This week end, Feb. 5 and 6, a fox hunt, sponsored by the Campbellsport Sportsmen's club, will be held in and adjoining the Mauthe Lake (formerly known as Moon Lake) state game refuge several miles northeast of here. It will be under the supervision of Fond du Lac County Game Warden Charles H. Schlumpf. A similar hunt was also held last week end.

For some time freshly killed pheasants have been found near fox holes by Dr. F. E. Romaine, who has charge of several near the refuge, and upon investigation he found fox tracks leading into the Mauthe Refuge where hunting and trapping are prohibited.

The foxes have found the refuge a safe place to den and apparently have increased to quite a number. Additional hunters will be stationed on all sides of the refuge to kill any foxes that may be driven out.

State Amateur Basketball Tournament at Hartford

The annual Mid-State basketball tournament under the direction of M. C. Weber of Merton will step up and be known as the State Home Talent amateur tournament.

Each year since the meet began in 1930 the team entry has increased and from a wider range; last year 20 teams participated and they came from nine counties.

The leading teams of four county and sectional tournaments entered and arrangements have already been made to hold six and possibly seven of these meets in various sections, sending the top teams to the state affair.

The meet will be open to all the leading amateur teams using only home talent players; those bona-fide residents within 10 miles of the town or city they are registered to play with.

All teams entered must have been organized before January 15th and all players shall have participated in five or more games.

The teams from cities with a regular athletic director or those entered in the State Municipal Recreation tourney will not be included in the Hartford meet.

Rules and regulations will be mailed out some time next week although the close of entry will not be until March 1. Teams will not be paired according to strength or drawing power but by an even chance drawing. Officials not used by any of the teams during this regular season will be selected.

The city of Hartford with a fine auditorium, ample dressing rooms, practice gym and other facilities has taken a deep interest in these past tournaments and undoubtedly will be a fine place to start this state wide event.

Birthday Ball Saturday Evening Well Attended

President Roosevelt's birthday ball, held jointly by Kewaskum and Wayne last Saturday evening in the Kewaskum Opera house was well attended, 197 tickets being sold, which netted a sum of $23.05. Lobel at West Bend by local chairman, Frank Hepp, and Frank Wiestor, Wayne chairman, to add to the new national foundation for the study, treatment and cure of infantile paralysis. Due to inclement weather conditions the crowd at the local dance was not as large as it might have been, although everyone spent an enjoyable evening.

Reports from West Bend are that County Chairman Lobel was well pleased with the co-operation given him in all parts of the county and he wishes to thank the chairmen of the various villages and cities as well as the public who attended the birthday dances and aided a worthy cause.

CRIPPLED TEAM LOSES TWO GAMES

LOCALS' WINNING STREAK HALTED BY GRAFTON TEAM

After winning four straight games the Kewaskum basketball team's streak was broken last Sunday evening in the home floor by a fast Grafton quint, the score being 31 to 27. This was the visitors' second win over the team this season.

Because there was never more than one or two baskets separating the teams, the contest proved a very interesting one for the spectators. As in the first meeting, the quantity, not quality of the Grafton team, was decisive in winning. Their squad was composed of 10 men, nearly all of equal ability, which enabled the coach to insert an entire fresh team into the battle, which he did frequently. Thus, by alternating teams, Grafton was able to continue a very speedy pace, too much for Kewaskum to maintain with only enough men for one team.

Unquestionably Kewaskum would have scored another easy victory with Gibson, Kohn and Dorn in the game. The absence of these three greatly weakened the team. Lack of interest by Kohn and Gibson has kept the team, a first place contender, down in the league race.

The first half of Sunday's game was mainly defensive with Kewaskum in the lead, 5 to 2 at the quarter and 9 to 8 at the half. Grafton's reserve power began to show in the third period, in which they forged ahead, 19 to 17. The visitors gained a lead of another basket by the end of the game, 31 to 27. Had the shooting eyes of the local players been up to their usual standard the game would have been won.

UNDEFEATED KEWASKUM BEES DOWN GRAFTON CUBS

The Kewaskum Bees remained undefeated for the season as a result of their 23 to 15 victory over the Grafton Cubs of the Land o' Rivers league in the preliminary Sunday. Kewaskum had no trouble at all in downing the visitors. At the half the locals led, 17 to 3, which enabled them to take it easy in the second period and let Grafton make a game out of it. Mellus was high scorer with 14 points for Kewaskum.

MALESOVICH LEADS MAYVILLE TO VICTORY

Led by Bronko Malesovich, star half-back on the University of Wisconsin's great football team last fall, the Mayville city team handed Kewaskum's badly crippled team its second Land o' Lakes defeat of the week Wednesday evening in the local gym. The final score was 47 to 39.

The game was one of the fastest seen here this season. Mayville, with frequent substituting, maintained a whirlwind attack all through the contest which Kewaskum, having only five men, could not keep pace with. However, the team forced the visitors to the extreme to hold their early lead. Kohn, Gibson and Claus were missing from the local lineup which again turned a probable victory into defeat. It seems each game that Kewaskum just can't get its entire team together—if one isn't missing, the other is. The absence of players is entirely due to their own lack of interest.

Although he did not play the entire time, whenever he was in the game it was all Malesovich. After his team forged ahead at the start and led 11 to 7 at the quarter, Bronko was inserted into the game and led the visitors to a 29 to 18 margin at halftime. In the second half the team played an even terms with Kewaskum outscoring Mayville by one basket but the early game lead was too much to overcome for the tired five. At the third quarter the score was 39 to 29 and in the final period the locals gained a basket with the game ending 47 to 39. The five men who played the entire contest for Kewaskum deserve credit for the fight and spirit shown against the odds.

Malesovich, with his left handed back shots, sank 9 field goals and 2 gift shots for 29 points. Honeck and Stensche led Kewaskum with 11 and 10 points respectively. Both teams made 5 out of 9 free tosses.

WEST BEND MAN IS KILLED AT PLANT

Melvin Buche, 35, fell through a trap door to his death in the whirling blades of a hydroelectric generator on Wednesday night of this week, Feb. 2, at the West Bend Woolen Mills, a mile east of West Bend on the Milwaukee river.

His body, one leg mangled, was found near the water wheel more than two hours later by a fire department rescue squad and electric company employees.

Buche had been employed as a stationary engineer at the Wisconsin Gas & Electric Co. plant at West Bend for more than 15 years. It was part of his duties to turn off the substation generator nightly.

At about 9 p. m., accompanied by John Kuehlthau, 16, son of W. E. Kuehlthau, northern division manager of the electric company, he went to the substation.

Buche entered first. Kuehlthau said he heard a splash and when he entered found a trap door in the floor open and Buche missing.

Funeral services for Buche, who is survived by his wife, will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at St. John's Lutheran church, West Bend.

