AGED RESIDENTS PASS AWAY

Fred Bartelt, one of the oldest and most highly esteemed residents of this village, passed away at his home in the village at 3:00 o'clock a. m. on March 20, 1936, after an illness of only three days with complications resulting from his advanced age.

Mr. Bartelt was born in Pommerin, Germany, in 1845, immigrating to this country in 1857, at the age of 12 years, settling in the town of Auburn, Fond du Lac county. On Dec. 20, 1899, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Wilhelmina Backhaus at Kewaskum, and settled in this village 36 years ago. Besides his widow, he is survived by two sons, Robert Bartelt on the homestead in the town of Auburn; and Arnold Bartelt of West Bend. He is also survived by eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Mr. Bartelt was very well and favorably known throughout this section and was beloved by all. He came from that sturdy German ancestry who came to this country and made themselves a home in the vast wilderness of that time. He was always a great lover of his home and his family's welfare was ever uppermost in his heart. He will be greatly missed by his relatives and host of friends, who unite in extending sympathy to the surviving family.

Funeral services were held Monday at 1:30 p. m. from St. Lucas Lutheran church. Rev. Gerhard Kaniess officiated. Interment took place in the congregation's cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Wm. Schultz, Robert Bartelt, Roman Backhaus, Wilmer Prost, Art Meyer and Albert Prost.

IN MEMORIAM

In fond respect and remembrance to our dear husband and father, Fred Bartelt, who passed to the beyond on March 20, 1936:

Dearest father, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
When in Heaven in joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.
Missed by his sorrowful wife, Mrs. Fred Bartelt, and family. (M)

Mrs. Kathrine Backhaus, nee Terlinden, passed away in death at 7:30 p. m. March 19, at the home of her son, Emil, in the town of Wayne, Washington county, after a three weeks' illness with a stroke.

Kathrine Terlinden was born in the town of Ashford, Fond du Lac county, on March 2, 1854, and came to her present home about 45 years ago. In April, 1874, she was united in marriage to Wm. Backhaus in the town of Ashford, who preceded her in death May 22, 1916. Mrs. Backhaus was the mother of five children, two of whom died in infancy. Those surviving are: John Backhaus of the town of Wayne, Emil Backhaus of the town of Wayne, Wm. C. Backhaus of the town of Kewaskum. She also leaves 10 grandchildren and 1 great-grandchild.

IN MEMORY

Weinend legen wir Dich nieder,
In Dein stilles Schlafgemach,
Niemals kehrst Du zu uns wieder
Darum weinen wir dir nach,
Doch es schlaegt fuer uns die Stunde,
Wo wir dich einst wiedersehen,
Wenn vereint zum schoensten Bunde,
Wir vor Gottes Throne stehn.

Funeral services were held Sunday, March 22, from the Reformed Evangelical church at Wayne, the Rev. A. A. Graff officiating. Interment took place in the congregation's cemetery.

The pallbearers were: Wm. Rauch, Ph. Jung, Henry Jung, John Jung, Armond Mertz and Ph. Menger.

All those who attended the funeral from afar were: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Backhaus of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schmidt, Mrs. Jac. Knoebel, Miss Malinda Terlinden, all of Milwaukee; Mrs. Wm. Enderle, Mr. and Mrs. Krueger and family, Louis Luedtke and family; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Klink of Lomira; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fischer and family of Woodland, and a large number of relatives and friends of Campbellsport and Kewaskum attended the funeral.

CARD OF THANKS

The undersigned desire to express their heartfelt thanks to all who assisted them at their recent bereavement, the death of their beloved mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, Katherine Backhaus. Thanks are also extended to Rev. Graff for his consoling words, to the choir for the beautiful songs rendered; the pallbearers, grave digger, all who loaned cars, Millers, who had charge of the funeral, and all who showed their respect for the departed one by attending the funeral. No branch of animal production, says the Biological Survey, has developed more rapidly during the depression nor has resulted in greater profits than silver fox farming, and this at a time when some farm commodities scarcely had a market.

MAN WHO DISAPPEARED LOCATED AT PLYMOUTH

Philip Diels, 41, of the town of Farmington, who disappeared on Jan. 20 after cashing a check at Fillmore, received as pay for labor on the WPA park project in this village, was located recently when he phoned Washington county authorities from near Plymouth stating that he had been informed people were looking for him. Upon being brought to the county jail and questioned by Sheriff Jos. Kirsch, the man revealed that he had simply wandered off, causing authorities to make an extended search for him the past few weeks as his family believed he might have been a victim of the inclement weather which raged at that time.

Diels, who has received another check since his disappearance, was released after promising to pay this to his wife and children and behave himself in the future.

CARD OF THANKS

The undersigned survivors do hereby express their sincere thanks to all who so faithfully aided and consoled them in their recent moment of deepest sorrow, the death of their beloved husband and father, Fred Bartelt; to Rev. G. Kaniess, for his words of comfort; the organist and choir, pallbearers, all who loaned cars; for the very beautiful floral offerings; to Millers, who had charge of the funeral; all who helped in any way, and to all who paid last respects by attending the last sad rites. IN LOVING MEMORY

In sad but sacred tribute of love and remembrance of our beloved son and brother, Ralph L. Heisler, who was called to rest one year ago, on March 24th, 1935:

Thy gentle voice now is hushed,
Thy warm true heart is still,
And on thy young and innocent brow
Is resting death's cold chill.
Thy hands are clasped upon thy breast
We have kissed thy lovely brow,
And in our aching hearts we know,
We have no dear Ralph now.
Sadly missed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Heisler, brothers and sister.

The machine, which is being used in the copper mines of South America, weighs 167 ton and can be left in the mine during blasting without harming the machine. The shovel knocked down and made ready for shipment required six full size railroad cars to transport it to the docks at New York.

YOU CAN STILL DONATE TO FLOOD SUFFERERS

There is still time to donate toward relieving the flood sufferers, according to Mrs. E. L. Morgenroth, who has asked us to inform those who have not as yet gave toward this worthy cause in time of dire need, and who desire to do so.

Ministers in the local churches called attention to the need of donations last Sunday, explaining that each contribution will be returned one hundred fold for aiding these helpless, homeless persons who were victims of floods. Thousands have already given. Let us do our share by turning in our contributions to Mrs. Morgenroth at once.

STATE BUYS MOON LAKE GAME REFUGE

As the first step in converting the Kettle Moraine district in Fond du Lac and Sheboygan counties into a state park, Gov. Ph. F. La Follette on Saturday approved action by the state conservation commission in acquiring the Izaak Walton league preserve of 842.2 acres surrounding Moon lake in sections 11 and 14 of the Town of Auburn, the heart of which is located about seven miles northeast of Kewaskum.

The wooded refuge, which includes three lakes covering about 100 acres, was bought by the state for $10,000. Ten years ago it cost the league $40,000, and the Waltonians spent between $10,000 and $20,000 additional for breeding pens for game birds and other equipment, and in planting trees, according to Haskell Noyes, a director of the league chapter at Milwaukee.

"For the last two years the state has been leasing our site and operating it," he said. "Having accomplished our purpose, we decided to sell it to the state; we had an offer of three times as much money from a private group for a hunting preserve, but wished to see the tract continued in its present use."

State Conservation Director H. W. MacKenzie expects extensive use of the refuge will be made by school children from Milwaukee and other southeastern Wisconsin cities for tree planting and other projects, and that it will provide a recreation site for families who have not the means to travel into far northern Wisconsin for outdoor activities.

Eastern States Devastated by Great Floods—Germany Condemned by League Council—President Asks Billion and Half for Relief.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

STATES of the Central East and New England suffered severely from the almost unprecedented floods. Scores of lives were lost and the vast property damage cannot yet be estimated. At least 150,000 persons were made homeless. Conditions were worst in western Pennsylvania. The Monongahela and Allegheny rivers, uniting at Pittsburgh to form the Ohio, poured raging torrents down over the great industrial city, driving the people from their homes and places of business. The famous "Golden Triangle" between the rivers was completely inundated; transportation and communication systems were suspended and power plants were put out of commission so the city was plunged in darkness. The plight of the suburbs was equally bad.

Farther east, Johnstown was entirely flooded and the terror-stricken inhabitants fled from their homes, but the great Quemahoning dam was holding and the danger of a repetition of the disaster of 1889 seemed to be passing. Dozens of cities and towns along the Susquehanna and its tributaries were under water, and in New York the Mohawk, Hudson, Schuylkill and Delaware rivers were out of their banks and rapidly rising. The Potomac, too, became a raging flood and in Washington an army of men was working feverishly to save the buildings and monuments in the flatlands.

Ten thousand persons were rendered homeless in the New England states and about a score lost their lives. The emergency there was greatest in the valley of the Connecticut river. Many cities were cut off from rail transportation and also were without light and power.

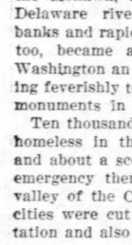
American Red Cross rose to the emergency, as always, mobilizing its forces to relieve the suffering. Admiral Cary T. Grayson, its national head, issued an appeal for a fund of $3,000,000. President Roosevelt also called for this amount in a proclamation. Secretary of War Dern was appointed emergency flood relief head by the President and immediately ordered the generals commanding six corps areas of the army to extend full aid for prevention of loss of life and destruction of property.

Work Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins gave blanket authority to all WPA officials to employ their workers in any way necessary in rescue work and in strengthening levees.

The United States Coast Guard sent many power launches, provisioned and manned, from the Chicago area to help in the relief work at various points. To prevent robbery and vandalism National Guardsmen were on the job at Pittsburgh and other places.

Air lines to the East had a great increase of business because of the disorganization of railway traffic, and all spare planes were pressed into the service.

GERMANY was forced to denounce the Locarno pact because the Franco-Russian mutual assistance treaty was directed only against the reich and ranged 275,000,000 people against it. That is what Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's adviser on foreign affairs, told the council of the League of Nations when it met in London to pass on the complaint of France and Belgium that Germany had violated both the Locarno pact and the Versailles treaty by remilitarizing the Rhineland.



Joachim von Ribbentrop

Nevertheless, the council by unanimous vote condemned Germany as a violator of both treaties. How she shall be punished, if at all, remained to be determined. France and all her allies wanted the imposition of sanctions; Italy could not be brought to favor that, being herself subjected to such penalties; Great Britain, striving to preserve the peace, sought some middle way out of the dilemma.

Representatives of Britain, France, Belgium and Italy devised a plan which provides for a conference of world nations to draft economic, disarmament, and security plans. This plan also provides that Germany, in the meantime, would agree not to fortify the Rhineland and, pending a new agreement with Germany, Britain would guarantee France's security.

The French especially liked this because it amounted to a military defensive alliance with Britain, but they did not believe it would be accepted by Germany.

Von Ribbentrop, accompanied by an imposing lot of experts and secretaries, was sent by Hitler at the request of the council. The reichsfuehrer had consented to be represented after British Foreign Secretary Eden assured him he would do his best to persuade France and Belgium to consider Hitler's new security plans after Germany had been formally condemned for its action in the Rhineland.

In his address before the council Von Ribbentrop emphatically asserted that France by approaching soviet Russia in concluding "what really was a military alliance," did not respect the Locarno treaty. And the Soviet-Czechoslovakian agreement also, he declared, constituted a further danger to the reich.

France's proposal to submit the France-Russian treaty to The Hague court was said by a spokesman for the German delegation to be futile and useless. He also said the plan suggested by the English, to police the Rhineland zone with an international force, was "absolutely unacceptable."

A third provision, for drawing up a system of mutual guaranties among the Locarno powers, to operate in case of an attack, the spokesman said, was "unnecessary because Germany has no intention of crossing her frontiers." None of the Germans, however, even intimated that Hitler would withdraw any of his troops from the Rhineland.

At a former session of the league council Captain Eden declared that the danger of hostilities arising from the Rhineland crisis might be excluded. He pleaded that this occasion must be seized not only to establish the justice of the French complaints but also to make a new settlement of differences between the French and Germans.

"I have already stated before the council," said Eden, "that in the view of the British government a patent and incontestable breach of the Versailles treaty relating to the demilitarized zone has been committed.

"It is, therefore, in the opinion of his majesty's government, right for the council to come to a similar conclusion and to convey this finding to the other signatory powers."

Eden, however, declared that "the duty of the league is not limited to taking action to safeguard the peace of the world. It is essential that the specter of war should be exorcised for the future at the same time that peace is maintained now."

Hitler was continuing his speech-making tour in Germany. At Koenigsberg he said:

"For once a single man comes forth in Europe behind whom stands a whole nation. He extends his hand to other nations. Whoever dares reject this, my hand, behind which 69,000,000 people are united, must bear responsibility in the eyes of history. I have been the herald of the German people for more than three years. I am now the herald for peace in Europe."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE announced the establishment of five regions for administration of the soil conservation and domestic allotment act, substitute for the invalid AAA. H. R. Tolley, administrator of the new plan, said the department already has begun a field service to administer the program in various states. As under the AAA, the leading part within the states is to be played by the farmers' county and community committees.

H. R. Tolley

Mr. Wallace also directed discontinuance of the four commodity divisions whose work of liquidating AAA production control programs will be taken over by the regional directors. The order leaves intact other administrative units of the AAA, such as the division of marketing and marketing agreements, division of program planning, and the division of the consumers' counsel.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT packed up his fishing tackle and started South for his annual angling cruise, this time on the new Presidential boat, the Potomac. He made a brief stop at Winter Park, Fla., where he received an honorary degree from Rollins college. His plan was then to board the Potomac and spend about two weeks on his old fishing grounds off the Florida coast.

Mr. Roosevelt had invited as his fishing companions his eldest son, James; an uncle, Frederick A. Delano, and three mates of his fishing cruise of last fall, Capt. Wilson Brown, United States navy, and Col. Edwin M. Watson, United States army, his military aides, and Capt. Ross T. McIntire, United States navy, White House physician.

SEIZURE of private telegrams by the Black committee has resulted in a fierce warfare of words between John J. McSwain of South Carolina, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, and William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher. Senator Black withdrew the subpoena on the Western Union company in the Hearst case but first made public what purported to be a copy of a telegram from the publisher to one of his editorial writers in which McSwain was called "a Communist in spirit and a traitor in effect." McSwain promptly read this in the house and then vigorously and eloquently defended himself and denounced Hearst.

The publisher retorted with an open letter to his editorial writer in which he said:

"McSwain is a politician of the lower order, and his extreme radical pacificism is a danger to the peace and protection of the nation, and to the safety of the men, women and children who constitute the American people."

ONE and one-half billion dollars will be needed to carry the Works Progress administration through the coming fiscal year, according to President Roosevelt's figuring. Therefore he asked congress to appropriate that sum. He thought it would be sufficient to care for the destitute unemployed, together with $1,000,000,000 in unexpended previous appropriations and the $600,000,000 carried in the budget for the civilian conservation corps and various public works.

Limitation of federal relief expenditures to this figure, however, is dependent upon re-employment of substantial numbers of the idle by private industry, the President said.

As the President's message was presented, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns revealed that Mr. Roosevelt had advised his leaders that any increase in the appropriation over his estimates must be accompanied by new taxes to provide revenues to cover the added cost.

RUSH D. HOLT, the young Democratic senator from West Virginia, gave notice that he would continue to hammer at the Works Progress administration until a senate investigation was ordered. He demanded an inquiry into all relief activities under charge of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, and other agencies affecting relief, the RFC, CWA, and FERA.

In reply to some of the charges made, Mr. Hopkins issued this bulletin:

"No employee of WPA is required to make any contribtuion to any political party. No WPA employee's job will be in jeopardy because of failure to make such contribution.

"No employee of the WPA shall at any time solicit contributions for any political party, and evidence of such solicitation will be cause for immediate discharge. The question whether or not to contribute to any political party is a matter entirely for the voluntary decision of employees.

"No person will be employed or discharged on the ground of his support or nonsupport of any candidate."

SINCE the recent elections in Spain the riots staged by the leftists have been growing more vicious daily, and after disorders at Logrono in which a number of persons were killed the Spanish army was aroused to vigorous protest. Premier Manuel Azana was told by the officers that unless his new left government adopted measures to stop the widespread violence the army would take the maintenance of order into its own hands. Gen. Carlos Masquelet, minister of war, was said to be in sympathy with the army's demand.

Manuel Azana

Azana held a heated conference with Francisco Largo Caballero, president of the Socialist party and is said to have told him that he believed revolutionary Socialists were responsible for most of the disorders, demanding that the violence cease immediately. Largo insisted that the Socialists be permitted to demonstrate, but finally gave in to the premier and issued orders to all Socialists to behave themselves.

Despite strict censorship imposed by the governor of Logrono it was learned that incendiaries there set fire to six convents and churches, four rightest centers and a rightest newspaper, and then attacked the army barracks, attempting to seize artillery.

THE Treasury reported that income tax collections for the first 16 days March amounted to $281,758,032, or a gain of 46.4 per cent over the $192,429,413 in the corresponding period of last year. Practically all collection districts registered an increase.

Since the first of the year, the Treasury said, $361,428,990 has been collected on the income tax, an increase of 45.6 per cent over the $248,060,132 gathered in for the same period of 1935.

ELEUTHERIOS VENIZELOS, probably the greatest of latter-day Greek statesmen, died in Paris, where he was in self-imposed exile, following an attack of grippe. He was seventy-two years old.

Venizelos, former premier of Greece, fled from the island of Crete last March after a revolt he headed collapsed. He was tried and sentenced to death, but King George after his recall offered him amnesty. Venizelos, however, refused to return, declaring "Greece will never see me again." He was an ardent republican and denounced the restoration of the monarchy.

SECRETARY OF LABOR PERKINS was accused of harboring hundreds of deportable criminal and radical aliens in the United States by Senator Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina when he introduced a resolution calling upon the Labor department to furnish information allegedly withheld from congress.

