Mrs. Margaret Schulz and Others Called

The community of Kewaskum lost another beloved woman resident the past week with the death of Mrs. Margaret Schulz, aged 73 years and six months, which occurred at 10:45 p. m. Sunday, June 16, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Mellahn, located just outside of the south village limits on Fond du Lac avenue, in the town of Kewaskum. Death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage. Mrs. Schulz had been ailing in health since Easter Sunday, March 24.

Mrs. Schulz (nee Margaret Emley) was born Dec. 18, 1866, in the town of Sherman, Sheboygan county. She was married to William F. Schulz on Jan. 26, 1904, at Batavia, Wis., who predeceased her on Dec. 21, 1928. Following their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Schulz settled in the town of Kewaskum on the farm now occupied by her stepson, Irvin Schulz, about two miles southwest of the village. They remained there until 1926 and then retired and came to the village. Here they resided in the home now occupied by the Jos. Kohler family on Fond du Lac avenue. After the death of Mr. Schulz in 1928, his wife continued to make her home in Kewaskum until 1933. From then until the time of her demise she had lived with her daughters and son-in-law in the town of Kewaskum.

Deceased was the mother of three children, one son having preceded her in death in infancy. Surviving are two daughters, Ada (Mrs. Walter Mellahn) and Meta, and a step-son, Irvin Schulz, all of the town of Kewaskum. She also leaves four grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at 1:30 p. m. Thursday, June 20, from the home and at 2:15 p. m. at the Fifth Avenue Methodist church in West Bend. The Rev. E. Brittain officiated and interment was made in Union cemetery, West Bend. Miller's Funeral Home, Kewaskum, was in charge.

Mrs. Schulz was a true, kind and upright woman and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She was a splendid wife and mother who will be sadly missed in her household and by her numerous friends, who were attracted to her by her very pleasant personality. Our sincere condolences are expressed.

CARD OF THANKS

German Troops Enter Paris; French Make Desperate Plea For Additional Aid From U. S.

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

A historic spot where American doughboys fought in the Argonne district of France is marked by this stone—it was "marked" in another fashion in World War II. A German aerial bomb scored a hit, shattering the monument.

THE WAR:

Help Wanted

"Our race does not allow itself to be beaten down by invasion. Our race has always thrown back or dominated the invaders..."

When Italy joined forces with Germany in the war against France and England she had a good supply of armored tanks to aid in clearing the way for troops in true blitzkrieg fashion.

As the French army abandoned Paris, the high command explained that no worthwhile strategic aim would justify the destruction of the historic capital, almost sure to result in any battle to defend it.

As the news spread that Paris was not being defended rumors spread that a separate peace for France was in the offing.

HOME FRONT:

Big Job

In a machine age war world, with dive-bombers, flaming tanks, and motorized equipment of all types, industrial mobilization of national resources takes precedence over manpower mobilization.

Germany's swift thrusts into enemy territory stand as evidence that while France and England idly watched, Nazi factories were working overtime turning out their mechanical instruments of war.

HEADLINERS

- Gov. Luren Dickinson of Michigan removed Thomas C. Wilcox as sheriff of Wayne (Detroit) county after hearing charges that the sheriff received a "cut" in a vice and gambling payoff.
Former Governor of Louisiana, Richard W. Leche, was given a 10-year federal prison sentence for using the mails to defraud.
Arriving safe in Canada, Princess Juliana of The Netherlands and her two infant children plan to live in the dominion until the end of the war.
Vacationing in Kentucky, Supreme Court Justice McKeynolds warned in an interview that "if Adolf Hitler's plans prevail, our fanciest security cannot survive."
Sen. Ernest Lundeen (F. L., Minn.) charges that President Roosevelt is "crusading for war" in permitting army and navy planes to be purchased "indirectly" by the allies.
Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) in asserting that the United States has traded neutrality for non-belligerency said that he favored American aid to the allies providing it does not plunge the U. S. into war or weaken home defenses.
Glimite, a new explosive invented by Lester P. Barlow, was proved 30 per cent more powerful than TNT in recent tests but Chairman Morris Sheppard (D., Texas), senate military affairs committee, is "reserving judgment" pending word from the bureau of standards.

'Marked Men'

A historic spot where American doughboys fought in the Argonne district of France is marked by this stone—it was "marked" in another fashion in World War II. A German aerial bomb scored a hit, shattering the monument.

AGRICULTURE: Record Reserve

Department of agriculture reports indicate that ever-normal granary reserve supplies of surplus farm products have reached record levels and will be increased this year.

This reserve supply held by the Commodity Credit corporation under loans to producers or owned outright by the corporation has a total value of about $1,000,000,000.

Chief crops in reserve are cotton, corn, wheat and tobacco. Smaller amounts of peanuts, figs, butters, wool, mohair, turpentine and resin are held because of loans made last year.

While farm prices are at a low ebb because of the loss of many foreign markets due to the war there is a feeling in some quarters that it may become necessary for the Americas to eventually supply most of the foodstuffs for European nations.

It is known that generally speaking these nations do not have huge supplies of food and will be forced to get huge stocks of grain from somewhere.

But the situation is so uncertain that the farmer who takes a gamble on getting in on some of the "extraordinary" trade may be left holding a full grain sack.

MEDICINE: New Trend

Arch foe of any attempt to "federalize" or centralize authority in control of the practice of medicine, the American Medical Association is now about ready to make available to the public a system of systems of statewide medical care at low cost.

