Edward Theusch and Evelyn Eckhart Wed

In a pretty spring ceremony witnessed by relatives and friends Miss Evelyn Agnes Eckhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Eckhart of Richfield, became the bride of Edward Mathias Theusch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Theusch of Town Kewaskum. The wedding was performed at 9 a. m. Saturday, April 20, at St. Hubert's church, Hubertus, by the Rev. Wm. J. Weishaupf.

The bride appeared lovely in a regal gown of floral patterned lace over a white satin slip. The frock had a V-neckline outlined with seed pearl flowers, a slim fitted bodice and very full skirt with a long train. Her veil of sheer white handkerchief veiling fell gracefully from a face-flattering halo studded with gleaming rhinestones. She wore a two strand necklace of pearls. The bridal bouquet consisted of white snapdragons and baby's breath.

Miss Mildred Eckhart attended her sister as maid of honor. She was attired in an aqua chiffon full skirted gown with a fitting jacket of shirred laces. On her head she wore a three point halo with a small face veil of the same shade. Her bouquet consisted of bronze snapdragons and roses held by a peach satin ribbon. The bridesmaid, Mrs. Peter Schrauth, sister of the bridegroom, wore a peach chiffon gown with full skirt and shirred laces top, having tiny bows from the neckline to the waist. She wore a gold heart locket. On her head she wore a three point halo with a small face veil of the same shade. She also carried a bouquet of bronze snapdragons and roses held with an aqua satin ribbon.

Gordon Beuscher, a cousin of the bride, was best man and the groomsmen was Peter Schrauth, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. Randall Eckhart, cousin of the bride, and Joe Thull, cousin of the groom, acted as ushers.

The bride is a graduate of Slinger High school and the Oxford Institute college.

Following the ceremony 100 guests were entertained at the home of the bride's parents. In the evening about 500 relatives and friends attended the wedding dance at the Lighthouse ballroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Theusch will reside on the bridegroom's farm 1 1/2 miles north of the village on Route 3, Kewaskum, where the groom is engaged in farming.

J. MARX AND EMPLOYEES ATTEND IGA CONVENTION

More than 2,000 grocers, their families and employees attended the 14th annual convention of the Independent Grocers Alliance Sunday at the Milwaukee auditorium. Among them were John Marx, owner of the Kewaskum store, and his wife, their son Ralph and Miss Maebelle Corbett, employees. They were accompanied by Permin Kohler of this village who is employed at Carbo's store in West Bend. The IGA now has 220 member stores in Wisconsin.

After inspecting exhibits, the grocers gathered for a dinner at which Dr. G. W. Crane, psychologist and newspaper columnist, told the grocers that they should put the customers instead of themselves on the back. J. D. Godfrey, Milwaukee wholesale grocer who organized the IGA in Wisconsin, outlined three rules for modern competition—a definite plan of operation, salesmanship and a modern store.

Member of Kewaskum Pioneer Family Dies

MRS. SARAH LUDWIG
Mrs. Sarah Ludwig, 85, member of a pioneer Kewaskum family, whose father traded with the Indians, and a resident of Milwaukee for 56 years, died Tuesday, April 23, at the Wisconsin Veterans' home at Waupaca, Wis., where she had lived for the past decade. She had been ill but a short time.

Mrs. Ludwig was the daughter of the late Philip Schmidt, who emigrated from Germany to a Kewaskum township farm in 1849—the days when a farmer's chief occupation was dictating with Indians. He served for 25 years as chairman of the town board and later became a member of the Kewaskum village board.

Mrs. Ludwig, widow of William H. Ludwig, engineer at the federal building at Milwaukee before his death in 1914, spent her years in Milwaukee at a residence on Downer avenue at old Poleston street, now E. Locust street.

She is survived by two sons, Roy T. Chicago, and William H. Jr., Marshfield; two granddaughters, Mrs. Edward J. Herte and Mrs. Lydia Kimmel, and two grandsons, Arthur and Martin Boese, all of Milwaukee.

Funeral services are being held at 2 p. m. today, Friday, at the Kaestner chapel, 2228 W. Fond du Lac avenue, Milwaukee. Burial is being made at Forest Home cemetery in that city. The body lay in state after 1 p. m. on Thursday until the time of the funeral.

EMIL GEIER

Emil Geier, 64, an employee of the Milwaukee Gas Light company for 33 years, a former resident of St. Michaels and brother of Paul Geier of Route 2, Kewaskum, near St. Michaels, was called in death on Monday, April 22, of a heart attack. He was well known in this community.

Mr. Geier was born in Germany, coming to this country at the age of six years. He lived at St. Michaels 45 years before going to Milwaukee 45 years ago. He lived at 4036 N. 24th place in Milwaukee. Mr. Geier was a member of the Northwest Old Settlers' club and St. Agnes church, Milwaukee.

Surviving are his wife, Mary, nee Schaefer; a son, Joseph P.; a daughter, Bernadine (Mrs. Frederick C. Wick); one daughter-in-law and one son-in-law; four brothers, Herman of Long Beach, Calif., Paul of near St. Michaels, and Theodore and Charles of Kewaskum, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 9:30 a. m. Thursday, April 25, at the Wendler funeral home chapel, 2031 W. Capitol drive, Milwaukee, and at 10 a. m. at St. Agnes church. Interment was made in Holy Cross cemetery in that city.

MISS ROSALIA HOEY

Miss Rosalia Hoey, 76, of Campbellsport, a native of the town of Auburn, was called in death at 5 a. m. on Monday, April 22, at her home in that village, following an illness of two years' duration.

