At a meeting of the Fox Valley Tri-County conference coaches recently, it was decided to discontinue baseball altogether this spring and have tennis and track instead.

Campbellsport, Kewaskum, Oakfield, and North Fond du Lac will again have track this spring, as they have had for the last two years. The schools which will have tennis are Brandon, North Fond du Lac, Kewaskum and Lomira. Rosendale is as yet undecided as to which sport it will compete in.

In the tennis tournament, which will be held at the Senior High school courts in Fond du Lac sometime during the first two weeks of May, each school will be represented by three singles and one doubles team. This tournament will most likely be held on a Saturday.

In a report by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, it is revealed that Kewaskum ranked tenth among 97 Wisconsin villages of from 700 to 900 population in the per capita contributions they made for the purchase of Christmas seals. High honor went to East Troy, whose per capita purchases were 13.6 cents while Kewaskum's was 9.6 cents.

In per cent of increase over last year's sales, Kewaskum tied with Cadott and North Freedom for twelfth position with 26. It is interesting to note that Winneconne increased its contributions by 252% to place ninth, just ahead of Kewaskum, in its per capita purchases with 10.7 cents per capita.

CAMPBELLSPORT IS BEATEN BY LOCALS

The Kewaskum basketball team evened the score with the neighboring Campbellsport five in the game played here last Friday evening in the second contest of the three-game series. The score was 40 to 37. Campbellsport won in the first meeting, 45 to 35, overtime. It is evident that the teams are very evenly matched and a capacity crowd is expected to witness the championship game at Campbellsport next Tuesday evening.

Friday night's encounter found Kewaskum leading throughout the entire game until the last quarter, when a rally by the opponents gained them a tie. The visitors scored again and took a two point lead for the first time in the contest. Then Kewaskum regained its form and pushed ahead again and in the last few minutes both teams played sensationally when the ball was dropped through the hoop left and right on all kinds of shots. However, Kewaskum was "hottest" and clinched the game, 40 to 35, but Hodge dropped in a long shot with the sound of the final horn, which went off as the ball sailed through the air, ending it at 40-37, Kewaskum.

A large group of fans accompanied the Campbellsport team and numbered at least half of the crowd if not more. They were rewarded with a thrilling game, bad for high blood pressure.

In the first quarter the teams battled quite evenly, which ended with Kewaskum possessing a slim 12-9 advantage. The locals gained three more points in the second period and led, 21-15, at halftime. This six-point lead was retained in the third quarter, but in the final period Campbellsport reached its heights and the remaining thrills are mentioned above.

Stenschke was the scoring champion of the evening with 14 points. Don Hodge's 11 counters were "tops" on his team.

HITLER TROOPS SEIZE AUSTRIA

Reich Army Enters Vienna... Invasion Forces Schuschnigg to Resign... European Powers Thrown Into Panic by Germany's Startling Coup... United States to Keep Hands Off, Secretary Hull Says.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Coup Amazes World

STRIKING with startling rapidity Adolf Hitler's motorized army crossed the Austrian frontier, seized Vienna, forced Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg to resign, and placed a full-fledged Nazi administration in command of the Austrian government.

Jittery European governments were thrown into a panic as they learned of the German leader's astounding coup. Britain and France sent Hitler identical protests against the Austrian invasion, warning of grave reactions, and several other powers were reported to have joined in the protest.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced a hands off policy toward the European crisis, and noted leaders gave their opinion that there was no immediate danger of a general war, although they regarded the present situation as highly dangerous.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced a hands off policy toward the European crisis, and noted leaders gave their opinion that there was no immediate danger of a general war, although they regarded the present situation as highly dangerous.

Faced with overwhelming forces, Schuschnigg broadcast the following message to the Austrian people: "The President of the republic has received from the German Reichsfuehrer and chancellor an ultimatum demanding that his own candidate be appointed head of a new Austrian government."

"President Miklas asked me to tell you that the policy of the Austrian government is to recede from force so that no German blood shall be shed."

"I yield to brute force. We must avoid bloodshed. Our troops have been ordered to retire before German troops and await further developments."

"May God protect Austria."

It was announced the plebiscite Schuschnigg had called for Sunday to permit the people to vote on whether the country would remain independent or submit to Nazi rule had been called off. The plebiscite had been denounced by the Nazis as a violation of Austria's agreement with Germany.

Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Hitler's personal representative in the Austrian cabinet, assumed the post of chancellor, and a new cabinet composed of Nazis was announced.

Meanwhile, Italy's reaction to the German coup was watched with interest, and it was believed to have placed a heavy strain on the Rome-Berlin accord.

In 1934 Italy massed troops on the border to prevent Hitler's intervention in Austria, and preservation of the latter's independence has been a major point in Italian diplomacy.

However, in view of the new accord existing between Italy and Germany, Mussolini will be forced to abandon either Austria or Germany, and since he has not completed negotiations with Great Britain and having few other European ties, he will be left in virtual isolation should he break with Hitler.

Unverified reports stated Italian troops were being rushed to the Brenner Pass, gateway between Italy and Austria.

In London, stock market prices slumped as the coup became public news. Despite the strong terms of Britain's note to Hitler, it is believed in some quarters that a deal has been made with Hitler, whereby the latter has been allowed a free hand in Central Europe in exchange for renouncing claims to colonies.

France, already in the throes of internal disorders, and without a cabinet, stood helplessly by. Premier-Designate Blum hurried consultations with political leaders striving to rally support, and to combine the various opposing factions into a united group.

Reverberations in Czechoslovakia of Nazi power in Austria was the chief concern in France, although the cabinet meeting in Prague was said to be considering the situation calmly.

TVA Pot Boils

DETERMINED to get the "low down" on the controversy among the directors of the Tennessee Valley authority, President Roosevelt summoned to the White House Chairman Arthur E. Morgan and his colleagues, David Lillenthal and Harcourt Morgan.

It was believed in Washington that if they could not compose their differences he might ask all of them to resign.

Upon the outcome of this conference depended the action of congress leaders in relation to the resolution calling for a senatorial investigation of the entire TVA setup, sponsored by Senators Bridges of New Hampshire and King of Utah, and Senator Norris' proposal that the inquiry be conducted by the federal trade commission.

Senator Byrnes of South Carolina put forward the suggestion, liked by many, that a single administrator be substituted for the three-man board of TVA directors, this one man to be selected by a joint committee of congress.

Norris thought this plan had good features but would prefer a board of three business executives, who, in his opinion, would be more capable of administering the project than engineers, lawyers or other experts.

Bridges engaged in hot debate with administration senators. He defended his investigation resolution in a long speech in which he made detailed charges against the TVA administration and characterized Lillenthal as a "Hitler" seeking to assert dictatorial powers over the Tennessee valley.

Shifting our diplomatic representatives in Latin America, President Roosevelt sent to the senate these nominations:

Meredith Nicholson of Indiana, now minister to Venezuela, transferred to Nicaragua.

Boaz Long of New Mexico, now minister to Nicaragua, transferred to Ecuador.

Antonio C. Gonzalez of New York, now minister to Ecuador, transferred to Venezuela.

