High school. He is also a former student of Marquette university of Milwaukee. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John B. Miller of Milwaukee and was named by Congressman George Blanchard as one of the three candidates for entrance examination for appointment to West Point.

Ranking next to Rollie Williams, now basketball coach at the University of Iowa, Miller at the age of 14 played quarterback on the Edgerton High school football team and piloted the team through the season without a defeat, during the year 1927. For two successive years thereafter he piloted the Edgerton football team without losing a minute's play during all games played.

MANAGED GOLF CLUB

He was an outstanding basketball player, having been named to several all-conference teams. He also was outstanding in track and golf and upon his graduation was presented with a medal honoring him as the best all-round boy for a four year period of Edgerton High school.

During the summer of 1931 he became manager of the Edgerton Country club, a position which he held during the summer months. He had been engaged for the 1934 season as manager of the club, officials stated today.—Milwaukee Sentinel, April 20th.

New Funeral Home in Schalles Building Is Near Completion

The Schmidt-Reinders funeral home in the Schalles building is rapidly nearing completion and only for a few minor details need be finished for the formal opening to the public. The south half of the building has been converted into a very pleasing funeral home for those people who need and desire the facilities offered. The front portion is given over to a chapel area 14x34 feet with a seating capacity of about 100. A triple arch with pillar supports and wrought iron grills opens into a canopied alcove section. A family room is located in the rear of the alcove. The display and preparation rooms are located in the basement. The chapel and alcove are ornamented with decorative plaster in three color tone, the entire rooms being in a pleasing buff color. There are both direct and indirect lights, the latter concealed in a wide plaster cove molding. The alcove area is carpeted and the strip passes along the aisle between the chair rows. One of the firm members, Leander Schmidt, and his mother, Mrs. Margaret Schmidt, will make their home in the apartment on the second floor. Mr. Reinders will retain his residence and business at Kewaskum.—West Bend Pilot.

The formal opening of the new business place will be held on Saturday and Sunday, April 28th and 29th.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

Regular meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Louis Oppenorth, Saturday afternoon, April 28, at 3:00 o'clock. The program will consist of current events and election of officers.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION SPONSORS PLAY

"Gay", a comedy in three acts, will be presented at the Kewaskum High School Auditorium on Thursday evening, May 3rd, by the Clever Comedy Club of Fond du Lac under the auspices of the Kewaskum Athletic association.

The plot of the play centers around Gay Marshall, an attractive young girl of about twenty. In spite of her charm and attractiveness, she is a wallflower. Her aunt, Miss Betty Marshall, a typical straight-laced old maid, is a scream as she attempts to keep Gay from becoming a modern flapper. Bobby Ellis, a boy whom most girls shun and mothers adore, is in love with Gay. She rejects him for a while, to elope with Dick Royster—the twentieth century's greatest gift to women. He is the owner of a roadster, and a pair of nimble fingers; and is the city-slicker, crook type. Annette Burns, a girl whom most girls envy and mothers discuss, declares she was "born with a fever." She is a very stylishly dressed young woman of twenty-one. She aids Dick, who attempts to rob the local bank, which is owned by James Warren, Gay's bachelor uncle. Dick is caught in the attempt by Bobby, and the play reaches a climax that will surprise you. Elsie, Millie, and Jean are three flappers who borrow clothes from Gay to attend a dance to which Gay is not even invited.

"Gay" is a new, different, modern comedy; sparkling with life and merriment. If you want to be gay—see "Gay". It's a gloom-chaser!

The scene: The living room of the Marshall home.

The Time: The present—An evening in April.

Specialty numbers between acts.

The public is cordially invited to attend this excellent play. Admission: Adults, 35c; Children, 20c. Curtain promptly at 8:00 p.m.

ATHLETICS WIN EXHIBITION GAME

Although the weather last Sunday was everything but baseball weather a fair size crowd witnessed the exhibition ball game played on the local diamond last Sunday between the Campbellsport "Belles" and the Kewaskum Athletics, which resulted in a victory for the locals by a score of 5 to 1.

In the Kewaskum lineup Wisniewski, Gaffke, Barron and Mahr, last year's stars, were missed, but very promising youngsters took their places and gave a good account of themselves.

On Sunday the locals journey to our neighboring village for a return game. In this game the Athletics will be seen practically with the lineup that will participate in the opening game on Sunday, May 13th.

Much Admired Windswept Prints

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

fade or run in washing and they iron smooth and perfect just like magic. Another grand thing about crepes of this type is that they are such a joy to work with. The texture is so firm and dependable—never pulls out at the seams and stays "put," which makes it easy for the home-sewing woman to handle.

IT'S smart to be windswept. Hither and thither the winds of fashion do blow until most everything in the spring and summer mode is being made to express a very poetry of motion.

The amusing part about the breezes which waft through fashionland is that they are so well trained, blowing ever forward during the daytime hours while at night they completely reverse the order of things. Of course, it is all due to the artful manipulation of pleats and flares and various other devices which designers position at the front of the coat or dress or hat to be worn during the day until you look as if the wind were carrying you forward, while the smartest evening fashions take on airplane draperies at the back or fan-spreading trains or similar details which make it seem as if mildew were winning her way in the very face of the winds.

Even fabrics themselves are yielding to the touch of fashion's elusive breezes. There are the new "windswept prints" for instance, which are certainly a step forward in this current vogue. These perfectly fascinating prints are developed in flower patterns, but with a distinct difference between the new florals and those of previous seasons. In the modern "windswept" versions flowers are shown bending over on slender stalks as if swayed by gentle breezes.

You'll love these swagger windswept prints. In the new chulla construction they are as practical as they are good-looking. And do they wear well! There's scarcely any "wear out" to them. Neither will the delicate color

The three adorable dresses pictured are made of the new windswept prints. Those dainty white accents at neckline and sleeves—well now, we ask you, aren't the frothy, filmy neckwear fashions simply thrilling this season? The print to the right is that gloriously colorful a mere word picture cannot do it justice, and when one stops to think that this print will wash like new, what more is there to be desired in the way of a perfect print? The filmy white organdie roll-edged petal collar and cuffs add the climactic touch. The self-fabric stitched belt drawn through a gay colored ring is worth noting.

There is a modest beauty about the spring posies with their delicate tendrils so gracefully windswept in the print to the left which will carry special appeal to the woman of discriminating taste. In any of its color combinations this print is charming, but in navy with a strain of light blue running throughout, together with fluttering white spring posies spotted with fresh light green, it is irresistible.