Senator Reynolds' resolution said that request had been made of Labor department officials for information concerning "in excess of 2,600 aliens in the United States known to and allowed by the Department of Labor to remain in the United States, although subject to deportation." The request, the resolution stated, was refused.

PROCEEDING with its great rearmament program, the British government has named Sir Thomas Inskip, attorney general since 1932, to be the co-ordinator of the entire scheme, giving him a newly created cabinet post. This selection by Prime Minister Baldwin was a surprise. It had been thought the place might go to Winston Churchill, Neville Chamberlain, Alfred Duff Cooper or Sir Samuel Hoare.

Sir Thomas Inskip

Sir Thomas is known as an "anti-jingoist," is sixty years old and always is calm and unruffled in the house of commons or at the bar. It will be his duty as defense co-ordinating minister to synchronize activities of the army, navy, and air services.

COMPROMISE brought to an end the two weeks' strike of building service workers in New York and thousands of elevator operators and other employees returned to their jobs in some 2,400 apartment houses and business structures. The settlement provided for immediate re-employment of all strikers and arbitration of wages and hours, and it was hailed as a "great victory" by James J. Bambrick, head of the local union and leader in the strike.

Arbitration of minimum wages and maximum hours under supervision of Ferdinand A. Silcox, chief of the United States forestry service. Wages and hours are to be fixed at the end of each of the next three years on the basis of prevailing economic conditions.

In signing a three year contract with the realty advisory board, representing the employers, union leaders abandoned their demand for a closed or preferential shop.

TALL TALES

The Faithful Crutches

MOST people know about the loyalty of dogs and other dumb animals that serve mankind, but they do not realize that inanimate things are frequently just as faithful. So says Herbert Sharples of Montreal, Que., who tells this touching story of the faithful crutches.

One day he saw a traveling doctor in the market place offering for sale a marvelous salve which, he claimed, would cure all ills. One of the first purchasers was a man whose legs were so shriveled and twisted that he had to use crutches to get along. One minute and eight seconds after he had rubbed some of the salve on his legs they were so straight and strong that he cast away his crutches and started to walk home without them.

The doctor, having no use for the salve left in the box by the man, and noticing that the crutches were very dingy from long use, began rubbing some of the ointment on them to see if it would brighten them up. At once the crutches began to dance and caper around him, stopping now and then to admire each other's bright, shiny appearance.

Suddenly they paused in their antics and the next moment they were trotting gaily down the street until they caught up with their former master. After that they walked sedately at his heels, ready to come to his assistance if need be, even though he had cast them off without a single thought.

Victims of Imagination

JOSEPH THOMPSON, of Nashville, Tenn., who gets around the country quite a bit in his work for a railroad, is seldom surprised by the queer things that folks do—like putting tacks in a dining car meal, eating them and threatening to sue the carrier.

The reason Joe preserves his calm is that once he operated a farm and most everybody knows that the queerest sort of things are forever happening there.

Joe's plantation featured fine hams and a herd of nervous goats but he still likes to talk about his trials and tribulations with a patch of popcorn.

"Never had any decent luck with the popcorn," Joe testifies. "Gets hot as blazes down at Nashville and first thing you'd know my field would begin to pop and I'd lose practically everything I'd put into it. Don't suppose I ever got to market more than half a crop.

"What I finally did was to plant the popcorn at a spot very close to the house. The noise of its popping kept the children amused and sometimes they would be quiet for hours, just listening to the cheery noise of the popping corn.

"One time, though, the whole field began to pop at the same time. The white pellets flew into the air in a thick cloud and fell in the pasture with my nervous goats. Eighteen of the goats thought it was snowing and lay down and froze to death."

The Unfinished Story

CHARLES M. WALKER tells tall tales because of silent hours with feeding sheep in the Big Horn mountains of Wyoming. But, strangely enough, his favorite yarn concerns the heart of Chicago instead of the great open spaces.

"In 1928," Charlie tells, "downtown Chicago had numerous banks and many bank vice presidents. Despite their numbers, however, some of the latter were obsessed of self-importance. It is of one of these I sing.

"He lived fashionably on the north shore, commuting daily to the loop. One crisp morning he discovered the family cat dead at his back door. It was only 18 paces to a small garden but the banker revolted at being seen burying a cat. He wrapped the carcass in oiled paper, intending to cast it into the Chicago river which he always crossed downtown.

"Two friends joined him at the river's edge, which meant that the parcel was cached in an empty safe deposit box at the bank.

"Homeward bound, the banker retrieved his demised animal, planning quick interment on recrossing the river. Once again, however, friends accompanied him. He boarded a crowded train, placed his ghastly parcel in a luggage rack.

"At his station, the banker seized a brown-paper parcel and bolted. Swallowing pride, he decided on burial in the garden. But when he opened the parcel there was revealed a T-bone steak which an unknown but soon-to-be-shocked commuter had selected."

Mystery Springs in Queensland

Fifty miles southeast of Boulia township, in the far west of Queensland, are two mystery springs. One, known as Elizabeth spring, consists of a circular hole four or five feet in diameter in which tepid water is continually bubbling up and overflowing. The water, which is perfectly clear, is peculiar in that the human body cannot sink in it owing solely to the force of the water bubbling up from below. About 50 yards away is another called Lubra spring. Its water is always icy cold and is jet black. The human body sinks like a stone in it. According to the aborigines of the locality, the water in this spring turned black ages ago when a lubra (native woman) jumped into it and was never seen again.

Gods of Nepal

While the monkey-faced god, Hanuman, is popular in Nepal, India, Machendranath is the most important of the local divinities, in view of the fact that it is believed he is the protector of Nepal, and is said to appear to the rulers of the country in times of national crisis. His festival is a popular event, for at that time he is supposed to bring rain to the sun-baked crops. He is taken out of his elaborate chariot and adorned by the populace, and is worshiped by both the Buddhist and Hindu.

JOHN P. CLUM, Apache Agent

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS is the story of a "forgotten hero" of the old frontier. His name was John Philip Clum.

When he died on May 2, 1932, newspaper dispatches recorded the fact very briefly. They said he had been an agent for the Apache Indians and "captor" of the notorious Chief Geronimo. They recalled that he had also been the first mayor of the town of Tombstone, Ariz., in its wild old days and that he was the founder and first editor of its famous (and appropriately-named) newspaper, the Epitaph.

But they told only a fractional part of the story of an authentic "Wild West hero." A more complete record of his career appears in the book "Apache Agent—The Story of John P. Clum," written by his son, Woodworth Clum, and published recently by the Houghton-Mifflin company.

John Clum was about the last man on earth you would have picked for a "Wild West hero" if you could have seen him that day in the autumn of 1874 when he arrived in the frontier country. He was a slender youngster, just past his twentieth birthday, "arrayed in store clothes, boiled shirt and derby hat"—in other words, the typical eastern tenderfoot tossed into the swirling hurly-burly of the Southwest.

He had been born of Holland-Dutch parentage near Claverack, N. Y., in 1851 and had grown up on the farm. At the age of sixteen he entered the Hudson River institute in that city and immediately joined the cadet corps where he received military training which would prove invaluable to him later. In the fall of 1870 he entered Rutgers college—to study for the ministry, his parents hoped. But young Clum thought differently.

At Rutgers he played on the football team and took part in the first intercollegiate game ever played in this country—between Rutgers and Princeton. He also became captain of the crew but illness cut short his college career. He went back to the farm but, soon realizing that it wasn't big enough to make a living for him and his five brothers, he decided to go West.

He Goes West

His opportunity came when he read in the village newspaper that the War department was about to organize a meteorological service throughout the United States (now the United States weather bureau). He went to Washington, passed the examination, was appointed an observer-sergeant in the United States Signal corps with orders to go to the old Spanish city of Santa Fe, N. M. He started in October, 1871.

Picture young John Clum now as he rides on a Kansas and Pacific railroad train drawn by a little wood-burning locomotive which "snorted, belched great clouds of smoke and attained, at times, the terrific speed of 30 miles per hour. . . . A different country; new kinds of people. Buffalo by the hundreds grazed peacefully on the plains. Hunters in buckskin suits, carrying long rifles and bowie knives, spat tobacco juice on the platforms of tiny railroad stations, and endeavored to outdo each other with tales of their prowess as plainsmen. These things he saw and heard through the window of the railway coach; and they intrigued him, the country boy in his boiled shirt, stiff collar and derby hat."

During the next two years, as weather observer at Santa Fe, the tenderfoot became better acquainted with the West. But he was far from being a seasoned frontiersman when, in November, 1873, he received from the Indian bureau in Washington an offer of the position of Indian agent at the San Carlos reservation in Arizona. Why was he chosen for the job?

"In those days the several religious denominations were charged with the supervision of the welfare of the various tribes of Indians, including the recommendation of suitable persons for appointment as Indian agents. The wild Apaches had been assigned to the very tame Dutch Reformed church, which denomination had been responsible for the religious guidance of John Clum's youthful footsteps. It so happened that the Apaches needed an agent at this time, and a volunteer was sought among the students at Rutgers college. Some of Clum's former classmates suggested that, inasmuch as he was already in New Mexico, he might be willing to undertake the job."

A Man-Size Job

A job it was, too, for a twenty-two-year-old, fresh from the East—just a matter of taking charge of 5,000 Indians scattered all over the territory of Arizona. Moreover, these Indians were the "terrible Apaches." From the days of the Spanish conquistadores they had learned to distrust and hate the white man and for 200 years every effort of the Spanish and the Mexicans to conquer them had been in vain.

After the Mexican war the United States had acquired, by conquest and purchase, the Great Southwest. But treaties and such-like didn't mean a thing to the Apaches. This was Apache land and they had never admitted the sovereignty of Mexico over it. Although they hated the Mexicans, they were willing enough to be friendly with the first Americans with whom they came into contact.

But an act of treachery on the part of an American trader and the cold-blooded murder of a party of Apaches by his men in 1835 had planted the seed of suspicion of Americans. During the next 50 years that suspicion grew into a certainty that these white men also were enemies to be mistrusted and hated. For there was "a sickening series of broken promises, of ugly trickeries. Chiefs, invited to conference, were killed. Safe conducts were violated. Officers broke faith. The American trappers, traders and soldiers always had difficulty in telling the difference between consistently hostile tribes, like the Chiricahuas, and peaceable tribes, such as the Arivaipas." So they killed Apaches indiscriminately and more than once drove friendly tribes on to the warpath.

By 1862 the federal government had decided upon a policy of extermination of the Apaches. From 1862 until 1871 it had spent $38,000,000 to do it and had actually succeeded in killing less than 100 Apaches, including women, children and old men! "There were seven thousand Apaches in the United States when that war started and seventy-one hundred survived. The Apache birth rate defeated the Grim Reaper and Uncle Sam, combined, by one hundred head."

All of these things young John Clum learned by digging into official reports when he went to Washington to study up on his new duties. "The deeper I dug into these official reports, the more bewildered I became. Could my government be so two-faced as to presume to protect the Apaches through its civilian Department of the Interior and at the same time endeavor to exterminate them through its military Department of War? . . . I determined that the Apaches would get a square deal from that time on, if their new agent had anything to say about it."

Ominous Predictions

Despite that honorable intention, the words of old-timers in Tucson, when he arrived there on his way to take up his new duties at San Carlos, were scarcely reassuring.

"It's a shame to send such a kid," they said. "He'll be back here in a week, as soon as he gets one good look at those Apaches. Either that or he'll get an Apache lance stuck through him before he ever reaches the agency." . . .

"Better go back to the farm," was their final admonition, "and save your money as well as your scalp."

But John P. Clum had two outstanding virtues—courage and a sense of humor. He had become bald at the age of twenty-one, and now lacking one month of being twenty-three, he had only a fringe of hair which he kept close-cropped.

"The government is paying my traveling expenses," he told his advisers, "so I cannot lose any money by going to San Carlos, and having no hair I cannot very well lose my scalp."

With this parting shot, Clum procured a buckboard and two horses, loaded up with provisions, bought a Colt forty-five six-shooter and drove out of Tucson . . .

En route, he passed through New Camp Grant and there he saw a fine-looking Indian with iron shackles riveted to his ankles at work making adobe bricks. It was Chief Eskiminzin of the Arivaipas. Originally a friendly chief, he had seen 118 of his people killed by a party of Americans, Mexicans and Papago Indians from Tucson in the famous (or infamous) Camp Grant massacre. Small wonder that he had taken to the warpath to avenge them. At last he had been prevailed upon to bring his tribe in to San Carlos. The reason he was wearing shackles was because he was an Apache and the army officer in command didn't like him!

Eventually Clum succeeded in gaining Eskiminzin's release and by doing so gained a friend who was a potent factor in making a success of his new job. But an even greater factor was Clum's method of dealing with the Apaches.

First Indian Police

Anticipating by 50 years the most modern theories about handling Indians, he made them self-governing by founding the first body of Indian police ever organized in this country to preserve order on the reservation and by establishing Indian courts to try offenders. He made them partially self-supporting by teaching them the arts of peace instead of war and paid them for the work they did. And above all else he taught them that he was a man "who did not speak with a split tongue." What he promised to do, whether punishment or reward, he did and they knew he would do it.

The results of his policy were soon apparent. When he first went to San Carlos he had 700 Arivaipas under his charge. Then the word went out among other Apache tribes that at last there was a white man agent at San Carlos who would treat them fairly and protect them from bad white men (including the soldiers). So they began coming in and within three years Clum was ruling over 5,000 of these "terrible Apaches" without the aid of a single soldier. The only other white men at San Carlos were a physician and a commissary clerk.

"For three hundred years Apaches had defied control; had been known as the most dangerous of all the nations of red men in North America; the most resourceful fighters; the most difficult to subdue. John Clum disregarded all precedents of Indian management, and in three years tamed the much-heralded untamable."

It is doubtful if he could have done that had it not been for the loyalty of his Indian police. How deep was that loyalty is shown by the fact that Sergeant Tauelciyee shot and killed his own brother when that brother tried to murder the sergeant's beloved "nan-tan" (chief-agent). It was proved again when Clum was ordered to take the trail of Geronimo's hostiles, capture them and hold them for murder and robbery.

It was a big order. It meant marching on foot four hundred miles across the mountains and deserts of Arizona and New Mexico, almost to the Rio Grande. It meant out-smarting a cunning foe, who for years had defied capture. It meant achieving a task at which the military of two nations had failed.

John Clum carefully selected for his posse a hundred of his best Apache fighting men, made the long journey, trapped Geronimo and his followers in the mountains near Ojo Caliente, N. M., captured them all, marched them back four hundred miles to the San Carlos reservation.

"This was the only time Geronimo was ever actually captured. In later years on several occasions he voluntarily surrendered; he was forcibly captured only once. John Clum did the job without bloodshed, without fanfare of trumpets. He riveted chains on Geronimo's ankles and threw him into the guardhouse."

Politics Intervenes

More than that, John Clum favored hanging Geronimo for the murderer that he was. But fate, in the form of official stupidity in Washington and politics, intervened to save the neck of the renegade leader. Soon after Clum's capture of Geronimo the bickering between the Indian bureau and the War department over the question of handling the Apaches, plus "Arizona's dirty politics of 1877," brought about a crisis which resulted in Clum's resignation. At the end of July, 1877, he bade good-by to San Carlos and his loyal Apache friends and moved to Tombstone, where his career as an editor and public official in that roaring town began.

Geronimo was released from prison, "pampered by the military, treated as a hero, made much of." And the very next year he "jumped the reservation" and started again upon a career of robbery and murder.

"If Geronimo had been promptly hanged, that great serio-comedy, known as the 'Geronimo Campaign' (1881-1886) would have been avoided; five hundred human lives and twelve million American dollars would not have been sacrificed and the United States army would have been spared its most inglorious record of Indian warfare."

Thousands of Americans know of Geronimo, "hailed by the newspapers as 'the famous Apache chief,' looked upon less as a robber and murderer than as a hero. Eskiminzin, Tauelciyee . . . red men who always had been loyal to the white man's government, who had risked their lives to protect their white brothers . . . who has ever heard of them?"

Not many! Just as there haven't been enough who have heard of John Philip Clum, "Apache Agent," who once proved to the red man that not all white men "speak with a crooked tongue" and who taught a despairing people to hope again!

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Synthetic Exercise

MANY overweight individuals state that the reason they do not take exercise to lose weight is because the exercise so increases their appetite that they eat really more food than ever and do not lose any weight. In fact, some state that exercise increases their weight.

There is no question, of course, but that exercise, particularly outdoor exercise, does stimulate the appetite, but on the other hand the greater amount of oxygen in the outdoor air is a great factor in burning up the fat in the body and thus decreasing the weight.

The idea of the exercise is to increase the speed of the circulation of the blood. As the muscles are worked by exercise, they use up an increased amount of oxygen and make an increased amount of wastes including carbon dioxide. The blood then is anxious to get back as quickly as possible to the lungs in order to get more oxygen and get rid of some of its excess load of carbon dioxide. During the exercise, as with other chemical changes, there is an increased amount of heat, and this tends to melt some of the fat in the body including, of course, the region where the muscles are working.

Dr. Barton

Exercise Is Ideal Reducer.

You can thus see that exercise is an ideal way of reducing weight in those for whom it is safe to exercise. And the big point is that the individual grows so much stronger physically that he or she can use or handle the body so much more easily that exercise instead of being a burden, becomes almost a pleasure. Some of the proudest individuals you meet are those who by regular exercise have not only regained their figure, but have entered into various games and sports.

It is because the drug dinitrophenol acts very much upon the body as does exercise that it has become so popular everywhere in reducing weight.

The use of the 18-day diet not only called for great strength of will in trying to live on such a small amount of food daily, but it was so weakening that a great many women became invalids and many others died.