Hoover Sees Hitler

FORMER President Herbert Hoover, in Europe to study conditions, had a long talk in Berlin with Adolf Hitler, who expounded his views on world politics, and was entertained by other Nazi notables.

At the close of his two-day visit in the German capital Mr. Hoover said only that he is "even more reinforced in his belief that progress in America rests in the principles of intellectual liberty and spiritual freedom, a system of free economy regulated to prevent abuse, and popular government."

Meteorological Presidents

Thomas Jefferson, third President of the United States, and James Madison, fourth President, were among Virginia's earliest meteorologists.

Prof. E. Ray Casto of Emory and Henry college reveals in his book "The Climatology of the Virginians" Jefferson at Monticello and Madison at Williamsburg made contemporary observations.

By their careful records and deductions they showed the value of the making of simultaneous observations.

Wheeler in Action

SENATOR WHEELER of Montana took the lead in opposing the bill for a reorganization of the executive branch of the government, and the debate took on many of the features of the senate battle over the Supreme court enlargement measure last year.

Supporting the reorganization bill warmly were Senator Byrnes of South Carolina and others who backed the ill-fated court scheme.

Wheeler said that if congress approves the measure it ought to close up shop and go home. He was assailing the provision of the bill authorizing the President to transfer, regroup, consolidate, or abolish any government bureau or agency or the functions thereof.

"We have got to recognize the fact," said Wheeler, "that under Democratic institutions there is sometimes inefficiency in government. Certainly there can be more efficiency, although it is not always obtained, under dictatorships."

"The American people have got to recognize that it is necessary for them to pay the price in order to maintain their liberties. I say to the senate that it is far better that we maintain the bureaus we now have than it is to turn over dictatorial powers to the President of the United States and admit to the world that the congress of the United States, overwhelmingly Democratic in the house and in the senate, is incompetent to function."

Byrnes said that Wheeler was imputing dictatorial ambitions to President Roosevelt and that he even feared for the safety of the republic.

In replying to this, Wheeler intimated that he believed the republic would survive despite President Roosevelt.

Family Firm Tax Killed

GREATLY to the surprise of the majority leaders, the house, considering the tax bill, adopted an amendment offered by McCormack of Massachusetts, striking out the $45,000,000 surtax on family or closely-held corporations.

This so-called "third basket" levy was eliminated by a vote of 180 to 124.

Then the representatives voted to add 25 cents a gallon to the tax on distilled liquors.

Chairman Doughton of the ways and means committee and Fred Vinson, who wrote the bill, vainly warned the representatives that the President would veto the measure unless that surtax were included.

Democratic members of the committee were hurriedly called together to study possible "replacement" taxes to make up for the loss in revenue due to this change, and treasury officials pondered new sources of revenue.

But Doughton, sore from his first defeat, said the house would go ahead with passage of the bill and leave the problem up to the senate.

McCormack and his supporters—all the Republicans and many Southern Democrats—contended the surtax would penalize family-owned corporations, ultimately forcing them into the hands of monopolists.

War Pact Rumors

DESPITE official denials, the rumors that the United States and Great Britain have entered into a secret war alliance persisted all day given credence when the house of commons was told by the parliamentary undersecretary of the admiralty that there was an agreement between the two nations under which the American navy will be permitted to use the facilities of the great British naval base at Singapore on payment for services given.

This privilege has been extended to no other nation.

Secretary of State Hull would not confirm the existence of the agreement, but department officials admitted an understanding had been reached and that it would greatly increase the potential strength of the navy in the East.

On the navy base in the Philippines has no drydock large enough to accommodate battleships.

Cleveland's Clean-Up

CHARGES were made in Cleveland by Judge Alva R. Corlett that Chicago labor leaders raised $25,000 in a plot to bribe a woman juror in the trial of Don A. Campbell and John E. McGee, alleged labor racketeers.

The two men had just been convicted of extortion. They were sentenced by Judge Corlett to serve from one to five years in the penitentiary and were taken there at once to block their efforts toward release on appeal bonds.

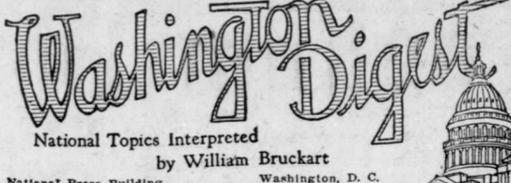

The judge said he was informed of the bribery plot by Eliot Ness, Cleveland safety director, whose investigation resulted in the indictment of Campbell and McGee.

We Take Two Islands

UNDER orders from the President, Secretary of the Interior Ickes added to the island possessions of the United States which he supervises two little bits of land in the Pacific—Canton and Enderby islands, in the Phoenix archipelago.

Their value is as stopping places for transoceanic air flights to Australia.

Included in the President's order are lands in the Antarctic first visited by Admiral Byrd and other Americans.

About Politics

Washington.—From this seat in the grandstand the view is quite clear that New Deal leaders are going out in this summer's primaries to nominate New Dealers against the conservative old line Democrats.

I have looked into the local situation in a number of states and congressional districts and everywhere the line of cleavage is showing. And these things are happening notwithstanding the declarations of Postmaster General-National Committee Chairman Farley that there will be no interference.

It is not the purpose here to report on every one of the states or districts where the battle is impending between New Dealers and old line Democrats. I shall attempt, however, to outline a few of them to establish what is going on and how the New Dealers are maneuvering to get a better grip on Democratic party machinery.

To do this clearly, it seems to me it ought to be recalled how President Roosevelt and numerous of his spokesmen have threatened those Democrats who have disagreed with New Deal policies in any serious way.

The fight over the President's plan to rebuild the Supreme court of the United States caused a serious split in the President's support and it was immediately thereafter that threats were forthcoming about those who had refused to go along on the court reorganization.

About the time that fight was in its most bitter stage, it will be remembered, Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania made a radio speech in which he attempted to kick certain Democrats out of the party.

The White House denied any connection with that speech, but there were few who believed Senator Guffey was acting on his own initiative. That is to say, it appeared to be a New Deal policy for the Pennsylvania Democrat often has served as the mouth-piece in that way.

There was comparative quiet for awhile, but those with ears to the ground noted many minor rumblings that, to the political wise, could mean only one thing. Those rumblings presaged another earthquake. They are increasing in intensity, too. We hear them from many directions.

Young James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President who is just now serving on a tour of duty as a lieutenant colonel in the marine corps, was in Florida last month. While there he took occasion to say publicly that Sen. Claude Pepper, a New Dealer, ought to be renominated and re-elected.

Well, Senator Pepper is such an ardent New Dealer that he once said if anyone wanted to know his position all that was needed was to ascertain Mr. Roosevelt's views—because he would support the President on any question.

I am told from sources that I believe have an understanding of the Florida situation that young Mr. Roosevelt's endorsement may be the deciding factor in a close race. That is to say, the race was so tight between Senator Pepper and the able young Rep. Mark Wilcox that one guess was as good as another.

Now, however, Representative Wilcox is asking the voters whether they shall determine who their senator shall be or whether they shall be told by the White House. It is said that broad resentment already has been created, so much resentment, indeed, that recently Mr. Wilcox made a statement that no campaign would be necessary on his behalf if only "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, grandchildren of President Roosevelt, would give Senator Pepper their endorsement.