The ankle-length frock with contrasting fitted jacket admirably solves the problem of what to wear for semi-formal occasions. Worn with its jacket of solid color you have the feeling of being correctly attired most any hour of the day. Remove the jacket and the dress goes just formal enough to tune in to most any afternoon occasion. It has quaint drop shoulders and cunning wee puff sleeves. The piquant little velvet tie about the throat is reminiscent of the "gay nineties." The windswept print which fashions it carries a very animated patterning.

DAYTIME EFFECTS ON EVENING DRESS

A new evening frock which August-bernard makes of her blackish green crepe marocain has a daytime neckline and short sleeves that are gathered into the shoulder seam at the edges. The front of the bodice is draped into a full-length panel, caught under a rhinestone buckle at the right side front of the waistline.

Along fashions the skirt and jacket of this, an evening suit, of black wool, and the latter has revers of sable and sleeves that are unusually wide between the deep-fitted cuffs and the elbows. The skirt is a simple ankle-length mermaid skirt. The blouse of this suit is made of flowered satin, pinks and greens on a black background.

Grand New Nighties of Satin in Floral Prints

A visit to the shops will disclose lots of new ideas. A few minutes in one shop showed grand new nighties of heavy satin in floral prints, so well done that the result looks like panties.

Then there are tailored pajamas of heavy crepe de chine with three-quarter length coats of similar fabric. These are done in white or pastel shades and are piped in a contrasting color.

Modern Jewelry Adds to Attractiveness of Costume

A leading sportswear shop shows costume bracelet and belt sets tricky enough to renew any costume. These come in narrow and spacious widths, one set in coral, natural color, others in either silver or gold mesh. The silver combination is accented with white metal trim. Another clever ornament here is a dog's head clip—to be attached to one's hat, neckline or waist.

What Women Want to Know About Fashions

Quantities of ruffles animate the mode. Seersucker shirtwaist frocks are smart for practical hours.

Ribbon sweaters are now being worn over evening gowns of cellophane fabric.

Gray green wool makes a striking sports frock knitted on slender lines with long sleeves and a square high collar.

EXQUISITE LACE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The summer program heralds a widespread vogue for lace, with special emphasis placed on the gown which is fashioned of the finer sort of lace of delicate cobweb mesh. Molyneux creates this lovely dinner gown of black lace, with its subtle tracery of flowers and leaves on an enchantingly sheer background. The gown gives delightful expression to the new silhouette which calls for crispness and animated lines (the lace is stiffened with horsehair), knee-length tunic, and fullness which interprets a fan-spreading movement, just now so much admired, toward the back.

CARS ARE SO USEFUL
Professor Briggs was met by his wife at the garden gate. "Where's the car, Septimus?" she asked. "Car, my dear," said the professor vacantly; "did I take it out?" "You most certainly did!" exclaimed his wife. "Don't you remember, you drove it to town." "How odd!" he blithely returned. "I remember now, I arrived in town, stopped the car, and got out. Then I turned round to thank the gentleman who gave me a lift and wondered where he had gone to."

Ideal Neighbor
Smith entered a big London store and made his way to the gardening department. "I want three lawn mowers," he said. The assistant stared hard at him. "Three, sir?" he echoed. "You must have a very great estate." "Nothing of the kind," snapped Smith grimly. "I have two neighbors."—Pearson's Magazine.

No MORE Burglaries

in Southeastern Wisconsin for Sixty Days

The reason, declared a well known law enforcement officer, is that every home and store will be lighted all night—porch lights, window lights, door-yard floodlights, basement lights will be on during the period when millions of kilowatt hours of free electricity will be given away by Wisconsin Gas & Electric Company. "If there are any robberies," he went on, "it will be in homes where they forgot to take advantage of this unusual offer. Burglars hate light. They avoid homes with lamps burning, dogs barking or babies crying. So leave your electric lamps burning."

Lighting homes, stores and farm buildings adequately is just one way of utilizing free electrical energy. Customers of the Wisconsin Gas & Electric Company who are given this opportunity, have received postal card notices telling them when the offer takes effect, and what their maximum monthly bills will be, regardless of how much current they utilize (or waste.) For two months, from the date given on the card, they can run their radios freely, put their toasters, heaters, vacuums, grills, and other appliances into operation, and run their radios from morning to night, without fear of high electric service bills.

Why is This Offer of Free Electricity Made?

1. Wisconsin Gas & Electric Company is able to buy cheap electricity from water-power plants in Northern Wisconsin, due to the heavy snowfalls and the inability of northern industries to use the current generated from the melting snows this spring. This combination of circumstances does not come often.
2. It wants its customers to see how much current they can use efficiently, and how much it would have cost under normal rates, in the hope that they will get the habit of using all they want. They will learn that after the first few kilowatt hours used each month, electricity is very, very cheap.
3. The normal family bills in May and June are lower than in March. That is owing to the lengthening hours of daylight in spring. In order to take advantage of the free offer, the customers must buy a little more than they usually would in May and June. The offer can only be made at this time, because of the surplus water power available.

If any customer uses less current than in March, his bill will be smaller, of course.

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Many of the Washington correspondents, of late, have been commenting on a strange phenomena which is furrowing the brows of senators and representatives. There is a growing volume of public criticism of Administration legislation—unaccompanied by criticism of the man who is responsible for it, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

All the Congressmen have been finding their mails flooded with letters reading in effect "You should vote and work against the stock exchange bill (or some other White House backed bill which held the limelight at the time), because it will delay recovery. . . . Support the President!"

That isn't at all far-fetched. Thousands, perhaps tens of thousands of such letters have reached the Capitol, and the more prominent the legislator the more he gets. In spite of their obvious inconsistencies, such letters are important. They show something that is of vital interest, and will be a vital influence in coming political campaigns. That the voting public is beginning to fear that the New Deal is more revolutionary, both in principle and practice, than it had bargained for—but that its faith, its trust, and its affection for the President is as strong, perhaps stronger, than ever, Mr. Roosevelt, in its view, can make mistakes, but he can do no wrong.

