WILL LABOR DAY BE A "MEMORIAL DAY" FOR YOU?

Labor Day will mark the closing of the outing season and everybody will take advantage of the opportunity afforded to enjoy the final holiday of the summer. You are planning a trip, of course, perhaps only a picnic—but whatever you do, wherever you go, you and your family will be exposed to the danger of accidents. It's fine to plan such a trip, to arrange the details, to contemplate the fun. Why not plan on coming back—safely—alive and well? Determined caution and carefulness should be contemplated as well as the trip itself.

Local Public School to Open Next Tuesday

The summer vacation for school children will come to an end next week with the opening of the 1939-40 school term. The Kewaskum public school will open Tuesday, Sept. 5, the day following Labor Day, at 9 a. m. Principal C. M. Rose requests that all pupils be present the first day. A complete list of teachers and courses offered by the school appeared in these columns two weeks ago.

Thirty-four subjects will be offered in the local high school, including new courses in home economics, which is a very valuable course for all girls. Two new teachers and one additional teacher have been hired for the coming term.

A large attendance is expected when school opens. Many boys and girls plan to avail themselves of the fine opportunities which Kewaskum High school has to offer.

All pupils who were in attendance the past year are urged to bring their text books with them on the opening day of school, so that they may sell them.

The school has an excellent staff of teachers and prospects are promising for another very successful year. An increased enrollment is expected in both the grades and high school.

HOLY TRINITY PAROCHIAL SCHOOL OPENS WEDNESDAY

The Holy Trinity Parochial school will resume classes next Wednesday morning, Sept. 6, one day later than the public school. School will start in the morning with a mass to the Holy Ghost. The same staff of school sisters will be here this year with the exception of Sr. Frances Ramona. Her place will be filled by Sr. Amanda.

Governor Heil and Party Visit Kewaskum

The residents of Kewaskum were surprised and honored to see a big Nash automobile pull into town shortly before six o'clock on Thursday of this week, bearing No. 1 Wisconsin license plates with a gold star. Occupying the car was Gov. Julius P. Heil. In fact there were two cars, containing the governor and several other prominent men. The car was not noticed coming into town but when it stopped at the intersection immediate attention was drawn. The passing of Gov. Heil through Kewaskum was entirely unexpected. He was on his way back from Oshkosh.

The governor and his party entered one of our local taverns very nonchalantly and without unusual notice. But when he introduced himself those inside looked the second time. It didn't take long for the word to spread around and after the astonishment wore off, the governor became a jolly good fellow, the "cokes" being on him. Gov. Heil said he had heard about Kewaskum and so decided to make it a stopping place.

After nearly a half hour stay the party moved half a block farther and stopped again in front of the residence of Police Chief Geo. F. Brandt. There they left the cars again and a round of hand shaking followed. Children attracted to the scene were greeted by the governor and were given a personal reward—a thrill few children have occasion to enjoy.

Before leaving Gov. Heil instructed that his personal greetings be forwarded to Dr. N. Edw. Hausmann of this village, one of his appointed colonels. The governor simply said, "Tell him the chief was here."

VISITOR FROM HOLLAND SPEAKS OF CONDITIONS

Johann Jacob of Aalsmeer Oost, Holland, and Miss Tillie Schmidt of Forest lake spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schaefer, Mr. Jacob spent the summer with Miss Schmidt at Forest lake, being in the United States both on business and for a visit. Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer informed the writer that their guest from Holland talked most interestingly and intelligently during the visit about conditions in Europe and this country, including the current crisis abroad. Mr. Jacob was surprised at the number of people in this vicinity who understand and speak the German language. He stated that the German people like Adolf Hitler but do not want to fight. Over here, he informs, the metropolitan newspapers are filled with current European news and in his country the papers are splashed with President Roosevelt and United States affairs.

Kewaskum Young Man Badly Injured in Auto Collision

Willard Bartelt Sustains Skull Fracture, Four Others Hurt as Cars Collide in West Bend

Willard Bartelt, 21, of this village was critically injured and Killian Honeck, Jr., 20, suffered lesser injuries in a collision between two automobiles at West Bend early last Sunday morning, Aug. 27. The crash took place a block west of Highway 55, on the south end of that city.

Honeck, driver of one car, a Chevrolet coach, was traveling east on the Decorah road, into the city. His car collided with one being driven by Louis Koller of West Bend, who was going west on the same road. Honeck approached the intersection coming down a hill at the scene as the Koller auto came from the east. Officers Wilbur Juech and Roland Weber of West Bend, who investigated the accident, say that Honeck apparently intended to turn north into Sixth avenue. There was a heavy fog at the time and it is thought that because of the impaired vision Honeck changed his mind and decided to stay on the road ahead, at that time the Koller car came along at the intersection. Honeck immediately applied the brakes but the two autos collided with terrific impact.

Bartelt, who was a passenger in the front seat of the Honeck car, sustained a skull fracture and other lesser injuries, amounting to cuts and bruises about the face and body. He was thrown against the windshield and dash board, breaking a big hole in the shatterproof glass. Honeck was also thrown ahead, breaking the steering wheel and shattering the windshield on his right side. He sustained a severely lacerated right hand just below the wrist, which cut the tendons, and other minor cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Val. Mayer of West Bend, a passenger in Koller's auto, received severe cuts and bruises and Fred Wiskirchen, another passenger, and Koller also sustained cuts and bruises of a minor nature.

The injured occupants were rushed to St. Joseph's Community hospital in West Bend for treatment. According to Dr. R. C. Edwards of this village, who treated all of the injured persons, Bartelt did not regain consciousness until Monday evening as the result of the skull fracture. He is still in a semi-conscious state at this writing but is improving slowly although his condition is still dangerous. However, he is recovering as well as can be expected with his injuries, which take a length of time, and he will be confined to the hospital about a month.