Over in Pennsylvania another kind of a situation has bobbed up. In that state, the bosses have had trouble agreeing on their candidates, and finally they took their troubles to the White House.

(I mean the Democratic bosses which have supplanted the Republican bosses who used to rule Pennsylvania.) The result of the White House confab was that Governor Earle will run for Democratic nomination to the senate so he will be alongside another New Dealer, Senator Guffey, and Charles A. Jones, Pittsburgh attorney, was picked as the nominee for governor.

These selections were made by the state committee, which is controlled, of course, by New Dealers, and therefore those are about the only names of importance that will be voted on in the statewide primary.

But the significance of these things is not so apparent until it is known that two or three important Democrats in Pennsylvania have withdrawn and have "retired from politics" as a result of the situation.

Now, in Indiana, there is still another picture. It is probably the most interesting of any now taking shape. In the Hoosier state, we are started off with an announcement from the steps of the White House by Governor Townsend that "Van Nuys must go." He referred to the Democratic Senator Van Nuys who had the temerity to oppose the President's court packing bill and who generally is regarded as much more of a Democrat than his colleague, Senator Minton, who remains inside the New Deal fence always.

The Indiana picture is further complicated by the smoke rings Paul McNutt is blowing around. Mr. McNutt, a former governor of the state and now high commissioner to the Philippine commonwealth, is running for the New Deal nomination for the Presidency like the well-known jackrabbit. He says, however, that he is not a candidate for anything. It is a statement that is hard to believe because the McNutt airplane flight from the remote islands, the speeches across the United States, the free food—free drink—free publicity party given for Mr. McNutt at an outstanding Washington hotel—all combine to spell the launching of a political boom of some kind.

So, in Indiana, the Democratic state committee soon will be setting up a slate of its choice—and that choice will be satisfactory to the President. It means that these will be New Dealers. That is apparent because of the death sentence already pronounced for Senator Van Nuys. Of course, Mr. Van Nuys isn't licked yet, but that is the picture.

Then, the Indiana situation is, or ought to be, of great interest to the Republicans. I am told that if the Democratic committee, controlled as it is, should ditch Senator Van Nuys, he may decide to run as an independent candidate for re-election. He probably would not get anywhere in a machine controlled state like Indiana, but he might draw enough away from the Democratic vote to enable a Republican to win.

Now, out in Indiana there is a right up-and-coming young fighter on the Republican team. He is Rep. Charles Halleck. By virtue of the fact that he is lone Republican congressman from Hoosier territory, Mr. Halleck is in a splendid position to set off some fireworks. Mr. Halleck is highly regarded by Democrats and Republicans in the house.

He is young, vigorous and keen. Furthermore, Mr. Halleck is neither a conservative nor a radical, and we are hearing more and more of a swing in the country that probably will land our political policies in the middle of the road, instead of on the wild-eyed programs of most New Dealers or the moss-backed policies of hide-bound Republicans of yesteryear.

As I see the picture in Indiana, therefore, it is not impossible to conjure up a situation in which the New Deal attempt to drive Senator Van Nuys from politics would backfire to the extent of electing a Republican senator.

Kentucky also provides a battleground. In that state, I think New Dealers made a great mistake and it may eventuate that the mistake will cost them dearly. Senator Barkley, the Roosevelt spokesman in the senate, is going to have to fight his hardest to win renomination over Gov. "Happy" Chandler. Kentuckians here who know the politics of their home state tell me that the governor is a real challenger and that he is a campaigner of genuine ability.

Concerning the New Deal mistake: it will be remembered when Mr. Roosevelt interfered in senate affairs by indicating his choice for the leadership upon the death of the great Senator Robinson of Arkansas. That was the occasion when the President wrote to Senator Barkley, addressing him as "Dear Alben," and thereby attached a title that has proved such a source of levity. When it became apparent that Mr. Barkley would meet opposition, the New Deal promoted a testimonial dinner for the senator and sent numerous New Deal wheel-horses to Louisville to attend.

Among them was Marvin McIntyre, assistant secretary to the President. Well, the Chandler folks built up a testimonial luncheon for the governor on the same day. Although Mr. McIntyre reached Louisville in time, he "just could not make it" to get to the Chandler luncheon. So that was that, and hundreds of Kentuckians at once decided that the New Deal was going to have Mr. Barkley and that made them say to themselves that they would choose their senator. It is of such incidents that political victories and political defeats are made.

Another battleground yet to be mentioned is Iowa. Senator Gillette was among those who did not like the President's court reorganization scheme, and said so. From there on, he has been a marked man. He will have to fight for renomination, therefore, against a New Dealer—rather, an opponent of New Deal selection. Representative Wearin has announced that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination.

Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar (Dem., Tenn.) chairman of the post office committee, made the motion, which was supported solidly by his committee and by most Republicans and conservative Democrats.

The bill would create a United States highway corporation that would build three east-west and seven north-south super-highways on which travelers would pay toll.

and post roads, which is almost unanimously opposed to the measure.

Bulky's Highway Dream Is Shattered by Senate

Washington.—The $8,000,000 Bulky super-highway scheme, on which President Roosevelt had smiled with the suggestion that it merited serious consideration, was killed by the senate.

By a vote of 38 to 36 the senate voted to discharge the banking and currency committee from further consideration of the bill and refer it to the committee on post offices

Long Storage Might Destroy Important Parts of Foodstuffs

By Dr. FRANK THONE

Washington.—Foods kept for years in a "super-normal" granary, if such a policy should be established, would be subject to more than the ordinary expected risks of moth and rust, mice and moldiness, Dr. Frank M. Schertz, plant physiologist, points out.

The things we used to think of as prime importance in foodstuffs, carbohydrates, fats, and proteins, might be preserved with a minimum of loss, and yet the materials might lose so much of their vitamins and other perishable constituents that the stored masses might in emergency prove a delusion and a snare, filling our stomachs and yet starving us to death.

The idea of a "super-normal" granary was suggested originally by Prof. F. B. Harvey of the University of Minnesota. Professor Harvey thinks that far wiser than the present national policy of burying a vast gold reserve in the Kentucky hills would be the accumulation of hoards of food and feedstuffs, textile materials, and other farm and forest products. Professor Harvey goes Secretary Wallace's ever-normal granary scheme one better, in that he would have it operated in terms of decades rather than mere years.

Carotene a Good Example

The hazards of long-time storage of foods are exemplified by Dr. Schertz in a single case, that of carotene, a plant pigment which is also an important vitamin. In fresh green leaf material carotene is present in ratios of only one part to from 6,000 to 20,000 of the total bulk. Yet without this tiny pinch of carotene we perish.

And carotene can not be stored successfully, in the dried state at least, even at low temperatures. Half of it is lost in as little as a month under ordinary storage conditions. Under specially controlled conditions the loss can be minimized; but Dr. Schertz has grave doubts of the practicability of maintaining the necessary supply of this and other vitamins in storage lasting many years. He advocates thorough-going research as a necessary preliminary to any such comprehensive and costly scheme as a "super-normal" granary.

Should stratosphere future stick to the gas, the problem can be solved by electrodes into the Diesel engines, another difficulty.