BARTON HANDS KEWASKUM BEES FIRST LOSS OF YEAR

Led by big Potter, 6 foot 6 inch star of the West Bend city team, which plays many of the outstanding teams in the country, and Puestow, both of whom scored 17 points, the Barton Washers gave the Kewaskum Bees their first trouncing of the season in the first game Wednesday. The score was 44 to 18. The Bees were not at full strength because of the absence of several players. Dorn and Werner played only a few minutes because they had to play in the entire game against Mayville and Schmidt, L. Rosenheimer, Schaefer and C. Miller were missing. Besides Potter of the West Bend city team, Barton was also strengthened by Weiss of the West Bend Aluminum Co. team. Lineups and points scored:

Barton Washers—Potter rf, 17; Puestow lf, 17; Weinert c, 2; Wiedneyer rg, 6; Weiss lg, 2. Kewaskum Bees—Harbeck rf, 6; Hablich, lg. Kewaskum—Harbeck and Marx, rf; Mellus, lf; H. Rosenheimer and C. Miller, c; Weddig, rg; Prost, lg.

FIRST PLACE PORT WASHINGTON BANKS AND CAMPBELLSPORT PLAY HERE SUNDAY NITE

Two of the biggest games of the season will be played in the local gym this coming Sunday evening, Feb. 6, when the league leading Port Washington State Banks will play Kewaskum in a regular Lakes game and the Campbellsport village team will battle the Kewaskum B team in the preliminary, starting at 7:30 p. m.

The Port team has held first place all season in the league, losing only two games and winning ten thus far and is not to be confused with the Port Maroons. The team coming here Sunday played the widely known state champion Oshkosh All Stars of the National Professional league, composed of former university stars, last Monday evening and gave them a fair run. Also, in a recent game the Port team lost by only one basket made in the last minute against Wisconsin's other great team, the Enzo-Jels of Sheboygan, victors over the Oshkosh team in a game this season. The State Banks beat Kewaskum in their first meeting and the locals will try hard to be one of the few teams to beat the visitors by giving them a stiff battle. This is their only game here this season and may result in a surprise.

A good battle is also due in the preliminary when the best selected players in Campbellsport from the village league will play Kewaskum's second best—the Bees. Only a quarter admits you to these two high class games. Be sure to attend. This will be the second last game of the season.

Lineups: Grafton—Liebenstein, rf; Spaeth, lf; Dickman, c; Mytell, rg; Hablich, lg. Kewaskum—Harbeck and Marx, rf; Mellus, lf; H. Rosenheimer and C. Miller, c; Weddig, rg; Prost, lg.

A MAN'S WORLD?

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Mr. Husband, have you ever complained when the little wife stayed late at bridge club and made you fix your own dinner?

Have you ever chafed over a stack of dirty dishes while the Missus enjoyed a vacation at the lake?

You'd better take it and smile, Mister, because things are looking bad for the Man of the House. Woman, using her wiles and wisdom, is getting a strangle hold on the nation's purse strings and edging her way into almost every field of activity once marked "For Men Only."

The time may come when a struggling young business woman asks the man of her choice to love, honor and obey, to keep house and raise the children. All of a sudden—after it's too late—we're realizing that American women are in a fair way to dictate how tomorrow's social structure shall be formed.

Today's women hold—or expect to inherit—70 per cent of the nation's wealth. With such a financial weapon in their power, it is only fair to assume that politics and industry may soon be in their grasp.

Figures Are Overwhelming. Eighty per cent of America's $104,500,000,000 outstanding life insurance has been assigned to women. Since the proud beauties average a six per cent longer life than mere man, they're in a fair way to collect most of it. Moreover, women constitute 49 per cent of the 15,000,000 stockholders in American corporations. They hold titles to 40 per cent of our homes and control 85 per cent of the national buying power.

Once they gain a foothold in the business world, determined women usually succeed. The following list of salaries paid top-flight women executives two years ago is far above average, but it will make many a male wage earner jealous:

Sarah M. Sheridan, vice president, the Detroit Edison company, $27,702; Edna Newton, editor, the Conde Nast Publishing company, $28,865; Helen Neuschaefer, secretary, A. Sartorius & Co., $30,000; Sophia R. Lottitt, Providence, R. I., laundry company head, $36,000; Blanche Green, president, Spencer Corset company, $57,629; and Valeria Bonham, president, Valeria Homes, Inc., $40,000.

Most women workers aren't high-powered executives, but their aptitude for traditional men's jobs is amazing. A Cadiz, Ohio, woman spent 23 years in a coal mine, and a Minnesota woman works beside her husband as a "lumber jill" in the North woods.

Perhaps the most outstanding woman today is Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek, wife of China's ruler and often considered the real behind-the-scenes boss of the Chinese "republic." She is in charge of air forces in the current war with Japan and is said to have executed several minor officials for accepting bribes.

Women in History. And why shouldn't women take an important role in world affairs? Mrs. Charles A. Beard, author of some men who politely stand up jury service observed that fewer women were disqualified for lack of knowledge of court terms than men.

Women, thousands of them, pack into subways, street cars and suburban trains each day in metropolitan centers, competing with men on even terms for supremacy in commerce, industry and politics. Where will it lead?

"Women are more honest than men in admitting they don't know the answer to a question," he said. "Men try to guess at the answer; women just say they don't know."

In New York a prominent judge explains that when women are helping decide court cases, the attorneys for both sides need to sharpen their wits, since ladies of the jury will not bow to emotionalism like men. Surprising, isn't it?

Man Offers Rebuttal. At this point, since Mr. Husband probably feels pretty downhearted, it's pleasing to run into a friend like Sinclair Lewis, the novelist, who says women are not ready to rule America.

"Women have been too prone to interfere with things," he says. "They have consistently rushed into all sorts of reform movements and made everyone very uncomfortable. Prohibition was a neat little job put over by the ladies. Look what it cost the country and the havoc it created before the law was annulled. We're still suffering from the effects of it."

Although Mr. Lewis will not find total agreement on his prohibition argument, most men will concur that women are upsetting the social apple-cart by demanding equal rights. While insisting on being given all the privileges of men, they have not accepted the responsibilities. That—at least—is the opinion of some men who politely stand up

"traditionally and unsoundly considered of low money value."

They're Strong Haters. Point three (and here's a good one, Mister!) is that women are not the suave diplomats required for success in business. When it comes to real hate, women are tops, ac-

According to experts in the British divorce courts. Men, being tougher, are just meek second-raters. The learned experts explain that the cruel streak in feminine makeup comes out especially when the object of their hate is another woman, proving that women will never be successful in business dealings with other women. The same experts say that men forget more quickly. Women, like elephants, will never rest until they get satisfaction, if they think they've been wronged.

The fourth point comes from testimony given by the working girl herself, an energetic young Boston secretary who rushes home with an armful of groceries each night. She's a housewife. "How much does my salary really mean to my family?" she asks. "A good three-fourths of it is wasted on such expenses as a maid, extra food, luncheons, carfare, clothes, laundry, etc. That could all be cut out if I stayed home and did the job nature fitted me for. In other words, for about $10 a week, I'm depriving my youngsters of their mother when they need her most, and working myself into a nervous stew in the bargain."