Honeck was allowed to return from the hospital on Sunday, but was confined to his home most of the week, suffering from loss of blood and shock, besides his injuries, he lost a large amount of blood as the result of his badly slashed hand, which required a number of stitches. At present he is able to be out again. Mrs. Mayer is still confined at the hospital with her injuries but is expected to return home by the end of this week.

Both cars were damaged almost beyond repair. The entire front end of the Honeck car was pushed in and badly crushed. The auto was brought to the K. A. Honeck garage here Sunday.

Both Honeck and Bartelt are well known young athletes, being members of the Kewaskum baseball and basketball teams. They were returning home from Milwaukee where they had played ball in the afternoon. Bartelt pitched in the afternoon and was already injured in the game, suffering a sprained ankle sliding into second base. Four other players who had accompanied Honeck to Milwaukee escaped the crash by coming home from West Bend with other friends. All of their many friends hope for complete and rapid recovery for Willard and Killian.

TRUCK DESTROYED BY FIRE ON HIGHWAY NORTH OF HERE

A truck owned by the Weston Fruit company of Benton Harbor, Mich., caught fire and was completely destroyed on Highway 55, about a mile north of Kewaskum late Monday afternoon. The machine was being towed by another truck of the company's and was headed toward the south. The fire is believed to have resulted from friction, caused by part of the truck dragging on the highway and throwing sparks. Eighty gallons of gasoline in a tank on the truck exploded and ran onto the road, burning as it ran. The flames spread to the towing truck and ignited it but the fire was extinguished before any damage was done. The other truck was entirely burned and later was brought to Schaefer Bros. garage here, where it now stands. Although the fire department was not called, traffic on the highway was halted for some time, as the burning truck stood directly on the highway.

Mrs. Nic. Haug Died Early This Morning

One of the town of Kewaskum's most beloved women, Mrs. Nic. Haug Jr., 57-year-old Helen A. Koepke, was called in death at 5:40 a. m. this morning, Friday, Sept. 1, at her farm home, located one mile east of Kewaskum, following an extended illness of five months' duration. Although ailing for a length of time her death came unexpectedly and as a great shock to her family and many friends.

Mrs. Haug was born Dec. 16, 1881 in the town of Kewaskum, and spent the greater part of her life there. She resided in the town of Kewaskum until her marriage to Nic. Haug Jr., which took place April 22, 1908 at the Koepke homestead, also in the town of Kewaskum. The couple took up their residence in northern Wisconsin, where they remained for three and one-half years. They returned to this community and made their home at Campbelleport for two years and then took up their residence in the town of Kewaskum again, having lived in that township since.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Haug is survived by a daughter, Rosella (Mrs. Walter Butzlaff) of the town of Kewaskum; one son, Wesley of the town of Wayne; four brothers, Albert and Leander Koepke of the town of Kewaskum and Herman and Edmond Koepke of West Bend; five sisters, Hulda Koepke, Adela (Mrs. Fred Wick) and Antoinette (Mrs. William Cutter) of Milwaukee, Virginia and Adeline Koepke of the town of Kewaskum, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday, Sept. 4, at Miller's Funeral home in this village, with the Rev. A. H. Otto of West Bend officiating. Interment will be made at Washington County Memorial park, West Bend.

Mrs. Haug was a kind mother and a lover of home and family, who possessed a lovable nature, which endeared her within her family circle and also throughout the community. She bore her long suffering patiently and was not known to complain, that being the type of noble woman she was. The death of this grand woman will be felt with genuine regret by all who knew Mrs. Haug. Her memory will be cherished by those near and dear to her, to whom we express our heartfelt condolences.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY HENRY W. PORTER

Roosevelt Appeals to Germany And Poland to Try for Peace; England and France Mobilize

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

In a desperate effort to avert the holocaust of war which threatens to engulf Europe, President Roosevelt appealed directly to Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany and President Ignace Moscicki to refrain from hostilities for a "reasonable and stipulated period" and attempt to settle their difference by

- 1. Direct negotiation,
2. Submission of these controversies to an impartial arbitration in which they can both have confidence, or
3. Agree to the solution of these controversies through the procedure of conciliation, selecting as conciliator or moderator a national of one of the traditionally neutral states of Europe, or a national of one of the American republics which are all of them free from any connection with or participation in European political affairs.

EUROPE: Near the Abyss

Through the doorway of historic 10 Downing street stepped Neville Chamberlain, prime minister of Great Britain, dressed in somber black and more grave-faced than he has been for months.

Standing in the house of commons, called in emergency session for the eighth time since the World war, the premier, twisting his hands and speaking in a strained voice, made a speech, heard by millions of listeners all over the world.

Not only did it free Germany from fear of having to fight enemies on the eastern as well as the western front, as she did in the World war, but it put an end to British and French hopes of getting Russia to join them in a tri-power alliance to "stop Hitler."

That is the unmistakable meaning of Article 4 of the non-aggression pact which stated that "Neither of the two contracting parties will participate in any grouping of powers which directly or indirectly is pointed against the other party to this agreement."

Chamberlain opened his speech by the declaration that "new and drastic steps are required by the gravity of the situation" and that he hoped it would be possible for the Emergency Powers Defense bill, giving his government dictatorial, wartime powers, to be signed by the king immediately after its approval by parliament.

Meanwhile the ominous tramp, tramp, tramp of armed men was sounding in other countries directly involved in the crisis.

On this side of the Atlantic President Roosevelt cut short his North Atlantic fishing cruise and hurried back to Washington to confer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Undersecretary Sumner Welles.

His first step was to send a personal message, via Ambassador William Phillips, to King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy expressing the hope that the king would find some way of exercising his influence in behalf of the maintenance of peace.

Five hours later Pope Pius XII, supreme head of the Catholic church, went on the air with an urgent appeal for peace.