Newest Check on Mars Shows It an Arid Planet

Washington.—It was fashion to suggest that curious marks on the planet were due to some agency; a race of Martians had constructed gigantic canals. Then when they were found to change Martian seasons the hypothesis brought forward that there were, perhaps, plant growth other vegetation.

But even this last suggestion the canals on Mars were great straight stretches of growth (possibly like the Martian shelter belt may be a hence) has had its difficulties.

One of the most recent troubles comes from the Wilson observatory. Institution of Washington has been found, from the light spectrum of the water vapor present in the sphere, at least in the equatorial zone where the observation made. An outside limit vapor in Mars' air would be 5 per cent of that present earth's surface.

Ancient Factory Town Is Unearthed in Honduras

Washington.—Ruins of an ancient American trade town, where Indians turned out cheap pottery bowls for traveling salesmen to handle, have been unearthed in the tropics in northeast Honduras by a Smithsonian-Harvard university joint expedition.

The town unearthed sheds light on industrial life of aboriginal America. Evidence that mass production was tried in those days is found in quantities of broken pottery, some decorated in the "factory" method of stamping the design.

Indian business men of the town lived well, judging by two house floors unearthed by the expedition. The plastered floors were stained red. Fragments of plaster, apparently in successive layers of red, yellow, red, blue-gray, and red.

The town is identified as Naco, visited by Spanish explorers in 1526. Spaniards found it a flourishing place of 2,000 houses and about 10,000 natives, with Aztec traders from Mexico bargaining for goods in the shady city square. Ten years later, Naco was reduced to a pitiable handful of 45 Indians, the rest having been killed, enslaved, or driven into the hills.

Crests Balanced Beaks for Flying Reptiles

New York.—Flying reptiles of the earth's geologic Middle ages, though they were never direct kind of birds, nevertheless evolved in certain respects remarkably like birds, Dr. Carroll Lane Fenton points out in a newly published book, "Life Long Ago."

Like the most ancient birds, the first flying reptiles had long jaws with rows of sharp teeth. Later models had fewer teeth, and the last flying reptiles of all had stork-like beaks with no more teeth than the proverbial hen. The long beaks were kept in balance by long crests sticking backward from the reptile flyers' skulls.

The flying reptiles were apparently feeders on fish to a very large extent, perhaps exclusively, says Dr. Fenton. They skimmed low over the surface of the water and scooped up fish and other forms of marine life that ventured too close to the surface.

Tellurium Sunlight

Philadelphia.—The vapor of molten tellurium, semi-metallic element, is the latest research tool of Westinghouse engineers here, searching for an artificial lamp which will simulate accurately the color of sunlight. Dr. J. W. Marden, Dr. N. C. Breese and George Meister have demonstrated that tellurium gives off a continuous spectrum of light like sunlight instead of the line spectrum ordinarily found in mercury, sodium and metallic vapor lamps.

Difficult Problem Confront Aviation in the Stratosphere

St. Petersburg, Fla. ing a picture of balloons still to be solved, unknown factors still countered and tested.

Zinn of Pan-American finds five chief obstacles must be hurdled before commercial stratosphere is realized.

The problems presented by impracticability of stratosphere in pay load, increase in flying equipment, maintenance costs and deflation of engineering progress must be met, he declares in a paper published here by the Florida engineering society.

Conditions in the stratosphere plane will be more cooling than in the troposphere. Despite the contraction of the air, the pressure in the stratosphere will be less than in the troposphere. The plane will have to be cooled to the point where the pressure of the rarefied air at high altitudes will raise the temperature past the comfort range.

Trouble From Cosmic Radio reception will be at altitudes above 50,000 feet of the high interference rays and auroral disturbances is predicted. Trouble will be experienced with gasolene igniting electrical ignition because of ionization of the air from the same electrical energy that add to the radio reception.

"At first thought it may be important," Mr. Zinn says in Germany in actually being at 30,000 to 40,000 feet, noted that ionization of gasolene so that it would completely vaporize in the stratosphere, thus reducing engine efficiency.

Should stratosphere future stick to the gas, the problem can be solved by electrodes into the Diesel engines, another difficulty.

Oracle's Speaking To Syrian Pagan Chapel

LONDON.—A pagan equipped with a speaking oracle, has been discovered in ruins of 2300 B. C., in Syria.

The chapel is a discovery of the expedition of the British Museum and the British School of Archaeology at the moment of the excavation of the site of Brak. It was one of the far from a huge palace altar in the clay walls of the archeologists as they adjoining hidden rooms, a priest might hide through the tube in the oracle.

Birds' Housing Problem

Benicia, Calif.—Housing aren't the only bird problem. Housing problems. Some kind seems to be the birds, too. Emigration of this city reports that which had been used in ferret species of birds was that of a black pigeon contained at its bottom layer of eggs. Above them were three eggs of the catcher and one of the bird.

Italy Plants

Rome.—Guayule, shrub of the arid lands and adjacent parts of the peninsula in Sicily, trans-Mediterranean peninsula. It is part of effort toward economic efficiency, and in particular hoped will provide an supply of rubber in case

Arabs and Indians

Beirut.—America's Indians and the purest Arab closely related, says M. Shanklin of the American Museum of Natural History in the Syrian desert area during a period of semi-drought and has concluded that the two races have the same identical type scientifically known as group O.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Many years ago, in South America, this writ was always hearing somebody mutter "Perros!" (dogs), as he passed by. It expressed dislike of all North Americans. Upon Sinclair's book, "The Jungle," about the Chicago packing houses, had been carefully mistranslated, in a widely circulated version, which made multitudes of South Americans believe all North Americans ate dogs. Even in remote jungle towns, I found European trade scouts and salesmen making diligent use of the book. It was the neatest trade propaganda trick of the century.

The one-sided battle has continued through the decades. Late reports are that South American radio stations are belting Uncle Sam with everything at hand, and, to the same degree, apostrophizing Italy, Germany and Japan.

For this reason, there appears to be more than meets the eye in the printed story of our new airwave rearmament and the assignment of a new short-wave channel for broadcasts to South America.

With Secretary Hull, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American union, pleads for "stronger cultural ties" in the first broadcast. Spanish translations follow the English version.

While all this is in the name of "peace and good-will," and official announcements carry no hint of a defensive propaganda war, it appears to be the answer—perhaps the only possible reply—to the widespread smearing campaign against the U. S. A. in Latin American countries.

The sixty-six-year-old Dr. Rowe is a happy choice to head America's "cultural," if not propaganda, outreach in this direction. He has become widely known and decidedly persona grata in South America in his 32 years of pleading and proselytizing for solidarity, friendship and understanding in the Americas.

He has fraternized with South Americans more than any other northerner, lecturing, writing, evangelizing and expounding his doctrines of friendly co-operation—always on the high plane of cultural and intellectual intercourse. He has been head of the Pan-American union since 1920, succeeding John Barrett.

LIFE begins at forty for Gracie Fields, English Music Hall actress, who curtsies to the king and becomes a commander of the Order of the British Empire. It is another Jane Alger story, this tale of the Lancashire mill girl who became the highest-paid entertainer in the world.