"And anyway," grumbles her husband, "it ain't fair. The fact that my wife and several million other women are working keeps my salary down. She gets home late every night and I eat canned beans for supper. The beds are never washed and the house looks like a shambles. If this foolishness doesn't stop pretty soon I'm going to—"

"Okay, Mister," answers the wife, "why don't you try washing dishes yourself now and then?"

Which makes a fellow suddenly realize that women always have, and always will, direct the destiny of mankind.

DORIS DENE'S COLUMN

Hasty Secret Marriage Solves No Problems, but Makes Many.

DEAR MISS DENE: What do you think of this problem: The girl is eighteen, the boy is twenty-two. The boy is not in a position to marry yet although he has steady work. The girl feels that he must marry her soon in order that she may be happy. The danger is that he is very high-strung and if she turns away from the one she loves, there is a whole crowd of other men waiting to snap her up. Would it be possible for these two young people to marry without their parents' consent?—F. E. L.

ANSWER—Tell the girl that if she wants to be happily married, she must certainly wait until her hero is able to support her in ordinary comfort. However much she thinks she can endure, herself, in the way of poverty, she can have no idea of what an effect the situation will have on her husband.

No man is capable of loving a woman romantically and tenderly if she is a handicap to him from the moment he marries her. However heroically he strives to be understanding, and just, he is bound to feel resentful, after a while, over the fact that he was persuaded into matrimony when his salary was not yet equal to the job.

Tell the boy that if his lady is so highly strung that his opposition to marriage plans will send her off on wild parties with a crowd of other fellows, then she isn't yet ready for marriage. You can't hold a flimsy young thing by making her repeat the marriage lines. No girl is true to a man merely because she is married to him. Either she cares for him specially and above everybody else in the world—either she has a loyal nature and will stick to him because of that—or else she is bad marriage material and it will go no good to lead her to the altar in the hope of changing her ideas.

As for a marriage without the parents' consent—that has never been a practical plan of procedure. It involves secrecy which starts marriage off on the wrong basis. It means that there will always be an unpleasant aroma about the whole situation. It causes endless complications and leads to much petty gossip and suspicion.

DEAR DORIS DENE: I am a woman of fifty-five and have reached the age where I want some fun, after all my years of work and worry over the children. I am comfortably well-off, my children have grown up, my husband is dead. I have a great many young men friends who take me dancing, etc. My old friends criticize me for my actions but as I am extremely young for my age and do not look like the mother of two grown-up children, I don't see why I shouldn't enjoy myself as I see fit. I don't get along with men my own age because they are all dull and stay-at-home. Please let me know your opinion.—Young Fifty.

ANSWER—Presumably you pay for the young men's entertainment, and in return for that you get the pleasure of being taken out, and of being flattered by the youngsters who like to have their amusements without spending money on them. In a case like this, nobody loses.

But in the end the middle-aged woman who engages in a fierce struggle to hold on to her youth, loses a great deal. She loses the chance to find some peace of mind and some real companionship for her old age. She loses the friends of her own age who cannot sympathize with her in her pursuit of pleasure and who drop away from her because they no longer find her congenial.

Surrounded by sycophantic youths who are willing to make pretty speeches if they're paid for them, she is flattered out of all sense of proportion. She thinks of herself as a budding young deb, and she shuns the society of those whose tastes she is most qualified to share. No one can blame the woman of fifty for wanting some pleasure still in life. But if she chooses unsuitable and unbecoming pleasures, she surrounds herself with false friends. She attracts all those who are willing to companion her for the sake of what they can get from her.

Too often she is an object of ridicule to the very people she is befriending. Because she will not admit that she has past her teens, she will listen only to those who are willing to soothe her vanity—and naturally she doesn't find that band of admirers among her true friends. You can be young all your life. You can keep a young spirit and a young heart. You can enjoy the friendship of young people. You can make yourself beloved to young and old with your clear mind, your tolerance, your understanding and your interest.

But you cannot dress yourself up in imitation of what you were at sixteen and hope to recapture the glamor of youth. The more you absorb sycophantic flattery into your system the less clear your mind becomes. The more you insist on being flattered, the less tolerant you are of those who won't play up to your vanity. The more you think about looks and the necessity for keeping up a flamboyantly youthful appearance, the less interest you have in other people and their lives.

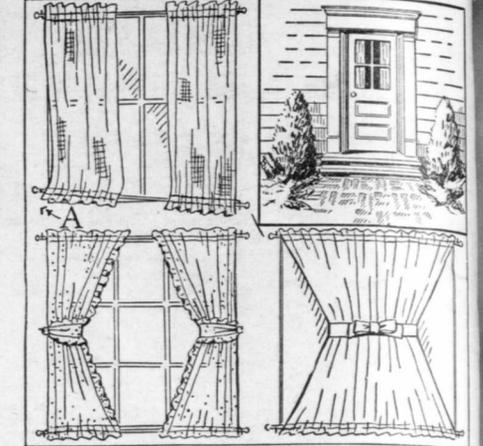

With the result that you prepare a lonelier old age for yourself than if you'd accepted the fact of your fifties gracefully and had chosen interests and occupations which would have kept your mind active but not jaded with artificial excitements. © Bell Syndicate, WNU Service.

Curtaining Your Front Door.

YOUR front door greets your friends before you do. Is it dressed to look its best? Here are some simple rules that will be useful in selecting the material and style for front door curtaining.

Choose a fabric that looks well on both sides and that harmonizes with the outside color of your door as well as with the color scheme of the hall or room into which it opens. A simple net curtain material or plain silk are good to use but if your door is white on the outside think twice before you choose the usual ecru or pongee color. White net or silk of a color to match the shutters or the trim of the house will look infinitely more attractive and will not be too conspicuous. The curtains may be made double with a different color on the inside if needed. Pale yellow is another color that is always safe to use as it gives the effect of light shining through the door.

These curtains should be firmly anchored both top and bottom so that they do not blow about and catch in the door when it is opened and closed. Both bottom and top rods may be fastened over hooks as shown here at A. Every homemaker should have

Strange Facts

Elephants Without Trunks

THE largest of the true seals are known as sea elephants. Full-grown bulls are sometimes 25 feet long and weigh over 2,000 pounds. They are called sea-elephants not on account of their size, but because the ends of their noses are so shaped as to resemble short, wrinkled trunks. Their hair is gray except for a patch of white on their necks and they have long tusks. Sea-elephants were once common all through the Pacific ocean, but their fat bodies yield so much oil that they have been hunted mercilessly. Now they are found only in the South Pacific ocean.

Next to the sea elephants the largest of all the seals are the sea lions. Steller's sea lion, which is common throughout the North Pacific, sometimes exceeds 10 feet in length. The short ears of sea lions differentiate them from true seals; also their necks are longer. Since their forelimbs are triangular paddles and their hindlimbs are web-toed feet which do not turn back like seals' feet, they can use all four limbs on land. They can easily climb up rocks and cliffs.

In the United States the most familiar sea lions are the California sea lions, almost all of which are found along the coast of California. They are active and intelligent, and they can be trained easily to do tricks, such as juggling and balancing balls on the ends of their noses. Unlike most trained animals they seem to enjoy showing off their accomplishments.