Twelve hours before Great Britain's parliament met in emergency session to give Neville Chamberlain dictatorial and wartime powers, another meeting was held in the massive-walled Kremlin in Moscow.

Insisting that the economic questions at Tientsin are "purely British-Japanese," the Japanese foreign office has rejected a British suggestion that other powers be called in to discuss the question.

A tale of visits with German and Italian embassy officials in Washington, of conferences with Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader, of making arrangements with a group of Arabs to picket a Washington hotel where a Jewish meeting was being held was unfolded this week before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities in the United States.

California, who testified that the purpose of the organizations he represented was to "fight Jewish Communism," was the threat of the committee to prosecute 37-year-old Fraser Gardner of Washington whom they accused of seeking a job as a committee investigator in order to spy on its activities.

There are 11 states that have laws fixing Thanksgiving day for the last Thursday in November of each year. Their legislatures are not in session. They will not be called into session again before the forthcoming Thanksgiving day.

For the reasons of its establishment, it strikes me that there ought not to be a national law on the subject. It is a sacred thing. But my guess is there will be a law and that law will say that the last Thursday in November shall be set aside as a national holiday for expression of our gratitude.

Mr. Roosevelt surely could not have guessed the repercussions, the backfire, that has greeted his announcement and that has continued unabated fury.

President Hits Top in Precedent Breaking in Thanksgiving Change

Stirs Up More Comment Than Any Statement Ever Emanating From a Chief Executive; Element of Uncertainty Injected Is What Makes It Harmful.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—President Roosevelt's ability to keep things stirred up has been demonstrated numerous times since his accession to the White House. He seems to have a highly developed penchant for doing the unexpected. He calls it "precedent breaking." The results have been varied, although it strikes me that more of the "breaks" have been against him in recent months than when he first began to break precedents as President in 1933.

It appears, however, that Mr. Roosevelt reached a new peak in precedent breaking when he changed the date of our annual Thanksgiving day. Probably no statement ever forthcoming from a Chief Executive stirred up as much comment—unless perhaps it was the famous statement by Calvin Coolidge that "I do not choose to run." True, Mr. Roosevelt moved the date only one week, making this year's Thanksgiving day, Thursday, November 23, instead of November 30. The effect was the same, however, whether the change was one week or one month. Next year, he proposes that the date should be moved forward another week so that thereafter the date upon which we pay homage to God, as a nation, will be the second Thursday in November, instead of the last Thursday of the month.

In announcing his plan, the President said he was desirous of rearranging the November holiday so that "holidays will be more evenly spaced." There is Labor day on the first Monday in September, there are no national holidays in October; Thanksgiving day in November and Christmas day near the end of December. So, Mr. Roosevelt said it seemed better to move Thanksgiving day a bit forward. His action, he explained, was taken after many business men had urged it as a means of giving more time for Christmas shopping. It is well known that shoppers do not really get going in their Christmas buying until after Thanksgiving day, and Mr. Roosevelt said the change might spread out the usual rush.

Thanksgiving Day Change Stirs Up Unusual Comment

Whatever the reason for the change, the announcement broke out of all the hissing steam that was pent up. Business interests here and there tried vainly to show a united front. But that was impossible because retailers disagreed as to the possible benefits. There was no disclosure by the President of the identity of those business interests he had consulted. Some lines of trade felt that terrific damage had been done them and their shouts were angry. Religious groups have remained silent, as organizations, but their individual members have had unpleasant things to say about the change. Altogether, the picture is one to show a bad reaction throughout the nation.

Let us look at the thing, however, from a practical standpoint. Mr. Roosevelt made his announcement without consulting the state department. If he had sought advice there, he would have learned that a presidential proclamation can be enforced only in the District of Columbia and the territories of the United States. No state needs pay any attention to a White House proclamation unless it desires to do so.

Hence, the declaration that Thanksgiving day shall be November 23, 1939, is binding only upon us folks here in Washington, and those in Alaska, Puerto Rico and Hawaii.

There are 11 states that have laws fixing Thanksgiving day for the last Thursday in November of each year. Their legislatures are not in session. They will not be called into session again before the forthcoming Thanksgiving day.

For the reasons of its establishment, it strikes me that there ought not to be a national law on the subject. It is a sacred thing. But my guess is there will be a law and that law will say that the last Thursday in November shall be set aside as a national holiday for expression of our gratitude.

Wisconsin News Briefly Told

Armory Bill Vetoed—Gov. Heil vetoed a bill which would have established a public corporation authorized to finance the construction of 25 national guard armories in Wisconsin.

Two Rivers Bans Fireworks—Joining with other Wisconsin cities who have passed legislation to help make the Fourth of July safe and sane, the Two Rivers city council adopted an ordinance banning the sale and discharge of fireworks.

Held in Fatal Shooting—Miss Harriet Stoll, 32, of Cable, was charged with fourth-degree manslaughter in the fatal shooting of Charles Moore, 65, also of Cable. Dist. Atty. Walter Norlin said Miss Stoll told him she fired at what she thought was a bear.

Mystery Ailment Fatal—Doctors are puzzled by the death of Doris Ellwood, 18, who died at a Rice Lake hospital after her jaws had been clamped tightly for three days. The ailment was an infection may have occurred in her throat that caused paralysis.

License Poultry Dealers—The assembly concurred in a senate bill licensing, bonding and regulating poultry dealers without an established place of business in counties in which they operate. It now goes to the governor. The measure would require a bond of $1,000 and payment of a license fee of $2 annually.

Attack Milk Price Fixing—Abandonment of all governmental price restrictions on milk and reliance upon the law of supply and demand was proposed at a meeting of Oconto dairy farmers seeking to organize a milk producers and consumers council to investigate government dairy price fixing.

Motor Vehicle Bill Passed—The senate concurred, 21 to 7, in an assembly amendment to the White bill which creates a new motor vehicle department to take over activities now being performed by the secretary of state's office. The measure was sent to the governor for his signature.