Details of the plan to be presented are not immediately available but it is known that prepayments to cover sickness promise to run from $1.50 to $2.50 per month per individual.

Opposition to any compulsory health insurance plan was expressed by leaders of the association.

Meeting in annual convocation in New York, the A. M. A. house of delegates heard reports on the results of experiments by 300 county societies all over the country in joining with relief authorities to provide medical service to the indigent.

The new plan, which will be an outgrowth of these experiments, does not limit its service to the indigent but will be available for all to whom low cost is essential.

At least 14 states already have a statewide plan in some stage of development.

EAST SIDE:

Accord and Discord

On the world's troublesome east side where eyes of the western world are cast in never-ending vigilance there are some signs of accord and added signs of the usual discord.

For from Tokyo comes word that Japan and Thailand (Siam) have concluded a treaty of friendship, which a foreign office spokesman described as "unmistakable evidence of Japan's peaceful intentions in the South Pacific."

And in London the British reported a non-aggression pact between Thailand, Japan and Great Britain as well as a partial settlement of an old dispute with Japan on the matter of money circulation in China and the prolonged silver dispute in the city of Tientsin.

If all this sounded as if Great Britain's campaign to woo Japan's friendship was bearing fruit, there were more ominous sounds droning from the motors of Japanese bombers over China's provisional capital, Chungking.

Outside of China the Japanese seem to be in a mellow mood for even from Moscow came news of accord with Russia in the Soviet-Mongolian border dispute.

MEXICO:

Election Eve

On the eve of Mexico's national presidential election, the incumbent, Lazaro Cardenas, and the candidate his government endorses to succeed him, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, both issued statements urging a better understanding between the United States and their native land and asking for a united front in the Western Hemisphere against any "intervention" or threatened invasion.

Bruckart's Washington Digest

Aftermath of World War II To Present Serious Problems

Economic Depression, Threats of Other Conflicts, Large U. S. Standing Army, Are Among Grave Situations To Be Faced With Arrival of 'Peace.'

By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—It may be somewhat early to talk about what will happen after the second World War, but I believe it is time to look in that direction.

With that hell-hole that is Europe still far from giving us and the rest of the world an answer as to whether Hitler's murderous philosophy or the reasonable type of freedom shall be the governing force, there are nevertheless many things to come as an aftermath.

We may wish to avoid thinking of those things, but I repeat we will gain nothing by failing to look to the future.

For one thing, if the first World War was the cause, direct or indirect, of the depression that has now gone 10 years, then there is another one due after several years of wintry blasts and burning summer winds have destroyed the stumps of Europe's battlefields.

My inquiries of men who study the field of economics have brought little more solid information than that we must expect another cycle of torn business and personal relations.

As far as I am personally able to figure out, the depression that has been with us for 10 years may prove to be only a rehearsal for the real worldwide depression that is to come. I cannot see how it can be avoided.

Another thing that gives the life perspective a blue-black appearance is the certainty that whoever wins the gigantic martial explosions of the current war, there will remain thereafter hatred and threats of new wars.

The hatred is certain. Who will not hate another people by whom hundreds of thousands of husbands, brothers, sons and sweethearts were destroyed? The hatred will obtain whether Hitler dominates all of Europe or whether, as any sane person hopes, he is destroyed and his followers subjugated.

Constant Threat of War Will Remain a Long Time The threats of war are bound to come, likewise. If Hitler wins, obviously every Frenchman, Englishman, Pole, Finn, Dane, Norwegian or any other member of an oppressed people will hope and pray for liberation.

And liberation can come only through fighting for that liberty, especially when the force of government is vested in the hands of a beast. The threat of war will be with us, and the current generation of our people will have to live with it.

That is the tragedy. The current generation will know no real peace. Children of today and tomorrow will grow up, hearing rumbles of thunder from the god of war. They can know only of large armies and great navies. They must learn to look to the future of war plans, fantastic plans, weapons of mystery, life underground if the warclouds life nearer. I repeat, there is so little hope for a final adjustment of the hatred in Europe upon a sane basis that the current generations in the United States will know no real peace.

Then, there is the cost to which we, as Americans, must look. Of course, it is only a minimal cost compared to the price the fighting nations of Europe are paying. But that is their war. It is not our war. The price that we must be prepared to pay is for keeping us out of their troubles by keeping them away from our shores. It promises to be a terrific price in cold cash, and so there will be taxes a-plenty. They are starting now. Congress is giving taxes quick consideration, and there is every probability that the nation's tax bill will be a billion or a billion and a half dollars greater than ever before in history. It has to be. For seven years there has been a terrific waste, and the public debt of the United States now is around $45,000,000,000. We have no cushion upon which to lean. The tax bill for preparation must be met from scratch. It will go on and on.

Country's Industrialists Are a Bit Dissatisfied I hear also rumblings of discontent and dissatisfaction among the industrialists of the country. They are being appealed to—yes, they are being told emphatically—to get going and produce and produce and expand and expand. It is a part of the hysteria that grips the national capital.

With respect to the situation in which the manufacturers find themselves, the story is simple. It is merely a repetition of 1917 and 1918. The nation's industrial structure was urged and threatened and cajoled into the greatest speed possible. "Make war materials" was the cry. Industry did. But in the end, industry that went overboard, headed long into the manufacture of war materials went broke. Its expenditures for plant expansion and for general increased facilities bled it white.

When the tax bill was paid, war industry had nothing left. It was the same this time, unless common sense prevails. There can be war preparation without hysteria; there can be war preparation without the destruction of business firms, but I am afraid it will be the same story as evolved from the first World War.