Miss Hoey was born in the town of Auburn, Fond du Lac county, on Sept. 11, 1863. Later she resided in Chicago, returning to Campbellsport 12 years ago. She is survived by her sister, Miss Mary E. Hoey, with whom she made her home.

The body was removed to the residence at 4 p. m. on Tuesday. Funeral services were held from the home at 8:30 a. m. Thursday, April 25, and at 9 a. m. at St. Matthew's church in Campbellsport. The Rev. A. C. Biber officiated and interment was in the congregation's cemetery.

Play Begins May 5 in Kettle Moraine Loop

The schedule for the 1940 season in the Kettle Moraine baseball league, as released by Irving Nimmennann of Campbellsport, league secretary, has the Kewaskum team playing Sheboygan Falls in the home park in the opening game on May 5, a week from this coming Sunday. This will be Kewaskum's second season in the loop. Playing the first game at home will give the team a chance to show off their class new white uniforms with green trim in front of the local fans before dirtying them elsewhere. The game will be the first on the newly improved and made over diamond.

The league this year is composed of nine teams, one more than last season. One team, Random Lake, has dropped out of the league and two new ones, Elkhart Lake and Boltonville, have entered. Other teams are Adell, Campbellsport, Cascade, Greenbush, Sheboygan Falls, Kewaskum and Waldo. The season starts one week earlier, and ends one week later this year because of the additional teams. The season extends for 18 weeks but each team will have byes on two Sundays as a result of the odd number of teams. Each team meets the others twice, once at home and once away, making 16 games in all. Kewaskum draws a bye on the second Sunday of the season, May 12, and another on July 28.

A split season will again be played, the winners in each half meeting for the championship at the end of the campaign. The first half ends Sunday, June 30, and the second begins July 7. The season will close on Sept. 1. No date has been reserved for a league field day, which will be dropped. No holiday dates are included in the schedule, these being reserved to make up postponed contests. The league is strictly a home talent organization.

Last Sunday Kewaskum played a practice game at Mayville and was defeated. The boys went to Mayville without most of the players having had any practice and therefore were unable to make a showing. Besides only about half of the team made the trip and several non-members were picked up to fill the nine positions. The boys are now holding evening practices two nights a week and with another stiff session Sunday afternoon should be in pretty fair shape for the opening a week from Sunday.

Clip and save the schedule below for future reference.

Lady Here Gains Wide Recognition as Poet

The book "World's Fair Anthology" makes its initial appearance in a two-volume edition of over 500 pages each, containing the selected work of 1,913 poets, including that of Louella E. Schnurr of Kewaskum. This marks the first united attempt on the part of poet and editor to express the poetic outlook on the world of today.

Miss Schnurr's poetical selection received honorable recognition and ranks her among other writers of contemporary American poetry. The poem, entitled "Memories," was published in "The World's Fair Anthology of Verse," a comprehensive compilation of poetry, commemorating the culture, civilization and progress of the centuries as exemplified in contemporary poetry.

More than 8000 poets submitted their work with so many eager and worthwhile participants, the limitation of book covers may have excluded the work of many worthwhile writers. The Exposition Press feels that it has completed a book of which the authors and publishers will long be proud. The editors and publishers wish to express their certainty about the approval and acclaim that this volume deserves—and will receive.

Miss Schnurr's selection "Memories" was not written with a motive to commercialize it. It was written in 1921 as a memorial verse in honor of departed loved ones, however, it was more widely submitted in 1927 after literary approval, followed by several requests for submission by various publishers.

Prof. Maude Hagle became the incentive during Miss Schnurr's collegiate instructions in 1927, inspired the writer with more self confidence to stimulate her ideals for writing. Miss Hagle is an expert in the field of English work at Michigan State college and has devoted much of her life to the study of literary work. After graduation from several reliable universities and study abroad at Oxford university with a Rhodes' scholarship, she became affiliated as a professor of English. It was under her direction that Miss Schnurr studied faithfully and was encouraged to write.

The poem "Memories" gives a clear expression of the writer's thoughts in lyric form and was not intended to be written in meter but in original style. Copies of the book entitled "World's Fair Anthology" can be purchased by writing to Louella E. Schnurr, Kewaskum.

Several Young People Injured in Accidents

The Misses Ruth Runte and Mary Ann Schmidt of this village and their young men companions of Barton suffered minor injuries last Saturday night when the auto they were occupying tipped over south of West Bend.

According to reports the driver of the car was blinded by the bright lights of an approaching vehicle and swung the machine out into the shoulder to make room for passing. It is said that the driver, in turning back onto the road, swung the car too suddenly and the wheels caught, rolling it over several times.

None of the occupants were seriously injured although being treated for cuts and bruises at St. Joseph's Community hospital in West Bend. Miss Runte was the most severely injured, suffering bad bruises and cuts about the face and head from which glass from the windshield had to be removed. Miss Schmidt sustained several bad bumps while the two gentlemen escaped with minor cuts and bruises. The car was quite badly damaged.

SEEFELDT CAR HIT

A Dodge car driven by Herbert Abel of Route 5, West Bend, skidded and ran into the Studebaker of Alfred Seefeldt of the town of Kewaskum when Abel tried to avoid an electric light wire which fell down in the heavy snowstorm at 5 p. m. on Wednesday of last week. The collision occurred on Highway 33, just west of the city limits of West Bend. No one was injured.

Pewaukee Man Killed In Wreck Near Barton

Oscar Kolander, 39, of Pewaukee was killed at 7:45 a. m. Monday, Apr. 22, when a car in which he was riding failed to make a curve on Highway 141 several miles southeast of Kewaskum near Waller's lake, north of Barton, rolled over three times and skidded 130 feet into a field. This was Washington county's 7th traffic fatality of the year. Ernest Wegerman, driver of the car, and Kenneth Goerke, another passenger, both of Pewaukee, sustained only minor bruises in the accident. Kolander died of a broken neck.

