

Beechwood Business Man Called in Death

William L. Gatzke, 64, prominent village of Beechwood tavernkeeper, passed away at 2 a. m. Saturday, Nov. 27, at his home following an illness of two weeks. Cause of death was a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Gatzke was born June 12, 1873, at New Prospect. He attended the New France Lutheran school. His marriage to Miss Ida Theel of Leavenworth, Kansas, took place Sept. 16, 1916 at Leavenworth. The couple lived in Milwaukee where Mr. Gatzke was employed many years as a carpenter contractor, until between two and three years ago when he went into the tavern business in Beechwood.

Surviving Mr. Gatzke are his grief-stricken widow, one daughter, Emily, who is attending the Kewaskum High school, five sisters, Mrs. Fred Heller of Bonduel, Mrs. J. Bartel of Underhill, Mrs. Minnie Arndt of Beechwood, Mrs. Will Eblit of Plymouth, and Mrs. Fred Wasmuth of Cascade; two brothers, Frank Gatzke of Campbellsport, and John Gatzke of Plymouth.

Funeral services were held Tuesday, Nov. 30, from the Harder Funeral home in Milwaukee. The Rev. Paul H. Born officiated. Burial took place in Valhalla cemetery.

Miss Ruth Rosenheimer Married on Friday

In the presence of family members at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Rosenheimer in this village last Friday afternoon, November 26, at 3 p. m., their daughter, Ruth, was united in marriage to William E. Wiersma, son of Mrs. E. F. Wiersma, N. Downer, avenue, Milwaukee. The wedding ceremony was read by the Rev. Richard Odersley, pastor of the First Reformed church, N. 16th street, Milwaukee.

The bride was gowned in gubonnet velvet, designed on princess lines, and had a corsage of gardenias. Her sister, Mrs. E. Frederick Vilter, N. Stowell, avenue, Milwaukee, who was her only attendant, wore a floor-length gown of coronation blue velvet and a gardenia corsage.

John Visser, N. 17th street, Milwaukee, attended the bridegroom as best man. During the ceremony Lehman Rosenheimer, Jr. sang "Because." Mrs. Henry Rosenheimer played the wedding march.

The ceremony was followed by a reception, also at the Rosenheimer home. Guests from Milwaukee included Mrs. Wiersma, mother of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wiersma, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wiersma and E. Frederick Vilter.

The young couple left on a honeymoon trip in the East and upon their return will be at home at 2927 N. Prospect avenue, Milwaukee.

Mrs. Wiersma attended the Kewaskum public school, Milwaukee Downer college and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin. She had been employed in Milwaukee before her marriage.

Dated Dec. 1, 1937.

FEW DUCKS STOCKED AT MOON LAKE SHOT

Only 30 per cent of the mallard ducks stocked at Moon lake, now Mar. 1, the lake, in the town of Auburn, by the state conservation commission during 1937 were killed in Wisconsin, according to W. F. Grimmer, superintendent of game management. Of the remaining per cent shot out of the state only four of the bands attached to legs of ducks were returned.

It was because of the general difficulties involved in attempting to stock a migratory bird, that mallard propagation and stocking efforts at Mauth lake were discontinued at the end of 1932, Mr. Grimmer said.

Mr. Grimmer stated it was interesting to note that some of the ducks planted were shot only a few miles from the lake after a period of five years. One mallard duck that was stocked in 1934 by Frank Hopkins at Moon lake was shot during the 1937 season by Alfred Ciriacks, West Bend, near Kewaskum on the Milwaukee river. Mallard ducks stocked by the state at Moon lake were identified through the numbers on conservation department leg bands and furnish the bird biographies which are being compiled as a basis for future game management procedure.

At a special district meeting held recently the establishment of a two room school was voted down by a large majority.

Miss Laura May Trohig, assisted by upper grade girls, was hostess at the school Friday afternoon to members and prospective members of the Women's club of the district. The following officers were re-elected to serve for the coming year: President, Mrs. Joseph Nesel; vice-president, Mrs. Geo. Gilboy; secretary, Mrs. John Huck; treasurer, Mrs. Gertrude White.

Arrangements were completed to sponsor a public card party at the school on Friday evening, Dec. 3.

Following the business meeting a program of games was enjoyed. Awards went to Mrs. Lawrence Loehr, Mrs. George Gilboy, and Mrs. Gertrude White. Lunch was served from a buffet table decorated with lighted tapers and centered with a plate of autumnal fruit. The predominating color scheme of yellow and rust red was continued in tallies and prize wrappings.

Opening Game of Basketball Here Sunday Evening

The Kewaskum basketball team will open its 1937-38 Land o' Lakes league season Sunday evening, Dec. 5, in the local high school gymnasium against the strong Port Washington Maroons, a new team in the league, which is composed of players from Port's recent state high school championship team. The game will start immediately following the preliminary between the Kewaskum B squad and a team from the Port Washington Industrial league. The opener will get under way promptly at 7:30 p. m.

The local players have been practicing hard during the past two weeks and are in pretty good shape for the season's opener. The opening lineup will probably include Coach Ralph Kohn at center, Marx and Gibson at forwards, K. Honeck, Jr. and Stenschke at guards. Claus may start in place of one of the above mentioned or any one of a number of capable reserves.

Kewaskum also has a good reserve team which has a number of new members who show a great deal of ability. Attend the two fast games Sunday.

Last year the northern division of the league had six teams while this year it has nine. New teams are Alpentan, Menomonee Falls, Port Washington Maroons and Mayville. Campbellsport has withdrawn Port has two teams in the league. Teams back from last year are Port Washington State Banks, Grafton, Cedarburg, Hartford and Kewaskum in the northern division of the league.

The Lakes season opens to-night but Kewaskum does not play until Sunday. The locals again have their home games on Sunday evenings. Teams play each other twice.

Kewaskum is rated as a strong contender so plan to attend as many games as possible in Wisconsin's fastest stepping amateur league.

The locals will play 16 games according to the schedule made out by the league director, Martin C. Weber of Merton.

OFFICIAL SCHEDULE
NOTE—The following schedule is accurate and complete except that it does not contain Mayville's games as that team held back and failed to enter the league until after the schedules were printed. Watch for dates of Mayville's games and add them to the schedule after you have it clipped.

NEW SCOUT HEAD ELECTED
WEST BEND—Dr. K. K. Borsack of Fond du Lac was elected president of the Badger council of Boy Scouts of America at their annual meeting in the high school gymnasium here Tuesday night. About 150 scouts from West Bend, Fond du Lac, Horicon, Waupun, Mayville, Hartford, Ripon and Beaver Dam districts attended.

Creary butter production in Wisconsin during the past year was over 171 million pounds which was more than 7 per cent above the 1935 output.

LOCAL COUPLE IN GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Last Saturday, November 27th, was one of the happiest days in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Buss, East Main street, for it was the occasion of the venerable couple's golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. Buss, who is 78, and his wife, 73, held open house during the afternoon and evening to a large number of relatives, neighbors and friends. The evening was spent in the playing of cards. They were presented with a very beautiful large basket of chrysanthemums by the Ladies' Aid of the St. Lucas Evangelical Luth. church.

Mrs. Buss, before her marriage, was Miss Caroline See-eldt, a native of the town of Kewaskum. She was born on the See-eldt homestead which is still occupied by that family.

Mr. Buss was born in Germany and came to this country at the age of 12 years, settling in Milwaukee.

On November 27, 1887, the couple was married in the St. Lucas Evangelical Lutheran church here by Rev. F. Greve. Following their marriage they resided in what is now known as the Frank Kaas home, at the northeast village limits for 13 years. Then Mr. and Mrs. Buss occupied a farm at St. Michaels for 18 years and during the past 19 years have lived in retirement in this village.

The couple has one daughter, Bertha, who is at home. A son, Edwin, died in infancy.

Those helping Mr. and Mrs. Buss celebrate the event on Saturday afternoon and evening, who came to offer congratulations and best wishes, included the following: Ray Rautenberg and daughter of Milwaukee, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jaeger, Mrs. Jos. Jaeger, Emil Klumb and family of West Bend; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred See-eldt, Mr. and Mrs. August See-eldt, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Klug and son, Herman See-eldt, son Art, and daughter Molly, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Meilahn, Mr. William See-eldt,

Bedtime Story for Children

JUMPER THE HARE CONSULTS BUSTER BEAR

JUMPER THE HARE was sitting under a low growing hemlock tree deep in the Green Forest, where he could look out over the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Jumper was not feeling at all good that morning. No, sir; Jumper was feeling anything but good. In the first place, it was a long time since he had had a real good sleep. In the second place, he couldn't rest easily a minute even with his eyes wide open. All the time he felt as if his heart might jump right up in his throat any minute. And it was all because Reddy Fox had set out to catch him, and gave him no peace night or day.