Like the sea lions, the fur seals are not true seals, but eared seals, and they are sometimes known as sea bears. They differ from other seals in having a coat of thick, soft, brown underfur which we know as sealskin. The outer coat is composed of stiff grayish hairs which are removed when the fur is dressed. © Britannica Junior

Your Talent

EVERY man, every woman, every child has some talent, some power, some opportunity of getting good and doing good. Each day offers some occasion for using this talent.

As we use it, it gradually increases, improves, becomes native to character. As we neglect it, it dwindles, withers, and disappears. This is the stern but benign law by which we live. This makes character real and enduring, this makes progress possible, this turns men into angels and virtues into goodness.—James Freeman Clarke.

TIPS to Gardeners

Start Them Indoors

TOMATO, cabbage, broccoli, egg plant and pepper crops usually prove more satisfactory when they are started indoors from seed. The gardener thus may use seed of a known variety from a dependable source.

About eight weeks before plants are to be set in open, sow seeds a quarter-inch deep in good soil in a regular florist's flat. Water thoroughly but not too frequently—preferably on bright days.

Good sunlight and good air circulation are important in preventing "damping off." Keep temperature fairly even at 70 to 75 degrees. When young plants are about one and one-half inches tall, transplant to a larger box or cold frame, spacing about three inches apart.

If the plants are grown in a box, place them indoors in the shade on six or eight mild days to harden them off. When plants are set in open soil, space them far enough apart to allow for full development.

For Chest Colds

Distressing cold in chest or throat, never safe to neglect, generally eases up when soothing, warming Musterole is applied.

Better than a mustard plaster, Musterole gets action because it's NOT just a salve. It's a "counter-irritant"—stimulating, penetrating, and helpful in drawing out local congestion and pain.

Used by millions for 30 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Approved by Good Housekeeping.

Frank Merriwell at Fardale

When Bart Hodge, a vain youth of sixteen, alights from a train at Fardale, he stumbles over a half-blind dog and in a rage kicks the animal. The dog's owner, Tad Jones, a small, shabby boy who supports his widowed mother, denounces him. This nettles Bart and he slaps Tad. Frank Merriwell, an orphan of Hodge's age, prevents him from further molesting Tad. Although the two do not come to blows, Hodge sneeringly says they will have to settle their differences. Hodge consults Joe Bemis, truck driver for the town, and Merriwell had come to Fardale to attend Fardale academy. While John Snodd, about his baggage, Merriwell, accompanied by Tad and his dog, Snag, start walking to Snodd's place. Presently the Snodd truck, with Hodge driving, rumbles down the road and kills Tad's dog.

'Why,' said Frank, after he had paid the taxi driver, 'how did you get that impression, Mr. Snodd? If you are Mr. Snodd.'

'I am,' said the farmer. 'My man, Joe Bemis, said you told him you'd rather walk than ride with him.'

Merry smiled. 'But that was because I wanted to stretch my legs after a tiresome train trip. It wasn't because I objected to the truck, sir.'

'And that other feller—Bert Hodge—he said you made a squawk at the deep end because he stepped on Tad Jones' old dog by accident.'

'Oh, I see,' Frank's smile grew broader. 'Well, did he tell you, also, that he kicked the dog and slapped Tad for objecting to that?'

The man's eyebrows lifted and came down again. 'Huh? Why, no, he didn't say anything about that, but he did say Tad got sassy.'

'Maybe, Mr. Snodd,' said Tony Acero, 'he no tell-a you he run over that dog-a on the hill when Joe let-a him drive-a the truck.'

'Hey? What's that, Tony?' Snodd's eyes had widened in surprise. 'Run over Tad's dog? No, he never mentioned that. Did it hurt the dog much?'

'Only just kill-a him,' said Tony. 'This-a boy come get-a me to fetch-a Tad and his dead-a dog home. Now maybe you have-a to pay for that dog-a, Mr. Snodd.'

With which consoling remark, he let in the car's clutch and drove away.

'Why now, shucks!' said John Snodd, pulling at his chin whiskers. 'That old dog was half blind, and he wasn't licensed anyhow. He wasn't worth two cents.'

'He was worth a great deal to that little boy, sir,' said Frank. 'Tad's all broken up over it. His mother, too.'

Snodd shook his head soberly. 'Now that's too bad. I'm sorry it happened. Bemis had no business to let that Hodge feller drive. But I don't believe either of them knew the dog was run over.'

'Maybe they didn't,' allowed Merriwell, 'but Tad had to jump for the ditch to get out of the way himself, and he just made it. I didn't admire the way Hodge grinned over that. It didn't seem like a joke, to me.'

'You're right,' agreed the farmer. 'I'll give Bemis a dressing down for letting that boy drive the truck.' He beckoned to Frank.

'Well, come on in, young feller. I've had your trunk took up to your room. I'll show you where it is.'

It was a comfortably furnished and pleasant room. Neatness made up for style and taste. That was the first thing Merry noticed. Then he discovered there was running water, which Snodd had piped from a spring on higher ground. And there were electric lights, with power drawn from the line that supplied the academy. From the windows the academy buildings could be seen amid the trees, less than a fourth of a mile away.

Stripped to the waist, he was getting rid of the dust and grime of the train journey when somebody knocked on the door. 'Just a moment,' he called, grabbing a towel and using it vigorously.

When he opened the door a little and peered around the edge of it he was surprised to find that the one who had knocked was a strange boy with a whimsical, smiling face.

'Hello!' said Frank. 'Hello,' said the other. 'My name's Barney Mulloy and my room's the next one to this. Like yourself, I'm here to break into Fardale academy. I've been hearing you wear a high hat, and I thought I'd like to look at it—if you don't mind at all.'

'Come in, Mulloy,' said Merry, opening the door wide. 'But the hat's in my trunk and I haven't unpacked it yet.'

'It disagrees with the rumor that you had it on when you arrived in town,' chuckled Mulloy, accepting the invitation to enter. 'But then, I don't believe in all I hear.' His quick eyes surveyed Frank's fine torso, clean, strong arms and genial face. 'And it's not much of a sissy you look like, either,' he added.

'If that's one of the rumors you've heard,' laughed Merry, as he shut the door again, 'I'm going to brand it as pure hodge-podge.'

Barney Mulloy clapped his hand over his mouth to smother a whoop of appreciation. 'Hodge-podge is right,' he agreed. 'My window was open when you arrived. What I heard led me to believe Mr. Hodge had misrepresented you, Merriwell. That's why I butted in on ye so soon.'

'You're as welcome,' said Frank, 'as a certified check. Take a chair and be comfortable while I'm dressing.'

He liked this lad on whose tongue lay a slight touch of Irish brogue. 'Now how's it happen you're one of the late-comers, like myself?' Merry explained, as he sat down. 'My guardian—was sick. Otherwise I'd been here when the school opened.'

