Bicycle Meet and Outing at Mauthe Lake This Week End

Kewaskum Band to Meet Special Train at 10 A. M. Sunday Containing Between 400 and 500 Cycle Enthusi- asts; Others to Race Out From Milwaukee For State Championship

Saturday and Sunday, Sept 9 and 10, are the dates set for the big bicycle meet and outing at Mauthe lake, west of Kewaskum, in the Kettle Moraine state park. Activities will be in progress from Saturday afternoon and will continue through Sunday.

Two special coaches, containing two special coaches, will arrive from Chicago Saturday afternoon at 2:28. From here the riders will pedal the nine-mile stretch to their headquarters at Forest lake. On Sunday a special bike train will leave Milwaukee at 9 a. m. and will reach Kewaskum at about 10 a. m. Between 400 and 500 people from Chicago, Kenosha and Milwaukee are expected to be on the two trains. In addition to the two large groups from Chicago, other enthusiasts from this vicinity will attend the gathering. The Milwaukee contingent will be led by the Manitowish, which adjoins Forest lake headquarters.

SPECIAL BIKE TRAIN

Those on the train will be riding their bicycles in a special baggage car and will pedal from Kewaskum to the lake. On Sunday the Kewaskum Community band will meet the train when it arrives at 10 a. m. After being welcomed here the large group will parade down Main street and then will pedal to Mauthe lake. The local band will also go to Mauthe lake for dinner. A motorcycle police unit will lead the group to the lake. The band members are urged to display the flag as a welcome to the visitors and a large crowd is expected to be on hand to meet the train and accompany them through the village, the highway to the Kettle Moraine. The bands of the village are already decorated with flags for the event, similar to the way they were for the firemen's picnic.

Saturday afternoon will be occupied with registration and assignment of camps. At 6 o'clock dinner will be served at Kewaskum Forest lake. An interesting program has been planned. Speakers for the evening will include A. E. Reif, supervisor of forests and parks in southeastern Wisconsin; Grover Eberle, chairman of the race committee; John Klein, Chicago, field representative of the American Youth Hostels; Edward Wilson, Chicago, a representative of the League of American Bicyclists; and Harold S. (Zip) Morant, assistant director of the Department of municipal recreation in Milwaukee. Following this an old time and square dance will be held. Because of the great interest shown an effort will be made shortly to organize a Kettle Moraine club to take care of the area.

FIFTY MILE RACE

Friday morning the Horn Wheelmen, members of the American Bicycle Club, Milwaukee, will conduct a 50-mile open race for the A. B. L. state championship from Milwaukee to Mauthe lake. The race will start from W. Capitol drive and W. Fond du Lac avenue, at 6 a. m. in the morning, with the first group of three classes will start. The racers are divided into classes A, B and C, according to Grover Eberle, chairman of the race committee. The racers will follow Highway 55 in Kewaskum. The first group is expected to arrive in the village at 8 a. m. and others will keep passing through the morning. Be on hand to see and cheer these cyclists as they near the end of the race here. Pictures will be taken. Why not follow the racers from here to the finish line at the lake. The program at Mauthe lake Sunday, which was published in detail last week, will start at 6 a. m. with a scenic bike trip. At 7:20 cyclists will return to Kewaskum to witness the first section finish of the bicycle races. Next the cyclists arriving on the 10 o'clock train in Kewaskum will be welcomed at the lake. Dinner will be served and in the afternoon stock like races on the Forest lake course will be held and there will be other entertainment, including speakers at 8 p. m. Supper will be served and at 9 p. m. the entire party leaves Forest lake by bike on the return trip to Kewaskum. The train leaves Kewaskum at 7:15 p. m. back to the cities.

WELCOME LOCAL RIDERS

Local bicycle enthusiasts are invited to enter the independent riders' individual race along a special course at Mauthe lake in the afternoon. This race will be arranged by Victor Broome of Fond du Lac, member of the American Youth Hostels movement now living at Forest lake. Wheelmen desiring to enter should get in touch with him. Independent riders from Kewaskum, Plymouth, Sheboygan, Adel and other neighboring towns will participate in the race over a rugged course. Kewaskum, "The Gateway to the

Death of Leo Majerous Occurred Last Thursday

Mrs. Sam Gudex of Elmore received notification of the death of her nephew, Leo Majerous of Sheboygan Falls, which occurred at St. Nicholas hospital, Sheboygan, Thursday, Aug. 31. He had been in ill health for some time. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Majerous, former residents of the vicinity of Elmore.

Deceased was born at Campbellsport Jan. 15, 1917, later moving to Sheboygan Falls with his parents. Besides his parents he leaves a sister, Mary, of Chicago, and six brothers, Bernard, Gordon, Laurence, Thomas, Raymond and Gerald, all at home.

The funeral was held Monday morning, Sept. 3, at Sheboygan Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gudex and family of Elmore attended.

EBERLE'S BEAGLES PLACE IN LAKE SUPERIOR TRIAL

Jos. Eberle, Kewaskum beagle fancier, and president of the Wisconsin Beagle club, entered two of his dogs in the Lake Superior Hare trial over Labor Day and both succeeded in placing among the winners. The Lake Superior trial is an endurance trial with the dogs running for four hours of continuous driving.

In one heat for 15 inch all-age bitches, Eberle's "Flight" placed third and Eberle's "Skip" was reserve winner in the 13 inch bitch class. There were 25 dogs in this class and Joe can be proud indeed of his little beagle placing highest among this number. As in every trial or show entered Eberle's prize beagles scored again.

RETURN TO CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Brewster and son Keith left Tuesday noon for their home in Palo Alto, Calif., after spending the summer vacation with Mrs. Brewster's parents, Dr. and Mrs. N. E. Hahsmann here. They were accompanied by Miss Katie Reinold, an employee at the Hausmann home, who will visit them in California. The party will visit several places of interest before reaching the West. Their first visit will be in Illinois with Mr. Brewster's parents.

MISSION FESTIVAL IN TOWN OF SCOTT SUNDAY

Sunday, Sept. 10th, the Evangelical Lutheran Immanuel church at Town Scott will celebrate its annual mission festival. In the German service at 10 a. m. Rev. G. P. Schulz of Sheboygan will preach the sermon. In the English service at 7:30 p. m. Rev. H. Barthel of Potters, Wis., will occupy the pulpit. Gust. Kanless, Pastor.

GIRL SENT TO ORTHOPEDIC SPECIALIST FOR TREATMENT

On Friday, Harriet Herriges, aged 10, of Kewaskum Route, was sent to an orthopedic specialist to receive specialized treatment for a defect in her leg resulting from infantile paralysis in August of last year. We are pleased to report that she will have only a minimal permanent defect.

BEEF, BRATWURST AT EBERLE'S

When in Kewaskum Saturday evening, Sept. 8, stop in at Eberle's Beer Garden for a tasty roast beef or bratwurst lunch, to be served, special that night.

SAFETY COUNCIL TO MEET

The next meeting of the Washington County Safety council will be held at Boltonville at 8 p. m. on Monday, Sept. 11. The public is invited to attend.

FISH FRY EVERY FRIDAY

Fish fry at Louis Heisler's tavern every Friday evening. On occasional Fridays the fish are served absolutely FREE. Visit Heisler's for a delicious plate of fish. Be there the lucky nite.

Kettle Moraine, is giving its whole-hearted support to this excellent health-giving and clean sport and intends to welcome the cyclists in every way possible. Throngs of folks are expected to turn out to welcome the cyclists as they arrive here. Be here for this special, something different than any, something ever held here, especially something ever held here, and meet day morning to see the racers and meet the special train of bicycles and bicycle riders. The cyclists are honoring Kewaskum by making it the center of the doling between Chicago and Mauthe lake.

SCHOOL HAS BEGUN—WATCH OUT FOR CHILDREN

STOP THIS SLAUGHTER!

The School Bell often means the death knell for some child. For two months or more children have not been seen on their regular day-in and day-out trek to school, and motorists have relaxed from their customary "School Time" driving caution. Now that school has begun again, the watch must be resumed. The streets are crowded with children at certain hours. Many new faces are among them—the little tots just starting to school, many of them unfamiliar with traffic conditions. Keep an extra sharp lookout for these. Each year automobiles take a toll of child life that is alarming and needless. The schools are doing their part to teach the child care and caution on the streets and it's amazing to see how carefully the children conduct themselves as a result. Motorists can well take a lesson from the training and exercise equal or greater care in driving—especially near schools—and the accident records among school children will take a most gratifying drop!

Second Place Won by Kewaskum Ball Team

With all games completed, the final standings in the Kettle Moraine Baseball league show that the Kewaskum team wins undisputed second place, a full game ahead of Adel and Waldo, who are tied for third. The pennant winning team is Greenbush, which lost only one game throughout the season and this game was lost when that team's regular star pitcher, Giles Knowles, was not in the lineup.

It is plain to see why the Greenbush nine was so successful. They have an excellent fielding team and all are good hitters but their real success lies in Knowles and Julie Pikel, one of the hardest hitting and brainiest catchers in the circuit. Both should go into higher company next year. It is reported that Knowles is the property of the Chicago White Sox, with whom he had a tryout last spring, and Pikel is now a member of the Sheboygan Chairs of the Tri-State league.

Greenbush won 13 and lost 1. Kewaskum is second with 9 and 5, and Adel and Waldo tied for third with 8 and 6. Kewaskum won 5 games and lost 2 the first half of the split season and won 4 and lost 3 this half. As Greenbush won both halves, no playoffs is necessary. Playoffs are not held for second and third place, the standings for the entire season counting.

At a league banquet to be held later awards will be presented to the three highest ranking teams. Greenbush will receive the pennant, trophy and small individual gold emblems for the players. Kewaskum will receive the second place trophy and individual silver emblems, while either Adel or Waldo will be awarded the third place trophy and bronze emblems. The local team also plans to hold a banquet of its own and possibly a wedding dance.

The Kewaskum ball team is to be complimented and congratulated for its success the first season in the league. This was their first year with an all home talent team and the boys did fight well for themselves by coming out second best. Bigger and better things can be expected next season as the team is much improved over what it was at the start of the campaign just completed.

Hats off to Lester Dreher, manager, Philip McLaughlin and Albert Hron Jr., officials, who were very active and worked hard with the team throughout the season, and especially to the following players, who brought home the trophies: H. Marx and Honeck pitchers; Bartelt and A. Kral, catchers; R. Marx, P. Kral, Smith, Prost, Uelmech and Miller, infielders; Harbeck, Dorn, Bath, Roden and Mellus, outfielders.

Popular Couples Are United in Matrimony

ERDMANN-PETERMANN

Asters, zinnias and mixed bouquets of fall flowers decorated the altar of the Peace Evangelical church in Kewaskum on Saturday, Sept. 2, at 2:30 p. m., when Miss Marion Marie Petermann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Petermann of the town of Auburn, became the bride of Ralph Erdmann, son of Edwin Erdmann of Theresa. The Rev. Richard M. A. Gadow performed the nuptial ceremony.

Mrs. Elwyn Romaline, organist, rendered the wedding marches and her daughter, Charlotte, sang the solo, "Because." Soft music was played during the nuptial rite.