Gypsies Rob Woman—Mrs. John Kedrowski, Marathon county farm woman, complained to Sheriff Gumm that a gypsy couple robbed her of $848 and a diamond ring. She said the gypsies, who were selling herbs, apparently took the money from her purse while she was pursuing two chickens which the couple offered to purchase.

Board Change Killed—The assembly, without debate, defeated proposals to change the public service commission and to establish a board of administrative review. The vote, 53 to 38, was against changing the present three-man public service commission to a one-man directorship despite the senate's earlier approval of the plan.

Law Restricts Car Parking—State employees henceforth will have no special privileges in the parking of automobiles around the state capitol. Gov. Heil signed a bill which requires capitol policemen to keep the four entrances to the capitol clear of cars and permits Madison to restrict by ordinance parking along the inside curb of Capitol square.

Shorter Session Proposed—With the present legislative session now in its ninth month, four assemblymen proposed a constitutional amendment which would require future legislatures to transact their business in six months. A joint resolution to submit the proposal to the voters was introduced. It would have each legislature meet in January and adjourn sine die in June.

Operating Expense Down—Operating expenses of the beverage tax division since 1937 had been slashed 55 per cent and its personnel cut almost in half while tax revenue has increased. The administrative cost of collecting each dollar of revenue in the first seven months of 1939 dropped to 3 1/2 cents as compared with 6 3/4 cents in 1937 and 5 1/2 cents in 1938.

Ex-Cop Admits Burglaries—Detective Captain Adolph Kramer announced that a former Milwaukee policeman whose stepson was shot to death in a Kenosha county burglary had admitted participation in 15 Milwaukee county burglaries in recent months. The ex-officer, ousted from the Milwaukee police force a year ago, is Ernst Berg, 43.

Sentenced for Bank Threat—Russel Barry, 18, of Denver, Colo., who attempted to hold up the Milwaukee Marine National bank under a threat of using "nitroglycerin" was sentenced to serve one year to 21 months in the Green Bay State reformatory. Barry, carrying a bottle of witch hazel, entered the bank on Aug. 11, gave tellers a note saying he carried nitroglycerin and demanded money. The tellers gave the note to a customer who summoned the police.

Milk Prices Show Gain—Milk prices received by state farmers during July showed a slight increase for the third consecutive month but were still below those of a year ago. The price received during the month averaged $1.12 a hundred—about 8 cents below the July, 1938, price. Despite poor pasture conditions durstate farms declined only about the slightly larger number of milk cows in the state than a year ago.

T. B. Among Cattle Low—The incidence of bovine tuberculosis is reduced to a minimum. Slightly less cattle tested in this state under the bovine tuberculosis program during the last fiscal year were found to be reactors. Fulfilling a systematic test schedule carried on by the state and federal governments, the tests were applied to 806,913 cattle in Wisconsin. The exact number of cattle reacting to the tests was 2,008 or .24 of one per cent.

Pennsylvania Is Rich In Colonial Era Data

Pennsylvania is rich in historical associations that date from earliest colonial times. Fort Mifflin National Battlefield site, administered by the National Park Service, memorializes a battle in which George Washington, then a major of the Virginia militia, met defeat at the hands of the French and Indians.

Washington, advancing upon the French forts in western Pennsylvania with a force of 300 men, learned that a large detachment of the French was approaching. He hastily threw up crude entrenchments called Fort Mifflin.

For nine hours the French and their Indian allies unrelentingly attacked the makeshift fort. Then a parley was called, as a result of which Washington with his little garrison was permitted to retreat, in order and with the honors of war, on condition that he surrender the prisoners he had previously taken.

Drabness in Decoration Is Unforgivable

By BETTY WELLS

We'll forgive you anything but drabness in your interior decorations these days. By that we don't mean the smartly subtle monotonies that are vying with the brilliant colors for fashion importance. But the poised monotone room isn't the same thing at all as the drab room. To get an effect with the illusive, dusty tones so popular these days, you match your colors with the greatest of care and work toward glowing but muted effects. Whereas a drab room is usually a matter of a lot of muddy colors all thrown in together, willy nilly, because "they won't show dirt."

If you have a deep taupe to contend with, for instance, use it with light shades of the same color, then add for accent a brilliant high color. Or if it's the pale dusty tones that are on your mind, use gradations of the same color, complemented with subdued pastels. We might as well warn you, however, that doing rooms in neutral tones is a lot harder than working with clear positive colors.

There have been some rather pleasant compromises on this point in modified modern rooms exhibited this summer. A new bedroom, for instance, was furnished in pale mahogany of Swedish modern design. The walls and curtains were both in safe au lait, with the tops of the windows finished with swags and jabots of the same color. A circular rug in a natural greige had a fringed edge, while a pair of small upholstered side chairs in flowered chintz on a white unframed mirrored table with a white panel assembled with a pair of framed in bleached wood. Another group of wedged against the side of the shaft, and this led the Michigan college of mines to make experiments. The HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Two Kinds of Death"

HELLO EVERYBODY: This is the story of a man who had a choice to make—a choice between two kinds of death.

One of those deaths was certain—and unpleasant. If he chose the other, he'd at least have a chance.

But he chose the death that was unpleasant—and certain!

Anthony A. Hensler is his name, and he lives in New York City. Tony is an aviator, and one day in the latter part of July, 1927, he had a call from Andy Andrews, who was then senior pilot at Curtis field out in Mineola.

Andy wanted to get hold of somebody who could take a blimp up in the air and put it through test flights. There were few men available in the East, at that time, who knew enough to test fly a blimp, and Tony Hensler was one of them. Andy asked him if he would do the job.

Tony said it was all right with him, and Andy took him to meet a fellow named Hamza who owned the blimp. The arrangements were made and Tony went to work. He did a little tinkering with the machinery and finally had the big gas bag whipped into shape for a first hop.