"Old Mother Nature certainly takes better care of some than she does of others," thought Jumper, just a wee bit bitterly, as he watched Paddy the Beaver swimming about in his pond. "Now, there is Paddy, perfectly safe out there in the water, and here am I, not safe anywhere. It isn't fair. It certainly isn't fair."

Then Jumper looked and listened anxiously for the least sign of Reddy Fox. But all was quiet, and once more he began to think about the unfairness of Old Mother Nature. Now, that isn't a bit like Jumper the Hare. Jumper is almost as happy-go-lucky as Peter Rabbit, and takes things just as they come. It wasn't long before he began to feel a little ashamed of himself for having such thoughts. He thought of those long legs Old Mother Nature had given

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

By JEAN

SOME people would ask you how you were if they happened to pass by when you were drowning. "Hi, there. How are you?" they'd say, with a broad grin and a cheery wave of the hand. "I'm drowning," you'd answer. And ten to one (wanna bet?) they'd answer, "That's fine." They always do.

Personally, we think the question, "How are you?" should be reserved for hospital and convalescent cases. But for tea parties and casual meetings on the street a much better leading question is, "How much are avocados today?" or "Have you seen the new hats?" Something chatty, you know, that won't get you into a discussion of measles symptoms. Of course, you can leave out the leading question altogether. "Hello" is quite enough, and if no conversation comes naturally it may be followed after a tactful interval by "good-by."

"Hi, There. How Are You?"

But if you have friends who persist in the how-are-you habit, work up some surprise answers for them. "Yes, the weather's lovely today." "I give up. How am I?" "Broke and hungry." The last is the best. It may get you a meal or something.

him to take him quickly out of danger, and then he remembered how Paddy the Beaver has to get his food on shore, or most of it anyway, and how slow and clumsy Paddy is out of the water. The more he thought of this the more ashamed he grew of the thoughts he had had of Old Mother Nature's seeming unfairness and pretty soon he knew right down in his heart that he wouldn't change places with Paddy the Beaver if he could, not even to get rid of Reddy Fox.

He was still thinking of this when a stick snapped a little way from him and his heart gave a great, frightened thump. You see, he had grown so anxious and nervous that whenever he heard a stick snap or a leaf rustle he was sure it was Reddy Fox trying to steal up on him. Jumper held his breath and looked in the direction from which the sound had come. There, shuffling along and muttering to himself, was Buster Bear. Jumper grinned. It was a very great relief to see Buster Bear instead of Reddy Fox. You see, Jumper isn't the least bit afraid of Buster, because he knows he can keep out of his way. Buster knows it, too, and so he wastes no time trying to catch Jumper.

Jumper hopped out and sat up in front of Buster Bear. Buster sat up, too. Very funny they looked as they faced each other, one so very big and one so small, and both sitting up in just the same way. Paddy the Beaver had to laugh as he looked across at them.

"Hello, Buster!" said Jumper. "How do you like the Green Forest?"

Buster's little eyes twinkled as he grinned down at Jumper. "Pretty well, Jumper; pretty well, so far.

Seems to me you are looking thin. Yes, sir, you are looking thin. That ought not to be in the beautiful springtime in such a nice place as the Green Forest." Buster shook his head as if he didn't understand it at all.

"It's all your fault!" cried Jumper.

Buster Bear looked puzzled. "How is it my fault?" he demanded.

Then Jumper told him the whole story, how he had been sent to invite Buster to meet the other little people of the Green Forest, how Reddy Fox had tried to catch him, and then had been terribly frightened by the sudden appearance of Buster and had run, and then how he (Jumper) had run after him just for fun, and how all the little people were making fun of Reddy now, so that he was spending all his time trying to catch Jumper so as to get even. Buster's eyes twinkled more than ever as he listened.

"Perhaps I can help you," said he.

"Oh, will you? That would be perfectly splendid!" cried Jumper.

SEASON IS HERE FOR MINCE PIES

Pumpkin Pie Also Really Belongs to This Time.

By EDITH M. BARBER

EVEN the most modern of us have a few old-fashioned prejudices, and I admit to mine! Glad as I am to have most foods ignore local seasons, there are certain dishes that I, for one, am glad are usually reserved for certain months of the year. Mince pie is an outstanding example of a dessert which belongs with cold weather. While pumpkin pie might well be served at any time of year, it still belongs among our cold weather desserts by custom whether it is of the old-fashioned custard type or that even more delicate chiffon pie.

In a bygone day the making of mince meat in the early fall was just as common as fall pickling and preserving. Today, most of us are content to buy one of the ready-to-use mixes which, however, we may like to make individual through the addition of candied cherries, nuts, and bits of left-over canned fruit, with brandy or some other liquor for special flavor accent. It is a good idea to keep a covered jar in the refrigerator which may be gradually filled with any fruit or juice which remains after cherries, apricots, pineapple or other fruits have been served for dessert. This jar can be called upon to add additional flavor when the mince pie is in the making.

Pastry for mince pie should be good and rich. By the way, have you seen the gorgeous chromium rolling pins which can be filled with ice? The metal and the ice between them make it possible to roll rich pastry easily.

By the way, I had a pie which was new to me not long ago at a dinner party. Have you tasted egg nog pie, flavored as the name shows with rum?

Mince Meat.

- 1 pound lean beef
- 1/2 pound suet
- 3 large tart apples
- 1 1/2 ounces citron
- 2 pounds raisins
- 1 pound currants
- 1/2 tablespoon cinnamon
- 3/4 teaspoon mace
- 3/4 teaspoon cloves
- 3/4 teaspoon allspice
- 1/2 tablespoon salt
- 1 pound brown sugar
- 1 quart cider

Cover meat with boiling water and simmer until tender. Cut suet in small pieces and let stand in cold water 1 hour. Drain. Grind meat suet, apples and citron in the meat chopper. Add raisins, currants and spices mixed with the sugar. Add cider and cook slowly 2 hours, stirring frequently to prevent burning. Seal in hot, air-tight jars. When ready to make pies, add more chopped apples, water, cider or brandy.

Pumpkin Chiffon Pie.

- 3 egg yolks
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 1/4 cups canned pumpkins
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
- 1/2 cup sugar

Mix egg yolks, sugar, pumpkin, milk, salt and spices and cook over hot water until of custard consistency, stirring constantly. Soak gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Add to the hot pumpkin mixture and stir until dissolved. Cool and when mixture starts to congeal, fold in beaten egg whites and sugar. Pour into baked pastry shell and chill in the refrigerator until set. Garnish with whipped cream before serving.

Cheese Tarts.

- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon melted butter
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 3/4 cup walnut meats
- 1/2 cup currants

Pastry Beat sugar and eggs together and add the melted butter. Mix thoroughly. Add remaining ingredients and fill small tart pans which have been lined with pastry. Bake in a moderate oven, 347 degrees Fahrenheit, for half an hour.

Egg Nog Pie.

- 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin.
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 4 egg yolks
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 cup hot water
- 3 tablespoons rum
- 1/2 egg whites, beaten stiff
- 1/2 cup sugar

Whipped cream Nutmeg Soak gelatin in cold water. Cook egg yolks, sugar, salt and hot water in top part of double boiler until of custard consistency, stirring constantly. Stir in softened gelatin and when dissolved add rum and beat well. Allow mixture to cool and when it starts to congeal fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and sugar. Pour into baked pie shell and chill

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

By Roger B. Whitman

HOT WATER COIL IN A FIRE BOX

WITH hot-air furnaces, and often with house heating boilers, it is very common to obtain running hot water through a coil or similar arrangement in the fire box. There are several reasons why this does not work out. For one thing, the water in the heating coil absorbs heat so quickly that the nearby part of the fire is deadened. The fire then burns unevenly, with a bad effect on the heating of the house. One of my correspondents writes to me of his experience in this connection. He had used a fire box coil for several years, with poor luck, for several had burned out. On complaining to the maker of the heater, he was advised to substitute a separate coil burning stove for water heating. He writes:

"I followed the advice, and shall never regret it. In the last hard winter, I heated the house with two tons less of furnace coal, which I attribute entirely to the removal of the water heating coil from the furnace. I burn small coal in my water heating stove, but at least cost and in less quantity. I find it much easier to keep my furnace at house-heating efficiency. The house has been comfortable all winter; warmer than any of my neighbors', and with less fuel consumption. The theory of the furnace maker seems proven. It takes so many heat units to heat a house, and so many to heat hot water. If you use some of the heat units in the furnace for water, they are not being used for the house. The fire gets lopsided; hot on one side and cool on the other, greatly decreasing the efficiency."

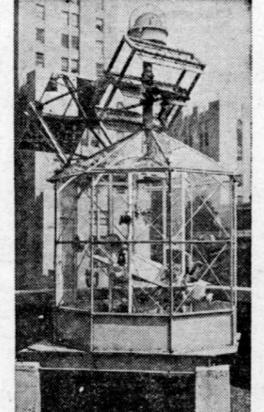

That theory is entirely sound. A furnace is supposed to be of the proper size for a particular house, and if some of the heat produced in it is taken away from house heating to use for heating water, there is less left for the real purpose.