The Wirt inquiry brought the criticism to a head. Mr. Wirt's startling charge—that members of the brain trust were conspiring to overthrow the government, and regarded Mr. Roosevelt as the Kerevsky of the American revolution, eventually to be replaced by its Lenin—wasn't taken very seriously. Again, there was nothing thrilling in his statement that such men as Dr. Tugwell want changes made in the American government—Mr. Tugwell has written many books, made many speeches, given many interviews, and his ideas are hardly a secret. But in the wake of Mr. Wirt came other, more moderate and better known critics who offered the opinion that we are drifting toward fascism, that the public hadn't much idea of who "was going on, that the shoals weren't far ahead. They were backed up by a substantial volume of newspaper comment.

All of these critics, as well as Dr. Wirt, were careful to avoid anything that might be construed as a knock at the President. All of this indicates that Mr. Roosevelt is liable to find it tough getting some of his more unusual legislation through future sessions of Congress—but that his personal hold on the American electorate will continue to be firm. There are plenty of potentialities for political excitement in that unique situation.

The federal government is spending money in a big way—but not in so big a way as was anticipated 3 months ago. On January 15, the President estimated that the government would spend $10,500,000,000 in fiscal 1934—$7,500,000,000 of that was classed as emergency expense. Nine months of the fiscal year are gone now, and expenditures have only come to $4,800,000,000 well under half. This is only about one-third more than the Hoover Administration spent in the same period of its last fiscal year.

Principal reason for the drop is found in the fact that emergency payments have totaled only $2,800,000,000. And that, in turn, is largely due to the happy experience of the RFC. The budget included almost $4,000,000,000 for that bureau—however, since January 1, a quarter of a billion dollars has been paid back on loans made. Head man Jesse Jones believes that repayments will take care of all loans to be made until July.

Next to the RFC in "economy" is the public works administration. It was allotted $3,300,000,000—has spent but $803,000,000. The budget message likewise included estimates for forthcoming revenue—and in this the President was much nearer right than in his guess at expenses. Collections were forecast at $3,200,000,000—and actual nine months collections came to $2,300,000,000 which makes the estimate look quite accurate. Tax collections for March were $420,000,000 higher than in any month since June, 1931; income tax revenue was running a third ahead of last year—and Treasury officials smiled happily.

There is still a wide gully between revenue and expense—but the problem is looking easier than it was expected to be a few months back. And the other day the Treasury attempted an experiment—it offered to exchange 3-1-4 per cent twelve-year bonds for 4th Liberties and Treasury notes falling due May 2. Investors jumped at the offer—and trading was brisk. Treasury prestige is thus potent.

Many Perils and Thrills Faced in Postal Service

Adventures Are Not Confined to Air Mail Alone.

Washington.—A vivid picture of the dangers and thrills of flying the air mail has been impressed upon the American public during the past month. This picture is only one of a long series illustrating the history of the postal service.

"The winter struggle against storm and ice, driving snow and sub-zero weather is shared alike by the mail pilot aloft, the Alaskan musher with his plodding dog team, and countless carriers on rural routes in western and middle-western states," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"In Alaska there is as yet no federal air mail service. Through private enterprise some mail is carried by plane, but the winter service still relies mainly upon dogs and sleds. One of the longest dog mail routes is the 650-mile run from Kotzebue to Point Barrow—Uncle Sam's northernmost post office. The mail team leaves Point Barrow early in November, as soon as there is snow enough for travel, and is expected to complete the round trip of 1,300 miles by Christmas. So regular is the arrival of the north-bound Christmas mail that it rarely disappoints the children of Point Barrow.

Supply Own Dog Team.

"On one of the more southerly routes, from Nenana to Iditarod, a distance of about 350 miles, a weekly service is maintained. For each round trip, requiring 35 days, the pay is $384. Over 300 pounds of mail and supplies are carried, so the driver seldom has the luxury of riding. He must, of course, supply his own dog team, equipment, and food for the trip.

"Some of the most dangerous and difficult routes are much nearer home than the barren lands of Alaska. Records of the Post Office department show one of the worst to be from Sandusky, Ohio, to the nearby islands in Lake Erie. Winter storms in this district are severe, and ice conditions singularly treacherous. The best craft for the job is a combination sailboat, rowboat, ice yacht and sled. When water is open, or the ice strong and smooth, the sail can be used, but more often progress is discouraging—dragging slowly over rough ice cakes, or breaking inch by inch through 'young' ice.

"A similar route in Lake Michigan, known as Death's Door, runs from Ellison bay to Detroit harbor, Wisconsin. Then there is the Idaho route from Rocky Bar to Atlanta. Carriers there make the winter trips on snowshoes, packing 50 pounds of mail.

"The smooth speed of city delivery is in sharp contrast to these tales of persistent and courageous effort. One of the most efficient systems is New York city's 'blow-gun' mail which handles half the letters received in the metropolis. Beneath the streets of Manhattan are 27 miles of parallel, pneumatic tubes. Through these tubes at intervals of ten seconds, short carriers, each holding 400 letters, and traveling at a rate of 30 miles an hour. They are propelled by compressed air.

World's Biggest Business.

"The United States postal service today is the biggest business in the world, employing over 222,000 workers; but its purpose has not changed since the pre-revolutionary days when stage-coach mail took six weeks to go from Boston to Philadelphia. An inspector, reporting on the efficiency of the colonial service at that time, remarked that the public good was 'the sole inducement for taking so much trouble as we do.'

"When Benjamin Franklin was made deputy postmaster general of the British colonies in 1753, conditions were promptly improved. Weekly trips between Philadelphia and Boston were started, the time was cut in half, and new routes were opened. The postage rate, however, remained high—forty dollars ($40) for three letters from Falmouth, Maine, to Boston! In 1775 the continental congress appointed Franklin postmaster general of the thirteen American colonies. He had previously franked his letters "Free. B. Franklin," but now he changed this to "B. Free Franklin."

"Through the years following the Revolution the history of the Post followed closely the history of the pioneers. Less than 100 years ago there was still no overland mail to California. The Mormons in Utah had a messenger system of their own, and there were a few 'post offices' like the one at Ash Creek, Neb. This was a trapper's cabin where letters were left to be carried on by the next traveler who came along. Often letters were stuck in notched sticks beside the trail on the chance that they would be picked up by some one returning eastward.