Wegerman and Goerke were taken into custody later Monday by authorities and the former waived preliminary hearing before Justice Lloyd H. Lobel at West Bend on charges of manslaughter and reckless driving. He was bound over to circuit court and was set free under $2,000 bond. Goerke was released after questioning. Authorities report the accident occurred when the car attempted to take the curve at a high rate of speed. All three men were in the front seat.

Clarence Vogt, West Bend, truck driver for Jaeger Bros., Inc., Barton, came along immediately after the accident and tipped the auto back on its wheels. Wegerman and Goerke were helped out of the car and authorities were called. An ambulance was summoned to remove the body of Kolander. Kolander was an employee of Wegerman, who runs a tavern at Pewaukee. The car, a 1940 Pontiac sedan, was badly damaged. The car struck a patch of mud in the field and both the inside and outside of the machine, as well as the clothes of the occupants, were covered with the mud.

According to reports a car similar to the above was recklessly driven through Kewaskum at about 7 a. m. the same morning, with the occupants hurling eggs at several people on the streets at that time. Eggs were found in the wrecked car which had smashed and were smeared all over the auto.

Local Gashouse Gang Writes 21 Foot, Nine Inch Letter to Pal in Hawaii

Something out of the ordinary and really novel in the form of letter writing was undertaken recently in one of the uptown taverns by a group of young men referred to as the local gashouse gang. The project was a letter (or manuscript) 21 feet and 9 inches in length written on common store wrapping paper to their pal, Clarence "Clarky" Werner of Kewaskum, who is enlisted in the U. S. army air corps stationed in Hawaii. The letter took the gang several days to write, with first one member and then another in turn adding a foot or two of writing to the "brief" message in their spare time until it got so long they were backed right out into the street. Besides the roll of wrapping paper diminished and they had to quit. It was a real letter from home. The publication was completed last week, covered with air mail stamps and rushed away on its mission. No reply has been received from Werner stating how much of the army was needed to help him read it.

WHEAT ALLOTMENT NOTICE

The Washington County Agricultural Conservation committee gives notice that allotments are now being determined for the 1941 wheat crop. Any person desiring an allotment on a farm for which there was no wheat planted for harvest in 1938, 1939, 1940, should submit a written request to the County Agricultural Conservation committee at West Bend for a wheat allotment.

No requests for such an allotment can be considered after June 1, 1940.

ANNOUNCES MAY 1st AS FINAL DATE FOR FARM SIGN-UP

Farmers who intend to participate in the 1940 farm program but who have not yet signed their farm plan, should do so at once. The final date is May 1, 1940.

Most farmers of the county have contacted by community committee-men either in town hall meeting or at their farm. All farmers have the opportunity to earn payments for complying with the allotment and soil building practice provisions of the agricultural conservation program. To date, approximately 88 per cent of the farmers in Washington county have signed the farm plan indicating their intention of participating in the program.

By signing the farm plan before May 1, the farmer indicates that he wants his farm checked for performance this summer. Should he fail to sign the farm plan, his farm will not be checked and he will be ineligible for payment.

Also all farmers who have what are known as combination farms are urged to sign the necessary forms and declare their farms as combination farms before May 1. A combination farm is one in which land from more than one commonly operated farm is under one management.

FARM AND HOME LINES

A recent study shows the total cost of raising a dairy cow to production is about $86.50.

Twenty-three Wisconsin counties reported appropriations totaling $3,800 for bee disease control this year.

Cows which produce 300 pounds of butterfat make nearly twice as much profit as cows which produce 280 pounds of butterfat, a survey shows.

Many Wisconsin farmers are finding that the best method of taking care of spraying their orchards is through a cooperative spray ring.

Dawn found an Englishman, an Irishman and a Scot, three survivors of a shipwreck, drifting helplessly on a raft. Night came, and still no sign of rescue.

When things looked hopeless the Irishman knelt in silent prayer. Quickly the Englishman snatched off his hat as a mark of respect, and the Scot took a flying leap into the sea. He thought the Englishman was about to take up a collection.

CHOCOLATE UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE AN UNUSUAL DESSERT (See Recipes Below)

Spring Menus

Planning meals can be fun, if you'll let your imagination and your conscience be your guides! Meal planning does require imagination and a bit of originality, too, if you don't want the responsibility of three meals a day to be a bore, and three meals a day without that touch of "something" different can be boring—to you as well as to your family! A meal may be properly and carefully "balanced" from the standpoint of proteins and carbohydrates and vitamins and minerals—and still be a drab and uninteresting affair.

That seems to be particularly true in spring, when appetites are likely to be jaded, and you seem to be running out of menu ideas. And that's exactly the time to try something different, a little trick to add newness and interest to soups; a tasty and unusual meat dish; and a salad or dessert that makes use of some of the refreshing spring vegetables and fruits.

Just for variety, for instance, when I want to serve hot soup as the first course of a meal, I combine equal parts of canned consommé and tomato juice, simmer the resulting mixture for about 5 minutes with a bay leaf for flavor, and serve it very hot with a spoonful of salted whipped cream sprinkled with chopped chives or green onion tops. And I serve green onions and crisp, succulent radishes in place of the relishes I've used all winter. I use rhubarb for sauce or for dessert, just as soon as the price comes down within reach of my budget; I shred young carrots, or cut them in thin slivers, and cook them with an equal amount of onion, sliced fine; drain them and season with salt, pepper and butter. Or I cook carrots and potatoes together and mash them just as I would for mashed potatoes, to serve with the rich brown gravy of a pot roast.