Similarly with the thyroid extract which made the body processes work so fast that permanent damage was done to the heart in a number of cases.

Use on Mental Patients.

Dr. H. Freeman, Worcester, Mass., gave dinitrophenol in the regular dosage to nine male dementia precox patients (patients who live in a persistent dream state) but who had no organic disease of the body. The drug was given for a period of seven weeks.

The dinitrophenol greatly increased the amount of oxygen used by the body, and decreased the length of time it takes for the blood to circulate throughout the body.

This means then that the dinitrophenol by making the body require more oxygen actually heats the tissues to the point where the fat will melt, and by making the blood travel faster it would be back to the lungs for more oxygen and to give off its carbon dioxide in much less time than normal.

If this is the case why should not this drug be used instead of reducing the diet?

From all over the country reports are coming to hand regarding the harmful effects of dinitrophenol—skin ailments, collapse, and some deaths.

It would seem that just as some individuals are sensitive to the pollen of plants and so suffer with hay fever or asthma, and others are sensitive to certain drugs like quinine, so also are some individuals sensitive to dinitrophenol.

Until some very reliable tests can be made to learn whether those wishing to reduce weight can use it safely, it is recommended by those who did the original research work on dinitrophenol that it be used only under the close supervision of the physician.

High Blood Pressure

IT IS generally known that overweight is a cause of high blood pressure and yet many thin individuals have high blood pressure also.

In the case of overweights it is simply that the fat so interferes with the proper working of the blood vessels that the heart has to pump the blood harder through these vessels. If the weight is reduced the blood pressure becomes lower. Thus the overweight individual is more likely to have high blood pressure than the underweight.

However there are many individuals whose very personality actually keeps their blood pressure above normal.

These individuals are easily excited emotionally and under these emotional disturbances the blood pressure immediately goes up a number of points.

Dr. D. Ayman in the American Journal of Medical Science states that in regard to the effect of personality on high blood pressure it is important to modify or lessen this so-called high blood pressure personality and to lessen the emotional and mental responses of the patient because they are accompanied by a marked rise in the blood pressure.

The Beagle Hound

Beagles are believed to have originated from the crossing of a terrier with a Foxhound. The outcome of that mating or any other served to produce a breed of sporting hound that is efficient afield, a grand ring shower and ever faithful to the master.

The Venus de Milo is 5 feet 8¾ inches tall. The bust measurement is 38 inches, and the waist 31 inches. The weight of a woman of her proportions would be from 165 to 170 pounds.

Smart Jacket Dress With Bows of Print

1834-B

Versatility is an engaging quality in this little two piece frock. Make it feminine with bows and a belt of bright print, or slightly mannish with round buttons and a narrow belt.

The hip length jacket with its cutaway effect and front panel are the dominating features of the dress. Notice how the gathers peep cunningly in back and front beneath the circular yoke. A simple skirt, but not too simple to be attractive. Individualism is attributed to the wide tailored pleats in the front.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1834-B is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 (34) requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch fabric plus ⅓ yard of contrasting material.

Our Failure in Character Is the Tragedy of Life

Life is given for wisdom, and yet we are not wise; for goodness, and we are not good; for overcoming evil, and evil remains; for patience and sympathy and love, and yet we are fretful and hard and weak and selfish. This is the tragical feature of life—that it is linked with so much failure in character. Are most of us considering success and failure in this high and eternal light? We ought to be.

Conservation Notes

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin's record bird feeding campaign saved a substantial part of its feathered population although great losses were recorded in some instances, a conservation department survey shows.

The pheasant mortality is estimated at from 7 to 10 per cent.

Quail losses are reported averaging about 70 per cent in the counties of Columbia, Dodge, Fond du Lac, Green Lake, Marquette, Waushara and Winnebago.

Quail losses were reported as about 35 per cent in Dane, Jefferson, Waukesha, Rock and Walworth counties. Some quail coveys are believed to have been entirely wiped out.

Further facts on bird survival will be revealed as spring gets under way Summarized reports of the conservation department, however, are not pessimistic. They are:

Northern Wisconsin—"Serious because of cold and snow but no apparent harm done. Not serious at present time."

Central Wisconsin—"Farmers are doing very good work feeding birds. Have been feeding birds; will get along. If we quit, situation will be serious."

Southern Wisconsin—"If it were not for the activities of the sportsmen nothing would survive. Not so serious, unusual lot of shock corn left in fields."

Plans are already being laid by the conservation department to meet the bird situation next winter. Several tons of suitable grain are to be distributed for the planting of bird food patches. The department wants groups to apply for this grain now but points out that it will not be able to supply all needs. Applications should be sent to Ralph Conway, supervisor of refuges for the department. The department points out that food patches cannot entirely displace winter feeding but that it will be decidedly helpful.

For the second successive year Wisconsin birds won first place at the second annual bird show at Philadelphia, March 9 to 14.

J. Allen Gardy, director of the show, writes to the conservation department:

"Your birds again attracted a great deal of attention—especially the two large pens full of wonderful Mongolians. The Chukars and Formosans were also greatly admired. In the special sweepstakes judging, Wisconsin received first award for the best pair of Mongolians in the show and also for the best pair of Formosans."

A total of 51,641 game birds were reared on Wisconsin commercial game farms during 1935. The bird production included 48,933 pheasants, 297 quail, 36 Hungarian partridge, 1,691 wild ducks and 684 wild geese. The ducks and geese included all varieties, according to the records of the conservation department.

The conservation department this year experimented with several hundred pounds of concentrated deer food and found that the animals readily ate it. W. F. Grimmer, superintendent of game, declares that the department has long been dissatisfied with hay as an emergency deer ration. He says that hereafter instead of attempting to haul in bulky feed such as hay through four feet of snow, the department will cache several hundred pounds of the concentrated ration and distribute it as it may be necessary.

Wisconsin Garden clubs are calling for an extensive observance of Conservation Week in May and are soliciting the help of state and federal agencies, organizations and newspapers for an emphatic campaign of conservation education. A plan for northern Wisconsin is the central point of the program. The program originated with Mrs. Frank Quimby, Racine, chairman of the junior division of the Garden Clubs.

Authentic Giants

In the days of Emperor Claudius (41-54 A. D.), there was brought to Rome an Arabian giant, Gabara, who is said by Pliny to have measured nine feet nine inches in height. None of the giants of more recent record have had quite such a stature, although the English marvel, John Middleton, born in Lancashire in the reign of James I, was nine feet three inches tall. An Austrian, Joseph Winkelmaier, who was exhibited about Europe in the '80s, was eight feet nine inches tall, and there have been quite a few others who have approached this height.

IT WILL PAY YOU

TO WAIT FOR MY CALL BEFORE YOU BUY FLY SPRAY FOR THE COMING SEASON

Watkins Fly Spray goes further, because you use less. Farmers and dairymen prefer Watkins Fly Spray, because it kills flies outright, keeps flies off the stock, leaves stock clean and comfortable, goes further than other sprays and will not taint milk or reduce the flow. Many dairymen report that they have to buy only half as many gallons of Watkins Fly Spray to get the same results. It's money in your pocket when you buy Watkins Fly Spray.

If we want our woodlots to remain woodlots and to produce birds as well as shade, we should keep the cows out of the parts least valuable for pasture, especially the steep south slopes, urges Aldo Leopold of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. "Learn your trees and use the axe to increase rather than to destroy their individual services to you and to wild things," suggests Leopold.

Consumption of scoured wool in 1935 totaled nearly 304 million pounds and was the largest since 1923, according to figures released by the National Association of Wool Manufacturers.

"Brown snow" fell in New England recently, report meterologists at the Blue Hill Observatory of Harvard University. They ascribed the coloring to dust particles blown more than 2,000 miles from the "dust bowl" of the West. Chemists estimated the dust deposits at about 10 tons per square mile.

UNCLE SAM EASES PANAMA PAIN

New Treaty Emphasizes Isthmian Sovereignty; Paves Way for Western Hemisphere Peace Parley This Summer.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

AN ENTIRE new era of permanent peace and "good-neighborliness" may be opened up between the countries on the two American continents when and if the senate ratifies the new treaty between the United States and the Republic of Panama which was signed in March.

Old differences which have existed between America and her isthmian neighbor for a third of a century have been ironed out to a great extent by the new pact. So heartening has been the news of the new document through the Latin Americas generally, it is believed that the proposed "extraordinary conference" between 21 republics of the Western hemisphere this summer will be assured.

Shortly after the start of the year President Roosevelt voiced a suggestion that a conference of these republics be held, to work out means of assuring for all time the peaceful relations that now exist between the United States and the countries of South and Central America. Since it began to be apparent that in the negotiations with Panama that the United States was exhibiting a liberal attitude that had been largely absent in former bickerings (which have been going on since 1903), many messages of approval from other governments have been understood to have been received in Washington.

Conference Looms Likely.

None of the replies to the President's suggestion have been made public at the time of this writing, but in governmental circles it is considered virtually certain that the peace conference will take place this summer in Buenos Aires.

The attitude of Panama, as well as that of several other Latin-American countries toward the United States has, for the last two or three decades, been something similar to that of the stripling youth who feels that he is being "minded" altogether too closely by his older brother, when he is perfectly able now to look after his own interests. The Roosevelt administration evidently feels this attitude is justified, it appears from the provisions of the new treaty.

Three points, particularly, have always been sore spots in the relations of the United States and Panama. They grew out of the agreement of 1903, under which the United States constructed the Panama canal, and they are:

Our right to intervene when necessary to preserve the peace in Panama, our exercise of the right of eminent domain in acquiring auxiliary lands, and our guarantee of Panama's independence. It is this latter provision which has been the most provocative of "little brother" objections; Panama citizens have always regarded this assumed guaranty of their independence as an outright statement of protectorate.

Although the new treaty is the third attempt to straighten out the differences between the two nations it is the first which has not been a dodge of these three points.

The first attempt was a series of five executive orders, known as the "Taft agreement," which was intended to interpret the original treaty of 1903. It went into effect in December, 1904. By May, 1924, it was decided that the real effectiveness of this expedient had disappeared with the completion of the canal, and the agreement was abrogated.

1926 Pact Fails.

For two years the diplomats of the two countries bargained and in July, 1926, a new treaty, intended to be permanent, was signed. But when it came up for ratification in the Panamanian assembly, it went down under a deluge of adverse votes. It had failed even to mention the points of sovereignty, possession of land and paternalism which for 23 years had so grated upon the Panamanian soul.

Not only did real hard feelings develop between the United States and Panama, but other Latin-American countries openly threw their sympathies with Panama.

First indications that the United States was ready to loosen a little came in October, 1933, when President Roosevelt and President Arias of Panama conversed in Washington. It was there that the plans were laid for the new treaty, which is characteristic of the administration's policy of liberal treaties and free trade. The exact terms of the new pact have never been released to the newspapers, but it is known that the theme underlying the entire document is the renunciation of the misconception that Panama is a protectorate of the United States.

Points of Accord.

Actually, the changes brought about by the new treaty will be paper ones, largely, with the exceptions of an agreement to construct a new highway across the isthmus and of certain commercial concessions by the United States. Should the time ever come when Panama's independence needed protection the job would more than likely fall to Uncle Sam for Panama has no army, merely a police force trained by American officers.

The U. S. S. Texas Gets a Lift Through One of the Locks.

The new agreement was consummated under the principle that the protection and operation of the canal is vital to the interests of both nations, and can best be assured through friendly co-operation. The accord reached in 1933, and which it is reasonable to suppose is contained in the treaty, embodies the following chief points:

The United States will use, occupy and control the Canal zone only for the purpose of maintenance, operation, sanitation and protection of the canal.

Panama is recognized as the sovereign nation, and as such is entitled to enjoy whatever commercial advantages its juxtaposition with the canal shall bring it, provided that these do not prejudice the purposes of the operation of the canal zone by the United States.

Economic questions which do not in any way affect those purposes may, if they cannot be solved through direct negotiation, be submitted to arbitration.

The original treaty held that while Panama was the sovereign nation, the United States was to have jurisdiction over the ten-mile-wide strip that is the Canal Zone, and would possess and exercise all rights just as it would "if it were the sovereign of the territory." The confusion arising from this clause is not hard to understand. For many years Panamanians have felt that it gave the United States sovereign power; and in the Pan-American conference at Havana in 1928 the Panamanian delegate, Dr. Alfredo J. Alfaro, strenuously objected when it was intimated that this was the truth. It was he who signed the new treaty for Panama, where he expects to run for president in 1937.

Dr. Alfredo J. Alfaro, Panamanian Minister.

U. S. Must Buy Land.

Under the old treaty the United States could acquire by right of eminent domain lands and waters outside the Canal Zone "which may be necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation and protection" of the canal. Technically, of course, this could have been regarded as giving the United States the right to take over any territory in the isthmian republic. Such a "lien" could hardly allow the nation a clear title to its own property, and certainly would have made territorial agreements with other nations embarrassing. The new arrangement takes away the United States' right to acquire territory by condemnation, but gives Uncle Sam the right to acquire it by purchase.

At present the Panamanian city of Colon is separated from the rest of the republic by the Canal Zone, but the new treaty provides a corridor of connection across the zone.

By the treaty of 1903, the Panama Railway company, whose shares are owned entirely by the United States government, was given the sole right of communication across the isthmus. Panam itself was forbidden to build an automobile highway to cover the 47 miles from Panama City to Colon; under the new treaty, such a highway will be constructed.

The railway company has been operating commissaries along its right of way; these were originally intended to serve only American employees, but Panama merchants claim the commissaries have been doing a thriving tourist business and want the business themselves. Now they will get it.

Terminate Gold Payment.

Now that the American dollar has been devalued, the treaty will allow the United States to make its annual payments to Panama in balboas, the Panamanian unit of currency, instead of in gold coins. The 430,000 balboas which constitute the annual payment are worth a little more than the $250,000 in gold formerly paid every year.

To date it has not become known what the United States army and navy think of the new pact, but this will come out when it is placed before the senate for ratification. It can be construed as weakening American control over the canal, and for that reason may fail to make the grade.

The Navy department, under the new agreement, already has turned over two radio stations to the Panama government, and new agreements for the regulation of radio communication have been reached.

May Remove Customs Collector.

The United States still maintains a collector of customs in the Dominican republic, to assure that the Dominican debt to this country is properly serviced. This officer is something of an irritation to the citizens there.

When the conference of American nations gets under way this summer, there is little likelihood that the purposes of preserving the peace will be carried so far as to establish a "league of nations" for the western hemisphere. What is more likely is a joint treaty which all nations can rely on to aid settlement of disputes.

Any agency so created would probably be given the right to investigate the causes of disputes, to try to effect conciliations and, if necessary, to sit as a board of arbitration. It is improbable that any real instrument, such as sanctions, for enforcing decisions will be agreed upon.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington. — Overshadowing all else in the national capital at this writing is the controversy that is boiling and surging around the head of Alabama's Democratic Senator Black, who is the chairman of the senate's lobby investigating committee. As an offshoot of this controversy, the federal communications commission is in water much too hot for bathing and it begins to appear that when the steam blows off the communications commission is likely to be a thoroughly discredited federal agency because of the part it played in Senator Black's unprecedented seizure of private telegrams from the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies.

Need Curb on Inquiries

Speaking generally, it has been seldom that a United States senator has ever attempted to assert the authority that Senator Black has used and it is equally unprecedented that a federal agency has gone to the extremes that characterized the action of the communications commission in connection with the seizure of the messages.

But some good may come from the police court prosecution tactics employed by Senator Black and some good may come from the accusations leveled at the communications commission because that body helped Senator Black carry out his plans.

The country-wide indignation that has arisen from Senator Black's usurpation of power has brought to the front a question that needs public attention and needs it badly.

I refer, in this connection, to the steadily expanding efforts of congressional investigators, especially senatorial investigators, to take over, as their own, powers that always have been regarded as reserved exclusively to the courts. The consensus among Washington observers certainly is that the legislative inquiries have developed to a point where the most humble requirements of justice have been and are being completely ignored. Whether they are so intended, these inquiries, and this includes investigations conducted by committees not only of congress but of state legislators and even city councils, are approaching the point where they are almost tyrannical.

It goes without saying, then, that the time has arrived for citizens to assert themselves. These inquiries will not proceed when the elected legislators, state or national, learn that the people do not approve of such high-handed tactics.

Black's Activities

In order to have an understanding of the latest of these escapades, it is necessary to review briefly what has happened in the case of the senate lobby investigating committee. Almost a year ago the committee sought the aid of the federal communications commission which had the color of authority in law for investigating the business of the telegraph companies. Senator Black issued a broad subpoena, directing the telegraph companies to make available any and all messages his committee desired. Communications commission agents then went into the telegraph company files, read everything they could find and made copies of all of the messages which those agents, under guidance of Black investigators, thought would be helpful to the Black committee in exposing operations of private individuals.

The purpose of this, as outlined by Senator Black, was to locate clues to the machinations of business interests who were seeking passage or defeat for legislation pending in congress. The Alabama senator wanted to "show up" lobbyists. He contended and has maintained consistently that "these malefactors of great wealth" could not accomplish any influence in congress unless it were done secretly and "in the dark."

In other words, Senator Black persuaded members of the communications commission to help him in his fishing expedition. He persuaded that organization that it should become a party to an unprecedented effort designed as a dragnet, a movement to smear anybody and everybody who had used telegraphic service.

The Black plan was carried out in secret. Senders and receivers of messages which those agents copied knew nothing about it. The operation was just as much "in the dark" as any of the lobbying about which Senator Black complained, even more so. It was only by accident that the facts became known but when they did become known, the lid was promptly blown off.

The end is not yet, nor is it even in sight. One federal judge has issued a restraining order against such tactics and a half dozen other applications for similar orders are pending. Undoubtedly, the questions, whatever the rulings may be, will find their way eventually to the Supreme court of the United States.