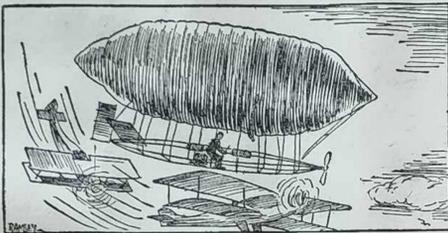

The department of commerce lays down certain rules by which various types of aircraft are tested, and the rule in regard to blimps was that the first hop had to be a fixed flight. That means that the blimp is sent aloft with a line attached to the ground, so that if anything goes wrong it can't get away, float over the city and kill somebody or damage property in coming down.

Tony Decides on a Second Fixed Flight.

Tony made that fixed flight. He adjusted the controls and centered the stabilization. But just to make sure everything was in good shape he decided to make a second fixed flight a few days later, when he checked those controls over again. And three days later, on the third of August, he did make that fixed flight. And it nearly fixed Tony for good.

Tony climbed into the blimp all set for what he thought was going to be just another routine test in a captive balloon firmly anchored to the ground by a land line. But the trouble wasn't long in starting. No sooner was the blimp in the air than the land line snapped and the big gas bag started shooting upward.

"She went up to 6,000 feet before I got the motor started," Tony says, "but the motor, a two-cylinder, high-speed motorcycle engine, finally began to turn over, and for a while everything went swell. But not for long. I was just over Manhattan, with my spirits as high as my ship,

They were creating a wind of their own that was slowly turning the blimp's nose around.

when things began to happen. And what I mean, everything happened at once. My controls began to go sour. The big bag began to hog badly. And to make matters worse, a large hole appeared in the nose of the ship.

"I shut off the motor for fear of an explosion. I had carried 15,000 cubic feet of hydrogen when I left the airport, and if a motor spark ever got into any of that leaking gas it would blow me and the blimp to bits."

The ship was losing altitude fast. The city seemed a long way down, but it was getting closer with alarming speed. And then Tony took a desperate chance—did the only thing he could to save himself and avoid crashing on a tall building or in a crowded New York street. He climbed out on the narrow catwalk and pulled on the foremost suspension cords, doubling the cloth over the hole in the bag's nose to prevent any more hydrogen leaking out of the balloon.

The Blimp Wallowed Helplessly in Mid-air.

"After securing those ropes," he says, "I felt a little better, for I then knew that the ship wouldn't crash in the crowded city. But I still didn't dare start the motor, and the blimp was wallowing helplessly in mid air. And what was worse still, the wind was carrying me out to sea."

And right there was where Tony had to make his choice—his choice between two kinds of death. There was a slim chance that he might bring that big bag down safely in crowded New York. On the other side of the picture was the prospect of blowing far out to sea and drowning in the Atlantic. Drowning wasn't a pleasant thought. It would be much better to try and make a landing in New York—for Tony. But what better to try and make a landing in New York? If Tony landed like ants as they crawled along the crowded streets? If Tony landed among them there was a pretty good chance that a lot of them would be killed.

So Tony made his choice, and he chose the sure, unpleasant death rather than taking a fighting chance and perhaps killing someone else. He sat still and did nothing while the wind carried him out to sea!

Tony Recognizes a Woman Pilot.

Out across New York harbor he floated—out toward Sandy Hook and the ocean—and his doom! And then, from over the Jersey shore Tony saw two planes coming in his direction. As they neared him, he recognized one. It was the plane of Thea Rasch the famous German woman pilot.

The two planes came closer and closer. They couldn't take Tony off that blimp in mid-air. In fact, it didn't look as though there was much they could do but stand by, or return to the airport from which they had come, and send help. But Tony wasn't counting on the ingenuity of Thea Rasch. She headed straight for the blimp until Tony thought she was going to crash into it—and she could feel the wind of the plane as it dived under him. The other plane followed suit. They were creating a wind of their own that was slowly turning the blimp's nose around—pointing it back to land.

About that time, too, the wind that was blowing him out to sea shifted to another quarter. Aided by that, and by the two planes, Tony finally landed at College Point, L. I., and there he was met by a crowd that would pack the Yankee stadium, including the College Point police reserves.

"None, I wasn't locked up," says Tony. "But if it hadn't been for the backwash of those two planes I'd have blown out to sea and never found again."

Earth's Motion Interferes With the Law of Gravity

If you make a deep hole in the earth you can't drop anything to the bottom, because the earth moves on the side of the hole stops the falling object. This has been proved by experiments in the deep shafts of the American copper mines. Tools dropped from the mouth of a shaft were not found at the bottom but were wedged against the side of the shaft, and this led the Michigan college of mines to make experiments. The piece of goods with the ends seamed together with a French seam. The top and bottom are bound with prepared bias binding. A single cord is run through the binding at the bottom. It is drawn up to leave a small opening and the ends are tied and sewn securely. Two cords are run through the top with a loop of each cord left on the outside so that the bag may be drawn up by pulling them. The ball of twine is placed inside with the end running through the bottom opening ready for use.

WEED ERADICATION

The months of September and October are the best months for eradicating weeds with the aid of chemicals. Where the field can be cultivated chemicals are not recommended because of the expense involved except for field bindweed. For destroying weeds along fence rows, the use of chemicals is perhaps the cheapest method.

Farmers are advised to check their fields carefully for field bindweed or Creeping Jenny. This weed holds the No. 1 rank in being hard to destroy. The use of sodium chlorate at the rate of four (4) lbs. per square rod is, perhaps, the surest way. It makes no difference, experiments show, whether the sodium chlorate is applied as a powder or as a solution. The main thing to remember is to apply at least 4 lbs. of the chemical for every square rod to be treated. Since weeds send out many long lateral roots, the treatment should extend several feet beyond the surface area affected.