The bride was charmingly attired in a floor length gown of white mousseline de soie over satin. A pouff of tulle, set with orange blossoms, held her long, billowing veil. She carried a flower bouquet consisting of yellow tea roses, white snapdragons and achilleas.

Miss Janet Weigand of Lomira, a cousin of the bridegroom, attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a hoopskirted frock of aqua taffeta and headress of matching chiffon. Her arm bouquet was made up of asters and snapdragons.

The bridesmaids were Miss Bernice Robb of Milwaukee, cousin of the bride, and Miss Hortensia Weigand of Lomira, cousin of the groom. Their hoopskirted gowns were of dusty rose taffeta and shell pink taffeta with headress of matching chiffon. Each carried an arm bouquet of asters, snapdragons and ferns. Little Eunice Erdmann, niece of the groom, attended the bride as flower girl. She wore a long frock of aqua taffeta, similar to that of the bridesmaids, and carried a miniature colonial bouquet.

Oliver Petermann, brother of the bride, attended the bridegroom as best man. Delbert Petermann, cousin of the bride and Raymond Erdmann, brother of the groom, were the ushers. Leo Weigand, cousin of the groom, was the ring bearer. He wore a white suit and also carried a miniature colonial bouquet.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for 90 guests at the home of the bride's parents. Bouquets of autumn flowers decorated the home. Dinner was served at 5 o'clock in the church parlors with the Ladies Aid members assisting in serving. In the evening the bridal couple was honored at a wedding dance held at the Kewaskum Opera House, which was attended by a very large number of relatives and friends of the couple.

The bride is a graduate of the Kewaskum High school and at present is engaged as bookkeeper for the Theresa Farmers' Co-operative association of Marshville, Wis. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Mayville High school and also took a business course in Milwaukee in electrical engineering. He is an electrician and farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Erdmann left on a honeymoon to an unknown destination. They will be at home to their friends after Oct. 1, at Marshville.

RAMTHUN-HICKEN

Two popular young people were united in marriage last Saturday afternoon, Sept. 2, at the St. Lucas Evangelical Lutheran church parsonage, Kewaskum, by the Rev. Gerhard Kanless, when Miss Bernice Hicken, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hicken of Beechwood, Adel R. D., became the bride of Elmer Ramthun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ramthun, Sr. of the town of Kewaskum.

The bride was prettily attired in a gown of white lace over satin with a train. Her fingertip veil fell from a crown of seed pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, pom-poms and baby's breath.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her cousin, Miss Arlyle Hicken. She wore an aqua blue taffeta gown and veil held by a headband. Her colonial bouquet consisted of pink briar roses, pom-poms and baby's breath.

William F. Schaefer, a friend of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to 60 guests at the home of the bride's parents. The home was attractively decorated for the occasion with garden flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramthun left on a short wedding trip and will be at home to their numerous friends after Sept. 10 in Kewaskum. The bridegroom is employed as a truck driver by Wm. F. Schaefer.

Nearly 4,000 Attend Firemen's Community Picnic Here Sunday

Because their big picnic and dedication on Aug. 20, which attracted nearly 9,000 people, was marred and kept from being an overwhelming success as a result of a heavy afternoon and evening rain, the Kewaskum firemen held another celebration last Sunday in the new village park in the form of a community picnic. This event also drew a surprising crowd estimated at close to 4,000 people throughout the afternoon and evening and proved to be a fine success in every way. The firemen feel that the attendance was very gratifying considering there were less attractions and the picnic was held on such short notice, only two weeks after the first one.

The people began filing into the park soon after the noon hour and by 2:30 p. m. the grounds were well filled. Throughout the remainder of the afternoon the folks kept on coming and all spent a most enjoyable day in Kewaskum. In the evening a crowd nearly as large as that in the afternoon filled the park and kept things humming. People began to leave about 9 p. m. but only because dark clouds came up in the sky and vivid flashes of lightning followed. However, many stayed until shortly before 10 o'clock when the storm hit. Then the lightning and thunder, heavy wind and downpour cleared the park and ended the picnic.

DRUM CORPS FEATURES

One of the features of the affair was the Modern Woodmen Drum Corps of Emil Spranger lodge, Milwaukee, one of the finest organizations of its kind in the state. The drum corps paraded down Main street to the park early in the afternoon in their colorful and handsome uniforms, following which they put on several marvelous drills in the park and furnished entertainment during the afternoon. The corps received much applause and was greatly enjoyed. This group, coming from the state camp of 5,000 members, put on drills different from anything ever seen in the vicinity. Many members of the Milwaukee and neighboring Woodmen camps attended the picnic.

Another feature enjoyed a great deal was the Kewaskum Community band. It put on a concert both in the afternoon and evening. This organization, directed by Harry Furlong, is composed almost entirely of young men and women and promises to be a fine band after more experience and training.

The many concession, entertainment and refreshment stands in the park offered no end of additional entertainment. There was something to do every minute with the more than usual number of stand providing pleasure, thrills and entertainment. Many valuable prizes were taken home from the stands, especially the one containing bingo, which was very busy all day.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED

Although admission to the park was free, booster tickets were offered for sale in the park for whatever amount the purchasers desired to pay, whether it was one cent or a quarter. These tickets were good for a chance on the valuable prizes awarded in the evening, shortly before the rain storm. First prize was a $35.00 no-draft air circulation lamp and table, a very beautiful article which is the latest on the market. It is absolutely silent and a perfect air circulator. This grand prize was won by Henry Knoebel of this village, who held No. 21. Second prize was a valuable blanket and won by Mrs. Fred Zimmermann, Kewaskum, with No. 62. The third prize, another blanket, went to Mrs. Paul Halfmann of Campbellsport, the winning number being 756. Ticket holders had to be present when the drawing took place.

Although it rained in the evening, favorable weather in the afternoon made the event the success it was. Now that Kewaskum has a beautiful park, in fact one of the finest in the county, it is hoped more and bigger events will be held in the future.

The firemen really appreciate and are very grateful to all who attended the picnic and cooperated with them in making it a complete success. They wish to thank all who assisted or donated in any way. A very neat sum was realized by the firemen, but because all money has not been turned in at this writing and all bills have not been paid, the exact amount of the very handsome profit that will be put in their worthy treasury cannot be determined.

BEEKEEPERS' PICNIC SUNDAY

Beekeepers of Washington county and their friends are invited to attend the association's picnic at Neno in the town of Addison on Highway 41, Sunday, Sept. 10. Those who desire to do so may bring their noon lunch. Tables may be had in the park.

Several interesting speakers have been secured and provisions made for amusement.

SPRING CHICKEN LUNCH

Delicious fried spring chicken with all the trimmings served at Lester Dreher's tavern every Saturday evening. Stop in for a fine lunch.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY HENRY W. PORTER

Germany Opens War on Poland; Acts as Warsaw Spurns Terms; Britain Mobilizes Its Forces

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A self-explanatory map of the European continent, describing the strength of the Berlin-Rome axis with that of Great Britain, France and Poland. The strength in man power, planes and ships is shown by the inserted figures on the map.

WAR! Hitler Strikes

Adolf Hitler issued a proclamation to the German people that war with Poland had started. He ordered the German army to meet force with force. His order to the army read: "The Polish state has rejected my efforts to establish friendly relations, and instead has appealed to weapons. Germans in Poland are victims of a bloody terror, driven from house and home. A series of border violations unbearable for a great power show that the Poles no longer are willing to respect the German border.

"To put an end to these insane incursions, nothing remains but for me to meet force with force from now on. The German army will conduct a fight for honor and the right to the life of the resurrected German people with firm determination. I expect that every soldier, mindful of the great traditions of the eternal German military, will do his duty to the last."

"Remember always that you are representatives of the National Socialist great Germany. Long live our people and our Reich!"

Just before he issued his order to the German army, directing it to meet "force with force," Fuehrer Hitler issued a 16-point "peace program" announcing that he had planned to submit it to Polish negotiators if Poland had sent emissaries to Berlin as Hitler had requested.

All air traffic above Germany was forbidden except for government military planes. Berlin heard the noise of Nazi war planes droning above.

All German ships were warned not to enter the port of Danzig. All ships, German and foreign, in the Baltic were warned to keep out of the Polish port of Gdynia, which was blockaded by the German navy.

All schools in Germany were ordered closed until further notice because youths were needed for duties in civilian anti-air raid organizations.

The German army was massed on Polish frontiers from the Baltic sea to the High Tatra mountains (in Slovakia) and in East Prussia.

Germany announced that all neutral planes flying over the Polish corridor were "in a dangerous zone. In this zone neutral airplanes exposing themselves to the danger of being shot down."

In announcing the union of Danzig with the Reich, Forster's decree suspended the constitution of the free city immediately.

The German government announced that the German-Russian nonaggression pact had been ratified simultaneously in Berlin and Moscow. It was understood that a Russian military delegation, including members of the general staff, will arrive in Berlin to conclude a military alliance with the Reich.

GREAT BRITAIN

Great Britain, standing pat on her pledge to fight for Poland's independence, received the news of Germany's latest moves in the European crisis with the deepest gravity. Attention was attracted by the speed with which Hitler's army order and the harbor blockade followed a German broadcast which said Hitler had proposed to Poland that Danzig be returned to the Reich and that a plebiscite be held to decide whether Pomorzé (the Polish corridor) should be Polish or German territory.

The British government took drastic steps to put the country's fighting forces completely on a mobilized footing after the already desperate international situation had taken an uglier turn.

One of the greatest mass movements of population in history is under way in Great Britain. It is the evacuation under government order of little children, invalids, women, and old men from congested areas.

From London, Birmingham, Manchester, Liverpool, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and 23 other cities the great exodus is going on. Three million persons are being taken out of the danger of enemy bombs. Nothing like it has ever been attempted anywhere, yet it is going on without mishap so far; indeed, without serious confusion.

This sudden burst of preparations for war came after hopes of peace had been revived when it became known that an appeasement move was under way. The peace hopes were based on the belief that the Poles would send a negotiator to Berlin. The hopes for a peaceful solution, however, were shattered when Warsaw announced emphatically that no concessions would be made, thus setting in motion the new British war measures.

High British officials did not view Fuehrer Hitler's 16-point proposal for negotiations with Poland as an answer to Britain's latest note in the exchange which has been going on between Berlin and London. Until their announcement on the German radio the 16 points had not been communicated officially to the British government.

POLAND

The conditions of Fuehrer Hitler's proposals for settlement of the Polish-German dispute, such as immediate return of Danzig to Germany, are unacceptable to Poland, a government spokesman said. The spokesman emphasized that Poland was determined to keep Pomorzé (the Polish corridor) and her rights in the Free City of Danzig.

Of Hitler's proposal for a plebiscite in Pomorzé, one reaction here was "Germany can begin with Czechoslovakia if she is interested in a plebiscite."

(Germany last March established a protectorate over the Czech inhabited lands of Bohemia and Moravia.)

In reply to Hitler's terms as announced by the German radio, it was stated Poland will insist upon full restitution of her rights in Danzig.