The senate itself is looking into the situation. It has, by resolution, asked the federal communications commission to make a report stating the facts and by what authority it acted.

So there is much hubbub about the whole thing and if one may judge from the line of conversation generally heard around Washington, Senator Black is on the hot spot, and the spot thus far has shown no indications of entering a cooling stage.

Charge Unfairness

Senate investigations long have been considered by many people as a modus operandi that creak with unfairness. Unbiased observers frequently have criticized them because of the methods employed. It seems absolutely necessary that the senate should have power to call witnesses, to ask legitimate and proper questions and to force answers. If it is going to enact legislation to correct evils, it must be equipped with such powers. But the point is that in seeking such information, the senate has consistently permitted its committees to act in a fashion that can be described by no other word than outrageous. I have watched them over a period of nearly twenty years and seldom, if ever, has there been an important investigation that did not degenerate sooner or later into a condition that savored of police court practices.

Respectable citizens have been subpoened, have gone before the committees willing to tell their complete story, anxious to co-operate and have found themselves treated as outlaws and criminals. This situation has become so prevalent in senate investigations that when any citizen is subpoened to appear before a senate investigation these days, his neighbors and friends begin to ask each other what crookedness is involved. In other words, the psychology of the senate investigation, as it has developed through the last fifteen or twenty years, has become one that reverses the constitutional right of an individual that he is innocent until he is proved guilty.

For several years, there has been a bill pending in congress designed to prevent, or at least reduce, lynchings. The theory back of it is that many times innocent persons have been lynched and that every one has a right to a trial by jury in a properly constituted court. Over across the Atlantic ocean, dictators have operated and have employed the "blood purge," the summary death sentence or the execution without granting the accused the right of defense. Undoubtedly some persons guilty of murder or rape have been lynched; undoubtedly the "blood purge" by the Nazi rulers destroyed some bad characters and undoubtedly the summary executions by the Soviet or the Fascists of Italy have provided death for individuals who were festering sores to humanity, but there can be no doubt that in the case of the lynchings or in the case of the "blood purge" or the summary executions, many innocent persons have had their lives snuffed out.

So it is with senate investigations. Undoubtedly they have uncovered some dirty crooked dealings. Undoubtedly they have brought to public attention activities and conditions that ought to have been exposed. Yet, the fact remains that nearly all of our people are decent people, law abiding and self-respecting. And when senate investigations go beyond proper limits they approach, if they do not wholly become, tryanny.

Not Wholly to Blame

In defense of Senator Black's action in the lobby investigation, I think it can fairly be said that he is not wholly to blame if he has gone further than any other in the program of inquiry and prosecution upon which he has launched. Little by little, bit by bit, the senate has arrogated to itself authority hitherto not used by it. Little by little, it has encroached upon what many believe to be the jurisdiction of the courts and in a like manner it has taken unto itself powers hitherto supposed to have been exclusively reserved to the executive department of government.

It would seem, then, that if other senate committees had established the precedent, Senator Black could properly use the same methods. The trouble in his case is that he did not stop at limits previously set, discreditable as those limits were, but went beyond them.

To repeat, there is every indication that some good will come out of this circumstance. Important men and brilliant lawyers and great organizations like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Liberty league have taken note of the steadily expanding power claimed by the senate. This means that the questions involved will get into the courts. It is to be hoped that they will be presented to the courts in such a manner that the questions may be finally and lastingly answered, that the powers of the legislators may be delimited and that a definite expression may come from the judiciary that will determine whether members of the house and the senate can serve at once as legislators, judges and prosecutors.

Ghee, Common Diet in India

Ghee is clarified butter used in India. The best is prepared from butter of the milk of cows, the less esteemed from that of buffaloes. The butter is melted over a slow fire and set aside to cool; the thick, opaque, whitish and more fluid portion, or ghee, representing the greater bulk of the butter, is then removed. The less liquid residue, mixed with ground-nut oil, is sold as an inferior kind of ghee. In India ghee is one of the commonest articles of diet, and indeed enters into the composition of everything eaten by the Brahmans. It is also extensively used in Indian religious ceremonies, being offered as a sacrifice to idols, which are at times bathed in it.

Benefit of Clergy

Originally, benefit of clergy was the privilege of exemption from trial by a secular court enjoyed by the clergy if arrested for felony. In time it included all who could read and write, since they were capable of entering into holy orders. It was abolished by George IV. Kipling called one of his stories, "Without Benefit of Clergy," meaning without the religious rites of matrimony.

"Fly-Safe Dates" for Wheat Puzzle

An Extraordinary Infestation May Reduce Stands of Some Grain.

Supplied by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Two flight periods of the hessian fly last fall in several big grain states instead of a single flight period as usual, reduced the protection ordinarily afforded by sowing wheat on "safe dates," according to Dr. P. N. Annand, bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, United States Department of Agriculture. As a rule, adult hessian flies come out and live their short lives before certain dates which have been determined for each area by federal and state entomologists. However, abnormal weather brought out in mid-October a second brood of adult flies that otherwise would not have appeared till next spring.

This extraordinary infestation, Doctor Annand says, may reduce materially the stands of comparatively small, late-sown wheat. Where the weather next spring proves favorable to the new brood, the current crop, at least in local areas, can hardly escape serious injury.

All through the fall, Doctor Annand says, this most serious pest of small grains multiplied enormously from north central Oklahoma through southeastern Kansas, Missouri, southern Iowa, southern Illinois, and much of Indiana, tapering of into light infestations in Ohio, with somewhat heavier infestations in western and central Pennsylvania and New York. The damage feared from the fly was one of the causes of the low condition reported for winter wheat in December. Counts made by department entomologists in December in 24 fields in western Indiana showed an average of 40 per cent of the plants to be infested by the hessian fly.

Millions of flies left the stubble, where they were settling down for the winter, and moved on to the luxuriant growths of volunteer wheat that sprang up unexpectedly under late August and early September rains. Here a new brood matured, resulting in an unusual and extensive emergence of adults. These adults infested much wheat planted after the date that would have been safe if weather had been normal. Their progeny flourished in the mild late fall and early winter weather.

Fewer Apples and Better Prices, Present Outlook

Apple production the next five years may average slightly less than in the last five years, with moderate improvement in average prices to growers, says the annual outlook report of the bureau of agricultural economics.

Moderate increases in replacements and plantings will be necessary, the report says, if the average volume of production of the last few years is to be maintained ten to fifteen years hence. This is especially true of late apples.

United States apple exporters may expect increased competition in foreign markets, since foreign countries are working toward increased production and improved quality of apples. Recent tendencies of many countries to impose trade restrictions also continue an unfavorable factor in the export outlook, it is stated.

Producers of early apples are reported to have had considerable difficulty in marketing several of the crops of the last seven years. Low returns have resulted in tree removals, abandonment, and neglect of orchards. Despite this, early apples will continue plentiful for several years, says the report.

Seed Crops Below Average

Red clover seed production is estimated at about 45,000,000 pounds compared with 50,000,000 in 1934 and an average of 69,000,000 pounds from 1928 to 1932. Alsike clover seed crop is estimated at about 17,000,000 pounds compared with 22.5 million last year and a five-year average of 25,000,000 pounds. For sweet clover, the totals are 47,000,000 pounds the past year, 34.8 million in 1934 and an average of 53.5 million pounds. Alfalfa seed production is placed at 48,000,000 pounds against 50,0000,000 last year and a 1928-32 average of 49.4 million pounds.

Mark Trucked Animals

Since a good share of the live stock now going to market goes in truck lots, frequently in mixed loads, it is important that every shipper mark his animals so that they can be readily identified at the stockyards, advises a writer in the Prairie Farmer. The trucker should be furnished the marks for his bill of lading. Describing stock by color or sex is not sufficient for accurate handling. The best way to mark cattle and hogs is by clipping marks on the backs. Sheep can be marked with a quick-drying paint. You will be more certain of quick returns on your live stock consignments when it goes to market properly identified.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a drab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff, who are older, her seventeen-year-old brother Bruce, and their Aunt Meg. In her job hunting rounds she interviews Lawrence Bellamy, editor of the Journal of Commerce, but finds he has no place for a woman writer. She likes him very much, as she tells Brenda later. Diffident Barney Kerr drops in. Barney has his eye on Tony, but she despises him. Tony gets a telephone call from Mr. Greenwood, city editor of the Call, offering her a job as society reporter. Cliff, returning just then, accompanies Tony to the newspaper office. The first night she goes with Cliff and Joe Burke of the sports department to a restaurant and sees Bellamy at another table. She thrills when he nods to her. She is thoroughly happy in the hustle and bustle of the newspaper office. She solves the problem of getting photos. The only other woman on the staff is Bess Cutter, who does a column and is very friendly with Fitch, general manager. Bess comes to depend on Tony. Bess invites Tony to dine with her at her apartment with Fitch and then go to the theater. Barney proposes to Tony and is rejected. Tony attends the Cutter affair and is displeased. She is assigned to cover the mid-winter carnival at Piedmont. She meets elderly Mrs. Patterson and her daughter Ruth, wife of Larry Bellamy. Bellamy appears in carnival costume and recognizes Tony. Mrs. Bellamy becomes very fond of Tony and has her with her frequently.

Lawrence was shaking his head slowly.

"Greeny's old-fashioned," he said. "That sort of thing isn't journalism."

"I'm to stay in the Emergency hospital overnight and then come in and write a big story."

"Greeny thinks they don't treat people right there?"

"That's the idea, I believe."

"Well but then—" Lawrence's slow smile showed in his brown face. "Then whatever was wrong, you'd get," he said.

"Exactly!"

"Why, I don't think he has any right to ask you to do a thing like that," the man decided slowly. "I think I'd decline."

"The thing is, Larry— This is very pleasant, having a fire here, and getting warm, and talking it over!" Tony broke off to say.

"Pleasant is right!"

"No, but the thing is," she resumed, "that I hope some day to do signed stuff, and get into real special article work, and he says this is my chance."

"You'll have plenty of chances," Lawrence said, rubbing his long hands together, looking into the fire, "you don't have to worry about that. I wouldn't go in for that sensational stuff; in the first place it isn't good journalism. That's the worst of that crowd down there—Fitch and Allen —all of them. It's outdated, that stuff."

"Still, a job's a job, Larry."

"Yes, but you're a good deal surer of a job than you were six months ago. No, I'd tell Greeny to roll his hoop—"

Tony's eyes were dark with a sort of dancing light.

"I'm not going to do it!" she said. "And thanks for putting me straight. I knew you'd know just about what it all meant."

"Whatever you do, you'll go straight ahead, Tony. Get your stuff, and write it the best you can and turn it in, and that's all they want. You're perfectly safe."

"I didn't know that anyone could be so happy about work."

"I don't believe you can do it decently until you are happy about it."

"We sound as if we were making talk," she thought. In the idle silence that followed. "It's the first time we've been alone together for months, now that I come to think of it. But certainly he isn't shy with me."

Tony, looking into the fire with smiling eyes, asked idly, "Larry, is there any chance of your ever expanding the Journal, putting regular woman's stuff in?" she added idly. "Remember I talked to you about it that first day?"

"Not that—" he answered readily, and paused.

"But what?"

"Well, there's a chance I may go over to the Examiner, with the Journal in my pocket."

"No-o-o-!" Tony exclaimed, for if all newspaper gossip was thrilling, this was sensational so.

"Nothing settled. But they've wanted to have a business page for some time, with a four-page Saturday supplement every week. What is the Journal today would practically be that supplement. I'd have Currier's job—he's getting out anyway, he's all tied up with real estate in Thousand Oaks, and he's pretty old. I'd handle the stock and bond stuff, and the market generally, and get up this supplement once a week. Prager would keep the name Journal on it, with the other name."

Tony's blue eyes were watching him sympathetically.

"Is that—would that be a disappointment to you, Larry?"

"A disappointment? No! Why, that's what I've been trying to build up these three years. It's the theory of the 'nuisance value.' My circulation was taken right out of theirs; they knew it. And I get my price for the paper," Larry said.

She continued to regard him admiringly. He was looking into the fire, his long legs stretched toward it, his big shoulders slumped into his deep chair. Tony studied the familiar lines of the aquiline nose, the sharp little nick his eyeglasses gave to his profile, the thick heavy waves of dark hair. The friendship of such a man was a pleasantly stirring sort of thing.

Larry glanced about, and they smiled at each other. When she looked back at the fire again, still without speaking, Tony was conscious that the color was coming up into her face, and that her heart was beating rather hard. It was a silly feeling, it made her indignant with herself, but it was there.

Before either spoke again Ruth came in, very completely equipped in checked raincoat, checked cap, checked umbrella. She gave these things to a maid in the doorway and came, smiling and blown and chilly, to the fire.

Ruth's hair, beginning to turn gray, had been crushed by the cap and the rain to a flattened mass. Her intelligent face, that never had been pretty, looked rather pasty and lined as she smiled at Tony and her husband; her light gray eyes flashed behind strong glasses. She stretched her thin slender feet to the blaze. Tony had scrambled down to a leather hassock at the fire beside her. She was warm now, excited by her talk with Larry, happy. She loved this room in the rainy afternoon, with its books and its pictures and its firelight, and she loved these persons.

Her cheeks had lost the high color that had been whipped into them by wind and rain, but the clear pallor of her face only made her eyes look more blue. Her skin was as clean as ivory, and above the low forehead her hair had been curled by the wet day into a very cloud of filmy tails and curls. She had curled her body up,

"Well, There's a Chance I May Go Over to the Examiner."

child fashion, and was hugging her knees; the beautiful slim firm line of breast and hips, the slender ankles, the glowing vital beauty of her were enhanced by the contrast that was so close.

"What have you been talking about?" Ruth asked.

"Larry's possibly going over to the Examiner," Tony answered with animation.

"Oh, did you tell her?" Ruth's eyebrows went up as she glanced at Larry.

"We were talking shop."

Tony, sitting between them on the low leather hassock, with her arms hugging her knees and her eyes on the fire, fell into musing. She heard their voices murmuring; she paid no attention to what they said. It was felicity to be here, safe from rain and cold. Life would seem odd, now, without Larry and Ruth.

"Why can't you stay and dine with us, Tony?" Ruth said.

"I can't. I've got a woman to interview across the street. And I've got to go back to the office."

"Tony, will you call me in the morning about the show on Friday night?"

"I will, the first thing." Larry walked with her through the handsome room, and Tony saw, as she had seen so many times, the big photograph of Larry, and the big photograph of Mrs. Patterson, and the bowl of violets, and the heavy smooth block of the white elephant lamp. Everything Ruth had was heavy and expensive, and many of the jars and pictures and chairs and rugs were beautiful; the effect of them all, with firelight and lamplight brightening them, and rain falling gently beyond the curtained high windows, was one of comfort and charm.

Today there seemed to be some quality deeper than mere comfort or charm about it; Tony felt vaguely elated and excited as she said her careless "Good-night" and went her careless way. Her heart was singing as she entered the big hotel opposite the apartment house, secured her interview, and went downtown to the hot busy newspaper office feeling herself adequate, successful, alive. "After all," thought Tony, hammering out her story at the disgraceful old typewriter whose "k" and "l" sometimes got into a death-lock, and whose spacing bar often fell down limply, and had to be braced with twine, "after all, that's all a girl wants: to feel alive. With people liking her, and work that she likes to do—and Bendy to go home to!"

For every night had to end with a talk with Brenda, while they were cold-creaming their faces and wandering about from room to room. Tony, typewriting away busily in the newspaper office, in the warm black rainy night, thought of a dozen things she must say to her sister; Brenda would be relieved to hear that Larry had definitely advised against the fainting-in-the-street assignment. And the Fairmont interview, and the various small events of the day should all be retailed.

But there was one experience of which Tony wouldn't tell her. For one thing it wasn't important, and for another, it would be impossible to tell.

It was merely that when he had come with her into the hall, and had held her coat for her, Larry had said —or no, he hadn't said much, hadn't said anything—really—

He had nodded to Chevalier in dismissal, and that in itself had somehow made her heart beat hard: the expression on Larry's face had been so—so authoritative—so manlike—

And then he had said—well, he had only said, "Good-bye, Tony. And thanks, always thanks, for what you do for us all."

But his look, as he said it—ah, that was the thing one couldn't tell Brenda, nor how it made one feel, nor how one remembered it.

Tony, in the bright, noisy, hot newspaper office, found her work constantly interrupted by the need there was to stop short and remember it.

CHAPTER X

Night had come black and wet over the city, and the windows of the newspaper office ran sparkles of rain. Tony wriggled happily at her desk: it was great fun to be a part of this exciting hot bright atmosphere tonight, to have the men lumbering about, smoking and talking, and the typewriters clicking, and to smell the good smell of pulp paper and ink, rubber and tobacco smoke, and the sweet-scented soap at the washstands. Her telephone tinkled: the obliging Linda Flood had an engagement to hint.

"Listen, girl, it's a profound secret, of course, but I got it by accident, and I'm not bound to keep it."

"Patricia Porter!" Tony breathed. If she could scoop the engagement of Patricia Porter she would be safe in Greeny's good graces for weeks. She had gotten a good interview that afternoon; she was holding her own amazingly. But the Patricia Porter scoop would be the triumph of a season!

"To Lee Carolan Scott, of course."

"Of course. I'll tell you how I know." The rich confidential voice of the old society reporter broke into laughter at the other end of the telephone. "His brother's wife was buying an engagement cup in the White House while I was waiting for Louisette there this afternoon, and she sent it to Patsy. But mind you keep me out of it."

"Oh, that clinches it, then! And I'm so much obliged to you. I'll follow it right up!"

Tony clicked her telephone back into place and referred to her notebook of social data.