About 2 1/2 lbs. of the chemical per square rod, is considered sufficient for Canada thistle or Quack grass. It should be applied only on small patches of these weeds. Larger areas can most advantageously be controlled by cultivation methods.

The New McCormick-Deering All-Steel Manure Spreader

STEEL frame, steel box, steel bracings—ALL STEEL all the way through. That's what you get in a new McCormick-Deering All-Steel Manure Spreader. The rust-resisting, non-warping box is built of heavy-gauge galvanized steel containing copper. It is low for easy loading and has a capacity of 60 to 70 bushels.

The McCormick-Deering has five spreading speeds. The upper saw-tooth, non-wrapping beater, the lower spike-tooth beater, and the widespread spiral shred the manure and spread it in an even layer over the soil.

Remarkably light draft is provided by the use of eight roller bearings and pressure lubrication.

Inspect this latest and finest spreader now on display in our store.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and doped, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble. If you eat the sugar-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft, "bulky" mass in the intestine. If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine. It's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold in every grocery.

Disobedience Often Sign of Forgetfulness

IMPULSIVE ACTS OF child are made without thought either of being obedient or disobedient. Help in remembering often much more necessary than any form of punishment.

By GEORGIA LOTT SELTER

"OH, WHY need children be quite so heedless and disobedient?" sighed Mary Lance wearily. "I wonder if they really are," answered her neighbor, Mrs. Jaynes, comfortably. "They behave as they do because they are children. They usually act on impulse, without any thought either of being obedient or disobedient. You must expect such conduct until they begin to acquire the knowledge that experience brings."

"I'm convinced that children need real help in remembering much more frequently than they need punishment. This belief is based partly on my own never-to-be-forgotten childish experience with a detested red apron. My aunt, with whom I lived, made me a big house apron from one of her old house dresses and said: 'Lucy, your school dress each morning until your work is done.' I had no objection to that, but several times each week I rushed heedlessly away to school, flaunting the apron's faded ugliness for all to see. My aunt always sent a message by an older girl who was our neighbor, reminding me to remove the apron. And no reproach was ever considered complete until these episodes of the red apron were held up to me as evidence of my disobedience!

"I've never forgotten the unhappiness and embarrassment they incurred. Yet how easily my aunt might have prevented them. She could have said, 'Always come to me before you start to school to be sure you look nice.' Or, 'Always kiss me good-by, Lucy.' My love-hungry little heart would never have allowed me to forget to do that, you may be sure! And there would have been no hurting apron episode."

"But Henry's case is different," said Mrs. Lance. "He is a boy and should learn to take responsibility. Yet he never remembers his chores or his errands."

"Appreciation Lightens Labor." "He just needs the help of a little reminder," insisted Mrs. Jaynes. "Suppose you mention it casually before his father each time he does his work well and without being reminded? Even we older folks find that appreciation lightens labor. 'Try to make work pleasant. Never use it as a punishment. 'Let work lead naturally to suitable rewards. If Henry helps you with the dishes and tidies the house, it would be quite evident that you would have more time. Perhaps you could both go to the movies or to a restaurant. When he has learned to prepare food he can have picnics and parties. If he keeps his room in order, let him know how restful you find it when you go in to spend a few moments with him. If he takes good care of his clothes, brushing them and hanging them up neatly, he would be happy indeed if Mother should buy for Father and him two articles just alike."

"If Henry is apt to forget his duties, do not credit it to disobedience but study how you may make it interesting and profitable for him to remember. Children dread to work alone, so make his duties, so far as you reasonably can, something that you can share. Do not expect results beyond the ability of his years. Praise him when he does well. Reward him in a natural and sensible way. Help him remember for he honestly needs your help. "And presently you will have the satisfaction of seeing that he has acquired the habit of reliability and accepts work as a pleasant and necessary part of normal living."

Ben Jonson Burial

Tradition says that Ben Jonson was buried in a sitting position because the plot provided for him on the north side of the nave in Westminster abbey was not large enough for the body to be placed in the grave in a horizontal position. According to a legend, King Charles I personally promised Jonson that he should be interred in the abbey in any spot that he might choose. After his death August 6, 1637, it was found that the space he occupied except about "eighteen inches of square ground." Charles buried with his head toward the sky, be so honored. The famous inscription, "O Rare Ben Jonson," was cut in the slab over his grave. Many years later a portrait bust to his memory was placed in the Poet's corner.

NEW YORK.—With Edward R. Stettinius Jr. as chairman, the newly announced war resources board can be expected to function smoothly. The chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation goes from his home at 21 East Seventy-Ninth street to his office at Broadway and Rector by subway to save more time. He eats no lunch to save more time. He cuts through formalities with his many business callers and saves more.

Stettinius is that reputed rarity, a rich man's son who has made good. His father became an industrial leader in St. Louis, and was invited to become a Morgan partner. The son lost little time after his graduation from the University of Virginia in beginning his business career, not because he had to, but because he wanted to work. He was 24 years old when he went into General Motors in 1924, 31 when he became vice president, 34 when he was made vice chairman of the finance committee of U. S. Steel and 38 when he took the top job as chairman of the board.

Modernity stands out in the strong lines of his figure, his crisp speech, and his attitude toward problems of politics and business. They say he nearly fainted when he first saw the office furniture of the 21 floors of the Steel Corporation building after he became chairman. The rollout desks and similar items were unchanged since the days of Judge Gary. The refurbishing began immediately under Stettinius and was thorough.

Mr. Stettinius plays neither bridge nor golf; he takes his exercise on the bedroom floor, and occasionally goes out to his 500-acre farm in Virginia.