To bring this phase to a specific basis, it is necessary only to call attention to the tremendous losses that were sustained by individuals who had savings invested in stocks or shares of great corporations. Whenever those losses occur, there naturally follows destruction of the whole economy of a family's life. It is fatal. But it will be so again, I am afraid.

We are told that we must have a gigantic army. There is need of it. We do not know now what may emerge from the secret that belongs to Mexico. Nor can we be sure of South American countries—at least some of them. There is a decision some day in that direction. It is a decision which will require the United States, as a matter of national policy, to let the world know whether we are ready to defend all of South America or whether we shall withdraw within our own boundaries and dare somebody to come get us. But we need an army to meet such eventualities. Nobody knows what they may be.

Large Standing Army Presents New Problems And these observations about the army—they are true, also, of the navy—bring another problem. It has been true all through history that a great standing army has served to give that army or some of its outstanding leaders undue importance in determining national policy. I fear it may be a case in which history is going to repeat itself.

Of course, there can be patriotic army leaders who will look first to the nation's general welfare. There can be another kind, too. It is a thing to which the current and next generation must look with an eye of caution. Indeed, it is entirely possible that we, as a race of people, could be converted into a warlike nation.

I am thinking, too, of the losses that are coming—many of them already recognizable—in the ways of science. Scientists work for years to accomplish whatever advances are made in the direction of better living. It is too obvious to need a reference here that all of the great scientific developments that have come from Germany are lost to the world of the future. That is to say, there will be none of consequence—except war machines—coming out of Germany, because the inducement to invent and discover is being drained out of the hearts and the minds of men and women in the war-torn continent.

In our country, there are losses being sustained in that direction. Not as much, it is true, as has been noted in Europe, but there are losses because brains and imagination will be directed towards the evolution of machines and programs to meet any attack. The world will be armed and we must know what others are doing. So our scientists will be devoting fertile brains to the production of terrible machines of death, and there will be praise for those who produce the most horrible types of death-dealing apparatus.

It is indulging in idle imagination, perhaps, but I contend that even in our peace-loving country, those with a life of 30 years more may yet witness great terminals of railroads underground; great artificial reservoirs of food established in safe places, new types of defenses not now envisioned. All of these things may come because the warclouds are going to continue to roll and the United States must sit with its anti-aircraft guns trained to the skies.

There is then only this thought to be added: The United States must accept the idea of greater protection than it ever has had, and it must be prepared to pay for it, which is to say, taxes and more taxes are coming. It must accept a readjustment in its business pursuits and individual training. But while it can do all of these—must do them—there is no plausible excuse for going nuts and adding to the bill by wasting resources in preparation that has not been thought out.

Mass Production Methods Are Held To Be Aviation's Need

WASHINGTON.—Leaders of the United States aviation industry are coming to the conclusion they must adopt the mass production methods of the automobile industry to achieve the quantity production of planes needed to fulfill the requirements of this country's rearmament drive.

A survey indicates that this movement already has started, especially among the larger plants making

By LEMUEL F. PARSONS (Consolidated Features—With Special)

NEW YORK.—Most of the attention about Henry Ford's new plan to make 1,000 planes a day was directed to the fact that Ford is doing it.

Industry Can Do Anything in Our Defense Effort You can't get a young man to go to the front unless you can get him to go to the front in a plane.

Sherman M. Fairchild, president of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane corporation, thought "anything is possible" would be possible. He provided the money, materials and facilities were available. He was assuring us to the industry's requirements for a quick start in production.

Mr. Fairchild is himself an assuring in exemplifying the tradition of Yankee inventiveness. His father, George Winthrop Fairchild, was the inventor of the dial telephone, the computing camera, and finally the adding machine to keep track of his millions—about 10 of which he passed on to his son. He had been a business career at $8 a week. "Anything is possible" seemed to have been a sort of family slogan.

As a youth, Sherman M. Fairchild was mainly interested in cameras. His father had tapped the junior executive of his camera company. When the young man started cameras, this interest later turned into airplanes, his family was a pilot. They thought the boy was just having a "wonderjahr" would round up at a desk when time came. But the camera business wasn't just monkey business. At 21, he had invented an auto-flashlight camera and several later through a radial camera, organized the Fairchild Aerial Surveys and aerial survey with a trail-blazing aerial survey in New York. This led to plane-making. In 1927, he correlated several companies, set Igor Sikorsky building planes and turned out the cabin monoplane in the United States.

SINCE chivalry is not inseparable from patriotism, this time he asked Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, to take to the world's war-torn people the work of the Red Cross in its greatest endeavor. He responded as follows: "Anyone attempting to bring material assistance to the millions of homeless and miserable war refugees is inevitably seized with a sense of futility. There is so much that needs doing immediately that there are so many obstacles to overcome that the burden of responsibility becomes almost overwhelming."

"These moods of futility can be dispel by concentrating your thoughts on the splendid support received by the American Red Cross from all over the country. When I think of the 350,000 volunteers sewing bandages and knitting garments of every walk of life who are contributing to the Red Cross relief fund, my spirits are immediately buoyed. Pride in the generous and patriotic response of the public gives each Red Cross worker new courage to carry out his tasks.

The war-relief funds are going to work for humanity almost as fast as they come in. Relief supplies are being distributed, hospital supplies are on the way and ambulances have been ordered. Clothing and surgical dressings are being shipped to the stricken areas, in huge quantities. Our activities are rapidly being geared to greatly increased tempo as the toll of invasion continues to mount. I have an abiding faith in the people of this country with the Red Cross keep pace with the increasing obligations.