"Mrs. Olney Parks. That's the Porter girl's aunt. West-zero-seven-seven-seven," Tony mused, dialing busily. She recognized the dowager's rich voice a moment later. "This is Elinor Blah-blah, Mrs. Parks," she said brightly. "Is Patsy there? I can't wait to hear all about it!"

"No; she's dining with Lee's family tonight. But we're all so delighted!" the voice said complacently. And then suddenly: "Who is this talking?"

Tony silently broke the connection; presently she was telephoning the house of Scott. Was Miss Porter there?

"Patsy darling, I'm thr-r-illed!" she exclaimed, when the happy accents of the bride-to-be came over the wire. "When's it to be?"

"Who is it? Who told you?" Patsy demanded, not quite pleased.

"Mary," Tony answered at random. There was always a Mary. "And, my dear, everyone'll be perfectly wild with excitement!"

"He says June, and I say August," Patsy was lured into saying. "But who'd you say told you? We've not told anyone. And who is this?"

Again Tony made a silent exit from the conversation; half an hour later she called the Scott house again; it was a "person-to-person" call for Mr. Lee Scott.

"Mr. Scott," she said without preamble, "I have a telegram here for you, 'Affectionate congratulations to you and Patricia,' and it's signed, 'Uncle Bill.' Would you like me to mail you a copy?"

"Is that right? Read it again," said the startled voice of Mr. Scott. "Uncle —what?"

"Uncle Bill. Would you like me to trace it?"

"Oh, no, no. It's all right, thanks. Patsy!" Tony could hear the man call bewilderedly, "what do you know about some Uncle Bill's getting onto us? Who is Uncle Bill? I have no Uncle Bill!"

Tony could sit back complacently: she had secured the Scott-Porter engagement.

Tony finished her typewriting; found Bess Cutter beside her. Bess looked rather frowzy and florid tonight; she had been dining, and the scent of food and drink was on her breath.

"Where's Fitch?" she asked Tony abruptly. "I had a couple of friends for dinner, and he didn't show up."

"Funny!" Tony said, with widened eyes. "He was here about ten minutes ago, but he may have gone home."

"Was Milly Richards here?"

Tony smiled. She was not afraid of the ash-blonde Milly; she rather despised her. Milly was a fluttering, breathless little creature of about Tony's age, who seemed younger because of her fair skin and pale-gold hair, and who had been following the "Sunshine Gospel" revivalist movement about. The Sunshine tent, with its preachers and singers, its organ music and hymn books and benches, had settled down for a stay on the outskirts of the city, and Milly was its innocently preaching and exhorting little press agent. Tony had regaled the home dinner table for several nights with accounts of Milly. Tony had had to rewrite all of Milly's stories.

Now she regarded Bess with a growing change in her expression and interest.

"But—good heavens, Bess," she murmured, "she surely isn't interested in Mr. Fitch?"

"She had dinner with them Sunday over in Piedmont. She's got him praying. Him—after all he's done!" Bess muttered bitterly, her rouged lips trembling. "Why, he's a skunk, Fitch is; I never would of looked at him if he hadn't said he was going to get a divorce—all that."

Tony, clean and young and blue-eyed, felt a sudden sensation of shame. "Well, I wish the whole crowd of them was in the bay! Why couldn't they leave him alone? Frank Fitch isn't their kind; don't you think for one minute I'm the only woman he ever looked at! And don't think that there aren't other papers ready to jump at my feature if he's crazy enough to let it go!"

"He didn't say anything about stopping the column!"

"Didn't he?" Bess fumbled in her evening bag: the evidence was there. A letter from the president's office to say that the Call was retrenching and must make some changes on the editorial page; another letter that said, "Sorry, but I did my best and both Davidson and Arnoldson turned me down."

This letter was signed merely with a penciled "F."; Tony had seen many of Mr. Fitch's notes to the staff signed that way. She looked questioningly, expectantly, at Bess.

"You don't think I'm going to stand for it?" Bess demanded.

"It's a shame!" Tony said, with a warmth she did not feel. She knew that Bess had not contributed one single valuable line or idea to the newspaper in all the months of her own work there.

"He can't get away with it."

"Did he say anything about it the last time you saw him?"

"I haven't seen him since Saturday."

"And this is Thursday—" Tony said slowly, sparring for time. "She's probably persuading him to go back to his wife."

"Well—" The younger woman's face flushed uncomfortably, in spite of all that she could do. "It seems funny," she said feebly.

"Frank's always had a tremendous opinion of himself," Bess said, from smouldering thought; "now this 'Sunshine Gospel' thing fits right in, and he's going to be a whiteheaded angel. Lucky for him he didn't get converted three years ago, when he and I first were friends— There he is!"

Tony looking across the swinging lights and littered desks, saw Mr. Fitch slipping quietly through to his own office door. Bess was immediately after him; the various men grinned significantly as she went absorbedly by, with her fine feathers somewhat draggled by the rain, and her rouged cheeks redder than even her own bold artifice had made them. She was breathing hard and angrily; she saw nobody. The door of Mr. Fitch's office closed behind her.

When Tony went up to Mr. Greenwood's desk a few minutes later he gave her an impish and significant smile.

"Fireworks in the old man's office, eh?"

"Sounds like it."

"What'd she say?"

"Oh-h-h, everything. They're going to cut the feature."

"I heard that. Well, Bess'll take care of herself."

"She's paying two hundred for that apartment."

"Who said so?"

"She did."

"We're paying her a hundred a week," the city editor said musingly. "Well, if he says she's to get out, she'll get out."

"Could he keep her if he wanted to, Greeny?"

"Sure he could!"

The sound of a woman's raised angry voice came from Fitch's office;

"He Can't Get Away With It."

then they could hear his placating murmur.

"Landed the Porter engagement, did you?" Greenwood asked in sudden excitement, as he glanced at the social notes.

"Yep."

"Scooped it?"

"I think so."

He never praised; no city editor ever did. But she knew how pleased he was.

"But you won't get my hospital story for me, you don't want to faint in Market street?"

"I do not!" It reminded her of Larry and the comforting hour beside the fire that afternoon. "By the way," she said, "you followed up my little City Hall story; here's something that may interest you: Lawrence Bellamy is going over to the Examiner with the Journal."

"What Journal?" Greenwood's voice was as swift as a bullet.

"There's only one. His Journal. The Journal of Commerce and Business."

"Who said so?"

"He did. I know him and his wife quite well. I saw him today, and he told me. They're going to have a weekly supplement, and then he's to do a daily column."

The enigmatic, slightly impish face of Charles Greenwood went suddenly blank.

"Got your Sunday column in?" he asked, in a flat voice.

"Hour ago."

"What's keeping you? It's almost ten."

"I'm going with Van to get some oysters."

Avignon, Walled City of the French Popes, Loses Prestige

Has Shrunk in Size and Fame Since 14th Century.

Avignon, ancient stronghold of the popes in southern France, was flooded recently by the river Rhone, on whose left bank it is situated about 30 miles from the Mediterranean. Floods have damaged the city before, frequently causing breaches in its encircling walls.

"Avignon, capital of the Department of Vaucluse, has shrunk in both size and fame since the Fourteenth century, when, during the residence of seven French popes, it was the focus of all Christendom, crowded with approximately 80,000 inhabitants," says the National Geographic society.

The Vatican in France.

"From about 1309 to 1376 Avignon replaced Rome as the papal capital. The massive Papal palace covers three and one-half acres on a rocky hill nearly 200 feet high. Outwardly it was a grim fortress, with high walls 18 feet thick in places, and huge towers from which molten lead could be poured on attackers. Within, however, it was a luxurious edifice.

"In medieval days the palace was decorated with gold and azure frescoes, hung with gorgeous tapestries, and contained a treasury of jewels and precious vessels. Here popes and cardinals in ermine and brocade dined with forks of gold and mother-of-pearl, and knives with handles of jasper and ivory. In the lovely gardens, white peacocks strolled between clipped hedges and flower beds, and caged lions and other beasts glowered at pacing dignitaries.

"North of the palace on the huge rock, Rocher des Doms, stands the gloomy Romanesque edifice, Notre Dame des Doms, for 70 years the premier church of Christendom and sometimes called 'the St. Peter's of Avignon.'

"Behind the cathedral, a promenade leads to the edge of the cliff, from which one may look down on the red and brown tile roofs huddled below, and on the willow-fringed blue Rhone winding through a fertile plain green with mulberry trees, vineyards and gardens.

Avignon a Walled City.

"Continuing the natural fortifications of the cliff, and practically encircling Avignon, are three miles of massive crenellated walls, built in the Fourteenth century to keep out bands of roving brigands. They are intercepted by 39 towers and numerous gates. As modern Avignon expanded beyond the walls, involving new openings, officials threatened to remove the broken-down portions. But intervention of public-spirited citizens saved the remnants for posterity.

"During the papal occupation, Avignon flourished. Following on the heels of popes and church dignitaries, came Italian artists to decorate the palace; Italian bankers, and throngs of merchants to market their wares to a wealthy court. Into the city poured grain and wine from Provence, and rich cloth and tapestries from Bruges and Tournai.

"Today, on the east bank of the Rhone, 143 miles south of Lyon, Avignon is still the market town for the country east of the river, just as turreted Villeneuve, on the opposite bank of the Rhone is a trade center for the west side.

"A suspension bridge joins the two cities. During the Middle ages they were united by a stone bridge of 22 arches, built in 1177-1185. Damaged by battles and by floods and ice-floes of the Rhone, the arches kept collapsing until at present only four remain standing."

Simplicity and Honesty of Language Advocated by Dean

"In writing and speaking, be simple," says Dean Alford, "be unaffected, be honest in your speaking and writing. Never use a long word where a short one will do, you always lose by using a long one.

"You lose in clearness; you lose in honest expression of your meaning, and in the estimate of all people who are qualified to judge, you lose in reputation of ability. Elegance of language may not be in the power of all of us, but simplicity and straightforwardness are."

Washington Letter

Weekly Letter of Happenings at the Seat of Government by Our Congressman M. K. Reilly

THE NEW FARM RELIEF BILL

I had hoped to be able to devote this letter to the Townsend and other old age pension plans, but inasmuch as there have been a great many requests from the district for an explanation of the new farm relief bill I thought best to defer the Townsend letter until next week.

I take it that the average citizen even though he may not be a farmer, or interested in farming directing, knows that the great farm problem is the problem of surpluses. While there are people who proclaim that the agricultural problem is not a problem of over production but rather a problem of under consumption, the fact is nevertheless that as the result of our system of distribution and as a result of our failure to properly distribute purchasing power, there is and has been in many lines of agriculture, over-production. However, I have no doubt at all but that if we could provide a method whereby more of the proceeds of industry would be left with those who constitute the great army of workers in this country, that our agricultural problem would vanish.

Of course, agriculture had its golden age, the war period, and for a couple of years after the war, until Europe got back on its feet and started out on a program not only of conserving, but also of producing to a large extent its own agricultural necessities.

The AAA, the first agricultural relief bill passed by the present Administration, was quite generally supported and approved by the membership of both parties in Congress, and in fact by the great majority of the farm organizations of the country. And, I think it is a fair statement to make that the great majority of farm organizations and farmers up to the time that the Act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, favored it as a satisfactory agricultural relief measure. Of course when the Supreme Court declared the AAA unconstitutional, because agriculture was a state problem and not a national problem and that the Constitution gave to Congress no power to legislate on agriculture, all attempts to aid agriculture through legislation similar to the AAA had to be abandoned.

The one provision of the AAA that the Supreme Court hit was the provision whereby the Secretary of Agriculture could enter into contracts, with the farmers to curtail their crops, because of compensation that the farmer was to receive from the United States Government, in the shape of payments secured from the processing taxes. In other words, under the AAA the farmer agreed to curtail his acreage, etc., on condition that he was to be paid for taking land out of production, and also for not growing hogs, etc.

After the Supreme Court declared the Act unconstitutional there was a meeting in Washington of the agricultural leaders of the country, and this meeting demanded that some new legislation be written to help agriculture and take the place of the AAA. Now, as the one big object of the old law was to cut down production, and adapt agricultural out-put to the consuming demands of our country and of our export trade, so the object and aim of the new law is to accomplish the same purposes. But, this purpose has got to be accomplished in another way than through the making of contracts by the National Government with the farmers of the country. So, the new agriculture law is called the 'Soil Conservation and Soil Re-building Act" which it is hoped will be able to function in such a way as to cut down the agricultural output, of the country. It is estimated that about five hundred million dollars will be necessary to carry out this program, for one year, and it is the intention of the framers of the law that after the program has run two years under national control, that it shall then become operative through state control and the Government of the United States will simply assist the states financially in carrying out their crop production and control programs.

There is no question at all but that soil conservation and soil re-building are the two big agricultural problems, now before our agricultural world. In the past half century or more our lands have been denuded of their virgin forests. Millions of acres of land have been destroyed through the washing away of the soil and we have millions of acres more today under cultivition that are much less productive than they used to be because of the losses from the soil, through erosion, of the old time fertility of the soil. Under the new Act farmers will take out of production a certain percentage of their crops, and that land will be put into grass and crops that will grow a sod and that will bring about an enrichment of the soil instead of a depletion of the soil. The fact of the matter is in certain parts of the country today, particularly in the Southland, the cost of raising a crop from the standpoint of the fertilizer needed is tremendous. In some sections of this country it takes from eight to twelve dollars an acre to furnish the fertilizer to produce a crop and this use of fertilizer is not once in awhile or one season every little while but every season. The fact is that if the Wisconsin farmers had to fertilize their farm as they do in other parts of the country in order to grow an annual crop why the Wisconsin farmers would all be broke.

Now, this soil conservation and soil re-building program will make it possible to summer-fallow a great deal of land every year that can later on be used for crop purposes without requiring any great amount of fertilizer. Now, for every acre if land that the farmer will take out of cultivation and use for soil re-building purposes he will get a certain allowance from the Government, probably the same as he has been paid under the AAA. But, this withdrawing of land from use and the curtailing of other agricultural farm crops will have to be a voluntary act on the part of the farmer, if the new agricultural relief measure is going to be held to be constitutional.

The one-crop farmers of the country, particularly the cotton crop farmers, are in a serious situation as regards soil fertility. Texas is a new cotton state, and cotton is still being produced in that state from the native elements of the soil, but it will be a short time only before Texas too will have to fertilize her soil in order to produce paying crops.

Now, there are many provisions, rules and regulations of the new agricultural relief bill that will have to be carried out by the Secretary of Agriculture. The bill contains the sections known as the "Domestic Allotment Sections" and sections pertaining to the development of exports of agricultural products. One principle of the bill will be to help to provide methods for handling the surplus agricultural products that we may have even under a crop control program.

There is a wide difference of opinion among dairy men as to whether or not the dairy business has received from the old AAA or will receive from the new agricultural act like benefits with other lines of agriculture. The big problem that the dairy people are concerned with is this: What will become of the land taken out of wheat, corn and cotton cultivation and treated to a soil re-building program? Will it be put into land used for raising dairy and beef cattle, etc.?

Under the old AAA which provided for taking land out of wheat, cotton and corn, etc. cultivation, the Secretary of Agriculture without any authority of law wrote into the contracs with the farmers a provision that the land taken out of cotton, wheat, etc., should not be used for dairy purposes. I mention this fact for the purpose of showing that the Secretary of Agriculture is evidently friendly to the dairy interests.

When this agricultural relief bill was recently before the House it was proposed to amend the bill so as to specifically state the land taken out of wheat, corn, cotton, etc. should not be used for dairy purposes. The writer voted for this amendment, known as the Boileau Amendment, although at the time he had some doubts as to whether or not the said amendment did not go squarely up against the recent Supreme Court decision. After the Boileau Amendment was defeated the House adopted another amendment which reads as follows:

"The Secretary (of Agriculture) shall in every practical way encourage and provide for soil conservation and soil re-building practices rather than the growing of soil-depleting crops."

It was held that this was as far as Congress could go without coming unto conflict with the Supreme Court.

During the life of the AAA when millions of acres of land were taken out of cotton, corn, wheat, etc. the dairy outfit in the United States was reduced. In 1933 creamery butter products totaled 1,762,000,000 pounds. In 1934 there were produced only 1,694,000,000 pounds and in 1935, 1,633,000,000 pounds. It might be mentioned in this connection that in Wisconsin the butter crop increased over eight million pounds from 1933 to 1935. Of course, Wisconsin is a great dairy state, the greatest in the union, and everything should be done consistant with the costitutional powers of Congress to protect our dairy interests from being injured through legislation designed to help other agricultural interests. If the workings of this new farm legislation should result in an unjustifiable increase of dairy products why then the law will have to be modified or some provisions made to take care of this increase. It is altogether probable that such increase under the law as now written will be taken care of through the purchase of surplus dairy products by the National Government and a distribution of the same through poor relief agencies or through the building up of our dairy export trade.

WHEREAS, in most instances the guardianship is maintained for the purpose of burial of the incompetent in the cemetery where deceased relatives are buried; and

WHEREAS, in case of the death of such incompetents, the guardian has no legal right to pay either the funeral expenses or the expenses of the county, but that an administrator must be appointed for the purpose, involving further necessary expense; and

WHEREAS, the entire matter may be simplified if the guardians fees be paid into the county treasury the entire amount of the estate funds, under certain conditions providing for burial in the family lot at a place in the county to be designated by surviving relatives;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the County Board of Washington County, that guardians of incompetent persons, who are chargeable to the county for support and maintenance in any county institution or who may hereafter become so indebted, with the consent of the county court, pay the entire respective estate funds into the county treasurer, who shall receipt for same and file a duplicate receipt with the county court.

Report No. 1

To the special committee appointed at the adjourned session of the County Board of January 29, 1935, with instructions to inquire investigate conditions at the Oaks Sanatorium, as well as to the advisability of a change in management of said institution herewith submits the following report and recommendations:

Rumors, as unsatisfactory treatment of patients, which were heard from time to time and for some years past, were found, as your committee was able to ascertain, to be either idle gossip or mal complaint quite generally prevalent in every institution and, and constituted, in our opinion, no reflection on the management.