OWEN A. TOMLINSON, the man who forbade the building of an 11-foot mound on the top of Mt. Rainier so that it might retain its laurels as third highest mountain in the United States, was once a captain in the Philippine scouts under Gen. J. G. Harbord. Before that he was a buck private in the United States army, in which, together, he served 14 years, participating in the Philippine insurrection. He was born in Whitestown, Ind., 57 years ago, and in 1923, after leaving the army, he was appointed superintendent of the Rainier National park.

When Tomlinson, sorrowfully, refused to permit the Tacoma chamber of commerce to pile, as it were, Pelion on Ossa, thus bringing Rainier a foot higher than Massive of Colorado, he underwent some of the tribulations that used to be his when, as lieutenant-governor of the sub-province of Ifugao in the Philippines, he had some 130,000 head-hunting savages to handle. However, report has it that public clamor is dying down, a tribute to Captain Tomlinson's persuasive tact in convincing his fellow statesmen that little of the genuine honor lies in the artificial adding of cubits to stature.

GEN. JUAN YAGUE is named by Generalissimo Francisco Franco as minister of air in the new cabinet he has formed and of which he has named himself as premier. So far as advices from Spain are concerned, this is the most favorable news concerning Yague heard since the fall of Toledo.

Outspoken always, he is the man who, in preliminary maneuvers of the advance upon Lerida, accused Franco of sanctioning the bombing of open cities and of sounding off too eloquently in praise of German and Italian contingents in the Rebel army. For this contumacy, report had him behind bars and later a suicide—both, to quote Mark Twain, greatly exaggerated.

Later, when he was removed from command of his Moroccan corps, a personal disaster, specifically, the garrote, was reported to awaiting him. And so what? Nothing short of bestowal of the aerial portfolio and the consequent strengthening of the falange as the backbone of post-war Spain.

BASEBALL NEWS

Kewaskum Team Cinches Second Place by Beating Belles in Pitchers' Duel

Marx Bests Keno in 1 to 0 Battle Here Sunday

In the tightest pitcher's battle of the season Kewaskum nosed out the neighboring Campbellsport nine on the local ball grounds last Sunday by a score of 1 to 0. The victory cinches second place for the team in the Kettle Moraine league this season. Marx and Keno opposed each other on the mound and both pitched their best game of the year, providing a thrilling afternoon for the fans.

In the second half now Kewaskum has won 4 games and lost 2, being tied with Adell, Campbellsport and Waldo. However, Kewaskum won 5 and lost 2 the first half while Adell and Campbellsport won 2 and lost 4 and Waldo won 2 and lost 4. The total for both halves shows Kewaskum winning 8 and losing 4 while Adell won 7 and lost 6, Campbellsport 7 and 6 and Waldo 6 and 6. Kewaskum has one more game to play at Waldo Monday, Labor Day, but will still win second place if defeated. Adell and Campbellsport have a game to play but no matter which team wins final standing will be 8 games won and 6 lost. Kewaskum's record will be 8 won and 5 lost even if beaten, and 10 and 4 if they win.

With the performances they put up, both Marx and Keno deserved to win last Sunday, although Marx had the advantage by a small margin. Keno allowed the locals 6 hits while Marx allowed the opponents 5. Marx struck out 5 Belles as compared to 7 for Keno. Both pitchers kept the hits well scattered. Marx walked 4, Keno 1. With a timely hit at an error Campbellsport might have won just as well as the home team. As it was Kewaskum got the timely hit and this one run accounted for the ball game.

Kewaskum had two men on bases in the first inning with none out but failed to score, again in the third the locals had 2 men on with one out but did not tally, as Keno forced the next two batters to pop out. The visitors had the bases full with two out in the 4th game as the result of three walks but Marx made up for it by striking out the third batter. The Belles did not threaten again until the 5th when two men got on by hitting singles. Again they failed to score as the third man grounded out. A hit in any of the above instances might have meant victory.

It was also in the 5th inning that Kewaskum scored its winning run. With two men out, Harbeck singled and stole second base. Then Dorn came through with a single and Harbeck scored from second.

We stated last week that the teams were evenly matched and it would be a close battle. It couldn't have been any closer. Both teams deserve an equal amount of credit for the fine ball game played, especially the pitchers. Our hats are off to the Belles for the way they came back to play fine ball away from home after performing joggly in the first game between the teams on their home diamond.

As for hitting stars, not a man got an extra base hit and none got more than 1 hit. Kewaskum played without two regulars—Kilian Honeck and Willard Bartelt, both of whom were injured in an auto accident the night before. Honeck was scheduled to pitch in the game and Bartelt was to catch. Paul Kral took over the catching duties in Bartelt's place and did a good job.

Kewaskum PLAYS FINAL GAME AT WALDO MONDAY, LABOR DAY. The 1938 baseball season for Kewaskum in the Kettle Moraine league will be brought to a close on Monday, Labor Day, Sept. 4, when the local team travels to Waldo to play the postponed game of Aug. 13. The schedule of games came to a close on Aug. 20 but the teams are still playing makeup games. However, the game at Waldo will be the last in the circuit. The other makeup game between Campbellsport and Adell will be played Sunday. Kewaskum has second place cinched but will give its all to uphold its reputation and down Waldo to attain a final standing of 10 games won and 4 lost. Waldo will be out to gain a higher position for the second half than Kewaskum. The teams are tied at present. Go to the game and help the boys along and show them you are behind them for the excellent ball they have played this season, their first in the Moraine league. In their first meeting here Kewaskum nosed out Waldo 6-5.

Kewaskum BEATS MILWAUKEE AGGREGATION SECOND TIME. A team of Kewaskum players traveled to Milwaukee last Saturday and defeated the United Auto Workers' Union No. 232 team for the second time by a score of 10 to 3. In a previous game here the local nine were victorious, 12 to 3. The game in the city was played at 23rd and Auer avenue, one of the finest ball diamonds in that city. The Kewaskum team was composed mainly of Kettle Moraine players.