Here are three spring menus that I like.

- Menu No. 1
 Corned Beef Hash Patties
 Spring Vegetable Salad
 Hot Corn Bread
 Rhubarb Dessert
- Menu No. 2
 Steak Roll
 Mashed Potatoes and Carrots
 Cabbage and Green Pepper Salad
 Hot Rolls
 Chocolate Upside-Down Cake

 8 slices bacon (cut in halves)
 Place can of corned beef hash in refrigerator and chill thoroughly. Open can at both ends. Push corned beef hash out of can, slicing it in 1/2-inch slices. Place slices in buttered baking pan. Place 2 teaspoons chili sauce on top of each slice and top with two half slices of bacon. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 10 minutes or until corned beef hash slices are thoroughly heated and bacon is crisp.

 Mix and sift dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Combine beaten egg, sour milk and melted butter and add to dry mixture. Stir lightly and pour into greased shallow pan, muffin tins or corn stick pans. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 25 minutes.

Rhubarb Cream Tarts.
 1 tablespoon butter
 2 cups rhubarb (diced)
 1/4 cup sugar
 2 tablespoons cornstarch
 2 eggs (separated)
 1/4 cup thick sweet cream
 1/2 teaspoon salt

Harness Talent of Head of the Family

By ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN

When the man of the family makes a hobby of carpentry, and a very good avocation that is to encourage, then it's a smart woman who harnesses such talent to her own ends. There's hardly a house in town that couldn't use some extra closets here and there, especially if they can be worked into a really decorative design. As in a bedroom with French provincial furniture, remodelled as follows:

Across one end of the room was built a paneled wall with an alcove in the center into which were built frames for two bunk beds. At each end of this wall was a closet. The entire panelling was nicely detailed with scrolls and moldings, which repeated those on a French provincial chest used in the room. Stained in a mellow beach brown, then waxed, this paneled wall added distinction to the room. A matching wallpaper and chintz ensemble, of a prim floral pattern, was selected, the wallpaper for the other three walls of the room, the

AROUND THE HOUSE

Never salt fresh meats when frying. Salt tends to extract the juices and hardens these meats.

Geraniums like a fairly heavy soil and must be potbound to flower well. They will invariably refuse to bloom if kept in a large pot.

Before polishing furniture, first go over it with a piece of cheesecloth wrung out of hot water, then apply polish. This gives excellent results.

When washing or ironing, put a thick rug under your feet and you will find you do not tire so easily.

When furniture knobs or handles become loose remove the bolts from the knobs and insert rubber washers similar to those used on water faucets. Replace the bolt. The knob will then be firmer.

Hafiz mustered energy enough to rise. "It's kind of dark—and these streets aren't any too safe for you," said Hafiz. "I walk with you," said Hafiz. "To the landing-place where you catch the Golden Horn boat—all the same as the Coney Island boat, my pretty—my pretty Nayima!" She is dance there one summer. When I sit we'll her some. "How many passengers make the face because Nayima is weel?" "Two, three tams I tweest those rubberneck till they let me alone. "Here the Osmanli wants to look at an Osmanli lady. I think the world is a jackass. "Bine-by we goin' to come to—what you call, the lock-up, calahouse, yes? There is put the thieves, the bad men. Today is the day of the cooler an Osmanli girl—very nice family, but she loves a Greek. It is terrible theeng to love a Greek, but maybe she don't, can't help it. She say she goin' to marry him. The police arrests the girl and the girl also too, for it is a great crime, such a marrying. "They take the bad girl and the girl to the jail, and they are goin' to bring them to be tried. But the—how do you say?—the mob does not like it. The mob gets together and says, 'Keel the gjaour. Keel the shameless girl.' "Bine-by some soldiers come and drive the mob away. But maybe the mob comes back. Me, I should not weesh to be that girl or that Greek feller."

up a steep street, down another, and so on and on till they reached the steamer landing. But the last boat had gone. With some trouble Hafiz found a kaik, and in this water-hansom Jebb sped down the Golden Horn among the slumberous ships. He thought of Miruma and felt that she was as far from his reach as the crescent still regent in the sky. And then he realized that he had lost the Gladstone bag once more.

CHAPTER X

By the time Jebb reached his hotel it was so late and he so exhausted that neither remorse nor anxiety could beat off sleep. He woke late the next morning luxuriously refreshed till he realized that he had backslidened to where he started. What little he had found he had lost again.

He was very glum over his coffee and eggs when there was an eclipse of the light and the huge orb of Hafiz Mustafa rose before him and with a gelatinous laugh set the Gladstone bag on the table.

Jebb threw his arms around the monster as far as they went, and cried:

"How in heaven did you find it? How in—how on earth did you find me?"

Hafiz indulged in a little self-congratulation.

"I'm a wise guy, all right, all right, huh? As the boat pulls out I see you have not the Gladstone. I see you have not the Gladstone. I see you have not the Gladstone."

Bulged into the smoking compartment.

This was doubly shocking news to Jebb for it invaded his own recurrent dreams of Miruma. They were now descending a silent street whose dogs like prowling hyenas only gave the loneliness a terror. Out of the murmurous silence there rose a sound like waves tumbling on distant shale. It was a tumult-clarion mystified by distance. Hafiz listened with lifted head, like a rhinoceros sniffing the air for danger.

"The mob is there again. Queeck!" And he was running with a speed his bulk had not implied. Jebb followed, stumbling over the refuse in the streets.