There is another reason against the use of a fire box coil. The water cannot be prevented from overheating; as a result, steam is formed, and the water may be discolored by the throwing down of sediment. Steam in the hot water pipes causes unpleasant rumbling noises. What is more serious, there is a possibility that the excess pressure may burst the hot water tank. This is so common that plumbing and heating ordinances usually require that such systems be provided with an automatic relief valve to blow off steam.

A water-heating stove should be of such size and so arranged that the fire will need attention but once a day. In addition, it should be provided with a damper regulator that will shut off the draft when the water reaches the desired temperature—usually 140 degrees. This is plenty hot enough for all household uses, while at the same time it is too low a temperature to produce much, if any, sediment.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

Party Invitations Are Problem Here

DEAR Mrs. Post: Two sisters and their brother would like to give a big dance and have asked me to suggest an invitation to their party. I've really had great difficulty trying to compose this due to the three hosts' names. Written formally, each one on a separate line followed by "request the pleasure of your company, etc." makes the invitation so long. I wonder whether simply "Mary, Sara and Jack Brown request the pleasure, etc." would not be better?

Answer: I would suggest printing instead: Mary, Sara and Jack Brown hope you will come to their dance on Friday evening, February 23rd at 10 o'clock at the Blank Athletic Club Do say yes.

On the other hand if they would rather send formal invitations, the titles will have to be included and the following wording engraved:

The Misses Mary and Sara Brown and Mr. John Brown request the pleasure of (written in) company at a dance on Friday evening, the twenty third of February etc.

Invite Engaged People to Parties Together

DEAR Mrs. Post: Will you please explain how far the obligation of inviting engaged people together must be considered? We are asking a business associate of my husband to dinner on a Sunday and while there has been no public announcement made of it, we know that he is engaged to a young woman whom we have never met but of whom he often speaks. Must I ask her to dinner, too?

Answer: After the engagement is announced, then a hostess may not ask a man to a party without including his fiancée. This does not mean that at some occasion he may not happen to take a meal in her house. In your case I think I would ask him whether he would like you to invite her. It is possible that he would rather you wait until the engagement is announced and she can meet people as his fiancée.

Housewarming Defined

DEAR Mrs. Post: I realize that the term "housewarming" is given to any type of party as long as it is the first real one given by new owners or tenants. But is one kind of party more usually given on this occasion, and tell me, if there is, how you would suggest going about giving it?

Answer: It is rarely other than an informal late afternoon or early evening at home. Very simple refreshments are set either on the dining room table or on a card table in the living room. The principal feature is, of course, that the entire house is open for the visitors' inspection. And this means the whole house!

Greeting to Mary

DEAR Mrs. Post: Am I supposed to say "How do you do, Miss Brown," or even "How do you do, Mary," to a young friend receiving her mother when Mary happens to be a very good friend of mine whom I greet no more formally at other times than "Hello, Mary"? The party will be a big one and the invitations are formal and I have an idea that saying "Hello, Mary" upon arrival would be very bad.

Answer: You say "How do you do, Mrs. Brown" very formally, and with a sweet smile and in not too boisterous a tone of voice "Hello, Mary" or "How do, Mary."

Hands in Greeting

DEAR Mrs. Post: Etiquette suggests that a man wait for a woman to extend her hand in greeting first. But what is a man to do when a hostess receiving at a party for her daughter fails to put out her hand in spite of the fact that etiquette also says that a guest should shake hands with a hostess and her daughter in the receiving line at such a party?

Answer: If she does not hold her hand out to him, then he behaves as he was taught in dancing school when a small boy. In other words, he takes one step, cracks his heels and bows from the waist and says, "How do you do, Mrs. Brown."

Answer Own Bell

WHEN entertaining a young man and the door-bell rings and there is no servant to answer the door and the other members of the family are upstairs, should the girl go to the door or should the young man offer to go for her?

Answer: I think she should go in her own house.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Thumbtack Your Draperies to a Board.

TO GIVE draperies the smartly tailored effect obtained by the professional decorator, a valance board must be used. A straight one by two inch board will be needed. A small finishing nail in the top of the window casing near each end and screw eyes placed near the top of the back of the valance board will hold it in place as shown at A. Both side drapes and valance may be thumbtacked to the board and then be quickly hung all at once by hooking the screw eyes over the finishing nails. Think of the advantage

Cleaning Brassware.—Brass ornaments should be put into hot soapy water to which soda has been added and scrubbed with a soft brush to remove any polish that may have stuck in previous cleanings. Finish off by rinsing with clean hot water and dry with a soft cloth.

Concerning Mirrors.—Never hang a mirror where it faces a glare of light. The back of the mirror should be protected so that no light or water could possibly enter.

Ripening Bananas.—Green bananas can be ripened by placing them in a paper bag and keeping them in a dark closet for a day or two.

Kidneys With Apple Rings.—Cut three sheep kidneys in halves and skin. Fry lightly in 2 ounces of butter. Fry also as many small rounds of bread as there are half-kidneys, and a large cooking apple peeled, cored, and cut into rings. Place the rings on a hot dish, with a piece of fried bread and a half-kidney on each. Season and sprinkle with lemon juice. Put a scrap of butter on each and serve immediately.

When Mending Gloves.—Slip a thimble on your finger when mending gloves and the darn can be made very easily.

That Breakfast Omelet.—That omelet will not fall if a pinch of powdered sugar and a pinch of cornstarch are added to the omelet mixture.

Manipulating Velvet.—The usual method of pressing seams, especially in velvet, is to get a second person to hold one end of the material while you hold the other. Flatten out the two sides of the seam, then pass the iron along on the wrong side.

Advertising Did It

In 1869, when advertising was almost unknown, the total value of manufactured products in the United States amounted to only $3,385,860,354. As a result of creating a demand through advertising the value of our manufactured products increased over a period of 60 years to a total of $70,434,363,443.

Companies Incorporate to Limit Obligations

If you saw the words "Naanlooze Vennootschap"—N. V. for short—the name of a company, you probably would be stumped as to what it meant unless you belong to a Dutch family. In Holland, however, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, it would be simple. Naanlooze Vennootschap—means "Inc.," which is the abbreviation of "incorporated."

The British and Canadian "Ltd.," which stands for "Limited," and means the same as "Inc.," is more familiar. In France it is "S. A." for "Societe Anonyme." The Italian, Spanish, South American, and Mexican companies also have "S. A." for their tag.

Germany's designation for "Incorporated" is "A. G." of "Aktien Gesellschaft." Sweden's "A. B." is "Aktie Bolaget." Japan has "K. K.," which stands for "Kabushiki Kaisha."

The British term "Limited" is more expressive than the American "Incorporated." Companies are in-

Rachel, soon standing ready with lumps of ice wrapped in gauze, trying to look impersonal and yet concerned, was thinking in an odd, lost way: "She loves Holbrook, she loves him in that crazy possessive way she loves him so much and didn't care enough about me even to try to keep me? I wish I could understand her better. Queer, I've almost stopped thinking about her as my mother, it only comes on now and then." Aloud, "Here's the ice, Mrs. Cayne, if you'll hold it on your eyelids."

"Don't fidget—you're dripping it all over me. You are the most awkward girl; here, give it to me. Now go and see if Mr. Cayne's gone out. If he has, tell Mr. Holbrook I want to see him. If Mr. Cayne's still here, come back and tell me and don't speak to Mr. Holbrook."

Rachel hurried into the library. No sign of Mr. Cayne. Towers was coming from the drawing room where he had drawn the curtains for the evening. He said yes, Mr. Cayne had left just a minute ago, but he wouldn't be gone long, he said he was going to walk around the block and buy some cigars. Towers nodded knowingly and whispered, "He's sore as a crab."

"So Rachel tapped at Holbrook's door. "Mrs. Cayne wants to speak to you, Mr. Holbrook," she said, primly. "Is that you, Rachel?" came the boy's voice. "Wait a minute."

She opened the door and he beckoned her inside. The dandified dark green and gold brocade of his lounge suit was a bad contrast for the distress on his too-old, too-weak face. "I say, Rachel," he began, "does father pay you by the week?"

Rachel's first impulse was to say, "It's none of your business," but she reflected that this was her first chance to talk to the boy. "Yes, sir," she said, "he pays me by the week."

"Well, look, I'm in an awful jam, my allowance isn't due till the end of the month, couldn't you lend me something till then?" "How much do you want, sir?" "How much have you got?"

Rachel seemed to be calculating. "I could let you have five dollars, I guess," she said haltingly. "Oh, damn, I've got to have more than that. Haven't you got any savings?" "No, sir—but Towers and Lena have."

Keeping Up With Science

Earth Shaft Ten Miles Deep Needed to Solve Problems
Scientists Think Such a Project Is Possible
Rochester, N. Y.—Scientific triumphs of the future—from production of super-men to the conquest of cosmic rays—were forecast here at the annual dinner of the National Academy of Sciences.