"Hitler insists on Poland yielding Danzig and Pomorzé as a preliminary to negotiations," the spokesman said. "Poland has not given up Danzig and Pomorzé, and will not."

"Britain, in a second reply to Hitler, has maintained her unyielding position without change."

(Britain is bound to assist Poland in war under the terms of a recently concluded mutual assistance pact.)

The spokesman emphasized that Poland always has been interested in a peaceful settlement, but that the conditions of the proposals could not be accepted.

FRANCE

An unexpected meeting of the cabinet suddenly was called, but out of this meeting there appeared only an announcement that France would abide by her pledge to assist Poland in the war.

After the cabinet meeting, Premier Edouard Daladier conferred with Finance Minister Paul Reynaud and with the minister of marine, Cesar Campinchi. Then Daladier had a long talk with Georges Bonnet, foreign minister.

Following these conferences, the rumor spread in diplomatic circles that France and England were standing firm on their positions and refusing to nibble at the so-called totalitarian peace bait, part of which came in the form of Hitler's 16-point proposal to Poland.

ITALY

Italy speeded its preparations to put the nation on a war footing as Pope Pius XII issued an eleven-hour appeal to save peace.

Meanwhile reliable diplomatic sources asserted that Britain, France and Poland had turned down last-minute offers made by Fuehrer Hitler through Italy. Return of Danzig to Germany and negotiations on all other issues were the terms of Hitler's suggestions, it was said.

UNITED STATES

President Roosevelt directed that all naval ships and army commands be notified at once by radio of German-Polish hostilities.

free from grumbles. The royal family have always eaten like any ordinary family, good, plain, English food. And they were not faddy. The butchers and bakers I ordered from never had any real complaints to offer.

"It has never been difficult to order for the royal larder. I always bore in mind the good things I liked myself, just what ordinary people like."

Mercer worked under five English sovereigns.

BUSINESS: Outlook Good

War conditions are accepted today as a normal business factor rather than a series of temporary economic shocks as has been the case in the past, according to the magazine Banking. The magazine reported a general hopeful outlook for business in spite of the war conditions.

"Business is beginning to see daylight and solid ground, although still wary," it stated. "Improvement has been fairly general, but statistically, trade still falls short of levels reached two years ago."

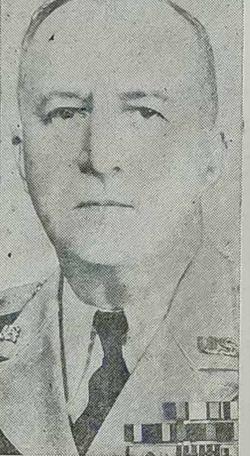

The magazine cited four factors, which, it said, are responsible "for quite a noticeable spirit of hopefulness on all sides."

"Of these," it stated, "one is the perfectly obvious change for the better that has come over public opinion regarding business. A second factor is the unexpected nature of the improvement and consistent activity of the summer months. Third on the list of encouraging items is the low point of most inventories," it said, adding that the present business reaction to war conditions as a normal business factor constituted the fourth.

U. S. ARMY: Weakness

Recent army maneuvers at Plattsburg, N. Y., revealed such serious deficiencies in training, equipment, leadership and administration of the nation's armed forces that Lieutenant General Drum declared conditions were inexcusable and deplorable. General Drum's citation of errors and mistakes made in the field included the following:

1—Extensive additional training is needed by the National Guard, the organized reserves, and the regular army units in large-scale actions where they function together.

2—The army is dangerously undermanned and the shortage of modern arms is critical.

3—There is a serious breakdown of supply services essential to the maintenance of an army in the field.

4—Staff work has not been speeded up to cope with the speed and great territorial range of mechanized forces.

General Drum found that neither officers nor men receive enough experience in operating as parts of a large unit. The staff work was particularly poor as a result.

PANAMA CANAL: Safeguarded

Extraordinary steps have been taken to guard against espionage, and possible sabotage at the Panama canal, the nation's lifeline of defense. Washington officials stressed that the assignment of additional guards at strategic locks and control houses is purely precautionary and that there has been no indications of foreign plots against the canal.

The safeguards coincide with start of a huge defense program, including construction of another air base, extra anti-aircraft and coast batteries, enlarged garrisons and supplementary locks. The posting of extra guards at vital spots along the canal is part of the general preparedness developed by the army and navy to meet an emergency.

Details of the new vigilance measures are being treated as military secrets.

Similar steps to guard against foreign spies and sabotage have been taken during recent months in aircraft factories, arsenals and other government or private plants engaged in manufacture of war materials.

INDUSTRIES: War Program

The war resources board is making an intensive study of America's plan for industrial mobilization in case of war. Edward R. Stettinius, chairman of the board and top man of the United States Steel corporation, is charged with the responsibility of seeing that the nation's industrial machine can be swiftly changed over from meeting the needs of peace to meeting the needs of war. Helping Stettinius are several prominent industrialists.

Marconi Echometer
The new liner Mauretania is fitted with the Marconi echometer for determining depth of water under the ship. By determining the contours of the seabed, the echometer, in combination with the direction finder, helps check on the ship's position. All electrically controlled are the distance thermometers in the cold chambers, rudder indicators, tank alarms, carbon dioxide recorders, sailometers, fuel alarms and sprinkler alarms.

International Affairs Likely To Influence Party Politics

Upon Turn of Events Abroad May Depend Strength or Lack of It Shown by Presidential Aspirants; Domestic Life in U. S. Will Feel Effects.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—There is an interesting offshoot of the several European crises that has begun to attract attention among practical leaders. It has been practically 20 years since international affairs figured to any extent in our domestic politics, but they threaten to do so next year. And upon the turn of events abroad, it appears, will depend the strength or lack of it shown by various presidential aspirants.

It may be that, in the short space of time between the writing of these lines and their publication in your local newspaper, another European crisis will have arisen and actual hostilities will have been started. It is possible, therefore, only to take a peek over the horizon and offer conjecture as to the effect upon our domestic partisan battles. There can be no doubt of the importance of the subject as a matter for thought, however, because: (1) if there is a European war, there will be the struggle between two very powerful forces to drag us in or keep us out, respectively; and (2) if there is no war abroad but a continued threat and continued disturbance of international relations, our domestic life will be constantly feeling the effects of one way or another. So the situation shapes up that international affairs are likely to be vitally important in the matter of selection of party nominees next year, as well as in the election of one of the major party candidates to the presidency.

The condition warrants thought on the basis that it touches private lives. Private lives are concerned not only because of the ever-present possibility when war stalks in the world that there may be blood shed by some of our people. The effect goes as well into our everyday affairs, the thing which the intelligence usually calls our national economy.

When Political Leaders Took Wrong Side of Question

One needs to go back only to 1920 to recall what happened to political leaders who took the wrong side of a question—the wrong side from a majority of the people. President Wilson's followers stood by him, as they should have done in those days. They committed the Democratic party to a position on the League of Nations and the Versailles peace treaty that proved to be unpopular and a good many of them were engulfed in the flood of the unpopularity of that side of the question.

If there were complex conditions to be considered by voters and thought through in advance of the election of Warren G. Harding over James M. Cox at that time, the conditions then must be regarded as simple to what confronts America at this time. Nor is there any possibility of simplification of those problems. The bulk of the people can say, as I firmly believe the majority will say, that we must stay out of foreign entanglements; we must remain isolationists—and there still will remain the influence of those foreign conditions upon our own life and living and means of making a living.

But to be specific with respect to the political picture of presidential aspirants:

The candidates now going about the country herding in delegate votes or having their representatives do so have thus far proceeded, quite naturally, upon the basis of purely domestic questions. These questions include such as the Roosevelt money policies; the undoubted waste that has characterized the governmental spending; the regimentation of agriculture with its crop control in one place and crop expansion in another without apparent rhyme or reason; the sudden changes in national plans and the consequent instability and uncertainty. Others could be named, but these few suffice to illustrate the point.

Jealousy and Distrust No Matter What Happens

Now, let us assume that actual hostilities have started abroad and that they extend into next year. Of what use is the political strategy now being employed by those seeking pledges of support? Or, assume that Hitler's rapacious plans have been satisfied. There still will be heat, abroad. There will be jealousy and distrust. There is the new pact between the slippery Stalin of Russia, and the blustering Hitler that neither will attack the other. There are now, and will continue to be, dissatisfied minorities in Central Europe, people who want to break away or who feel they have been used as pawns. There will be all of these and other things to keep the fires burning, a sort of an international poison ivy case.

Whatever the conditions may be a year from now, there is no way that I can see by which the United States can avoid consideration of policies to meet the circumstances generated by these several influences. Why?

Take agriculture, for example. Our crops long have entered into world markets, although the outgoing shipments have sunk into insignificance lately. But our farmers still have hopes. Consider industry, manufacturing. Thousands of manufacturing establishments seek export outlets. The amount of their exports determine whether these factories can run at normal capacity, and employ normal quotas of workers, or whether only enough workers can be kept on to maintain supplies for the purely American market. Thus, the unemployment problem, and relief, enter into the picture.

It is far from being simple. One can despise and distrust his neighbor on the next farm or in the next block, but he still has to pass his house on the highway or go down the alley behind his house.

Campaign Strategies, Plans Must Undergo Revision

None knows, for example, whether the agreement between Stalin and Hitler is going to give the Russian lion a free hand in the Orient. That is to ask: can Stalin's forces now align themselves with China and force the Japanese back to their island homes? If so, there is a brand new proposition for us on the Pacific side. We have wanted, and still want, to play with the Soviet if, by chance, the conjectured change takes place and Hitler abandons his connections with Tokyo.

Thus, I think we are brought forcibly to the conclusion that the records made by the two major political parties thus far may constitute only a part of the things which the ever-puzzled voter may have to consider next year. It is made quite plain, it seems to me, that campaign strategies, plans, hopes, will have to undergo serious revision in the next few months. How they are revised is going to be dependent almost entirely upon the developments abroad. There is always the thought in the background that most people are interested in the things around them, not 3,000 miles away, and it is not going to be easy for the pom-pom of a dose they showed attempt to offer.

There seems to be no doubt that developments between now and next June, for example, will have a vital effect upon Mr. Roosevelt's political fortunes. Most sound thinking men seem to agree on that. One hears discussions pro and con. Many wagers have been made around Washington that Mr. Roosevelt can not be elected, or even nominated, for a third term, but always there is the reservation "unless there is a war." Always, there is that reservation "unless." I relate this, not because it indicates more than the views of those making the bets, but because it illustrates how closely linked are our affairs with those of the rest of the world.

May Call Congress to Revise the Neutrality Act

There is talk that Mr. Roosevelt will call congress into extra session to deal with international problems—and acting with Roosevelt suddenness, he may have issued the call two hours after this is written. He has wanted the so-called neutrality act revised to meet his ideas. You will recall that he could not even gain consideration of his program of the foreign relations committee of the last senate. They turned it down cold. But the question is due to come up whether in an extraordinary session or in the regular meeting next January, and it cannot be avoided. Who can guess what the political effects of that may be. I can not foresee them, nor has anyone been able to convince me of their ability to see that far into the future.