A resolution passed by the County Board of Waukesha County, a copy of which was mailed to this County Board, contained a recommendation to increase the efficiency of the present method of treating patients at the Sanatorium by changing the present management from a registered nurse to a full time medical man.

Your committee made diligent and extensive inquiries as to the advisability of making such a change. Our first meeting was held in Waukesha with their special committee on April 5, 1935. On April 6th the committees met with the Board of Trustees in Menomonie. No definite results were obtained at either meeting. On May 2nd, a meeting was held at the State Sanatorium, Wales, Wisconsin. We learned that the modern treatment of tubercular patients was explained and outlined by Dr. Thompson, Supt. of the State Sanatorium, changed considerably within the last five or six years. Medical men who are considered authorities in the treatment of this disease, as well as the physician of general practice, are agreed that the best results can only be obtained by having a full time medical man in attendance and that such a physician should be a specialist in this line. The final meeting was held at the Oaks Sanatorium on May 2, 1935 with the Trustees present. The attitude at this meeting was that there would be a decided improvement in the care of the patients with a full time physician in charge. In arriving at this conclusion, the committee was not influenced by any rumors of mismanagement or mistreatment of patients, but solely upon the findings of the better scientific medical and surgical treatment of patients.

Although the cost per capita will be increased, but not to a point unreasonably high, your committee recommends to your honorable body, and through you to the Board of Trustees of the institution, that such change be made. We wish to find no fault with any honest effort made in behalf of the institution, but at the same time we are certain that had this matter been fully and fairly presented to the trustees at a meeting of the entire board, there would not have been even the suggestion of a lack of harmony between the two counties, as we are convinced that all of the trustees would have readily acknowledged the advantages of this change in policy.

Report No. 1

To the County Board of Supervisors of Washington County, Wisconsin:

This Committee having been appointed to investigate in the matter of Old Age Pensions does respectfully report as follows:

The adoption of the State system of Old Age Pension Systems becomes mandatory in this county on July 1, 1935. Under the provisions of Sections 49.20 to 49.39 the law provides that such system of Old Age assistance shall be administered in each county by the County Judge. The cost of such system shall in the first instance be born by the County but the County shall be entitled to reimbursement from the State and from the cities, villages and towns of which the pensioners are residents. One-third of the cost shall be borne by the State. The County may or may not cause each town, city and village to reimburse the county for the amounts paid in Old Age assistance to its residents, less the amounts received by the County from the State.

The County Clerk shall make a report to the County Board at its annual meeting showing in detail the amounts which are charged each town, city or village, and the County Board at such meeting shall determine if such amount shall be so charged against the town, city or village, and then determine the amount to be raised and paid by each town, city and village.

Applications for such pensions shall be made in writing to the County Judge of the County. The County Judge shall then make or cause to be made such investigation as he may deem necessary and shall then decide upon the application and fix the amount of Old Age assistance to be granted to the applicant. Such amount shall be fixed with due regard to the conditions in each case, but in an amount, which when added to the income of the applicant including income from property, which exceeds a total of One Dollar ($1.00) per day. The total amounts paid to a pensioner on the death of such pensioner shall be allowed and deducted from his or her estate. The County Judge may require as a condition to the granting of a certificate of Old Age Pension that all or any part of the property of the applicant be transferred to the County Court and such property shall be then managed by the County Court and the income paid to the pensioner.

Section 49.22 To whom Granted: Old Age assistance must be granted only to an applicant who:

(1) Has attained the age of seventy years or upwards.

(2) Was born in the United States or has been a citizen of the United States for at least fifteen years before making application for old-age assistance.

(3) Has resided in the state and county in which he makes application:

(a) Continuously for at least fifteen years immediately preceding the date of application, but continuous residence in the state and county shall not be deemed to have been interrupted by periods of absence therefrom if the total of such periods does not exceed three years, or,

(b) Forty years, at least five of which have immediately preceded the application;

(c) Provided, that absence in the service of the State of Wisconsin or of the United States shall not be deemed to interrupt residence in the state or county if a domicile be not acquired outside the state or county.

(4) Is not at the date of making application an inmate of any prison, jail, workhouse, infirmary, insane asylum, or any other public correctional institution.

(5) During the period of ten years immediately preceding such date has not been imprisoned for a felony.

(6) If a husband, has not without just cause failed to support his wife and his children under the age of fifteen years for six years or more during the fifteen years preceding the date of application for old-age assistance.

(7) Has not, within year preceding such application for old-age assistance been a habitual tramp or beggar.

(8) Has no child or other person responsible under the law of this state for his support and able to support him.

Although the adoption of the Old Age Pension system becomes mandatory in this county on July 1, 1935, no appropriation has been made to meet such expense. However, under the opinion of the Attorney General in such case, the cost shall be paid out of the general fund of the county.

We recommend that the County Judge be authorized to appoint an advisory committee to assist him in his decision of the Old Age Pension applications, which committee shall be comprised of the Superintendent of the County Asylum and Home, the Supervisor or Chairman of town, city or village in which the applicant resides and such other person or persons as he may deem advisable.

Report No. 4
Report of Asylum and Home Committee on Relief Department Investigation

Pursuant to a resolution passed by your honorable board requesting the Asylum and Home Committee to investigate complaints into the efficiency of the Relief Department, your committee begs leave to report as follows:

The committee held three meetings on May 20, May 27, and June 3rd. A number of people assembled and immediately your committee began the questioning. Each of the complainants was put under oath by Mr. M. W. Monroe, County Clerk, who attended all the meetings.

We assure your honorable board that every courtesy and freedom necessary for the complainants to present their cases to the committee were extended to them. At all times they had the liberty to ask questions themselves or through a representative, of the director of relief or any of her assistants. As a proof of this courtesy and freedom we have only to refer you to the original testimony of the complainants.

At the time of this investigation there were 360 families or an estimated 1800 individuals on relief. Of this number only 23 individuals actually appeared before your committee which is one and a third percent of the total number.

Briefly, the complaints may be summarized under the following heads:

1. A disposition on the part of the complainants to resist any investigation of their financial status previous to granting relief or supplementary aid.
2. A well defined tendency to resent any survey of what was done with the previous month's allotment.
3. A disposition to criticize the promptness with which medical care was granted.
4. Disputes relative to people earning part of their income and part granted on relief.
5. Disputes as to back rent of people placed on relief.
6. Disputes as to allotment of hours on work relief to families of the same number of people.
7. Dissatisfaction with housing facilities of families on relief.
8. Minor dissatisfactions; the most prominent of which was political influence.

Careful consideration was given to each of these complaints. Relative to the first: This requirement is fundamentally necessary in a well regulated relief department and has always been a policy of this relief department. This requirement is also mandatory according to federal regulations. No one in the department of relief could abrogate this requirement without jeopardizing the aid received from the federal and state governments.

The second complaint falls under the first. Conditions of people on relief change from month to month. For that reason a survey relative to their ability to take care of themselves must be made and kept.

Artifical sentiment is easily developed for the indigent sick. For that reason special attention is paid to their condition. No one wants to see anyone suffer for want of medical care or hospitalization. The relief department was carefully checked in this regard and your committee finds that at no time was medicine, food or hospitalization refused any person on relief when a recommendation came from the attending physician.

The fourth complaint has to do with those on part time relief. This is a matter that is determined by the judgment of the case workers. Judgments differ. Two very honest persons may differ quite materially. Yet, in all cases in dispute the caseworkers and Mrs. Shinners exercised a judgment so reasonable that your committee is conscious of the fact that, while a few injustices might have crept in to their work, we wish to report that the relief department on the whole, exercised a judgment far above the average in such cases.

Relative to back rent, it has been the regulation of this department not to pay back rent before application for relief is made. This is also a regulation of the federal and state relief regulations. Consequently, the relief department was helpless to grant requests for back rent. This is the answer of the relief department in all cases relative to the fifth complaint.

The cause of the sixth complaint is very reasonable. We can see how they may arise. A person of 12 years or older is considered an adult, and consequently, the food allowance is increased. A father and mother and four children under this interpretation would receive relief for six adults. But a father and mother with four children under the age of 12 would receive a less amount.

Relative to the seventh complaint there were only two grievances. The minor dissatisfactions were so trivial that your committee will not take up your time to consider them.

Relative to the last complaint, we want to indicate that with the exception of statements made by Mr. Ed. Tessman and which were unsupported by any of the complainants, there was absolutely no political influence exercised by any one connected with the relief department.

Therefore, we your committee to investigate the relief department, wish to report that we have the utmost confidence in the department as it is now conducted. We wish to report further that Mrs. Leocadia M. Shinners was always ready with records so well organized that at a moment's notice, she gave your committee valuable assistance. We wish to state further that her work in the department of relief in Washinggton County should merit your confidence as it has merited the confidence of all who came in contact with her including those on relief with the exception of a very small group who were misled.

Report No. 4

REPORT OF COUNTY AGRICULTURAL AGENT

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors, Washington County, Wisconsin. November 12, 1935

Gentlemen:

County Agent effort can be divided into three groups of work, which we classify roughly as, first, signed up projects in which a farmer or some member of his family sign an agreement to complete a definite piece of work, in some organized project. This type of project usually carries from year to year and is more or less routine work. The second type of work incurs special problems of the individual, such as, unusual diseases in plants or animals, drainage and farm engineering, building, loans, weed problems, and miscellaneous things which require personal service.

The third type of effort concerns itself with promoting new improved practices or methods among individuals in farm management practices or methods which we hope will eventually become permanently established and helpful in the management program of a large proportion of farmers.

In the first group, that of signed up projects, there are several juite important to the community, which are handled in connection with the County Agricultural office. The "4-H groups" enjoyed a very successful season. 487 memberss were enrolled in various local groups. 625 projects were taken up including:

Baking	73	Garden	104
Colt	12	Poultry	42
Forestry	25	Sewing	137
Pigs	12	Canning	21
Calf	81	Corn	37
Potato	43	Handicraft	34
Sheep	4

The County organization of 4-H leaders is operating nicely and deserves much credit for the success of the work. Besides the project and social life of the local groups, a successful picnic and County Drama contest were held the past year. There were more booths which represent group effort at the County Fair this year test almost without exception shows the herd clean, continuing to remain so. In herds where the infection is bad, many cases running 50%—70%, we find that the average positive animals on a retest will be reduced to 4 or 5%. Continued testing is cleaning up even these bad herds. On all of the herds tested so far the first test shows around 11% reactors and the retest shows a reduction to between 3 and 4%. In all approximately 8000 animals have been tested in Washington County under supervision. More than than ever before. The individual clothing entries were the largest. The garden club exhibit was without question the displayed at a county fair in Wisconsin. In addition more calves shown this year than ever before, and the hibit in 1935 marked the beginning of some splendid Club work. The annual Achievement Day will take the Thanksgiving recess.

428 producers are on "Corn-Hog contracts" for 1935 payment has been received by all except a few producers tal amount either paid producers or due them on the ments is approximately $33,000. It is interesting to note were 428 contracts this year compared to 541 last year who failed to sign were the small contract holders. payments would have been negligible. In the referendum was held recently the vote in the County was 129 in favor ing on the adjustment program, and 5 against.

There are 36 sugar beet growers in the County who "sugar beet production control agreements." The to these so far have been $3,491.83, an average of $100 per producer. This program was set up on a long and will be a continuing program.

Three "dairy herd improvement associations" are in the county with a membership of 78. There are many the waiting list to start another one, which probably complished this winter.

Approximately 375 herds in the county are under agreements with the Federal government for testing for disease." It has been clearly demonstrated that the be successfully controlled. We have found consistently there are but one or two reacting animals in a herd program, which was to end December 31st, 1935, has been ed to July 1st of next year.

Another signed up project in which a considerable farmers are interested is the "orchard program." Meetings have operated the past year, with an average of 12. In addition, a series of orchard schools was held spring with Mr. Kuehner of the College of Agriculture. Four groups of people averaging 25 in number signed short course in fruit and vegetable growing. This consisted of a number of meetings with each group on the various orchard and garden work including practical demonstrations.

In the work done under "miscellaneous or individual sonal service," a great deal of time has been spent on loans of one sort or another. Feed loans, seed loans, mortgage loans, while not as numerous as a year ago, a great deal of personal attention. There were also loans and 50 feed loans granted last spring under the of the County Agent. A great deal of time is spent with who are in need of refinancing farm mortgages. time is required in identifying various insects, weeds, which come to the attention of farmers, who do not whether or not they are harmful. Help has also been individuals in farm building plans, construction of drainage, land measurement, etc. Assistance has been number of farmers in procuring good seed. There were quests for assistance, and more inquiries for improved pure bred livestock the past year than within the three years together.

Potatoes. Under the third classification of County tivities, which refers more directly to promotional work lines, there were one or two which deserve attention. In co-operation with the State Potato Growers Association College of Agriculture, a series of demonstration plots ed with Rheinhold Kressin of the town of Jackson. from 42 different growers from all sections of Wisconsin few lots from outside the state representing 13 varieties ed in the plots. Some of these were old standard Wisconsin eties, some were improved strains from the East, and a promising new varieties were on trial to study their behavior our local conditions. It was perhaps the worst season for many years in Washington County as far as potatoes concerned. The succession of several hot summers in breaking down in our seed stocks which will require a new effort to over come if we are going to stay in the potato The varieties and different plots within varieties showed contrast in behavior and yield. This plot work will be next year in an effort to do something to stabilize our Through these plots a great deal of interest has been we are finding much demand for improved seed, which the situation a great deal.

Marl. Last winter a project was set up using relief provide marl cheaply for farmers of Washington County proven fact that a considerable area of the county is in lime. These soils are greatly improved by adding marl has been the effort of this office to procure it as cheaply ble for as large a number of farmers as we can reach. the project was approved rather late, with the result that about Christmas before things got under way. Even the project was not thoroughly set up, no machinery was provided ,about 1500 yards of this valuable material was onto 69 farms. This year we are making every effort early start, and are using some machinery, so that there an abundance of marl for all farmers who wish it. To get sufficient relief labor is the chief obstacle we have to with at present.

Canary Grass. It appears that one of the new crops are interested in will, before many years, become one cepted and useful crops in Washington County. I refer Canary Grass, which, when carefully seeded, does very will become a useful addition to our hay and pasture well as utilizing in a convenient way land which is or nearly useless. A large number of farmers have ed and advised in the proper manner of seeding and crop. It happens this year that there is considerable able in the county and a considerable acreage has been fall.

The following statistics may prove interesting:

V.
CIVIL AND CRIMINAL JURISDICTION

Since the date of the last report, there have been three hundred and fifty-nine new cases in this branch of the Court. The amount of money expended for witnesses and jurors' fees during the past year has been Five Hundred Dollars less than for the preceding year. Efforts are made to economize as far as possible in this regard; and in small cases, attorneys and parties have been encouraged and urged to try their cases before juries of six rather than juries of twelve. The plan for striking a jury in advance of the time of trial does away with the necessity of bringing in the full panel and, of course, saves money in this respect. However, there are some disadvantages in selecting a jury in this way because of the fact that in some instances those, who are selected for the jury, turn out to be prejudiced and must be dismissed for cause. The bulk of the work in this branch of the Court, however, is confined to Court cases; and in a great many instances, issues properly triable before a jury are tried before the Court by consent of the parties or their attorneys, which of course, is a financial advantage as far as the county is concerned. There is some talk among County Judges having this sort of jurisdiction to secure the passage of a law which would eliminate juries in all cases unless demanded, and that if juries are demanded and the amount involved is comparatively small, to then require that such case be tried before a jury of six. No doubt, some such innovation will be made in the near future.

Report No. 7

ANNUAL REPORT of the WASHINGTON CO. OUTDOOR RELIEF DEPT.

November 1, 1934—November 1, 1935

H. F. Schroeder; Chas. W. Walter; Frank Salter—Outdoor Relief Committee; Russell G. Oswald, Director.

West Bend, Wisc., November 12, 1935.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors,
of Washinggton County.
Gentlemen:

We should like to reserve some space at the outset of this report to express our sincere appreciation for the splendid co-operation so willingly given the Washington County Outdoor Relief Department by the residents of Washington County. By reason of this spirit of co-operation, we are better able to administer proper and adequate relief and by evidencing this degree of genuine interest, the citizens and taxpayers enable us to keep relief costs at a minimum.

A phase of relief which in our opinion has been overlooked, is the enormous contribution made by doctors, dentists, landlords, dairy farmers, retail dairies, grocers, clothiers, and all other merchants. All of these groups, in addition to their full share of the tax load, have sold their services or goods well below a sound business or professional price. Much credit ought also to be given to those employers who have attempted and in many instances have employed when it was not profitable to do so. We take this opportunity to express appreciation to all the business, professional and industrial groups which have co-operated so generously.

Quite naturally, everyone is interested in knowing where the funds that are being used to defray relief costs are coming from. In 1935 the local units of government in Wisconsin expended $6,000,000 as their share of the relief costs. This amount, however does not include certain amounts spent for hospitalization and other relief activities which are not reimbursed from federal-state funds. The State of Wisconsin, in Chapter 15 of the Laws of 1935 raised $5,000,000 for general relief purposes and the federal government granted $36,350,000 to Wisconsin for all relief purposes in 1935. The figure of 1935 includes a grant of $750,000 for November relief which appears to be the final relief grant to be made by the federal government to Wisconsin this year. The federal government has announced its intention of confining its financial aid to the new federal works program.