Willard Bartelt did the pitching for Kewaskum and also did well with the bat, banging out 3 hits. The veteran Art Raesch carried the mound chores for the losers. Prost hit a home run for Kewaskum.

Weekly Letter

From Washington County Assemblyman Jos. A. Schmitz Wisconsin Legislature, Madison

DELAY LEGISLATURE. The reason why the legislature is still in session and is not able to agree on a tax bill is because the progressive members of both houses, and especially those in the senate, are using every parliamentary tactic known to delay and hamper the progress of the present administration and to embarrass the members of the Republican and Democratic parties.

Senator Nelson of Maple, the 11th district representative, who is regarded as the chief "Hill" hater since he switched from the Republican to the Progressive party, has often complained that the senate was not making progress expected but of late he has been more responsible for delays by attempting to block action through imposing "calls of the house," or engaging in other dilatory tactics more than anyone else.

ATTEND STATE FAIR. Day to Wednesday being Governor's Day at the state fair, the assembly adjourned at 10 a. m. on that day and a majority of its members including your assemblyman, drove to Milwaukee and visited the fair. It appears that the fair is annually becoming more popular, and had it not been for the bad weather "breaks" there is no doubt that attendance this year would have exceeded all past records. The recreational and educational features offered there are well worth the expense and effort of such a visit.

The price cattle, horses, sheep and hogs, the splendid handwork of the busy housewives, prize cakes, pies and desserts, new inventions in farm machinery, beautiful trotting, aerial acts, flower show, prize vegetables and fruit displays, etc., are a revelation to behold and will not so soon be forgotten.

FLUID MILK ACT. Another attempt is being made, this time by the senate, to extend the existing fluid milk price control act, which expires on December 31 of this year for another two year emergency period.

A bill to this effect has passed the senate and will come up before the assembly for concurrence this week. This new measure is intended to be in the form of a compromise to avoid objections to proposed new provisions. As you may recall, the assembly several weeks ago, spent much time on a similar measure and finally killed it entirely deciding to try a year of no control of any kind. It is believed that this new senate proposal will receive the same treatment the previous proposal did.

NEW LICENSE PLATES. Motorists who want to match the color of their new or repainted automobiles to conform to the new 1940 license plates may be interested in knowing that the new ones will have red at the Waupun prison where the plates are turned out have given assurance that better paint will be used this year so that the white part will not rub off. They will mix the paints there instead of buying them from a commercial concern which caused the state embarrassment because the enamel wore off due to unsuccessful experiments to effect economies.

FARM AND HOME LINES. Wisconsin has about 19,000 acres of sweet corn to be harvested for canning this year. This is the smallest acreage reported for the state in the past four years.

Although the corn crop is expected to be about 10 per cent smaller than the large crop of last year, present estimates indicate that over 81 million bushels will be harvested in the state this year. In La Crosse county, farmers have been practicing strip cropping and other means of erosion control for more than a quarter of a century. Among the first was Herbert Kramer in Mormon Coulee who has practiced strip cropping for over 30 years.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS CAN BE PREVENTED

Here are the distances required to bring your car to a standstill from speeds of 20 to 70 miles an hour—these figures are based on perfect brakes under perfect road conditions. For drivers realize how far their cars travel before they actually apply their brakes. The state vehicle and driver safety for stopping and brakes. Every motor vehicle operated upon the public highways is required to have brakes in good working order, and to stop and to maintain his responsibility to the driver's safety. It is the driver's responsibility to take the necessary steps to bring his vehicle to a safe stop under absolute control at all times. Nearly 900 persons lost their lives in motor vehicle accidents on Wisconsin highways during 1937, and over 8,700 were injured. The economic loss in this state approximately fifty million dollars annually. The majority of highway accidents are avoidable, and unless motorists themselves exercise better judgment it will soon be necessary for them to conform to drastic regulations that driving will no longer be a pleasure in administering the driver's license regulations the Motor Vehicle Division of the Department of State is co-operating closely with the courts and enforcement officials in the suspension and revocation of the driving privileges of irresponsible motorists. The only effective method of making our highways safe for the majority of careful drivers is to take the reckless minority out of circulation. (MVD-7)

County Potato Meeting Sunday Well Attended

More than 150 potato growers of southeastern Wisconsin gathered at the Reinhold Kressin farm near Rockfield, Sunday afternoon to see the county potato demonstration plots. The plots were in charge of County Agricultural Agent E. S. Skalsky who had planted more than a score of varieties of potatoes to try them out for yield, disease, resistance and growth behavior. The program presented during the forepart of the meeting consisted of a discussion of potato disease problems by J. G. Milward, of the college of agriculture.

Mr. Milward pointed out that at present there is considerable late blight in potatoes in the northwestern part of the state, but there is little probability of it spreading to local areas as long as the present dry weather continues. However, much cool, damp weather such as we had a year ago might cause infestations in Washington county and other areas nearby. Late blight, it will be recalled, was the disease that ruined southern Wisconsin potato crops during the past year.

Mr. Skalsky next discussed the growing of potatoes with special reference to seed treatment, and cultivation practices applicable to local conditions. He stressed the need of more and better seed treatment for scab control, a more complete spray program for leaf hopper and blight control, and more careful cultivation practices particularly as the vine growth reaches maturity. The potato plant, he pointed out, sends out a prolific root system which spreads well towards the center of the row. Deep and close cultivation will do more damage than good under such conditions. The need of using clean and pure seed as a means of obtaining better markets at harvest time was also stressed.

Mr. Reinhold Kressin, who is recognized as one of southeastern Wisconsin's largest seed potato producers, answered many questions concerning various varieties planted in the demonstration plot as well as his own cultivation practices which he carries out on his farm. Potato growers from Fond du Lac, Ozaukee, Sheboygan, Milwaukee, Waukesha and Racine counties were among those present.