When mankind has banished wars, science may hope for so ambitious a project as an international earth shaft 10 or 12 miles deep, said Dr. Arthur C. Parker, director of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences. Such a shaft, far beyond present depth to which the earth has been probed, will enable scientists to study earth structure down where the mysterious cosmic rays have no influence.

Romance in the Research. Calling the study of hormones, secreted within the body, a challenge, Dr. Parker said: "There is practical romance in this research for it means that the biologist of the future will have controls within his grasp that can produce the super-man or the super-woman, but whether man or woman will depend upon what derivative of cholesterol the bio-builder uses. One can imagine also what effect the use of this substance will have upon the writer of fiction. He will analyze the love between the man and the maid. She was filled with C27H45OH," the writer will say; "and he'll be energized by liberal amounts of C19H30O2, which my dear readers, is so powerful that it sprouts combs on capons, so you can see what it did to our hero."

Fuller understanding of how the mind works, as master of the body, was also forecast by Dr. Parker, who said: "We must look ahead for the true answer, though I am well aware that some psychologists will say that we can answer now. Still, I am skeptical enough to believe that the real answer to this question will be one of the most startling achievements of this century."

Scalped Woman Is Given Fine New Scalp and Ear
Chicago.—The case of a young matron who, after being scalped and losing her right ear, was given a new scalp and ear made from skin off her back and a piece of cartilage from her rib, was reported by Dr. James A. Cahill of Washington, D. C., at the meeting here of the American College of Surgeons.

Egg Yolks Colored as the Customer Likes Them
Ithaca, N. Y.—The scientific chicken breeder and egg farmer can now supply eggs whose yolks are colored to suit the customer's fancy, if he follows the advice of Prof. H. E. Botsford of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University.

Big Losses Due to Smoke
Washington.—Anywhere from 10 to 30 dollars is the annual loss sustained by each person in the United States because of the atmosphere, according to estimates made by the public health service. The smoke bill can be attributed to clothes cleaning, disfigurement of buildings, damaged merchandise, injuries to grass and plants, and the loss of light and ultraviolet light.

Too Many Kinds of Wheat
Washington.—More than 200 distinct varieties of wheat are grown in the United States. Efforts are now being made to reduce the number of varieties, to select, improve, and standardize the best ones, and to find varieties most nearly suited to soil and climatic conditions in the principal grain-growing regions.

Plant Engineering

Would Produce More Satisfactory Crops
Botanist Proposes Use of Growth Hormones
Los Angeles.—"Plant engineering" as an important aid to enterprising horticulturists was forecast by Dr. Frits W. Went, botanist of the California Institute of Technology, in an address here.

The speaker's play on words does not refer to mechanical engineering in the common sense, however. The distinguished plant physiologist really meant literally what he said, viz., the constructive engineering of living plants, with the aim of producing more satisfactory crops. Nominally this may mean the making of big plants where only little ones have hitherto grown; but actually by indirect reaction the plan may bring improvement in quality as well.

Would Use Growth Hormones
At this point Dr. Went proposes to use growth hormones, which are potent organic chemical compounds that may happen to be missing in the case at hand. He considers it not impossible that a vegetable dwarf of choice quality may be led to develop to unprecedented size. If hormone treatment can be made to solve the problem of size and rate of growth, then much greater freedom is allowed to the expert in pollination and hybridization.

In Step With Santa Claus

KEEPING UP with the Joneses is easy—it's keeping up with Santa Claus that has Sew-Your-Own in stitches currently. We got a peek at his wares, though, and frankly we copied some of his artistry. (You can see for yourself there's a "Christmasy look" about today's trio of fashions.) And happily you can do more than look and wish—you can make them realities the easy way: just sew, Sew-Your-Own!

Pattern 1412 is designed for sizes 32 to 42. Size 34 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material and 1/2 yard for contrast. Short length requires 4 1/2 yards. Pattern 1394 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards of 54-inch fabric. Pattern 1417 is designed for sizes 34 to 44. Size 36 requires 2 1/2 yards of 39-inch material; with short sleeves, 1 1/2 yards.

County Agent Notes

COUNTY AAA GROUP ORGANIZES FOR 1938

The county organization meeting of the Washington county agricultural conservation association will be held at West Bend on Saturday, December 4th, announces County Agent E. E. Skallskey. All counties in the state have elected their community representatives and are setting up the new organizations during the first two weeks of December. After the county organization meeting, all of the work of the 1938 program and the closing up of details for 1937 will be handled by the newly elected officers.

Directors of the county agricultural conservation association for 1937 include:

- Guido Schroeder, President
- Raymond Lepie, Vice-president
- E. E. Skallskey, Secretary
- Henry Gettelman, Committeeman

WISCONSIN'S GOODWILL TRAIN

Madison—Baskets of Wisconsin agricultural produce will be presented to President Roosevelt, the governors of 14 states to be visited by Wisconsin's 1938 Goodwill Train, and mayors of principal cities along its route, the committee in charge of arrangements for the train announced today.

The baskets will be presented as gifts from G. V. Philip F. LaFollette in behalf of the people of Wisconsin. They will contain cheese, potatoes, cherries, cranberries, apples, peas, sausages, cigars, and other Wisconsin products.

The Goodwill Train will leave here February 24 for a two weeks' tour of the South and East. Its purpose is to advertise the agricultural, recreational and industrial resources of Wisconsin.

Several counties have appropriated sums of money for exhibits on the train and the Wisconsin Cannery association has asked the use of an electric car for an exhibit of products in tins and glass.

NEW MILK HAULING REGULATIONS

Madison—Effective last Friday, an amended milk can order was issued by the department of agriculture and markets which postpones the date when all free cans must be withdrawn from producers from January 1, 1938, to April 1, 1938.

The prohibition against furnishing new cans which has been in effect since Oct. 1 is continued in effect, the department announced.

The effective date of other provisions such as uniform requirements on statements, including the showing of actual costs, is extended to April 1.

These extensions have been granted as a result of the hearing held in the state capital here Nov. 19, it was pointed out, and are intended to afford time for the adjustment to various methods of shipping and handling of milk and cream now in use.

THE FARMERS' FRUIT COURSE FOR 1938

The Farmers' Fruit Course has been planned for groups of farmers who desire to obtain more good fruit from their orchards and berry patches. It is the purpose of the course to interest and familiarize farmers with the best fruit growing practices so that those may be adopted on the farm and result in more satisfactory returns from the orchard and the small fruit patch.

The course will be conducted as a series of four discussion and demonstration meetings, two weeks apart, and supplemented in spring and summer by outdoor demonstrations in pruning, spraying, and grafting, and a county orchard tour in August.

The value of the course will be dependent upon the regularity of attendance; the suitability and comforts of the meeting place, and the competency of the teachers.

Pictures will be shown to illustrate each lesson.

Lesson I. Planning and Planting the Young Orchard

1. Purpose, location, site, planting plans.

2. Varieties to plant, source and age of trees, pollination.

3. Cultural requirements: pruning, mulching, fertilization, cultivation, cover crops.

4. Mouse and rabbit control; protectors, poisons, repellants, etc.

5. Windbreaks, their value, planting, stock, distances, care. (Note: Practically every orchard needs replacements and it will therefore be an opportune time this winter to get practical and up-to-date information before ordering and planting new trees next spring.)

Lesson II. Management of Bearing Fruit Trees

1. Pruning: Regular and off-year trees; rejuvenation of old high-headed trees; thinning the crowded orchard; improvement of poor varieties by grafting; getting late bearing young trees into bearing; training of young trees.

2. Fertilization and soil management; Purpose, methods, amounts and time of application of fertilizers; cultivation vs. sod mulch; livestock vs. orchards.

3. Pruning and grafting demonstrations in orchard (early spring) in connection with the pruning demonstration.

Lesson III. Disease and Insect Pest Control in the Orchard

1. Diseases which injure tree and fruit: Fireblight, apple and pear scab, leaf spot of cherry and plum, brown rot of plum, plum pockets, black knot, cedar rust, storage rots, etc.

2. Insects injurious to fruit and tree: Scale insects, curculio, apple maggot, codling moth, leaf roller, buffalo treehopper, tent caterpillar, borers, etc.

Control of pests: Orchard sanitation; orchard spraying, spraying program, spraying equipment; spray ring organizations, how they work; spraying costs; results.

Lesson IV. Small Fruit Culture

1. Place of small fruits in home and on farm, emphasis on strawberry and raspberry growing.

2. Site, soil preparation and management, varieties to plant, time to plant, planting distances, cane supports, pruning, pests and their control, winter protection.

3. Harvesting and selling

COUNTY TOUR—August or Sept.

Object of Tour

1. Visit outstanding projects of county members.

2. Demonstration: Picking, grading, packing fruit for market

3. Visit successful farm apple storages.

4. Study selling methods.

Washington county farmers who desire to attend the above orchard school should register with County Agent E. E. Skallskey so that he can arrange to have the schools where interest in them is strongest.