On November 2, 1934 Dr. Alfred W. Briggs, state administrator of relief, wrote Guido Schroeder, chairman of your Honorable Body, advising that pursuant to a comprehensible survey made by the state administration relative to probable relief costs in 1935, and also as to the various counties' abilities to pay, the state administration felt that a conservative estimate of the cost of unemployment relief, including direct and work relief, would amount to $84,000 in Washington County during 1935. Dr. Briggs stated that of this amount the state administration hoped to be able to supply Washington County with $42,000 from federal and state funds, on condition that $42,000 be provided from county funds. Those figures did not include the cost of materials and supplies to be used on work projects, hospitalization, mothers' pensions, blind relief, etc., but only those items which are allowable in matching federal funds.

There was a deficit of $11,439.47 in the budget for Outdoor Relief in Washington County on November 1, 1934. Your Honorable Body appropriated $20,000 for relief costs in 1935 at that time, and an additional $7,500 for hospitalization costs for the nine months beginning January 29, 1935 to November 1, 1935. During the current year Washington County received $75,451.74 in federal and state funds and $6,305.84 was received from other counties for the care of indigents who maintained their legal settlements elsewhere than in Washington County. The total orders issued by the Department of Outdoor Relief in Washington County from November 1, 1934 to November 1, 1935 amounted to $129,547.75 plus $7,500 which was appropriated by the County Board to care for hospitalization for nine months, leaving a deficit on November 1, 1935 of $39,229.64.

Immediately following, we submit the annual report of the Washington County Outdoor Relief Department for the year ending October 31, 1935:

Work Relief

Part of the net total expenditures for the current year was spent for work relief. Many clients receiving relief from the Outdoor Relief Department were placed on work projects sponsored by the various districts. By virtue of this work they were able to earn a sufficient amount of money to properly maintain their families and thus require no direct relief from the Department of Outdoor Relief. Although work relief costs are greater than direct relief costs, it is felt that the placing of clients of work relief projects can be justified by the improved morale of the workers and the constructive work that is being done in the county by relief clients in return for their maintenance. There are many factors involved in work relief that contribute toward increased costs, such as the overlapping of direct and work relief, budgets worked out according to retail prices, and the issuance of supplementary relief to those having a budgetary deficiency. The FERA and WERA work relief projects were in operation from November 1, 1934 until August 29, 1935 at which time all projects were closed. There were 40 WERA work relief projects operated in Washington County during this period; the Federal and State governments contributed $27,184.05 and the various sponsors in Washington County contributed $17,873.83. A list of the 40 projects, the total cost of which was $45,060.59 follows:

The W. E. R. A. work program was terminated on August 29, 1935 and the works division of Washington County Outdoor Relief Department then assisted in figuring and submitting new project proposals for the Works Progress Administration.

Hospitalization

At your regular annual meeting in November of 1934, a resolution was passed known as Resolution number 58 (amended) which gave both St. Joseph's Hospital in Hartford and St. Joseph's Community Hospital of West Bend, $5,000 as payment for hospitalization care rendered to Washington County indigents. The resolution further provided that all emergency work done by the hospitals in 1934 would be cancelled. Since this report is for the period from November 1, 1934 to November 1, 1935, and since the aforementioned resolution embraced the one year period beginning on January 29, 1935 and concluding on January 29, 1936, it is obvious that at this time only nine months of this period has run and we are accordingly including three-fourths of the Ten Thousand dollar appropriation, or $7,500.00 in our report.

Upon receiving a doctor's recommendation that a particular client be hospitalized, and after making a thorough investigation of each case, the Washington County Outdoor Relief Department authorized care and hospitalization at St. Joseph's Hospital at Hartford for 51 indigents as a cost of $2,173.63, and at St. Joseph's Community Hospital in West Bend there were 44 clients cared for and the cost was $2,442.50. The latter figure includes costs amounting to $1,391.50 for 19 persons who received authorization from the County Court. Both hospitals also did some emergency work which is not included in the two figures given. It is well to remember that there are three more months to run under the agreement entered into between the two hospitals and Washington County.

Administration

It is felt that an annual report of the Outdoor Relief Department would not be complete without an itemized account of the administrative costs of said department. Since Outdoor Relief Department records are public documents, and since we are anxious to have your Honorable Body and the citizens of County know all pertinent information, we are listing of the employees of the Washington County Outdoor Relief Department for the year beginning on November 1, 1934 and ending on October 31, 1935. The preceding table shows clearly that administrative the Outdoor Relief Department are shared by the County and State governments. The salaries of the Director

The County, in the ... instance, pays each of the aforementioned persons, and then ...ives their entire salary back to the state for 100% reimburse... ...ent. Estimate for 1936

Briggs, state administrator of relief, has ...nted to help the various counties in preparing their estimate ...the 1936 relief costs, and in a letter sent to Guido Schroeder, ...man of your Honorable Body, on November 6, 1935, he has ...ested to estimate what Washington County can be reasonably ...cted to raise for relief that will be granted to those cases not ...ved from the relief rolls by any of the new programs, as well ...that relief which must be given to those persons who are trans... ...ed to welfare programs that Washington County may establish ...supplant the present relief program. The figure of that date ...($53,454, as the amount of money that the state administra... ...estimated that Washington County is able to raise. It is also ...nature of the county's ability to raise funds for pension cases ...transferred from relief rolls, and exclusive of ability to raise ...the sponsor's contributions to work projects.

These all necessitated school calls and home calls by this office.

Health Education

Now, what I feel to be the biggest part of the school health work in Washington County is the school educational drive for more healthful living. Every school in Washington County is teaching health. Efforts are being made to help parents form simple habits of healthful living in the lives of their children. Excellent health books are used in all classes and habits are checked on. Stimulation and help for the teachers in this work have come from the County Superintendent's office. Mr. Buckley has compiled a Course of Study in Health as a guide for the teachers. Two community health days were planned for 6th, 7th and 8th grade children from the entire county and held on the 30th and 31st of October. Parents also were invited, the days resulting in much interest and favorable comment.

This health education in the schools is the pathway to preventing physical defects of the future. Dental decay will be reduced through proper food habits. Vision will be saved by proper lighting for reading, etc. Proper shoes will save many defects of the feet, etc. Education is slow. Nevertheless, the drop in contagious disease shows that the American people are practicing what they have learned.

Chest Clinics

Nine chest clinics have been held with an attendance of 257 people, making an average of 28 and 5-9's per clinic. This is considered very good. Dorothy Nanscawen and I have filed our chest clinic records, limiting the active cases to those people who, for one reason or another, we feel it necessary to contact at one time or another. It is customary for this office to write to people who have had tuberculosis, or are tuberculosis contacts, suggesting to them that they have a physical check-up. We write to them yearly to remind them and notify them the date of the clinic. Calls are made on some. People who know they have been close contacts of active tuberculosis are wise to keep themselves physically fit. The chest clinics are educational as well as diagnostic.

Cripples

In our files are records of 51 who have been crippled by birth disease or injury. Of these, 18 have had care by a bone specialist this year. Five are or have attended a state orthopedic school. The others are at home being taken care of by their family physician, are mentally defective or cared for in some other manner.

The state of Wisconsin allows no crippled child to go uncared for. Consequently, if family resources do not allow for orthopedic care the state and county will finance it. Many excellent things have been done in our county.

Transportation of Patients

I have transported 11 people to Madison either for diagnosis by a bone specialist or for treatment for a bone deformity, and I have transported 4 to the Milwaukee Children's Hospital clinic for diagnosis.

Other than the orthopedic cases, I have transported 4 cases to Wisconsin General Hospital, 5 to various Sanatoria, and 3 to Milwaukee Dispensary, making a total of 27 people transported. I find that I have transported too many. Time and mileage of the office does not warrant this number. I am now limiting my trips to emergency cases who need some attendance. Judge Bucklin has sanctioned this move.

Educational Activities

I have talked to 14 different groups in the county. They were P. T. A.'s, Rotarians, etc. Approximately 4435 people were addressed at these meetings.

Water testing of the school wells has been promoted by Mr Buckley's office and mine. A large majority of the wells have been tested and the schools having unsafe wells have found others from which they can get safe water. This is a very worthwhile project, and is one of the greatest factors in the low number of typhoid fever cases of today.

Administrative Work

The administrative work of the office has included office interviews, either with patients, teachers, or others; health committee meetings; other meetings; planning work of the office, or organization visits. The statistics follow:

No. health committee meetings	6
No. other meetings attended	24
No. organization visits	36
No. interviews in office	124
No. letters, circulars, etc., sent	1098
No. office visits by patients	36

The Health Committee decided during the year that one child health problem of the county was serious enough to warrant some discussion. This is the problem of serious physical defects in children whose parents were unable to afford dental or medical care. Some parents are able to give food and shelter to their children but cannot do the others.

Therefore, the committee called in representative people from the entire county to discuss this problem with them. Mrs. Blackstone, of Waukesha, came over to this meeting, which was held on May 2, 1935 and told us what Waukesha county is doing. The women there have banded themselves together as a Child Welfare Council and by asking membership fees, have been able to care for some of their most serious defects in children, such as tonsillectomies, glasses, dentistry, etc.

As a result of Mrs. Blackstone's talk, and the discussion following it, a motion was made and carried for the Health Committee to appoint seven women of the county to meet with them for the purpose of formulating plans for some such Council.

These plans have not gone forward due to several reasons. First, when they do materialize the organization must be living and active. The time did not seem to be ripe. Second, correspondence from the State Board of Health gave us hopes of some help on this problem, as it is a universal one. In the meantime, this is not being laid aside. Something will have to be done.

Field Visits

My field calls, including infant, pre-school, school and adult calls have totaled 918 during the year. I have made 133 calls on behalf of patients.

In concluding my report to you, I wish to thank you individuals who have been of great help to me. I want you to know that I appreciate the understanding that many of you have demonstrated in connection with the work of County Nurse. The county is large, the jobs are many. Many times it is confusing to know which corner of the county to go to first when there have been several requests for assistance. We will go forward this year with every feature of the work that has been started, hoping to add something in Infant Welfare work. West Bend Parent-Teachers sponsored a pre-school round-up this year. Out of 74 children entering kindergarten, 50 went to their family physician for physical check-up. Many defects were corrected. Generally the children were found to be in good condition. This round-up evidenced the value of infant and pre-school work. I thank you.

Respectfully submitted,
BERDENA R. HILL, County Nurse.

Report No. 10

REPORT OF HUMANE SOCIETY

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Washington County, Wisconsin.
Gentlemen:

I herewith submit to you my annual report as Humane Officer for Washington County, from November 1st, 1934 to November 1st, 1935, as follows:

Quite a number of cases were reported to me of dogs that were run over by automobiles and severely injured. The owners allowed the animals to limp about with broken bones, or dislocated shoulders ,for months, expecting the animal would recover without doing anything to assist. I had most of them put out of their misery.

A man was reported to me who was abusing his horse because its kidneys were too active, he clubbed the animal for its weakness.

Many dogs have been locked up in sheds, tied up, and not given any food or water, until their plight was discovered by neighbors who reported to me.

A mother tied up her child's left arm to a board, and kept it that way to force the child to use its right hand, especially for eating. I explained to the mother that a child that is born left-handed should not be forced to use the right hand or punished in any way.

I shall read you the following letters and complaints which came to me during the year. I shall omit the names.

Respectfully submitted,
W. J. WEHLE,
Humane Officer of Washington County, Wis.

Dr. H. Meyer Lynch, Coroner of Washington County gave his annual report. It was moved by Mr. Bartelt, seconded by Mr. Licht, that said report be adopted. Motion carried.

Report No. 11

REPORT OF COUNTY CORONER

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Washington County, Wisconsin.
Gentlemen:

I,H. Meyer Lynch, Coroner in and for said County of Washington, do hereby report that I have received no moneys during the preceding year, by virtue of my said office, for fees or from any other source.

STATE OF WISCONSIN)
WASHINGTON COUNTY) ss.

H. Meyer Lynch, being first duly sworn, on oath, says that he is the Coroner of Washington County, and that the foregoing report and statement is true and correct.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of Nov. 1935.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of
Washington County, Wisconsin.
Gentlemen:

I hereby report to your Honorable Body, the following actions and proceedings had before me as your Coroner for the period beginning November 10, 1934 to November 12, 1935.

A summary of the cases we have had show 39 cases, 12 of which death was due to natural causes, 2 were reported for investigation only, and 25 were violent deaths. Of these, 11 were caused by automobile accidents, 4 were suicides, 3 were accidental drownings one was a railroad crossing accident, and 6 miscellaneous, such as falls, etc. This is a great reduction over a previous record when out of a total of 32 cases, 19 were due to automobile violence.

In reviewing the past records of the coroner's office of Washington County (the review of which is still complete) it would be interesting to note a few conspicuous facts that have changed the times.

The records I have, begin in 1899 when Henry Koepke was the coroner, and it is not until 1919 that we find the first automobile accident death reported. That was in April, when one Edward Schoenhaar came to his death when struck by an autom bile driven by Joseph H. Schultz of West Bend. Complete details of the inquest were not recorded but it seems that Schoenhaar attempted to stop an approaching automobile in the same manner he would a runaway horse, that is, by shooing the automobile down the middle of the road, and in consequence, was run over and killed.

All other violent deaths are recorded as railroad crossing accidents, suicides and accidental drownings.

An outstanding fact of interest is that during Joe Kirsch's term in the coroner's office from 1909 to 1913, he had 5 cases, 2 were suicides, 2 were railroad crossing accidents, and the other was due to natural causes.

At my next annual report, I hope to give a complete analytical report from the first records available of the coroner's office.

Individual case reports and vouchers are as follows:

Report No. 12

REPORT OF THE OAK SANATORIUM SUPT.

To the Honorable Board of Trustees of The Oaks Sanatorium.

I herewith submit my annual report of the Oak Sanatorium, for the year ending June 30, 1935.

The Sanatorium properties are probably in much better condition at this period than at any other time. Considerable painting was done with labor furnished through the Federal Agencies. New fire proof roof on main building was laid, steam table in main kitchen, utensil sterilizer in infirmary, auto clave sterilizer in surgical department, new linoleum on first floor corridor, added furnishings, x-ray equipment, all go to make the institution more efficient.

The past year much interest has been stimulated in regard to various bills before the legislature concerning Sanatoria, of special interest is the Executive Budget Bill, Chapter 535, Laws of 1935, making available $600,000 instead of $500,000 for State Aid to the Wisconsin County Sanatoria. Amount allowed per patient the last two years was $6.47, with this new amount raised we are in hopes of getting our $7.00 per week per patient. Another new law has been effected, Chapter 236, Laws of Wisconsin, provides that patients are to be admitted to the Sanatorium through the County Judge as usual, but, under this new law a Central Collection and Deportation Counsel created under the State Board of Control represents the counties in collecting for care and maintenance of the patients. The counties will receive full credit of all collections made. The department will also determine the patients ability to pay for his care.

We continued to have our x-ray work taken care of by the Waukesha Municipal Hospital until July 20, when our equipment was completed. It is a great satisfaction and help for patients and Medical Department.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees it was agreed upon to extend our x-ray department to patients outside the institution. The County Judge is to sign an order for this work, the order to accompany the patient to the Sanatorium.

Drs. Lotz and Egloff, respectfully have reported detailed information concerning the actual work done in the Medical Department.

To safe guard the health of our nurses and employees, measures are being taken, tuberculin tests, x-ray of chest, urinalysis, blood count, blood sedementation, Wassermann and chest examinations are made the first week in institution and again in six months, or oftener if indicated.

We continue to have our "Talkies" in main dining room parties and entertainments from time to time.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank my Board of Trustees for their loyal support, Drs. Lotz and Egloff, my staff and employees for their splendid co-operation and help in administering to the needs of our patients.

Respectfully submitted,
DORA MAE BRESNAHAN, R. N., Supt.

WISCONSIN ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS ASSN.

November 13,1935.

To the Members of the Board of Trustees
The Oak Sanatorium,
Pewaukee, Wisconsin.
Gentlemen:

In my reports of previous years I have usually called your attention to one or more urgent needs of the Sanatorium. This past year has seen the installation of a complete x-ray equipment, and in view of this fact I will for once refrain from asking for anything more. Fearing that you might gain the impression that your institution is completely equipped, I hasten to mention that a full time social service worker and a new modern, building would be very desirable.

The new x-ray plant is a splendid and much needed addition to the institution and will prove of inestimable value in giving patients the best possible care. In the use of the fluoroscope before or after pneumothorax treatments, and in the ability to obtain roentgenograms of patients that are too ill to be moved from the hospital, the new equipment has already proven of great value.

Instead of asking for new equipment, I would like to give you a brief review of the medical care of patients at the Oak Sanatorium.

Immediately upon admission of the patient, a complete history is taken, the patient is weighed, and put to bed. Within 24 hours a complete laboratory study is done. This includes urinalysis, sputum examination, tuberculin skin test, complete blood count, Wassermann test for syphilis, sedimentation test, and steroscopic x-ray films of the chest. With these records at hand the patient is given a careful physical examination by Dr. Egloff and myself, in order to determine the extent of the tuberculous involvment, the presence of other pathological conditions and the general condition of the patient.

The next step is to outline the course and method of treatment to be instituted. In some cases bed rest alone is indicated, in others collapse of the lung by artificial pneumothorax together with rest treatment may be deemed advisable, and in others temporary paralysis of the diaphragm by crushing of the phrenic nerve of permanent paralysis by phrenico-exeresis may be indicated and advised. If a case is so far advanced that none of these measures is indicated, thoracoplasty may be considered.

All pneumothorax treatments are given by Dr. Egloff in the institution. During the past year I understand he has treated 16 patients to whom 246 treatments were given. Five patients were sent to the Wisconsin General Hospital for phrenic operations.