Mr. Davis is a Southerner by birth, and therefore fundamentally humane; as a successful business man and financier, he is effective, and as a European ambassador at large under two Presidents, he is discreet.

In the dark depths of the rear of his town car, one night two years ago, I had a talk with him about power politics in Europe. He was indeed, discreet, but I gained an impression of his shrewd analysis of the deeper realities of the European impasse, as now tragically revealed. When, later, he was appointed chairman of the Red Cross, it seemed to me that our greatest humane tradition had been personally personalized, in a man who was both a touch of homespun and a touch of sophistication of one accustomed to getting things done.

In the World War, he was adviser to the treasury on foreign loans and was the American economic adviser to the American Commission to the Reparations and Finance Committee. In 1919, he became assistant secretary of the state and undersecretary of state in 1920. During a portion of this period he was acting secretary of state. Subsequently he was a particularly peace conferences.

County Agent Notes

THE "10 DAY SPRAY"

THE SITUATION
SCAB: So far this spring there have been several very favorable scab infection periods. The main of these came immediately after the "pink spray" had been applied. It was very fortunate that a spray application preceded the rainy period so closely in most orchards. It meant good scab protection. With little rain during the bloom and a good calyx application the past week, scab should be under good control in well sprayed orchards.

INSECTS: Warm weather favors insect development. In some orchards the cankerworm has already destroyed the entire foliage; this, however, only in unsprayed orchards. The plum curculio is very active during hot weather. The "10 day spray" provides curcullid before too much damage has been done. Codling moths will soon make their appearance. It is estimated, by those in position to know, that the first worms may appear approximately 10 to 14 days after the calyx period.

WHEN TO SPRAY
The "10 day spray" should be completed within 14 days after the calyx spray application.

WHAT TO SPRAY
Spray all fruit trees—apple, cherry, plum and pear.

MATERIALS TO USE
2 gallons liquid lime sulphur.
2 1/2 to 3 pounds lead arsenate.
100 gallons of water.

STICKERS AND SPREADERS
Soybean flour used at the rate of not more than 3/4 pound to 100 gallons of spray will help much to hold the spray mixture on fruit and foliage.

A combination sticker and spreader may be made by using 2 ounces of dried milk powder and 3/4 pound of soybean flour to each 100 gallons.

ORDER SUPERPHOSPHATE FERTILIZER NOW

That is, on pastures, new seedings after the nurse crop has been harvested, or on old hay fields after the first cutting of hay has been harvested. The cost of the fertilizer is $1.90 per one hundred pound sack, or $38.00 per ton. Orders may be placed with the county AAA office (West Bend) not later than June 25th.

JUNE IS PROCLAIMED DAIRY MONTH

June has been designated Dairy Month in Wisconsin and throughout the nation. By proclamation, the governor has declared June a month for special observances to call public attention to the importance of the dairy industry in the Badger state.

More milk is produced during June than in any month in the year. Dairy prices are usually the lowest during this month. Milk products are definitely known to have a real health value and supply food nutrients for the human body, particularly for the growing and developing child, which no other known food can supply. Milk is the nearest approach we possess to a complete food.

American people as a whole consume only about one-fourth as much milk and milk products as do European people.

The economy of the European household necessitates the consumption of larger quantities of dairy products since a given amount of money will purchase more food nutrients in the form of milk and milk products than from any other food source. Every American household can economically use more milk and dairy products. It can also justify this increased use from a health standpoint.

WEED COMMISSIONERS' MEETING

"Lift-All"

HOW "LIFT-ALL" WORKS

IN THE NEW "LIFT-ALL," we are introducing the first all-purpose hydraulic power lift. Read these interesting quick facts about "Lift-All."

"Lift-All" lifts or lowers the entire implement at the flick of a finger on the handy control. But that is not all—"Lift-All" goes way beyond that! It enables you to:

- (1) Lift or lower front beams of cultivator first. Delayed action automatically actuates rear beams when they reach point where front beams were lifted or lowered.
- (2) Lift either side of the implement independently of the other side.
- (3) Lift and hold implement to any desired working depth.

See this great new attachment for Farmall-H and Farmall-M. Ask us for a demonstration. And remember, "Lift-All" is an exclusive Farmall feature!

High Schools Also Turn Out 'Vocational' Grads

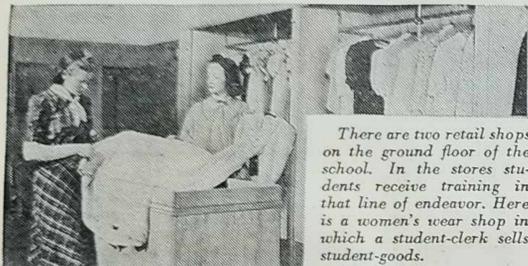

New York City's Board of Education does not confine its high school students to the study of languages and mathematics. On the contrary, there is an 11-story building, right in the heart of the garment center, wherein high school students receive the vital training necessary to those who would enter the trades. In the Central High School of Needle Trades, every trade, from retail merchandising and selling, to hand-made shoe manufacturing, is taught to girls and boys later to follow those pursuits in the commercial world.