SEEK TO DIVERT POTATO SURPLUS TO FEEDING USES

A program to divert a maximum of 10 million bushels into livestock feed has been announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Federal and state officials announce that to encourage diversion of potatoes grown in 1937 into livestock feed, 25 cents per hundred pounds will be made to potato growers who divert into livestock feed, or sell for diversion into feed potatoes which they have grown themselves. Payment, it is officially reported, will be made only on potatoes at least one and one-half inches in diameter and grading U. S. No. 2 or better, except that a mixture of varieties will be permitted.

In order to be eligible for a diversion payment, a potato grower must make application to the county agricultural conservation office prior to Monday, December 6th.

The livestock feed diversion program, Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials indicated, will probably be most attractive to potato growers and feeders in the Colorado-Nebraska-Wyoming areas where livestock feed supplies are not adequate this year.

Diversion authorizations will be issued as soon after November 15 as practical, and any applications made by potato growers after this date will be considered only if the amount of potatoes previously authorized has not reached 10 million bushels.

Washington executives have instructed the agricultural conservation committees and county agricultural extension agents to cooperate in the administration of the diversion program. Application to participate in the program may be made at the office of the county agent, the county committee, or the state committee. Diversion authorizations will be issued by a field representative working with state and county agricultural conservation and extension offices. The potatoes it is said must be diverted within three months after the diversion authorization is issued. Diversion is defined under the program as feeding potatoes to livestock.

In order to obtain payments for diversion, the grower must submit a certificate of compliance within four months after the diversion authorization is issued. Before the potatoes are diverted the grower must have them graded and weighed or measured by a local field representative.

The production of potatoes indicated for this year is 398,735,000 bushels. The indicated production of 32,434,000 bushels in the 30 late producing states is nearly 47 million bushels greater than last year and nearly 25 million bushels greater than the average production in 1928-1932.

"The feed diversion payments are believed sufficient to encourage growers to feed potatoes better than culls to livestock or to sell them to other farmers for feeding," declares F. R. Wilcox, director of the Division of Marketing and Marketing Agreements. "It appears at present that because of poor pasture conditions and unfavorable forage crop prospects in certain localities within the late surplus potato states, there should be a ready outlet for potatoes as feed."

In the North Central potato area the diversion program covers all counties in Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin and 18 counties in North Dakota.

TUBERCULIN TEST

PENNY CHRISTMAS SEALS AN AID TO HEALTH

Penny Christmas Seals have provided tuberculin skin tests for more than 42,000 Wisconsin people, according to the report of the clinic department of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, whose annual Christmas Seal sale, to raise funds to continue its anti-tuberculosis work, opened Thanksgiving Day.

"Time was when there was so much tuberculosis that workers could shut their eyes, fire in any direction, and knock several points off the death rate," according to Miss Loraine Noll, chairman of the state Seal sale. "But the day of 'shoot in the dark' is past. Today stronger and more accurate methods must be employed in searching out the early case."

Tuberculin testing of large groups provides a modern method of detecting tuberculosis early. A reaction to this harmless skin test means that the germs that cause tuberculosis have entered the body. Further testing is necessary to determine if any of the germs have become active.

Group tuberculin testing is a non-painful method, completely safe, and requires only a few minutes of a person's time. The W. A. T. A. has conducted about 25 tuberculin group tests at high schools, homes and recreational centers this year.

Other W. A. T. A. activities are group tuberculin testing, Seal sales, including free chest X-ray studies, school service, and nurses' administrative education.

"Christmas Seal sale," says the Town Clerk. "They do more than buy and postage and the tuberculosis."

VANDENBERG'S PROGRAM

Michigan Senator's Plan to Give Honest Business a Chance . . . President Talks Peace with Utility Chiefs

Representative J. R. Mitchell of Tennessee (left), and Representative Marvin Jones of Texas, chairman of the house agriculture committee, discussing farm problems at a meeting of the committee to draft the new farm bill.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Vandenberg's Program

SENATOR VANDENBERG of Michigan didn't wait for the leaders of the Republican party to formulate a program on which to battle the Democrats. He broke out with a ten-point program designed to "give honest business a chance to create stable prosperity."

His ten points were: 1. An end to governmental "hymns of hate" and bitter attacks on business men.

2. Progress as rapidly as possible toward a balanced budget.

3. Amendment or repeal of the surplus and capital gains taxes and substitution of "incentive taxation" for "punitive taxation."

4. Amendment of the social security act to eliminate the "needless drain upon the resources of commerce and labor."

5. Revision of the Wagner labor law to make for greater certainty in "long range industrial planning."

6. Abandonment of the so-called wage-hour bill and substitution of legislation to protect states from the importation of goods produced by substandard labor.

7. Repeal of many of the President's emergency powers in order to free business from "executive despotism which is at war with every tenet of the American system."

8. Reasonable and practical farm relief, without bureaucratic controls, processing taxes, or price pegging, but with benefits for soil conservation practices, financing of exportable surpluses, and return of the domestic market to the producer.

9. Foreign policies that will keep America out of war through purging "an insulating neutrality" rather than sanctions.

10. "Frank abandonment of all anti-constitutional activities and intrigues which shatter democratic faith."

Peace Talk with Utilities

RESTRICTION of the construction and expansion activities of the privately owned public utilities being recognized as an important factor in the current business recession, President Roosevelt began a series of conferences with the heads of these concerns. He seemed to be in a conciliatory frame of mind and sought to lessen the utilities' fear of the effect of government policies, but without making any concessions. His first caller was Wendell Wilkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern corporation, and next day he talked with Floyd Carlisle of the Niagara Hudson Power corporation.

Though he appeared amiable, the President at the same time was sending to various congressional committees and federal agencies a report by the New York state power authority, whacking friends and agents of the private utilities for "propaganda" against public power development. It presented figures to show the government could produce water power at a much lower cost than private utilities could produce power by steam plants.

It was understood Mr. Wilkie submitted these points:

That there is a general fear throughout the country of government competition and interference with private utilities which can be subdued only by concrete reassurance from the administration.

That money for private expansion purposes and refinancing to obtain lower interest rates, which in turn would be reflected in lower power rates, is hard to obtain.

That the government had a right to sell power from its dams, but a basis for marketing it could be found without frightening the whole industry.

Goodyear, Discoverer of Vulcanization Methods

VISIONS of a rubber civilization haunted the brain of a debt-burdened inventor in 1853. The man was Charles Goodyear, discoverer of the vulcanization process for rubber, and he wrote a book about his struggles, his triumphs and his dreams which today is among the rarest of Americana. One of the very few extant copies is in the division of rare books of the Library of Congress and is among the rarities of mechanical literature, says a writer in the Washington Star.

Goodyear specifically did not advise eating rubber, nor wearing it next to the skin, but otherwise he proposed using it as the chief material in about anything man could need. He foresaw rubber books, rubber roofs, rubber streets, rubber sails and rubber ships, rubber pianos, rubber bridges, rubber violins, rubber boxing gloves, rubber saddles, rubber shoes, rubber harnesses, rubber canes, rubber dishes and rubber furniture of various sorts. The man's extreme enthusiasm might have been expected, for he had devoted his life to devising means for hardening the "gum elastic" whose strange properties first had attracted him as a small boy. His health had been broken, he was loaded with debts, neighbors looked on him as a harmless lunatic, his family had lived on charity—all in the pursuance of his dream.

After Labor Racketeers

FOR four months Eliot Ness, the young safety director of Cleveland, Ohio, has been investigating labor racketeering in Cleveland, especially in the building trades, and then he made a report of his findings that resulted in a special session of the Cuyahoga county grand jury to hear the stories of scores of business men who allegedly have been terrorized by labor union officials. Ness said these men were prompted to volunteer their information because of the security of their lives and the knowledge that many others were prepared to testify.

Eliot Ness

In addition to protests from business men that they were being shaken down, Ness also had numerous complaints from rank and file union men that their leaders had obtained dictatorial control of the unions and had used it for racketeering purposes.

This resulted in hundreds of men being thrown out of work, impeding legitimate business, and kept hundreds of thousands of dollars in new industries out of the city, the Ness report was said to have stated.

Governors Ask Tax Repeal

GOVERNORS of the six New England states, in conference in Boston, adopted resolutions severely criticizing the tax and tariff policies of the administration. They demanded repeal of the capital gains tax and the tax on undistributed corporate profits, and denounced the pending reciprocal trade agreement with Czechoslovakia as impeding the jobs of thousands of American citizens.

The governors who took this action were Lewis O. Barrows, Republican, Maine; F. P. Murphy, Republican, New Hampshire; George D. Aiken, Republican, Vermont; Charles F. Hurley, Democrat, Massachusetts; Wilbur L. Cross, Democrat, Connecticut; and Robert E. Quinn, Democrat, Rhode Island.