A bonfire had been lighted in the square before the district police-station. The windows were ragged with broken glass. The door hung on a fractured hinge. In the square, nearer the fire, a man and a woman were struggling within a tangle of bloodstained flannels that clutched at them, struck at them with clubs, and slashed with knives.

Hafiz groaned: "The mob is get busy. See, that is the Greek—that is the girl." The crowd boiled and sworled like eddies choked with debris.

Dragged by the lure of horror Jebb and Hafiz moved slowly down the hill. They saw the Greek, fighting like another Leonidas against an Asian horde, sink under a smother of enemies, only to reappear gashed, bleeding, but fighting on.

The girl's plight was more ugly, for she had none of the mad exultance of the death struggle of man against man. Hers was the odium of being torn to pieces and of dying in naked shame.

Clutching terrors tore her hair loose—her veil had long since been rent away. Jebb could look no longer. He dashed forward and hurled himself into the maelstrom, yelling, cursing, striking right and left with his fists.

Though he was too frantically desperate to know it, alongside went Hafiz Mustafa, bellowing like a bull charging a pack of wolves.

The men on the outskirts of the throng took the newcomers at first to be only zealots like themselves, fighting forward to the always holy office of sticking a knife into an infidel. But their progress was too furious to be long misunderstood; Hafiz and Jebb had hardly pierced the outer shell of the mob when the cry rose that they were themselves infidels to the rescue of infidels.

And now knives were turned their way and bloodthirsty fanatics ringed them round, forgetting for a moment the young lovers, who, unsupported by their enemies, fell to the cobles to be trampled underfoot.

The huddle was beginning to mumble threateningly and to brandish fists and knives in Hafiz' courageous face, when the ragged noises were stirred by a noise with a rhythm and regularity to it. It meant soldiers.

Without delay the mob stampeded outwards and was dissipated in the dark alleysways. When the patrol debouched on the square, the tenuous moonlight showed only two men erect, and two figures on the ground, one very still, one writhing.

Jebb paid no attention to the officers, but knelt by the side of the girl whose wounds he examined with a certainty that proclaimed him a physician. Hafiz interpreted, and he soon had the patrol so busy on his errands that it forgot its main purpose.

After a while of Jebb's ministrations the bruised lips began to murmur. Jebb bent close and heard, but could not understand. He beckoned Hafiz to kneel by him and the wrestler explained:

"She wants to die in her lover's arms." But the body of the young Greek had been carried away, and she died alone, slowly, with anguish of body, of heart, and of soul.

When she was quite dead, Hafiz murmured to Jebb that unless he hurriedly would be detailed indefinitely as a witness in the trials that would result from the riot. Waiting the proper instant, he dragged Jebb

"I suppose there's the same hand out for graft here as everywhere else."

"Well, I haven't had any special trouble in that line," said Jebb, growing weary of fencing.

"You really think you'll pull it off?"

"I hope so."

"I don't suppose I'd dare ask whether you represent the General Electric or the Independents."

"That would be telling."

"I judged from your talk on the steamer that you were acting pretty much on your own."

"Yes," was all Jebb dared to say, his mind taking a new whirl at the word "steamer."

"I judged from your talk, Mr. Pierpont, that you had enough capital in your jeans to dazzle the city fathers here."

Jebb's heart sickened. So this was more of Pierpont's brag.

"I suppose when you go back you'll go by land. Those Austrian Lloyd steamers pitch and toss atrociously, and the 'Franz Josef' is the worst of them all. I've got used to it, but you seemed terribly unhappy."

Jebb laughed, as much as to confess. And the man went on:

"Yes, when you got on at Trieste I said to my wife, 'I'll bet that fellow has a sad voyage.' You looked sort of greenery-yellow and off your feed."

"I wasn't in the best of health."

"You're all right now, though, I judge. That's the effect of a few weeks in Constantinople. She's a great old town in spring, eh?"

"She certainly is. By the way, did you notice how the little girl was?"

"What little girl?"

"The one I had with me at Trieste."

"You didn't have anybody with you. I noticed specially, because they were just pulling the gangplank in when you jumped for it."

Jebb's heart lurched, but he kept a rigid face.

"Oh, of course, the little girl wasn't with me at that time. Have some more coffee."

"No, thanks. I must get back to the hotel. I'll be mighty glad when you get your electric plant installed. The lighting of this town is something fierce. You'll make a fortune if you'll rig up a crescent-shaped bulb. That's the favorite design for their illuminations. Well, so long, see you again, Mr. Pierpont."

"So long—old man."

He must leave at once just where Trieste was, and what was the quickest way of getting there.

Hoping that some word from Miruma waited him in Vienna, Jebb telegraphed the Union Bank to forward his mail to the American consulate in Trieste.

Leaving Constantinople the train retraced for many miles the same rails he had taken from Salonica.

It was strangely comforting just to be in motion. Whatever awaited Jebb at his destination, at least he had a destination, and the swift flight of the express was exhilarating.

He breakfasted his way out of Bulgaria into Serbia, and prepared to stretch his legs at the next stop. It proved to be—Nish!

The word came with a shock, sending him back to his first wakening in Turkey and the first sound of this barbaric word on an ear that found "Uskub" equally harsh. And now somehow through the mellow enchantment of memory, the word Uskub always fell with music on his senses.

Late afternoon brought Belgrade on the scene. Here a new passenger got aboard and bulged into the smoking compartment with the most aggressive of the worst type of traveler. He made himself nasally audible. He behaved like a crowd.