"With the excitement of the great gold rush in 1849 everything moved rapidly, including the mail. There was soon a regular service, run by Feramorz Little and his wagon train, between Fort Laramie, Wyo., and Salt Lake City. Even as late as 1858, Fort Laramie was Denver's nearest post office, and the men who staked out claim near Pike's peak had to send 200 miles for news from home. In 1850 the daring riders of the Pony Express reduced the distance between San Francisco and St. Joseph, Mo., to the amazing time of eight days; and nine years later the silver spike was driven which completed the first trans-continental railroad."

A REAL CHAMPION

SIX FLATLY DENY DR. WIRT'S STORY

Democrats Reject Demand for Wider Inquiry.

Washington.—The six companions of Dr. William A. Wirt at that now famous dinner in Virginia last fall were unanimous in denying the schoolmaster's charge that they were satelites in efforts of the Roosevelt brain trust to communize America.

One by one, beginning with the hostess of the evening, the six took the witness chair before a committee of the house, and they showed the fullest agreement on what had been the topics of the dinner discussion.

Renewed demands by Representative Harold C. McGugin (Rep., Kan.) that the committee undertake a complete and thorough investigation of the Roosevelt brain trust on the basis of evidence which had no connection with the dinner were squelched by the Democratic majority.

Chairman Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Dem., N. C.) went so far as to say that Doctor Wirt had been proved guilty of perjury and from another Democrat, Representative Andrew L. Somers of New York, came a demand that the matter be referred to the district attorney for perjury action. In the senate Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Texas) declared:

"All these things were figments of Doctor Wirt's imagination. Such men ought to be prosecuted for perjury."

The unanimity of the witnesses aroused the suspicion of Representative McGugin and his Republican colleague on the committee, Representative Frederick R. Lehbach of New Jersey, and resulted in their bringing out that all the witnesses had met before the hearing and discussed their testimony with the Democratic chairman, Representative Bulwinkle. All the witnesses denied, however, that they had been coached or had agreed to make their stories jibe.

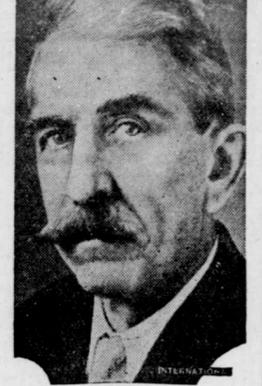

Each of the six stated that Doctor Wirt had talked practically without surcease for four hours. They characterized Doctor Wirt as a "monologist." Each stressed that it had been impossible to interrupt him.

All six of the dinner guests also agreed in verifying one statement which Doctor Wirt had ascribed to one of their number. Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, a division head in the home economics of the Agriculture department.

This was that Miss Kneeland had, as Doctor Wirt asserted, objected to his proposal that the goal of the government should be a restoration of conditions in the country as they were in 1926.

Miss Kneeland, in acknowledging this statement as hers, elucidated at the committee members' request and said she would advocate instead of 1926 conditions, better distribution of property, minimum wage laws, unemployment insurance, mothers' pensions, government control of the stock market.

GOV. W. H. MURRAY

Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma prevented delinquent tax sales of real estate in a number of counties, sending detachments of the National Guard to enforce his order.

GOVERNOR MURRAY HALTS TAX SALES

Oklahoma Guardsmen Enforce His Order.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Gov. William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray's national guardsmen, operating in groups of four, carried out his orders to "protect the homes of the people," and stopped delinquent tax sales of real estate.

On only four fronts, however, was there need for action. In seven of the 11 counties where Governor Murray directed, in a military order, that delinquent tax sales be prevented by the arrest, if necessary, of county treasurers, the guardsmen found the auctions either had been called off prior to the order or that no sale was planned.

R. N. Phelps, Garfield county treasurer, said the order, which he posted, "reads like good politics."

"He makes it look like we're trying to sell homes out from under the owners," Phelps added. "That isn't the case at all. We only advertised stock that was so loaded with back taxes that the owner would never pay it. Most of the property was vacant."

A militia officer and three subordinates prevented sales at Walters, Watonga and Durant. At Walters, Treasurer Monroe H. Young of Cotton county already had read the order of sale to a good humored crowd when Capt. Jesse H. Jones stepped in and announced the proceedings were ended.

There was maneuvering at Durant (Bryan county), with the guardsmen in charge of the sale, until District Judge Porter Newman issued a temporary restraining order adjourning the sale until November 5, when it may proceed without additional notice or advertisement.

Garfield county lost about $800 in advertising costs on the sale and Bryan about $4,000, the officials estimated. In Bryan county Treasurer John H. Mason said, it was the first tax resale since statehood and "the majority of the property was vacant."

Both treasurers said they were only seeking to put long delinquent property back on the tax rolls.

Madison, Wis.—A score of Wisconsin farm leaders meeting with Gov. Albert G. Schmedeman urged him to declare a state-wide moratorium on farm mortgage foreclosures of which they claimed 4,500 now are pending in court. They also sent a telegram petitioning President Roosevelt to order the farm credit administration to extend greater lenience in marking farm loans.

WOMEN IN ROLES OF STOWAWAY

Impelled by Wanderlust Romance.

When the ship's captain asked stowaway, "What's the big idea usually gets a story in reply.

Women, as well as men, are at times found as stowaways. One of the strangest and most romantic cases came to light when the first windjammer, the Herzogin Cecile, under Captain DeCloux, won a 3,000-mile sailing match against Beatrice from Australia to England.

A young Adelaide music teacher, Miss Jeanne Day, wanted to sail on the Herzogin Cecile. She had hair cut short like a boy's, bought one piece at a time, a complete boy's outfit. Then one day she went for a swim from a beach, and came back dressed as a boy.

But she was turned back when she tried to board the windjammer's wharf. So she waited till the ship was towed out and anchored, then she sailed in the bay. Then she hid under some nets in a boat, and lay low until night, when she rolled out, pretending to be drunk, and saying thickly "Hi, Cecile."

The fishing boat was then towed to the bay, not far from the ship, and the fisherman, completely deceived, rowed her over. She climbed up a ship's ladder unobserved, hid in the hold until she knew the vessel was safely at sea, and couldn't hold on without food water any longer. Then she went on deck, declared herself, and signed on as cabin-boy. Through the voyage round the Horn she had her full share of the work.

Only last year, another girl, daughter of a former president, San Salvador, also disguised herself as a boy, and was stowed away on board a small fishing boat, which took her from England to Liberia and then on a ship bound for the Bay of Biscay that forced her to leave her hiding place and so led to her discovery.