Trade Treaty with Britain

IN WASHINGTON and London it was officially announced that the United States and Great Britain had agreed to negotiate a reciprocal trade treaty, which has been sought by Secretary of State Hull ever since he started his reciprocal program in 1934. The negotiations are expected to begin before the close of the year.

Secretary Hull

lieve such a pact may lead to a commercial union of all English-speaking peoples and will be a powerful influence in preserving world peace.

London looks upon it as an instrument to form a front which all nations may enter later on conditions of most-favored-nations reciprocity, and therefore as an indirect reply to the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance.

Principles said to be already agreed upon provide that Great Britain would receive reduced American tariffs on textiles and coal.

In return she would grant the United States lower tariffs on foodstuffs, certain raw materials, iron and steel and other essentials of a rearmament program.

Immediate opposition to the proposed pact developed among the statesmen in Washington. Senator James H. Doolittle of Illinois, Democratic whip, protested against any British accord under the English pay off their defaulted war debt to the United States. He called the proposed pact "trade treason."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts Republican, served notice he would sponsor a resolution halting negotiation of all new trade treaties until congress can determine whether they are responsible for the current business recession.

Representative Allen Treadway, Massachusetts Republican, denounced the proposed treaty as certain to prove disastrous to American business. He warned it would throw "more Americans out of their jobs."

Rand Is Acquitted

JAMES H. RAND, JR., president of Remington Rand, Inc., and Pearl L. Bergoff of New York were found not guilty of violation of the Fynes act by a jury in the United States District court in New Haven, Conn.

The verdict was a blow at the government's first attempt to enforce the act, which forbids the transportation of strikebreakers across state lines with the intent of interfering with peaceful picketing.

Another Judge Wanted

SENATOR MINTURN of Indiana introduced a bill authorizing the President to appoint an additional judge to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago. That court has jurisdiction over the seventh circuit, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana, and has had one vacancy since the retirement of Judge Samuel A. Alschuler last year.

Both Senators Lewis and Dieterich of Illinois said they had no candidates for the place.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—"The best laid plans of mice and men" will go off at a tangent, it seems, even when one politically is numerically in supreme control of the national government. President Roosevelt called congress into extra session with very definite objectives outlined, and he repeated them in his regular message to the state of the Union. He wanted crop control legislation for relief of agriculture and he wanted wages and hours controlled by federal statute for the relief of labor. But congress, or a part of it, has turned out to be a balky mule. It has one foot out of the traces already and the driver is having a lot of trouble to keep the animal hitched.

Congress Is Balky

The above is by way of saying that scores of Democratic members of the house and many senators with seats on the majority side have come back from a summer on the hanks quite convinced that it is not popular with the voters to be a rubber stamp. I do not mean by that statement that the President has lost control of his party machinery, or that he can not crack the whip and get things done; I mean that instead of having a few recalcitrants within his own party to deal with, he now has many, and members of congress are about like coyotes—their courage increases as their number increases.

Looking Forward

It has been apparent during the last two years that congress was dissatisfied with the relief system built up by Secretary Ickes and the professional reliever, Harry Hopkins, works progress administrator. The requirements, especially for the Hopkins machine, have been met with what has come to be called "blank check" appropriations. That is, congress has passed a bill appropriating two billions or three billions or whatever was thought necessary by Mr. Hopkins. It was just as simple as that.

Now, however, some observers think they detect a change. They believe they see signs that congress will put an end to the "blank check" method of handling relief. As far as anyone knows now, the President again will ask for a huge sum to be distributed for relief through Mr. Hopkins—and that is when the battle lines will form.

The reason there is a prospect for a nice row on the relief question lies in the fact that a substantial number of Democrats and Republicans feel the present relief system is terrifically wasteful. They are desirous of seeing proper relief to the fullest extent, according to those with whom I have talked, but they believe relief should be handled locally. They consider that charity workers in the cities, towns and villages know better than some one in Washington who should be given food and clothing, and they are quite convinced the cost will be materially less. Since the federal treasury has to pay the bill, this group contends congress should take notice of the condition and correct it.

What the movement probably means is that there are a good many senators and house members who prefer the straight out dole to the wasteful work relief policies sponsored by Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes. Mr. Ickes was the sponsor of the "pump priming" idea, it will be recalled. He contended that public construction would prime the whole business pump, and thus start a busy business cycle. But the pump priming has failed to keep the big business pump going and so it is probable there will be few further attempts in that direction.

Congress, therefore, will be faced again with appropriation demands to provide food and clothing and likely the request for the funds will come from Mr. Roosevelt as heretofore—for a lump sum. If the number favoring the dole grows to any considerable extent, there may be a reversal of policy whether the President wants it that way or not. You see, in an election year (and all house members and 30-odd senators face election canvasses again next year) it is nice to be able to say to the voters that they are receiving something at the hands of their representative or their senator. The candidates can justify a break with the President easily, and with business sliding backward as is the case now, there will be plenty of relief needed for unemployed again. The voters can be told that they are being given charge of these relief expenditures and that they no longer will have to watch Washington bureaucrats waste the taxpayer's money. On the horizon, therefore, it is possible to see the line of cleavage between the New Deal and the old line Democrats leading to elimination of the dangerous lump-sum appropriation and a restoration of relief administration into the hands of local authorities.

There is one further consideration in the general relief situation that attracts attention. I think it is reasonable to assume that the far-flung relief machine which Mr. Hopkins has built up is permeated to the core with political appointments. It is only the usual political procedure national administration: Assuming, therefore, that there is such a political machine, it is hardly open to question that it is a Roosevelt machine. The picture then becomes clear: since numerous members of the house and senate want to control their own political destinies, they want control of the organizations for relief in their own jurisdictions. Further, if Mr. Roosevelt should want to seek a third term nomination, those Democrats who would oppose him would be quite powerless if they had to sit idly by and witness Roosevelt delegates picked from their own stronghold.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK... By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—Oberlin M. Carter, eighty-one years old, a gain appeals to the Supreme court in his incessant fight of 39 years for re-admission to the army and the voiding of the court-martial verdict which sent him to prison for fraud. Powerful influence has backed the former captain and his friends call him "the American Dreyfus."

Capt. Carter Again Seeks Vindication

The case against him, on charges of fraud involving many millions, was one of the notorious scandals of the McKinley administration. He had been in charge of river and harbor reclamation at Savannah.

Handsome, gifted, of a distinguished family, Captain Carter was second in scholarship only to Robert E. Lee in all the history of West Point. A newspaper account of March, 1889, reveals him at Savannah just before the turn of his fortunes:

"Captain Carter was an exceedingly popular man in club circles and among his numerous female acquaintances. He was polished in his manner, exceedingly cordial to all and ran toward the rapid set. He was a very fashionable dresser."

"He generally appeared in three or four suits of clothes daily and never failed to don his evening suit for dinner. In the morning he wore his business suit, but by lunch time he appeared in his bicycle suit. After taking a spin about the principal streets of Savannah for a couple of hours, he next appeared in his driving suit. Late in the afternoon, he would appear in his riding suit."

"In the yachting season, he was far in the lead of other followers of the water. He had seven distinct ways of shaking hands."

The quick-change record, or the hand-shaking or something upped him to the job of helping man the teacups at the American embassy in London. As he prepared to leave Savannah, there were routs, assemblies, fetes and army blow-outs to honor him on his departure.

Seeing him off at the boat was Commander E. Gillette, a salty, weather-beaten old sea dog. Captain Carter's gush of affection embarrassed him. The captain insisted that the commander make use of his house.

The old commander was inclined to suspect over-generous persons. He pondered the captain's conduct and then went to the office of the engineering corps.

On a map, he saw a retaining wall of masonry spotted up as having been built at a cost of $7,000,000.

Then he strolled down the river, looking for the wall. It wasn't there. He kept on exploring. He reported to the war office that $7,000,000 had been spent for nothing more than marks on paper.

Commander's Suspicions Are Aroused

THE courts awarded to Mrs. Matthey Astor Wilks, daughter of Hetty Green, the entire estate of her brother, the late Col. Edward H. R. Green, estimated as between $60,000,000 and $80,000,000. This, with a similar amount inherited from her mother, and the fortune bequeathed by her husband, makes her, according to all current estimates, the richest woman in the world.

She is much like her mother. Sixty-six years old, she lives in an unpretentious house on "Electric hill," in Greenwich, Conn., with a few servants and a ten-year-old collied dog named Prince—as did her mother in her later years. And like her mother, she does her own marketing, driving to town every day or two in a small car.

The late Matthew Astor Wilks was a great-grandson of John Jacob Astor.

Hetty Givens were married in 1909, in her mother's flat in Hoboken, Hetty Green, Hetty Green.

was quoted by the newspapers as saying to the groom: "Matthew, you are sixty-five years old and you have the gout. Some day my girl is going to have $5,000 a day. I want to be sure that she is marrying a man who will help her take care of her money."