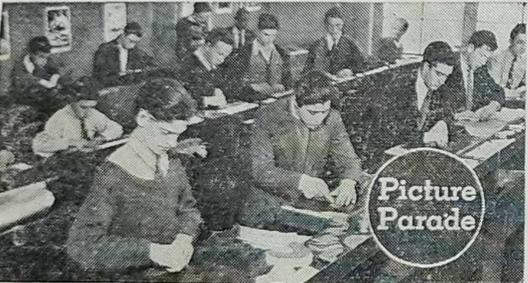

Above we see girls in the class of draping of original patterns and costume designing at work in that department.

These two boys are engaged in the fur-working class, putting finishing touches to fur jackets. Vocational work such as this is of the greatest value in fitting students for jobs after graduation.

There are two retail shops on the ground floor of the school. In the stores students receive training in that line of endeavor. Here is a women's wear shop in which a student-clerk sells student-goods.

Picture Parade

Here the boys in the shoe-cutting department carve the making of shoes from leather, by hand. These shoes later are sold in the retail shops located on the ground floor of the school.

In this picture we peek into the classroom where girls are taught to work on sewing machines. The advantages of such training can hardly be overestimated, whether the girls intend to enter the commercial world or not.

Brooklyn students learn the correct way to cook and serve meals.

'Shoot the Rapids'

You haven't "done the town" on a visit to Montreal unless you've "shot the rapids" at Lachine, a few miles down the St. Lawrence river. LaSalle, when he first discovered the turbulent rapids, thought he had arrived at the gateway to China and called it "La Chine." The town of Lachine was the scene of one of the bloodiest of Indian raids August 5, 1689, when 66 men, women and children died or disappeared after an Iroquois raid.

Rabbits Are Very Old

Rabbits and opossums are the most ancient of the living mammals on the American continent, dating back to Eocene times, some 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 years ago. This is one of the incidental findings in the great exploration of ancient life which has centered around Dr. William B. Scott, professor emeritus of geology at Princeton, who in our time has greatly extended science's knowledge of the animals of the past.

GENTLE HINT

Customer—I've always had the idea in my head that bone articles were cheap.
Dealer—We're apt to undervalue what we have plenty of.

Squaring the Circle

The director of a bank was relating how his wife overdraw her account at the bank.
"I spoke to her one evening," said he, "and told her that she ought to adjust it at once. A day or two later I asked her if she had done what I suggested."
"Oh, yes," she answered, "I attended to that matter the very next morning. I sent the bank my check for the amount I had overdrawn."

Wrong Again

Her father accidentally met her young man in the street.
"I say, young fellow," he said, "you have been calling on my daughter for well nigh a month. What are your intentions?"
"Well, sir," he replied, regaining his confidence, "I hope to become an addition to your family."
"Father was well prepared. "Oh, no!" he said, with a vigorous shake of his head. "You'll have to subtract, not add, young man."

Mrs. Sparks—I hear people talking about liberals, Henry. What I want to know is what a liberal is liberal with.
Henry—Other people's money, darling.

MOVIES-IN-THE-SLOT

Are the movies going "back where they came from" the nickeloidian, the nicoret and the peepshow?

News from Hollywood so indicates. Dozens of promoters are thinking in on a gold rush the country will come with the introduction of movies by slot machines in taverns, barrooms, luncheonettes, ice-cream parlors and poolrooms all over the country.

You drop a nickel in the slot and get a movie show with music. The idea is to flood the country with "movie cabinets" through which a customer may get a movie with his beer, cake, strawberry sundae, three-decker sandwich or hotdog.

Tyrone Power and Deanna Durbin will be presented with a short blue to match her chair. Some enlarged snapshots of the color and some of the red and chintz used for the chair.

You may even get Raymond Massey in a new Lincoln drama at the Seaside Grill.

The new device brings Radio City to Hogan's Elite Cafe, transfers Roxy's to Finnegan's Bar and makes Greta Garbo, bock beer, Mickey Rooney, Gary Cooper, and a game of Kelly pool allied products.

It isn't hard to imagine a fellow rolling into a tavern, pulling out a handful of change and demanding "The Garden of Allah," a sardine sandwich, a rye highball and a couple of short newsreels with gingerale.

Jimmy Roosevelt is getting some of the blame. He was among the first to leap into the new idea with both feet. Since that time scores of movie figures are aboard and it is reported that some of the major producers have money in it.

Tremendous returns are predicted, especially if Will Hays doesn't stop such screen revivals as "Fun in a Turkish Bath," "The Bathing Beauties' Ball," "The Boudoir Burglar" and "Parisian Nights."

The whole idea will cheapen pictures, topple the movie industry from the penthouse level to the underground rathskeller and probably throw another rock at the legitimate picture houses. But it's coming.

The pictures are to be limited to three minutes, which is the only good thing that can be said in their favor. Maybe "Gone With the Wind" is to blame. It may be just a normal reaction against four-hour films.

SECRETARY LA GUARDIA

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York has been mentioned as an assistant secretary of war or for some other place in Mr. Roosevelt's emergency cabinet. The very idea is staggering. Fiorello might or might not keep us out of this war, but he would start so many others that we would forget all about the present crisis. We can see him now, assistant secretary of the navy, attired in fire helmet, rubber boots and naval blouse, carrying a fire hose in one hand and a pair of binoculars in the other, ready for all comers.

Mayor LaGuardia is the only man in America who could plan a naval battle, dedicate a viaduct, open a new school, issue an ultimatum to Germany, deliver a talk on kitchen economics, put through an aviation program, throw out a first baseball, denounce the press and lead a tank attack, all in one afternoon.