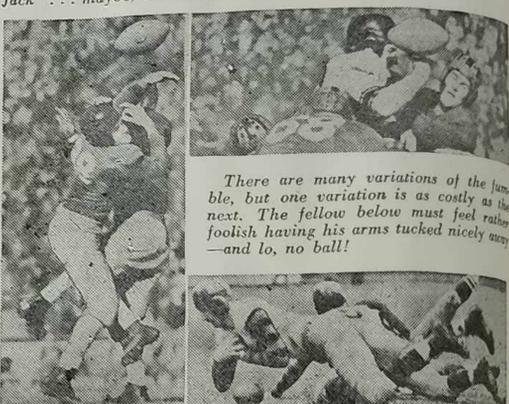

As I am able to examine the puzzle of the future, therefore, I can see only a very difficult time ahead for those who want to have a voice in their government. Of course, there is going to be a percentage of voters, as always, whose convictions will be those of their political party. But there is an increasing number of voters who would like to know what they are voting for or against; why they are voting for one man over another. They probably constitute the balance of power in American politics, and if they do it is a splendid thing. Yet, I repeat they are going to have their hands full in trying to understand the issues next year. It is a tough proposition to learn what proposed policies will do for or to us when those policies concern affairs close at home. It is just that much more perplexing when we are called upon to figure out what will happen when the issues of a campaign involve not only our own affairs but the affairs of other nations, as well. And it strikes me that next year would be a good time for political leaders to start being honest about what they seek to accomplish!

AUTUMN SPORTS Football Is Serious Business But Here's the Funny Side

Each autumn, at risk of smashing their cameras, sports photographers get a classic assortment of pictures from the gridiron. They catch beautiful action plays, freak accidents, fumbles, penalty plays and quite a bit of rough stuff generally. The above pose, for example, is not one of endearment. Jack Williams of Santa Clara is merely using a high tackle to down St. Mary's giant, Mike Klotovich. Jack is probably saying, "Beg your pardon, Mike." And Mike answers, "Not at all, Jack" . . . maybe, but we doubt it.

There are many variations of the fumble, but one variation is as costly as the next. The fellow below must feel rather foolish having his arms tucked nicely away—and lo, no ball!

Picture Parade

I'll huff and I'll puff and I'll shove—and blow your ballpappy down. This is one way to break up a passing attack, but don't try it while the referee's watching. The trick, preserved for posterity by your photographer, cost Georgetown a neat 15-yard penalty in its game with Hampden-Sidney last autumn. Yes, Sylvia, it's against the rules. But Georgetown won 51 to 0, anyway.

Right: Spectators get it, too. Here is Miss Thelma Quinn, Tennessee cheer leader, after being k.o.'d when she got mixed up with a bunch of players in last year's Orange Bowl game. Which proves the safest place to watch a game is over your radio.

This New York Giant is soaring through the air. His name: Hank Sawyer.

U. S. Contributions
In 1938 contributions by religious, charitable and other institutions in the United States to residents of foreign countries totaled $40,000,000. Contributions through Jewish organizations, which went chiefly to Palestine, Poland and Germany, amounted to $8,000,000.

Aluminum Cloth
Cloth made of closely woven aluminum wire has been produced as a weather-resisting material for screening doors and windows.

Subway Tunnels
Because it was necessary to enlarge the tunnel on a section of the London subway system without interrupting traffic, a new tube was built around the old one. Traffic functioned on schedule in the old tube during the expansion process.

Wisconsin News « Briefly Told »

Eight Cases of Paralysis—Milwaukee's eighth case of infantile paralysis in three weeks was reported by Dr. E. R. Krumbiegel of the city health department. Three of the victims have been discharged from Isolation hospital as cured.

School Structure Closed—The school building at Oconto has been closed from further use. The building, constructed in 1894, has shown signs of settling, causing a wall to bulge. L. W. Fulton, superintendent of schools, said.

Wisconsin Cattle Win—The Fetzer brothers of Medford showed six first place winners in the red polled cattle division at the Minnesota state fair. The Quality Park farms of Hudson took first place in the Belgian stallion foal division.

Ousted Employees Backed by Council—The common council at Sheboygan instructed Mayor Hermann Runge and the board of public works to reconsider their recent action in discharging 12 veteran city employees. The discharged men are all 65 or over with municipal service records of more than 20 years.

Hunters Are Fined—Walter Abraham, of Lowell, Ind., who wounded Peter Moeller, of the town of Wilson while hunting deer, and three of Abraham's companions were fined $50 each after pleading guilty to charges of hunting during closed season.

Trailer Kills Girl—Anita Fish, 14, of Black River Falls, was killed when a home made trailer in which she was riding broke loose from her father's car and hurled her into the path of an oncoming automobile. Dist. Atty. Ralph Lund said there would be no inquest.

Two Rivers Gets Milk Out—The state department of agriculture established a separate milk regulated area for Two Rivers and ordered a cut of from 10 cents to 8 cents a quart in the retail milk price there.

Quarantine for Rabies Posted—The department of agriculture placed a rabies quarantine on lake shore sections of the towns of Mount Pleasant and Somers, bordering the city of Racine, following discovery of an infected dog. The order requires that all dogs be kept under leash for 90 days.

State Air Map Complete—A huge map of the state has been completed by aerial crews working for the Wisconsin agricultural conservation committee to assist in checking of farms cooperating under the AAA. The pictures provide a record of crops planted on each farm and the acreages of these crops.

Conduct Courses at Kenosha—The University of Wisconsin extension division will offer Kenosha high school graduates a complete freshman course and all sophomore subjects with the exception of laboratory sciences at the high school here this fall. The courses will be given with full university credit.

Mother is Victim of Bull—Mrs. Harry Yager of Prairie du Chien was injured by a bull when she was gored by a bull after the animal had killed her son, Robert, 13. Mrs. Yager attempted to drive the bull away after she found her son's body in the manger in the barn where the bull was kept.

Record Set by State Fair—The 1939 Wisconsin State Fair set a record of 6,553 attendance over that of 1938 with a total of 630,954 passing through the gates. Sunday—the final day of the fair—attracted a crowd of 85,983 visitors and for a time officials had to close the gates to automobiles because parking facilities were exhausted.

Milwaukee Raids Net $7—Police raided two second-floor establishments in downtown, arrested 37 persons and smashed and confiscated gambling equipment and horse racing devices. Doors at both places were battered down and nearly all of the 21 men arrested at one place were caught attempting to leave by a fire escape. Three men were booked as keepers.

Lone Bandit Robs Theatre—A well dressed bandit held up the Venetian theatre in downtown Racine and escaped with more than $1,200. One thousand patrons watching the pictures were unaware of the robbery. The gunman forced the assistant theatre manager and head usher into the closet and then ordered Manager Kny to unlock the safe and turn over the day's receipts.

Parole 90 from Industrial School—Harvey Phillips, superintendent of the Wisconsin Industrial School for Boys, announced that 90 youths who had been granted paroles by the state board of control would be released by the end of September. Philip said 60 of the boys were expected to return to high schools in their home towns, the remainder being placed on farms.

Traffic Rating Rises—Careless Milwaukee motorists and pedestrians who helped to depress the city to fourth place in traffic safety last month, have headed the red light and pulled Milwaukee's record up to second place in the nation for cities of its population class. Figures show that Milwaukee's traffic death rate per 100,000 persons was reduced to an average of 8.3 for the seven months, as compared with an average of 8.7 for the first six months of the year.

Increase State Ag Force—Two new graders of foreign type cheese and two dairy inspectors have been added to the dairy division of the state department of agriculture, Ralph Ammon, department director, announced.

Seek Increase in Sales—Fifty southern Wisconsin pea canners met at Milwaukee to consider a program to promote greater sales of peas in the United States. Proposals were that $130,000 be spent in an advertising and educational campaign.

Vegetable Dinner—A man named Corne ate the first tomato.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"A Ride With Death"

HELLO EVERYBODY: Mary Billard of La Salle, Ill., is today's Distinguished Adventurer, and she wins that distinction—as well as the well-known ten bucks—with one of the most terrifying yarns I've seen in a long time.

It happened in 1913, when Mrs. Billard was Miss Mary Blanch, a girl of twelve, and Mary says, "The La Salle papers called me a heroine at the time, and it was all quite exciting for a girl of my age, but it lost its thrill when I thought of my mother lying in a hospital in a critical condition, fighting the dangers of gangrene and lockjaw."

You can see from that statement of Mary's that there was tragedy in that episode as well as adventure. And it started with nothing but a common, ordinary buggy ride. There weren't so many automobiles in those days, and most of the streets were mere unpaved dirt roads.

Mary's dad had bought a horse that had spent all its life on race tracks and was hard to handle when hitched to a buggy. It had run away twice, and Mary's mother didn't drive it any oftener than she had to.

But there came a day when she felt she HAD to drive that horse. They had just moved into town, and Mary was finishing a term at a little country schoolhouse three miles out of La Salle. Mary's teacher was coming back with her that evening, so Mother hitched up the horse and started out to get them.

Mother hadn't been feeling well all that day, but she made the trip to the schoolhouse without any trouble. They were all on their way to town, with Mary in the middle between her mother and the teacher, when, without warning, Mary felt her mother fall away from her.

Mary Looked Around and Saw Her Mother.

She looked around just in time to see Mother topple from the seat and pitch headlong into the road. She had fainted.

But that was only the beginning of a disastrous train of events. Mother had fallen out with the lines still clutched in her hands. The sudden jerk on those reins, caused by her falling, frightened the horse. It gave a leap forward.

"And with that leap," says Mary, "there started the fastest ride I had ever remembered in all my 12 years.

"We were horrified at the situation. The horse was plunging along at a full gallop, and my mother was being dragged face downward over stones and gravel, in a way that struck terror into my heart. The teacher and I were helpless.

"I pulled and jerked at the reins until I brought the horse to a stop."

"We called and screamed to mother, pleading with her to let go of the lines, but all our screaming was useless, for mother was in an unconscious condition, clinging to those reins with a death grip while the horse dragged her along."

And, for half a mile, mother dragged along beside the reeling wagon, in imminent danger of rolling under the wheels, while up in the seat Mary and the teacher sat paralyzed with fear, trying to hang on to the swaying, reeling buggy.

Mary says that buggy was running on two wheels a good part of the time. And at other times it seemed to be flying through the air, with nothing under the wheels at all.

Several men along the road had tried to stop the horse, but couldn't do anything with the crazed animal. At last, at the end of a half a mile, mother's hands loosened on the reins and the lines were free. They got between the horse's front legs, and that only served to frighten the poor animal more.

The Careening Carriage Flew Down the Road.

Still the reeling, careening carriage flew on. They had covered more than a mile, and now they were within a short distance of a narrow culvert, just outside of the business section of La Salle. There were pillars on either side of it, and it would be a miracle if the crazed horse got through that cramped space without wrecking the buggy.

The teacher was the first one to think of that culvert. She screamed to Mary that if the horse couldn't be stopped before they reached it they would both be killed.

"And with her voice still ringing in my ears," says Mary, "she rose to her feet, stood on them for a moment on the swaying floor of the buggy—and jumped! I shut my eyes as I heard her body hit the road, and thought that surely she must have been killed."