She has managed nicely. If her $160,000,000 is bringing 3 per cent, that's not $5,000 but $13,178.10 a day.

For twenty-seven years she has lived in the house near Greenwich. Her husband died in 1926. Her fortune consists of many blocks of real estate in St. Louis, Boston and New York and railroad and other securities.

She has no box at the opera, assumes no grandeur of the reigning dowager and lets Greenwich—highest per capita wealth in America—run itself without her aid. Her participation in public affairs consists mainly of her annual contribution to the Greenwich Firemen's association.

Sports Broadcasters. SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Somebody said that the events—the one Graham Namee saw and the one actually took place.

But, alongside the present flight would sound like the dulcet twitters of a timid love bird as compared with the fast ravings of John McCullough.

Cobb's brag of the lowered percentage of serious football accidents this fall. But oh, think of the radio description of the season's suffering from nervous exhaustion wrecked vocal chords, violence of loud words to the moon, complete collapse, even madness.

You'll be passing the rest sanitarium, and, as the wind burst outward, you'll hear something like this:

"Oh boy, boy! you one tremendous bust, Irish Goldberg, ming his way from the red line right through the black reference! Nothing can stop him! But don't get worked up. You hear is merge a complete microphone orator meeting checker game between two inmates and reverting to form."

Virtues in Scales. SOMETHING I read in only the folly of killing every snake on sight, without investigating the snake's character, brought a lot of letters from readers who said like snakes.

Even a so-called venomous may have his better side. Sassa, in the old local edition, you could get a drink only of dire emergency, such as a bite. So every property store kept a rattlesnake on premises to serve the customer the only time a drug store ever refused to bite a strong-ginger was when he was all wrapped up in accommodating the local trade.

And what though it was that led Eve astray in the garden? He may have longed into the world, but wouldn't he missed a lot of spicy reading matter in newspapers if he hadn't?

Yep, I plead guilty to thinking occasional charitable thought, any decimated and ransacking I feel that way about old line publicans and mustache cupped woolen pulse-warmers.

Political Predictions. WE TAKE the opportunity to announce that the Literary Digest, or rather its journalistic successor, will not conduct a political year's congressional and state elections. The burnt child dreads the pop!

Let others go around taking votes, but the way the Digest feel now and, in fact, have felt since last November, they don't start a canvass to prove the two and make four. Because here—where if it should turn out here and two merely make two more Marx brothers or a set of Siamese twins?

Anyhow, the business of the cookware predictions on half-estimates doesn't seem to be finishing these days. Figures are, but the citizens who furnish figures may do so, either intentionally or just for the sake of laugh. The rise of candid candidizing—say, we just thought that word—proves that a graph of things as they are mightier than a lot of statistics predicated on what the stars may or may not do—probably won't, when the time comes.

Forgotten Stars. ONCE interviewers interviewed half the business covers the name in letters of flame above all the marquee. One prescriptive tycoon catered to the permanent vanities, press waited upon her, courtesies besieged her then, while she bill collectors desire her signature and they like to have it checked. Speak of her to the generation, and somebody will say "Who? Spell it, please."

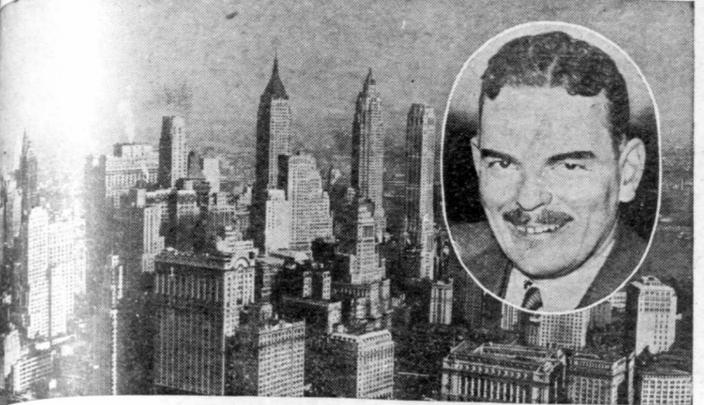

She is all through, all washed. But, the dear husband, wife and slipped, will be the person in town to hear the news. Having traveled a road, it's a sure thing he'll be there. She's the most tragic and one of the most pitiable figures—found in a corner—Hollywood. She is a place called Hollywood. She is one of the best, men and women who, ten years ago, or even five, were glittering stars in movie light.

Color of Negro Babies. Negro babies at birth are white, white instead of pinkish white, the case with white babies. The pigmentation in the skin is the same that of freckles and does not develop until the baby is exposed to light.

Sausages in Two Groups. Dry sausages may be divided into two groups: cervelat and salami. Salamis are more highly seasoned than cervelats. There are hard soft types of both.

DEWEY, THE "RACKET SMASHER"

York's Aggressive State's Attorney May Be G. O. P. Presidential Timber . . . If He Doesn't "Stumble."

JOSEPH W. LABINE

YORK'S racket-busting Messiah may be the Republican party's Messiah as well. A 45-year-old political "clean-up" from Owosso, Mich., who stalked both the "big game" and organized crime in the underworld, Dewey is a man whose mind is as sharp as a razor. He has worked up a reputation as a convalescent, and he is now between two fellow workers to form a new party.

among those few colleagues in crime who knew his identity. The rest of the huge mob reported to subordinate henchmen, and no questions asked.

Must Start at the Bottom.

Dewey had decided to overlook the prostitution racket, temporarily at least. Prostitution had been the chief interest of unsuccessful "clean-up" campaigns in the past; to strike against it now might cost what little public confidence he had obtained. But in the end he followed tradition. When you can't get information about those at the top, you must start at the bottom and work up. Prostitution was at the bottom, the most commonplace of the rackets.

Dewey did not know Luciano was the kingpin. He may have had a hunch, even though Luciano was "Mr. Ross" at the Waldorf-Astoria and was a most inconspicuous character. Just as he ensnared "Waxie" Gordon by making raids on the strength of evidence which might turn up later, so did he "put the finger" on Luciano.

In the early morning of February 1, 1936, twenty higher-ups were seized in a raid so secret that it gave the underworld a bad case of jitters. Next day came another swift, secret raid that brought 125 shrieking, kicking women to the Woolworth building "singing school."

The first real break came through Dave Miller, a small-time racketeer who "sang" because his heart was bad and he wanted to be home with the wife and kids. Then came the remains to be seen. Meanwhile the nation's Republican eyes are looking to the Empire state, from whence cometh their strength.

G. O. P. Gives Blessing.

Meeting in Chicago immediately after the New York city election, members of the Republican national committee unofficially placed their blessing on Dewey as a young man likely to go places. Among his supporters are Representative Martin of Massachusetts, Col. R. B. Creager of Texas, Daniel E. Pomerooy of New Jersey and Mrs. Ralph A. Harris of Kansas. Chairman John Hamilton and Senator Borah have been equally enthusiastic.

Others, quite logically, look upon Mayor LaGuardia as good G. O. P. presidential timber. But the "little flower" would not gather rural votes like he gathers them in New York. He is short, pudgy, outspoken. He has an Italian name, which falsely connects him with the Fascism he so roundly denounced in his recent battle with Hitler. That a man of Fiorella LaGuardia's strength and ability should suffer because of these personal matters, is indeed unfortunate. His Reform administration has been just as Messianic as Tom Dewey's racket-busting.

But whether it be Dewey or LaGuardia, the Republican party sees its victory in New York's election as noteworthy. Next year's gubernatorial election looks favorable, they say, with Tammany licked and New Deal Democrats either sullen or indifferent. But the undeniable truth is that LaGuardia's remarkable victory is due in large part to his alliance with the new Labor party, an alliance which may or may not function in the state election.

He's Typically American.

Dewey's typical Americanism should preclude the necessity of such strange bedfellows as Labor and the Republican party bunking together in a wholly unnatural brotherhood. For Dewey is a man who—say his supporters—has the background, family connections and unsullied political record to insure popularity.

He came from a family of editors, his grandfather, George Martin, having founded the Owosso Times in 1887. Grandfather Dewey was a Vermont product, a third cousin of the admiral who "took" Manila harbor. Tom Dewey's boyhood was that of any other midwestern child, part of it spent in his dad's newspaper office. At the University of Michigan he didn't join a fraternity but was telegraph editor of the Michigan Daily and made a name for himself in vocal work.

While studying music and law at New York he met attractive Frances Eileen Hutt of Sherman, Texas, a grandniece of the Confederacy's Jefferson Davis. Miss Hutt was a mezzo contralto, and a good one. She climaxed a stage career by carrying the prima donna role with George White's Scandals in 1927. Next year she married Dewey, who by this time had permanently tabled his operatic ambitions in favor of the law.

Just as Mr. and Mrs. Dewey are typical Americans, so are their children, John Martin, two, and Thomas Edmund, Jr., five. They're the kind of youngsters you'd like to believe represent a cross-section of America's coming generation.