QUIZ LAUGH

"What general who headed the American forces in 1776, crossed the Delaware in an open boat and chopped down the cherry tree is the George Washington bridge named after?" the quiz man asked Jimmy Durante in a recent radio burlesque of the question and answer craze.
"How much time do I get on that one?" demanded Jimmy.

Son Knew Economical To Bring About Results

Father and son had gone to a bazaar where a pretty girl was selling kisses in aid of charity.
"My boy," said the father, "here's a dollar bill. You kiss her. When I was young, can bet I made 'em scream!"
The son left his father, shortly after returned in a state of satisfaction.
"Well, did you kiss her, son?" asked the father.
"Yes, you can bet I did," was the reply.
"And did you make her scream?"
"Scream? I'll say so! I got the dollar."

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at the cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by simple common-sense "prevention"?
If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. It's crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly, you'll drink plenty of water—you'll not only get regular, but you'll be regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Michigan. If your condition is chronic, it's wise to consult a physician.

THE STORY THUS FAR

77 is the biggest contender for range rights that we control. But they aren't troubled about how this request will fall. The 77 knows!

"Meaning that I've been bought, huh?" Battle asked suddenly.

"Meaning," said Hollister, "that someone who keeps his name off the records is part owner of the 77 brand."

Visibly the tension went out of Sheriff Ed Battle. He relaxed, shaking his head. "Nope. You guessed wrong that time. I own nary a cow in any size, shape or form, not on paper nor on the 77. If Jeff Stoddard and his bunch didn't come in today, they had their own reasons."

He gave Hollister a placating grin. "But we're sort of wrangling ourselves off the track, aren't we? I called you in here to make a proposition . . . for the good of everybody. Want to listen?"

With an abruptness of action not usual in him, Bill Hollister rose and his lank form towered. "Battle," he said, evenly, "you're a plain white-ribbed skunk! Your bait's good all right, but it stinks of next election's votes!"

Color flooded hotly into the fleshy face of Sheriff Battle. He gripped his desk edge. Control over some quick and revealing retort came only after a minute of struggle.

When at last he got up onto his feet, the red flood of anger had drained away. He looked out with cold, hard eyes. "I said I had another piece of evidence, Hollister; something I didn't bring up at the inquest."

His ponderous figure came around to the open door.

Watching, Walt Gandy wondered. Battle's gaze went down, came back. "Hollister," he asked, "why did you have Paul Champion run water into that corn row where Chino Drake was lying dead?"

At Ed Battle's questioning thrust, Hollister's jaw had sprung shut. Muscles bulged. He stood planted as if to take a blow, a fighting man, yet to Walt Gandy it seemed the dogged courage of someone plodding on grimly to an end, without fire nor vital care for what would come after that end was reached. Whatever had happened to Bill Hollister had struck him at the roots.

Battle had the knife in and he gouged with it. "Well? Want me to say why you had that corn row flooded? To cover some boot tracks? Some mighty big ones!"

Again the sheriff's eyes went downward, and following them Walt Gandy's rested upon the black studded boots that Bill Hollister wore. They were big, number elevens. These that he had on today were brand-new.

"The trouble with that trick," said Battle, "was that you slipped up. One track didn't get flooded. My deputy ran cement into it and I've got the cast. Never mind about the pair of boots that left the track; we've probably got those too."

ever it was that gripped these others. He swung the knotted end of his halter rope and kept running one hand back to the throat of his horse. A grin of repressed excitement looked almost foolish on his boyishly eager face.

"I'd say we better . . ." he began.

"Never mind, Paul," Cameron stopped him gently.

Walt Gandy had begun the making of a cigarette. Now he flung the unfinished tube away. He faced Cameron, saying, "There's one thing I guess ought to be made known right now, before anybody starts to check up."

Cash Cameron's white head pivoted.

"I was on your place this afternoon," said Gandy.

It was Hollister's voice, snapped out in the dark: "Why didn't you tell me that!"

Only Cash Cameron's features were visible from where Walt stood; the others were blotted in the night. But he could feel the quick stab of eyes toward him. He did not know yet who the cowpuncher was, mak-other cowpuncher who had stood at Cash Cameron's right hand out there in the dark, emerged from a lean-to storage room with a gunnysack full of potatoes balanced on his left shoulder. He walked on short legs, bandy enough to fit the roundest horse ever born. A calf could jump between them and not scrape his boots. His face was homely, good-natured, and now solemnly intent upon the job of carrying potatoes.

He put the sack down on the floor. Cash Cameron said: "Horse thief, shake hands with our new cook, Gandy, this is Horsethief Fisher, and that name's no joke! But he has sort of weaned himself away from the habit the last ten, fifteen years."

A humorous twinkle of some past experience lighted Cameron's blue eyes, banishing momentarily the strain that this day had put there, and Walt Gandy had a glimpse of a hugely likeable old man.

Horsethief Fisher grinned and put out a knobby paw. "Glad to meet you, Gandy."

Walt shook. Here, he knew at once, was a tough and loyal henchman of the C. C. Horsethief took off his hat to hang it on a nail next the door, showing a head as bald as a hen's brown egg.

Hired hands on the CC ate in a dining-room that opened through an archway directly off the kitchen. Cash Cameron took his accustomed chair at the table's end opposite the kitchen arch. Bill Hollister ranged around on Cameron's left was an empty place, then Paul Champion, Horsethief Fisher and Bent Lavin.