'Oh, it's a guardian you have?' 'Yes, you see my father and mother are both dead.'

than I am you are, my lad. My good mother, saints rest her, is gone, but I've got a father living that's as fine a policeman as ever walked a beat. And it's his plan that I'll have a better education than he picked up in old Limerick.'

Barney said it proudly, and Frank liked him better still. A spark had been struck; they had clicked. 'But there's a bit of trouble,' Mulloy went on. 'Maybe I'll not get into this school now.'

'Why, how's that?' 'Oh, I neglected to send them notice I'd be coming a little late. Now the dormitories are full and I've been scratched off the list.'

Merry whistled. 'Well, Barney, something will have to be done about that.'

'I'm afraid it can't be. It's not much encouragement I got from the dean when I saw him today.'

'Now look here,' said Frank. 'My Uncle Asher has an old friend in the academy here. His name is Horace Scotch and he's a professor. I'm going to see him tomorrow and I'll talk to him about you. We'll have to find a way to get you back on the list, Barney. I'll do my best.'

It was so unexpected, so friendly and generous, that Mulloy's quick tongue was silenced for a moment.

'Now That Was Different, Barney.'

An odd look, half smile and half frown, sprang into his Celtic face. He stood up again on his sturdy legs.

'It's a sweet mess of lies Bart Hodge told about ye, Merriwell,' he said, 'but maybe you won't want to dirty up your hands on a snake. If that's the way you feel, just leave him to me.'

With true Irish spirit, Barney Mulloy was ready and eager to fight for a friend, and he had picked Frank Merriwell for a friend in short order. But Frank promptly declined Barney's offer to silence Bart Hodge in the manner he had proposed.

'That,' he said, laughing, 'certainly would make me look like the sissy Hodge said I was. I've been brought up to fight my own battles when fighting is necessary, but I never go hunting for trouble.'

'Oh, yes?' said Mulloy, his eyes twinkling. 'Then what made ye jump in quick as a wink when you saw Mr. Hodge kick a dog and slap the boy that owned him?'

'Now that was different, Barney. Nobody but a poor fish could have stood still and let him get away with that.'

Barney nodded his head. 'Now I've got your number,' he said. 'So I'll sit on the side-lines and do the cheering. It's a notion I've got that the show will be good when it comes off.'

Somebody was playing the piano in the big front room when they came down to supper. Through the open door Merriwell got a glimpse of the back of a slim, fair-haired girl whose hands were fluttering like white butterflies over the keys. Only a glimpse as he walked past the door, but not many young girls could play like that in these days of canned music and the radio, and he was interested.

'Who's that, Barney?' he asked. 'A pip,' said Mulloy, grinning. 'Name's Inza Burrage. She's got a brother in the school.'

'Is she staying here at Snodd's?' 'Oh, no. But Snodd's got a saddle horse she rides like a cowgirl, and she's chummy with Belinda, who's throwing a kitten party this evening—no gents allowed. She arrived early.'

'Who's Belinda?' 'Snodd's daughter. A good kid, but a bit of a bouncer. She'll pass us our rations.'

Belinda was serving Bart Hodge, who had arrived ahead of them, when they entered the dining room, when they saw Barney had stated, 'a She was a bouncer,' but she had a pleasant, intelligent face. Hodge apparently was jolly, but he dropped it at once and put on an air of dignity when they came in.

'Too bad about that old dog, Merriwell,' he said. 'Neither Bemis nor I knew the truck hit him. Mr. Snodd says that even you don't think I ran over him intentionally.'

'I wouldn't like to think that you or anybody else would deliberately kill a small boy's pet dog, no matter how worthless the creature might be, Hodge.'

'Thanks,' acknowledged Bart. He smiled as he said it, but it seemed to Merry that there was a sneer hidden behind the smile.

'Hm-m, then it's a bit worse off

After that Hodge took no part in the conversation. He ate hurriedly and left the table before Frank and Barney were much more than half through the meal. With a show of careless generosity, he dropped a bill beside his plate as a tip for Belinda.

'I'm glad that baby's gone,' growled Mulloy. 'It's good food Mrs. Snodd cooks, but the sight of him snored it for me.'

'Oh, forget him,' advised Frank. The sound of the piano, which had continued at intervals, ceased entirely a few moments after Hodge left the room. But it was a surprise for Merriwell and Mulloy, re-passing the door of the living room a little later, to see Bart standing beside the stool on which the fair-haired girl was sitting. She had turned from the instrument and was listening as he talked to her with the self-assurance of a fellow who had no doubt of himself. Frank got a good look at her now.

'A pip is right, Barney,' he said. 'The nerve of that guy!' muttered the Irish boy.

Merry pulled at his elbow. 'Let's go for a walk,' he proposed. Far away in the east, the round moon spilled silver over the still bosom of the ocean. Golden lights glowed warmly in the windows of the school dormitories. The night was as mild as a night in June, but its pleasant odors were those of September. Crickets were fiddling in the roadside grass. Somewhere from within the academy grounds came a chorus of boyish voices singing a school song as Frank and Barney walked slowly past the open gate.

'Sounds pretty,' said Mulloy. 'Swell,' said Frank.

They didn't talk much until they had followed a well-trodden path down to the shore, on which the gentle rollers of a rising tide were breaking white. Then their tongues were loosened. For more than an hour they sat there and chatted of many things that interested them both. They joked and laughed a great deal. And before they started back for John Snodd's place they felt as if they had known each other all their lives.

On the road at the foot of the hill Frank halted and stared at two approaching figures. A small boy was being pulled along by the leash of a huge dog to which he was clinging.

'Is that you, Tad Jones?' Frank called wonderingly. 'Sure it's me, Frank,' was the reply, as the boy was dragged toward them by the dog. 'I've come over to show yer my new dog. But don't you touch him, for he ain't feelin' well 'nd he might bite yer.'

The hair on the animal's back was bristling. It growled sullenly with its nose thrust out toward Merry and Barney. White foam dripped hurriedly around.

'Hold him, me lad,' he said, 'till I climb a tree.'

'Oh, he won't touch yer 'less I tell him to,' said Tad Jones, 'but I'd just like to see that feller Hodge kick this dog. Tige would chew a leg right off from him if he did. Wouldn't you, Tige?'

The creature growled still more alarmingly. 'Where'd you get that beast, Tad?' asked Frank.

'Oh, Silas Gleason gave him to me when he heard my Shag had been run over 'nd killed.'

'But there's something the matter with him.'

'Silas Gleason said he was sick a little but that he'd be all right in a day or two. He just can't seem to stay still, that's all.'

'Now look here, Tad,' said Merriwell. 'I don't like the way that dog is acting. You better take him right back to Gleason and tell him you don't want him. If you don't you'll have trouble with him.'

'Oh, no, Frank!' protested the boy. 'Oh, no! I do want him. I gotter have a dog, 'nd this one'll look out for himself 'nd me, too, when any big bum like Bart Hodge gets fresh. I'm going to keep him.'

To the relief of Mulloy, the dog switched round suddenly and began to pull in the opposite direction.

'He wants to go back home now,' said Tad, 'nd he's so strong I gotter let him have his own way. Good-night, Frank.'