Her earnings from her 5,000,000 gramophone records, and from the stage and cinema have reached $750,000 a year. Her film, "Mr. Tower of London," ran seven years. She lives simply with her mother, who manages her affairs, and never has anything more than pocket money. Every so often she visits Rochdale, the mill town where she sang for pennies at the age of seven, and has a rollicking time, singing for her old friends.

She was a "half-timer" in the cotton mills, half the day in school and half at work. In 1930, she made a brief appearance at the Palace theater in New York. It wasn't much of a success. She explained afterward that she had been warned in England that entire audiences in America chewed gum together and in time, with dreadful facial contortions. This frightened her and spoiled her act, although, she admitted, there was only one observable gum-chewer.

She was glad to land safely in England, where she is widely beloved and known as "Good Old Gracie."

Just a few days before her fortieth birthday, she returned home from a party at 10 o'clock in the morning. The milkman, the policeman on the beat and a street-sweeper ceremoniously handed her a morning paper with her name in the king's honor list. She is tall, blonde and merry.

Oilcloth in the Making Oilcloth is a thick canvas coated on both sides with thick oil paint. First the canvas is passed through liquid glue, etc., pressed by heavy rollers, dried, and rubbed with pumice-stone. The paint is applied in several coats, the final coat being in a pattern. The quality of the oilcloth is governed by the number of coats of paint.

Plants Native to Mexico

DORIS DENE'S COLUMN

If Sweetheart Keeps Postponing Wedding, She's Probably Fickle.

DEAR DORIS DENE: I have been engaged—or almost engaged—to a girl for two years. At first we couldn't make it public because of my family's objections but I talked them out of their attitude and they accepted my fiancée. However she refuses to let me announce the engagement even now. She keeps postponing the day of the wedding and if I hint to any of our friends that we are really engaged she flies into a temper. She won't wear the ring I gave her and she claims the right to have other boy friends and says I may have other girl friends. Through it all, she says she loves me and I believe her. But what is the meaning of her refusal to make the fact of our relationship known?—B. R. F.

ANSWER:—There is nothing more distasteful than having to enlighten a nice young chap as to the nature of his fickle sweetheart. And certainly if your long letter, B. R. F., had given me a glimmer of hope for your case, I'd have stressed the hope for all it was worth.

But the facts look uncompromisingly clear. Here is a girl who presumably likes steady devotion as much as any other normally vain woman. She enjoys that sense of security induced by the knowledge that there is a man on hand waiting to do her bidding—ready to be her escort—eager to prove his undying love for her. This she is not willing to give up.

But on the other hand she has a sneaking suspicion that her steady beau is not the hero she's dreamed of. Perhaps if she waited a while, Mr. Right would come along. And in the meantime nothing could be more convenient than to have Mr. Wrong on tap registering devotion in a big way.

Believe me, B. R. F., there are hundreds of heartless, selfish young things in the world who play this trick regularly on their unsuspecting admirers. The wonder to me is the unfeeling good-nature with which these ardent swains accept excuses and postponements and alibis. It must become apparent after a while to even the most credulous youth that something is wrong with a situation in which a lady claims to love her hero yet continually refuses to make him her private and personal possession.

It is pretty safe to say that when a gal is in love, she will move Heaven and earth to hasten the wedding date, not to postpone it. Unless there is a really grave reason for delay it is the female of the species who clamors for wedding bells. She wants her ring, and she wants her wedding, and she wants the world to know that Mr. Right belongs exclusively to her. She also wants to prevent any other woman from making even a temporary claim on her hero's time and affection.

So that when a fiancée shilly shalies and fakes excuses and urges freedom and independence for both parties to the contract she is demonstrating fairly conclusively that she is not marriage-minded. She proves that she is holding on to a good sure thing with one hand and feeling around for a more exciting romance with the other.

Be warned, B. R. F., and don't waste your youth waiting for your girl to find someone she likes better than you.

DEAR DORIS DENE: My daughter married a boy three years ago who is nice enough in his way but has proved a very bad provider. His salary at present does not enable him to support a wife and they have had to come to live with me. I am not rich and as my daughter is not good at housework, I am overworked. My son-in-law is still working but at a greatly reduced salary. I feel that I am being made to pay for my daughter's matrimonial mistake but do not know how to get rid of the incubus. Is it my duty to tell the boy he must get out and fend for himself until he is able to support his wife?—Mrs. A. G.

ANSWER:—First of all, it might be a good idea to train your daughter to be useful around the house so that at least you would not be overworked. Presumably if she had her own home she'd have to learn to be a good housekeeper and it is certainly not right that she should be allowed to drift idly along depending on you to cook and clean and wait on her.

In fact it looks as though your daughter's problem were more serious than your son-in-law's.

There is no evidence to prove that your son-in-law is anything but a well-meaning boy who believed that he was able to give your daughter a home. It is unfortunate for you that he has found himself to be in wrong but honestly you can't blame him.

You must regard the marriage as a partnership which has been temporarily rendered financially unsound. You must understand that under the circumstances it is up to your daughter to do all she can to help the man she's married. And surely the best means of helping is to be as efficient as possible in assisting you with housework.

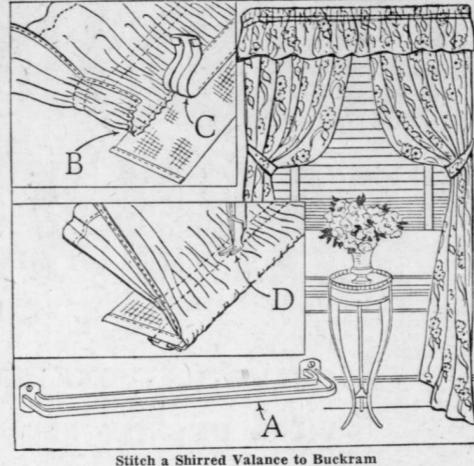

I venture to say that if you had a willing able helper with you in your home, doing her utmost to spare you all the toil and worry of the day, you would not be so seriously concerned with the present state of things.

Life of Republics

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

PLANNING draperies is as exciting as planning a new frock. Curtains sound the keynote of a whole room, and this is the time of year to be thinking about them. The chintz draperies with shirred valance shown here are dignified and yet charmingly informal. They are easy to make; they have the smart tailored effect that is usually obtained only by using a valance board, yet they are hung on ordinary double curtain rods of the type shown here at A.

The side drapes are made of full widths of the chintz and are hung on the inside rod with plain casings at the top. Cut the valance material the desired depth and twice as long as the space it is to fill after it is shirred. Hem the ends and bottom. Now, make a row of gathers along the raw edge at the top, another row 2 1/2 inches below the first and a third row 1/2 inch below the second. Cut a piece of buckram 4 inches deep and as long as the outside curtain rod. Bind the ends of this strip. Place the shirred valance edge wrong side down on the strip of buckram as at B. Cut a casing strip wide enough for the rod to slip under it after the edges are turned, and place it over the valance edge as at C. Stitch the casing strip and the valance to the buckram as shown. Turn the valance over to the other side of the buckram and stitch through the other two rows of shirring as shown. Slip the outside curtain rod through the casing and the valance is ready to hang.