"Whew!" he began, "but these foreigners are a pack of damned scoundrels and fools. It's tip, tip, tip all day long, everywhere you turn there's a palm up. You're an American, too, eh?" Jebb nodded. "My name's Ludlam, Charles Ludlam."

"How are you?" said Jebb.

"Goin' far?"

"I change at Budapest," was all Jebb answered. Silence seemed to be intolerable to Mr. Ludlam.

"Where'd you get on?"

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK—One bright, sunny day in July, 1920, King Christian X of Denmark, mounted on a beautiful white horse, led his troops across a boundary line to reclaim the northern part of Schleswig, lost to the Germans in 1864. Denmark had been crippled in the World war, suffering much more than Norway and Sweden, but somehow she had managed to save her little kingdom. The king, addressing a cheering throng, hailed the organization of international law and order, under which small nations could live in peace.

The king, who is six feet, six inches tall, the tallest man in his kingdom, recruited a guard of the tallest and handsomest young men he could find, but none so tall as he. They were gorgeously uniformed and the ceremony of the changing of the guard might have been readied by Franz Lehár. But many times, the king reminded his people that all this was merely appropriate ceremonial, and that Denmark's safety lay in keeping in the vanguard of civilization, and not in armed forces.

Last summer, under great nervous tension, he seemed to feel that the powers of darkness were closing in, and suffered a serious illness. Today, with the fate of Denmark resolved in far-ranging and desperate issues, the old king, nearing 70, yields to the inevitable. The New world structure of law and order has fallen and Denmark is one of many casualties.

At the age of 28, Christian married Alexandrine, princess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. When he was crowned in May, 1912, the Danish populace was prepared to dislike him, descendant of an alien dynasty as he was, and there were some overt demonstrations against him. But he won his people with his furtherance of a liberal, constitutional government. Although he was trained as an army officer, and had a liking for military pomp, he frequently denounced militarism and opposed efforts to get his tiny country goose-stepping and arming.

While he was proud of having the tallest and most resplendent guard in Europe, he slipped away from his bodyguards at every opportunity and enjoyed tremendously bicycling around Copenhagen, unattended. Into the ruck with Denmark's gains of two decades goes what probably has been the world's most successful state-sponsored industrial and agricultural co-operation.

EMIL HURJA, big, Babe Ruthian political statistician and precisionist, who greatly aided the early New Deal by charting the public drift, is now an ally of the Garner forces. Familiarity with his system of getting the mill-run of public sentiment. He once told this reporter about his interesting career. Taking a start from the wilds of the Michigan peninsula, when he was 18, notes from his diary might be something like this:

Rode the rods on the way to Seattle. Found more comfort in the cattle car.

Landed in Yakima, did this and that, and finally got to Seattle. Since I had learned to set type at the age of nine, I convinced the Post-Intelligencer I was a newspaper man.

Managed to get by, but realized an education might help, so started grabbing one off the side at the University of Washington. Found Dr. Henry Suzzallo, the president, was the greatest man I ever met.

Dr. Suzzallo said Henry Ford wanted him to send somebody on his peace ship and it might as well be me.

Went on the peace ship; came home and rammaged around the Texas oil fields and then got to Alaska. Fell in with Ben Smith, who had a real gold mine. Came back home and got into Wall Street and politics.

Began assaying political mother lodes; got so I could tell whether I would get a string of color, and found I was assistant to Mr. James Farley, chairman of the national Democratic committee.

Like Mr. Garner.

EIGHTEEN years ago, Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine commonwealth, said to a group of American business men, "I would rather live under a government run like hell by Filipinos than under a government run like heaven by Americans." Now, with the shadow of Nippon reaching out into the Pacific, he isn't so sure. Word from Washington is that while he still thinks 1946 may be all right for casting off, but he is dickering for a re-examination of the Philippine problem.

He was a game little insurrecto for two years after we cleared Spain out of the islands, picking up his interrupted law studies thereafter and becoming governor of his province at the age of 25. At 61 he is still 140 pounds of dynamite, wearing his red beret at an angle. But, on shift with the high hat, he tends toward caution and conformity. He quite captivated Woodrow Wilson and won from him many concessions, including toward complete Philippine independence. The world is wondering what part his hand may play in future world affairs.

THIS chair, now so smart in its sateen cover, button tufting and moss fringe trimming, barely escaped the trash burner. It had been such a comfortable chair that everyone hated to date and positively untidy. Someone suggested it might be covered. Mother said that wouldn't be a bad idea if it could be padded first! That gave Sis a brain wave. Why not tuft it? By pushing a long darning needle back and forth through the cover, padding and openings in the wicker? She had been wanting a tufted chair, so work began at once.

The sagging arm rest, magazine holder and frayed-out wicker around the legs were removed. The chair was padded and covered, as shown, and a new seat cushion was added. The tufting was done by sewing through thread; adding a button on each side of the stitch.

Stranger Was Quick to Acknowledge Introduction

The clergyman in a wayside church out of London was about to start his sermon when three strangers entered.

They were late and very conscious of it. One of them found a seat near the door, but the other two had to walk further up.

At that moment the preacher was finishing the announcement of his text: "—and Paul I know, but who are ye?"

The young men paused for a moment, looked bewildered, then one of them spoke up. "Glad to have the pleasure, Reverence," he said. "This is Harry MacTavish from Edinburgh, and I'm James MacPherson. I'm from Edinburgh, too. Our friend back there is Joe Stimson. He's from London."

Doctor Townsend Says.....

Norman Thomas has been married and jailed for his economic and social philosophy, but his statement on the radio the other night convinced me that he is every inch a true American.