Merry watched the huge animal dragging Tad away by the leash. 'Now what do you think of that, Barney?' he asked. 'Isn't that a fine dog to give a small boy to play with?'

'He acts hungry,' said Barney. 'If I had him, it's arsenic I'd feed him on.'

CHAPTER II

When Frank and Barney came back from their moonlight stroll the lower rooms of John Snodd's big white farmhouse were all aglow with lights. From the open windows of the living room flowed a flood of girlish chatter and gay laughter. Three automobiles were parked in the yard at the side of the house.

'Well now,' said the Irish boy, 'all the signs indicate Miss Snodd's party is off to a good start. Too bad we can't crash in on it, Frankie, but I heard Belinda tell Hodge that no dogs—I mean no gents—would be allowed.'

'Wait, Barney,' Frank's hand was on Mulloy's elbow. 'Listen.' A gayer burst of laughter came from the house. As it subsided they heard several of the girls urging somebody to 'tell another.'

'Oh, do, Mr. Hodge!' cried one of them. 'That one was just screamingly funny.'

'Maybe gentlemen are barred, Barney,' said Frank, 'but it seems that a gent has crashed the gate.'

'Now on my soul,' said Mulloy in amazement, 'the big bang is right in the middle of it. Can you beat that?'

'I wouldn't if I could,' said Merriwell.

The World Looks Down On Discomfited Whiner

The expression 'yellow streak' epitomizes the human characteristic that is found in the person who is unable to accept without sobbing the ordinary misadventures that are liable to overtake anyone, or the well deserved discomforts that follow ill-advised conduct.

You hear the expression, 'It wasn't my fault,' and it may be true. But as a rule it usually is disclosed that poor judgment, mismanagement or carelessness is at the bottom of the much bewailed misfortune. In any case, weeping and wailing are of no avail and they do not endear you to those with whom you come into contact. The world looks up to the man who can take it without wailing.

Work on Yourself

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good; myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.—R. L. Stevenson.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Baked Peaches for Garnish or Dessert.

CANNED peach halves baked in their own syrup with the addition of sugar, butter and a suspicion of cinnamon make an ideal fruit to feature with the ideal course or they are equally delicious to have for dessert. Serve them hot or cold but hot fruit during the winter months is especially good.

Baked Peaches. 1 No. 2 1/2 can peach halves 3 tablespoons butter 1/4 cup brown sugar Cinnamon

Pour the peaches and the syrup into a shallow pan, a cake pan is convenient to use. Turn the peach halves so the cut side is up. Sprinkle the sugar over the peaches, place a piece of butter in each peach where the pit was removed and sprinkle them ever so lightly with cinnamon. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) until the sugar on the edges of the peach begins to brown, or about 30 minutes. If you wish a more pronounced brown edge, set the pan of peaches under the broiler for a few minutes.

Canned pear halves are delicious prepared in this same manner. If the fruit is served as a dessert, plain cream is nice to serve with it.

To Bake Potatoes.—Potatoes will bake more quickly if cut in halves. Melt a little butter in a baking pan, place halved potatoes cut side down in it and bake.

Hanging Out Clothes.—Before hanging clothes on the line in freezing weather, put pins on clothes in the house, then snap on line with double clothes pins.

Breakfast Notion.—People who like a slice of fried bread with the breakfast bacon should try dumping the bread slightly before frying it. No matter how stale it is, it will fry beautifully crisp on the outside and 'light' on the inside.

Nut Cakes.—One-half cup of butter, three-quarter cup sugar, one-third cup milk, two eggs, one and one-third cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup almonds, blanched and cut in pieces. Cream butter, add sugar and continue beating. Add well beaten yolks and then milk, sifted dry ingredients and nuts alternately. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Bake in individual tins 20 minutes in a hot oven. Plain icing, sugar or nuts can finish off cup cakes with the proper touch.

Ironing Linens.—When ironing ecru linens always iron them on the wrong side. Ironing them on the right side makes them look faded.

Flaky Pie Crust.—A teaspoon of vinegar added to the cold water used in mixing pie crust will make the crust flaky.

All-Around Economy

JOHN DEERE GENERAL PURPOSE TRACTORS

Regardless of what type of tractor you are using on your farm, a change to John Deere will save you money. John Deere General Purpose Tractors rank FIRST in economy and it doesn't take them long to prove it.

You will notice it right from the start. You'll make a big saving in fuel costs because John Deere tractors with their exclusive two-cylinder engine design successfully burn the fuels that cost less. You keep the difference in your pocket. You will spend less for upkeep because John Deere two-cylinder engine design means fewer parts, more rugged parts. Likewise, you will have less cause for adjustments and repairs when you own a simple John Deere Tractor.

Only by getting up on the seat . . . by getting the entirely new feel of the wheel

. . . can you appreciate the outstanding value you get in these modern tractors.

The John Deere Model "A" General Purpose has power to handle the jobs that ordinarily require a 6-horse team; the Model "B" General Purpose handles the load ordinarily pulled by 4 horses. Both tractors have adjustable rear wheels (56 to 84 inches) . . . individual rear wheel brakes for short turns . . . narrow, compact design for perfect view of the work . . . easy steering . . . roomy platform . . . four forward speeds . . . and straight-line draft in plowing.

Remember—equipment counts big in your selection of a tractor. When you choose a John Deere, you get the most economical tractor—then, in addition, you have available a complete line of equipment especially designed for use with your tractor.

We suggest you see us soon if you are interested in a new tractor for this season.

County Agent Notes

COMMUNITY CONSERVATION MEETINGS

Educational meetings to acquaint the farmer with a background and reasons for a national farm program are now being planned by County Agent E. E. Skallsley. It is planned to hold at least three such meetings in each township. Local committeemen from all townships in the county have expressed their willingness to help at these meetings and to discuss some phase of the Federal program.

WISCONSIN COOPERATIVE WEEK

The week of February 14-18 has been designated by the governor as Wisconsin Cooperative week. The public is invited to tune in on the many talks that will be given over WHA and other state broadcasting stations on the growth of Wisconsin Cooperatives.

DISTRICT CONSERVATION MEETING

On Wednesday, February 9th, a district agricultural conservation meeting will be held at the court house in West Bend. Representatives from about twelve neighboring counties will be present to receive information from the state agricultural conservation committee regarding the 1938 farm program.

The 1938 program, based almost entirely upon plans and suggestions submitted by farmers should result in a greater degree of performance by the farmer and in consequence make the program more effective from the standpoint of soil conservation and economic use of the land.

Under the past two years of agricultural programs separate rates were established for diversion from soil depleting to soil conserving crops and for the carrying out of each soil building practice. Under this plan any benefit payments coming to the farmer were calculated at the end of the crop year by applying these separate rates to each acre diverted and to each practice performed.

In 1938 all benefit payments, it is expected, will be calculated at the beginning of the crop year and the attainment of the soil depleting and soil building goals will be set as conditions for full payment. Each farmer will know at the outset what he must do for maximum participation.