And now, Mary was left alone in that speeding buggy. She knew that, somehow, she had to get hold of those reins that were dragging down there beneath the horse's feet. Just a little way ahead, now, was the culvert. And even if the buggy did get through the culvert, it was certain to crash into something in the business district two blocks beyond. So, while the buggy reeled and swayed, Mary began climbing over the dashboard, onto the horse's back.

It was a desperate chance. Time and again Mary almost lost her hold in that precarious trip. The horse was slippery with foam and perspiration, and only by bracing her feet against the shaft did she manage to keep from being thrown into the road.

"I reached the horse's head," she says, "and the feel of my body on her seemed to frighten her all the more, and make her go faster than ever. But I got the lines from between her legs and started inching my way back to the buggy."

"I pulled and jerked at the reins until I brought the horse to a halt," she says, "and it stopped just a few feet in front of the dreaded culvert. A boy ran up to hold the animal, and I left the buggy and ran into town to get a doctor for mother. She was still unconscious when they brought her in, and to this day she carries, on the right side of her face, the terrible marks of that horrifying experience."

Mary says she's glad the horse and buggy days are over because—well—because she wouldn't want any of her children to have such an experience.

Animals and Birds Are Accurate Weather Forecasters

If you want to foretell the weather, watch birds and animals. It will be fine when swallows fly high, when bats fly late at night, when beetles take to the wing, and when morning chimney smoke rises straight up. Rain is indicated when birds fly low, when peacocks begin to screech, when crows fly up and circle around their nests, when sparrows become excited and chirp continuously, when morning smoke does not rise, when cattle caper about, and when donkeys bray. A change is due when dogs sniff the air, and if you see birds perching on the lower branches of trees a storm is not far away. The presence of cormorants at the mouth of a river foretells a heavy gale from the sea.

Television Lines Because of the extremely wide frequency range required, existing telephone lines will not accommodate television programs. It is possible, however, to transmit them by means of a coaxial cable. The other solution of network television would be by means of a series of microwave radio relay stations.

Land in Argentina is measured by the cuadra, equal to 4.2 American acres.

Lost Stories Twenty-eight of O. Henry's short stories, together with his illustrations, poems, and other pieces were discovered in the files of the Houston Post by Mary S. Harrell. Most of them were written under the pseudonym, "The Post Man." They have been edited by Miss Harrell and are now available in book form.

Vegetable Dinner A man named Corne ate the first tomato.

These Smart Patterns Look Ahead to Fall

DO YOU take a woman's size? Then here is a lovely dress for you, (1799) youthful yet sophisticated, with clever bodice detailing, to create a round-bosomed effect, and a paneled skirt that makes your hips look narrow. It's a perfect style for not too dressy for club affairs, yet not too dressy for street and shopping wear, too.

Flat crepe, thin wool and rayon jersey are smart materials for this.

Princess Lines and Shirring. Business and college girls will like the slim lines and simplicity of this very attractive dress (1780), with princess skirt cut high in the front, shirred shoulders, and flaring revers that frame your face becomingly. For this, choose flat crepe, taffeta or thin wool, with revers in white or a pastel tint.

The Patterns. No. 1799 is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. Size 34 requires 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. 1/2 yard of lace for vestee.

Our horse population has gone down in the last decade and that it is growing smaller every year has been shown in a recent survey. Last year there were 321,000 fewer horses in the country than there were the year before, and 61,000 fewer colts were foaled last year than during the previous year.

Of the 16,000,000 acres of Wisconsin land subject to erosion, 11,000,000 acres has lost from one-quarter to three-quarters top soil, 12,600,000 acres has noticeable gullying, 8,600,000 acres has severe gullying, 3,250,000 acres has wind erosion, and 8,000 acres have been destroyed by wind erosion, a recent survey shows.

MIDNIGHT STAGE AND SCREEN SHOW AT WEST BEND THEATRE

Something novel in the way of blood chilling entertainment will be presented at the West Bend theatre in a stage and screen show starting at 11:30 p. m. Saturday night, Sept. 9, after the regular evening program. There will be a one hour stage performance by Dr. Silkin in which he will entertain with feats of magic, topping it all off by turning out all lights in the house and bringing ghosts and skeletons out of the air race to face with you. On the screen the feature attraction will be Peter Lorre in "MR. MOTO TAKES A VACATION." Even when Mr. Moto takes a vacation, the famous Saturday Evening Post sleuth is still on the job. This new film takes him to the Arabian desert where, menaced by the curse of an ancient tomb and cornered by arch-criminals of two continents, he solves two murders and provides safe escort for the fabulous crown jewels of the Queen of Sheba—a nice vacation.

FARM AND HOME LINES

The 5th annual state 4-H club Conservation Camp will be held at Wisconsin Dells on September 7-10.

A few grains of salt is helpful in cooked fruits, fruit drinks, cocoa, milk shakes, and other beverages. Because salt seems to make sweet things sweeter, it should always be included in candies, cakes, ice creams, and sweet desserts.

Wisconsin produces by far the largest part of all the Swiss cheese made in the nation. Last year over 29 million pounds were made by Wisconsin factories. Most of the Limburger cheese is made in Wisconsin. Reports show that over 6 million pounds were produced in 1938.

The states of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota—up to 40 years ago the nation's leading source of lumber for three decades—today produce less than half of their own timber needs, according to the United States Forest Service.

The orange has more calcium than the potato, but the potato has more phosphorus, a report states.

CARD OF THANKS

The undersigned wish to express their most heartfelt thanks to all those neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted them in their recent bereavement, the loss of their beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Nic. Haug. They also wish to thank Rev. Otto for his kind services; for the beautiful floral tributes; to Millers, who conducted the funeral; to the pallbearers, to Mrs. Wm. F. Schultz, for the excellent service rendered at a dinner for the mourners; to those who loaned cars for the funeral, and to all who showed their respect for the departed by attending the last sad rites.

Gov. Julius P. Hell last Wednesday announced his appointments for the new nine-member board of regents of the University of Wisconsin. Among the appointees is a former Kewaskum man. He is Aug. C. Backus, former Milwaukee judge, who was appointed for a five-year term.

Miss College Girl Is Engaging Attention of Fashion Designers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S no secret as to who has been chosen to play the part of leading lady on the stage of fashion during the early fall days—College Girl is her name. To this important personage all fashiondom is paying homage at the present moment. On every side you are reminded that the idea is motivating to cater to the whims and wardrobe needs of the girl who is going away to school.

The style program arranged for Miss College Girl and her younger schoolgirl sister fairly teems with excitement. For instance, there is the new bustle dress. The idea has taken the collegiate set by storm. The quaint bustle dresses that grandmothers galvanized in as girls in the '80s are actually proving inspiration for frocks that the modern girl will wear this fall.

The highpoints of these oldtime silhouettes are being revived such as waistlines of vanishing inches, slim corseted middriffs and wide back-swirling skirts interpreted in novel bustle treatments but modified so cleverly they are made thoroughly practical and wearable for this day and age. Then there is the new vogue that calls for a velvet or velveteen jacket worn with a gay plaided wool skirt or a contrasting or matched solid color as fancy dictates. The decided military air that the new fashions take on is also a big factor in the new mode and most outstanding of all is the importance attached to fine materials.

These and other significant style trends were revealed at their glamorous best in an advance fall fashion revue staged by the Style Creators of Chicago. The three models pictured were especially applauded by the audience of visiting merchants as fashions that are representative of what the up-to-date fashion-alert girl will be selecting for her going-away-to-school wardrobe.

The clever little date frock of shepherd check velveteen shown to the left in the group is sure to enjoy a gay campus career. Its cunning tunic bustleback and its full circular-cut skirt gives it swank and distinction such as collegiate fashionables demand. Its red suede belt supplies a fetching dash of color. Approval for the new bustle-back dresses is assured for being interpreted in simple words, bustle-back is merely a way of saying "back fullness" achieved in ingenious ways that are conservative and wearable without being overdone.

The suit to the right is very style-reviving, stressing as it does the continued triumph in the mode of richly colored striped woollens. The stripes, the plaids and the marvelous artistry with which designers combine them with monotonous related tones simply hold one spellbound. The gorgeous striped wool that fashions the costume suit keys to the smartest fall colors, harmonizing vibrant greens with luscious blackberry tones. The skirt is all-around pleated. The boxy jacket tops an emerald green velvet blouse closing with novel key-and-keyhole ornaments. An oversize quill tops the moss green sailor hat.

You may expect to see gay little velvet jackets dotted all over the college campus. The girl centered in the picture wears a snug black velveteen jacket quite military looking as so many of the newer fashions are, with a plaid pleated skirt that introduces an artificial blend of grape, pink and yellow tones, climaxed with a sweater in warm yellow hues. Juniors, likewise college sophisticates, simply dote on the new plaids and stripes. A Scotch cap of black velvet with satin ribbon streamer, together with the plaid carries the message that fashions for young folks have gone very Scotch this season.

High Color Tweed

Here is a smart version of the costume suit that combines plain woolen with gray tweed. The fitted jacket is of yellow and black tweed in a diagonal weave. Yellow and gold tones are held in high favor according to what is showing in advance Paris collections. The costume includes a jacket, swagger coat and skirt. This idea of both jacket and topcoat done in matching color scheme is very practical. The saucer brim hat is of black felt.

Offers Solution For One Problem

For many women, the most trying coat length of recent inspiration is the rather popular just-below-the-waist length that nips in at the midriff and hugs the hips.

It is a good style for a slender woman with a streamlined figure and is being shown in any number of varieties, of which one of the most popular is a monotone wool jacket worn over a gay print dress. But the problem is not so simple for those who border on plumpness. One suggestion is that the slightly swallow-tail version deals more kindly with the heavy woman.

Two-Skirt Outfit Real Money-Saver

A money-saver for the bride consists of a two-skirt suit of very sheer wool or crepe, designed with a suave fitted jacket. The street-length skirt can be worn with the jacket and printed crepe or organdy blouses to make a smart runabout costume by day.

A floor-length skirt of the same material, combined with the jacket and a sheer chiffon blouse make a chic dinner costume for boat and hotel wear in the evening.

New Coat Silhouettes
Coats are no longer a simple matter of straight boxy lines or fitted and flared effects, for Parisian designers are showing intricate details of cut and design in their most recent collections.

Picked Up in Studios of Style Designers

Smartness and practicality have joined hands in two new hats designed by Agnes.

Rough hemp is another fabric to leave its practical nature behind and become dashing enough for the dance floor.

For a smart, trim suit for town and country wear, one East Coast designer is using a pin wale corduroy in a putty color.

Red, white and blue prints with a military air are the presentation of an Eastern designer.

The hourglass silhouette, in search of new fields to conquer, has finally arrived at the top of the fashion picture.

Broadcloth and organza are two seemingly unrelated fabrics that Mainbocher combines in an evening ensemble.

WITH practically everybody liking "The Wizard of Oz" very much indeed (and those who didn't like it getting almost violent on the subject, saying that it couldn't even be compared with "Snow White"), the picture got off to a flying start.

Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney, who play the leading roles, made personal appearances with it when it opened in New York. They arrived at the theater at 8:45 in the morning, and remained there until almost midnight. Meanwhile young people of the same ages as the stars lined up outside the theater, waiting to get in—and because of the enthusiasm of these young fans, Judy and Mickey had a body guard when they did get out for a breath of fresh air and a look at the city.

They gave five shows daily except on Saturdays and Sundays, when extra performances were scheduled. She sang, he did imitations, and the fans cheered till the rafters rang.

In "In Name Only" Carole Lombard shows that she could give Bette Davis some rather stern competition as a dramatic actress if she put her mind on it. The girl who has been playing g-a-g comedy roles with such zest ever since the public acclaimed her as a comedienne in "My Man Godfrey" has turned in a bit of acting that makes her a promising candidate for one of those Academy statuettes, next time they're awarded.

Now that Nelson Eddy is back on that coffee program on Sunday evenings his program-makers are busy once again. He selects his songs chiefly by the number of requests from listeners. His secretary tabulates the requests every two weeks and delivers the final count to him. If possible, he sings the songs for which there are the greatest number of requests. The only difficulty is that people keep requesting the same old favorites over and over.

Although she is still on vacation, Kate Smith is preparing to return to the air in her role of commentator; she is so popular in that role that she's added it to her duties as singing mistress of ceremonies on the "Kate Smith hour."

So she'll begin commenting on October 9 from 12 to 12:15 Eastern standard time, over the Columbia Broadcasting system, while her regular hour brings her back to the microphones three days earlier. She'll discuss the news of the day and also her own personal experiences.

Alec Templeton, the blind pianist whose Tuesday night program is so popular, is not the only blind pianist on the air. Virg Bingham, of Kansas City's station WKB, is equally popular with those who have heard him. His interest lies chiefly in developing radio trios, the new one is composed of two girls and Bingham himself, and is the eleventh radio trio that he has developed.

"Susan and God," the play in which Gertrude Lawrence appeared so successfully on the stage, will probably require a good deal of re-writing before it's fit to be screened. For "Susan and God" poked fun at the Oxford movement, without actually saying so, and you can't poke fun at any religious movement on the screen without bringing in a swarm of protests.

Greer Garson, the English girl who made such a hit in "Good-By, Mr. Chips," will have the Lawrence role.

ODDS AND ENDS—Tex Ritter, the cowboy star, was injured the other day when he had a bad fall from his mount—not a horse, but an automobile. . . . Norma Shearer will do another costume picture, "Friede and Prejudice," and will make it in England. . . . Fred Astaire, Eddie Cantor and Eddie Cantor will co-star in "Girl Crazy." . . . Edward Arnold made his first plane trip recently, from coast to coast, and plans to take it instead of trains from now on. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Honors to Chefs
France honors its gastronomic heroes and heroines. In a village near Grasse is a monument to the inventor of Peach Melba; the discoverer of Camembert has a statue at Vimoutiers; while Madame Poulard, the famous omelette maker, is enshrined at Mont. St. Michel.

Flower Poisoning
A case of skin poisoning traced to the handling of chrysanthemum leaves is pronounced the first of the sort in medical literature.

FARM TOPICS

FARMERS LOSE CASH GRAZING WOODLANDS

Forestry Specialist Points Out Common Fallacy.

By R. W. GRAEBER

Farmers who graze cattle in woodlands lose money both in milk or beef and in timber and erosion control.

Experiments have shown that managed woodlands yield an annual return of about $4 per acre, and that the best open pastures yield about the same amount. However, when grazing and forestry are combined on the same area, the yields are much less, the total annual return for typical woodland pasture being only $1 per acre.

Why do farmers run their cattle in the woods? There is only one logical reason: They think they can pick up an extra dollar or two by letting the cattle pick a few buds and twigs in early spring, along with the low-growing plants and a few sprigs of grass or briars which may grow where a few rays of sunlight reach the ground.

This is a fallacy. A farmer doesn't pick up an extra dollar or two; the cows do not produce as much milk or as much beef as when they graze in open pasture; the timber supply is reduced; grazing woodlands induce erosion and loss of leaf litter; the fencing bill is higher.

Salt May Poison Hogs,

Veterinarians Reveal

After investigating several cases of salt poisoning, veterinarians have found that most farmers are unaware that salt is poisonous to hogs if given in too large quantities.

A good example of such a case was a farmer who had 222 head of pigs which had been vaccinated with both virus and serum; seven of the group had died seven days after the vaccination and four more were sick. The farmer blamed the treatment. The sick pigs wandered about the pen in a daze, gradually weakening until completely paralyzed. Death soon followed. The owner said the pigs seemed to crave something, so he set out several blocks of medicated salt. A number of the pigs ate considerable amounts from the block, he continued. The salt was removed from the pens and no further losses occurred.

After observing several cases of salt poisoning, Dr. Hefferd says that inflammation of the kidneys and bladder, together with a hardening of the liver, are the most common effects of too much salt in the ration.

As a rule hogs require little salt in the ration and the practice of mixing salt with the feed or soaking mash feeds in salt water should be discouraged, as a brine is likely to form which may cause acute poisoning with death following quickly, leaving post-mortem findings somewhat indefinite.

Farming Not Easy

Successful farming is not easy. It requires much experience in doing the various kinds of farm work and the ability to show others how to do this work. It requires training in business management and knowledge of the principles of plant growth, the feeding and care of animals, and the maintenance of soil fertility. Few industries require such a wide range of training and experience. Farming is not simply growing a particular crop or feeding a certain kind of live stock. It is an all-year-round business, involving the production of various plants and animals and the successful organization of the varying farm enterprises into a smoothly working unit.

Farming Briefs

After only 100 years of extensive cultivation, this country has been destroyed, seriously damaged or threatened with destruction an area equal to all land from which crops are normally harvested.

Added steps in processing food to prepare it for the consumers' tables reduce the farmer's share of the food dollar. Wage scales paid by food processors were twice as high in 1933 as in 1910-13. Slicing bread before it is sold and putting farm produce in small packages are two of the later developments in processing food.

For more than a year farm products exports from the United States have been rising and imports falling.

The good poultryman is never too busy to keep after the lice and mites that increase so rapidly in the warm days.

Since the relationship between the price of milk and the cost of grain is favorable, dairymen should feed all the grain their cows will use efficiently.

Weeds are ranked second to erosion damage to American farms and are responsible for an annual loss estimated at $3,000,000,000.

Life insurance companies have the largest sums invested in farm real estate of the five leading financial organizations making mortgage loans. The insurance companies own farms valued at more than $700,000,000 now, a gain of more than $600,000,000 since 1929, but the total invested now is less than it was one year ago.

Just a Little Smile

CAREFUL DRIVER

Her father had given her a new car. Dressed in the latest style, she flashed through the country. Sad to relate, she came to grief at a railway crossing.

She emerged from the ruin of her car, took out her vanity bag, and, oblivious of the crowd, proceeded to powder her nose.

The engine-driver of the express and others gathered round, and the driver asked:

"Why on earth didn't you stop at the crossing until you were sure the road was clear?"

After she had powdered her nose to the required tint, she turned to the driver and cried:

"I sounded my horn before you blew your whistle."

Dog and a Half

On a rainy day Mrs. B. allowed her young son to play with a few silver coins. He had one silver dollar and one half dollar which he persisted in calling two dollars. Finally she convinced him he had one dollar and a half. Later in the day a large dog trotted by with a small dog at its side. Sonny looking out the door looked questioning-ly at his mother and said:

"Dog and a half?"

PLAYING CLOTHES

Girlie—Oh, mother, look at the clothes on the line playing in the breeze!

Mother—They're your rompers, dear.

Texas Life

Some boys in Kansas City were showing a Texas rancher the city. "What do you think of our stock yards," they asked him.

"Oh, they're all right, but we have branding corals in Texas that are bigger," he said.

That night they put some snapping turtles in his bed. When he had turned back the cover, he asked what they were.

"Missouri bed bugs," they replied.

He peered at them a moment. "So they are," he decided. "Young uns aren't they?"

Remodeled Dresses

Two friends had been downtown and on their return one said: "I wonder what has become of all the eyelid dresses we used to see."

"I don't know, unless they have all been sewed up," her friend replied.

Small Brother (from behind davenport)—How about "Moth"?

Located

Mother (to son wandering around room)—What are you looking for?

Son—Nothing.

Mother—You'll find it in the box where the candy was.

Music Lover

Sally—I don't like some of these modern dances. They're nothing but hugging set to music.

Dzudi—Well, what is there about that to which you object?

Sally—The music.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK—On his record, it would appear that Gen. Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's strong man, might be more inclined to fight than with it. He made his career fighting the Bolsheviks, and news dispatches of the last few weeks have embarrassed him by being drawn into the new apparently broken fellowship with Russia. It has been clear that being saved by Russia was the least and last of his ideas.

It is beyond doubt the ablest of Poland's military leaders, and, once the bell rings, there is no question that he can and will fight, as he proved in the campaigns to free Poland and in his forays against early-day Bolshevik Russia.

He never has quite come through as a dictator. In 1936 there was one of those "ideological" build-ups in which he was to emerge as the head of a reconstructed Poland. Handsome and imposing, of dominant bearing, he looked the part, but he couldn't seem to manage the big talk necessary for the job. The best they could get out of him was something to the general effect that nobody would ever be allowed to take a single button from Poland's robe.

On August 6 of this year, when it appeared that Germany might just take the robe and leave the button, he was expected to make a sizzling speech at Cracow. His audience was howling for a knockout punch, but the speech was mostly shadow-boxing, with nothing specific about what he proposed to do about Danzig.

Fifty-four years old, with an engaging personality, he has been a popular dinner guest and holds the honorary presidency of the Polish academy of letters. The old Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, nearing the end of his life, anointed the general as his successor. He has been supremely efficient in his army job, but, as a strong man, has been somewhat overshadowed by the showier, more facile and adroit Josef Beck, the foreign minister. But fighting is his main business and knowing observers figure that, talking little, he is more apt to fight.

A MICHIGAN friend of this writer reports that Gov. Luren D. Dickinson's war on sin may turn out to be good political medicine out there.

War on Sin May Be Very Cute Politics

While big-town political leaders are said to be somewhat embarrassed by the aged governor's alarmed discovery of wickedness in high places, the word is that his forces have been entrenched and widened since he let loose about the drinking and dancing orgies of the Albany conference of governors. His Bible class at Eaton, Mich., is crowded to the doors and he is besieged with requests for lectures and participation in revival campaigns. Currently he tells a gathering of Chicago and Detroit "pupils" that this Albany conference was pretty much like Belshazzar's feast and that our Babylonian wastrels will drag us down if we don't mend our ways.

For 25 years, Mr. Dickinson has held in fee simple the anti-sin vote of Michigan. It has held steadily around 200,000 votes, undivided in its allegiance in his repeated forays against evil, chief of which has been his still continuing prohibition battle. He is a spare, bald evangel of righteousness, his friendly eyes rimmed behind his octagonal pince-nez glasses when he is aroused, his meager frame shaken with pious fervor. He employs much of the lexicon of the late Dr. Parkhurst of New York, in assailing sin, and some of his philippic seem to voice again the pious horror of the author of "New York by Gaslight," written 60 years ago.