New Robot Sleuth May Read Human Mind

Electric Device Will Open New Era, Scientists Say.

Milwaukee.—Inquisitive science has developed an electric detective that is so sensitive that after it has been studied for a while it will undoubtedly be able to tell you what you are thinking about.

It was designed to tell the resistance of matter under observation to an electric current. It is what is known as the Wheatstone bridge, and several of the devices are in use in Milwaukee now. Marquette university has them in the physiology department and in the college of engineering. The college of engineering uses them in its electrical classes.

The United States bureau of fisheries at Gloucester, Mass., has been able to tell, with this device, just how fresh a fish really is. It can be used to determine spurious coins from real ones—because a standard coin, which is an alloy, has a standard resistance to electricity, and any other alloy will vary from that.

Holding one of these devices in his hand, Oscar D. Werwath, president of the Milwaukee School of Engineering, said:

"This little instrument is capable of measuring ohm resistance with as wide a variation as 10,000 ohms. It can pick out a resistance of one ten-thousandth of an ohm. This makes its practical application unlimited."

He went on to say that each person is more or less magnetic. The brain, especially, he said, is an enormous creator of electricity, inasmuch as each particle is in itself a sort of electric cell.

"Why," he said, "it might be possible with such a delicate device, after years of research, to be able to read a person's mind, through the amount of current that one can send off in the process of thinking."

Night Motor Racing Is Growing in Popularity

Washington.—Night automobile racing is rapidly becoming popular the country over, it was indicated in a survey by the contest board of the American Automobile association.

Introduced three years ago at the Ascot speedway in Los Angeles, before the idea of after dark competition gripped baseball and football fans, night races drew record attendances.

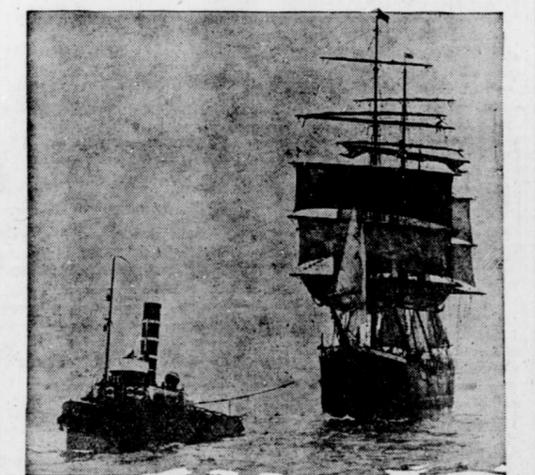

However, not until recently have the lucrative possibilities of "illuminated" races become apparent to eastern and midwestern speedway operators.

Now race operators in these sections have made extensive, hurried arrangements to install illuminating facilities in their speedways in time for the season openings in late May. Track promoters at Long Island, N. Y.; Reading, Pa.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Cincinnati, and Detroit all plan to feature the comparatively new after dusk sport.

Mammoth Thermometer Is Placed on Eiffel Tower

Paris.—With the installation of a mammoth thermometer on the Eiffel tower, Parisians and other Paris dwellers can tell exactly when to shiver and sink deeper into their mufflers and when to emerge and breathe a few breaths of fresh air. Shortly before his death, the Italian Jacopozzi, expert electrician and father of electrical displays on store fronts during the Christmas holidays, submitted the design for the huge thermometer. It was approved as a permanent fixture to the Citroen display and has been erected.

Farmer Finds Mill After 150-Mile Hunt

Grantsburg, Wis.—Frank Anderson, Frederic (Wis.) farmer, recently completed a 150-mile trip in search of a grist mill where he might have a load of grain ground into flour.

The circuit embraced nine towns and two states. He found that in each case mills either were converted into power plants, fish hatcheries and other projects or were out of operation. Despairing, he started the long trek homeward, only to discover a mill suitable for his purpose in a village 25 miles away.

It was used as the Turkish parliament and senate house until 1910, and has also served as a prison for sultans' heirs. Abdul Hamid II, shut up his brother Mourad V there for 27 years.

Chain Stores in France Meeting With Opposition

Paris.—A petition to eliminate chain stores from France has just been presented to the government by the national committee of commerce and industry.

Until recently chain stores practically were unknown in France. Last year, however, they successfully invaded the French capital.

The resolution complains that chain stores are chiefly of foreign ownership; that they specialize in foreign merchandise; that they sell an inferior product; and that they deceive by unfair advertising. Furthermore, the committee complains that the development of this type of store threatens to become an "element of national ruin."

The mob, which had driven deputy sheriffs and policemen to the second floor of the jail section, began to break up when they learned the National Guard had mobilized in the basement and were prepared to repel further mob violence.

The reclaimed territory around Sabaudia is one day expected to provide farm homes for some 30,000 needy war veterans on fertile wheat raising land.

Members of the royal court mingled with Fascist officials to hail the regime's conquest over a reclamation problem which defied the efforts of the old Roman empire.

Woman's Heel Print Clew in Death Mystery

Norwalk, Conn.—In the heel print of a woman's shoe in the sand of Long Island sound, authorities believed that they had a clew that will unravel the mystery of the death of Arthur Todd, wealthy seventy-year-old reclusive.

Todd plunged to his death in the sound from a cliff which adjoins his luxurious estate near here. The police were working on the theory that the retired business man was led to the cliff and pushed into the water after being robbed of $8,000.

Load of Dynamite

Thrown From Plane Seattle—Murray Stewart, pilot, carried fourteen 50-pound boxes of dynamite in his airplane to a mine in the Cascade mountains, and dropped it from an altitude of 600 feet. Carefully packed in cork containers, it did not explode. The miners had been temporarily cut off from supplies by a storm.

TO KEEP waxed floors in good condition the wax first must be allowed to dry thoroughly and then floors should be well polished. This will prevent them from scratching easily. The finish should be renewed as soon as it starts to wear off.

Sweeten whipped cream by adding a teaspoon of strained honey instead of sugar. It not only gives the cream a delightful flavor, but causes it to stay firm for a longer period.

When baking a pie with two crusts, as an apple, pick the top crust with a fork to let out the steam. This will prevent the crust from bursting at the sides and letting the juice run out.

Indian "Put on the Spot"

Centuries Ago Is Found Bakersfield, Calif.—Seated before his small fire, baking a mess of clams for his dinner, John Yokut, Tualumnu Indian, was "put on the spot," authorities disclosed recently.