Asked why he continued to voice his beliefs, he declared it was because he felt it was his duty as a citizen in a democracy to speak out on reforms he felt were essential. We may not agree—we may even oppose—the Socialist philosophy, but we must respect the democratic principles of Mr. Thomas. It is not only the right, it is the duty of American citizens to take part in democratic processes.

BASEBALL NEWS

The Kewaskum High school baseball boys played their first game of the season at Waupun last Friday, April 19. They came out with a win, the score being 11 to 1.

Paul Kral pitched the first three innings and allowed two hits. Harold Prost pitched two innings with no hits. Frank Bremser pitched the last two innings and allowed two hits. With a good start like this, the boys should really go to town this season.

The second game was played at Kewaskum April 24 with Slinger.

TALK ON FOREIGN COUNTRIES
On Wednesday afternoon the student body was entertained with a talk presented by Miss Irene Warden. She discussed the conditions in the countries of Spain, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Denmark, and Germany. Miss Warden had traveled in these countries for five years, and therefore was capable of telling us a real deal concerning them. Her talk was confined mostly to the conditions prevailing in Spain. She expressed her feelings for the U. S. A. by upholding its ideals. I believe she convinced us that we really can be thankful that we are living in this country.

WHO'S WHO
This junior girl's name has appeared on the honor roll throughout the entire year. She belongs to the girls' chorus and is in the specialty cast for the class play. She is also a member of the student council.
She is of medium height and is a brunette with gray-green eyes, pink and blue are her favorite color combinations.
Last week—Lucina Thull.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY DISCUSSION
Thursday morning the entire student body joined in a discussion of the student activity fund. Several misunderstandings in the past made it necessary to have a thorough discussion as to its necessity, purpose, and benefits.
After a brief class discussion, a general assembly was called and an open forum took place.
The conclusion was reached that a thorough understanding and discussion were necessary at home before a final voting, which was taken this week. The question is whether or not the fund is to be continued next year, be modified or abolished entirely.

JUNIOR PROM
On May 17, the junior prom will be held in the gymnasium of K. H. S. So far news has been circulating of many prom dates, but we hope for more to attend the gala affair. The colors—blue, gold, and silver—when blended together, will really beautify our gym.

CLASS NEWS
The workings inside of the Kewaskum Aluminum company proved fascinating to the freshman citizenship class on Wednesday afternoon.
With the aid of Miss Browne, the sophomore girls arranged a specialty number for the senior class play.
The juniors are making the acquaintance of modern, 20th century plays in their English class.
The advanced shorthand class is slowly beginning on the work for the Chieftain. Their aim this year is to make it bigger and better. Alice Koepsel has been selected as editor-in-chief, Violet Eberle and Lucille Hansen are assistant editors.
The seniors are literally swamped in "A Tale of Two Cities," taking of photographs, graduation announcements, class play, Chieftain, rent prices, prom, and trying to feel glad and sad all at the same time.

County Republicans Will Meet to Elect Delegates
Every member of the Republican party in Washington county and all others interested in the party or its principles are invited and urged to attend a meeting of the Washington County Republican club in the Moose hall at West Bend at 8 p. m. on Friday, May 3. The meeting is being called by Theodore Holtebeck and William T. Leins, both of West Bend, chairman and secretary of the club, respectively.
The purpose of the countywide meeting is to elect 32 delegates to represent Washington county at the state Republican convention at Green Bay on May 31 and June 1 and to elect precinct committees for every voting precinct in Washington county. For this reason the officers urge that all possible of the Republicans in the county and others interested in the party be present at this meeting.
It is desired that there be at least one delegate, more if possible, elected from each precinct in the county to attend the state convention. The latter is expected to have a total attendance of around 3,000 and Green Bay is making ready to handle a tremendous crowd.
The county precinct committee to be elected at the countywide meeting at West Bend on May 3 will consist of a committeeman and committee woman, a secretary, and a treasurer.
In addition to the elections at the meeting at West Bend on May 3, there will be several noted state Republican leaders present to address the meeting.
All Republicans in Washington county are urged to set aside Friday, May 3, now and to plan to attend this meeting.

IN MEMORY
To the beautiful memory of our dear daughter and sister, Lorraine Koch, who passed away eight years ago, April 25, 1932:
Deep in our hearts lies a picture, Of a loved one laid to rest. In memory's frame we shall keep it, Because she was one of the best. Sadly missed by her mother, brother, Charles Koch, and sister, Marjory Koch.

Dates for Wisconsin's 19th annual town-country leadership school have been set for June 24 to July 5 at Madison. The two week session is sponsored by the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Reta Wagner, nee Lobell, died at her home on East Main street in the village at the age of 87 years. A native of Germany, she came to Kewaskum 26 years ago from the town of Kewaskum. She was well liked, especially by all of the school children next door.

A 10-foot pavement is to be built from the tracks east to the bridge, and the 9-foot pavement on 134th Water street is to be completed to the village limits.

A new baker arrived recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roman Bruth when the stork left the happy parents a 9 pound baby boy.

Washington News
FROM CONGRESSMAN FRANK B. KEEFE

The House of Representatives by an overwhelming vote passed the Walter-Legan bill. The passage of this legislation by such an overwhelming vote indicates that the House is determined to curb the ruthless development of bureaucratic government in this nation.

The bill reaffirms the fact that the American people demand that control of their affairs be vested in established law capable of interpretation and review by the courts, rather than in the control of appointed men invested with autocratic and despotic power and against whose actions the citizen has little or no redress.

I vigorously supported this legislation and trust that it will be speedily enacted by the Senate at this present session of the Congress. Some doubt has arisen as to whether the President will sign the bill, but the vote in the House clearly indicates that it will be possible to override a presidential veto.