He is a native of New York, born near Lockport in Niagara county. His parents removed to Eaton, Mich., when he was a small boy. There he still lives, happily engaged with his Methodist church with the state of Michigan, and, happily for his peace of mind, in a bout with evil which he never knew existed before.

Shays' rebellion of 1786 jolted the big-town politicians with a realignment of what a mixture of agrarian discontent and old-time religionism's compact voting phalanx, allied conservative Republican organization appreciates all this. (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

Shelf Edging Dressing

Up Kitching Windows

By RUTH WYETH SPRENG

SOME of us can remember seeing our mothers cut shelf papers. Dextrously folded and snipped the sharp points or curves; sometimes using a cut out diamond in the center of each scallop. For there is more satisfaction in creating its own handiwork in using fancy lace edge paper by the roll. Today, we find the same satisfaction when we oilcloth shelf edgings—thinking of terms of color has a fascinating even beyond scallops with diamonds in the center.

The suggestion sketched here for using shelf edging to dress kitchen windows was sent by a reader. The busy homemaker will appreciate the fact that the curtains are perfectly straight and plain and easy to remove for laundering. When windows are especially good. Banded tin containers for bread, nuts and spices may be painted in bright enamel, to match.

The new Sewing Book No. 1, Mrs. Spears is packed full of fun, money saving ideas, most any homemaker may put to practical use. Every page is clearly illustrated with sketches. You will be fascinated with the variety of interesting things to make for the home for gifts. The price is only cents postpaid. Send your name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. ## Your Children Can Help You; Let Them Try

GOOD JUDGMENT needed in delegating household tasks. Even older children may be too immature to do difficult or too continuous work. Wise mother will keep close watch over youngsters.

By EMMA GARY WALLACE

WHERE there is a family of children and the means are limited, it often becomes necessary for the older children to give as much help as they possibly can, not only with the housework but with the care of the little ones, and the tasks are usually accepted cheerfully.

But good judgment is needed in such situations. The mother must remember that the older children are still immature, and that they should not be called upon for work that is too difficult or too continuous. What may seem light—not at all overtaxing—to older persons may be quite tiring to a boy or girl, and a child is entitled to a happy youth as far as can be managed. Then the little ones—even a single little one—may become quite demanding and tyrannical. The wise mother will see to it that each child is dealt with fairly.

In order that the mother herself shall not be overtaxed and made irritable by too many demands upon her strength and time, it may be necessary for her to simplify the household program as far as possible.

Part of the ironing, for instance, may properly be left undone. Many garments and sheets do not actually require ironing. If they are sweet and fresh and clean, pulled into shape just before they are quite dry and smoothly folded, that is all that is necessary. The beds will look better, of course, if pillow cases are ironed.

Even such ironing as may really need to be done, can be accomplished with less fatigue if there is a high stool at the sink—preferably with a back—and one of these stools little. There is no reason why dishes cannot be washed, or part of them at least, while using the same stool. If they are thoroughly rinsed and a drainer is used most of them will not need to be wiped.

Meals can be attractively served and yet be simple and nourishing. A baked custard (take less time and work) and a sheet of lasagna, simple rice puddings, unfrosted cakes and "one-dish meals" each cut down a little on the work, and every little helps. A "one-dish meal" is one where vegetables and meat are cooked in one container and served in that container.

Don't Let Work Become Humdrum. Some sort of a play can be devised so that the work of the older children does not lose its humdrum character. For example: the living room is to be put in exceptionally nice order, because the Queen of Hearts is coming for supper, and as the children do the work, they could chant to some well-known tune.

"The Queen of Hearts She made some tarts All on a summer day. The King of Hearts He found those tarts And stole them all away."

One of the children could pretend to be the Queen of Hearts who will come in with a bright red scarf around her shoulders or a gilt paper crown and inspect the dusting. The King might wear that crown at supper-time when tarts may be served, but of course he would not be given a chance to defraud the others.

Taking care of the baby should be carefully supervised. Slender older children can wheel the baby or draw him about on a little cart or sled, but they should not be expected to carry him. The little one, who is being cared for by the older children, should not be allowed to impose upon them by demanding toys of which older brothers and sisters are choice, and perhaps are justified in not liking to lend if the baby is likely to break or spoil them.

It is not to be wondered at that older children sometimes look upon the little newcomers as very much of a trial. But under the right management, with sympathetic understanding, they may easily be led to love and willingly help care for the new babies. It should be made plain that they continue to hold, even more securely than before, their own special places in the affection and confidence of parents and relatives.

TASTY SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS

(See Recipes Below)

Sunday Night Suppers

Even though you expect everyone to have had a noon meal with staying power on Sundays, people do like to eat when Sunday evening rolls 'round! To be sure, they like food that's somewhat lighter, and food that's out of the ordinary. So it's a grand time to leave the beaten path and serve something a little different.

If you serve left-overs, be sure to serve them in a new way or with an unusual accompaniment like the jellied chili sauce I've suggested in menu No. III. If you plan a meal especially for Sunday night, plan one which can be served "à la minute."

and arrange foods, dishes and silver on the table so that guests may serve themselves. Appetites will be quickened by the eye-appealing arrangement of the table, and the air of informality makes Sunday night supper a sociable affair.

These menus are suited, too, to serving larger numbers—lodge groups, church organizations or clubs. Recipes for the main dish and salad in every menu are easily increased. Unless you have special recipes and equipment, cakes and pastries are likely to be better if the single recipe is used.

Sunday Night Supper Menus

- Wafers
- Clam Chowder
- Assorted Relishes
- Lettuce and Tomatoes with Roquefort Cheese Dressing
- Pineapple Cream Tarts
- Beverage

- Tuna Casserole
- Orange-Cherry Salad
- Hot Rolls
- Beverage

- Thin Slices of Cold Roast Beef
- Jellied Chili Sauce
- Mixed Vegetable Salad
- Toasted Loaf
- Cocoa Marshmallow Cake
- Coffee

- Lettuce and Tomatoes with Roquefort Cheese Dressing.
- (Serves 6)

- 1 head lettuce
- 2 tomatoes
- ¼ pound Roquefort cheese (crumbled)
- 1 pound lettuce

- French dressing
- Remove coarse outer leaves from head of lettuce.
- Cut into wedges.
- Peel tomatoes, remove stem end, and cut into eighths. Place in salad bowl with the lettuce. Add crumbled Roquefort cheese and French dressing. Toss lightly until well mixed.

- Tuna Casserole.
- 1 7-ounce can tuna
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 cup cooked peas
- 1 can button mushrooms
- 2 cups cooked noodles (medium width)
- Salt, pepper and butter
- 1 cup milk

- Butter individual baking dishes. Sprinkle tuna with lemon juice. (This brings out the tuna flavor). Arrange alternate layers of tuna, peas, mushrooms and noodles, putting noodles on top. Season each layer with salt and pepper. Dot top generously with butter. Pour into dish and top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes. (Serves 4-6).

Jellied Chili Sauce.

- 1 tablespoon gelatin
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- 1 cup chili sauce (or catsup)

Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add to chili sauce, which has been heated to the boiling point, and stir until dissolved. Pour into tiny paper cups, individual molds, or small pan from which the chili sauce may be sliced or cut in attractive shapes when firm. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Toasted Loaf.

Trim top and side crusts from a loaf of unsliced white bread. Cut through the center of the loaf, lengthwise, cutting just to the lower crust, but not through it. Then cut crosswise, spacing the cuts about 2 inches apart. Brush top and sides generously with melted butter. Toast in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) until the loaf is golden brown. Serve hot.

Clam Chowder.

(Serves 6.)

- ½ cup carrot (chopped)
- 2 tablespoons onion (chopped)
- 1½ cups potato (chopped)
- ¾ cup celery (chopped fine)
- 1 pint clams
- 2 cups water and clam liquor
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 pint milk
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1½ tablespoons parsley
- ½ teaspoon paprika

Chop the vegetables in small pieces and place in large kettle. Chop the clams and add together with the clam liquor, water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook about ½ hour, or until vegetables are tender. Scald milk. Make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Add half of this flour paste to the clam mixture and half to the scalded milk. Cook each, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Combine and add butter, parsley and paprika. Serve very hot.

Double Jeopardy

Connecticut is believed to be the only state that, in recent years, has enforced a case of "double jeopardy," or compelled a person to undergo a new trial for a criminal offense of which he had once been duly acquitted. The case in point occurred a short time ago after the state's right to appeal had been upheld by the Supreme court of the United States.—Collier's.

New Version of William IV Furniture

By BETTY WELLS

Furniture designers with imaginative pore over old books and prints for their inspiration, and truly the past is replete with a wealth of material on furniture designs, half lost in dusty volumes. A well-known American designer, David Evans, has turned back to the time of William IV (1811-1837) for the source of his newly presented furniture. He has not simply copied what he found, but he has created a simple rhythmic version of the furniture originally made during this period. It is an adaptation of the Regency forms we are familiar with, but in distinctly original interpretations. Mahogany is the wood, finished in a clear and natural way to make the most of the beautiful grain. Silver inlays and Sheffield plate drawer pulls are details of distinction. It's the sort of furniture that can be used with blackmoor figures.

This furniture has been shown in several model rooms to suggest ideas for its use, but they offer plenty of tips on colors and decorative details adaptable for use with other furniture, too. A dining room, for instance, has a blue dado all around the lower part of the wall with a red and white striped wall paper above. A pair of niches on either side of the entrance are painted in malachite green to hold white plaster figures. The curtains, of flowered organdy on a white ground, are hung over stiff taffeta, while the rug is in malachite green. Quite a brilliant color scheme, you must admit, but just right for the simple flowing lines of the mahogany furniture of William IV heritage.

A living room using William IV furniture also features dominant colors. The walls are Regency blue with a white dado, while the curtains are in chintz with a white ground and red and white floral pattern topped with valances of double draped American Beauty taffeta. The rug is in a natural pale string color and shaggy weave.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

He said slowly: "They might have been afraid—afraid of something we don't know about. Or wanting something." And he spoke to Miss Moss. "Justus Taine has all the wills, Bowdoin's and Hurder's. He wouldn't tell by and by, but—there may not be time." His tone was deeply troubled. He spoke to June. "You and your cousins would inherit all the money in the family."

"I don't know," she confessed. "Was there much?" But before he could answer, she cried: "That doesn't matter now, though." Rising anger steadied her. "I want to know who killed my mother," she said.

Tope looked at her apprisingly. "Mean that, do you?" "Of course."

"Because," he said, "you can help find out! This is ugly business to talk about, hard to believe. But Miss Leaford, your grandpa, Mr. Hurder, is out there, in that house, near dying. It wouldn't take much to make him die. Whoever set fire to the house last night wants him dead." And after a moment Tope added soberly: "They refuse to have a nurse for him."

He shook his head; he said in a grim and stricken tone: "I think there's an insane murderer loose out there—insane, and deranged."