Three stone-tipped arrows were fired into the back of his head and a fourth into his spinal column at the base of the brain.

The murder occurred several hundred years ago.

It was discovered when Smithsonian Institution archeologists found John's skull on the shore of ancient Buena Vista lake. John apparently never moved from his position in front of the fire, they said. The remains of the fire, the fossilized clams, and the victim's skeleton all were discovered just as the assassins left them.

America Leads World

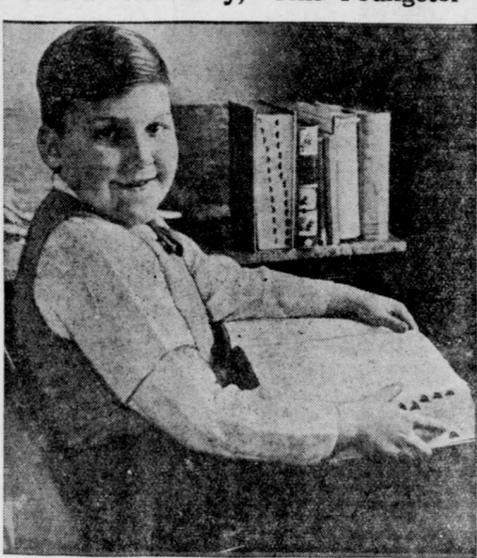

in Use of Eyeglasses

Kansas City, Mo.—America has the best lighted homes and offices in the world, but, paradoxically, has the greatest number of eyeglass wearers, according to Dr. Anton Eilschig, head of the eye clinic at the University of Prague.

It does not follow, however, says Doctor Eilschig, that sight of Europeans is any better than that of Americans.

"For one thing, many women wear glasses in this country while they don't in Europe," he said. "European women probably need glasses, but they are too proud to wear them."

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

When the Fusion administration came into power and Gen. John F. O'Ryan was appointed police commissioner, there was a big upheaval in the department. Of all the high ranking officers, but one was retained in his old capacity. That one was John Sullivan, assistant chief inspector in charge of detectives. His record was gone over with a fine tooth comb. It was found that through a dozen administrations he had fought for honesty in the department. It was found also that his service from the very beginning had been a combination of courage and intelligence. Back in 1903, he stopped a runaway horse before it dashed into a group of school children. He was in a hospital for weeks with a broken kneecap. He solved a puzzling series of robberies by working on his own time and capturing three holdup men single-handed. That brought him his first promotion. He trapped a petty politician who was swindling housewives and was promoted again. As a result of high honors in an examination, he became captain of detectives. Since then he has solved crimes with no other evidence than a knot or a broken key. His name seldom appeared in the newspapers. He was never that kind of a detective.

There are many Sullivan anecdotes, even if he won't talk about himself. He is given credit for knowing every gangster in New York. Some time ago, government agents spent six months and a lot of money looking for a member of the late Frankie Yale's gang. The police department wasn't asked for help but finally in desperation, one of the government men appealed to Sullivan. He walked over to a boarding house across the street and brought back the fugitive. His memory for places and localities is as good as it is for faces. He conducts the line-up and has obtained many a confession because a suspect has slipped in giving his address, it being highly disconcerting to have a six-foot inspector with a piercing gray eye fling back, "You're lying, that place is a vacant lot."

Inspector Sullivan's opinion of criminals is not high. In his opinion, the old saying that there is honor among thieves is all wrong. Once an interviewer asked him about the code of the underworld. "Code of the underworld?" snapped the inspector. "That's the bunk. Criminals are dirty rats with no courage and no honor!"

A story now going the rounds gives me a chuckle because it might be called, "New York Courtesy": A man got up and gave a woman a seat in the subway. The woman fainting. When she was revived, she thanked the man—and he fainted!

On one of the coldest days of the year, I saw Joseph P. Day, who has sold so much New York real estate he doesn't know the total value, walking along the street with no overcoat, and duly mentioned the fact. Now I learn that Mr. Day, who was sixty years old last September, hasn't worn an overcoat in the last 25 years. He carries $3,000,000 life insurance and is a director in the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Brass rails are rather scarce now. For a while, they were plentiful. Not only were they available for customers of hold-over speakies but a number of proprietors of legal places, despite the rules against vertical drinking, put in bars. The alcoholic beverages control board took no action until recently. Then word went around that if the bars didn't come down, the licenses would. So there were many alterations and sitting and drinking now is the order of the day and night. Even in most of the clubs, bars are only for service and not for leaning and elbow-resting purposes.

How It Started

By Jean Newton

"Horse Power"

AS TO the origin of the term "horse power," the unit stating the power used to drive certain machinery or to estimate the capability of engines, as, "That's a 70 horse power engine."

For those laymen who use the term casually and would be interested to understand its significance, it is the power required for the performance of work at the rate of 33,000 English units of work per minute; hence the power exerted in lifting 33,000 pounds at the rate of one foot per minute.

When first introduced more than a century ago the method of estimating the effects of engines was by what were called "horse powers." Actually, the power of a draught horse of average strength, working eight hours a day, is about four-fifths of a standard "horse power" unit.

From the original "horse powers" the "s" was dropped and "ten-horse" or "fifty-horse" became the qualifying expression.

"I DON'T BELIEVE IT"

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service

GUS WILLIAMS has a habit, when some one is telling a story, of saying, "I don't believe it."

Gus doesn't mean anything by it. He doesn't intend to be rude or contrary.

It is just an expression which, for some unexplainable and forgotten reason, he has adopted and injected into his casual conversations.

Gus says, "I don't believe it," quite in the same tone and manner as other folks exclaim, "Is that so?" or "Oh, really?" or "Do tell!"

But despite the fact that all the above statements are true, Gus "I don't believe it" is a source of annoyance and exasperation to Lacey Rogers, who is Gus' cousin and with whom he frequently associates in a social way.

Lacey is a great story teller. He prides himself on being a good spinner of yarns.

And to make things pleasant and inductive to his story-telling inclinations, folks like to hear Lacey tell stories. Whenever the Rogerses attend a party, Lacey is always called upon to tell a story.

He expounds a great length.

He is a much traveled young man and has many interesting tales to tell concerning his own experiences.

He recites these tales in a modest sort of way, thereby dispelling any possibility of boring his listeners.