TREES

Any Washington county farmer desiring evergreen transplants (4 year old seedlings) for windbreak planting may obtain them free from the county agent's office. Also one year old seedlings for forest planting in lots of 500 or 1000 trees are available. All requests for such trees must be received by February 20th.

A NAME FOR THE FARM

Has your farm a name?

Just as every other business concern has a name, so every Washington county farm is entitled to an appropriate name. More and more farms are being given names. Breed associations favor it, and those who have quality products to sell find that there is an advantage in a name for their products.

Those who have not chosen a name for their farms will find many helpful suggestions in a circular published by the college of agriculture, entitled "Name Wisconsin Farms." In it are contained several hundred words and names taken from plant life, from animal life, from minerals, land, water, and other sources which may be combined to give the farm a name that is dignified and that accurately describes it. Since Wisconsin is so rich in Indian names, there are many words taken from the Ojibwa, Menomonee, and Winnebago languages listed in the circular. These there are appropriate names from the English, Scotch, Welsh, Irish, Danish, German, Saxon, French, and others listed.

"There is something about any well chosen farm name that makes one, upon hearing it, picture the farm as a happy home and a reliable place at which to transact business," suggests Andrew W. Hopkins, extension editor at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. "An attractive, original farm name is a part of the farm business equipment needed on many Wisconsin farms quite as much as the mechanical equipment with which they sow, tend, and harvest their crops," he believes.

A copy of the circular "Name Wisconsin Farms" may be had by writing to the county agent's office.

WHY Do People Save?

Most people keep that to themselves. Even bankers do not know. What we do know is that when people decide in earnest to save money, they usually have some definite purpose in mind. That we know by the clock-like regularity with which they add to their accounts. Such people seem to have learned that the way to get the things they want is to save for them. We invite you to save here for the things you want.

Keeping Up With Science

Deep-Focus Quakes Not So Destructive as Surface Types

By DR. FRANK THONE

Washington. — Deep-focus earthquakes, disturbances whose actual centers are scores or hundreds of miles underground, account for about ten per cent of all recorded shocks. They release tremendous amounts of energy, yet seldom cause the death and destruction for which the more numerous surface earthquakes are responsible.

A summary study of deep-focus earthquakes has recently been made by Drs. Andrew Leith, of the University of Wisconsin, and J. A. Sharpe, of the Los Angeles laboratory of the Western Geophysical company. They are convinced that except for factors introduced by the great depths themselves, there is no essential difference between the deep and the shallow earthquakes.

Two Great Earthquake Zones.

Both types occur in the same general regions of the earth—one a great horseshoe-shaped zone roughly arching about the Pacific, the other stretching in a long line from Portugal to Formosa. Both types vary greatly in amount of energy released. Due largely to their great depths, the deep class of earthquakes have surface results more widespread and diffuse, hence less destructive, than the shallow-focus disturbances.

Deep-focus earthquakes may occur at all depths from 100 kilometers beneath the surface to 700 kilometers—the greatest depth for any earthquake thus far on record.

Where the vast stresses needed to power such earthquakes come from is still pretty much of a riddle. Cycles of deep earthquakes have been correlated with the forces resulting from the moon's movements and other outside factors, but the stresses involved in these are so small that their action is undoubtedly of triggers rather than of main cause.

Alaska Flowers Reveal Prehistoric Villages

Washington.—Flowers that bloom in Alaska can help explorers detect prehistoric American villages, hidden underground.

Importance of this botanic clue in re-discovering the past is stressed by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian institution in a report to Science.

At the village trash heaps and ruins, the earth is mixed with animal bones, shells, ashes, rotted wood, and organic refuse, and in this distinctly different soil spring up plants different from those dominant in the neighborhood. At Agatu, at the western end of the Aleutian island chain, Dr. Hrdlicka found village sites covered with high stout grass on the slopes, and a thicket of wild pansip, monkshood and other flowering plants over the top.

In locating hundreds of these sites for archaeological exploration, Dr. Hrdlicka learned to detect an old village site, by its plant covering, as far away as he could see it clearly.

Diver 420 Feet Down, Pressure 320 Tons

Milwaukee.—Max E. Nohl, diver, who descended to a depth of 420 feet in Lake Michigan recently, withstood a pressure on his body of 320 tons more at that depth than he did at the surface.

Atmospheric pressure of 15 pounds to the square inch adds up to about twelve tons when all the 3,500 square inches of the average man's skin are considered. At 420 feet the pressure is about 197 pounds to the square inch.

Dissolved gases in the human blood stream and body cells enable us to resist the pressure of the atmosphere. At shallow depths, compressed air helps a diver to resist water pressure, but as the pressure increases, nitrogen from the air dissolves in the blood stream, causing trouble if the diver comes to the surface too rapidly.

"Bends," or caisson disease, a common and serious illness of divers, is caused by collecting nitrogen bubbles in the capillaries. These bubbles act as blood clots.

Leadleaf for Paints

Cambridge, Mass.—Lead, long used in paint in the form of its oxides, is now coming into use as the main ingredient of a protective paint that is somewhat like familiar aluminum paint. The lead is in the form of foil broken up into fine individual flakes and the vehicle employed is tung oil or some synthetic resin.

Blasting Made Safer

Washington.—Mechanical substitutes for blasting powder are now being used in mining to permit safer blasting operations while the miners are at work. Compressed carbon dioxide or air are used, supplied in cylinders.

Mercury in Texas

Terlingua, Texas.—Ancient "war paint" mines near here have produced more than $20,000,000 worth of mercury during the last twenty years, and promise to continue supplying the liquid metal for many years.

Uses for Teased Cake

Shanghai.—Ingenuous Chinese farmers have set teased cake to use both as an insecticide and as a poison for catching fish.

Early Man's Relics Found in Brittany

Paris.—Traces of early man's existence have turned up in a new part of the world—Brittany, that upper left-hand corner of France that is washed by the English channel on the north and the Atlantic ocean on the west.

Evidence that prehistoric human beings lived or visited in this region, in the days when crude stone tools were man's most typical handiwork, is beginning to come to light.

The first discovery, made recently, consisted of such tools, some about 30,000 years old, others perhaps 60,000.

These blasted the theory that human beings never reached this part of Europe in their wanderings until the New Stone age, a mere 8,000 years ago.

Now two French archeologists, M. and Mme. St. Just Pequart, have searched small islands off the Brittany coast, where prehistoric man's relics, if any, would escape the destruction wrought by farming and other activities of civilization.

Camping Ground Found

On one barren islet called Teviec they have found what they wanted. It is a camping ground where prehistoric men lived, and buried their dead. These people were not so ancient as the ones whose stone tools were found on the Brittany mainland. They lived in the Mesolithic, or Middle Stone, age, sandwiched between the Old Stone age and the New, making them perhaps 15,000 years old.

The French archeologists found quantities of the kitchen refuse of these Middle Stone age people, including the bones of animals they ate, shells, fragments of broken pottery dishes. Their flint implements have also come to light. They left no trace of houses, and probably lived in tents.