June and Clint studied this in silence. Tope explained: "You know when you went up to the room, and I've guessed at the before that. I know when the alarm was rung in, and when the apparatus arrived; and by all means for all you and Clint did after the fire and before the apparatus arrived, I can figure out the time you saw the fire."

June said: "This seems to be a record of the call to Providence." Tope added: "How bad the fire was—when your aunt called the phone?"

"The whole house was burning," he decided. "There's one other thing I've got to ask you," he said gravely. "Do you think any of your relatives might have your mother's poison? Or set the house on fire?"

June whispered: "They're hard and stubborn; but—No."

"What was that?" Tope asked. "I saw them kiss each other to-night, at the fire. They were back in the shadows, but I saw."

"That's what I've been thinking about," he said. "You never knew anything about it?"

"No, no," she declared. "But if she loved her, he wouldn't have told Aunt Evie, and Grandma Bowman, I mean."

"You think so?" Tope prompted. "Yes! Mother used to tell me—"

He hesitated, went bravely on: "Mother used to tell me that if I married without their consent, they would crush me. They did crush me, you know."

Inspector Tope nodded; and he looked his words with care. "You remember Mr. Glover, who lived in the cabin in the woods—the man you called Uncle Jim. You liked him, didn't you?"

"Yes," she said. "So much. He went away, after Mother died."

"What's come back," the Inspector asked. "Where is he?" she cried eagerly.

Tope hesitated, he confessed at last. "Inspector Heale is holding him."

"You mean—arrested him?" Her check was pale. "Heale thought he might have had something to do—"

"Oh," she protested in loyal pride. "Uncle Jim wouldn't. No, no."

"He came back at noon today," Tope explained. "Come back asking for you—Miss Leaford, I'm trying to find out what happened out there. You understand that we are sure someone, somehow, was poisoned. Someone got some extra tablets in that glass of milk she drank. It might have been done while the milk was in the bottle, in Mrs. Bowdoin's refrigerator. Or—afterward on the way upstairs, or after it had been taken upstairs. And anyone might have done it. Anyone at all."

"Why should they do a thing like that?"

safe, with my mother dead, and my father—"

"Mr. Hurder's in the Bowdoin house," Tope explained. "They aim to keep him there. They won't have a nurse in to take care of him. But Miss Leaford, they'd have you. They want you home, and if you went, and insisted on nursing him—"

Clint made a swift indignant protest; but June hushed him. "Yes, I understand," she told the man steadily. "I'll go. But why? What am I to do?"

"To watch," he said. "To be ready." "Ready for what?" she insisted. "So, reluctantly, he put the thing in words. 'Whoever did this wants Mr. Hurder dead,' he pointed out. 'I think there'll be another try at killing him.'"

And he said gravely: "There might be more than that. There might be a try at killing you."

CHAPTER XIII

Clint had listened to Inspector Tope's suggestion that June return to Kenesaw Hill with an incredulous and angry horror. Now he cried in a bitter wrath: "No! I won't stand for that. June's been through enough—"

"We'll be there to take care of her," Tope urged. "You and I, Clint. We'll be on the job. It's only for tonight. I've a notion to-night will tell the tale."

"No," Clint insisted. "She's through with them out there, all those people. I'm going to be all her family from now on. If you think I'm going to let her go out there for bait, to bait a trap—"

And he cried: "Why do you have to mix in, Inspector? Let them wash their own dirty linen."

Tope urged gravely: "It's any citizen's duty to do what he can, Clint." His tone was grim. "And son, there's a murderer loose out there. Maybe a maniac. I think he is. There's a terrible, mad persistence in him. Or her."

"Her?" Clint echoed, startled by that pronoun. Tope hesitated. "Him or her, whoever it is," he repeated. "Clint, whoever did this is a monster, not human. Not telling what will come next."

"And you want to risk June's life?" "I don't aim to," Tope argued. "She'll have her eyes open. I'll tell her what to watch for. She'll have a pistol, to use if she has to. We'll be right outside." He spoke to June herself. "You won't go into it blindly," he said. "Nor at all, unless you want."

"Let Heale work it out," Clint cried. "It's his job."

June was a long time in taking any part in this discussion between them: But when she spoke at last, it was decisively. "I don't trust Inspector Heale, Clint," she said. "If he thinks Uncle Jim—my father—did this, he must be a dull, witless man."

They watched her; she seemed to think aloud. "It was money, and the money always," she cried, half to herself. "I can see that now. Everything had to be done to keep the money in the family. That was why married Uncle Jim—for fear some of the money would get away from them. Oh, I've heard them talk, and plan!"

Clint said warmly: "Sweet, hush! You're never going back there again."

But June smiled at him, and she said: "Yes, I am, Clint. I can go back and watch and see things now that I couldn't see before. I can understand."

Inspector Tope said slowly: "Heale is afraid of your people. He won't go after them hard, the way he would after other folk. And I never saw an uglier business. This senseless, pitiless butchering! There's a maniac loose out there; and Heale won't act. I've got to find some way."

"I'll do whatever you say," June insisted; and Clint knew at last that he could not dissuade the girl. He said slowly: "I wish you wouldn't, June. But—I can see, can feel the same way. Inspector, what do you mean to do?"

Tope considered, his eyes on the floor, his head wagging. "I think the thing will ripen tonight," he confessed. "If it seems sure that Mr. Hurder will live, the murderer will try to end him tonight."

He watched June intently. "And maybe you too! I'm guessing at one; but I'm a good guesser. Some one out there is money-crazy. Mr. Hurder is a rich man; and someone out there wants that money. Maybe wants it quick. Maybe has to have it quick."

"I'm guessing," he repeated. "Justus Taine wouldn't tell me what was in the wills. But my guess is that the Hurder money is in a trust agreement for Mrs. Leaford—but she's dead—and then for you, Miss Leaford. With trustees, maybe Taine himself. Maybe his sons. It doesn't matter—wouldn't help us any if we knew, because they're all in the same pot together. But it comes down to it that you're the only one left in the way, Miss Leaford. With you dead, the Hurder money's bound to stay in the Taine family."

"Clint, whoever did this is a monster, not human."

Crippled Kewaskum Team, With Second Place Cinched Loses Last Game at Waldo

"Wally" Sprangers and Marx Oppose Each Other in Thrilling 2 to 1 Pitchers' Battle

With a badly crippled team, Kewaskum traveled to Waldo Monday, Labor Day, for the final game of the season and was defeated 2 to 1 in a fast and hard fought pitchers' duel between Sprangers and Marx. The game meant little to the local nine, as the team already had second place cinched as a result of their victory over Campbellsport here a week ago Sunday.

Kewaskum had only eight players for the game and as a result had to pick up an unlisted man for the ninth position. Out of the 14 members of the team six were unable to play either because of accidents, illness, business or pleasure. Players missing included Honeck, Bartel, Miller, Roden, Mellus and Dreher.

Nevertheless it was one of the finest and most hotly contested games of the season. H. Marx again was on the bill for the locals and pitched another masterful game. In his previous start Marx was victorious over Campbellsport, 1 to 0, in which he gave up only 5 hits. He repeated his performance Monday when he set down the Waldo nine with 5 hits. "Wally" Sprangers, who pitched for one of the Triple A teams in Milwaukee this summer, was on the mound for his old home town team and had the Kewaskum batters eating out of his hand. He allowed the locals only 2 hits although he was in trouble several times.

Sprangers does not pitch regular for Waldo, this being the first game he worked for the team. Their regular pitcher, faced Random Lake the day before. In the first game here Kewaskum pounded this pitcher freely and to doubt would have done so again if Sprangers hadn't been brought in from Milwaukee. He pitched well, however, Kewaskum should have won, 1-0. The locals earned their run while the opponents' two were scored on an error and a fly ball dropped by Kewaskum's ninth man with two out and two men on base. This jobbed Marx of a shutout. Sprangers' sizzling fast ball and hooks were working to perfection as 17 locals went out by the strikeout route. Sprangers struck out the side in 3 of the 9 innings and 2 batters in 2 other innings. Marx fanned 7 opponents and retired the side on three whiffs in one inning. Marx might also have had a three hit game, two of Waldo's bingles could have been chalked as errors.

Waldo's 2 runs scored in the third inning. Richards led off with a triple but was forced at home by the next batter, Dassow, who was then safe on first. Nussbaumer popped to Prost for the second out and then Hanson reached second on an error, sending Dassow to third. It was then that Sprangers doubled for 2 runs although his fly should have been an easy out. Kewaskum's tally was scored in the 7th frame. Harbeck walked and was forced out by H. Marx. Kral's double then sent Marx home all the way from first.

Bath and Kral hit doubles for Kewaskum and the former also played well at second. Nussbaumer got 2 for 4 for Waldo.

South Beats North in Wa-Fon-Do All-Star Game

In a very well played ball game at Wayne on Labor Day, the southern division all-stars again defeated the northern division stars of the Wa-Fon-Do league by a score of 4 to 2. The game was a thriller from start to finish.

The northern stars consisted of players from Leroy, Campbellsport Tigers, St. Kilian and Campbellsport Aces and they opposed the southern team of players from the West Bend, Allenton, Theresa and Wayne teams. Al. Velt of Allenton managed the southern stars and H. Feucht of Leroy handled those from the north team.

Graft of West Bend started at bat for the southern team with three hits, while Walden of St. Kilian and Krapp of Leroy led the northern team with two hits apiece. Schweitzer of Allenton and J. Felix of Wayne handled the pitching duties for the winners and allowed only seven hits. The losers used Cavanaugh of St. Kilian and Schloemer of the Campbellsport Aces on the mound. They gave up eight bingles. A three-run attack in the seventh inning put the game on ice for the southern stars.

Tigers 8, Wayne 6

The Wayne ball team entertained the Campbellsport Tigers on the home grounds Sunday and was defeated by an 8 to 6 score. After trailing 6-3 in the fifth inning Wayne tied it up with a three run attack in the seventh but a run in each of the eighth and ninth innings earned the visitors victory. R. Kudek led the hitting for the losers while Howard was best for the Tigers.

Twenty-five Years Ago

(Saturday, Sept. 5, 1914)
Philip J. Haug, an old and respected resident of the town of Auburn, died Monday at the age of 80 years. He formerly resided in Kewaskum and was a brother of Nic. Haug Sr. of Kowaskum.

The back yard contest conducted by the Kewaskum Woman's club has closed and prizes have been awarded as follows: 1st, John Stelplius, $2.00; 2nd, Jos. Herman, $1.50; 3rd, John Mathieu, $1.00. The contest created much interest and brought good results, everyone showing a desire to improve their property. The Woman's club is to be commended in their efforts to bring about a cleaner and prettier city.

Word has been received here that Jos. Schlosser has been appointed foreman in the Davidson barber shop at Milwaukee. We are glad to note the gradual rise of former Kowaskum boys and congratulate Mr. Schlosser on his good fortune in securing this position.

Governor Hell signed into law last week a bill creating a motor vehicle department which will absorb regulatory functions, and license issuing departments now under control of the secretary of state and several commissions. The measure provides for the appointment of a director by the governor, with consent of the senate at a salary of $5000 a year. The director is authorized to name three assistants at $4500 a year for 2 year appointments