Dr. Egloff, your attending physician, calls at the Sanatorium three times a week and your consultant spends every Wednesday afternoon there. The laboratory work is usually repeated every month, and the patient is given a physical examination with a review of the records by your consultant about every ten weeks. Roentgenograms of the chest are taken every two or three months and more frequently if indicated. Dental care is given as considered necessary and special medical treatment for complicated conditions as diabetes mellitus or syphilis are treated according to the best modern methods.

While I do not have statistics as to results obtained at hand, I do know that there is at the present time a large group of patients in the Sanatorium in whom the results are exceptionally gratifying. During the past year two patients have been discharged to Lake Tomahawk Camp.

While there is no definitely established outpatient department in the organization of the Sanatorium, more or less of this type of work is bound to demand attention. Physicians of Washington and Waukesha Counties not infrequently send patients over to the Sanatorium for examination, and the interpretation of x-ray films for physicians of these Counties is a service we are always happy to render.

Since the installation of the x-ray unit, chest films have been taken of indigent patients at the request of physicians or County Nurses. All such requests must be validated by the County Judge.

During the past year we have also attempted to establish an outpatient department for pneumothorax patients. Patients who have been doing so very well under this treatment while in the Sanatorium, whose intervals of treatment have reached two or three weeks, and whose home conditions are considered very satisfactory, are discharged on the condition that they return to the Sanatorium for treatment at definite intervals. By this means we are able to make a definite saving to the Counties as well as release a bed for the waiting patient.

I cannot close this already too long report without expressing my sincere appreciation to Dr. Egloff, the attending physician, Miss Bresnahan, the superintendent, and to Miss Koch, the laboratory and x-ray technician, for the kind interest and help they are providing in the care of your patients.

Very truly yours,
OSCAR LOTZ, M. D.
Medical Department.

To the Members of the Board of Trustees of
The Oak Sanatorium.
Gentlemen:

I hereby present to you the report of the Medical Deparement for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935.

There were admitted during the year, 41 patients.

They are classified as follows:

Non Tuberculous	3
Glandular type	1
Incipient type	6
Moderately advanced	18
Far advanced	5

Discharged 39 patients, classified as follows:

Quiescent	3
Apparently arrested	6
Non Tuberculous	4
Died	6
Moderately advanced	7
Far advanced	6

Transferred to State Camp—2 patients.

Transferred to Wisconsin General Hospital—5 patients for surgery.

With the x-ray now installed invaluable help has been given the Medical department in being able to control the surgical treatment of patients to whom artificial pneumothorax is being administered. and great help in the treatment of all other patients.

During the year we have given pneumothorax treatments to 16 patients, with a total of 264 treatments.

We transferred 5 patients to Wisconsin General Hospital for phrenic nerve operations, and most gratifying results have been obtained.

Laboratory tests were as follows:

Blood tests	174
Blood sedimentation tests	166
Wassermann	72
Urinalysis	170
Sputum examinations	458
Tuberculin reaction tests	52
Bacteriological tests	12
	1104

The weekly consultation service by Dr. Oscar Lotz has proven very valuable. I feel that the work of the Medical Department has done very effective work in the treatment of the above cases judging by results obtained.

I wish to extend to the Board of Trustees, the staff and employees of the Oak Sanatorium, my sincere appreciation for the hearty co-operation in obtaining these results.

Respectfully submitted,
E. W. EGLOFF, M. D.
Attending Physician.

Report No. 14

REPORT OF THE HARTFORD CHAPTER, AMER

During the past year the Hartford Red Cross has its welfare activities throughout its territory. The cases registered at the office are 44. Of these 35 families and 9 were ex-service men. The total regpresent time is 1,182 cases.

Only 10 labor permits and 4 certificates of age were issued. It has been impossible for minors to secure employment since the shoe factory and the Bear Brand Hosiery Co. have moved out. The Labor Permit Work will increase again with the coming of new shoe factory.

Our office distributed Federal surplus supplies for the Outdoor Relief Department, not only to relief clients but also to needy families not on relief. These supplies were greatly appreciated by the borderline families of which Hartford and vicinity has a large number. The Red Cross is making every effort to help these families.

Cotton cloth and some garments have been distributed from the mill on hand. Used clothing, shoes, bedding and furniture has been received and distributed. New clothing, especially shoes for mill and food, have been purchased in emergency cases both relief families and borderline cases..

Transients have been coming to the office in large numbers. These have been provided with used clothing and in some cases with food. Several stranded families have been assisted with clothing, food and money so they could continue on their way.

Fourteen Boy Scouts have taken the Red Cross First Aid Course and received certificates.. More will be given this course in the future.

This year the Junior Red Cross has gone into other fields of work. Portfolio work of last year has been continued. In addition students are binding Braille books for the blind and have been collecting materials for use in the occupational therapy work at the Veteran's Administration, Milwaukee. It is hoped that this work will teach the children the value of doing good for others. This year the enrollment has increased 25 percent over last year's.

Because of the serious lack of work in Hartford, our organization did not receive the financial support so necessary to carry on successfully. The good will of the entire community has never been with us, and a great deal has been accomplished for the welfare of the needy and distressed. We deeply appreciate assistance given by the County Board in making an annual appropriation to our Chapter. Every effort will be made to co-operate with the Outdoor Relief and the County Children's Board to administer social welfare work as in former years.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. CHAS. REID

Report No. 15

ANNUAL REPORT TO THE COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS BY THE WASHINGTON COUNTY CHILDREN'S BOARD

November 1, 1934 to November 1, 1935.

To the County Board of Supervisors of Washington County, Wisconsin.

Gentlemen:

The total number of active cases on November 1, 1934 was 13. New cases since November 1, 1934, numbered 23. Cases closed since November 1, 1934 were 30, therefore the total number of active cases on November 1, 1935 were 36.

Special accomplishments were—Locating and investigating foster homes; Supervising foster homes; Doing case work for Board of Control; Clearing house for cases with Outdoor Relief and Red Cross; Keeping records of cases. .

The amount of money appropriated by the County Board of Supervisors for the work of the County Children's Board for 1935 was $500.00. Amount of money spent by the County Children's Board for their work was $143.57. Indicate the various items for which the above was expended—1—mileage; 2—Postage; 3—Long distance calls.

Dated November 18, 1935.

MAE KENDALL,
Secy. Washington County Children's Board.

To the members of the County Board of Supervisors: The time has again come for the consideration of the annual report of the C. C. B. which is a sort of review and statistical report for the years 1934 and 1935.

We have been especially concerned in problems pertaining to child welfare. This child welfare program involves placing and supervising children in foster homes rather than sending them to institutions—unmarried mother and illegitimate child, making an effort to keep the mother and child together. Whenever an unmarried mother has a baby which she has decided she cannot keep and there are no relatives who can keep the child, our duty is to help the unmarried mother to place the baby in a foster home. This is a permanent plan is to be made, it is taken into Juvenile Court—Establishing of paternity of the illigitimate child for its support when of age.

It has been a financial advantage to Washington County to have a child welfare program for it has saved money in placing children in foster homes, rather than sending them to institutions—by establishing paternity for the illigitimate child rather than make the County bear the financial responsibility for the care of the illegitimate children in the county. The returning of the children to other counties and state of their legal residence thus saving the county money in caring for non-residence, dependent children.

Our plans for the year 1936 will be to keep up that splendid cooperation that has existed between our board and the County Judge and District Attorney's office, the Red Cross, Outdoor Poor Relief and County Nurse, thus becoming a sort of clearing board for them; to strengthen our child welfare work; to make plans for a vocational program in our county in order to act as a preventative, or cure for many of our problems of delinquency and illegitimacy.

There are many problems to be considered and there is going to be need this year than ever before to have a non-political, child board to look after the interests of the children of the county.

Respectfully submitted,
MAE KENDALL, Secy. of Washington County.

The report of Irene C. Brodzeller, Clerk of the County Court was read on motion by Mr. Powell, seconded by Mr .Nehm, said report was adopted as read.

Resolution No. 29

Your Asylum and Home Committee begs leave to report that we have again investigated conditions at both the Asylum and County Home, and that both institutions were found in a very orderly and clean condition, the patients well cared for, and we have the highest recommendation to make for Supt. Geo. Blank and Miss Gonnering, and for all the help in their charge.

As we see by Supt. Blank's report, most crops of the farm were quite plentiful, the herd of pure bred holsteins was tested for Bang, and a new deep well was dug, which was paid for by the earnings of the institution without an appropriation.

Our committee, however, recommends that the old shed which was formerly used as a highway shop be removed from the Asylum premises, for it is a constant hazard as it stands since the county home has no separate income.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that this County board appropriate the sum of $5,000.00 for maintenance of the county home.

*Overdrawn

Dated November 19, 1935. Respectfully submitted,
C. C. KIRCHER, County Treasurer.

In order to give you a better view of your Treasurer's office, I am giving you a schedule of figures taken from the monthly statements mailed to you by the County Clerk.

In addition to the regular work, you will especially note the delinquent tax situation. The figures given or stated as delinquent taxes, is the accumulation of taxes sold from the year 1921 to 1934, and the 1934 taxes to be sold December 23rd, remaining unpaid.

Due to this increase in delinquents, all costs of the office have increased, namely: More receipts to be issued, more tax statements furnished to mortgage holders, such as banks, building and loan associations, and the government, through its Federal Land banks and Home Owners Loan Corporation and private investors. The advertising of the delinquent taxes, and the tax sales take up much increased space in newspapers.

The relief department and W. E. R. A. have caused an increase in the issuance of checks approximately 200%. To date this year there have been about 9,000 checks issued, which means time for issuance, signatures ,etc.

The sale and assignment of taxes to interested persons has increased. The matter of accepting partial payments on delinquent taxexs, figuring the interest between payments, is additional work, as well as taking over small balances from Guardians, where less than $500.00 is in their jurisdiction, and which alleviates the necessity of filing annual reports to the County Judge.

I have cooperated with the various tax districts in the collection and reduction of personal property taxes. We have mailed them statements of the delinquent items, instructing them with regard to penalty, interest and collection fees.

The system which was installed the past year, to give immediate accurate information for those requiring relative to delinquent taxes upon a certain property over a period of years, such as for abstractors, has already proven many times its worth. I collected one overlooked item dating back to 1922, where the interest accumulation was as much as the cost of the supplies to install same. In fact the W. P. A. are recommending this system as a necessity and a worthy project.

In addition, the office takes care of the insurance covering the court house and jail, records the collection of all fines paid to the justices of the peace, the collection of inheritance taxes, and emergency relief tax connected therewith, and aid to dependent children. Due to this office doing the collection of at lease half of all taxes generally collected by the 13 town treasurers, 5 village treasurers, and the 2 city treasurers, much correspondence is involved, such as replying to inquiries pertaining to delinquencies, information to appraisers of estates, corrections of descriptions, etc.

We now do business with 9 county banks, and the matter of reconciliation, interest on our average balances, as well as the payments to the State Deposit fund must be verified.

No doubt, starting with January, 1936, we will dispense old age pension, and this will necessitate additional record.

During my tenure of office I have attended three conventions of County Treasurer ,and will say that much valuable information for the office is accorded, and that much inconsistency among the 71 counties is prevalent with regard to penalties, rates of interest, etc. One county treasurer, president of the County Treasurers Association, compiled statistics with the assistance of sixty-six treasurers, and the result was interesting. One question was—In your opinion is the postponement of the tax sale a help or detriment in collecting taxes? 46 answered, a detriment; 7 answered, a help and 13 were undecided. I would state that the extension of taxes alone causes much inconsistency.

No doubt this information indicates the responsibility and importance of the Treasurer's office, and the necessity of additional help, and how the duties of the Treasurer have been enlarged. The recommendations of the Wisconsin Tax Commission can be carried out with your further co-operation. The matter of the appropriation for the office should be considered according to the conditions confronting same. The finance committee, consisting of Messrs. Schwalbach, Warnkey and Sell, is to be commended for their interest in the Treasurer's office and the splendid co-operation accorded the past year.

REPORT OF OAKS SANATORIUM COMMITTEE

The following report is made by the Oak Sanatorium Committee of the Washington County Board and the Institutions Committee of the Waukesha County Board and by the Trustees of the Oak Sanatorium to be submitted to the Board of Supervisors of Washington and Waukesha Counties.

The committees met in joint session at the Court House in the city of Waukesha on the twenty-fifth day of November, 1935. After a discussion of the affairs at the Oak Sanatorium, the committees and trustees agreed that the following recommendations should be submitted:

(1) That the management at the Oak Sanatorium should be changed and Dr. Steinkoff employed as a full-time physician at a salary of Twenty-four Hundred dollars, ($2,400.00) a year and in addition to that salary he is to receive maintenance.

(2) It is understood that the Institutions Committee will recommend to the Waukesha County Board that the resolution directing the institution of partition proceedings be rescinded.

Both committees in the meeting felt that the affairs of the Oak Sanatorium could be handled in a spirit of co-operation and harmony that no further difficulty would be had in the management of the institution.

This report is subject to acceptance and approval by both county boards and by the adoption of a resolution by the Waukesha County Board rescinding the resolution directing partition proceedings.

Report No. 4
REPORT ON BONDS

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors
of Washington County, Wisconsin

Your Committee appointed pursuant to resolution adopted at the November, 1935 Session to investigate on the matter of raising money for certain specific purposes through a bond issue or bond issues or other means does respectfully represent as follows:
The financing of the following proposed projects and expenditures were considered by your Committee:
(1) Erection of an addition to the County Highway Shop at an estimated cost of Twenty Seven Thousand Five Hundred ($27,500.00) Dollars;
(2) Purchase of highway machinery at an estimated cost of Thirty Thousand ($30,000.00) Dollars;
(3) Purchase of the Cosden Oil Plant at Slinger;
There was also the issuance of bonds to enable the County to carry its delinquent tax certificates.
The matter of the limits imposed upon the borrowing power of the County by Statutes was first considered.
Under the law, the County may not become indebted in any manner for any purpose to any amount which in the aggregate exceeds five per cent (5%) of the value of the taxable property therein, which is figured on the basis of the last equalized assessment thereof for State taxes made by the Wisconsin Tax Commission; which amount in this County is approximately Forty Four Million ($44,000,000.00) Dollars, placing the limit in this County at approximately Two Million Two Hundred Thousand ($2,200,000.00) Dollars, which, of course, considering our present bonded indebtedness does not affect any of the proposed expenditures.
Bonds may be issued to provide county buildings which would, of course, include the addition to the County Highway Shop, or the purchase of the Cosden Oil Plant, the amount of which unpaid bonds shall not at any time exceed one and one-half (1½%) per cent of the amount of the taxable property of the county.
Bonds may also be issued to aid the road and bridge fund, the amount of such bonds being limited to one per cent (1%) of the value of the taxable property in the county.
Bonds may also be issued to raise a fund for enabling the County to carry delinquent tax certificates, the amount of which, of course, is limited to the total amount of the tax certificates owned by the County.
Chapter 67.12 (Sub-section 1, 2 and 3) referring to temporary borrowing by municipalities provides: "That every municipality which is in temporary need of money with which to pay its current and ordinary expenses may adopt a resolution by three-fourths vote of the members of the governing body specifying the purpose and the amount of the loan and levying a tax for the same amount to provide the payment thereof and which amount shall be carried into the next tax roll and collected as other taxes are collected, proceeds of such tax must be kept in a separate and distinct fund and used for the sole purpose of paying such indebtedness. To evidence the payment of such indebtedness the municipality shall execute to the lender, its promissory note payable with interest on or before the 30th day of August, following the next tax levy.
Any of the proposed projects or expenditures might be financed in this manner. However, the amount involved would have to be included in the next budget.
Section 67.12 (Sub-section 9) provides for the temporary funding of delinquent taxes by a county or other municipality. This section, however, it appears, was passed to enable counties, whose credit has been somewhat impaired, to raise money and would not in this county be a practical means of financing any proposed project or expenditures.
Your Committee recommends that in the event the Board sees fit at this time to proceed with any of the projects considered, that they be financed either by the issuance of bonds for this specific purpose or by the borrowing of money under the temporary borrowing power conferred upon the counties pursuant to Section 67.12 (Sub-section 1, 2 and 3).

Respectfully submitted,

Report No. 5

WASHINGTON COUNTY HIGHWAY REPORT ON SNOW REMOVAL

Your Highway Committee does hereby report that Washington County's Snow Removal equipment is insufficient to cope with anything but very ordinary storms. That we have slightly over ½ as many plows as the average County in our Division. That we cannot open our County Trunk's in most of the Towns as fast as those same Towns can their own Town roads. That we have not been able to do sufficient widening of the main highways between the storms of the last few weeks to be in any position to cope with future storms and the snow being here as early as it is, makes this inability extremely dangerous.
In view of these difficulties we recommend that this board provide funds for additional snow removal equipment as soon as conveniently possible.
Dated this 24th day of January, 1936.

Resolution No. 69

WHEREAS, Washington County Highway Department is handicapped by lack of equipment to keep the various County and State trunk highways open to safe and convenient travel.
That two five to seven ton 4 wheel drive trucks equipped with snow plows and one large Track type tractor with plow are necessary to sufficiently equip said department.
THEREFORE: Be it resolved that the sum of $30,000.00 (thirty thousand and no hundreds dollars) be and hereby is appropriated to cover the cost of said equipment. The Highway Committee is hereby authorized to purchase such equipment immediately.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that to provide for the payment of the principal and interest of said notes on or before the 30th day of August, following the next tax levy, there shall be and there is hereby levied on all taxable property of said Washington County, in addition to all other taxes, a sum sufficient to pay the principal of $30,000.00 and interest thereon at the rate of 3% from the date of said loans to the date of the maturity of said notes, which tax after receipt of the borrowed money shall become and continue irrepealable and shall be carried into the next tax roll of Washington County and collected as other taxes are collected as provided by law, and when said tax is so collected it shall be kept in a separate and distinct fund and be used for the sole purpose of paying the principal and interest on the said notes provided for in this resolution.