Subsea Canyons Clue Found in Great Lakes

Urbana, Ill.—Ice-carved lake basins in North America and Europe may supply clues that will solve the problem of the subsea canyons which have excited the interest of geologists recently. In reviewing the evidence of ice-cutting of the basins of the Great Lakes and other lake basins, Dr. Francis P. Shepard, University of Illinois geologist, points out that an average thickness of the continental ice of four miles or more during the most recent glacial period would account for both the cutting of the deep lake basins in the northern parts of Europe and America and a lowering of sea level sufficient to account for the submerged canyons.

Supporting the theory that the basins of the Great Lakes were largely cut out by glacial ice, Dr. Shepard cites the evidence of large amounts of fresh rock piled on the southern shores of the lakes. The ice came from the north, and the rock almost certainly came from somewhere in the present lake basins.

Fuzzless Peach Developed After Years of Research

Blacksburg, Va.—Peaches with smooth, waxy skins like plums, quite free from the fuzz which many persons find objectionable, can now be grown, as a result of a quarter of a century of patient breeding work by Dr. Fred W. Hofmann, research horticulturist of the Virginia agricultural experiment station here.

Dr. Hofmann crossed plum-peach with Elberta, and then crossed the hybrid offspring with the J. H. Hale peach, believed to be a seedling variety of Elberta. Further breeding produced, finally, the peach Dr. Hofmann was looking for: waxy-skinned, fuzzless, good-sized, round and evenly shaped. The flesh is yellowish-cream colored, changing to reddish around the pit, stone free and small, flavor and texture superior. The skin color is reddish orange yellow, with a wash of attractive dark carmine.

Don't Talk So Loud When Speaking to the Deaf

Iowa City, Iowa.—Deaf people do not enjoy loud talk.

When allowed to adjust the loudness of the voice to which they are listening, individuals with normal ears prefer to have it 38 decibels, or loudness units, above the level at which it is audible. Hard-of-hearing persons will adjust the same speech at a loudness only 23 to 20 decibels above their threshold of hearing. This was discovered in experiments at the University of Iowa by Dr. Noble H. Kelley.

Deaf ears function differently from normal ears, Dr. Kelley found. In speaking to those with normal hearing you will have most difficulty in making your consonant sounds understood; vowel sounds are most intelligible. For the deafened, the consonants are recognized practically as easily as the vowels.

Something for Everybody

SEW-YOUR-OWN spells economy and a better wardrobe for all the family, as these patterns indicate. You can sew at home during brisk winter days and have a new dress for all the family in no time at all and at very little expense. When you sew, you spend only a fraction of what you would usually pay for dresses of this character. Enlist the family's enthusiasm, and you can make winter days cheery for all of you by planning something new to wear.

For Big Sister.

A charming Princess frock on trim and tailored lines. Note that it buttons from neck to hem and that the waistline is belted to add a snug line. This is a young-looking dress with plenty of swish for the most fashion-knowing college girl. Make it up for Spring in thin wool, alpaca or print crepe. You'll like its clean-cut lines.

For Little Sister.

A copy of the popular Big Apple frock with the same flaring skirt, fitted basque and short, puffed sleeves. The dress that your little girl will adore wearing, for she likes these copy-cat fashions. Make it for Spring school days of clambray, percale or cotton broadcloth. For immediate wear, try it in serge or flannel. It is a dress that has flaring, graceful lines.

Silence under oppression fosters a lot of rancorous malice.

Once the dictionary settled a dispute but now there are six dictionaries.

How did it happen that the dodo was so called when all the other fossils have seven-syllable names?

As Discipline

Besides performing at least one good deed every day, each of us should perform one unusual disagreeable duty each day.

Some people won't go into any kind of movement unless they are allowed to run things, and generally they are permitted to.

If children were taught the national anthem in the public schools, they could sing more than one verse of it when they grow up.

A cheerful giver should cheerfully masquerade the giving.

Does a Big Job

Advertising of canned fruits and vegetables created demand, produced competition, made large and economical production possible, provided markets for the farmers and owners of orchards, and jobs for many thousands of people. The consumer profits by better quality and lower prices. Without advertising, these things could not have happened.

Clue to Happiness

An eastern potentate, afflicted with boredom, was advised that for such a man he found the perfect exchange of shirts with a man who was perfectly happy would cure him. After a long search for such a man he found the perfectly happy fellow had no shirt!

Were you ever alone in a strange city?

If you were you know the true value of this newspaper

Alone in a strange city. It is pretty dull. Even the newspapers don't seem to print many of the things that interest you. Headline stories are all right, but there is something lacking. That something is local news.

For—all good newspapers are edited especially for their local readers. News of your friends and neighbors is needed along with that of far off places. That is why a newspaper in a strange city is so uninteresting. And that is why this newspaper is so important to you. NOW is a good time to get to...

Our school band has been making much progress in the last six weeks. The beginners are learning quickly to play the practice drills and beginning marches and overtures. We feel sure that Mr. Furlong, our director, is very proud of his band and that he thinks we are coming along very nicely.

The members of the band have been making candy, which was sold during basketball games. The proceeds will go for music and other necessities of the organization. The members would like to thank you for buying their home-made candy, which you so willingly did.

The freshman class in English alternates the studies of literature and grammar. Since the last six weeks was given literature, they will, this six weeks, take grammar. Their work is on subjects and predicate verbs.
We seniors are beginning this semester's work in English literature. As a background so that we may better understand English literature, we are studying the history of England, how each important event in English history affects the literature written during the time it happened. To aid us in studying, we are using a new work-book.

GRADE NEWS
GRAMMAR ROOM—
The grammar room boys are practicing up on their marble playing because they plan to win the marble tournament this spring.
The social science classes of the committee has been appointed to make up a table which will show the different infectious diseases members of the class have had and how many have had each disease.

The first semester social problems class has now been changed into an economics class. Many new terms used in everyday language are studied so that they may be used correctly. It is a very interesting and worthwhile subject for anyone to study.
The senior bookkeeping class is working on the Potter Practice Set.
The senior shorthand class takes dictation almost every day. The secretarial practice class is learning how to fill out telegrams, radiograms, and cablegrams.
The junior shorthand class is beginning to take letters from dictation and are transcribing them on the typewriter.
In physics, the class has started the new semester by beginning work on the unit, "Sound." We find the peculiarities of echoes quite interesting.
The freshmen manual training class has been converted into a mechanical drawing class. The first plates consist mainly of lettering.

seventh and eighth grades have started their second volume.
The eighth grade is giving a series of floor talks in their English classes. The subjects are chosen by the pupil and are of general interest.
The sixth grade reading class has started the study of the topic sentence and the organization of paragraphs.
INTERMEDIATE ROOM—
The fourth graders finished the study of "Why New York Grew to be Such a Large City." Some of us are working on booklets and others on large pictures to show the growth of New York from the time of the Dutch to the present day.
We are listening to our radio program again this semester. All of us get a weekly reader each week to supplement our reading work. We enjoy them. In the first fifteen minutes of our reading period we play reading games to improve our reading skills.