• • • • •

Gus Williams is as interested a listener to Lacey's stories as the next man.

And because of the fact that Gus and his wife and Lacey and his wife are very close friends, it naturally follows that the two couples are in attendance at many and the same parties, hence most of Lacey's stories have been heard by Gus and his wife on more than one occasion.

In spite of this, however, Gus and Bertha always sit and listen attentively while Lacey unfolds what to them is a twice-told-tale.

In fact, Gus makes it a point to display his appreciation and interest by interrupting the story-teller at intervals with, "I don't believe it."

When this happens Lacey is apt to pause, try hard not to glare or curse, wait until the ripple of laughter dies down, and pick up the thread of his tale at the point of interruption.

But always after Gus' "I don't believe it" has severed the continuity of Lacey's theme, his tone somehow lacks in enthusiasm and interest.

The donouement is inclined to be flat.

Of course, Gus is all unsuspecting of the annoyance he is causing Lacey. No one has ever suggested that he is being rude.

His whole purpose is to be congenial and helpful.

Hence it has never once occurred to him to substitute, "my, my" or "dear me" for his, "I don't believe it."

• • • • •

Recently Lacey reached a point where he found himself fighting a desire to leap at Gus and plant a well-directed blow across his mouth, to tear his hair and scream curses that would give full expression to the annoyance he felt.

But Lacey is a well-mannered man and travels in correct society, hence convention and propriety forbid such an outburst.

However, convention and propriety cannot prevent Lacey from thinking, from grinding his teeth and muttering foul oaths when in the seclusion of his own bed chamber.

He has, also, taken to brooding about the matter.

Of course, he realizes that the thing has become an obsession with him; that he has allowed it to magnify itself and assume large proportions.

The fact that he alone is disturbed by Gus' "I don't believe it" is the one factor that restrains him from giving full vent to his feelings in the form of a physical assault upon Cousin Gus.

For Gus by no means confines his "I don't believe it" to Lacey.

He encourages every one with the same remark, and nobody but Lacey is bothered by it.

But the thing is settled now once and for all.

• • • • •

Last week an old friend of Lacey's, Miguel de Gomez, an adventurous young Mexican, with whom Lacey had shared some exciting times during a recent sojourn below the border, terminated a motor trip from Sonora at the Rogers homestead and, being warmly received, succumbed at last to Lacey's urging and decided to remain a week.

Of course, the Rogers were delighted. To begin with Miguel was a direct descendant of a great Spanish family and was considered one of the wealthiest men in Sonora.

He was also extremely handsome, and possessed of charming manners.

Immediately Lacey and his wife began preparations for a series of dinners and parties in honor of their distinguished guest.

The first affair, a formal dinner, was scheduled for the Tuesday evening following the Sunday of Miguel's arrival.

Of course, the Gus Williams were invited and displayed as much delight and interest in the handsome young Mexican as any one else.

The dinner was a gay affair, and when, following the dessert, the gathering adjourned to the library for coffee, every one was in a gay and congenial mood.

It was summer, but a chill wind blew outside the house and rain lashed against the windows.

Lacey ignited the fire in the library's open grate, and the guests found it cozy and comfortable sitting there sipping their coffee.

It suddenly occurred to some one that here was an ideal and proper setting for the telling of one of Lacey's stories.

At first Lacey, surreptitiously glancing at Cousin Gus, was inclined to refuse, but when Miguel joined the urging, he laughingly condescended to oblige.

• • • • •

Lacey's story on this night naturally concerned one of the numberless adventures which he had experienced with the guest of honor.

And before the tale was scarcely launched, Miguel's face began to glow with pleasure and deep interest.

You could tell by the expression in his eyes that he was delighted with Lacey's selection, and was following every incident of the adventure quite as much as if he were telling it himself.

The story concerned an incident in which he and Miguel had barely escaped with whole hides after outwitting a half dozen desperadoes during a raid on a remote ranch house in the fastnesses of the Sonora hills.

The two young adventurers had taken it upon themselves to lend a helping hand to the rancher and his family.

Lacey reached the point in his story in which Miguel had successfully and single-handedly put to earth a pair of the blood-thirsty bandits, when Gus Williams interrupted with, "I don't believe it."

Lacey stopped talking.

A flutter of laughter went around the circle of listeners.

Miguel's black eyes left the face of the speaker and darted across the room to where sat Gus in a comfortable armchair.

Gus grinned and nodded affably.

Lacey gulped, cleared his throat and picked up the thread of his narrative.

Some of the enthusiasm had left his voice, but he did a creditable job of explaining how, after Miguel had successfully disposed of his two assailants, he turned and raced across the courtyard, arriving at the ranch house door just in time to tell a third desperado, as that worthy was about to blow Lacey's brains out with a carbine.

• • • • •

At this juncture in the story Lacey paused for breath, and in the dead silence of that brief interval, Gus Williams said: "I don't believe it."

The dead silence was prolonged.

And this time the flutter of laughter was only a whisper. Miguel's eyes once more sought out the man in the comfortable armchair.

And this time those eyes were smoldering with an emotion that seethed and boiled inside the man's breast.

Lacey foresaw what was about to happen and tried to prevent it.

But he moved too late.

Miguel leaped out of his chair, crossed the room in two quick strides and before any one knew exactly what was taking place had slapped Gus a stinging blow across the mouth.

After that he stood back, folded his arms, regarded Gus with utter contempt and scorn in his eyes, and said: "So? See Senor no believe, eh? Well, my fren, let me tell you eet ees ze truth. Eet cannot be said that Miguel de Gomez ees ze coward. I demand satisfaction, my fren!"

At the conclusion of this little speech there was a great, loud, drawn-out sigh. Lacey glanced around the circle of faces, saw the expressions written thereon and suddenly realized that every one present had derived a certain satisfaction from seeing Gus get slapped across the mouth for saying "I don't believe it." Which, itself, was a great relief to Lacey, for Lacey had thought he was the only one who had been bothered by the remark.

Of course, the thing, despite Miguel's puzzlement, was explained and the Mexican retracted his wish for satisfaction and was profuse in his apologies.

However, the incident was not without its benefits.

From that day forward, Gus Williams, after five minutes of deep thought, has never since said "I don't believe it," no matter whether he did or not.