No one spoke of the seat that remained unoccupied, but all through the meal Bill Hollister kept staring there, as if he could not keep his eyes from picturing the girl in it, and again that somber studious look was set upon his face.

In the end he seemed to have thought something out. He pushed back his chair, saying: "I'm going to move down to the bunk house, Cash. If Gandy is going to cook, he ought to have my room here so he can roll out and get the fires built early."

It sounded reasonable. Cameron nodded. But somehow the ease and forgetfulness that had been upon the room for a little while was gone.

Gandy stood up when Hollister did. There before the men he said only: "I'll go down with you, Bill, and bring up my war bag." But outside when they had passed beyond arshoot of the house, he stopped short in his tracks.

Hollister's lank form halted too, and turned in the dark.

Walt wet his thumb to roll a cigarette. "You know," he said, his words slow and dragging, "there's a lot of country between here and the border, mostly desert."

Hollister dropped his head forward. "Huh?" He sounded startled.

"Most hot desert, too," Walt went on, "and the wild flowers weren't blooming, and there wasn't much moon, and one place they forgot to put up the trail sign. Did I make that ride for any purpose, Bill?"

Closing up the short space that separated them, Hollister asked, "Are you crazy? Too much heat or something?"

"Too much something," Walt admitted. He put his next question flatly: "What am I here for, Bill? Am I needed now, or did I come in too late? A man has already been killed. Things point mighty straight to someone here on the CC. I'm not asking if it's so or not; I'm using my own head. But this business of every last one of you appearing to have it all doped out and yet acting like you're afraid to tell, is making me itch. Is this ranch split against itself? Is that it? What's happened, anyway?"

He paused, then as Hollister said nothing, finished, "Well, no, you don't need to go into details until you're ready. But I've got to know one thing—do you need me or not?"

It seemed to take Bill Hollister an unreasonably long time to form his answer, yet when it came, there was no room for the slightest doubt that he meant every word.

"Walt," he said, "I need you now more than I've ever needed a partner in all my life. You've got to take that much and believe it. It's all I can tell you, because, boy, it's the only thing I know for certain!"

A sudden grip on Walt's arm spilled tobacco from an unfinished cigarette.

Hollister started to speak, the grip digging in, but then bit off the word and stood tight-mouthed, staring back toward the ranch house.

Next moment he gave a strange short laugh. "Lord!" he said, "I'd disgust. Me getting the jumps. I'll be taking pot-shots at my own shadow first thing you know!"

"But what is it?" Gandy remained rooted, half turned around.

In pine trees beyond where the long front gallery of the house ended against the hill slope, a white, shapeless patch was shifting back and forth, slowly, regularly—once a man hanging by the neck had looked like that. It brought a cold creeping sensation up his spine. Then he, too, understood the apparition, recalling a child's swing there at the end of the ranch home. But who would be swinging? This time of night!

"I've gone all through the house again, Dad."

ing a squat shapeless form at the ranch-owner's right side. Cameron's mouth opened, closed. A hand came up and smoothed down the coarse hair of his gray mustache.

"Say, look here!" Gandy blazed. But he felt that he was only throwing words against a stone wall. The silence of these men was that thick, silence of a man with that thick anger. Battling a rise of impatient anger he turned from them, pulling the tobacco sack from his shirt pocket.

"No lights!" Cameron warned.

"Listen!" Then almost at once: "It's all right. Go ahead." His daughter came abruptly around the bunk shack end.

She reached Cash, and standing close up to Walt Gandy once again, seemed to Walt Gandy, a small and fragile girl in spite of the rough and far too rare a person to be caught in the black war that was gathering around her.

"I've gone all through the house again, Dad," she said, her voice low and controlled. "Whoever did it wasn't trying to rob us."

"No," said Cameron. "No, of course not." He asked no further, and it was Bill Hollister who spoke up:

"Then there's nothing missing, Helen?"

Slowly she turned and lifted her face to him, though in the dark she could not possibly read his features. "A rifle," she said, "and a pair of boots. Yours."

All others stood fixed, but the effect of her words upon Bill Hollister was sudden action, almost as if for relief.

"Paul," he ordered rapidly, "put up the horses. Walt, throw your war bag down here. You can turn your back in the end corral by him. Sunspot in and give him something set tonight and give him the lanterns and where the grain bins are." He turned away into the dark, alone.

His voice came back over departing shoulders: "I'll rustle firewood for whoever's going to cook."

As Walt kicked straw across the stable floor for Sunspot's bedding, he looked at Bent Lavin's feet. They were big—all out of proportion on that shrunken body. The boots he wore would be about size eleven.

Cash Cameron was in the kitchen trying unfamiliarly to get together a meal in his own house, and as Walt Gandy entered, he asked, "You know anything about pot-busting, young fellow?"

Behind Gandy, Bill Hollister came in just then with an armful of wood.

"Sure he does," Bill said. "I suffered his cooking for a couple of years and lived through. Guess we can stand it for a few days."

Walt swung around from hanging his hat on a peg near the door. Hollister continued, "We're short on cooks, but I don't want to bring a new man out here now. I've got an idea that we'll talk about later. Go ahead, Walt. You take the job."

As Gandy peeled out of his coat and rolled up his shirt sleeves, the

Walt Gandy leaned over and studied the floor boards between his boots. It came to him that this man showed surprising intelligence after all. If he would use it!