Are you in a rut about your curtains? Do you know the different methods that decorators use to give windows individuality? In her book SEWING for the Home Decorator, Mrs. Spears has told the whole story with sketches and text. Slipcovers, difficult dressing tables, and making of lamp shades, how to bring furniture up to date and many other technical problems are treated in this useful dollar saving book. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred), to Mrs. Spears, 210 So. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Two orchard pruning demonstrations will be held on Monday, March 21st. The morning demonstration will be held at the Frank Patzen farm located about two miles northeast of Richfield and will start promptly at 9:30 a. m.

The afternoon demonstration will be on the John Mayer farm located one-half mile north and one mile west of Kohlsville. Mr. C. L. Kuehner, fruit specialist of the College of Agriculture, will be present to direct the work.

SOW ONLY GOOD SEED

Greatly reduced crops result from the use of poor quality seeds bought at bargain prices.

Most of the cheap seed is advertised for sale and marketed by seed companies located outside this state. It is often improperly labeled, very low in germination, and high in weed seed content. A. L. Stone, seed and weed control director, advised.

Tests made on samples of "bargain seeds" at the seed and weed laboratory prove why they are sold cheaply. He pointed out some of the seeds germinate only 75 per cent.

If the purity of the bargain seeds is 90 per cent and the germination test 93 per cent, the actual value of the seeds would be only 72 per cent, he explained. In other words, if the seed was sown at the usual rate, the farmer would get only 72 per cent of a crop.

AN OPEN LETTER TO A MOTORIST WHO DRIVES TOO FAST

I saw you barely miss a little boy on a tricycle this afternoon and heard you yell, "Get the hell out of the way! Don't you know any better than to ride in the street?" He didn't answer because he hasn't learned to talk yet. So I'm going to answer for him.

No, the little boy doesn't know any better than to ride his tricycle in the street. He has been warned not to, but little boys don't always heed warnings. Some adults don't, especially traffic warnings; for example the one limiting the speed of automobiles in city streets.

I'm going to tell you something about that little boy: He has a mother who endured considerable inconvenience, anxiety and suffering to bring him into the world. He has a father who has worked hard and made many sacrifices to make him healthy and happy. The supreme purpose of their lives is to have their little boy grow up to be a useful and prosperous man.

Now stop a minute and think. I know your minutes are valuable and I know it will be hard for you to think. But try. If you should kill a child, how would you feel facing its parents? What excuse could you give them for having robbed them of their dearest possession? More important: What excuse could you possibly offer Him whose Kingdom is made up of little children.

Children, my hasty friend, were here long before you or your automobile were ever thought of. All the automobiles on earth are not worth the life of one little boy on a tricycle. Any competent garage mechanic can put a car together, however badly it's smashed, but nobody on earth can put a child together once its life has been crushed out. We don't know what that child may some day be. But we know what you are, and it's unimportant. We could get along without you, but we can't spare a single little boy on this street. WHY Do People Save?

Most people keep that to themselves. Even bankers do not know. What we do know is that when people decide in earnest to save money, they usually have some definite purpose in mind. That we know by the clock-like regularity with which they add to their accounts. Such people seem to have learned that the way to get the things they want is to save for them. We invite you to save here for the things you want.

SYNOPSIS

When Bart Hodge, a vain youth of sixteen, alights from a train at Fardale, he stumbles over a half-blind dog, and in a rage kicks the dog's owner, Tad Jones, a small, shabby boy who supports his widowed mother, denounces him. This episode and he slaps Tad. Frank Merriwell, an orphan of Hodge's age, prevents him from further molesting Tad. Although the two do not come to blows, Hodge sneeringly says they will have to settle their differences later. He and Merriwell had come to Fardale to attend Fardale academy. While walking to Snod's baggage, Merriwell, accompanied by Tad and his dog, Shag, start to walk to Snod's place. Presently the Hodge family comes driving, rumbles along the road and kills Tad's dog. Occupying a room next to Merriwell's in the Snod home is Barney Mulloy, a friend of Belinda Snod. Later they meet Tad, who now has another dog. That night Bart Hodge crashes the party given by Belinda Snod. Hodge sings and the lovely Inza Burrage plays the piano. When Merriwell, seated on the floor, sings a comic song, Hodge rushes out, accusing him of insulting Inza. He steps between them, telling Hodge notice. Next day Merriwell and Mulloy rush to a grove on John Snod's farm to warn a picnic party that a large dog is running amuck. Hodge tries to convince Inza that this is just a trick of Merriwell's. Inza, attempting to escape the maddened animal, injures her leg. Hodge sees in terror. Merriwell single-handed holds off the mad dog and saves Inza. John Snod shoots the animal. Later Merriwell and Mulloy call on Professor Scotch, who says the overcrowded condition of the dormitories makes it necessary for them to share a room with Bart Hodge. An erroneous version of the mad dog episode, obtained from Hodge, who tries to hide his own cowardice, appears in the local paper. Later Hodge and his friends leer at Merriwell and Mulloy as they enter Union hall, where they have to share a room with Hodge. Hodge and his friends, including Hugh Bascomb, football fullback, are trying to intimidate Merriwell and Mulloy when Inza's mother Walter enters. The plan of Hodge's cronies to embarrass Merriwell is all shot to pieces.

"Um-m," said Walter, lifting his eyebrows slightly. "Maybe I was misinformed. I was told they had brought salt to rub into your wounds. I fully expected to find you smarting severely, but you don't look very miserable."

"Oh, quite the contrary, sir." "Well, I see you've taken the usual fresh-lamb manner, but you don't have to 's' me. The sophists like it, but just between ourselves we'll pass it over."

His eyes discovered the newspaper on the floor where Bob Gagg had dropped it, and he picked it up. "Your paper?" he asked, looking at Frank again.

"I think it belongs to one of the visitors. A high-browed young gentleman was reading aloud from it when Mulloy and I came in. This is Barney Mulloy, Mr. Burrage. A pal."

Burrage gave Barney a cordial handshake also before he spoke to Merry again: "I guess the highbrow you mention was reading the dirt I came here to see about. Merriwell, I've read it myself, and it's pretty crummy. I've just come back from the village after talking to my sister about it. She's ready to put on her war paint and go out after scamps."

Hodge had sought retirement in the background. The appearance of Inza's brother had filled him with apprehension. Already the set-up which he had rigged with Bascomb's aid had been knocked into a cocked hat, and now the climax threatened to ditch him in a grand crash.

"Inza asked me to see you as soon as I got back here, Merriwell," Burrage went on. "She suggested writing a letter to the paper herself and telling the truth about what happened."

That was something Frank hadn't expected and it brought a flush into his face. "Now that was kind of her, Mr. Burrage," he said, "but I don't think it'll be necessary. The Pasture report will settle whether the dog was mad or not."

"But what she's sizzling over is the statement made by Hodge. She says he ran away and left her to the mercy of the dog, and she's sure the beast would have pounced on her when she twisted her ankle and fell down. She thinks it was marvelous, the way you faced the furious creature and fought him off until John Snodd arrived and shot him."

Now Bart was forced to step forward and defend himself. His face was white and his voice husky and unsuited.