Whether he becomes a candidate for governor or President, Tom Dewey is probably destined to live the rest of his days on the public payroll. Right now, following a post-election rest in Bermuda with Mrs. Dewey, he's planning big things for the state's attorney's office.

The famous "singing school" will be continued and in all probability many more New York hoodlums will receive vocal instruction from its capable instructors. The prosecutor's office will be open 24 hours a day, every day in the year. Dewey's men will be "riding the tail of the police wagon," in his own words, gathering evidence before the criminal's trail can cool.

Perhaps, by such tactics, the Owosso "boy scout" can continue the record he established as special prosecutor—conviction of 71 of 73 racketeers he brought to trial!

Western Newspaper Union.

Fiorella LaGuardia, New York's reformist mayor, another man whose Messianic qualities have not been overlooked.

Waxie" Gordon, whose career as a Nemesis of crime began when he was 21. Medals, widely known lawyer and United States attorney for lower New York, engaged the young barrister to prosecute Dewey's efforts against the notorious "Waxie" Gordon.

In 1933, Dewey's efforts against the Michigan school teacher's union, which displayed his talent for the courtroom legal procedure. He arrested Gordon and the other principals before his office had had time to conduct a full investigation; he burnt child dealers.

Waxie, a beer baron whose power was that of Al Capone in Chicago, had an income of $1,616,690 in 1933, according to internal records. Like his color-mates in the racket, he kept few secrets. Dewey's investigations merely made known to the public the financial standing he had never before.

In a short period late in 1933 Dewey was United States district attorney for lower New York, Medina, Pa., and a successor was appointed by President Roosevelt and the Owosso lad went back to practice, a field which was paying him about $50,000 a year when he accepted the Hercules task of cleaning Manhattan's streets in 1935. That job was worth $100,000.

Grand Jury on Rampage.

Started with a non-conformist jury, an independent bunch of men who defied the Tammany attorney and set out to get to the bottom of a crime business was mulcting New Yorkers out of millions of dollars each year. Dewey got plain mad when witness after witness refused to testify, fearful of punishment at the hands of the gangster's gunmen. Several delinquent jurors were under the thumb of underworld spies in the attorney's office.

The press and public chafed at the situation, the jury asked for a prosecutor. District Attorney Dewey rejected all their nominations, and Dewey, whose indignation had not been forgotten. It was Governor Lehman's intervention that caused Dewey's eventual appointment on June 28, 1935. The job had started.

When Charles "Lucky" Luciano was arrested, Dewey dubbed him "Big Noise." So did "Tom the Boss" and Little Davy DeLoach, who were among Luciano's henchmen. From his splendid apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria Luciano ruled New York's rackets, and he was a man of mystery whose name must be whispered even women, whose vocal chords warmed up under the promise of protection. The evidence gradually took shape; the phantom Luciano came to light as a flesh-and-blood character. He was secretly indicted in March.

Big House for "Lucky."

"Lucky" fled to Hot Springs, Ark., where he was nobly indignant when arrested. Returned to New York, he was slapped in The Tombs under $350,000 bail. When the trial arrived, Dewey made it clear that he was not after prostitutes and other underlings.

"I want the big shots. Luciano, sitting away up at the top in his apartment at the Waldorf as the czar of organized crime in this city, and his assistants who, like him, lived on the earnings of these women's bodies."

Luciano drew 30 to 50 years and his assistants were given equally strong terms. If what remained of the gang planned revenge on state's witnesses, they were dissuaded by the judge. He threatened to demand the maximum penalty if any of Dewey's "singers" were harmed.

A climax to the campaign against organized crime arrived November 2, this year, when Dewey was swept into the district attorney's office over his Tammany opponent. It was a triumph over the spoils politics which has gagged New York justice for years. To vanquished Tammany, Dewey's victory was a sting almost as severe as Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia's re-election on the Reform platform. Whether the tattered tiger will recover its strength by the time next year's gubernatorial election rolls around,

Foxy Little Terrier For Tea Towels

Terry, the Terrier, will dry your dishes with the same "punch" he displays when rolling glasses and hurdling silver. It will make your dish-drying a joy just to see his jolly self on the towels you use. These motifs require so few stitches, so little floss, they're economical and ideal pick-up work. Single, outline and cross stitch make this splendid embroidery for a gift. In pattern 5746 you will find a transfer pattern of six motifs averaging 5 by 8 1/2 inches; material requirements; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern, send 1¢ cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to the Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

Increased by Advertising

In 1889 the per unit of population value of manufactured products in America amounted to $39.60. For the year 1929 the per unit of population value of manufactured products had increased to a total of $579.70. Advertising created the demand that called for the employment of three to four times the number of workers and reduced the cost of products to consumers.

"WHY COME TO SCHOOL EARLY?"

I don't see why some pupils come to school at six-thirty or seven in the morning. I should think it is plenty early to be here at eight-thirty. There is an excuse when the boys or girls must come in to town with the milk trucks or the factory employees, but there is no excuse for boys or girls who live in town or who drive to school with cars to get here much before nine o'clock.

If a child stayed home a little longer he might be of a little assistance to his father or mother. I'm sure there is enough work around the house to keep everybody busy for a little while each morning.

There is no one (teacher) here to discipline pupils at 7 o'clock and that gives pupils too much opportunity to "snooze" in other people's desks. The "snoozers" are usually the ones who have nothing to do during the day but read newspapers and magazines because they will probably be able to come to school early enough the next morning to get their work for the day. Pupils who are here too early in the morning are a nuisance to the janitor or teacher who comes early to work. The children "hang around" so that the worker is bothered or detained and can't work. Therefore the early "snoozer" is, again, not needed.

Six or seven hours a day at school is plenty long enough for any boy or girl. Do they come early to avoid the rush for a seat? One is reserved for them; they needn't hurry. And, I am sure, no parent sends his child early to get him out of the house. They want them to be early enough but not two hours ahead of time.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The junior geography class is studying the causes of various kinds of mountains, plateaus, plains and hills, how to distinguish between them, and their elevations. They are also studying how various mountain ranges have been very hazardous to people.

This being the end of another six weeks the freshman English class has changed from their grammar workbooks, "Adventures Wise and Otherwise" to their text, "Prose and Poetry." Monday in class we began reading a drama, "The Trysting Place," by Booth Tarkington. Miss Busch gave the pupils parts in it and they enjoyed it immensely.

The junior American English class is reading the always popular form of literature, the novel. They are doing a class project of the philosophical of Nathaniel Hawthorne, "The House of Seven Gables."

The American history class is studying about how European complications brought into being the Monroe Doctrine, which attempted to hold the new world aloof from the old.

The general science class has spent quite a little time working out various experiments. Some of them were: How can the food materials in food be determined; how does the sap travel through a plant, and several others. They are now near the completion of "Providing a Good Food Supply."

The physics class is now studying the Nature of Heat. We have found the different sources of heat, the difference between heat and temperature, and the various types of thermometers. Class members are performing experiments concerning heat and expansion. We also studied about an American, Benjamin Thompson, a practical scientist who is credited with the first careful experimentation on the nature of heat.

The social problems class is working on the Negro problem. Two races cannot live on the same soil without having difficult problems. The Negro race has made amazing progress during the last sixty years although their housing conditions, educational facilities, and economic status still are unfavorable to the white man.

The advanced typing class is making a detailed study of standard letter forms as used in business offices.

The senior bookkeeping class has learned how to fill out the cash receipts journal and the cash payments journal.

The senior shorthand class has finished reviewing and has begun the study, "Secretarial Training."

GRADE NEWS

INTERMEDIATE ROOM—
We divided our reading period into reading clubs according to the rating ability. Now we are not reading material we cannot understand.

One of the reading clubs went to the depot to ask Mr. Schaeffer questions about time tables and railroad bulletins on Tuesday.

We drew names for the exchange of Christmas gifts.

OFFICE NEWS

We are sorry indeed to learn that Emily Gatzke's father passed away last Saturday. It is hoped that his passing will not effect Emily's attending school.
Report cards were issued on Wednesday of this week. Parents are urged to carefully and thoughtfully consider the work of their children as revealed in the report card grades.

The operetta, upon which Miss Lea, the cast and choruses have worked so hard, will be given on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, December 3 and 4. We know that you will enjoy every moment of this fine entertainment.

SOCIAL NEWS

Remember that the students of our high school are giving an operetta tonight and tomorrow night. Most of the students are participating and after working on the operetta two months, it should be a success. However, you can help to make it more of a success, if you attend.

The cast this year is, indeed, a large one. The costumes they wear certainly are true to those of Spaniards. The chorus also makes a colorful picture, as each member wears a Spanish costume.

The stage has been attractively decorated, as the result of several people's work. Mr. Furlong and the manual training boys have contributed a large part and Audrey Koepke, Eleanor Bartel, and Sylvia Maedke have done their best to make the stage look attractive.

Because so many people have given a part of their time in order to present this musical comedy, won't you give up part of your time to see the results of their efforts?