"Cash Cameron," Battle was saying, "has represented the power in control here. With the example of a big fellow like him holding the lid screwed on, and able to buy out any man who wanted to quit, there wasn't need for the little fellows to jump his range rights nor each other's. But if the CC crumbles and its grass on public domain and in the national forest is open for anyone to grab, there's going to be hell." Battle roared suddenly, "I won't have it!"

Under his heavy brows Bill Hollister was no longer smiling.

"You're dead certain, are you," he asked, "that the CC is going to crumble?"

Battle leaned forward over the top of his desk. "Yes." His eyes narrowed and glittered. "A man in Cameron's hole right now don't dare take up a gun—ever if his range is being crowded to one!"

"The CC don't own title to five thousand acres of land. It's using close to a hundred thousand, all public. Every man who rode in to the inquest today is figuring on just that. Get the CC tangled with the law, get you people tied up in court and you might as well start raising logs on your five thousand acres, because your power on the open range is gone, and nobody will be afraid to crowd you. Wait!" Battle waved his cigar as Hollister started to speak.

"The power on this range has shifted from Cameron's hands now, back into mine, where it belongs! And I'm going to use it to the advantage of everybody, big man and little man alike. You people can't even chew what you've bit off out there, let alone swallow it; I guess Ranger Powell was beginning to see that himself when he announced the CC allotment in the national forest is going to be cut next summer."

Battle clamped his cigar righteously, saying around the end, "Time for the little fellow to have a show here, and I'm seeing that he gets it!"

"Little fellows," Bill Hollister's quiet voice asked, "like the 77?"

Battle stiffened. His smoking stopped.

Hollister uncrossed his knees, and the CC foreman and the sheriff of Emigrant County traded long measuring looks.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the sheriff evenly.

"This," Hollister stated. "Funny thing, isn't it, that every man, woman and child on the Emigrant Bench from here north to Salt Flat and west to the Barricades, came to the hearing today—everyone except those from the 77!"

Still sitting stiffly upright, Battle made no reply.

"You're right about what is going to happen here," Hollister went on. "This range is over-stocked. Someone has got to move out. There isn't enough land here of any sort, private, public or national forest to hold the flood of animals that has been poured onto the Bench lately. That's too mighty true! But don't you talk to me about the little fellows!"

He eyed Ed Battle, took a long breath and rocked his body forward in a lightly balanced motion.

"Cash Cameron has played square with them. He figured when he bought a man's brand, taking his cows, he bought range rights too. That's custom. But no, these little fellows have hung on, getting a few more cows and only waiting to jump his grass at any chance. Little fellows!"

It took Bill Hollister some time to get warmed up. He was hot now, sure! A pack of wolves licking their chops! Eyeing each other to see who is going to lead in a rush onto the CC. Give them a leader and the rest will follow all right. And you, Battle, you know who it'll be!

Ed Battle seemed set against answering.

Hollister flared. "Everyone came today to see how the inquest was going to fall, to see if Cameron was going to get properly tied up. Only

CHAPTER VII

SOMETHING was wrong at the CC riding abreast, but strangely silent for a pair who had not seen each other for two years, Walt Gandy and Bill Hollister topped the last bench and looked ahead to the home buildings. Out upon the open flat they had ridden in waning daylight. Here under the mountain night had come, darkening the ranch basin and spreading a gray mist close to the ground.

Hollister's long-legged black caught up beside the palomino. They loped through a lane between post corrals, passed the saddle sheds and reached an open yard. And then, almost before seeing them, they were upon three men standing motionless in front of a bunk house door. The door was open. No light showed inside.

"Place has been searched, Bill," said Cameron. "All the buildings. Someone while we were gone."

Until that moment Walt did not see a fourth figure which had reappeared a fourth figure which had remained crouched back on the dark main door. It rose as the ranch owner spoke, came out with a scuffling and the twisted body of the delirious man seemed at night more gruesome than ever. He dragged forward within touching distance, slantward his sunken eyes up in a direct stare into Gandy's, yet showed no recognition.

Walt had thought this afternoon that the man was more than a little off; he changed the opinion now. Something looked out from those insanity deep eye-pits. He caught the feeling of a mind as warped as the body.

"What about Bent?" Hollister asked, indicating the retreating figure with a jerk of his chin. "He's been around all day. Hasn't he been around to tell?"

"Says he knows nothing about it," Cameron answered, "Bent couldn't have heard anyone, and he was mending the south pasture fence this afternoon. So he couldn't have seen, either, if it was another direction." It came in from any other direction.

Only the youngest cowhand, Paul Champion, appeared free of what-

White Doctor's Magic

The inhabitants of Trobriand Islands, southeast of New Guinea, always have stiles before their houses and close to them they dig holes which they cover with leaves. Under the leaves they hide poisoned spears. Some years ago the medical service considered that they should be vaccinated, but the sight of the instruments terrified them. They were told that a sorcerer was approaching the islands, spreading disease which would kill people by hundreds. The only protection against him was a government mark—two spots on one arm. Immediately the wizard saw those spots he would beat a retreat. So the islanders hurried to the surgeon.

PLAY AT CASCADE SUNDAY

Despite the airmen's doings here
Sunday the team will play its scheduled game at Cascade. Kewaskum still has a postponed game to play with Boltonville and if Sunday's contest were called off the team would be unable to get all of its games in for the first half. This will be the local's first meeting against Cascade, the team that has been coming strong lately and rests right behind Kewaskum in the standings. If the boys would lose this one, they would drop behind Cascade in the race, steaming after two setbacks in a row, Kewaskum will be out gunning for victory this time and should make a real battle of it.