This week the House will begin consideration of proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act and the Wage and Hour law. Members of Congress have been bombarded with correspondence on this subject and a significant fact develops therefrom. The CIO unions are unambiguously opposed to any amendments to the National Labor Relations Act and every member of Congress has been threatened that unless he or she accedes to the demands of CIO the full force of this organization will be used against him in the coming campaign. We are told by this organization that a vote for any amendment to the National Labor Relations Act is a vote to "stab labor in the back." On the other hand many letters have been received from organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor which demand that members of Congress vote FOR amendments to the National Labor Relations Act. We have been advised that to vote against the amendments proposed by the Labor committee of the House will be a vote against labor as represented by the A. F. of L.

This is apparent that a wide difference of opinion exists in labor itself on this very important question. I have concluded that any member of Congress who deliberately succumbs to group pressure and votes other than his honest convictions loses his effectiveness as a member of Congress.

While I have the utmost respect for the advice and suggestions of these rival labor groups, I feel that both organizations completely overlook the fact that many millions of unorganized workers, as well as the general public, are entitled to have their respective interests given consideration.

It is my honest opinion that where such divergent views are held by organized groups of labor a member of Congress serving all of the people must exercise his best judgment without fear or political consequences.

I have heretofore announced that careful study of the question convinces me that the National Labor Relations Act should be amended in several important particulars in order that the true will and purpose of the Congress might be reflected in the administration of the law.

It will be seen from this short statement that the problems confronting a member of Congress today are exceedingly difficult and complex, and that it is humanly impossible to adopt a course that will meet with universal accord.

I am exceedingly interested in saving for the country the fundamental benefits achieved by the enactment of the Wage and Hour law. However, in the experience we have had under its operation, many injustices have developed which have been conceded by every student of the problem, and some amendments appear to be vitally necessary in order to correct those manifest injustices. Madam Perkins and the administrator have both conceded in testimony before our subcommittee that the operation of the law requires some revision, and it is hoped that the Congress in the adoption of any amendments to either law will preserve the inherent benefits of each and not attempt to emasculate them but to correct manifest injustices and inequalities that will make them more acceptable to all of our people.

County Convention of New Voters Friday Attended by 400 Persons

CONGRATULATE COUNTY
Dr. Colbert, who is serving as instructor-counselor in the citizenship training program in this county, spoke on the "Significance of Citizenship on Day." He pointed out that there are so many new aspects of government today that call for a much better informed electorate than yesterday and formed congratulatory Washington county for recognizing that a revival of the spirit that shaped, guided, and led our democratic institutions is needed.

Such a spirit, he said, is being created in meetings like this, pointing out that the citizenship training movement is not yet on a nationwide scale. Dr. Colbert asserted that the entire United States has its eyes on this convention and others like it in Wisconsin.

Dr. Colbert said that Citizenship day on May 19 is being held with two important ideas in mind. The first is a dedication on the part of the new voters to a broader and better service of their communities and country and the second is a rededication of the older voters to their country's ideals.

"Too long have we neglected recognition of the oncoming waves of new voters, upon whom rests the future of American ideals," said Dr. Colbert, pointing out the value of the citizenship training program.

TO GO DOWN IN HISTORY
M. T. Buckley, county superintendent of schools and executive secretary of the citizenship training program, revealed that it is just 100 years since a formal county government was established in Washington county and that this citizenship training program just a century later, consequently, will go down in history.

Having been the prime force behind the citizenship movement in this county to date as well as the one mainly responsible for the successful county convention, every person in the audience last Friday felt that Mr. Buckley had every right to do so when he called for a crowd of no less than 5,000 people at the Citizenship day ceremonies on Sunday, May 19.

Judge-elect Gehl said that we Americans are too often concerned with our rights and privileges than with our duties as good American citizens. He said he had no fear that young people, participating in a program such as this, will forget their obligations to their community, state, and nation. He urged the new voters not to forget what they have learned after the program is completed and to continue to study to add to their knowledge concerning our democratic government and principles.

Robert Salter, West Bend high school senior, gave an original oration entitled, "Today's Challenge to American Youth," which met with hearty applause from the large audience. Walter J. Mountain, the newly elected chairman, urged that Washington county continue to hold its place as a leader of the citizenship training movement in Wisconsin and called for a 100 per cent attendance of new voters at the next meeting.

Atty. Henry O. Schowalter, who is chairman of the citizenship training committee in West Bend, served as temporary chairman of the county convention and did a fine job in seeing to it that the big meeting moved along without a hitch. Mrs. Raymond Haebig, West Bend, served as temporary secretary.

NEW OFFICERS INSTALLED
After the election, the new officers were formally installed by Mr. Schowalter, who administered to them the regular oath of office taken by any elective officer in this state. The meeting was then turned over to the new voters themselves under the guidance of their officers.

A motion was adopted to have the chairman appoint a committee of five members of new voters to help the officers conduct citizenship training activities, particularly those concerned with the induction of the new class of new voters in 1941.

Every precinct in the county was represented at the convention. The voters sat by precincts under placards bearing the names of the precincts. Other placards were displayed, boosting various candidates for office. Music by the West Bend Moose band and community singing, led by George T. Carbon, West Bend, with Barney Inkmann of Barton at the piano, gave the meeting all the appearances of a political convention.

The West Bend new voters are holding a meeting at the courthouse tonight, Friday, April 26, at 7:30 p. m., to which all other new voters in the county are invited. Speakers are Atty. Lloyd H. Lobel, West Bend justice of the peace; Dist. Atty. Milton L. Meister, and Sheriff Leo R. Burg.