"I don't know whether the dog was mad or not," he said. "I never said I did. But I didn't run away. What I did was get the other girls out of there as quick as I could. I thought Merriwell and Mulloy ought to be able to take care of Miss Burrage."

raiding a hen-coop, the fellows who had come there to take Merriwell over the jumps were edging toward the door.

"Oh, well," said Walter, smiling. "We'll pass that over as unfinished business."

"But you can bet it will be finished," growled Bascomb. Burrage turned on him sharply, the smile gone from his face. "Look here, Bascomb!" he said. "You have a way of getting rough when you catch a Tartar. Fun is fun, all right, but the kind of stuff you pull sometimes isn't funny. You better watch your step. Now put on your roller skates and take your little playmates with you."

Scowling sullenly, the big fellow led the retreat, and Hodge slipped out also. The day was spoiled for him.

"It begins to look as if you can take care of yourself, Merriwell," said Burrage, when the door had closed behind the departing guests, "but I'm going to warn you to keep your eyes skinned for Bascomb. Hodge isn't half so dangerous as that big gorilla, and somehow you've made him love you like poison."

"Why, he never did a thing but look at Bascomb's mouth and throw a fit over his first view of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado," said Mulloy quickly.

Walter Burrage caught his breath and gave a shout of laughter. "Oh, so that was it! The Grand Canyon! It fits! But if that name sticks, Merriwell, he'll hate you to his dying day."

Walter Burrage did what he could to put Frank and Barney in right at the school. He took them around and introduced them to several fellows who, like himself, had got somewhere. "Friends of mine," was what he called them, and it was enough. It carried weight. It impressed even Dean Graves, with whom he finally left them, in the dean's office.

Henry Graves was a calm, friendly man who had a way with boys. He could make them feel very comfortable in his presence, or very uncomfortable, if there was a good reason for it. Sympathy and understanding were his chief qualities. He always seemed to know when to be lenient with a fellow who had slipped a cog, and when to crack down. Youthful human nature was his study, and he pursued it daily.

He gave Frank and Barney the biggest part of an hour. This, he told them, was their day to get themselves settled into place. Tomorrow the routine of the school would begin for them. And what he had to say about that routine prepared them well for it. They knew how to fall into line when they left him.

Fellows on their way to and from classes gave them hardly a glance as they roamed about the campus and among the buildings, eagerly taking everything in. The freshmen were easy to spot. The mere consciousness of being freshmen made them appear unbacked, no matter how much they tried to hide it.

"And, of course, we look just as green as grass," said Barney, said Frank, smiling.

"Maybe we do," allowed Mulloy, "but I've lamped two or three raw ones that would taste like spring grass to a hungry cow."

Merriwell scooped it up, gave it a deft, quick turn in his hands, dropped it and kicked. The thing sailed as if shot from a cannon. Over the heads of the squad members, far over the head of the one who had given it the first boot, it zoomed.

They had looked round to see who would recover the ball. They saw Frank return it.

"Yea-a!" shouted an astonished fellow. "Where'd that guy get Charlie Brickley's leg?"

Merriwell took hold of Mulloy's arm and turned him around. "Now that we've seen what we've beheld," he said, "let's totter back to our roost in Union hall."

An odd look had come into the Irish boy's face. "You've been holding out on me, Frankie," he charged. "Why didn't you tell me you played football?"

"I don't." "Come now, laddy, you gave yourself away. Didn't I see you collect that ball when it was dodging like a rabbit chased by a hound dog? Didn't I watch you drop-kick it like one of the old masters? Didn't I get for a risk that was something to pant about? It was the work of an educated leg, whether you stole the leg from Charlie Brickley or not. Now come clean, old scout."

"Well," said Merriwell seriously. "I don't play the game any more. Barney, I'm all washed up."

"And what's the cause of that, I ask you?" Frank took a little time to reply as they walked on. "Let's not go into it," he evaded. "It's a thing of the dear, dead past that's beyond recall, if you don't mind a slight touch of poetry. I suppose we all have our bitter secrets."

Mulloy was surprised and puzzled. "Oh, well," said he presently, "far be it from me to embarrass you, pal. But there'll be others. If it's on the level that you've quit, you made a break when you showed your stuff back there. I'll lay you odds you get a call for the squad."

"That'll be just too bad," said Frank. "for I'll have to duck it." Glancing sidewise at his companion, Barney saw something that added to his puzzlement. There was a shadow, he thought, on Merriwell's habitually frank and cheerful face.

Getting back to their room again, they found that their trunks had been delivered and moved in while they were away. They unpacked at once and stowed their belongings as well as they could into closets and drawers where space had not already been seized by Hodge. Later a porter took the trunks away for storage.

The dining hall at the academy was still called the mess hall, as it had been in former days. It was a sight for Frank and Barney at meal time, when its huge seating capacity was filled to the limit with hungry fellows whose talk and laughter was a pleasant sound for youthful ears. They found their places at one of a number of long tables assigned to the freshmen.

They looked around for Hodge in vain. He was not at any of the freshman tables. But that was cleared up presently when the chatter of some fellows who were talking football revealed that meals were served to members of the squad in a smaller room reserved for the athletic teams.

"Well," said Barney, speaking to Frank from the side of his mouth, "that gives us the pleasure of seeing less of him. It'll improve me appetite, too."

The half hour given to the evening meal passed swiftly and pleasantly. The food was sufficient and satisfying. They struck up acquaintances with a dozen sociable classmates in their vicinity. Everything was free and easy and everybody seemed happy. This was the life.

"I'm pinching myself to make sure it's no dream," said Mulloy as they walked back to Union hall. "Tad Jones was waiting for them on the steps. His grin, as he hailed them, seemed to have a meaning all its own."

WHAT TO EAT AND WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses PROTEINS—

The Foods That You Cannot Live Without

Eminent Food Authority Explains Why No Protein Means No Life—Describes the Kind and Amount Required for the Best Growth in Children—Good Resistance, Vigor and Endurance in Adults.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

FOOD is—and always has been—the central problem of life. But only in recent years has its true power been revealed, as a result of scientific investigation.

Fortunately, we now know what constitutes sound nutrition, and it is possible for every homemaker to plan meals that will enable her family to eat their way to health.

Topping the list of food essentials are the proteins. The Dutch chemist, Mulder, who hit upon this name, made a wise choice, for it means "to take first place." And certainly the proteins are first in importance. For they are the stuff of which our bodies are built. Without them, there would be no life.

Every man, woman and child has a fundamental need for protein, because it is an essential component of every living cell and makes up a large part of the solids of a muscle cell. Evidently, a great many of the glandular principles and substances, which control the functions of the body, are also protein in character.

Protein is the only food element that contains nitrogen, and next to water, nitrogen is the chief constituent of the human body.

Protein Builds Bodies. A new born baby weighs, on an average, from 7 to 7½ pounds, and the adult into which it grows may weigh 20 to 30 times as much. The vast amount of tissue necessary to construct a man is built chiefly from protein.

Once the adult body is built, however, protein is not required for the growth of new tissues, except under certain conditions, such as during pregnancy, when one is recovering from a wasting illness, or when an athlete is in training and the muscles are increasing in size.