Female Dragon Fly Has Little Worry

Over Discharge of Maternal Duties

The eggs of the dragon fly are laid in the water. As the female flies slowly over the pond, close to its surface, she repeatedly dips the tip of her abdomen below the surface and fastens the eggs to an object just below the water level. When these eggs hatch, they produce a band of masked marauders, which must be a terror to the other small pond creatures.

The nymphs, as the young are called, are mud-colored. The head is broad and angular, with prominent eyes and short feelers. The legs are strong and stand out stiffly from the edge of the chest, and the abdomen is broad and flattened. Concealed by its color, this creature lies upon the muddy bottom of the pond, awaiting its prey. The mouth of the nymph, in fact most of the lower part of the head, is covered by a pair of strong, light jaws carried on a hinged arm. It is this arm that shoots out suddenly, so that the jaws can grasp the prey and return it, as the arm folds back in place, to the powerful, crushing jaws of the mouth.

Graf's Sister Ship Nears Completion

Friedrichshafen, Germany.—LZ-129, the biggest and better sister of the Graf Zeppelin, rapidly is progressing in construction. By July, 1933, the mid-section of the dirigible, with eight principal and auxiliary ribs and a total length of 139 meters, was finished. By September, and since that time work has pushed until at present only the stern skeleton, with its complicated steering apparatus, remains to be set in position. Without the stern section, the ship measures 189 meters. The completed length will be 248 meters, 13 meters longer than the Graf. Despite the only slightly greater length, however, the LZ-129 will have almost double the gas capacity of the Graf. Its circumference will be 41.20 meters, compared with 35.52 for the Graf Zeppelin, making for a respective carrying capacity of 200,000 as against 105,000 cubic meters. Meantime the interior construction is rapidly progressing. The passenger cabins are well along; piping is being laid for hot and cold water. As an innovation, the used water will not be discharged, but will be conducted to a special tank as ballast. Other innovations to be installed in the LZ-129 include an electric lift to facilitate loading and unloading of cargo and huge wheels affixed to the pilot's gondola and the lower fin to aid in landing. These wheels can be turned in any direction. The LZ-129 will be the first German airship on which smoking is permissible. This has been made possible by the introduction as a lifting agent of helium gas, hitherto confined to United States airships. The smoking room will be situated on the lower, or "B" deck, equipped with double doors and a veritable "staircase" through which smokers must pass entering or departing. Thus the fire hazard will be reduced to the absolute minimum. After the stern portion has been finished, the "suit" of the LZ-129 will be tailored. The "parts" already have been completed, a total of 35,000 square meters of cotton-linen material, compared with the 20,000 of the Graf. The Zeppelin works has specifically barred silk or wool covering after becoming convinced after long experience that silk or artificial silk is not sufficiently waterproof, and wool lacking in elasticity.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

BY MICHAEL K. REILLY, M. C.

There are two methods for considering legislation in the House of Representatives. One is the Committee method, whereby a bill is sent to a certain Committee, hearings are held on the bill, and the bill is either approved, disapproved or no action taken on it. The other method is what is known as the petition method, whereby bills pending in a Committee, for more than thirty days without being acted upon, may be brought before the House for consideration and the Committee discharged from further consideration of the bill.

This petition method for bringing legislation before Congress is a result of the rule adopted by the House in 1910. This rule required the signature of one-half of the membership of the House, on a petition to bring before the House, the question of discharging a Committee from further consideration of a bill.

After the Democrats came into power in 1931, the number of signatures required under this discharge rule was reduced to one-hundred and forty-five. At the present time, there are several petitions on the Speaker's desk, for the purpose of bringing before the House, bills that the Committees have not considered or having considered, have failed to take decisive action on after 30 days.

When a petition has been signed by one-hundred and forty-five members, the names are recorded in the Journal of the House, and seven days from that date, on a second Monday or a fourth Monday of the month, any person who has signed the petition may move to discharge the particular committee which has this bill under consideration, from further consideration of the bill. This motion is taken up right after the reading of the Journal on the second or fourth Monday, if the petition has been on the Speaker's desk or seven days, prior to the said second or fourth Monday.

Under the rule twenty minutes debate is allowed to the proponents of the discharged petition, and twenty minutes to the opponents of the discharged petition.

If the House decides to discharge the Committee, a majority vote of the House of a quorum being required, the next vote will be whether or not the House will consider the bill immediately. If this motion is not made or defeated, the bill goes on to one of the House calendars just the same as if it were ordinarily reported by the Committee, while if the motion for immediate consideration carries, the House will proceed to consider the bill under its rules.

There has been a great deal in the papers of late regarding the so-called McLeod Bill, which provides for the payment in full of all depositors in National and affiliated banks, and the discharged rule of the House.

Under the McLeod Bill, the U. S. Government is to take over all the assets of these closed banks and pay the depositors in full, and the Government to stand the losses, represented by the difference between the full amount of deposits, and the sum realized in the sale of the bank's assets.

The bill has been before the House Banking and Currency Committee for some time. Hearings had been conducted by a Sub-Committee, but the friends of the bill thought the Committee was not moving fast enough, so they decided that inasmuch as more than thirty days had passed since the bill went to the Committee, that they would bring the bill before the House through the petition method, and started out to secure 145 signatures.

Last week the Sub-Committee reported to the full Banking and Currency Committee, and full Committee reported out the McLeod Bill with amendments, which provided for the payment of depositors in all closed banks, State and National, up to $2,500.00. The amended Bill further provided that the Government should advance to depositors above the $2,500.00 limit, 85 per cent of the appraised assets of the Bank. In other words the Government would take an assignment of all bank deposits up to $2,500.00, The McLeod Bill as amended would cost the Government about one-third of what the original bill would cost and still take care of ninety-five per cent of the depositors.

The writer has taken considerable space in this letter, perhaps more than he should have taken, to explain the discharge rule of the House, because of the prominence that has been given by the Press to the so-called McLeod Bank Deposit Pay Bill, attempted to be brought before the House under the said rule.

The President is opposed to any legislation for the payment of bank depositors in full for the reason that it would set a precedent that might wreck the Treasury of the United States.

Last week ten thousand real estate bond-holders organized in Chicago, held a big parade and elected representatives to come to Washington to get Congress to pass some legislation giving to these real estate bond-purchasers, some financial relief.

As stated in my letter last week, some program should be worked out by Congress to give immediate relief to depositors in closed banks, State and National, and the understanding is that the Treasury Department is working upon such a program. Such relief should and the writer believes, will