Keeps the Body in Repair. There is, however, a maintenance requirement for protein which continues throughout life, and which applies to both children and adults. For the body may be compared to a machine, on which it is necessary to make allowance for the wear and tear of parts. Protein is the only substance that will rebuild the millions of cells which each day cease to function.

Thus, we see that protein performs two vital services—first, it builds new tissues; second, it repairs worn-out tissues.

The Building Stones of the Body. Protein is found in many different foods, but unfortunately, only a limited number of food supply proteins containing all the amino acids necessary for both growth and repair. Proteins that will build new tissue, as well as replace worn-out cells, are known as complete proteins. In this class we have meats, fish, cheese, milk, eggs and some nuts.

Other proteins are adequate for repairing worn-out tissue, but will not support growth. Such incomplete proteins are found in grains and products made from them, and in the legumes—that is, peas, beans, lentils and peanuts.

The proteins of these foods are of high nutritive value, however, and when supplemented with other proteins, such as those of milk, will meet every bodily requirement.

How Much Protein? The protein requirement varies according to size, age, and the kind of protein foods consumed.

To allow for growth, children require twice as much protein per pound of body weight as adults. That is to say, an adult requires daily one-thirtieth of an ounce for each pound of body weight, but a child needs one-fifth of an ounce for each pound of body weight.

other foods. There are many fine meats, and the number of ways in which fresh, canned, frozen or dried fish can be served is legion.

Both cheese and nuts make sandwiches, salads and desserts, as well as main course dishes. Peas, beans and lentils can appear as soup, mock roast or croquettes. Grain products, which include cereals, macaroni and bread, may appear in any course in the meal.

In planning menus, always keep before you the ideal that an adequate amount of first class protein makes a first class man, whereas an inadequate amount may lead to stunted growth, functional nervous diseases, lessened efficiency and the earlier approach of old age.

In choosing proteins to feed your family—remember that they take first place among foods, and that upon their wise choice rests your future welfare, your destiny—your life!

To Protect Grates.—To keep grates free from rust mix with blacklead a little turpentine and methylated spirit, equal parts of each.

To Prevent Iron Sticking.—When pressing curtains, add half a teaspoonful sugar and a quarter teaspoonful salt to each table-spoonful of starch.

Don't Tear Meat.—Searing meat will not hold the juices in, as was formerly believed, but will cause greater shrinkage and loss of fat and moisture.

Keeping Lemons Fresh.—Lemons can be kept fresh and firm by placing them in a wide-necked pot or jar and covering with water.

Polishing Ethics—Pro and Con

When fine furniture leaves the shop of the manufacturer, its finish has been professionally treated, to preserve its beauty—prolong its endurance. And from that time on, this furniture is best maintained by a quality light-oil furniture polish—first, on the shop floor of the furniture dealer—and then in the home. This is acknowledged and accepted as the best way to heighten its beauty—lengthen its life! But unfortunately, many housewives coat the finish of their furniture and woodwork with various shellacs and veneers—using them as a substitute for a fine oil polish and rubbing. And what a great mistake this is! For these coatings form a false finish over the true finish of the furniture; and resin and other destructive elements in them dry out the wood—toughen it—leave a sticky residue. When many layers have been applied, they accumulate as a crust over the finish, clogging it and clouding the natural beauty of the grain. This is the slack way to care for furniture. If the home-maker really "cares for" her furniture, she will frequently rub on a reputable light-oil polish, to preserve it—keep it lastingly lovely!

More women use O-Cedar Polish and Mops than any other kind—for furniture, wood-work, floors.

EDITORIAL "SPRING"

What time of the year is more beautiful and welcoming than spring? The calendar says that there are only three days of winter left. It is hard to tell whether mother nature will be ready to start painting the landscapes on the 21st of March.

What a variable thing spring is. The strong winds of March blow, the pussy-willows open, the siege of spring fever grips us, short, warm days come, a sweet freshness is in the air as the snow melts and water runs. These are all symptoms of spring.

How we welcome its newness after a dreary winter!

But spring grows old as the April showers begin and the March winds turn to light, warm breezes. More and more beautiful the country sides seem as the birds and flowers add their beauty and gladness to our world of nature.

All too soon spring makes way for summer. Then we must wait through the long, sunshiny summer, the golden richness of autumn and the white clad winter, until another spring comes with its new life of freshness and beauty.

SCHOOL NEWS—

The American history class is studying about the conditions that caused the Spanish-American War, its course and its outcome.

The Latin class is translating the war with Aroivistus, the king of the Germans.

The seniors this week are studying the art of poetry. This includes, not only the reading of poetry but also the mechanics. By this we mean the rhyme, rhythm, poetic foot and meter.

The physics class has found many interesting facts and has studied the statistatus and formulas, pertaining to "Illumination and Its Measurements."
Proper illumination varies from 2 to 50 foot candles, according to the work to be illuminated. We have started the chapter on magnetism, for which study William Gilbert is noted. He was the most distinguished man of science in England during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He explained the variation of the compass needle, the action of the dipping needle, and the laws of magnetic attraction. The idea that the earth itself is a magnet originated with Gilbert. The study of magnetism is a forerunner to electricity which we will take up later.

The general science class has completed the unit, "Heat and Its Control."
It has studied about three different heating systems, the hot air heating system, hot water heating system, and steam heating system. Another important article studied was how to secure proper ventilation. During the study we made bricks, proved that ice takes up more heat than ice water, proved that steam heats water rapidly, and showed water boiling at a temperature of about 122 degrees Fahrenheit. The pressure was reduced over the water.

The advanced typing class has completed typing invoices and is now typing documents.

The sophomores in their English work are now studying the use of clauses. Besides grammar we are improving our etiquette in preparation of the annual "spring tea."

We juniors have discovered that we don't know as much about sentence structures and parts of speech as we thought we did. Miss Busch has been giving us daily drills and assignments on diagraming so that we may understand these fundamentals.

INQUIRING REPORTER

"With Hitler on a rampage, do you ever think that Europe will ever be a consolidated nation?"

Margaret M.: "No, definitely not, because of the rivalry of Germany and Russia."

Bernard H.: "No, because Hitler will never be satisfied to compromise with other dictators."

Rita Fellenz: "No, because there are so many people in Europe opposed to Hitler, that he could never get an army large enough to fight against them."

Eva Buss: "Well, Hitler has gotten Austria and will probably try to get a part of Czechoslovakia and others."

Harold Schlosser: "No, because of the close rivalry between France, Russia and Germany, but, should the problem get too serious, England will step in."

A LOT OF CAR for a VERY LOW PRICE

The Ford effort to make your dollars buy a constantly better car is well illustrated in the Standard Ford V-8.

It has all the basic Ford advantages.
It is built on the same chassis as the De Luxe Ford V-8. It gives you a choice of smooth 85-horsepower or 60-horsepower V-8 engines. But it sells at low prices, and includes bumpers, spare tire, cigar lighter, twin horns and other equipment that make it a still bigger bargain.

With the thrifty 60-horsepower engine, the Standard Ford V-8 is priced especially low and gives the greatest gas mileage in Ford history. Hundreds of owners report averages of 22 to 27 miles a gallon—or even more.

Your pocketbook will approve of the Standard Ford in every way. And so will you when you drive it!
